Drug busts, use still big problem

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

The use of illegal drugs remains a problem in our city according to Detective David Wagner of the Hereford Police Department.

Wagner heads up narcotic investigations in the city and was responsible for the day-to-day contact established with undercover operative Raul Sanchez during a 10-month operation which culminated in a 1986 drug bust.

The operation was a joint effort by Deaf Smith County, the City of Hereford and Amarillo's Metro Unit and resulted in 77 arrests and 95 total cases.

"That bust just scratched the surface of what is out there," says Wagner. "We still didn't get the big guys."

Claudia Stravato, president of the Amarillo chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, has criticized the drug bust because of the small quantity of drugs involved.

A press statement released by the ACLU says "most of the alleged purchases were small (under 4 ounces of marijuana, or enough for a single fix of other substances.)"

District Attorney Roland Saul says the undercover operative was instructed to make small purchases because of the limited funds available for the project.

"It just didn't make sense to use what funds we had at the time to make one or two large purchases. We told Sanchez to make smaller purchases because we could be more effective that way."

The bookkeeping for the operation is another area Stravato has expressed concern about. She is employed as a deputy comptroller in State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office and says since she spends much of her time dealing with stringent state laws for record keeping she is deeply concerned about the way Deaf Smith County Sheriff Joe bursement of $500 each.

ACLU also has some concerns with how the operation was conducted in terms of the actions of Sanchez. With that Sanchez as the sole witness to 78 of the cases, ACLU says the operation was in violation of "standard police procedures."

Domingo Pesina, Jr. was convicted of selling heroin. Sentenced to 25 years in the Texas Department of Corrections, Pesina appealed.

Brown handled money during the operation.

The City of Hereford wrote payments for their half of the operation to the county. County Treasurer Vesta Mae Nunley issued checks to Brown to be cashed and passed on to Wagner, who supplied money to Sanchez.

The City of Hereford has receipts for their checks to the county. The county treasurer has invoices bearing the county commissioner's approval for the checks she wrote. Wagner has a ledger sheet balancing the money he received with funds he issued to Sanchez. Sanchez has records concerning some of the money he spent on purchases.

According to Stravato the process breaks down in Brown's office. She says repeated attempts to get the sheriff to provide an accounting for the money he received and the money he passed on have been fruitless for her organization.

Stravato points out that after ACLU began a crossfire of letters requesting documentation of expenses for the project Brown returned $1,000 to the county.

"I had kept $1,000 after the big drug bust because we still didn't know what outstanding expenses we had, Brown said. "When we compared the ledgers and determined all the bills were paid I refunded the money."

The last entry, dated January, 1987, on the county and city ledgers for the joint operation show a reim-

Among other points his appeal criticized the secretiveness of Sanchez's movements and lack of videotapes or other witnesses to the sales.

The appeal stated, "This case, contrary to all the drug buys seen on the television program, Miami Vice, is probably one of the more secretive cases ever presented."

The Judicial Court of Appeals answered, "After conducting extensive research utilizing the Penal Code, the Code of Criminal Procedure, and Case Law, the State utterly fails to find authority in any of the above which obligates the State to consult with the writers of the Miami Vice television show prior to conducting a drug operation."

A note to the document shows the district attorney's office did contact the real Miami Vice. Richard Burmeister, assistant DA, personally contacted Miami Police Department's Narcotics Division and held a discussion with an undercover officer.

Burmeister said the undercover narcotics officer questioned stated that he had been involved in undercover operations which were conducted without the type of evidence Pesina's lawyer or the ACLU were requesting.

He said the only time the real Miami engages in operations where they take video tapes or recordings are those which are to be one time buys of large quantities of narcotics.

Almost wine time

County Agent Dennis Newton looks over some Zinfandel grapes at the Loren Nixon Vineyard south of Hereford. Newton said grape harvest should start in the area in about three weeks. Many of the area's vineyards have had to overcome weather and insect problems, but should be in excellent shape for the 1987 harvest.

Positives highlighted by chamber

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

A concern about the adverse publicity "which the Amarillo media seems to be obsessed with in reporting Hereford and Deaf Smith County news" prompted Mike Carr, executive vice president of the chamber, to issue a news release Friday on the positive signs that are apparent in the community.

"Every town, regardless of size, has problems and areas that need improvement," said Carr. "We are no exception. We do, however, have the people and the desire to make Hereford and Deaf Smith County a great place to live and raise a family."

Carr said the chamber was actively involved in the overall economic improvement of Hereford and that through the efforts of many citizens, "it is evident that progress is occurring."

He said some of the positive signs of this progress include the construction of the new, ultra-modern flour milling plant east of Hereford-Panhandle Milling, which is due to open soon; the construction of the Merrick Pet Food Company, where work is nearing completion on the east side of the city; and plans for a Texas State Technical Institute training center to be located in Hereford.

In addition, Carr said projects that now look very promising for Hereford include discussions for a new cinema theater, additional speciality stores, eating establishments, and the addition of two or three service-related firms.

"At the present time, the chamber's economic development committee is looking at additional areas of improvement for both the youth and the adult-age group," said Carr. He added that figures are being put together on the possibility of a bowling alley and other related businesses.

The chamber manager said the C of C is now involved in an overall retail service sector evaluation. "Our purpose is not only to identify areas that need attention, but also how to assist the existing stores in getting their share of the area market," explained Carr.

Hereford Industrial Foundation, along with the C of C Industrial Development Committee, are studying three outside projects as well as some local expansion plans, according to the chamber manager. He added that contacts have been made and discussion underway about the future possibilities of the idle Swift Independent Packing Plant facility.

The start-up of a fulltime vocational training center, under the umbrella of TSTI, is a major goal of the chamber at present. "In order for us to provide every opportunity possible to our residents to upgrade skills and improve their job levels, we feel this project is a priority," stated Carr.

He said the concept of creating a training center will allow the community to contract with TSTI for a vast array of vocational and related courses. In addition, Carr said the chamber will contract with other institutions, such as Amarillo College, to provide courses in certain areas of expertise. The campus-type learning center would be structured for both day and night courses.

"Our community is fortunate to have the excellent YMCA facility that provides year-round youth and adult activities, and the Senior Citizen facility is recognized as one of the best in the state," pointed out the chamber chief. He added that two churches have added full gym facilities and provide programs of activities for the youth.

"The youth baseball, soccer and basketball programs have all proven to be very successful in our community," said Carr, "and for outdoor activities, we have one of the best municipal golf courses in the area."

Times in Austin have been taxing

AUSTIN (AP) — The bandwagon Bill Clements rode to victory last November ran head-on into political reality.

The Texas Legislature may never be the same again.

When the fog of seven months of legislating lifted, a governor who had promised no new taxes signed the largest tax increase in state history, and the once one-party Texas House discovered that political affiliation makes a big difference now.

The Legislature, using all 30 days of its overtime special session, finally passed a balanced budget. State government will spend a record $38.3 billion in 1988-89, and taxpayers will pay $5.7 billion more to run it.

Those results came after Clements, a Republican, campaigned against any new taxes and for four months vowed to veto any tax increase larger than $2.9 billion. So what happened?

Secretary of State Jack Rains, a Republican, Clements appointee and gubernatorial ally, said the outcome was the best the anti-tax governor could do against a Senate where Democrats rule 25-6 and a House where Democrats outnumber Republicans 94-56.

"Politics is the art of the possible," Rains said. "Within the realm of possibility, Bill Clements has done the best job he can do for his constituency and his viewpoint."

Clements argues that his mission was accomplished. He vowed to stop "runaway" government growth and did it, he says. Citing 1986-87 spending of $37.4 billion, he asserted that the 1988-89 increase is less than either the inflation rate or population growth.

"If your math works like mine, that is a 2.4 percent increase for the next two years, or 1.2 percent per year. Those are hard numbers. And I'm not confused at all," Clements declared. "We have literally stopped the growth in Texas state government."

What he didn't do was keep his campaign promise.

When filing as a candidate on Feb. 3, 1986, Clements said: "I have the know-how and the commitment to tell Texas that I will veto any and all tax or fee increases. Bill Clements stands absolutely firm on this issue."

On Oct. 21, 1986, just days before the election, Clements said: "We are not going to have an overall increase in taxes in the state of Texas while I'm governor during the next legislative session."

The realities were different.

Lawmakers took two special sessions in 1986 to trim fat from the budget. They wound up cutting spending, but also raising taxes, and still left a $1 billion deficit. When they convened again in January, the economy had so soured that Comptroller Bob Bullock forecast almost a $5 billion shortfall to keep services at current levels.

Democrats control the Legislature. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and the Senate wanted to restore funding for higher education to stop what they said was a "brain drain" of talented faculty. In the House, Speaker Gib Lewis and others said budget cutting could do only so much.

Majority wins. But in the Texas House, the Democratic majority found a feisty GOP minority.

President Reagan's 1984 landslide and the changing makeup of the Texas electorate that year gave Republicans more than one-third of the House, gains consolidated in 1986 when they won 56 of the 150 seats.

That may not sound like much in a House run by Democrats for decades, but it was enough.

Under House rules, many things take 100 votes to accomplish. Overriding a governor's veto takes 100 votes. Putting a tax increase into immediate effect takes 100, too.

Democrats lacked enough votes to do either if the Republicans stuck together. Most GOP lawmakers stuck, threatening until the last night to block tax action unless Democrats removed their "doomsday" plan to cut money to colleges in GOP districts.

