Shultz claims he was 'in dark'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz testified today that other Reagan administration officials kept him in the dark about key events in the Iran-Contra affair, and said he was "sick to my stomach" when he learned some of the details.

In riveting testimony at nationally televised congressional hearings, Shultz said he first learned that the United States had sold weapons directly to Iran when he read about it in news reports published many months after the transaction took place. He said he wasn't told that President Reagan authorized any sales until about a year after the formal papers were signed.

Shultz said that it wasn't until he relayed some disturbing information involving Middle East terrorists to Reagan at a private White House meeting last December that "I finally felt that the president deeply understands that something is radically wrong here."

Shultz spoke in a somber voice that belied the astonishing nature of his testimony, but he occasionally allowed a wry sense of humor to show through.

"I hardly know Col. (Oliver L.) North, although like everyone else in America I feel like I know him well by now," Shultz said of the former National Security Council aide who was the star witness at the hearings for a week.

Under questioning from Senate lawyer Mark Belnick, Shultz denied repeatedly that his ignorance about the Iran arms deal stemmed from a desire not to know the facts — as former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified earlier.

He said he once told Poindexter he wanted to "be informed of the things I needed to know" to carry out his responsibilities as secretary of state.

He said he told Poindexter that he didn't want to know all the operational details, but "that doesn't mean I just bowed out insofar as major things in our foreign policy is concerned. To assume that I shouldn't be informed of things like that is ridiculous."

Poindexter testified earlier that he never withheld information from Cabinet officers that they didn't want kept from them.

Shultz quarreled with North's testimony, as well, saying that he was unaware of North's secret efforts to funnel arms to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a congressional ban on direct or indirect U.S. military aid to the insurgents.

Belnick read North's testimony that Shultz "knew in sufficiently elegant terms of what I had done," and asked the secretary of state if North's statement was true.

"No," Shultz replied. Shultz said he was disgusted when he learned many months after the fact that key Iran-Contra middlemen had discussed efforts to release terrorists being held in a Kuwaiti prison as part of a complicated deal that would send arms to Iran and win the freedom of American hostages in Lebanon.

Shultz said it "made me sick to my stomach that anybody would talk about that as something we would consider doing."

The list of details that Shultz said he didn't know about was a long one.

He disclaimed knowledge that Reagan had formally approved the sale of arms to Iran until many months later. He said he didn't know of the direct sale of U.S. arms to Iran until nearly a year after the fact.

He also said he didn't know until afterwards that former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane went secretly to Tehran in May 1986, and it was even later that he learned that McFarlane had taken weapons with him.

The secretary said he didn't learn until June 1986 that Saudi Arabia had provided $1 billion to the Contras in 1984 and 1985. And he said he didn't know until it surfaced in the congressional hearings that Taiwan contributed $2 billion to the Contras in 1985.

Discussing his learning about the arms-for-hostages plan involving a proposed Kuwaiti release of terrorists, Shultz said he called the

Over government growth

Clements claims win

AUSTIN (AP) — Although it took the largest tax increase in Texas history to balance the state budget, Gov. Bill Clements says he feels victorious in his bid to hold the line on government growth.

"We stopped the growth of state government. Now that's no small goal, and it's no small accomplishment," Clements said Wednesday, repeatedly admonishing news reporters to get his message straight.

"I think our Texas taxpayers will be happy to hear that if you will just, please, repeat it."

Clements last year campaigned on a "no-new-taxes" theme and this year pledged repeatedly to veto any tax increase larger than $2.9 billion. But Tuesday night, he signed into law increases in the sales, motor fuel and other taxes that totaled nearly twice that — $5.7 billion.

"I reluctantly signed the tax bill last night," Clements said. "The deed was done, so to speak."

The Republican governor said he had run out of options. Democrats control the Legislature, and the end of the state's fiscal year, Aug. 31, is approaching. Democratic Gov. Mark White left him a deficit and a sour economy, he said.

"We had to open the schools. We had to continue state government on some reasonable basis. And we had to address the problem in the federal courts on mental health-mental retardation and the prison system," Clements said.

"We did what we had to do. I don't think we had any choice in the matter," he said. "I would appreciate reading that in print somewhere, or hearing it on television."

Clements argued that the 1988-89 state budget — totaling $38.3 billion — represents only a 2.4 percent increase over the $37.4 billion spent for 1986-87. That represents a 1.2 percent annual increase, he said.

"And please," he urged, "write that down."

The state's only 20th century Republican governor, Clements said the 1988 legislative elections — in which half the Senate and all 150 House seats up are up for grabs — will be important to the GOP.

"It is very important (to elect more Republicans)," he said. "I will help as I can, as I have always done in the past."

During a 10-minute news conference, Clements faced questions about his campaign promises against any taxes and his earlier veto threat for a tax hike half as large.

After all that, he was asked, what went through his mind when signing the $5.7 billion package?

"That I was sleepy and I wanted to get to bed," he replied.

Gramm wants EPA changes

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm says the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency should issue new rules protecting groundwater in an area of the Panhandle under consideration for a high-level nuclear waste dump.

Republican Gramm told EPA Administrator Lee Thomas in a letter this week the agency must fully protect those who depend on the Ogallala Aquifer if the government builds a high-level waste dump in Deaf Smith County.

The 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston Friday took exception with proposed EPA rules permitting radioactivity in drinking water near waste sites at levels higher than allowed under the Safe Drinking Water Act.

The court ordered EPA to rewrite the rules or explain the "apparent inconsistency and irrationality" in permitting higher levels of radioactivity in drinking water near a nuclear repository.

"Serious new regulations from EPA should at least serve to protect the water that Panhandle residents, including farmers and ranchers, rely on," Gramm said in his letter. "And they may preclude the construction of a nuclear waste repository in Texas altogether."

"I urge you (Thomas) to issue new regulations that will fully protect vital water supplies in the High Plains Aquifer, which consists of both the Ogallala and Santa Rosa aquifers. This critical water source must be fully protected by the agency's new regulations."

If it stands, the ruling could be a key factor in whether to place a high-level nuclear repository in Texas, since it is the only one of three proposed sites that contains substantial amounts of groundwater, officials said.

The other two sites under consideration are in Hanford, Wash., and Yucca Mountain, Nev.

The court's rejection of the EPA rules could place the entire selection process for a high-level dump in jeopardy, said Dan W. Reicher, who argued the case on behalf of the Natural Resources Defense Council.

A 1982 statute requires the government to develop the nation's high-level radioactive waste repository to dispose permanently of spent fuel piling up at the nation's commercial nuclear reactors.

EPA and Justice Department officials are considering whether to seek a rehearing by the full appellate court on the issue.

Reagan says 'Just Say No' to bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has embraced his wife Nancy's "Just Say No" crusade in ways that irritate some in Congress and have students of the presidency talking about a "cry-wolf" syndrome.

During his meeting Tuesday morning with Republican congressional leaders in the Cabinet Room, Reagan privately delivered a "just-say-no" message on several major pieces of legislation.

In the briefing room not long thereafter, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater ticked off a triple-threat veto message from his boss: Reagan did not like — and likely would not sign — legislation on trade, banking and health insurance coverage for catastrophic illness.

Just for good measure, Fitzwater also volunteered that the White House has "some concerns" about a welfare reform bill sponsored by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

That caused one reporter to ask: "Is the president afraid that he's going to spend his last days ruling by veto?"

Fitzwater replied, "No, the president looks forward to the skirmish and the details, that the Democrats are trying to force big spending plans on us, and he's ready to take them on."

Asked whether that meant confrontation had surpassed compromise as a White House strategy for dealing with Congress, he said, "I think the reality is that a Democratically controlled Senate is not too much in a compromise mood."

Reminded that he'd excluded the House of Representatives from that statement, Fitzwater quipped, "Well, the slap applies to both Houses."

Reagan last August cheerfully embraced his wife's "Just Say No" slogan as he launched a White House offensive against drug abuse, and he often cites those words — and ones expressing similar sentiment — in statements about his dealings with Congress.

"How to I spell relief?" he said to an audience recently. "V-E-T-O!"

But Reagan's increasing nay-say stance on legislation is causing predictable angst on Capitol Hill — and less predictable worries among presidential scholars.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., asked Wednesday about Reagan's chances of sustaining any veto of legislation to overhaul the savings and loan industry, said, "Apparently, the president is still engaged in his veto strategy and obstructionist policy, which is no policy at all."

"The president is so busy squaring off against Congress that there's no time for anyone to do anything," Byrd said. "He is leaving a negative legacy which history will not overlook."

In fact, Reagan has used the veto only 62 times in his 6½ years in office. He has been overridden eight times, although he lost two crucial fights this year. He failed to sustain his veto of a $20 billion clean water bill, and his veto of a $88 billion highway bill also was overridden.

President Gerald R. Ford, in contrast, vetoed 66 bills in his less than 2½ years in office, of which a dozen were overridden.

Tankers skirt through gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A convoy of Kuwaiti tankers and their U.S. warship escorts skirted the United Arab Emirates and Qatar today after steaming on top alert past fortified Iranian islands.

The tankers, expected to conclude their 500-mile trip at the Al Ahmadi oil terminal Friday, are the first to ply the Persian Gulf with U.S. escorts under a Reagan administration commitment to protect Kuwaiti ships from Iranian attacks.

