Casey envisioned separate entity for covert operations

"enterprise" that aided Nicaragua's Contra rebels and managed Iranian arms sales was just the beginning of an independent worldwide intelligence network dreamed up by the late CIA Director William Casey, congressional investigators say.

"There's no limit that would restrain where they went and what they did," said Sen. Paul Sarbanes. D-Md. "You could have this sort of thing running all over the world."

Lt. Col. Oliver North testified Friday before the House and Senate Iran-Contra investigating committees that the idea grew out of Casey's wish to have an "off-the-shelf, selfsustaining, stand-alone entity" that could be summoned quickly to tackle covert operations anywhere.

But since the operations, as North described them at Friday's hearing and in more detail during a closed-door session with the panels Thursday night, would be technically carried out by private operatives and not the CIA, they would not be subject to congressional oversight or even normal executive branch con-Seed money for the organization, up to $8 million at last accounting. came from the Iran arms sales. And it was being managed by retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, who North said was handpicked by Casey and who once had dreams of directing covert activities for the CIA. "Not a single official elected by the people of the United States of America had any knowledge of the use of the fund," said Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., who questioned North about the undertaking.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., called the fledgling organization "a government within a government," but said its cover was blown before other planned covert activities could be carried out.

"No damage was done" by those other plans, Rudman said.

The committees already had heard testimony about how the organization had bought a ship for use as a clandestine propaganda radio transmitter off the coast of Libya, had financed the work of U.S. drugagents as they sought information on hostages in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and purchased radio equipment for an unidentified Caribbean country.

Committee sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said it appeared that Casey and North had plans for a series of other covert actions around the world, possibly including some in support of rebel fighters battling leftist governments in Angola and Afghanistan. North testified that he saw nothing wrong with the operation, saying it appeared to be within the law and the president's constitutional rights to carry out his foreign policy.

But Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate committee, said larger questions remained: "Should the people approve of secret governments? Do the people consider the Congress to be an impediment? Do the people believe the Constitution to be a worthy document?"

North was due to appear again on Monday - his fifth day at the witness table - to complete questioning by members of the committees. Following him in the hearings beginning Tuesday will be his former boss, Adm. John M. Poindexter, who several lawmakers said is likely to be the most important witness heard by the panels.

As North testified Friday, he sat behind stacks of telegrams sent by well-wishers around the country, and Capitol Hill switchboards were inundated by calls that overwhelmingly favored North and often criticized the conduct of the congressional investigation.

Also at Friday's session, squabbling between committee members broke into the open as lawmakers disagreed over the questioning process used on North and the tone of questions asked by Senate chief counsel Arthur Liman.

There were complaints of unfairness from House Republicans, including Florida Rep. Bill McCollum, who said Liman was "acting like a prosecutor ... instead of a fact-finder."

Senators of both parties disagreed, and Sarbanes retorted that he thought Liman's questioning was "clearly within proper bounds."

Yields high, quality good despite spring conditions

By DEBE GRAVES Staff Writer

A spot check with area agriculture businesses shows that, in spite of some difficulty getting started this past spring, yields are high and for quality of the produce is excellent.

Dennis Printz, agriculture manager for Holly Sugar, says the sugar beet crop is looking good. "After a slow start and bad weather, we feel like we have an average or better crop," he states.

Area wheat harvesting is complete with grain elevators so full that much of the grain is being stored on the ground. Joe Artho of Hereford Grain Corporation comments: "Our elevator is full, yields were above expectations in most parts of the county. In fact, we have one million bushels on the ground,"

Artho says the grain quality for this year's harvest was generally good but that, in some cases, the protein level is low, a normal factor with

Assistant County Agriculture Agent Davy Vestal says wheat yields on irrigated land averaged 65-70 bushels an acre with a low of 50 and a high in the 80s. Dry land farmers averaged 35-40 bushels an acre with a low of 20 and a high in the 50s, according to Vestal.

Wes Fisher, of Barrett-Fisher Produce, says his company finished packaging red potatoes on Friday. "The yield was good and the quality is excellent," says Fisher who expects to begin packing Russet potatoes on Monday.

Russets are looking good and vine killing has begun," says Vestal. He adds, in spite of early problems with freezing temperatures, the onion crop is also looking good and that harvest is getting close.

The corn crop, according to Vestal, is also looking good but farmers are already seeing some Southwestern corn bore problems and are experiencing some difficulty keeping the soil moist due to the wind. "They are having to irrigate quite a bit,' says Vestal. "And as soon as the wind dies down a bit spraying will begin to control the insect problem."

Vestal says the maize crop is also a little dry due to wind and that native grass pastures are drying rapidly. 'The cattle are in good condition," says Vestal, "but we need some rain soon or the cattlemen will have to begin using hay grazer."

Larry Malamen, owner of M & W packing shed, completed packing turnips on Friday. He says his company will begin packing carrots around July 25. "The harvest looks good," he says, "We will start by packing 400 acres of hybrid carrots." In all, Malamen will pack 1,000 acres of carrots this year with 60 percent

In August, Malamen will pack acorn, butternut and spaghetti varieties of squash and in 1988 he will pack his first crop of asparagus.

Compromise dump plan introduced

WASHINGTON (AP) - A compromise proposal for disposal of the nation's high-level nuclear waste has been introduced in the Senate, but it's not likely to be popular in Tennessee.

The proposal, introduced Friday by Energy Committee Chairman Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and ranking Republican, Sen. James McClure of Idaho, would delay the question of the need for a permanent waste repository in the East or upper Midwest for 20 years.

It also would give the secretary of energy the authority to carry out his plan for a temporary storage facility in Oak Ridge, Tenn., an idea opposed in Tennessee.

The legislation also would give the secretary until Jan. 1, 1989, to designate one of three sites in the West for detailed study to determine whether it should house the nation's first permanent waste

Reagan flashes smile about North

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan stayed doggedly silent about his view of Oliver North's testimony for four days before the Iran-Contra committees but ended the week with a clear signal of what he thought of the performance.

Reagan flashed a smile and gave an A-OK sign with his hand Friday when a reporter, shouting from a distance, asked how he thought North was doing.