"We're not going to have any more clout than we have just by our numbers," said Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston. "We don't have the numbers to do anything except on two-thirds votes. We're not anything unless we assert ourselves on those issues."

They did.

It made many Democrats angry. Some predicted the House was changed forever into a body where the two parties always stick together. Serious partisan politics may be on the way.

Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, who authored the main tax bill and won high marks for the way he handled himself, predicted a dramatic change.

"I think (the tax debate) will mark the beginning of a very significant and profound transition into a much more partisan style of operation of the House," Morales said. "When we get back into the next session, things are going to be different."

Many Democrats, except those conservative Democrats who joined the GOP to oppose the tax bill, said they were tired of being forced to raise taxes and then watch benefits flow into districts where the representatives refused to vote with them.

Next session, they warned, Republicans may not get committee chairmanships and leadership roles.

Morales said the rise of partisanship is unfortunate but inevitable.

'West Texas tough guy'

FBI nominee, Sessions, has strong Senate support

WASHINGTON (AP) — William S. Sessions, the federal judge who doesn't quibble over being depicted as a "West Texas tough guy," appears to have strong Senate support for his nomination to become the fourth director of the FBI.

Sessions, a Republican, was nominated Friday by President Reagan to succeed William Webster, who is now the CIA director. The move immediately drew praise in the Senate.

"The (FBI) directorship has been vacant too long," said Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., who said he was pleased that Reagan had acted. Biden said he will discuss a committee hearing schedule for the nomination next week.

Sessions was given strong support from both of his homestate senators, Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat, and Phil Gramm, a Republican.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd praised the nomination, saying he was pleased that Sessions "has a reputation for being tough on crime, particularly drug offenders. ... there is no more urgent a need than to rid the country of our crime problem, and no more important a person in this effort than the director of the FBI."

Gramm said Sessions is "the right man at the right time." Bentsen said he would "use what influence I have to send his nomination through."

At a news conference at the Justice Department attended by Sessions and Attorney General Edwin Meese III, a reporter suggested that Sessions' reputation was that of a "west Texas tough guy."

"I love the accusation, I think it's delightful," Sessions replied.

"I don't wear a gunbelt and I don't have any cowboy boots to my name," the judge added. "If I'm a west Texas tough guy it's simply because we've dealt with difficult problems out there. The drugs and immigration problems are severe. ... Whether you are a judge or whether you are involved in prosecution or defense, there are very difficult times."

Sessions, who worked in the Justice Department's criminal division from 1969 to 1971 handling obscenity and other prosecutions, said that "the obscenity and pornography business is vicious stuff. I do not look on it as victimless crime and I never have." He qualified his comments by emphasizing that First Amendment rights must be protected.

Sessions was asked his views about FBI monitoring of political groups operating in the United States which have ties to foreign countries.

He responded that "an integral ... vital part" of the Constitution is the right to peaceful assembly and that "we must always be careful that we do not tread on those rights." He proposed a more complete answer at his confirmation hearings.

"Judge Sessions has established himself as a fair-minded tough prosecutor and one of the finest federal judges on the bench today," Reagan said at the White House in announcing the nomination with Sessions standing at his side.

Reagan called Sessions a man of "great personal integrity and honor, dedicated to the vigorous enforcement of the criminal laws of our country and to the even-handed administration of justice."

His nomination follows a 4½-month search that became a political embarrassment for the Reagan administration when several candidates declined the $82,500-a-year job. As a district judge, Sessions receives $89,500.

Meese refused to say how many people had rejected his approaches about taking the job and said he didn't think the search — which involved reviewing more than 60 candidates — had taken very long. The FBI has been run on an acting basis since Webster's departure by John Otto, a career FBI official. Meese didn't deny that some White House officials were frustrated with him for the speed with which he conducted the search, but said Reagan supported him, adding, "he was very happy we had taken enough time to be sure that we had got the right person on the job."

Sessions, 57, flew to Washington on Thursday night from San Antonio, Texas, and met with Attorney General Edwin Meese III Friday morning, followed by a meeting with Reagan at the White House, where he accepted the nomination.

Congressional tax amendments would benefit investors, Alaskan children, football coaches

WASHINGTON (AP) — As many as 20 million investors, 130,000 Alaskan children and a handful of college football coaches stand to benefit from amendments Congress is considering as "technical corrections" to last year's tax overhaul.

The proposals — dozens of them — are a long way from becoming law, and some may not get beyond the public-hearing stage in the House and Senate. But a Senate Finance subcommittee is gathering testimony in anticipation that Congress will act later this year to correct some of the scores of mistakes that ended up in the new tax law.

Anytime Congress passes a major tax bill, it is a good bet that several months later the lawmakers will come back with new legislation to correct mistakes. The 1986 law, for example, has a lot of unclear provisions, some typographical errors, the wrong cities and states listed to receive some tax benefits, and even a provision that Congress specifically rejected.

Chief tax-writers in the House and Senate introduced a 503-page bill last month to fix some of those mistakes. But the bill goes beyond simple corrections and seeks to add some new special benefits to the tax law.

In that same spirit, more than a dozen witnesses went before the Finance taxation subcommittee Wednesday to plead for help. They seemed undeterred by a caution from chairman Max Baucus, D-Mont., that only technical corrections — nothing making a substantive tax change — would be considered for the bill.

Among the proposals: —Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, asked for relief for an estimated 130,000 children under the age of 14 in his state who are expected to receive dividend payments of about $700 apiece this year from a special trust fund financed by royalties from Alaska oil.

Unless Congress acts, Murkowski said, those children — most of whom are from low-income families — will have to file federal tax returns and pay tax of about $22 each on the trust payments, which are unearned income. That is because an anti-evasion provision in the 1986 law requires any child who is claimed as a dependent by a parent to file a return and pay tax if unearned income exceeds $500.

Murkowski contended it would cost the government more to process the Alaska children's returns than the revenues gained.

—Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, asked that football coaches at four-year colleges be allowed to set aside tax-deferred retirement funds in a special plan known as a 401(k), even though they do not otherwise qualify. The average tenure of such coaches, especially assistants, is less than three years, Symms said, and because most pension plans require at least five years before a worker is guaranteed benefits, many coaches have no retirement plan.

—Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., whose state is home to some of the largest insurance companies, pleaded for correction of what he said is an inequitable provision in the 1986 law affecting discounted loss reserves of property and casualty insurers.

—Robert Massie, speaking for fellow authors, said a 1986 provision should be changed to allow freelance writers to deduct research and writing expenses in the year incurred, rather than deducting them over the earning life of a book or article.

DRUGS

He also explained that the video taping or recording devices are not used for court evidence but as a means of protecting an operative so other officers can come to his aid if needed.

The rejection of the appeal also states, "The State finds it implausible to believe that Appellant's view of how a drug operation should be conducted, based on a fictional television show would constitute grounds for a rehearing of his case."

Clearly Appellant's attorney's experience in undercover narcotics operations has been limited to what he has derived from fictional accounts dramatized in various television programs such as Miami Vice. If Appellant's attorney wishes to give this Court a lesson as to how to conduct undercover drug operations it is suggested that he stop watching so much television and become involved in the seamy, sordid, dangerous world of the undercover narcotics officer.

The court also upheld District Judge David Wesley Gulley's decision not to allow testimony of Nicolasa Garcia to be given before the jury.

Garcia testified, with the jury absent, that she had a sexual relationship with Sanchez in return for drugs and that she had seen him use marijuana. She was not allowed to testify before the jury because she stated she had no evidence about actual sale or purchase of drugs. Her testimony was determined to be collateral to the case on trial and was not admitted.

Based on her testimony, Garcia was subsequently arrested and charged with possession of heroin. She has since been convicted of forgery and passing and her probation has been revoked on an assault charge after she hit a man on the head with a fireplace poker; drinking intoxicating beverages; and, while under the influence of alcohol, endangering herself and others.

Stravato finds fault with Garcia's treatment; however, Saul says after spending all that time and money to catch drug dealers he would be remiss not to press charges against anyone who testifies they have been in possession of illegal drugs.

The ACLU statement also finds fault with Family Services and the means used to get a user committed to Vernon State Hospital.

The release states that three of the defendants were seeking help from Family Services and that the families of these defendants believe that for seeking help the people came to the attention of the D.A.'s office.

Family Services offers professional counseling with charges based on the household's income. Executive Director Claire Rigler, of Amarillo, said the counselors abide by strict laws regarding confidentiality of clients. According to her, any leak of names of persons seeking commitment to Vernon for drug treatment would have to occur after the required forms leave the counselor's hands.

As a result of ACLU and Concerned Citizens charges, Rigler met with the Concerned Citizens last November and since that time Family Services has added Hispanic personnel to their Hereford staff.

"We have had Mike Moon working in Hereford and he speaks fluent Spanish," Rigler said, "but they wanted a counselor with a Hispanic background. It happened that we were interviewing Darrell Manzanares at that time and he is Hispanic."

Manzanares became director of the local Family Service Center in January.

Requests for commitment to a state hospital, such as Vernon, are processed through the County Judge's office. Glen Nelson was county judge at the time of the operation and was unavailable for comment; however, Saul denied any information came from Nelson.

The crux of ACLU and Concerned Citizens' complaints about the drug operation rest on their allegations that Sanchez was pushing drugs and that he then turned in the names of those he sold to as the pushers. A letter bearing the signature of Bessie Mendoza alleges that Sanchez and a friend, Roger Cantu, peddled the drugs.