Iran issued a fresh threat to Washington late Wednesday, saying the United States was "preparing itself for a clash with Iran and the expansion of tension." Tehran Radio, monitored in London, said Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati made the comment in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The convoy, code-named Earnest Will, traveled without incident Wednesday past Iranian missile batteries in the Strait of Hormuz, Wednesday past Iranian missile batteries in the Strait of Hormuz, considered the most treacherous portion of the trip. They linked up with a fourth Navy warship, the cruiser Reeves, late Wednesday, maintaining top alert until 10 p.m. local time.

Families struggle with tragic losses

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — The hurt of losing nine teen-agers who drowned in flash floods on their way home from church camp will take time to heal, a minister said as three of the victims were buried.

"We've lost the backbone of our youth group," said the Rev. Preston Henderson of the Seagoville Road Baptist Church, where many of the teens attended. "They done right. They knew the Lord."

Meanwhile, the search continued for a 10th teen-ager lost in the flooding Guadalupe River. John Bankston Jr., 17, who disappeared after helping others to safety is believed to have perished in the river, authorities said.

Searchers today will move a command post 15 miles downriver of the accident to expand the search for Bankston Jr., said Department of Public Safety spokesman Raymond Kraus.

In the quiet suburb of Mesquite, funeral services for Cindy Sewell, 16, and her brother William, 12, were scheduled today. They were among the 43 people on a church van and bus that was engulfed by flash floods Friday near Comfort. Thirty-three people survived, some after clinging to trees for hours.

TANKERS

ching today for possible attacks by high-speed gunboats and helicopters of the Iranian Revolutionary Guards, zealous followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. The Guards maintain bases as far north as Fasirah island, 120 miles north of Bahrain.

But shipping sources and gulf area diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they didn't expect the Iranians to attack the convoy.

"They won't do anything at this stage and let everyone feel complacent, so the fireworks can come at a later stage," said one shipping official.

The supertanker Bridgeton and the smaller oil products carrier Gas Prince, protected by the Navy vessels and U.S. jet fighters, will sail along the coast of Saudi Arabia today and Friday.

Since last year, Iran has attacked vessels traveling to Kuwait, charging that the emirate serves as an arms conduit to Iraq, whose ports are closed. Hundreds of ships have been attacked or damaged by both combatants in a "tanker war" aimed at crippling one another's economies.

The USS Kidd, USS Fox and the U.S. frigate Crommelin entered the Strait of Hormuz Wednesday afternoon on General Quarters, the highest state of alert. The sailors donned gray helmets and green flak jackets and hurried to their battle stations.

Top alert was maintained for six hours, as the ships passed within 14 miles of the Iranian coast, where Chinese-made Silkorm missiles are stored. The temperature soared to 102 degrees. The alert was relaxed after the ships, sailing in calm seas, cleared the strait.

At a service for three victims Tuesday, the Rev. Sylvester Matthew, pastor of the Open Door Baptist Church, read a poem written by one of the teen-agers girls.

Leslie Gossett, 14, in a poem called "I Love You," wrote that if she ever had to leave her loved ones, "please do not let the thought of me be sad for you. For I am loving you just as I always have."

More than 800 family and friends gathered at the service. Mourners knelt in the aisles of the small church's sanctuary and filled two classrooms equipped with television monitors for the service for Miss Gossett, Stacey Smith, 17, and her sister, 14-year-old Tonya Smith.

Michael O'Neal, 16, and Legenia Keenum, who turned 15 the day she died, were buried later Tuesday in separate services.

At the triple-burial service in Mesquite, photographs of the three girls sat atop caskets that were surrounded by dozens of floral arrangements, mainly pink roses and carnations.

"It's going to take time to heal," Henderson said. "Lean on one another. Use the love that the Bible has taught you."

After the service, the caskets were loaded into three white hearses that were trailed by more than a half-mile of limousines and hundreds of cars en route to the cemetery. Some of the mourners were survivors who were still wearing bandages as they got into their parents' cars.

Miss Gossett played basketball and volleyball for the Balch Springs Christian Academy, where the girls attended school. She was also a cheerleader, and a cheerleading picture stood near the portrait atop her casket.

Stacey Smith, a sophomore homecoming princess, was honored for being the "Best Christian Example" at the academy. Toyna Smith played volleyball for the school. Their older brother, Michael, 18, survived the bus accident.

Turning to the parents of the girls, Matthew said, "You raised good children."

The three girls grew up attending Sunday School together at the Open Door church.

"They were just lovely girls," said Frenon Smith, who taught them when they were young. "They were sweet and good."

"There's people that care about others and there's people who don't," said Skip Shoffner, who helped build the church with the Smiths' father, Jerry. "I saw these three girls grow up and all three cared about others. They didn't have a 'me-bigger-than-them' attitude."

A group of parents whose children attended the church and Balch Springs Christian Academy said Tuesday they would begin collecting donations for a memorial to the 10 victims of the tragedy in Comfort.

The parents hope to erect a marker, yet to be designed, on the grounds of the academy, said Richard Karpinski, whose 16-year-old daughter, Kellye, attends the school.

Bullock certifies budget

AUSTIN (AP) — About 12 hours after Gov. Bill Clements signed a tax bill that exceeded the figure he had vowed to veto, Comptroller Bob Bullock said it was large enough to balance the $38.3 billion 1988-89 state budget.

The $5.7 billion tax package got Clements' signature late Tuesday, shortly after lawmakers approved it, and it got Bullock's crucial certification Wednesday.

In his 1986 campaign, Clements promised Texans no new taxes despite an increasing state deficit caused by declining oil prices. The tax measures he wound up signing added up to the nation's largest-ever state tax increase, according to an economist for the National Conference of State Legislatures.

"In a nutshell, you can say in absolute dollars, if you don't take inflation into account and if you don't take the size of the state into account, it is the biggest," said Steve Gold of Denver.

Clements said he was reluctant to sign the bills.

"I certainly am not happy about them. They are higher than I would have liked. They're higher than other people, other leaders in the Legislature, would have liked. But I also want to quickly add that we did what we had to do."

The budget battle ended Tuesday night after a hotly partisan battle in the Texas House. It took a complicated series of procedural maneuvers to get the plan approved.

"I am persuaded that the citizens of our state will be more than happy to pay an increased three-quarters of a cent on the sales tax. And I'm persuaded that the professionals will pay an increased $110 for their fees with a smile on their face. I don't think we overburdened any particular section of the economy," said Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio and tax-bill sponsor.

The comptroller's staff Wednesday prepared charts showing that even with the tax increase, Texans face a tax burden that is far below the national average.

The increase means Texans' annual tax load will be $53.76 per $1,000 in personal income. That is an increase of $3.36 per year. The national average is $74.11 per year.

Calculated on a per-person basis, Texans will pay $730 a year in state taxes, up from $667 in 1986 and below the national average of $973.

Clements said it adds up to relatively little.

"I think the people of Texas will understand that we had to balance the budget and that we have stopped the growth of government. That's my message this morning," said the Republican governor who had vowed to veto any tax increase above the $2.9 billion that would have been raised by keeping the sales tax at 5 1/4 percent and the fuels tax at 15 cents per gallon.

As of Oct. 1, Texans will pay a 6 percent state sales tax. The present 5 1/4 rate had been scheduled to roll back to 4 1/4 percent on Sept. 1. Many Texans also pay 2 percent in city and mass transit sales taxes.

Tax sponsor says Texans understand

AUSTIN (AP) — One day after lawmakers approved a tax bill with his name on it, Rep. Dan Morales said he recognized the political risk, but is confident his constituents will understand.

"I think the citizens are much more sophisticated than many politicians give them credit for," Morales said Wednesday, calling on a line frequently used by politicians who dabble in the controversial, like taxes.

By sponsoring the tax bill, Morales, D-San Antonio, had done what most lawmakers spend their careers avoiding. At age 31 and in his second House term, Morales said he knows such moves can have ballot-box repercussions.

"If sponsorship of this tax bill costs me a re-election bid, that's fine and I will have no regrets. I recognize that is a risk," he said.

"In terms of the issue of potential political vulnerability or liability, my opinion is there are far more important things than the political future of one state representative," Morales added.

By most Capitol observers' accounts, Morales' tax efforts did nothing but boost his career. He remained cool when tax talk grew heated and got his photograph in newspapers across the state.

Morales is a Harvard Law School graduate and former Bexar County assistant district attorney. He came to the Legislature this year bent on building more prisons, but wound up in the center of the tax fray.

His north San Antonio district is 60 percent Hispanic and includes the Edgewood Independent School District, the city's poorest area, and what he called a significant amount of relatively affluent people.

"Where Sea World is going to be is in my district. Where the pope is going to be is in my district," Morales said.

Also living in his district are people who will understand why Morales helped make them pay higher taxes, he said.

"I cannot believe that I will have difficulty making my constituents recognize the necessity for the actions which we took," Morales said.

As a member of the Select Committee on Tax Equity, he is now looking at the next changes in the state tax system. They will be major, according to Morales.

"This is the last patchwork job that we are going to be able to do on our current tax structure. We have run out of quick fixes," he said.

TEC offers help for employers

Texas employers receive a number of benefits from their tax dollars, and one of them is the free job placement service provided by the Texas Employment Commission.

TEC serves the public by matching job hunters with job openings listed by employers. TEC's placement service is utilized by employers in all parts of the state and there is no cost to the employer or the job seeker.

TEC will screen the applicants and refer only those with the qualifications the employer is seeking. INS Form I-9, employment eligibility verification, is completed on each applicant before he is referred to a job, thus eliminating paper work by the employer. A statement verifying eligibility for employment is mailed from Austin upon hire.