However, Reagan and other White House officials withheld detailed comment about the testimony of North, a highly decorated Marine lieutenant colonel who was fired from the National Security Council staff after the revelation that Iran arms-sale profits were diverted to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

"The president's reaction is that the hearings are proceeding well, the facts are being delivered as he asked for in the very first instance, that we are getting some answers, others remain," said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"He's listening to it with interest and following it with concern to get answers to those questions that we didn't have answers on before," Fitzwater said.

"Obviously the administration is pleased that much of the story on our support for the Contras and the freedom fighters in Central American is being portrayed by Colonel North to audiences that are appreciative and understanding," he said.

At the same time, Fitzwater said, "I just don't think it's appropriate to have the president commenting on witnesses, and we prefer to let the facts come out

The spokesman added, "It's not our place to talk about what's good, bad or indifferent."

He turned away repeated requests for reactions to different aspects of North's testimony.

Noting that North faces additional questioning next week, Fitzwater said, "We should not be trying to influence that process in any way by any characterizations one way or

He said the hearings are the best forum for uncovering the facts, and "it simply makes no sense to try to interrupt that process with characterizations that might prejudice it one way or another."

House-Senate Iran-Contra investigative committees.

Fitzwater, correcting initial White House statements this week which said Reagan had not taken any time out of his workday to watch North's testimony, said Friday that Reagan watched the live broadcast of the hearings on Wednesday for a halfhour before a speech-making trip to New Britain, Conn., and also watched for a half-hour Thursday after-

The president also is reading newspaper accounts and summaries provided by the White House counsel's office, as well as watching television news programs about the hearings, Fitzwater said.

Although Reagan has not commented on North's statements, he complained recently that much of the testimony earlier in the hearings was hearsay that would be inadmissable in court.

Four remain uncaptured

Third escapee caught in downtown Santa Fe

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - Police captured an escaped convict in downtown Santa Fe early today after he and another man took a family hostage, and shots were fired near the governor's mansion in the chase for the other man, police said.

Michael Romero, an armed robber and arsonist, was caught sometime after 1 a.m. after he and a companion, believed to be either convicted killer Jimmy Kinslow or armed robber David Gallegos Jr., were spotted in the downtown area, police said.

"We got a report that a family was being held hostage," said state police Capt. John Denko. "Our officers started up there but they had left. We got their general direction of travel and pursued."

Denko said the family taken hostage Friday night was unharmed. He did not identify them.

Romero, one of seven prisoners who broke out of the maximum security State Penitentiary of New Mexico on July 4, was captured after a foot pursuit.

The chase continued for the other man in the city's northern outskirts, near the governor's mansion.

Shots were fired near the mansion. but Denko said Gov. Garrey Carruthers and his security staff had Earlier, state police said they were expanding the search for the remaining escapees, and the FBI has joined the search for one of the fugitives, former Death Row inmate William Wayne Gilbert.

Denko said Friday the search for the five inmates who had eluded capture for a week was expanding amid reports that the escapees no longer were in the Santa Fe area.

The FBI, meanwhile, said it had filed a complaint in federal court charging Gilbert with unlawful flight to avoid confinement, meaning the agency believes Gilbert has left the state.

FBI Special Agent-in-Charge William Branon said information received by his office indicated Gilbert was no longer in New Mexico, but he declined to elaborate. Gilbert, convicted of killing four people in January of 1980, had his death sentence commuted last November by then-Gov. Toney Anaya. Corrections Department officials say Gilbert used a gun to overpower a guard in the July 4 escape of seven men from the prison's maximum security unit.

Two of the seven, Hector Torres Jr., and Robert Earl Davis, a former Albuquerque policeman serving 441/2 years, were the first to be apprehended. Also at large with Gilbert are Kinslow and John Michael Schmidt.

On Friday, correctional officers began a prison-wide search of the maximum security prison near Santa Fe based on reports that a second gun may have been smuggled into the prison.

Friday evening, a dozen inmates set fires in the cells in Unit 3 of the North Facility, the same unit from which the seven men escaped. The prisoners were evacuated, locked down and the fires were put out, of-

Economists predicting modest price inflation for rest of year

Producer prices, one stop short of the retail level, will probably increase at an annual rate of 4 to 4.5 percent for the rest of the year, predicted Christopher Caton, director of forecasting at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I have been married for a little over a year. We have a baby and are extremely happy.

"Mel" has a hobby he started when he was a little boy. I knew about it before I married him, so I am not complaining. He likes to dress up in women's clothes. I told him it was OK with me as long as he didn't do it in my presennce.

Since the baby came I've been home a lot and this has created a problem. Mel hasn't been able to dress up, and it has made him irritable and short tempered. I asked him why he needs to do this and he says he doesn't know. Last night I took the baby to my mother's so Mel could dress up. When I came home he was watching TV wearing a blonde wig, a beautiful sequin gown, high heels and a feather boa. He looked better than a lot of women I know. He also does a fantastic job of applying makeup. I thanked the Lord that our baby is too young to remember his father in that get-up.

Why would a man want to do this? He is definitely not a homosexual and is the most manly looking guy I know. Sign me-Mel's Wife, U.S.A.

DEAR M.W.U.S.A.: I checked with one of the country's foremost authorities on cross-dressing. He asked that his name not be used because several years ago when I named him he was swamped with mail. Dr. X said there are many types of transvestites. Most are married and have children. He made it clear they are not homosexuals.

The great American Ship of State is showing signs of wear and tear. After two World Wars it has drifted into a sea of corruption similar to that which sank the might ship of state of the powerful Roman Empire.

The sharp points of the rock-drugs, drink, greed, and sexual excess-have been attacking the hull of the great American Ship of State for some 50 years. Now their effects are being felt. Another 50 years of similar abuse and the ship will be so badly injured it may not be rescued. The time to save it was before it got on the rocks. Through human lethargy, it is now endangered.

It is to be hoped that there still remains in America a sufficiency of clean minded and mentally-able people with courage and character willing to struggle to get the great ship back into clean waters where it may gain be the haven of the world's "tempest tossed."

If Christians would quit quibbling over creed and unite on this problem . . . if racists and humanists and all the other "ists" and "isms" who want security, freedom and a good life . . . if these and others would all arouse from the lethargy that has allowed the most progressive of nations to sink to a point where rape and murder are commonplace and greedy moneygrabbers are pushing dope and pornography until even elementary school children are endangered . . . then this deviltry can be quenched.