The letter states, "This man (Sanchez) gave and sold drugs to juveniles... He would pick up these kids from school during lunch and after school and either sold or gave drugs to them. One particular boy age 14 was kept in the undercover agents room for three days because the agent gave him L.S.D. and could not control him after."

The letter also claims Sanchez sent juveniles out of state to buy drugs for him and that he and Cantu had two women selling drugs for them. "Their names available on request."

The letter ends, "Just yesterday an innocent man plead guilty to a charge he never committed, because he felt that he would be given a life sentence because of his prior record. He plead for 20 years in prison for something he did not do. A lot are pleading because they fear long prison terms, which have ranged from 7 to 70 years."

A telephone conversation with Hereford resident Bessie Mendoza confirmed that she is the wife of "Blacky" Mendoza who was sentenced to serve three concurrent terms of 10 years in TDC for delivery of heroin and marijuana. However, Mendoza, also a member of Concerned Citizens, did not admit writing the letter.

Stravato, who has served as a mentor for many of the families effected by the drug operation, explains, "They are afraid to talk, they are afraid what they say will be used to hurt their husbands or their families even more."

In response to the allegations cited against him Sanchez said, "I am tired of all of these lies. They say this was a prejudice thing, well, I am a Mexican just like them. They want to blame society for their mistakes. You've got a lot of Mexican families in Hereford who have nice homes and good lives, they have worked all their lives for these things. But these others just want to take a free ride and when they get caught they want to blame someone else."

Sanchez, who is currently working in law enforcement elsewhere in the state, says the L.S.D. story is a lie. He says that anyone on L.S.D. would come down in a few hours and that the incident did not occur.

He says he did hang around the Hereford High School during the operation.

"I would go to school at lunchtime and see who was selling. I would go to Dairy Queen and buy some of the kids who had no money a hamburger. As for the ones who crossed the state line, I was going to buy from them and I gave them the money. Later on I found out they went all the way to Clovis, N.M., to make the buy. They came back and gave me a fourth of a pound of marijuana."

There were seven juvenile cases as a result of the operation.

"I agree with them saying I didn't do a good job in Hereford. If I had done a good job there would be a nine-year-old boy still alive in Hereford. I didn't do a good job because I didn't get the pusher who sold him cocaine," says Sanchez in reference to the August 17, 1986, death of Manuel Saucedo from cocaine hypersensitivity.

As for Stravato and the ACLU, Sanchez says, "That lady needs to get off of her high horse, put away her fancy clothes and put on some dirty clothes and go undercover with me for six months."

"How about the rights of children who are neglected because their mother is a junkie and their dad sells food stamps to get money for his drugs. And how about the rights of the lady murdered in Hereford by a teenager strung out on alcohol and drugs. Where is the ACLU, why isn't that lady helping them?"

While Sanchez continues to fight what he terms is an "endless war" against drugs, Stravato continues to fight her own battle one she sees as injustice.

"There is nothing right in that town from the pathetic corrupt drug bust to the endemic prejudice," Stravato said. "The trials were jokes because of inept court appointed lawyers and I don't trust the power structure."

(Editor's note: This is the second of a series on fighting drug abuse in Hereford. In the next of this series of articles, The Brand will delve into the anguish experienced by families of drug addicts and families of undercover agents. ## Vineyard, winery tour scheduled on Tuesday by Te Extension Service

The area's burgeoning grape industry will be showcased during a vineyard and winery tour and grape production meeting Tuesday.

Sponsored by the Extension Service, the tour will leave from the Hereford Community Center at 3 p.m. to tour the Danny Martin vineyard near Easter, where participants will see grapes growing and observe production practices necessary for wine grape production. Martin and several specialists will answer questions and demonstrate steps they take from starting a vineyard through harvesting wine grapes.

The first portion of the tour will end at La Escabarda XIT Winery, north of Hereford, where Vintner Dino Ferraresi and owner Art Reinauer will direct a tour of their facilities and explain the wine-making process.

Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., Extension Service specialists will present programs covering management steps, what is needed to establish a vineyard, disease and insect control, and irrigation systems.

The tour and program are free of charge and open to anyone interested in grape production or those who would like to see the grape industry's progress in the area.

Names in the News

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actor Michael Caine has lost his attempt to have a California court hear his lawsuit accusing French film producers of breaking a promise to give him a leading role in the movie "The Name of the Rose."

The state Supreme Court refused Thursday to reinstate Caine's suit against Films Ariane, which produced the 1985 film in Europe.

A lower-court judge in Los Angeles had ruled that he had no jurisdiction over the French company, and an appeals court had upheld that decision.

Caine said company officials visiting Los Angeles offered him the part of William of Baskerville, eventually played by Sean Connery.

The actor said he agreed to lose 20 pounds and passed up other roles to prepare for the part, for which he thought he was to be paid $1.5 million and 10 percent of the gross.

Ariane denied it had a contract with Caine.

"Foreign businesses should know that they cannot come into California for economic purposes, injure Californians here, and escape unscathed," Caine's lawyer, Robert Chapman, said in seeking state Supreme Court review.

Boy Scout of America Troop 51, prepared the playground site. His scout master is Al Simnacher. Also, pictured is Gary Billingsley, chairman of the board of directors of Hereford Day Care Inc.

Sumners visit former exchange student

Texans In England

Two Hereford residents finally said yes to a 30-year-old invitation to see the foreign exchange student who stayed with them while attending Hereford High School from 1956-57. Virginia and Melvin Sumner, pictured 3rd and 4th from left, flew with their grandson-in-law and granddaughter, Mark and Lori Tracy, shown far left, to England to visit Elizabeth Brumley Hornsey and her husband, Frank, both at far right, and their sons, Carl and Swen.

Melvin and Virginia Sumner of Hereford went to England recently to visit a former exchange student that once lived with them 30 years ago. At that time, the Sumners had a daughter in Hereford High School and a son in college.

Elizabeth Brummer, who married Frank Hornsey on Oct. 4, 1969, attended Hereford High School as a senior from 1956-57 while residing with the Sumners. A native of Alfta, Sweden, the youth returned to Sweden where she graduated from high school and attended college in Uppsala, Sweden, where she earned her degree in languages.

Living in England since her marriage, she has worked as a substitute teacher while her husband has been an inspector with the police department for more than 25 years. They are the parents of two sons, Carl, age 10, and Swen, who will be eight in August.

The Sumners, who kept in touch with Mrs. Hornsey throughout the years via letters and photos, had not seen her since her high school stay. Yet according to Mrs. Sumner, "We recognized Elizabeth immediately when our plane landed in Manchester, England. She looked just like she did 30 years ago when she left Hereford."

The Sumners were guests from May 20 until June 9 in the Hornsey home in Grimsby, located on the east coast of England next to the North Sea.

Only the second foreign exchange student in Hereford, Mrs. Hornsey was encouraged by her father to travel and take a chance on visiting the United States. She and her family visit family members in Sweden annually and hope to return to Hereford one day for a visit.

Boulter goes after Legal Aid

Rep. Beau Boulter, our 13th District Representative, has taken some positive steps to curb the unreasonable actions of the Texas Medical Foundation with regard to sanctions placed against rural doctors, and now he has been taken out after the Texas Rural Legal Aid.

The Texas Rural Legal Aid has been stirring up unrest in some parts of the Texas Panhandle for quite some time now, especially in the Hereford community.

Rep. Boulter says that the TRLA has been found in violation of several Federal regulations, including engaging and encouraging public demonstrations, boycotts and strikes, using federal funds to form and organize unions and failure to cooperate with federal investigations.

The TRLA has promoted many protest incidents among the farm workers of the Hereford area and the net result has been to cast the farmers, especially vegetable growers, as money hungry rich people getting that way by crushing the poor migrant farm workers.

Rep. Boulter says that serving the legal needs of America's poor has served as a smokescreen for the real goal of sweeping, leftwing social reform.

He says that federal funds have been used repeatedly to launch numerous attacks on such issues as homosexual rights, bilingual education, rent strikes and prison reform, to name only a few.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee has charged that the Legal Services Corporation, which funds the TRLA, has used public funds to advocate civil disobedience, intimidation and muckracking as a means to embarrass opponents of community action groups.

Rep. Boulter says that the poor will not be short-changed if the LSC is abolished. The poor should indeed have access to legal service, but there are a number of alternatives to the LSC that are less costly, more effective and without the potential for abuse.

Whether or not Rep. Boulter will achieve his objective of doing away with the Legal Services Corporation remains to be seen. he has support from California legislators and other states will join in as the battle develops.

The Legal Services Corporation and the Texas Rural Legal Aid organizations provide federal funds to support leftwing lawyers who too often go overboard in their imagined crusades against the farmers and land-downers who are providing jobs for thousands of people who desperately need to work. If the government wants to cut the budget this seems like a good place to start.

A tragedy for all

The tragedy that struck the Seagoville Road Baptist Church of Balch Springs last week was in a sense a tragedy for all Texans, and the entire state mourns the death of those children in the floodwaters of the Guadalupe River. ...

But the toll in Friday's tragedy could have been much worse but for the heroism displayed that day. Non-swimmers were hoisted to safety in nearby trees, and older youths disregarded their own safety to help younger children. Some of the teenagers sacrificed their lives in the heroism. ... The family of these children have suffered a terrible blow, but the sense of community Texans display in the face of such tragedy does make a difference.