TEC also screens—upon request by employer—applicants to see if they qualify for Targeted Job Credit, which can be a $2,400 tax credit to the employer for each qualified person hired. Tax dollars fund the operation of TEC with no charge to employers or job seekers. For further information, contact TEC at 408 W. 7th St., or phone 364-8600.

Comedian makes a living beefing about daily life

NEW YORK (AP) — Jay Leno is a man with a beef.

He beefs about fast food, television, Mom, skin mags, Rambo, two-speed vacuum cleaners, calcium supplements, Mr. Potato Head, foreign food and tiny imported cars. "Oh, geez, gosh," he whines, and then lines up another target.

National Condom Week! "Boy, there's a parade you don't want to miss, huh?"

With hair bristling and his magnificent jaw jutting, Leno takes on the world like Popeye in the first throes of a spinach rush.

He defends women, castigates corporations and worries about his country, a nation that no longer makes steel or huge cars like his '55 Buick Roadmaster.

"You know, I tend to be more like my Dad than like people my own age," he said, slumping deeply into an armchair and puffing on a pipe.

"I mean, I find it very odd that we buy steel from places like Korea, and I find that when you make jokes about that subject it strikes a chord with people, especially older audiences.

"There's an attitude in America I find very interesting now. Like, you meet somebody and you say, 'I want to buy this kind of car.' And they go, 'Oh, don't buy those cars. They're awful.'"

"How do you know?"

"Hey, I make 'em! I know they're awful!"

"Isn't that terrible to sell something that you don't believe in?" Leno said. "The nice thing about jokes, they're just jokes, but at least they're my jokes and if I tell them I take a certain pride in them."

Now, after all the sniping at David Letterman and other "arm-chair comedians," Leno will go to work this fall as part-time host of NBC's "Tonight Show."

"Yeah, but it's only on Mondays. I'll be out on the road the rest of the week," said Leno, who claims to feel like a con man running an ever-expanding pyramid scheme, dashing from town to town to keep his flim-flam afloat.

He did it this summer while filming "Collision Course" co-starring Pat Morita. Before coming to Long Island a Sunday show, he had been in Washington Thursday night, back to the set in Detroit, then to Los Angeles on Friday night and Valley Forge, Pa., on Saturday.

And, yes, he was only kidding about disdaining "arm-chair comedy."

"When you're a comedian, the 'Tonight Show' is really the job I think that everyone has, fantasy-wise, in the back of their mind," he said.

"Like me — I'm starring in a movie, and it's neat and it's fun, but it doesn't seem quite as big as the 'Tonight Show' to me."

So deep down, does Jay Leno really have a beef?

"I think most comedians, the good ones, tend to have some sort of anger, real or imagined," Leno said. "And in my case I think it's mostly imagined."

Leno says he had a happy childhood and doesn't regard that as a handicap to being funny.

"I find comics tend to be one extreme or the other: You either have comics that are just drug-dependent, alcoholic, off-the-wall crazy, or very straight," he said.

"Most comedians have a very conservative streak that the comedy comes from. Even Lenny Bruce," Leno said. "Because you have to know what's right to know what's wrong."

Lincoln presents Lions Club program

A program outlining the operations of Battelle Memorial Institute was presented to Hereford Lions Club Wednesday by Bob Lincoln, human resources manager for the Hereford office. Lincoln is a new member of the Lions Club.

John D. Bryant, club president, reported that the Lions Carnival last week grossed approximately $15,800. Since all expenses have not been finalized, the net income for the club is not yet known.

Lincoln pointed out that Battelle is an independent research organization and it pioneered the concept of contract research. It uses scientific expertise to meet the needs of industry and government—through research and development, the management of large programs and facilities, and educational and invention and technology development activities.

Battelle, with headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, has five business operations in the United States and Europe. The local office is part of the Project Management Division, based in Columbus, and is prime contractor or manager for the DOE nuclear waste repository program.

After showing slides of the Institute's operations, Lincoln held a brief question-and-answer session for Lion members.

He said he then called Reagan directly the next day, a Sunday, and told him he needed to see him "right now."

"The president was astonished" when Shultz delivered the news, the secretary of state recalled. "I have never seen him so mad."

"I think it was that meeting I finally felt that the president deeply understands that something is radically wrong."

Shultz made his dramatic comments in the opening moments of what is expected to be two days of testimony at the nationally televised Iran-Contra hearings.

Shultz had made it clear earlier that he opposed the decision to sell arms to Iran, and was criticized by the Tower commission for distancing himself from the sales once they were approved by the president.

In his opening moments in the witness chair, Shultz told Belnick he did not know that Reagan had signed any document authorizing secret arms sales to Iran until he heard it from Poindexter at an Oval Office briefing last Nov. 10.

Ann Landers

Warm kiss spells danger

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My lady friend is in her mid-30's, happily married for the second time. I am almost old enough to be her father, also happily married with a grown child. We are both attractive, outgoing, well-educated six-figure-a-year executives in the same industry.

"Ella" and I talk to each other daily and see one another twice monthly, once for dinner and once for breakfast. Occasionally there are spur-of-the-moment meetings for an ice cream in the park or a last-minute lunch. We discuss world and business affairs, problems at home, and secrets from the past. We laugh a lot and chatter like teenagers. Our two few hours together are cherished.

From the beginning, the ground rules have been no sex and no interfering with each other's business or social life. Physical intimacy has been limited to hand holding, a hug and a warm goodnight kiss.

I confess, however, that we do have some problems. I am possessive and jealous of her male business associates but not of her husband. She has a domineering personality but so far it has not damaged the relationship.

The happiest moments of my recent life have been with this woman. The knowledge of her affection has been a great boost to my self-esteem. Also, I have benefited economically from our business association.

I hope we can go on like this forever. What are the chances?—The Odd Couple

DEAR O.C.: About the same as a snowball in Texas.

That "warm" goodnight kiss is destined to lead you to the next step. It's only a matter of time before you libido leaps into hormonal overdrive, the defense system collapses and it's Saturday night in Sioux City.

My advice is simply this: If you don't want to burn down the barn, put away the matches.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I was 20, I experienced my first panic attack. Not knowing what it was, I went to an internist, a neurologist, then a psychiatrist.

You can't imagine what an attack is like unless you've had one. Your heart pounds like a hammer, you are filled with unexplainable fears and you think you are going crazy.

After several attacks, I developed agoraphobia (fear of leaving the house); then came a cluster of other fears. I happened to see a talk show and was convinced that I had a disease called panic disorder.

It's a disgrace that so many doctors don't know anything about this problem. Thank God I ran into a neurologist who did. I am now being treated with an anti-panic medicine and I feel terrific.

I've begun to go out with friends again. I hold a part-time job and hope to return to school. It's wonderful to rejoin the world of the living.

There are many books in the library on this subject. One that was extremely helpful was "Hope and Help for Your Nerves" by Dr. Claire Weekes, published by Bantam Books Press. Please tell people.—Grateful in Min.

DEAR G.: I have mentioned Dr. Weekes' book many times; also her

"Peace from Nervous Suffering." She was the first to write intelligently about agoraphobia. Dr. Weekes has an excellent new book, "More Help for Your Nerves" (Bantam). It is, I believe, her best.

Some extremely effective drugs for panic disorders are now available. If your doctor doesn't know about them, find one who does. There is no need to go on suffering from this wretched illness.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. ## DR. GOTT Oil in sweat stains clothes

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My friends call me "Old Yellowstain" because of the marks on the armpits of my T-shirts. Each new shirt becomes stained after one or two uses. I bathe frequently. Why does this happen?

DEAR READER — Perspiration contains skin oils as well as moisture. The oils can become trapped in fabric after the moisture evaporates. When sweat has a high oil content, the oil oxidizes to a yellow color. Often this material is difficult to wash out and causes permanent staining.

The yellow stains on your T-shirts may be a source of ribbing from your friends, however, they do not reflect ill health or disease. The use of antiperspirants may reduce the excretion of oily perspiration from your underarms.

DEAR DR. GOTT — We have several outside dogs and cats. Can my kids get worms from walking barefoot in the yard or being licked on the face?

DEAR READER — Hookworm is the most common temperate-zone parasite that can penetrate unbroken skin. The larvae, which hatch in soil contaminated with feces, mature in about 10 days and can enter the skin. These larvae may exist dormant in soil for several months.

Most canine and feline parasites lay eggs that pass out of the animals in excrement. With the exception of hookworm, the parasites are usually spread to humans by finger-to-mouth contact. Because parasites do not pass "upstream" into the animals' mouths, your children are not at risk by being licked on the face.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it bad to consume a lot of vinegar? I put it on everything. I am 20, have had kidney stones and take 300 milligrams of Zylorim daily.

DEAR READER — Vinegar, a dilute acid, is not harmful when taken as a dietary constituent. I have never heard of a person drinking vinegar, so I cannot comment on the possible hazards of such massive quantities. The amount that usually is added to food is unlikely to cause disease and will not affect either your kidney stones or the gout for which you are taking Zylorim.

However, you should tell your doctor about your dietary preferences. Perhaps you are eating other substances that could contribute to kidney stones and gout — for example, sweetbreads and liver.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My eldest granddaughter is just past 28. About a year ago she met a man whom she loves deeply. We've met him, and he's a kind, thoughtful and courteous gentleman with a keen sense of humor. They are both college graduates, hold responsible positions and are active churchgoers. However, he recently confided to her that he likes to dress up in female clothing in the privacy of his own home. He doesn't think he wants to give this up.