A permissive philosophy has led to this predicament. The wolves of vice are slavering at port and border, and the cost of throttling them will be high. But they are carrying out millions of cash needed for schools and the illegitimate children of doped teenagers who thought it "smart" to follow the lifestyle of the often morally loose society surrounding them. These illegitimates, if neglected, may hasten the demise of the republic.

In addition to financial disaster, the dope ring is creating a crippling public fear. Who honestly can boast of security and freedom in America were doors are locked, windows barred and where children need to guarded like lambs in a lion's lair? Can a generation reared under this widely-spread fear ever be able to throw off its crippling effects and stand firmly against future "salesmen of death"? Will they be able to struggle with vim and vigor against such a crime war?

Every interested person today needs to show by word, action, or both how he feels about this dreadful problem. Legislators, lawyers, jurors, and law enforcement agencies need to receive added pressure to rid the nation of these villianous creatures gnawing on its vitals

Once there was a feeling of safety in numbers, but not now, for a doped devil may walk into a busy crowd and decide that the more massacred the merrier, and the deed is done.

Many a killer lives for years after his victims are dead, while their children struggle without parental care and in neglect. The killer is fed and sheltered in an expensive, tax-supported prison which may hold him close, but not as close as his victims are held in their coffins!

Appeals, repeals and other delaying measures encouraged by money-minded lawyers and paid for by the state may let the villian live to an old age—if he doesn't escape during the long, drawn-out delay in court procedure or be given a parole, which provides another chance for him to sow his deadly seed.

May every person who resents the calamity into which our society's self-absorption has led do his part to make the criminal drug dealer realize that he is heading for a spot where the dollar jingles not and the climate is very hot.

Let every would-be "lifter" get out, get under, and help lift the ship off the rocks!

Problem of elderly

Sometime in July, the U.S. Senate will take up legislation designed to address the problem of catastrophic illnesses for the elderly.

Benefits would be covered by combining a basic premium of $4 a month and a progressive supplemental premium, according to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Finance Committee.

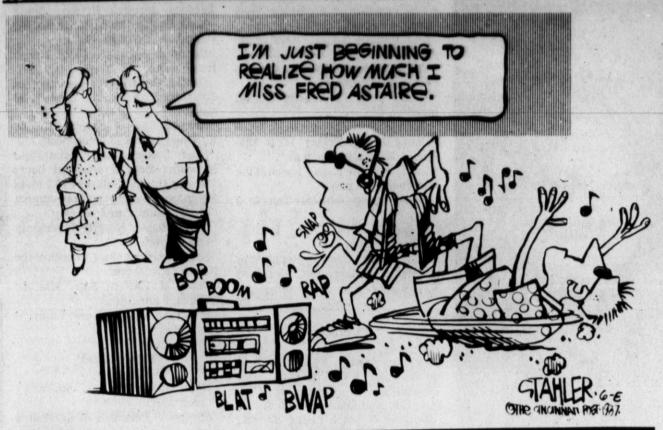

About 60 percent of the elderly would only pay the flat premium.

... Participants could receive daily care at home for 45 days after being discharged from a hospital or nursing facility.

... The bill approved by Sen. Bentsen's committee may or may not be the proper one to address the problem. However, it must be addressed. Many elderly are not receiving the care they need.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Governor Hogg of Texas named his two daughter Ima and Ura Hogg. I do not know whether he thought he was being funny or perhaps that the names would guarantee the girls' fame and fortune.

Whatever his intentions, it did not work.

No one thought it was funny, particularly the two girls. And as far as I can tell their fame and fortune did not come from their weird names.

People have a way of living up to, or down to, a name. I have wondered if Ima Hogg had a harder time in life than Ura. It would be tough going through life calling yourself a hog. Maybe it would be easier calling everyone else a hog. Names matter. We should be careful what we call someone. They may live up to the name.

There is a builder in Tulsa, Okla. named Never Fail. That is his real name, given by parents who thought it would be funny. I have heard Never has a brother named Always, but I never could confirm the story. Never is very successful. He would have to be successful. Can you imagine going through life with a name like Never Fail and being a failure? Always Fail, if he exists at all, has lived up to his billing. No one has heard from him.

There is a doctor in Tulsa named Safety First. A preacher in the same city is named Oral. I have a friend named Spike Nail who has a brother named Penny. The meanest football player I ever saw was a defensive lineman named Laura.

The television is full of hearings this week about the latest scandal in government. The star witness is a guy named Oliver North. What else would you expect from an Oliver North? With a name like that I would go underground also.

We had the privilege to keep our latest grandchild this week. The first time grandparents get to babysit for an extended time is important. That is when we get to do our bonding with the child. Boy, did we bond!

We learned quickly that God knew what He was doing when he reserved childbearing for the young. What a joy she is. She's the happiest baby I have ever seen, and that is not just prejudice talking. The kid has great promise and great insight. She laughed her head off every time she saw Lynton Allred. Only four months old and already knows a clown when she sees one.

She was with us for five days and the sun was never brighter. When she left we were exhausted. It was nice not feeling the responsibility, not to have to listen for her breathing all through the night. We were free again. But the day grew dark when she left.

See, her name is Sunny. And once again someone is living up to a name.

"Love that can be measured is never worth measuring."--Henry Cope, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Feb. 19, 1905. "Vanity is the rust of selfishness." -LOUISVILLE HERALD, Dec. 30, 1905.

TODAY'S INSIGHT:

He who tries himself to measure his love or service for others is only engaging in some self-indulgence that rusts away his life. He who thinks constantly to himself, "Look at all that I have done", is forgetting the Lord who is the source of all good, the source of all motivation.

The mathematics of spiritually cannot be put into numbers by man. How can we ever measure all that God has done for us?

Rather than try to measure our own love or kindness for others, let us instead ponder frequently on the love of Christ, "which passeth knowledge" (Eph. 3:19), and also contemplate on the peace of God, "which passeth all understanding" (Phil. 4:7).

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek discusses headlines this week, we think.

Dear editor

If you want to maintain a cheerful outlook on things, don't read past the headlines on some stories in your daily newspaper.

For example, the headline read:
Phone Rates Are Coming Down.

Turns out long distance rates are coming down, but local rates are going up. You can now call New York or London or Paris cheaper than you could previously, but it'll cost more to keep a phone to talk locally. I checked my phone bill and didn't find any calls to New York or London or Paris.

Another headline read: Farm Price Index Takes Leap Over Last

The story began: Prices farmers got for raw products in June rose 1.6 percent from May."