Anti-West Texas bias

Hudspeth County apparently doesn't offer enough for the state to consider it for the "super collider" project, but it has enough to be the site of a nuclear waste dump. Surprise, surprise. ...

The profit motive was a major consideration. Although East Texas produces a greater portion of the low-level waste, its legislators knew their constituents wouldn't be pleased to bury their own nuclear garbage. What better place to put it than West Texas, where it's only desert anyway? Even better, not as many people live here who can complain—and vote. What is forgotten is that the desert is more ecologically sensitive than rolling hills of green brush, especially when it comes to precious water.

But the super collider project is different. It will bring money and business so, of course, it belongs in East Texas. ...

... West Texas learns yet another lesson of its low-level status.

—El Paso Times

Dropping the lid

Potentially good news for ordinary Texans and most physicians is that the Texas Medical Association has decided to drop its effort to amend the state Constitution to put a lid on malpractice claims.

Not that the TMA has necessarily accepted the premise that what is basically wrong with malpractice insurance rates is bad doctors rather than runaway judges and juries. The organization apparently simply figured it wasn't worth the effort and that it would be more effective to try to change the makeup of the Texas Supreme Court.

But the decision to drop the effort reduces the possibility that Texans will not be able to get just compensation for injuries done to them by incompetent doctors. And it should give the State Board of Medical Examiners a chance to prove it can crack down on the bad doctors. ...

Use state network

The Texas Legislature has created a non-profit, computerized business and technology information network designed to put together the state's best resources.

But the network can't stimulate economic growth unless people use its information, available through the seven Regional Innovation Centers. North and West Texas are served by centers in Lubbock and Dallas-Fort Worth.

We urge people to use this service and help put the zip back in our economy.

The Penultimate Word

"RASSLIN'"

How did wrestling make such a comeback? Suddenly people are flocking to huge arenas to see something called "Wrestle Mania". The TV channels are full of wrestling, or, as the fans call it, "rasslin'". The big names are as popular as movie stars. Hulk Hogan even has a doll named after him. That must be the ultimate in stardom. All of this after I thought wrestling had long ago been over exposed and sent to that big ring in the sky.

The only thing worse than the wrestling is the set up interviews designed to promote an upcoming match. These are all the same. A moderator, who looks as if he once sold used mobile homes, interviews a wrestler. The wrestlers all sound like they have been drinking battery acid and they go into a tirade about their next opponent. Seems there is bad blood everywhere. The wrestler goes out of control, the moderator gets lost and the only salvation is a commercial break.

Unfortunately, this same format is used on TV shows called "Crossfire," "Firing Line" and other equally cute names. These programs get a group of disagreeable people together and let them disagree in disagreeable terms for a disagreeably long time. Thank God for commercial breaks. To research for this article I watched three of these gems in one week. My manners will never recover. I took careful notes and can report that in the three hours of programming no one ever finished a sentence. It is a study in how to interrupt and be interrupted. Nothing is ever solved because nothing is ever said.

Where do they get these people? Most of the time they are people no one has ever heard of until the moderator, i.e. referee, introduces them as some kind of expert. I think they recruit them from the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. It is survival of the loudest.

If the guests aren't doing it then the moderator gets into the act. One channel has two men who could not agree on the sun coming up in the East. They insist on the rest of the world experiencing their efforts at being rude to one another. They seem to think communication cannot happen unless the jocular has been cut.

When I flip the channels and see one of those programs I flip on by. Maybe I will watch a little wrestling. Those fellows seem nice by comparison.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Voice of Business

Tax rights needed

By Ann K. Yoshiura

It is no surprise that the Omnibus Taxpayers' Bill of Rights Act has received nationwide attention in the past few months. The bill would correct the imbalance that now exists between the unyielding power of the Internal Revenue Service and the rights of taxpayers.

Thousands of letters and calls from angry taxpayers complaining of Internal Revenue Service abuses have forced lawmakers to examine the need for increased taxpayer protection and to rethink the role of the tax collector. Intimidation tactics used by overzealous agents, unnecessary seizures of taxpayers' property, erroneous allegations of taxes owed and uncooperative or rude IRS employees are just a few of the more common complaints lawmakers regularly hear.

A unique aspect of the bill is the broad, bipartisan support it has received on Capitol Hill. The bill is neither a Republican nor Democratic issue and it is not liberal or conservative. Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., who introduced the taxpayers' rights bill in February, has enlisted the support of more than a quarter of his Senate colleagues. Identical legislation, introduced by Rep. Robin Tallon, D-S.C., is now cosponsored by more than 80 House members.

The bill would require that a brief yet comprehensive statement explaining a taxpayer's rights during an audit be enclosed with all IRS forms sent to taxpayers. The statement would also set forth the procedures for appealing adverse administrative and judicial decisions, filing taxpayer complaints and pursuing refund claims. Increased disclosure of a taxpayer's rights and obligations is badly needed. No taxpayer should be required to pay high attorney or accountant fees merely to obtain basic information on his rights or IRS procedures.

The bill would require the IRS to contact directly the taxpayer's attorney, CPA or enrolled agent if a taxpayer chooses to give a professional representative a power of attorney. Currently, the IRS can contact a taxpayer directly at any time prior to court proceedings and completely ignore the representative's legal authority to represent the taxpayer. This proposal recognizes that in the majority of cases, experienced IRS personnel have the upper hand in dealing with often inexperienced and ill-informed taxpayers.

A key provision of the bill is the expanded authority of the taxpayer ombudsman to issue emergency stop orders, called "taxpayer assistance orders," which would require the IRS to cease clearly erroneous and unjustified collection or enforcement procedures. These orders would provide taxpayers with a quick and inexpensive way of resolving tax disputes when the IRS is clearly in the wrong and when traditional avenues for dispute resolution have failed.

Unnecessary confiscations of a taxpayer's property by the IRS would be curtailed by the bill's increased protections with respect to levies, a procedure by which the IRS can obtain a taxpayer's assets, such as bank accounts or wages, to satisfy an unpaid liability. Specifically, the bill would require the IRS to wait 30 days after notifying the taxpayer, instead of 10 days, before it could seize property. This proposal would encourage delinquent taxpayers to satisfy their obligations by providing the taxpayer with enough time to borrow money, liquidate assets or make other payment arrangements.

In whole, the Omnibus Taxpayers' Bill of Rights Act is a commendable effort to restore America's faith in its voluntary tax collection system. It seems quite appropriate in this year of the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution that Congress should focus its attention on a bill to guarantee due process for American taxpayers. The protections that the bill offers are simple, fair and badly needed. It's no surprise that momentum for the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights Act is building steadily.

FORGIVING ONE ANOTHER

"Faith is not a dead knowledge of the head, but a living confidence of the heart which trusts all of God's promises, and particularly God's promises regarding the forgiveness of our sins, life and salvation."

—Carl Schmid, Albuquerque Journal, Jan. 25, 1925.

"Faith is a divine energy of compassion for men, and so embodies itself in deeds of love and compassion."

—The Independent, New York, April 11, 1889.

"Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy."

—Matthew 5:7.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: Faith in God not only includes a trust in God's promises regarding the forgiveness of our sins, but also the spiritual energy of mercifulness evident in one's dealings with his fellowmen.

"For is ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you; But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." (Matthew 6:14-15.) In other words, blessed are they who forgive one another, for they shall receive forgiveness from their Heavenly Father.

"And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." (Ephesians 4:32.) "Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." (Luke 6:37.)

The Beatitude, "Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy," literally means that mercifulness from the Lord is not possible without mercifulness shown by us toward our fellowmen. William M. Anderson, Jr. said, "Mercy is the heart of God toward us in Christ." (Dallas Morning News, Aug. 20, 1923.) And Hubert D. Knickerbocker stated, "Mercy is loving kindness which leads to practicing charity to the bodies, minds and souls of our fellowmen." (Dallas Morning News, Sept. 25, 1905.)

Elisha Warner emphasized, "Mercy is compassion based on justice illumined by understanding and restrained by forbearance. Mercy softens the stony heart and soul, giving opportunity for the tender flow of love and friendship to come into bloom, just as the rain softens the soil made adamant by frost. If you never forgive you should never offend to the extent that you need forgiveness, is the lesson taught in this Beatitude." (Payson Chronicle, Payson, Utah, May 21, 1948.)

Mercifulness is a sign of strength, a sign that one has become a partaker of the divine nature. Peter wrote that "if (faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity) be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." (See 2 Peter 1:4-8.)

Mercifulness is the godliness of brotherly kindness in action. "Charity suffereth long, and is kind." (1 Corinthians 13:4.) Charity forgiveth always, and is merciful.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek examines political truth this week, more or less.

Dear editor:

There has been a lot of talk during the Iran-Contra hearings about lying.

For example, when a witness says he can't remember something, some people wonder if he's lying about not remembering.

When a witness, when asked a crucial question, pauses and furrows his eyebrows as though he's trying his best to remember, there are those who say what he's trying to remember is whether his answer would contradict what he said a little while ago or what he may be asked tomorrow.

There has been also a lot of talk about denyability. You protect somebody from all the facts so he can say he didn't have all the facts.

Well, if there's anything politicians don't need instruction in it's denyability. The rule is: if it's embarrassing, it's denyable. If it'd cost votes, it's denyable. Politicians learn this as fast as a newly-hatched perch learns to swim.