Do you have any suggestions? It would be a shame if this very odd circumstance were to be a stumbling block to an otherwise fine union.

DEAR READER — Although I applaud this man's honesty, I think that your granddaughter is in for a whallop of a disappointment and a truckload of problems if she marries him. It sounds to me as though her partner has a lot going for him, but also is uncomfortable as a male. There's more to this than just a few hours of cross-dressing.

There is a chance that his occasional cross-dressing may progress to more public acting out and to behavior that your granddaughter might find unpleasant.

Closet transvestism infrequently leads to overt homosexuality, according to the Kinsey Institute. However, given the current epidemic of sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS, your granddaughter should take a hard look at the risks of such a union.

No matter how accepting your granddaughter may be now, the post-wedding reality may be far more stressful than she expected. Even if her husband's habit remains low-key, she probably will have a constant fear that others will find out — whether during an unexpected visit, an emergency or a moment of carelessness on her husband's part. The situation will be further complicated if they have children. This constant need to "keep secrets" is simply unhealthy.

In short: Cross-dressing may be acceptable, problem-free behavior for your granddaughter's friend. However, it can pose major problems for your granddaughter.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have an elevated cholesterol reading and my LDL blood reading is poor. Would a trampoline help? I'm 75.

DEAR READER — A trampoline will not help. In fact, at your age, it might be downright dangerous. Although regular exercise — such as walking, swimming and biking — might lower your cholesterol and make you feel better, you should ask your doctor to put you on a low-cholesterol diet. If this doesn't work, he or she may choose to give you medicine to reduce your cholesterol. Your doctor is the best judge of what combination of exercise and diet would be right for you.

THE RETURN OF RHEUMATIC FEVER
ATLANTA (AP) — Rheumatic fever, a disease virtually nonexistent for almost 50 years, has broken out again in several states, reports Arthritis Today magazine.

The new cases follow a classic pattern — a strep throat followed by an absence of symptoms for several weeks, then inflammation of the joints and the heart. Anyone with a severe sore throat should see a doctor to determine if it is due to strep and if antibiotic treatment is needed, it says.

Over Toronto Blue Jays Wednesday

'Walkathon' gives Rangers 5-3 win

Bears say 'Refrigerator' must lose some weight

By MICHELLE MAHONEY
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago's ir-repressible Jim McMahon got the go-ahead to train with the Bears next month, but irreducible William "The Refrigerator" Perry won't even get into training camp if he doesn't lose weight.

McMahon got clearance Tuesday from his Los Angeles surgeon, Dr. Frank Jobe, to begin training camp Aug. 1 with the rest of the National Football League team at Platteville, Wis., according to Bears spokesman Bryan Harlan.

"Dr. Jobe was extremely pleased with the progress Jim had made and gave him clearance..." Harlan said. McMahon has been recuperating since undergoing rotator cuff surgery on Dec. 12, 1986.

Any decision on whether McMahon will participate in contact drills will be made after he reports to the pre-season camp, Harlan said.

With a daily rehabilitation program of weightlifting, racquetball and throwing the football, McMahon already has restored his throwing speed and distance almost to pre-injury levels, Harlan said.

"There are still a lot of things he has to do, but now he can at least be practicing while he's rehabilitating," Harlan said. Bears Coach Mike Ditka said Monday that although he thought McMahon looked good physically, the true test of his recovery would come on the field.

"We won't really know if he's all right until game pressure and someone misses a block and the linebacker catches him flush with a tackle and you say, 'Uh, oh' and see how fast he gets up," Ditka said.

"Any of us could pretty much go out there and throw it good in practice," he said. But Ditka said defensive tackle Perry won't have the privilege of even picking up a football at training camp if he doesn't drop some pounds.

"You can book this. If his weight is not under 325, he will not be in training camp," Ditka said.

"He can go back to South Carolina and do whatever... he wants to do, and we will go on without him." Ditka said Perry would be "the best defensive tackle in football" if he kept his weight under 325 pounds.

"I'm not going to mess around with Perry anymore," Ditka said. "We called him the other day. Supposedly, he weighs 325. Heh, who knows? He's running twice a day — from the refrigerator to the bathroom."

Ditka said he did not know the extent of Perry's daily conditioning program because the former Clemson player has been in Aiken, S.C., where he is building a home.

But Ditka did offer some advice for Perry, should he weigh in under the 325-pound limit.

"To be No. 1, you have to reach deep down in the gutsack and make it hurt. His rear should drag off the field daily. And anyone who gets in his way at training camp, he ought to knock them down," Ditka said.

A clause in Perry's contract requires the Bears to pay him $40,000 if he works out three times a week at the team's Lake Forest, Ill., headquarters, but Perry has forfeited the sum plus thousands of dollars in bonuses because of his fluctuating weight, Ditka said.

Perry's agent, Jim Steiner, said his client will be ready to play.

"I can't tell you what he weighs now because I'm not with him on a daily basis," Steiner said. "But he'll be under 320 and possibly 315."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don McMahon, a retired major league relief pitcher, died Wednesday of apparent heart attack while pitching batting practice for the Los Angeles Dodgers. He was 57.

McMahon played in the majors for 18 years. He broke in with Milwaukee in 1957 and also pitched for Houston, Cleveland, Boston, the Chicago White Sox, Detroit, and San Francisco.

McMahon had been working for the Dodgers as a coach and special scout and threw batting practice prior to almost every Dodger home game.

He was a member of the 1958 National League All-Star team and pitched on four World Series teams. He retired after the 1974 season.

FOOTBALL LIKE WAR
BOSTON (AP) — Playing big time football can produce a stress disorder similar to the kind that often attacks war veterans.

That's the opinion of Dr. Armand M. Nicholi Jr., as expressed in the New England Journal of Medicine. Nicholi is the team psychiatrist for the New England Patriots of the National Football League.

"The intense, violent contact on the football field simulates hand-to-hand combat on a battlefield," Nicholi concluded.

ches to load the bases. "He didn't even come close to the plate," said Incaviglia, who was on second at the time. "Those balls broke five feet. That's not like him."

Browne, the rookie who leads the Rangers in walks this season, said he decided to let Eichhorn dig himself a deeper hole by not swinging until he had two strikes.

"I was going to work him all the way," said Browne, who earned his first major league game-winning RBI. "No way I was going to swing at bad pitches."

The pitching victory went to reliever Jeff Russell, 3-1, who went 1-3 in the ninth and Mitch Williams added to the problem by hitting the only batter he faced, Dale Mohoric relieved and earned his 13th save.

The victory was the second straight for the Rangers over the Blue Jays, who had won nine of the first 10 meetings this season.

Witt struck out 10 batters in his seven-inning stint and only one of the three runs charged to him was earned.

"Witt pitched well," said Toronto manager Jimmy Williams. "He's got quite an arm. If he learns to harness his pitches, he's really going to win a lot of games."

Witt fanned two batters in each of the first three innings, during which time his teammates gave him a 2-0 lead.

"Witt had good velocity and a good slider," said Valentine. "It's a shame he couldn't stick around to win."

In the Toronto fifth, a single, a walk, another single and Incaviglia's throwing error gave Toronto a 3-2 lead, but the Rangers tied it in the seventh with Fletcher getting the run home with a squeeze bunt.

In other American League games, it was Oakland 10, Detroit 1; Seattle 2, Milwaukee 1; California 6, Boston 5; Minnesota 3, New York 1; Baltimore 10, Chicago 5; and Kansas City 5, Cleveland 1.

The Oakland Athletics took a night off from batting practice, but once the game started it was another story.

"Today, we came out with a hungry attitude and everybody hit the ball," said Mark McGwire, who had four hits Wednesday night, including his major league-leading 36th home run. He led the Athletics to a 10-1 rout of the Detroit Tigers.

Oakland had lost one-run games to Detroit the previous two nights and decided not to take batting practice before the game.

"You need to take a break once in a while," McGwire said. "It gets tiring and boring needing relief help in the sixth. Bill Caudill, the third Oakland pitcher, gave up the Tigers' only run, a homer by Matt Nokes in the eighth, his 21st.

Mariners 2, Brewers 1
Mark Langston pitched a four-hitter and Rey Quinones singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning to lead Seattle over Milwaukee.

Langston, 11-9, struck out seven to increase his American League-leading total to 159.

Ken Phelps began the seventh with a walk off Bill Wegman, 8-9. Jim Presley's single moved Phelps to second and pinch-runner John Moses scored when Quinones dropped a single in front of right fielder Glenn Braggs.

Angels 6, Red Sox 5
Brian Downing and George Hendrick knocked in two runs apiece as California built a five-run lead and withstood a comeback by Boston.

Winner Mike Witt, 12-6, gave up Jim Rice's 10th homer leading off the sixth, then was shelled in a three-run seventh.

DeWayne Buice replaced Witt and gave up an RBI single to Dwight Evans before ending the rally. Greg Minton, the Angels' fourth pitcher, recorded his eighth save after giving up Rice's RBI single in the ninth.

Boston starter Dennis "Oil Can" Boys, 1-3, was the loser.

Twins 3, Yankees 1
Kent Hrbek and Kirby Puckett homered and Frank Viola pitched four-hit ball over eight innings as Minnesota defeated New York in a matchup of division leaders.