It added, however, that no figures were available to show what happened to prices paid by farmers to meet expenses.

expenses.

I can tell you what happened.
Those prices went up. You don't need statistics to tell you what direction prices are going when you pay $60 for a tractor part that used to cost $22.

I expect to see a headline some day reading: U.S. -Soviet Arms Reduction Agreement Reached, only to find out the two countries have agreed to ban the use of BB guns by 10-year-olds.

Yours faithfully,

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

A man of grand American stature once said, "Kings are the servants, not the proprietors of the people." That man was Thomas Jefferson. Our lawmakers are voted in office to serve us, not dictate.

In our American history, there were times when the people have been put in the position to speak up against laws that were too binding and too direct on the individual's daily existence. Our laws are not meant to be so unyielding that they bring the possibility of being stopped and fined for doing something as basic as driving our own vehicles safely.

When the seat belt law came into effect, it is quite possible that we did not fully understand what a vast, unforeseen binder it would put on our habits, our pocketbooks, and our overall feeling of freedom. This law seems to be a legal excuse to stop anyone and to dole out tickets to otherwise good drivers.

Most adults do not argue the fact that children are better off restrained in a car seat. Let's get fair about that, too. I have children and legally I have to belt them in each and every time I get in my or anyone else's vehicle. Yet, when I turn my children over to the State of Texas, they do not have to belt them in.

The Texas Department of Public Safety has an avid, persuasive and constant campaign to get Texans to buckle up. This alone, with substantiating statistics, should be adequate, but somewhere along the way the people lost the freedom to choose.

I am not saying seat belts are bad or that seat belts do not work, but only through education will people change habits, not by force. Education is a strong tool. Millions have stopped smoking because they understand the risks; many women have been saved from breast cancer because of education.

Seat belts need to be choice not law. People are perfectly able and have always been able to make the right "choice."

Absorbency makes linen comfortable

e and attractive remar Linen is a dura fabric," says Dr. Ann Beard, a clothing specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. "It absorbs moisture, and dries fast, which makes it popular for women's suits, blouses, and jackets.

"Its appearance is deceiving," she says. "It's really a tough, long lasting fabr . Linen is a bit more expensive than some other fabrics, like cotton, but its durability makes it a good investment." Linen also wrinkles very easily, the specialist remarks. To some extent, the wrinkling could be considered fashionable, but some people may not care for it. There are linens with durable press finishes and linen blends available that don't wrinkle as easily. Blends are less expensive, yet are still cool and comfortable.

According to Beard, "You need to be very careful in caring for your linens. If the fabric is not preshrunk, the garment may shrink considerably after washing. There also may be some type of finish on the garment which is not meant for home laundering. Because of this, it's important to follow the manufacturer's care labels and washing instructions carefully."

"If the garment can be laundered at home, which most blouses can, wash them as you normally would, and take them out of the dryer while still damp. Linen garments are easier to iron while damp, and should be ironed at a hot setting," Beard

> "It's a very brittle fabric, so linen garments are designed without any hard creases. This may be why it's not widely used in men's fashions, especially in trousers. Hard creases will break the fabric and it will crack open," says Beard.

The specialist cautions consumers to read the garment label first and be aware of the fiber content before a purchase is made. There are linen look-alikes on the market, such as ramie. This fabric is less expensive, and wears comparably, but it's a little more brittle and a little less

The rodeo is an open rodeo, W.P.R.A. approved. Entry fees are $35 per event, except for barrel racing which has an entry fee of $37.

Other events are bull riding, bareback bronc riding, team roping, tie down calf roping, and steer undecorating.

On Saturday, Aug. 1, a dance is planned along with the rodeo. The dance, which will feature the Clyde Logg Band, is set for 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Hereford.

with 33 home runs, fourth in the league, and 117 RBI. Then came McGwire, who electrified baseball by soaring past 30 home runs in the week before the All-Star break, triggering comparisons, for the first time in years, with the record paces of Babe Ruth and Roger Maris.

Jackson still holds the A's record of 47 homers in 1969 and who returned as a free agent this season. He is sixth on the all-time list and has reached double figures in homers for the 20th consecutive year.

Having Canseco and McGwire around helped the A's lead the majors in long ball production last week, despite playing in the Coliseum.

The National and American League All-Star squads face a formidable task if they want to play long ball Tuesday night. In the last decade, only Houston's Astrodome and Busch Stadium in St. Louis have been more tight-fisted with sluggers. For the last five seasons, home run production for A's games played at home is 15.6 percent lower than games played on the road, according to the Elias Baseball Analyst.

The Oakland Coliseum is symmetrical - 330 feet down the left and right field foul lines, 375 feet to the power alleys and 400 feet to dead center field. Hitters complain that the ball doesn't carry there as well as it does in some of baseball's easier home run parks, like Atlanta and Baltimore

Canseco hit 19 homers on the road last year and 14 at home. Of McGwire's first 30 this season, 13 were at home and 17 on the road. Together, however, they provide Oakland's lineup with a potent 3-4 punch that is complemented nicely by another slugger, outfielder Mike

Davis has been around for a while. Canseco and McGwire are baseball babies, just beginning their careers. "They are obviously both power hitters with unlimited potential," Alderson said. "At the same time, they're both multifaceted players, good defensive players with above average major league arms.

"Canseco has more speed, but McGwire's speed is not below average. McGwire is the more selective hitter, but both are hitting now for average. Their personalities are similiar. They're low key, fairly quiet."

And that's where the similarities

McGwire arrived with all the proper credentials, a first-round draft pick from Southern Cal who played on the 1984 U.S. Olympic team. "He was No. 1 on our draft list,"

Alderson said. "That means if we had the No. 1 pick that year, he would have been the guy."

The New York Mets used the No. 1 choice for outfielder Shawn Abner. McGwire lasted until No. 10 when the A's grabbed him.

Two years earlier, the A's picked Canseco in the 15th round of the draft on the recommendation of scout Camilo Pascual, an ex-major league pitcher. "It's difficult to take a lot of credit to foresee the kind of production he's had when he goes that low," Alderson said. "He's grown up a lot and developed. Camilo gets the credit for seeing his potential."