I have made an unscientific study of political lying and the nature of the politicians employing the device.

If a politician denies something today that anybody could tell him he'll have to admit tomorrow, he's a third-rater. Won't make it past the state legislature.

A second-rater is a politician who denies something it may take two months to admit. He might make it to Congress but won't stay there.

A first-rater is a politician who can deny something so expertly he can stay in office four or five terms before the truth comes out, when it's then too late to do anything about it. He can become a committee chairman.

I have not conducted a study on truth among newspaper columnists and don't intend to.

Trachfel visiting Hereford

The public is invited to visit Heidi Rutishauser Trachfel of Switzerland and the Don Moores at a coffee set from 9:30-11:30 a.m. Tuesday morning in the home of Dorothea and Frank Prowell, 336 Douglas.

Trachfel was an A.F.S. student in Hereford in 1961 and lived with the Don Moore family.

Wendy Reid Crisp, director of the National Association of Female Executives. "It's one of the biggest topics of conversations: 'What in the world are you going to do about the skirts?'"

"There's lots of reaction ranging from the horrified 'I don't know what I'm going to do. My legs don't look like they did in the 1960s,' to the 'I can't wait, another chance to feel young again,'" she said.

Seventh Avenue designers unveiled their fall collections in April, and the models sometimes appeared to show more leg than fabric.

Word buzzed in the fashion world that some of the women attending the fall showings were rolling up the waistbands of their skirts to mirror the shorter lengths on the runways.

In addition, many of the trade magazines, with the influential Women's Wear Daily leading the pack, threw their support behind short skirts. (It should be noted, however, that WWD's editor John Fairchild has not always been on target. In 1969 and 1970, he endorsed the ill-fated "midi.")

Fashion editors from magazines and newspapers across the country also featured the mini and other media soon picked up on the trend.

Some women are having plastic surgery to remove unsightly surface blood vessels from their legs so they can wear the shorter skirts, the Wall Street Journal noted.

People magazine did a picture layout with a model in a short, short dress that showed the dos and don'ts of wearing minis. The don'ts included riding a bicycle, walking by a construction site and entering a car legs first.

Vanity Fair featured feminist Gloria Steinem in an article, "Smart Women Wear Short Skirts."

But skepticism about the mini was also evident.

Erna Bombeck counseled fellow minihaters to "close ranks and hang tough."

Alan G. Millstein, president of Fashion Network Report, a trade publication, said the mini revival was "a lot like the Goodyear blimp."

"It doesn't bear any relevance to the lifestyle needs of the American woman," he said. "It's the biggest hype that's come along in 25 years."

Nevertheless, retailers are bullish about the mini.

"The stores are fairly confident that it's going to work," said Monroe Greenstein, a retail industry analyst with Bear Stearns & Co.

At its flagship store in Manhattan, Macy's has already established a boutique for juniors devoted entirely to minis. And the store's fashion director, Jane Kaner, says short skirts are big sellers in all departments.

Boys, Girls State delegates Legion hears report from

The delegates to Boys and Girls State reported at a joint meeting of the American Legion and Auxiliary recently, presenting their experiences to approximately 40 people.

Boys State and Girls State are projects of the American Legion and have been held in Austin annually for about 50 years. Delegates come from all over the state and are always students who have finished their junior year in high school possessing good academics because they have shown leadership quality.

Each year the Legion sends two boys to Boys State and the Auxiliary sends two girls to Girls State. The purpose is to help the young people learn more about how state government works. They actually organize very much like state government and discuss many of the same issues that are being currently debated by the state legislators.

Several state government officials, including Governor Clements, spoke to the group.

This year delegates to Girls State were Kim Emerick, daughter of David Emerick and Sylvia Emerick, and Karla Fry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne Fry.

Delegates to Boys State were Russell Brownlow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Brownlow, and Shaun Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Don Moore. Troy Don was a delegate to Boys State in 1961 and provided a recollection of the event.

Grant Hanna had a birthday, so cake and ice cream was shared with those present following their rendition of "Happy Birthday" to him.

Seven defensive starters return

A pre-season look at the Whitefaces

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

During the football off-season, when a conversation turned to Hereford High School football, the most talked about topic was the Herd defensive team.

The HHS varsity has seven defensive starters returning this year, plus four other defensive lettermen returning. Five players who started half of last season on defense will play mainly on offense during the 1987 season, said head coach Don Cumpston.

Twenty-four letterman in all return for the Whitefaces, including four offensive starters and five other offensive lettermen. One of the returning starters on offense was a defensive starter half of last season.

On top of all this, Hereford was picked to reach the state class 4A championship by Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine.

When asked about preseason picks and rankings, Coach Cumpston said, "It's like we tell our players, the important thing is where you finish, not where you're ranked."

"It's important that everybody know that, especially our players. It speaks well of our players and our program, for the recognition we've receive across the state," he continues.

"But another poll picks us third in our district. Being picked high definitely adds to the challenge each week, because everybody will play their best against you each week."

The Whitefaces won their first eight games of the 1986 season, including their first six District 1-4A games, before suffering a 28-18 loss to Lubbock Estacado. After defeating Borger 19-12, the Herd entered the playoffs as the second place team from the district.

Estacado lost in the bi-district playoffs, but Hereford defeated Big Spring 28-17. The Whitefaces then scored a last-second victory, 9-7, over Cleburn in the area playoffs, and beat Wichita Falls Hirschi 17-12 in the state quarterfinals.

Hereford then had to go against a team led by one of the most highly recruited players in the nation — McKinney and its running back Randy Simmons, who later would sign with Texas A&M. The Whitefaces suffered a 39-6 loss to McKinney in the state semifinal game at Texas Stadium in Irving, and the season came to an end.

The 12 wins last year were the second most in one season in school history. The 1981 Whitefaces, also coached by Cumpston, had a 13-1 record in reaching the state semifinals.

The defensive unit, with those seven returning starters who will be seniors this year, is certainly a strength of the team. Among those returning starters are two all-state selections — Robby Collier, a first-team all-state selection at the defensive back position, and Michael Phibbs, a second-team all-state selection at the linebacker position.

The other five defensive starters who are back are: linebacker Lee Young, defensive end Derrell Page, defensive tackles Richard Castillo and Edward Martinez, and defensive back Rodney McCracken.

Four defensive lettermen returning are: senior Johnny Beltran, who will be moved from defensive end to strong safety, as Cumpston notes; senior defensive end Russell Brownlow, senior defensive back Chris Bullard, and junior linebacker Joe Medrano.

The five athletes who started half the season on defense last year, but will play mainly on offense this year, are Marcus Brown, Tim Long, Brent Berry, Trent Bowling, and Fidencio Cantu, all seniors.

Brown is a returning starter on offense, having started at the tailback position last season. Other offensive starters back from last year are senior tackle Tommy Ramirez, senior center Chad Clements, and senior guard Jim Bob Parker.

The rest of the offensive lettermen are: senior quarterback Raymond Romo, senior wingback Bill Ruckman, senior tackle Kevin Lindell, junior running back Kyle Andrews; and junior Roger McCracken, an offensive line player last year who is being moved by Cumpston to the tight end position this year.

"We've got some big shoes to fill on offense, but we feel we have some very good players coming up from our junior varsity and sophomore teams. We'll be counting on them heavily," Cumpston said.

Cumpston sees no major changes in the Whiteface offensive and defensive patterns, but adds, "We may adjust some things to take advantage of the talent on our team, but our philosophy will be much the same. We had a good year last year throwing the football and we'll continue that."

The Herd head coach also sees a tougher District 1-4A: "Our district was real tough last year, but I think it will probably be tougher this year. On paper, nearly every team is going to be better this year."

Coach Cumpston said that having no members of the coaching staff leave has its advantages. "We're fortunate that we haven't had any coaching turnover. That makes it a lot easier for both coaches and players."

The first game of the 1987 season is scheduled for Friday, Sept. 4 at Andrews at 7:30 p.m. Hereford defeated Andrews 28-0 in the 1986 season opener in Hereford.

Leading up to the season opener, it all begins on Wednesday, Aug. 5 with the football shoe day. Practice in shorts begins on Monday, Aug. 10, and contact drills start on Friday, Aug. 14.

Two preseason scrimmages have been scheduled — versus Guyton, Okla., in Dumas on Friday, Aug. 21; and versus Lubbock Monterey on Friday, Aug. 28 at the Monterey High School campus. Starting times for the scrimmages will be announced later, Cumpston said.

Only four of the 10 regular season games will be played at home this season — versus Pampa on Friday, Sept. 18; versus Lubbock Dunbar on Friday, Oct. 2; versus Dumas on Friday, Oct. 16; and versus Lubbock Estacado on Friday, Oct. 30.

The Dumas contest has been designated as the homecoming game. All the home games will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The regular season road games, all on Fridays at 7:30 p.m., are: at Andrews on Sept. 4; at Clovis on Sept. 11; at Frenship on Sept. 25; at Levelland on Oct. 9; at Canyon on Oct. 23; and at Borger on Nov. 13. The Whitefaces' open date is Friday, Nov. 6.

Here are some statistical highlights from the 1986 Hereford High School football season, for players who are returning members of the HHS varsity this season:

WHO'S THAT MAN?
CHICAGO (AP) — Fame is fleeting, or, as the Romans used to put it, "Sic transit gloria."
Coach Doug Collins of the Chicago Bulls was in an airport with his team earlier this year and saw Baseball Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle carrying his own bags and being ignored.
"I couldn't believe it," Collins said. "This great baseball player and nobody even noticed him. I looked at our bunch and even the least of our reserves were busy signing autographs."