Viola, 10-6, struck out six and walked two. He is now 8-1 in his last 12 starts with a 1.85 earned run average.

Losing pitcher was Rick Rhoden, 12-6.

Orioles 10, White Sox 5
Larry Sheets hit a pair of two-run singles and Ken Gerhart hit two solo homers as Baltimore beat Chicago for the Orioles eighth straight victory.

Harold Baines hit his 155th career homer to set a White Sox record. Baines, who also extended his hitting streak to 17 games, had been tied for the club home run mark with Bill Melton, a Chicago third baseman from 1968 to 1975.

John Habyan, 2-3, relieved starter

Mike Boddicker in the third inning and pitched 6 2-3 scoreless innings for the victory, retiring the last 19 batters in a row.

Royals 5, Indians 1
Jim Eisenreich, continuing his comeback against a rare nervous disorder, drove in two runs to pace Kansas City over Cleveland.

The former Minnesota outfielder singled home two runs in the fifth inning as the Royals won for only the third time in 14 games.

Eisenreich, who left baseball in 1984 because of Tourette's Syndrome, a neurological condition that causes uncontrolled twitching, also walked and doubled.

Mark Gubicza gave up eight hits, struck out eight and walked five to raise his record to 8-9 with his fifth complete game of the season, a career high. Darrel Akerfelds, 0-1, was a loser in his first major league start.

Score of 28 wins Wednesday night scramble

The team of Michael Drake, Speedy Nieman, Roger Albracht, and Cindy Simons won the Wednesday Night Scramble with a score of 28.

They each won $38.25 in prizes in the weekly scramble at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

The second place team, two strokes back at 30, was James Salinas, James Riethbaum, Brett West, and Randy Hamilton.

The team of Dewayne Davison, Craig Jones, Robert Kubacak, and Robert Cabezuela placed third with a 31.

Down on the FARM WATCH UP FOR POWER LINES

Power lines can be dangerous.
Touching irrigation pipe to a power line can divert the electricity through the pipe... and to anyone in contact with it. In this part of the country, this is the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths in electricity-related accidents. Any equipment of unusual height represents a potential danger. Lift arms on field equipment, combine auger spouts and even radio antennas can cause serious injury or death if they, and you, make contact with a power line.
Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake.

How to Prevent Accidents When Digging Near Underground Gas Lines

Natural gas is delivered through a system of underground piping. Some of these pipes might be located beneath the ground where your excavation work is to be done. Personal injuries and property damage can occur if the pipes are struck or disturbed by digging, drilling or blasting.
Before excavating, drilling or blasting, you or your contractor should check to see if any underground gas lines are located in or near the proposed work site.

Pitches Houston to 7-0 win over Montreal

Astros' Mike Scott says he's out of slump

MONTREAL (AP) -- When Houston Astros pitcher Mike Scott talks about emerging from a slump, that has to be bad news for National League hitters.

Scott, the Cy Young Award winner who is the leading candidate to claim the top pitcher honors in 1987, scuttled the Montreal Expos on four hits in a 7-0 victory Wednesday night. The right-hander then sat before his locker following the 10-strikeout performance and declared that he may have emerged from a mini-slump.

"That's probably the best outing I've had since San Diego," Scott said, alluding to a game against the Padres on June 25. Scott lost that game and had a no-decision, a victory and two defeats since.

"I kept hoping it would come around, and tonight I was real happy with the way things went. I had decent control with my split-fingered fastball and the velocity on my fastball was there."

The velocity was overpowering enough to fan 10 batters for the sixth time in 22 starts, five of which have resulted in complete games by Scott, who has pitched three shutouts.

"In the games I pitched after San Diego, I didn't feel I had the good fastball," Scott said. "When you don't have confidence with it, you start to pick corners."

"You tend to do a lot of things you don't normally do."

Scott, 11-6, figured to right himself against the Expos, the team he had held to one run in 16 innings prior to the start. He shut them out on two hits on May 8, and the latest shutout lowered Scott's earned-run average against Montreal in 1987 to a minuscule 0.36.

"Scott has a good fastball, a good split-fingered fastball and he doctors a few pitches once in a while when he needs it," Expos Manager Buck Rogers said.

Spotting Scott some early runs isn't recommended, but that's what the Expos did. Billy Hatcher made it 1-0 in the first inning when he led off with a single against starter Bob Sebra, 6-10, before stealing second, taking third on a wild pitch and scoring on Gerald Young's groundout.

Another wild pitch by Sebra in the fourth enabled Alan Ashby to go to second base, and he made it 2-0 by scoring on a single by rookie Ken Caminiti.

Ashby's ninth homer, leading off the sixth, and an RBI single by Scott two outs later, extended the lead to 4-0.

After an error by Montreal first baseman Andres Galarraga resulted in an eighth-inning run, Bill Doran capped a three-hit night with a two-run homer, his 13th, off reliever Bob McClure.

"I thought the only bad pitch I made all night was the one to Scott," Sebra said. "My cut fastball hasn't been working as well as it should, and maybe tonight I was trying to overthrow it."

The Expos suffered their second straight loss since having an eight-game winning streak snapped Tuesday night.

Elsewhere in the NL, St. Louis defeated Los Angeles 3-1, Chicago beat San Diego 6-3, New York edged Atlanta 4-3, Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 5-3 and Pittsburgh shut out San Francisco 4-0.

After Jack Clark hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning to beat Los Angeles, he wasn't thinking about winning or losing.

Before Wednesday night's game, former major league pitcher Don McMahon, who served as a special assignment scout for the Dodgers for the past two years, died of a heart attack. He was 57.

McMahon suffered the heart attack at about 4:45 p.m., PDT — nearly three hours before the game began — while pitching batting practice. He was pronounced dead 90 minutes later at Queen of Angels Hospital.

The crowd of 33,665 at Dodger Stadium observed a moment of silence as a tribute to McMahon shortly before the game's first pitch and Clark dedicated his homer that gave St. Louis a 3-1 victory over Los Angeles.

"It was tough under the circumstances, I played with him (McMahon) for six years," Clark said. "He was a good man and a friend. It's a tough situation. I want to dedicate the home run to him and his family."

Clark played for San Francisco from 1977 to 1984 when McMahon was the Giants' pitching coach.

"If I would have struck out instead of hitting the home run, I wouldn't have been too sad about it because there's a lot worse things that happen in this life," said Clark, who lined a 2-2 pitch from Bob Welch, 9-6, into the left-field seats for his 29th homer and 90th and 91st RBIs.

The victory was the third straight for St. Louis and the 14th in its last 17 games. The Cardinals lead second-place Montreal by 8½ games in the National League East. The loss was the fourth straight for the Dodgers, who have dropped 10 of 14.

Cubs 6, Padres 3

It was a night of milestones for Chicago. Rick Sutcliffe won the 100th game of his career and Andre Dawson hit his 250th lifetime homer as the Cubs beat host San Diego.

The Cubs set a club record by hitting 26 homers against the Padres in 12 games, the most they have hit in a season against a club since division play began in 1969. They won nine of the 12 games between the two teams, holding the Padres to five homers.

Keith Moreland added his 100th career homer as the Cubs snapped a four-game losing streak.

Phillies 5, Reds 3

Juan Samuel hit his 19th home run, tying his career high, and drove in two runs as Philadelphia beat visiting Cincinnati.

Shane Rawley, 12-5, pitched 6 1-3 innings, allowing three runs for his fourth straight victory. Kent Tekulve and Steve Bedrosian relieved with Bedrosian earning his league-leading 27th save.

Tom Browning, 5-8, pitched five innings and allowed five runs and nine hits.

Mets 4, Braves 3

Lee Mazzilli's pinch RBI single capped a four-run sixth inning as New York rallied to beat Atlanta at Shea Stadium.

Zane Smith, 8-6, allowed just one hit over the first five innings and held a 3-0 lead. But after Tim Teufel and Keith Hernandez opened the inning with base hits, Darryl Strawberry, Barry Lyons and Rafael Santana had RBI singles to tie the score.

Mazzilli, pinch-hitting for Ron Darling, then won it with a line-drive single to left-center, scoring Lyons. Mazzilli is 12-for-33 as pinch hitter.

Darling, 5-7, won his third game in his last four decisions. Roger McDowell pitched three scoreless innings for his 12th save.

Pirates 4, Giants 0

Rick Reuschel pitched a five-hitter for his 23rd career shutout as Pittsburgh took two of three games at Candlestick Park.

Reuschel, 8-4, lowered his earned run average to 2.19, best among major-league starting pitchers. It was the third shutout in his last five starts.

Comparing Hall of Famers

By John Grabowski

When Billy Williams, Jim (Catfish) Hunter and Ray Dandridge are inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., on July 26, they will increase the number of immortals enshrined to 199.

With these three new members included, the Baseball Hall of Fame Yearbook groups the baseball people enshrined in the hall as follows: 16 first basemen, nine second basemen, 16 leftfielders, 14 centerfielders, 20 rightfielders, 10 catchers, 46 pitchers, 11 Negro League players, 10 managers, five umpires and 20 "pioneers and executives." Of the 199, 57 are still living.

The yearbook only includes playing records for those Hall of Fame members who were inducted because of their records as Major League players, so the following comparisons will concern only those remaining 153 men elected for their accomplishments as Major League players.

The tallest player in the hall is former Dodger hurler Don Drysdale, at 6 foot 6, edging out fellow pitcher Eppa Rixey by half an inch. The aptly nicknamed "Wee Willie" Keeler, at 5 foot 4½, is the shortest.