For this outdoor main dish, place a large thermos filled with your favorite taco-meat mixture (try 1 pound hamburger cooked with 1/2 cup chopped onions and 2-3 tablespoons chopped green chiles, mixed with tomato sauce or taco sauce to taste.) Spoon meat mixture over the chips, then top with your choice of ingredients (either onions, tomatoes, olives, etc.), ending with grated cheese. Each person can create his or her own picnic taco. Leftover ingredients present no problem-just reseal the Ziploc sandwich bags and repack to use at home.

Blood proteins

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT - There was too much protein in my blood so I was told to have a bone marrow test. It was OK. What does excess protein

DEAR READER — Your question is deceptively simple; the subject of blood proteins is complex. I'll try to give you an overview.

The body's organs produce many types of proteins that circulate in the bloodstream. Each protein has a specific function. By subjecting a small sample of cell-free blood to a tiny electrical charge, scientists can separate the various blood proteins from one another. Because proteins vary in weight, light proteins will migrate further than heavy ones in an electrical field. This characteristic provides the basis for the medical test called serum electrophoresis, in which the blood proteins are separated, identified and quantitated.

Human blood usually contains five major forms of protein: albumin, alpha-1 globulin, alpha-2 globulin, beta globulin and gamma globulin. These proteins can be further divided into classes by more sophisticated tests, yielding the forms called immunoglobulins: IgA, IgD, IgE, IgG and IgM.

Depending on the protein characteristics of a blood sample, doctors can diagnose certain diseases. For example, low serum albumin is often the consequence of dietary deficiency or liver disease. Antibodies, the body's infection-neutralizing proteins, are usually included in the Ig (or gamma globulin) fraction. Patients sometimes show abnormal proteins (or too much of a particular protein) in their bloodstreams. The most common abnormality is an "M spike," an excess of IgM; this is seen in myeloma and other types of plasma (blood) cell cancer. The doctor performed a bone marrow test to make sure that your plasma cells, many of which are in the marrow, were normal.

Your excess proteins may represent a normal variation but, as I mentioned, the type of protein should be identified. Your doctor may choose to do this by further analysis using complex tests.

DEAR DR. GOTT - At age 6 months, my daughter, now 2, became very light-sensitive. Most days she will not open her eyes in the morning. When we go outside she buries her face against me so she won't have to look. Her eyelids are swollen (not crusty), and if you pry her eyes open, about 3/5 teaspoon of clear liquid will run out. Three specialists gave her drops, which only helped temporarily. What's the next step?

aren't simple

DEAR READER - Your daughter seems to have an eye irritation, such as conjunctivitis or corneal abrasions, that should be investigated by an ophthalmologist. If she has already seen eye specialists, request a referral to a pediatric ophthalmology clinic at a teaching hospital. Your daughter is obviously very uncomfortable and her sight is too precious to delay her visiting superspecialists who can diagnose and treat her affliction.

Brown, Simpson vows recited in Amarillo

Westminster Presbyterian Church in Amarillo was the site of the marriage Friday evening of Christina Anne Brown of Amarillo and former Hereford resident Robert Scott Simpson of Dimmitt.

The Rev. Jeffrey Yergler of the church officiated for the couple.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs T.E. Brown of Amarillo and the groom is the son of J.R. Simpson of Dimmitt.

The church altar was decorated with an arch candelabra trimmed with greenery and ivory ribbons and the church was further enhanced by aisle candles and ribbons in the bride's chosen colors.

Tambra Hansen of Amarillo was maid of honor and Rodney Hunter of Dimmitt was best man.

Serving as bridesmaids were donna Watson of St Louis and Schelle Cantrell of Odessa. Groomsmen were Mark Breugel and Kennen Howell, both of Dimmitt.

Alexis McCartt, daughter of Lisa McCartt, was flower girl and ring bearer was Christopher Pena, son of Dedra Pena.

Candles were lit by the bride's cousins, Andrew and Kelly Anne

"The Song of Ruth' and "The Lord's Prayer" were vocalized by Denise Ivey who was accompanied by Brent Ivey.

Terrific Tuesdays continuing

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an heirloom ivory English lace and imported silk wedding gown. It was designed with a square neckline, which was accented by lace and scallops, fitted bodice, natural waistline, and a full skirt which was trimmed by English lace. The long full sleeves were made of matching lace. The entire gown was decorated by miniature seed pearls.

The veil of English lace was attached to a headpiece of pearls. She carried a cascade of white roses, baby's breath, greenery and seed pearls entwined by ivory ribbon streamers.

Bridal attendants wore full-length peach taffeta gowns and carried bouquets of peach roses with ivory and blue ribbon accents.

Dedra Pena and Caroline Pena served cake at the reception held in the church fellowship hall. Coffee and punch were poured by Charalynn Hunter and Sherrilynn Hunter. The groom's sister, Sheryl Simpson Jeffrey, was also a member of the houseparty.

The main refreshment table was covered by an ivory cloth and decorated with a candle centerpiece, the bridesmaids' bouquets, and the traditional wedding cake which was trimmed with flowers in the bride's chosen colors.

The bride is a sophomore at Texas Tech University where she is majoring in home economics. The groom is a senior at Texas Tech majoring in animal production. He is currently employed by the U.S. Postal Service.

Garlic powder to make at home

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - We grow our own garlic and were wondering if you have a recipe for making garlic powder. — EDWARD

DEAR EDWARD - Homemade granulated or powdered garlic can be made as a convenient way to store a bumper crop of garlic. Simply slice peeled garlic cloves thinly, then dry them in an oven set at the lowest possible temperature or in a microwave oven until the garlic is very dry and brittle. Then grind the garlic to the desired fineness in a coffee grinder, blender or food processor. Store in tightly sealed, moisture-proof containers, since the powder is somewhat one to clumping and hardening i allowed to get at all moist. If you want garlic salt, mix powdered garlic with ordinary table salt, in proportion to suit your taste. This will also help keep the garlic powder running freely. Hope this keeps you in garlic throughout the year! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I owned a tavern a few years ago and made many pickled eggs. The recipe is quite simple. Boil and peel eggs and let cool. Fill container about one-third full of vinegar. Place the eggs in the container; then, fill with more vinegar to cover the eggs. Put in approximately five pieces whole allspice per quart of vinegar. Place the covered container in the refrigerator and let stand for 72

Onions can also be sliced and put in with the eggs. Also, a bay leaf can be added with the allspice, but be careful the bay leaf does not touch the eggs, since it may turn the eggs black where it touches them. - PAT