Lefty Grove won 20 games or more in seven straight seasons for the Philadelphia Athletics, 1927-1933. His totals for those years were 172 victories and 53 losses.

Down on the FARM

WATCH UP FOR POWER LINES

Power lines can be dangerous.

Touching irrigation pipe to a power line can divert the electricity through the pipe... and to anyone in contact with it. In this part of the country, this is the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths in electricity-related accidents. Any equipment of unusual height represents a potential danger. Lift arms on field equipment, combine auger spouts and even radio antennas can cause serious injury or death if they, and you, make contact with a power line.

Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake.

Coming off a 7-9 season

Cowboys begin important training camp

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Veterans arrive on Sunday for one of the most important training camps in the 27-year history of the Dallas Cowboys.

And while the veterans undergo physicals on the California Lutheran campus, the rookies were scheduled to scrimmage against the Los Angeles Raiders.

Coach Tom Landry, stung by a 7-9 season that saw the Cowboys miss the NFL playoffs for only the second time since 1966, needs help both offensively and defensively.

Some veteran heads could roll. Landry dismissed offensive tackle Howard Richards, reserve quarterback Reggie Collier, and overweight wide receiver Tony Hill before camp began as a signal to the remaining veterans.

Fighting to keep their jobs will be defensive linemen John Dutton and Ed Jones, veterans who had poor seasons in 1986, and an assortment of offensive linemen who were responsible last year for the Cowboys leading the NFL in having their quarterbacks sacked.

Landry will move Herschel Walker and Tony Dorsett into the same backfield from the start. The big question is can the 33-year-old Dorsett be happy with the arrangement? He'll have to share the football with someone making more money.

All eyes will be on new offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck, who replaced the retiring Jim Meyers.

Can the fiery Erkenbeck, who recently was treated for a bleeding ulcer, bring respectability to an offensive line rated near the bottom of the NFL? How will he fill the troublesome left tackle spot?

The Cowboys also need a replacement for placekicker Rafael Septien, who was released after pleading guilty to indency with a child. The coaches are high on 11th round draft pick Jeff Ward of Texas and left-footed Louis Zendejas.

Meanwhile, questions remain about Danny White's broken wrist and whether it's finally healed or will bother him through the season.

The Cowboys began the season 6-2, but after White was hurt they flopped to 1-7 with Steve Pelluer as the starter. White has had to alter his throwing motion because of the wrist injury.

Landry has turned control of the offense over to Paul Hackett with Erkenbeck to concentrate on defense. Plans are to use the famed "Flex" defense again, but Landry also has targeted defenses designed to make the Cowboys more aggressive.

It was Landry who made Sam Huff famous by installing the 4-3 defense with the New York Giants in the 1950s.

On the defense, Landry is still tinkering. His plans include moving Bill Bates to free safety and switching Michael Dows to strong safety.

"We have to develop more of a mean temperament on defense," Landry said. "And we have to cut down the big plays. The big plays killed us last season."

The Cowboys' annual intrasquad game will be Aug. 8. They play the San Diego Chargers in San Diego on Aug. 15 and meet the San Francisco 49ers in San Francisco on Aug. 22.

Dallas breaks camp on Aug. 28 and hosts the Raiders on Aug. 30.

The Cowboys open the 1987 regular season in St. Louis on Sept. 13 against the Cardinals.

Landry has agreed to a three-year contract that will take him to 1990 — three decades with the Cowboys.

He's facing perhaps his stiffest test this season since the franchise started in 1960.

"It's a challenge," Landry said. "And I like challenges."

Won four of last seven game last season

'Young' Oilers hope for better year

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville ended the last season with six offensive starters on the injured reserve list.

After the season, two more starters, quarterback Warren Moon and tackle Bruce Matthews, had surgery.

Now, and only now, can Glanville see the silver lining in the injury- and error-filled 1986 season that ended with a 5-11 record.

"Nobody's ever put it in print because I guess it's illegal but every position on our offensive unit other than tight end and the wideouts went to surgery," Glanville said. "I don't think that's ever happened to an offensive unit before."

And the benefit?

"The No. 1 benefit was we got so many people hurt that we had to play a lot of people that normally wouldn't have started," Glanville said. "These people had to stay in and play and we were able to win."

Despite the injuries, the Oilers finished out the season winning four of their last seven games, giving Glanville hope for this season.

The late-season charge left the Oilers with a 16-57 record over the last five years, still the worst five-year mark in the NFL.

Glanville already is in place at the team's pre-season camp at Angelo State University in San Angelo, awaiting the arrival of rookies on Tuesday and the veterans on Wednesday.

The Oilers begin workouts on Thursday and will play their first exhibition game Aug. 13 in the Astrodome against the Kansas City Chiefs.

Moon, beginning his fourth year of a five-year, $5.5 million contract, will be working with his fourth offensive coordinator, June Jones, who worked with former USFL Denver Coach Mouse Davis in operating the run-'n'-shoot offense.

Moon thrived last season when the Oilers went to a wide open attack. But he was harassed most of the season by defenses and threw 26 interceptions.

"I think what we'll do with Warren is emphasize what we do right and we do a lot of things right with Warren," Glanville said.

"The worst thing we could do is approach the season saying, 'Warren, you did this wrong and you did that wrong.' You can't play well at quarterback if someone is always talking about your interceptions."

The Oilers once again placed high in the NFL draft and got two first-round draft picks in Miami running back Alonzo Highsmith and wide receiver Haywood Jeffries of North Carolina State.

The Oilers started last season trying to establish a running game but opened up in the final games of the season.

The Oilers didn't throw more in the last seven games, they just threw better, Glanville said.

"We just have to score more points," Glanville said. "We have to run the football better inside the 20-yard line. If we stay away from the turnovers and stay healthy, we win."

Glanville says key penalties made it appear the Oilers were the most penalized team in the league last season.

The Oiler defense received 39 penalties resulting in first downs by opponents, the second highest total in the NFL.

"We have to make a giant step forward in making the right play mentally," Glanville said. "We kept drives going with our defensive penalties last year."

But the main thing is the Oilers need to get some experience under their belts, the coach said.

"We were the youngest team in pro football last year," said Glanville. "All young teams make mistakes. What we've got to do is quit being the youngest team."

Alicia Landry enjoys life as a football coach's wife

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — There were no coffee table conversations but the only first lady of football the Dallas Cowboys have ever had could see all the signs.

She hasn't been a football coach's wife over a four-decade period for nothing. Football widows are hard to fool. And this one has been around in Dallas since 1960.

Alicia Landry has seen enough football film to recognize a safety blitz and she knows what her man is going to do most of the time before he does it.

"He didn't ask my opinion," she said of Landry's decision to re-up for three more years with the Cowboys. "But that's not that big a deal. He knew I didn't care — either way it would suit me just fine."

Landry's recent decision to continue coaching through the 1990s surprised some watchers of the Cowboys who thought he was tiring of the grind but it didn't faze his wife.

"He had been working so hard I just assumed we were committed to beyond this season," she said. "There was no off-season this year."

Christy Mathewson, a New York Giant star, won 373 major-league games, and in the 1905 World Series plastered the Philadelphia Athletics with three shutouts.

Two players share the record for most consecutive hits. Mike Higgins of the Red Sox got 12 in a row in 1938, and Walt Dropo of Detroit matched that in 1952.

We didn't even take a vacation except for spending some time at Lakeway (a resort near Austin where the Landrys own property.) We got in a little golf and saw the kids."

She said Landry's decision "just evolved."

Mrs. Landry said her husband felt he owed the Cowboys' organization a debt after the club had slipped to a 7-9 record, the worst in 21 years. Last year, she said, wasn't much fun.

"He loves the Cowboys and he didn't feel like he could walk out on them right now," she said. "That sounds good to me. He loves the game and he's the one who has to get up early every morning and go do it. He had better like it."

Alicia, who met Tom when they were at the University of Texas, likes football herself although it did interfere at times with rearing three children.

"I especially like to visit training camp (in Thousand Oaks, Calif.)," she said. "It's so cool and inviting out there."

Mrs. Landry said she plans to be in Thousand Oaks for Dallas' first game against the San Diego Chargers on Aug. 15.

"I might even slip out there earlier," she said. "The intrasquad game on Aug. 8 should be interesting. Having Herschel (Walker) and Tony (Dorsett) in the same backfield to start the season should be something."

She bravely predicted a rapid reversal in the decline of the Cowboys, who missed the NFL playoffs for only the second time since 1966.

"I feel we will bounce back and win this year," she said. "Tom loves a challenge and he has great hopes for this season. I never expected us to lose last season, but we had injuries and things just kind of got out of hand in the second half of the season."

Mrs. Landry said that for her husband to coach until he's 65 should have been expected "because he's just not the type to sit around the house. And he can get tired of golf real quick. He still enjoys football very much."

And the day he decides to put away his coaching whistle, Alicia will be the first to know.