Catfish Hunter becomes the youngest ex-player, and the first to be born in the 1940s. He was born on April 18, 1946, making him 41 years old. Cap Anson, with a birthday almost exactly 94 years earlier (April 17, 1852), would be the oldest former player.

• Among pitchers, Cy Young holds the career highs for innings pitched (7,377), wins (511), losses (313) and hits given up (7,078). Knuckleballer Hoyt Wilhelm, the first relief pitcher elected to the hall, leads in games pitched (1,070) and earned run average (2.52 — only since it was recognized as an official statistic, in 1912 by the National League, and a year later by the Junior Circuit). The leader in shutouts (113) and strikeouts (3,508) is Walter Johnson, while Whitey Ford holds the best winning percentage (.590).

Addie Joss, who died two days after his 31st birthday and just as the 1911 season was about to open, had the fewest games pitched (286) and strikeouts (915). Hoyt Wilhelm is at the bottom of the list for shutouts (5) and victories (143). Dizzy Dean pitched the fewest innings (1,966) and had the least losses (83). Sandy Koufax gave up the fewest hits (1,754). With a lifetime mark of 266-251 (only 15 games over .500), Eppa Rixey holds the lowest winning percentage (.515), and Red Ruffing has the highest earned run average (3.80).

• Among everyday players, Hank Aaron is tops in games (3,298), at bats (12,364), home runs (755) and runs batted in (2,297), while Ty Cobb leads in runs scored (2,245) hits (4,191) and batting average (.367). Tris Speaker hit the most doubles (793) and Sam Crawford, who incidentally shares Hunter's April 18 birthday, leads in triples (312).

• Lows among the non-pitchers are at bats (4,205), hits (1,161), doubles (178) and triples (18) by Roy Campanella, whose career was ended by a tragic automobile accident. Ray Schalk scored the least runs (579) and had the lowest batting average (.253). Ross Youngs, a victim of Bright's disease at age 30, played in the fewest games (1,211). Frank Chance batted in the fewest runs (405), and Johnny Evers and Ray Schalk hit the fewest home runs (12).

Ex-basketball player surrenders to police

CHICAGO (AP) — A former college basketball player who left Creighton University because he said he couldn't read or write surrendered peacefully to police today after barricading himself in a downtown motel, police said.

"We are in the process of trying to subdue him and get him into the proper hands of people who can help him," said deputy police superintendent Joseph Mayo.

Mayo identified the man as Kevin Ross, who left the Omaha, Neb., school and attended a remedial program at a Chicago grade school run by noted educator Marva Collins.

Mayo said Ms. Collins was brought to the scene and had aided police in convincing Ross to surrender.

"Obviously, he gave himself up peacefully, because no one was injured," said Officer Ernestine Dowell, a Chicago police spokeswoman. "I don't have any more information."

No weapons were found in the eighth-floor room of the Quality Inn Downtown, Mayo said.

Ross, 28, who averaged 4.2 points per game at Creighton, dropped out in September 1982, and enrolled in Ms. Collins' school.

The 6-foot-9 former basketball player completed studies there and went on to enroll as a part-time student at Roosevelt University in Chicago during 1984 and 1985. Though he discontinued studies, he told the Omaha World-Herald in a 1986 interview he hoped to resume them, graduate and become a teacher.

He said he was living in the Chicago area and doing odd jobs while fighting "many problems," including alcoholism.

Make Mexican food 'light'

If you love Mexican food—but not the extra calories—try making "light" Mexican dishes at home, suggests a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist.

"Mexican foods served in restaurants and the prepared foods sold in grocery stores often contain a generous amount of fat," says Dr. Alice Hunt. "But by using lower-fat ingredients and alternate cooking methods you can make similar dishes with fewer calories."

She gives the following suggestions for adapting Mexican food recipes: "For tamales or chile, use lean cuts of meat, or trim off all fat before cooking. Also remove the skin from chicken and trim fat before cooking for chicken tacos and chalupas or chicken with squash.

"When using ground beef, cook it the day before, refrigerate and then skim off the fat before reheating. Make your own chorizo with ground beef and spices, since the store-bought variety contains a great deal of fat.

"Use low-fat cheese in enchiladas, tacos, chalupas and chiles rellenos.

"Use vegetable oil rather than lard, and use as little oil as possible when scrambling eggs, cooking rice and fideo and refrying beans. Use chicken broth rather than oil to soften tortillas for enchiladas and other dishes.

"Avoid frying tortillas. Corn tortillas for tacos can be baked with the meat already in them and brushed lightly with margarine for a nice color. Brush tortillas lightly with margarine and bake for nachos or chalupas. For soft tacos, microwave the tortilla, then fill with a meat or bean mixture.

"The meat, beans and cheese in many Mexican foods are a good source of protein," Hunt says. "However, the meal may lack nutrients from fruits and vegetable."

To get a balanced meal, she recommends serving vegetables as a side dish or adding chopped vegetables to the main dish. This is also a good way to stretch the meat in fillings for tacos, enchiladas and other dishes.

A fruit salad or fruit for dessert will help round out the meal, adds the nutritionist.

Virtually all of America's 20 biggest military installations are in the South or the West. The largest military installation elsewhere is Ohio's Wright-Patterson Air Force base which, with almost 28,000 military and civilian employees, is the country's 15th biggest.

Jazzy new musical kicks off in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louis Armstrong grew up in New Orleans before heading north as the self-appointed ambassador of jazz. Now a brassy new musical about his life is following the same route.

"Satchmo: America's Musical Legend," a $3 million stage show with jazzmen in most of the acting roles, has been on preview here since the Fourth of July weekend and is ready to launch a national tour.

It was no accident that the first performances coincided with the city's celebration of Armstrong's 87th birth date and were staged at the Theater For The Performing Arts in Louis Armstrong Park.

The show, with two and a half dozen musical numbers backed by lavish sets and flashy dances, is a history of jazz — linking the biography of the music and the biography of the legendary trumpeter. It is based largely on interviews that the show's writer-director, Jerry Bilik, conducted with Armstrong's widow Lucille.

The action introduces Joe "King" Oliver and the critical influence his Creole Jazz Band had on Louis as a boy who got his first horn in the Colored Waifs' Home after a tame pistol incident at a downtown celebration.

The plot centers on young Louis in Storyville, in Pete Lala's Cafe, and in Chicago, but the momentum comes from the sound of the cornet, evoking its glory days.

After intermission, the cornet is replaced by the trumpet and the mature Armstrong rockets off on the career that sent him around the world. The show follows him all the way, culminating in a deathbed scene that gives whole new meaning to the showbiz demand for an upbeat finale. As Satchmo, Byron Stripling plays the part — literally. Lead trumpet with the Count Basie Orchestra since 1984, Stripling was cast after nationwide auditions and plays a powerful horn in his first acting job.

"The question was, are we going to be like Rich Little and do an impression, or are we going to capture the spirit of the character?" Stripling said. "To capture the spirit you don't have to have a look-alike."

Nevertheless, he does a recognizable Armstrong imitation, complete with the trademark handkerchiefs, broad smiles and driving trumpet. Choreographer Maurice Hines, who knew Armstrong personally, said Stripling shares the spirit that Armstrong had.

"When I saw that kind of lovability that Louis had carrying over into what Byron was doing, I knew there was nothing I had to tell him because that was the essence of the man," Hines said. "He has no (acting) technique to get in the way, so he really becomes Louis. It's amazing what happens."

Joining Stripling on stage are scores of first-rate jazz musicians, performing the various styles of jazz that evolved during Armstrong's life. Most of the musical numbers are vintage jazz pieces, but Bilik (who studied and taught music at the University of Michigan) has composed a few new ones that are sprinkled throughout.

The music is what this show is all about. Even the scene about the invention of scat in a Chicago recording session, with its implications for later performers, seems an offhand by-product of the energy and dazzle of the music.

From here, the show launches a national tour. Broadway is not listed as the final destination, but the actors did a run through in New York before starting the New Orleans previews.

"Theater people may not wish you too well, no matter what they say," Hines said. "But they came up to me afterwards and said they loved the show and they loved Byron. He's going to be a monster star. He doesn't know how good he is."

Glitter world only a memory

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — They say he weighed 601 pounds and stood 6 feet, 4 inches in his prime.

But anyone who ever sidled up to him or spent a Saturday evening watching from the living room side of a television screen can tell you he was bigger than life.

He was Haystack Calhoun, the friendly, bearded, barefoot, horseshoe-toting farm boy from Morgan's Corner, Ark.

For almost three decades, America welcomed him into its homes as it would Santa Claus on Christmas Eve.

America loved Haystack Calhoun. Some nights, maybe even an ounce or two more than Santa. While Santa stayed away 51 weeks a year, Haystack visited every week. And not just to chat. He came to wrestle.

The love affair began deep in the bosom of the '50s, when television and professional wrestling first invited a nation to participate in a giant group therapy session.

Wrestling gave us villains to boo. It gave us heroes to cheer. And it gave us Haystack to cherish.

There was no wrestler quite like Haystack. He never reached the pinnacle by winning the world championship, but he did win a world two-man tag-team championship. By himself.

Haystack tamed escaped Nazis. Haystack hammered hammer-and-sickle-carrying Soviets. Haystack put pretty boy, bleach blonds in their places, patting them on the head, then exorcising as much evil from them as could be expected before it was time to go to the next commercial.