DEAR POLLY - When I have a large, opened container of yogurt that has been sitting in the refrigerator for a few days, I often find watery liquid sitting on top of the yogurt. Does this mean the yogurt is spoiled? Is it safe to eat? -ROSE DEAR ROSE - Liquid separates from yogurt quite naturally when the yogurt sits for a couple of days. The yogurt is still perfectly fine to eat. The liquid may be stirred back into the yogurt (although this will usually thin the yogurt, since stirring breaks up the texture) or it may be simply poured off, which is how I handle the roblem. That natural tendency to separate is what makes yogurt cheese possible: To make yogurt cheese - a thick, creamy version of yogurt - you simply place yogurt in a cheeseclothlined sieve or colander and let the liquid drip through it into a bowl below for two to 24 hours. (I refrigerate the ogurt while it's draining. This gives the yogurt a milder flavor and there's no danger of bacterial spoilage.) The longer the yogurt drains, the thicker the yogurt cheese will be

The yogurt cheese can be used as a substitute for sour cream, cream cheese or farmer's cheese, while the drained-off whey can be used as liquid for making bread. It can also be added to soups or stews.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Cooking with Yogurt," which has complete directions for making both homemade yogurt and yogurt cheese, plus recipes using both products in a variety of ways. The recipes include appetizers such as herbed yogurt cheese, main dishes such as grilled yogurt chicken, salads, bread and desserts. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. Be sure to include the title. - POLLY

NEW YORK (AP) - One of the cise is better posture, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

Good posture results from muscle balance. If the chest muscles and the opposing upper back muscles are strong and flexible, they work together to hold the torso upright, says Dr. Peter Francis, associate professor of physical education at San Diego State University.

Other important muscles for posture include the abdomen and lower back. However, if one of these muscle groups is weak, muscle imbalance develops. Full-body workouts use all these muscles.

COMPUTER PHOBIA

As defined in Webster's Dictionary, a phobia is an irrational, persistent fear of something.

There is acrophobia (fear of high places), hydrophobia (water), claustrophobia (enclosed places), (spiders), arachnophobia gynophobia (women), etc.

Within the last several years, I have become increasingly aware that my current quirk has become a fullblown phobia for me at work. The moment I walk into the office, my anxiety attack begins-the culprit of this problem is a little machine known as a word processor.

This nasty computer is located only three feet behind my desk. It glares at me eight hours a day, five days a week. I'm not pointing a finger at anyone but I have my suspicions as to who placed it within my peripheral vision as a subtle hint to learn to operate it: my boss.

I've tried to ignore the machine, although I do occasionally dust it. But up until a few weeks ago, I just treated it as an unwanted piece of furniture taking up space in my corner of the world.

The days have stretched into months, the months into years, as I have witnessed co-worker after co-worker learn to type on this computer. They seem to have taken to it like Yuppies to Perrier water. The company representatives for this machine tells them that "it will save an enormous amount of time" and "it practically runs itself once you have become acquainted with it." I guess these phrases are used to lessen the fear of the prospective high tech typist but not me. Either I am very hard headed or stupid or both.

Archaic typewritten stories are more concrete to me. I can't see the little magnetic whatevers on a floppy disk, much less figure out how electricity makes them light up to look like the words on a screen. And, for three years my son has been talking data-base microchip jibberish right in my own home and in front of his younger sister!

I do not know why I have this hangup. Was this character flaw instilled into my brain as a child? If I can't use a computer does this mean I am not one of the Pepsi generation?

Although I have a tremendous fear of the processor, my fear of my boss is even greater. One morning, I was pounding away on my typewriter trying to meet a deadline. I was almost ready to turn the copy back to the typesetter to be retyped for the day's edition when my boss muttered, "It sure would save some time if SO-MEONE would learn to use the processor."

Sensing his menacing mood and quite tired of the disgusting looks from fellow employees, I decided to take action. It was nearing lunchtime and everyone was gone when I confronted my enemy.

I took a deep cleansing breath and with wobbly legs crept over to the computer. I pushed the ON button. It came alive with humming. I placed the disk into the slot. The screen lit up and waited for my commands. Confidence surged through my body and the adrenaline began to flow. I studied my notes that I had jotted down about operating procedures and began typing. After 30 minutes I was interrupted by a phone call. When I came back to resume typing, the screen was blank. Every word had been erased. Apparently there was a button I forgot to push.

Okay, that's it. The electrical box has won. I surrender graciously to defeat. Besides didn't someone once say the wise man knows his limitations or something like that?

Editor's Note: Upon reading this column before publication, my editor said, "You not only have a computer phobia but phobophobia. That is a morbid fear of one's own phobia." (What a Wisenhymmer)!

Gamez, Ramos wedding vows spoken recently

During a late afternoon wedding ceremony July 4 in the First Church of the Nazarene, Bernadina Gamez of Austin became the bride of Vincent Webb RAmos of Ft. Hood in Killeen, Texas.

The ceremony was officiated by Ted Taylor of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Isaias Gamez of Hereford and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Ramos of Torrance, Calif.

The church was decorated in moth pink colors with pews marked by bows and ribbons. Heart-shaped candles were lit at the altar.

Vonnie Gamez served her sister as maid of honor and Julian R. Ramos served his brother as best man.

The bride's cousin, Cynthia Guerrero, was a bridesmaid, as was Yvonne Gonzales of Austin. Guests were escorted by groomsmen, Charles Gilliam and Wade Barton, both of Fort Hood.

Ashley Chi Gonzalez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armando Gonzalez, was flower girl and lighting candles were Jesicca Rae and Deidra Renee Zepeda, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Rocha.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Ramirez sang "To Me", "Here We Are" and "With You I'm Born Again."

Given in marriage by her brother, Horace G. Gamez of Austin, the bride wore a formal white satin strapless gown designed with a wide flounce at the top of the bodice. Matching ruffles were attached to the gown's back and extended into a brief train. The fitted bodice formed a natural fitted waistling.

Her elbow-length veil of bridal illusion was attached to a wreath of silk flowers, leaves and miniature seed pearls. She carried a heart-shaped nosegay of moth pink and white silk flowers with matching ribbons, all entwined with pearls.

Keeping in wedding tradition, she had as something borrowed, diamond stud earrings; something blue, a garter; somethin new, traveling costume; something old, a starshaped necklace and her mother's wedding rings.