Credit Reports

Pat Newton
Asst. Vice President & Mortgage Loan Officer
Hereford State Bank

In connection with your application for a mortgage loan, your lender will order a written, investigative credit report. There are credit reporting agencies around the nation which are in the business of compiling credit reports on citizens covering data such as how you pay your bills, if you have been sued, arrested, filed for bankruptcy, etc. The Fair Credit Reporting Act does NOT give you the right to inspect or physically handle your actual report at the credit reporting agency nor to receive an exact copy of the report. The lender cannot give you a copy of the report, either, even though you may have paid for the report at application. You are, however, entitled to a summary of the report, showing the nature, substance, and sources of the information it contains. If the terms of your loan have been adversely affected by a credit report, you have the right to inspect the summary of that report free of charge or for a small fee. The accuracy of the report can also be challenged, and corrections required to be made.

WOMEN AND AIDS

By George W. Morley, M.D.,
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

AIDS is a short word that stands for a deadly disease—acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Not just one disease, AIDS is a number of symptoms caused by a viral infection that destroys the body's immune system.

People may have the AIDS virus in their system, yet never develop the symptoms of AIDS. These symptoms include fever, rash, fatigue, and weight loss. Once the symptoms appear, AIDS is invariably fatal. Scientists say they are still years away from any vaccine to prevent or cure AIDS.

In the past, AIDS appeared to be a disease of homosexuals and intravenous drug abusers. However, AIDS has now crossed into the mainstream population, affecting even women and children. Far fewer women than men have AIDS, but about seven percent of all AIDS victims are women. To curb AIDS further spread, health officials are widely publicizing facts about the disease and how people can prevent contracting it.

Scientists believe that AIDS can only be transmitted through the exchange of semen, vaginal secretions and blood, but not through casual contact.

Those at highest risk of contracting AIDS are homosexuals and bisexuals, drug abusers who share dirty needles, prostitutes—and their sexual partners. Strict safety procedures today help prevent contaminated blood used for transfusions.

Women can contract AIDS as easily as men, and they can pass AIDS on to an uninfected partner, contrary to recent belief. Women's symptoms of AIDS are generally the same as for men.

Infected pregnant women, even without symptoms of AIDS, stand a great chance of giving birth to a baby with AIDS or one who is infected with the virus. An infected child seems to develop the disease more easily than infected adults.

Health officials are now urging all women who are pregnant, or planning to become pregnant—particularly those in the high risk category—to be tested for AIDS. If a woman suspects that she has been exposed to the virus she should consult a doctor before she becomes pregnant. Women who have the disease and become pregnant should have counseling about the impact of AIDS on their babies and themselves so that they can make the decision whether or not to terminate the pregnancy.

The best protection is to stay in a mutually monogamous relationship with an uninfected partner. You should also limit the number of your sexual encounters, since the risk of contracting AIDS or any other sexually transmitted disease increases with an increased number of sexual partners. When you have sex, you can protect yourself by using both a condom and a spermicide.

If you have any questions about this serious epidemic, contact your local or state health department, or your doctor.

The World Health Organization, sometimes called WHO, has headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

Winning Bowlers

Janet Moody, Kyle Moody, and Joseph Zepeda, shown from left, participated in the recent Bowl-a-thon held in Amarillo benefitting High Plains Epilepsy Association and came home with trophies. Also on the Hereford team were Roy and Sandy Blevins. The team won trophies for having the most sponsors and the most donations while Zepeda captured the same trophies as an individual. High Plains Epilepsy Association is a United Way Agency.

Gift Of Appreciation

The Hereford Senior Citizens Center recently accepted a VCR from the American Heart Association in appreciation for local residents raising $3,062.15 during the Rock 'n' Roll Jamboree held at the center March 24. Deaf Smith County was noted as having accumulated the most money from the event which was donated to the association. Participating in the presentation were (from left) Ruth Knox, jamboree chairman; Margie Daniels, executive director of the center; and Alby Cockrell and Mildred Garrison, jamboree committee members. Not pictured are Helen Eades and Hope Loerwald who also served as committee members.

Poster contest planned

"What Freedom Means To Me" is the theme of a poster contest being sponsored by members of the Hereford bicentennial community committee.

Prizes will be awarded in two divisions: children up to 12 years of age; and second, ages 13-18. The winning posters will be displayed during the annual Town 'n Country Jubilee celebration in August.

In each division, there will be a $15 prize for first place; $10, second; and $5, third.

Posters should be no larger than 2 ft. x 3 ft. and must be taken to the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office by 5 p.m. Aug. 7.

Ruth Newsom is serving as committee chairman and Jeanette Ramey is poster contest chairman.

To clean eyeglasses without streaks, use a drop of vinegar on each lens.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BLUE EYES IN SPORTS

There seems to be a common conjecture among my friends, family, fellow employees and casual acquaintances that I know nothing about sports or the players.

I readily admit I can't quote vital statistics for various sports and I don't know who plays for what team or what teams are in the playoffs or who won the championships. However, there are three male sports figures that have caught my eye for one reason or another.

I feel as though I share an intimate bond with Cal Ripkin of the Baltimore Orioles because I was in the stands at the Arlington Stadium a few years ago when he hit for a cycle. Apparently, this was a big deal although I wasn't aware of it at the time.

Here's the scenario: My date (who is now my fiance) and I were in Dallas one weekend to attend a banquet. The following day when we were supposed to come directly home, he decided that it would be "thrilling" for me to watch an American League game. Now, I personally would have preferred to go shopping, take a nap, read a good book, or wash windows but I decided what the heck and agreed to go. (Besides he threatened me with my life if I didn't at least go to one game while we had the opportunity.)

As we pulled up to the gigantic stadium parking lot, I noticed there were thousands of die-hard fans excitedly talking baseball lingo and waving Texas Ranger pendants. I was definitely a fish out of water in this crowd.

I sat in the car a few minutes mulling this whole situation over when my companion pulled me out and said, "Isn't this great, you can just feel the anticipation!" He then broke out with a verse of "Take Me Out To The Ballgame" to the amusement of passerbys. I still wasn't completely convinced about this adventure but I smiled and walked to the stadium in the 120 degree heat.

We located our seats but no one seemed to occupy them for more than a few minutes before jumping up and down. I was the only person sitting passively. I had a lot to learn about how to act at a baseball game.

At last the game began. I became transfixed watching the people as they were much more interesting to me than the game. Suddenly without warning, the crowd began to roar and the man sitting behind me jumped three feet into the air and poured beer all over my head. I was just a tad miffed and turned to give the man a dirty look when my date grabbed me yelling and screaming, "What's wrong?" I screamed back, "We just saw Cal Ripkin hit for a cycle. Isn't that great?" he shrieked. I didn't want to disillusion him so I didn't comment. Actually, I saw nothing, I was too busy wiping the beer out of my eyes.

As far as my other two sports heroes, these men can no longer technically be considered as sports players but I am still quite enthralled with Joe Namath and Jim Palmer, not for their accomplishments (because I don't know what they are) but for their deep blue eyes.

Joe has been around for a long time but he is significant to me because I was never really aware of any football player (including him) until I saw him years ago advertising pantyhose in the centerfold of a popular magazine. I opened the magazine, saw this man attired in taupe colored queen size hose, then admired his body briefly because he was in terrific shape. Yet, his eyes were my favorite feature as their blueness was, at that time, unmatched as far as intensity.

Then there was Palmer. I had also seen him play at the same Dallas game and would have given him no thought what-so-ever but someone whispered to me that he was featured in underwear advertisements and that he too had lovely baby blue eyes. I frantically searched for binoculars among the crowd but came up empty-handed. I would just have to use my imagination to see him in his shorts, I mean, see his blue eyes.

When I mentioned to my co-worker that I was going to write a column concerning sports she laughed loudly until she saw the serious expression on my face. Then I said the name Jim Palmer and she asked me if I had ever seen one of his magazine layouts. I said no.

Low and behold, when I arrived at work the next morning, there was a full page ad featuring a well-tanned Palmer in striped briefs. Here again, the ol' boy was in obviously great shape but the baby blues were the most impressive.

This column is offered as proof that I know nothing about sports and couldn't care less about learning. But I certainly know pretty eyes when I see them!

THE EYES HAVE IT

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When shopping in countries where bargaining is the accepted style, don't let your eyes give you away, says a travel expert.

"An important key in getting a good price is to pretend disinterest," says Will Berg, tour director of the cruise ship M-S Pearl of Scandinavia. "When bargaining, it's your eyes that most often betray you. Vendors watch your eyes. If they catch a gleam, they know you are hooked."

Berg's advice: "When bargaining avert your eyes. Don't let a vendor look into them. Better yet — wear dark glasses. You wouldn't believe how much money a pair of really dark lenses can save you."

Griffin completes institute

Marie Griffin, recording agent at La Plata Agency in Hereford, has successfully completed the Certified Insurance Counselors Agency Management Institute held June 3-6 at La Mansion Hotel in Austin.

The three-day insurance institute was one of the five parts of the certified insurance counselors program offered annually by the Professional Insurance Agents of Texas. After the successful completion of all five institutes, covering all major areas of the insurance field, and five rigorous examinations, Griffin will be awarded the C.I.C. (Certified insurance counselor), designation by the National Society of Certified Insurance Counselors, the nation's largest provider of professional insurance education.

La Plata Agency is an independent insurance agency established in Hereford in 1965 which Griffin acquired in 1983 after having been a licensed solicitor since 1969. She is also a member of the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas and is the owner of Griffin Real Estate and Investments of Hereford. She has been a Texas real estate broker since 1965.