Haystack grew so big that the 20-by-20-foot ring could no longer hold him.

He branched out and wrestled in all 50 states. He traveled to Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Puerto Rico and Cuba. He put Morgan's Corner, Ark., on the map.

Haystack earned $8,900 the week in 1961 he unsuccessfully challenged Nature Boy Buddy Rogers in Chicago's Comiskey Park for the world title. But titled or not, everyone wanted a piece of Haystack. Some years, the barefoot country boy stuffed the pockets of his trademark blue denim overalls with more than $100,000.

Once, when the studio thought Marilyn Monroe needed a little extra publicity, it called on Haystack. The Associated Press compiled a story comparing Marilyn's million-dollar body to Haystack's million-dollar body.

Haystack traded one-liners with Groucho Marx on his "You Bet Your Life" television show. Haystack spent time with Jack Paar on the "Tonight Show." He could be seen in commercials for king-size mattresses with blonde bombshell Jayne Mansfield.

When Art Linkletter called, Haystack visited the "House Party" to meet the kids who said the darndest things.

VFW Park site of recent Wilson family reunion

There were 67 people in attendance at the Wilson family reunion held July 18 in the VFW Park.

Attending from Hereford were Vernon and Doris Wilson; Mike, Angela and Jess Wilson; Mrs. R.L. Wilson; Glenn and Claudia Wilson; Nita Houle; Allen, Jannet, Misty, Marty and Lacey Wilson; Judy, Jim and Misty Dawn Nicholson; and Mandi Jones.

Others present included Bonnie Wilson, Renee Wilson, Glen, Rita and Amanda Wilson, and Bobby Stockinger, all of Fort Worth; Eric, Lesley and Danny Rigen of Hot Springs, Ark.; Selwin and Blanche Cross, Pete and Sylvia Wilson, Gary, Cindy, Brandy and Sean Wilson, Mike, Michelle and Eric Wilson, Steve, Kelly and Abby Wilson and Pat, Romana and Taran Wilson, all of Amarillo; Helen, Roy, Pam and Randy Haltom, Marshall and Melrose Wilson, Kim, Tiffany, Chad and Jeffery Coomer, Chris and John Lackey, Marguerite Faver, Ron, Pam, and Micah Steffen and Missy Marcum, all of Lubbock; Bob and Ann Wilson, Craig, Gale and Mathew Gum and Tony Wilson, all of Nampa, Idaho.

When Hollywood needed a wrestler for the final scene in the classic boxing film, "Requiem for a Heavyweight," it cast the most recognizable body in the wrestling business.

Wrestling had other sideshow attractions, but it had only one Haystack. There was the Blimp, Jumbo, even a Haystack Calhoun impersonator, Haystack Muldoon. But none quite measured up to Haystack Calhoun, and none could stand the test of time like him.

Haystack's career began in 1948 in a Kansas City, Mo., barn and ended would suck enormous amounts of expense money from most men. For Haystack, expenses were draining.

"I never intended for it to be like this," Calhoun said. "The money kind of flew. Don't forget, there are no pensions for old wrestlers."

Food and clothing, every stitch custom made, ate at the earnings. Airplane trips were costlier than for most. Haystack, who needed two seats, was charged for a seat and a half.

And there were excesses, like a ring with the name "Stacks" spelled out in diamonds, bought to help make

"I've always been big, you know. Always had a healthy appetite. I really never did get full. I just got ashamed to eat any more."

Instead of the U.S. Army, Calhoun joined wrestling's army of sideshow attractions.

"I had the typical emotional problems coming out of high school, all the self doubts. I thought if I could achieve a status in life, wrestling would give it."

It was in Washington, D.C., one day soon after he set out to find his fame and fortune, that Calhoun was dubbed Haystack. "Someone said I was as big as a haystack. It stuck like a pound on a scale."

Haystack guesses he weighs 350 pounds now. He's not sure. As it always has been, there is no available scale to withstand his weight.

"I weighed something like 500 pounds. But 600 sounded so much heavier. But who would believe anyone weighed exactly 600 pounds? People would think it was a mad-up weight. So I told people I weighed 601 pounds. People took my word. It's not like I could check my weight every week on the bathroom scale."

Haystack hopes it should not come as a disappointment to anyone that there is no Morgan's Corner, Ark., and that Haystack probably never weighed 601 pounds.

"Worship athletes on the field or in the ring," Calhoun said as he reached for a pillow to place under his right leg. "But remember, athletes are people, too. We all have our faults. We all have our disappointments. I can live with all of mine."

"All old Haystack wants people to remember about him is some of the joy he brought them. That is his reward," he said.

I wouldn't change a thing.

Haystack Calhoun

in 1980 with his retirement.

"Not a bad life for an old fat boy," Calhoun thundered in his rich baritone one recent afternoon. "Especially after the doctors said I'd never made it. They guessed my weight would kill me long before now."

Bill Calhoun is 52 now.

"Be 53 this August," he said with unmistakable defiance. "And they said I'd never make it this far."

"This far" is a trailer in the Villa View Mobile Home Park in McKinney.

The trailer is Haystack's 14-by-80-foot world now. Still a warm and friendly man, Haystack greets his visitor from a wheelchair. He wears thick metal-frame glasses, a loose-fitting shirt left unbuttoned, and a pair of tan shorts.

Haystack's left leg was amputated just below the knee because of circulation problems last June. The leg could no longer stand the burden of carrying the man.

The man says he has remained a prisoner of the trailer since he was moved there last September from a nursing home.

He also has diabetes. His vision is slipping. Sharing Haystack's world is his ailing 76-year-old mother, Mittie, and his 20-year-old daughter, Kay.

"Between the three of us, we make one good person," Haystack howls. Haystack's failing eyes have managed to see the better side of his fate.

This is no punch-drunk palooka, the victim of one too many sleeper holds. The mind remains sharp.

"Funny, but when I weighed 600 pounds and was working, I was never sick one single day. But the doctors say that with all the pounding this old body took all those years in the ring, I'm lucky to be sitting here talking."

Gone to better days and happier times is the money Haystack earned in the ring. Money and Haystack never stayed tag-team partners long.

Armadillo spirit lives on in Texas graphic art

AUSTIN (AP) — The lamentably defunct Armadillo World Headquarters, linked in the popular imagination with the evolution of the Austin Sound, defies categorization. It was a recording studio, art gallery, subculture museum, entertainer's guild, beer garden and, for hundreds of employees and habitués, a home away from home.

A converted National Guard armory, the ramshackle, new-age honky tonk mingled straights and freaks, ropers and dopers. From 1970 to 1981, its stage mixed and matched acts such as Bruce Springsteen and Devo with Texas musicians such as Balcones Fault, Shiva's Headband and Greezy Wheels.

The posters promoting the 'Dillo's performances captured the heady, eclectic mood better than any other medium. They transcended banal advertising claims, depicting the lifestyle and beliefs of an Austin generation.

The artists, working in loose-knit collectives and studios, eventually formed a minor school of graphic art whose influence is felt today. Music scholars consult the Armadillo archival collection at the University of Texas Barker Texas History Center as an important record of a musical genre.

The origins of the school can be traced to a Congress Avenue club called the Vulcan Gas Company, a conceptual and musical forerunner of the 'Dillo. Vulcan artists Gilbert Shelton, Tony Bell and Jim Franklin churned out hundreds of posters and circulars that were unlike anything Austin had seen.

Shelton, art director of the club from 1967-68, said that he copied avant-garde San Francisco artists for his posters. Working with printer Johnny Mercer, however, he achieved a unique look by mixing inks on the press in a process called split-fount inking.

"Franklin and I had a budget of about $5 a week to produce posters," said Shelton, a resident of Paris, France, and creator of the cartoon characters the Fabulous Furry Freak Brothers and Oat Willie. "Because we relied heavily on homemade technology, our work had a country feel."

Jim Franklin, an artist living in Moab, Utah, co-founded the World Headquarters, where he was called the "etereal essence in residence."

The club was perpetually innovative and perpetually in financial trouble. "The 'Dillo had a 30-day lease that ran for 11 years," Franklin said. "That's why it never got revamped. Our principal asset was a tribe of hippies with a lot of time on their hands."

Franklin, acknowledged as the father of Austin's poster-art school, recalled the early days. "We were a bunch of artists cramped into small studios with no views trying to create a new Austin."

The armadillo, a recurring icon in Franklin's art, attained cult status in his talented hands. "I used the armadillo because I was visualizing the club's audience," he said. "They were people celebrating the freedom of being odd. Independent thinkers, they were more American than the average American."

Franklin was in the news last year when he proposed painting a yellow rose on the water tower on the north side of the Colorado River.

"The Chamber of Commerce said it was an old-Austin kind of idea," Franklin said. "But old-Austin concepts made this city a music center. And the posters let the world know what was happening here."

Most of the 'Dillo artists, who also created posters for Soap Creek Saloon, Antone's and other clubs, have remained in the Austin area.

Danny Garrett, a free-lance artist, credits Franklin with setting the tone, which was often whimsical or absurd. "We're still avowed absurdist," Garrett said. "Though we sometimes deal with serious subjects, we've found that this town promotes levity over gravity."

Garrett laments the end of the age of art-music posters because they were more of a cultural statement than a cost-effective means of promoting shows.

Like many poster artists, Kerry Awn (the artistic pseudonym for Kerry Fitzgerald) was attracted to Austin because of Franklin's work and the tolerant lifestyle. "The capital was about the only place in Texas where it was safe to have long hair," he said.