The matron of honor was attired in a white taffeta dress fashioned with dropped shoulders marked by bows. The bridesmaids wore moth pink taffeta dresses designed similar to the matron of honor's attire. They carried moth pink silk roses with white ribbons.

The bride's cousin, Monica Arsola, invited guests to register at the reception held in the fellowship hall of the church. A dance followed at the Hideaway in Hereford.

Yolonda Guerrero served the bride's cake and Janie Gonzales served the groom's cake. Punch and coffee were poured by Sara Griego. All are aunts of the bride. Other members of the houseparty included Mr. and Mrs. Joe Soliz, Mary Gamboa, Vela Valdez, R.C. LaFuente, Tina Saldana, Melissa Saldana, and Michelle Saldana.

The bride's four-tiered heartshaped cake was decorated with silk flowers and moth pink ribbons. The groom's German chocolate cake was also heart-shaped. The cakes were made by the bride's mother.

Leaving on a wedding trip to Long Beach, Calif., the bride wore a black and white straight dress. The couple will make their home in Killeen.

The bride, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, is presently attending the University of Texas at Austin. She is employed with the Texas House of Representatives in the Sergeant-at-Arms Office.

The groom is a combat medic in the U.S. Army in Fort Hood.

Out-of-town guests included the groom's grandmother, Linda Funkhouser, and his great-aunt, Helen Flores, both of California. Other towns represented were Fort Worth, Dallas, Amarillo, Austin, Fort Hood and Torrance, Calif.

As a mother of four, Janie Banner has a full time job. With one boy and three girls from 7 to 15, Janie is always on the move. And if she's not with her kids, she is volunteering her time for a worthy cause.

Janie and her husband, Mark, were born and raised in Hereford but left 12 years ago to pursue a business. They never intended to come back, really, but the business brought them right back to Hereford 3 years ago. Janie wouldn't have it any other way, "All our roots are here, our family is here."

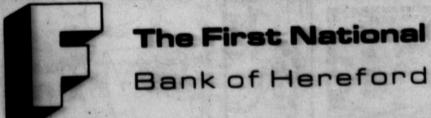

And Janie didn't have a problem choosing a bank. There was no doubt in her mind. "My Dad was always at the First National Bank, and my first checking account was at the First."

Well, we're very glad the Banners are back in Hereford and we're proud they chose us for their financial needs.

The median price reported for each area in the survey is based on prices of all types of existing singlefamily homes sold during 1987's first quarter within the metropolitan statistical area (MSA). The MSA, as defined by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget, includes the central cityor cities as well as surrounding suburbs. Half the homes sold cost more than the median price, and half cost less.

"More than ever before, home prices and appreciation rates depend on where you are. Homebuyers and sellers in the Northeast are experiencing a much different market scenario than those in many of the southern cities," Moore added.

Power tools necessary for some household repairs most of them quicker, more efficiently and with less effort. Homeowners, do-it-yourselfers and hobbyists nearly always buy an electric drill as their first power tool. Once they find out how easy it is to handle and how much it speeds the work, they begin to look around for other labor-savers, like a jig saw and a finishing sander:

The electric drill not only drills holes in wood, metal and plastic, but with its accessories drives screws, cuts large and deep holes through thick wood, files, sands, shapes, wirebrushes, polishes, grinds and buffs. Some accessories, such as a band saw and belt sander, use the drill as a driving mechanism.

Electric drills come in a variety of sizes and shapes from a quarter-inch light duty to a three-quarter-inch heavy duty professional model. The size of the drill refers to the maximum diameter drill bit or accessory shank held by the drill chuck.

In addition to drill size, two other features to look for when buying a drill include the speed of rotation of the chuck and the ability to reverse the direction of the chuck to remove screws and tight drill bits.

A jigsaw or saber saw cuts wood, light sheet metal, thin-walled tubing, tile, plaster and plastic. The type of material cut and the smoothness of the cut depends on the blade. This type of saw holds a blade in its jaw, which moves up and down during peration; the up stroke of the blade does the cutting. A rip fence guides the saw for making straight and circular cuts. By following a pattern line, the saw makes irregular cuts used in scrollwork. By tilting the shoe plate, the saw cuts bevels.

Jigsaws come in single speed, twospeed, and variable speed (up to many tasks, power tools perform 3,500 strokes per minute) models. The variable speed model allows for slow speeds to cut hard woods, thick woods, and thin metals. Faster speeds are to cut softer woods.

A finishing sander makes the unpleasant job of hand sanding more pleasant. A lot less energy is expended holding a sander and slowly moving it over the workpiece than is expended by repeatedly stroking a sandpaper block across the workpiece. The finishing sander not only produces a fine smooth finish to a workpiece, but it also removes paint and sands metal surfaces.

An ideal finishing sander has a dual sanding action; that is, the sander moves in either an orbital motion or in a straight line motion, as selected.

Consult tool catalogs of major hand power tool manufacturers for detailed descriptions of accessories available for drills, jig saws and finishing sanders. These catalogs generally explain the uses and the advantages of one type of accessory over another.

Before using any power tool, read the owner's manual thoroughly regarding safety practices, uses and operating procedures.

For U.S. homebuyers Foreign investors assuremortgage cred

WASHINGTON-Foreign investors looking for higher yields on U.S. financial instruments than can be found in their own country, are directly and indirectly increasing the available pool of mortgage credit, thereby keeping interest rates down and boosting housing sales.

In the June/July issue of 'Real Estate Today', the official publication of the National Association of Realtors, Sean Burns forecasts, "An International Role for U.S. Real Estate."

"Total foreign investment in 1987 could match or better the record high $147 billion that poured into this country in 1986," writes Burns, a research economist with the NAR's Forecasting and Policy Analysis Division.

Higher yields on Financial instruments are not the only draw. "The combination of high savings rates and slow economic growth in many foreign countries left investors with few options at home," he explains. "U.S. Treasury securities and AAA-rated corporate issues provide a safe investment for the foreign investor, and the United States has a political stability that attracts foreigners concerned about risking their money on an uncertain future.'

Portfolio investment-stocks, bonds and mortgage-related securitiesaccount for about 75 percent of the foreign investment that comes into the U.S., a total estimated at $117.5 billion. "Of this," Burns explains, "more than half, or about $61 billion, comes from West European countries. The Japanese contribution alone is $30.5 billion. This represents 25 cents of every dollar in foreign portfolio investment in the U.S."