"The 'Dillo was the center of the Texas cultural universe," said Awn, who a writer once described as "a crazed and rabid Texan trapped in the body of a crazed and rabid accountant."

Awn's mural at 23rd and Guadalupe streets is a bizarre but effective memorial to the 'Dillo milieu and the posters that celebrated it. Designed as a giant postcard, the work depicts Stephen F. Austin cradling an armadillo, rock star Johnny Winter and a Guacamole Queen at the Vulcan Gas Company, and Oat Willie waving "howdy" at the state Capitol.

Though it had its roots in Haight-Ashbury, Austin poster art of the 1970s was downright Texan. Sam Yeates, who specializes in what he calls "New Western Art" — taking Old West icons such as cow skulls and putting them in 20th century context — said it was as though someone had mixed drug-store postcards showing giant catfish and jackalopes with progressive country music themes.

Yeates remembered working at Sheauxnough Studios on Lavaca. The joke was that, depending on the job, the oddly spelled name could mean "sho nuff" or "shucks no."

"We were hippies in the sense that we cared for one another," he said. "We didn't spend all our time trying to earn a living. We spent all our time living."

Yeates' colleague, Guy Juke (nom de brush for De White), was one of the original cosmic cowboys. 'Dillo art, he said, was like Hollywood's interpretation of Texas.

Musician Joe Ely once wrote, "I first met Juke in Lubbock, that rectangular metropolis of the Panhandle. When he came to Austin he brought the harsh angles of West Texas, bent them so they would fit in his suitcase, straightened them out when he unpacked, twisted them so they could be moved through doorways and revved them up with shaky characters."

Illustrator and guitarist, Juke said he sometimes dreams about the old club that inspired so much high-grade art. "I still feel its comfortable proportions," he said. "The closest you can get these days is going to Carnival in the City Coliseum."

"I think there is a future for Texas Poster Art, perhaps by taking it into bigger, more colorful and sophisticated directions," Juke said.

Bill Narum, who has an art studio and gallery in Thorndale, is doing his part to ensure the continuity of the tradition. He worked in the 1970s at Directions graphics company, which generated music posters.

Narum just finished a historical study of Scholz Garten because he is involved in its restoration.

"It was everything that the Armadillo was and more," he said. "In addition to publishing posters, it had tight-rope walkers, balloon ascensions, minstrel shows and outdoor concerts."

"The 'Dillo was an unconscious recreation of those times," Narum said. "It was where 19th century, rural Texas met the 20th century. Now we're seeking a new focus, something that would say what we're all about in the 1980s."

The headquarters for the National Society of Colonial Dames XVII Century is at 1300 New Hampshire Ave., NW Washington, DC 20036.

Court filing indicates Hunt brothers with $1.4 billion negative net worth

DALLAS (AP) — The Hunt brothers of Dallas have filed a lengthy debt reorganization plan that indicates a negative net worth of about $1.4 billion for their energy companies and real estate held by their trusts.

Wednesday's filing under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, the most precise public disclosure of the Hunts' financial problems in years, proposes the assets of their separate trust funds and a handful of jointly owned companies be combined to bring the William Herbert Hunt Trust Estate out of debt reorganization.

The plan also proposes an unprecedented public offering of stock in the Hunts' Penrod Drilling Co. to raise cash needed to retire its debt.

Like a reorganization plan filed last month for sister company Placid Oil Co., a company jointly owned by the three brothers, Wednesday's plan appears to attempt to isolate members of a group of 23 banks with whom the brothers and a handful of their companies are wrangling in federal bankruptcy court over $1.5 billion in bank loans to Placid and Penrod.

The largest creditors of William Herbert Hunt Trust Estate are banks owed more than $714 million by Penrod Drilling Co., which is not in reorganization. The trust filed for Chapter 11 reorganization in August after the banks attempted to foreclose on valuable property the trust owns north of Dallas.

Placid Oil and other Hunt entities signed on for another $705 million, plus interest, to another group of banks.

The reorganization plan proposes to pay all creditors in full by grouping the trusts of Nelson Bunker Hunt and Lamar Hunt with William Herbert Hunt's to govern five wholly-owned subsidiaries. The revenue from those operating companies, plus money from the trusts' oil and gas partnerships, would be directed toward the debt.

However, under the Hunts' plan, the banks wouldn't be paid anytime soon. Any money directed toward that debt would be put in a "payment fund," escrowed until settlement of mammoth concurrent civil litigation.

The Hunts filed suit in July 1986 against their 23 bank lenders for $13.8 billion, claiming loan agreements for $1.5 billion were the banks' attempt to destroy the Hunt oil and gas empire. The Hunts claim the debts are null and void because of collusion and misrepresentation on the part of the banks.

"We're not going to give them a nickel until it's decided what we owe," said L. Edward Creel III, bankruptcy attorney for the trust. "The point is, it won't be distributed, although it will be accumulating."

A lawyer for one of the Hunts' lending banks called the plan "outrageous" because the banks wouldn't be repaid until the court battle is resolved.

"I've never heard of a plan where the debtor keeps the money," said Hugh M. Ray, an attorney for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., a major lender to the Hunt companies.

Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and First National Bank of Chicago represent more than 25 percent of the bank debt.

The bank creditors filed a competing reorganization plan Wednesday. The banks want control of the William Herbert Hunt Estate Trust, worth $615 million at the time of the reorganization petition in August 1986. Their plan mandates a minimum payment, through liquidation or otherwise, of 20 percent of the trust's asset value by June 1990.

The banks' plan also calls for the trust to be managed by "persons not subject to influence by Herbert Hunt or his affiliates." Whether satisfying the debt through liquidation or income from rental properties, the bank plan calls for the remaining principal balance of the bank debt to be paid June 1995.

Individually, Nelson Bunker Hunt, William Herbert Hunt and Lamar Hunt still hold millions of dollars.

But Wednesday's filing in federal court in Dallas indicates that Placid Oil Co., Penrod Drilling Co., and the various real estate holdings have total assets currently valued at about $1.03 billion and owe banks, tax collectors and scores of other creditors about $2.43 billion.

The filings provided a glimpse of the Hunt trust holdings — 71 properties in eight states — including 17 ranches and farms, eight office buildings and six shopping centers.

HIGHLY RECOMMENDED BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — A professor here says beware of letters of recommendation as they are becoming increasingly unreliable for evaluating candidates for jobs.

In all but the rarest of cases, he says, a letter is apt to be favorable — even when the writer knows the candidate is mediocre or unqualified.

He says he has ways to convey unfavorable information in a fashion the candidate might not notice. For example, he said, "For an inept person, you could say, 'I most enthusiastically recommend this candidate with no qualifications whatsoever.'"

To describe an unproductive person, he said, "I can assure you no person would be better for the job."

Names in the News

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Jessica Hahn will tell all to Playboy, and her story will "stun the country," says a lawyer for the former church secretary at the center of the PTL scandal.

The 27-year-old will not pose nude for the magazine, attorney Dominic Barbara said Wednesday, adding, "Don't even think of that."

Miss Hahn will detail her 1980 sexual tryst with Jim Bakker and her knowledge of "payoffs, financial dealings, the wars among religious evangelists and the story of her own past," Barbara said.

Neither Playboy nor Barbara would say how much Miss Hahn was being paid, but the attorney said a package of movie, magazine and book deals could bring her more than $2.5 million.

She will remain under the protection of bodyguards in an undisclosed location until the story is published in Playboy's November issue, Barbara said.

"Whatever one thinks of Jessica Hahn through past and present press reports, the person and story that will emerge are going to stun the country," he said.

Bakker resigned as head of the 500,000-member PTL TV ministry in March after saying he had been blackmailed over his liaison with Miss Hahn.

Miss Hahn has said she was forced into sex with Bakker and another evangelist. She reached a $265,000 settlement with PTL, but received only a small amount of the money before Bakker resigned and payments were cut off.

HERNDON, Va. (AP) — Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs says he regrets not visiting Joe Theismann in the hospital when the star quarterback suffered a career-ending leg injury.

"I made a mistake," Gibbs said Wednesday in response to published excerpts from Theismann's new autobiography. "I should have found a way to get down there. I was wrong."

He said a hectic work schedule prevented him from visiting Theismann, whose career was ended after he suffered a compound fracture when he was hit by three New York Giants linebackers in a 1985 game.

In his book, "Theismann," written with David Kindred, Theismann says of his hospital stay: "There are two things I'll never forget about being there: Jack Kent Cooke (the Redskins' owner) came to see me, and Joe Gibbs didn't."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Garcia, Bob Weir and other members of the Grateful Dead are stripped to the bare bones in a music video from the first album in seven years by the seminal 1960s rock band.

In the video, skeleton puppet likenesses of each member "perform" the song "Touch of Grey," from the album "In The Dark."

"We studied videotapes of other Grateful Dead performances, looking at the bands particular tics and nuances" to create string-and-rod puppets that look like the members of the band, filmmaker Gary Gutierrez said recently.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A Willie Nelson look-alike says more and more people are mistaking him for the country singer as planning heats up for Farm Aid III, Nelson's benefit concert for farmers.

"You want to crawl under something," said Stuart MacMillan, a 51-year-old truck driver from nearby Ceresco with long, graying hair and a weathered face. "You hate to go anywhere, but you can't not go anywhere."

Nelson is the organizer of Farm Aid, to be held Sept. 19 in Lincoln.