Many of these investments help real estate indirectly. "For example, U.S. savings institutions have raised more than $7 billion in overseas capital markets, helping bolster the real estate industry and fund housing activity here," he writes. "Likewise, mortgage-backed securities, Eurobonds issued by savings institutions, Ginnie Maes, and so on, all contribute to housing."

Economists project that a total of almost $25 billion in foreign investment will reach the housing sector of the U.S. economy this year. This figure doesn't tell the whole story, according to Burns.

"For the real estate industry, this investment has a snowball effect. It was sufficient to finance as many as 650,000 of the homes that were built last year. Assuming an average home price of $84,000, this leads to the conclusion that an additional $55 billion in new- and existing- home sales were made possible in 1986 by inflows of foreign portfolio investments," he explains.

Direct ownership of U.S. real estate or a business enterprise by interests abroad make up the remaining 25 percent of foreign investment. Foreign investors are becoming in-Japanese funds, such as investment banks and life insurance companies, initiate joint ventures with U.s. companies that could potentially lead them into a variety of U.S. real estate investments.

Burns also identifies the most active investors as not only the Japanese, but the British, West Germans, Canadians, French, and

As foreign investors become more comfortable with U.S. markets, he anticipates foreign investment will rise and play an increasingly important role in housing finance. "Despite high federal deficits, interest rates have remained volved with commercial or industrial properties. In many major cities, they also are garnering interests in real estate projects by offereing favorable financing terms or letters of credit.

"The dollar's decline aginst the Japanese yen has made U.S. real estate an especially appealing investment opportunity for Japanese investors," Burns writes. "A large trade surplus has left many Japanese investors flush with U.S. dollars. They are seeking highquality investments that offer security and an attractive long-term yield. Not surprisingly, the answer for many has been U.S. real estate." Burns sees another long-term trend as some of the largest sources of Energy savings possible on heating and cooling costs

By The Associated Press

Savings on heating and cooling bills are assured if the energyrobbing openings in your house are discovered and quickly closed.

Finding the places where cracks and gaps are wasting your money requires periodic checkups and the use of the right products for the specific jobs. In most cases, only scissors are needed to make the repairs - for cutting the various kinds of special tapes on the market.

The following checklist and solutions to problems should keep the lid on high energy bills: WINDOWS AND DOORS - The gaps around loose-fitting, closed windows and doors can keep your heating plant or air conditioning running overtime. You can reduce cold and hot air infiltration around windows up to 70 percent, and up to 90 percent on doors with a V-seal weatherstrip. Check old weatherstripping for cracks and chips. If these conditions exist, they should be removed, and new weatherstripping installed. Inefficient weatherstripping around a standard window is the same as a four-inch-square hole.

EXTERIOR OPENINGS - Normal house settling creates open spaces around outside window and door frames, foundation and siding and other points. Although not serious, these openings waste heat and cooling. Close and seal with a preformed caulk tape.

GARAGE DOORS - An attached or under-house garage is a major source of energy waste if the doors are loose-fitting and the bottom doesn't seal along an uneven concrete floor. Cold and hot air gusting through a closed garage door can be shut out with 3M garage-door-bottom weatherstrip. It is made of a synthetic rubber, nailed in place, and remains flexible below minus 20 degrees to conform to an uneven concrete floor. V-seal weatherstrip, installed on the top and sides of the garage door and along the accordion folds of the overhang door, provides an added seal.

Home resales jump in May

WASHINGTON-Sales of previously owned homes jumped in May, reflecting a wave of buyers trying to beat high spurts in mortgage interest rates, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The association's monthly survey of the existing single-family homes market showed a seasonally adjusted annual sales rate of 3.74 million units last month, the strongest pace yet recorded for 1987. May's resale rate was 5.1 percent higher than the April pace of 3.56 million units and 8.1 percent above the May 1986 pace of 3.46 million units.

According to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the average effective interest rate for loans on existing homes reported for May was 9.34 percent, up from 9.09 percent in April. This rate, which includes discount points paid at closing, is a composite of rates for both fixed-rate and adjustable-rate mortgages.

The May average effective interest rate was below the May 1986 rate of 10.15 percent applied to existing home loans.

The NAR expects the nominal, or quoted, interest rate for fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages to average about 9.6 percent for the year.

E.B. Black House setting for wedding

Vicki Lynn Marasco and William R. McNeese were united in marriage June 27 in a garden setting in the gazebo at the E.B. Black House. The groom's brother, Kelly McNeese of Austin, officiated for the couple.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Marasco of Dawn and the granddaughter of Thelma Brasher of Dawn. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. McNeese of Tomball. He is also the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. W.B. Nunley and Mrs. R.A. McNeese, all of Hereford, and is the greatgrandson of Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Landers of the Westway community.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was Yvette Gamboa Rodriguez, formerly of Hereford. The groom's father served as best man. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a traditional peau de soie gown. The fitted bodice was highlighted by a Victorian neckline accented by embroidered flowers and seed pearls. The long, full sleeves were trimmed with accordian pleated cuffs, antique cut lace and seed pearls. Appliqued flowers seeded with pearls decorated the full skirt which swept into a cathedral-length train edged with similar lace and carried by the bride's niece, Kasey Torres, who also served as flower girl.

To complete the ensemble, the bride wore a three-tiered veil trimmed with lace and pearls.

She carried a bouquet of white roses trimmed with lilac miniature roses, baby's breath, and tear drop pearls mounted on a white lace fan.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Dawn Community Center. Guests were registered by Gene Ann Marasco, sister-in-law of the bride.

The bride's table was covered with an antique lace cloth underlain by lilac. A three-tiered wedding cake trimmed with lilac hearts and flowers was topped with kissing bride and groom figurines. The table appointments were in crystal. Serving at the bride's table were Dolores Torres, sister of the bride, and Carla Bradsher, aunt of the bride.

Covering the groom's table was a white cloth edged in lace. German chocolate cake and coffee were served by Rhonda Banner and Holly Gouldy, cousins of the groom.

The couple left for a wedding trip to New Mexico.

The bride is a 1987 graduate of Hereford High Scholl and is presently employed by the Hereford Independent School District.

The groom attended Tomball High School and is employed by Rick Brown Properties.

Mr. and Mrs. McNeese will make their home in Dawn.