Ann Landers
Opinions on animals vary

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I won't be able to sleep tonight if I don't respond to "Fuming in Oklahoma" and "Furious in Arizona." How these correspondents of yours can say an animal's life is just as important as the life of a human is beyond me. In fact, one of those dingbats said that if she had to choose between hitting a dog on the road or a person, she'd hit the person because someone would surely stop to help an injured human but most people would ignore an injured dog.

Of course drivers should avoid hitting an animal if possible, but a sudden decision to swerve or slam on the brakes could prove fatal. In our town a few weeks ago, a driver pulled into the middle lane to avoid hitting a dog. "Fuming" and "Furious" will be happy to know that the dog is just fine. The passengers in the oncoming car weren't so lucky. Three people were killed in that head-on collision.—Pro-People (Illinois)

DEAR PRO: Thanks for your comment. Here's another point of view:

ANN LANDERS: You are not Dear to me. For years I've known you hate animals. If I read one more line in your column about how medical researchers must use live animal models to find cures for disease I will puke.

Your cold-hearted advice to hit a dog or a cat or a rabbit if one should dart in front of a car showed your true colors. I hope the readers give you H-E-Double Toothpicks.—No Friend in Indiana

DEAR NO FRIEND: Glad you wrote. We need a variety of opinions to keep the column interesting. Please read on:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several years ago my wife was driving at night on a lonely, flat stretch of desert highway. When she spotted several rabbits darting in front of cars, she prayed aloud that the drivers would be smart enough to keep going. Suddenly the car ahead swerved to avoid a rabbit, careened off the highway, flipped over and burst into flames. "Furious" will be thrilled to know that the animal was spared, but what an exorbitant price to pay for the life of a rabbit.—Humane But Sane in Phoenix

DEAR SANE: Thank you for the contribution. Read on:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope you will find room in your column to print just a few lines from the attached news story. It speaks for a lot of us. The clip is from the Anchorage Daily News

"A woman driving a van filled with six 5- and 6-year-old children swerved to avoid a cat being chased by a dog across C Street Monday afternoon and hit a utility pole, injuring those in the van and knocking out power in the surrounding neighborhood for at least two hours.

"I swerved to miss the cat. I should have hit it," said Deelisa Solman while being treated for a bump on the head at Humana Hospital-Alaska."

If I had had a kid in that van I would be mad as the dickens at Deelisa Solman.—Igloo Llana

DEAR IG: Take it easy on Deelisa. She is probably plenty mad at herself. Let's just be thankful that nobody was killed.

I've run out of space, folks, but I could do an entire week on letters from readers who have some very sad stories to tell about loved ones lost because a driver chose to avoid an animal. I hope somebody learned something today.

POLLY'S POINTERS

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Do you have a recipe on how to make powdered sugar from scratch? — V.V.

DEAR V.V. — This formula is a real lifesaver if you're out of powdered sugar and can't get to the store.

In a blender or food processor, process 1 cup granulated sugar and 1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch together until finely powdered. Store in a tightly covered container. Use as you would commercial powdered, confectioners' or 10X sugar. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — On a volunteer basis, I assist in the management of our church's thrift shop. A large part of our stock comes from people who have a garage sale and then donate what is not sold to our thrift shop for resale.

We would like to advised people who have garage sales not to put the price on tape, which, when removed, will leave a sticky mess or take the finish off the article, leaving it worthless for sale purposes. They should place the tape on the back or bottom of the item or someplace where its removal will not ruin the appearance of the item. — STELLA

DEAR STELLA AND FRIENDS — Even if folks aren't planning to donate unsold items, it makes sense to not ruin an item with poorly placed sticky tape. We all know how annoying it is to get an item home from a store and find that labels and price tags cannot be removed easily! By the way, rubbing with plain vegetable oil will remove the sticky residue from tape on many items without harming the finish. — POLLY

Auditions set in Amarillo Aug. 17-18 for musical

The Amarillo Little Theatre will be holding auditions for "South Pacific" Aug. 17-18 at 7:30 p.m. at 2019 Civic Circle. Over 30 speaking and singing roles will be cast for this classic Rodgers and Hammerstein musical.
 ALT director, Allen Shankles said, "South Pacific" is a great vehicle for anyone who has ever wanted to be in a musical production. Because the play calls for a large cast, there are more opportunities for new people to join in the fun of theatre. Anyone wishing to try out should come with a prepared song; an accompanist will be provided. Also, we will be doing cold readings from the script."

Rehearsals will be held Monday through Thursday nights prior to the Sept. 25 opening. For more information, call (806)355-9991.

Huggies to keep elasticized waistband

DALLAS (AP) — Diaper giant Kimberly-Clark Co. emerged the victor over rival Procter & Gamble after a jury ruled the elasticized waistband in Huggies disposables wasn't a patent infringement.
 Procter & Gamble had asked for an injunction to stop Kimberly-Clark from making the elasticized Huggies, claiming that violated a patent held by P&G for a heat-shrinkable material used to form gathers in Huggies' waistbands.

But Thursday, a federal jury ruled against Cincinnati, Ohio-based P&G. "I can tell you the client is very pleased," said Roy Hardin, one of the lawyers representing Dallas-based Kimberly-Clark. "I think Kimberly-Clark takes any challenge from a competitor like this very seriously."
 Jurors returned the verdict in favor of Kimberly-Clark after about 10 hours of deliberations over two days, said Eleanore Piwoni, secretary to U.S. District Judge Joe Fish.

"We were disappointed, and we will look into the jury's findings," said P&G attorney Allen Gerstein, who added that attorneys will meet with P&G officials to determine if the case will be appealed.

The two companies doing legal battle are major contenders in the disposable diaper market. Kimberly-Clark's Huggies brand rivals P&G's Pampers and Luvs as the most popular disposable diaper in America.

Gerstein said Kimberly-Clark knew of a patent on heat-shrinkable material in 1985 when it began a $60 million project to add elastic to the waistbands of Huggies.

Car dealer smitten by orchid mania

By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

When Steve Stevens looks for refuge from a hectic day or gets sent to the proverbial doghouse, he is surrounded by beautiful exotic flowers. "I love having a place where I can get away from everyone," laughed Stevens. "When I enter my greenhouse, I know no one will bother me."

The 14'x14' greenhouse, constructed by Stevens, sits unobtrusively in his well-manicured backyard at 348 Douglas. Inside are countless plants sitting and hanging at various levels, with many types of orchidaceae—orchids—in evidence. The local car dealer admits that his great love of plants came from his mother, who has a green thumb. "I was always nuts about plants. I was into gardening and yardwork until I started to become a slave to both and decided to ease up some." It was then that he went to a nursery in his hometown of Colorado, spotted the lovely blooming orchids in plastic pots and decided to try to raise them himself. "That decision was the beginning of a very expensive hobby that I've continued for the past 11-12 years," he laughs ruefully. His Colorado home's unfinished basement was soon equipped with grow lights and his orchid hobby began in earnest. "There were some advantages to this system: there were no pest problems with aphids, slugs, ants, etc.," he said.

Born in Iowa, Stevens lived there and Nebraska, Colorado, and Wyoming before moving to Hereford in 1981 and becoming the dealer of Stevens Chevrolet-Oldsmobile. "I had a dealership in Colorado for nine years, sold it, moved to Wyoming briefly, then settled in Hereford. In fact, August 5th will be the dealership's sixth anniversary under the Stevens name." Family members mind the store: Stevens' wife, Joyce; son, Jerry; and daughter-in-law, Linda, work as business manager, salesman, and bookkeeper, respectively.

Stevens decided to try the greenhouse method when he moved to Hereford's temperate climate and notes that his orchids thrive much better in sunlight. "But a major disadvantage to this system is the influx of pests," he said. "The floor, covered in six inches of crushed rocks for increased humidity, seems to harbor harmful insects."

An avid golfer, Stevens admits that his orchids recently suffered somewhat due to his inattention. "In the summer, I am usually on the golf course. A few days ago I checked on the orchids and discovered that slugs had nibbled on several of them. I think I now have the slug problem under control after treating them."

It becomes apparent to a listener that Steve Stevens is well-informed on the subject of orchids, although he humbly professes having little knowledge of the intriguing plants. "Several orchid aficionados make the hobby of raising orchids into a science. They keep records and journals on their plants and even write books about them," he said. "I am only interested in growing orchids because of the beautiful blooms; I find it relaxing."

Yet Stevens is familiar with the botanical names of most of his plants and has a general understanding of their needs. "Orchids are epiphytic, which means that they grow upon other plants without being parasitic. They grow on trees, buildings, etc. and live off whatever nature provides in the form of decaying plants and rainfall. They can be found in the tropics, Himalayas, Hawaii, New Zealand, Australia, and the eastern United States."

"The actual orchid plant is not pretty at all as it has sheathing leaves which are sometimes reduced to scales," Stevens continued. "Orchids are unusual in that they bloom at the beginning of their growth period and bloom best in the fall, winter, and spring. I stop watering them in the fall, they lose their leaves and start growing flowers. I may have 25-50 bloom at the same time, but only about a dozen are in bloom now since this is the off season. Some orchids bloom year round."

Most orchids bloom only once on a stem but the stem has buds (eyes) at the base which can be divided and repotted, so the grower may get eight to ten blossoms off one orchid. Patience seems to be required in the tending of orchids as some sprout in one month, others in one year. "I have some plants that haven't even bloomed in 10 years," he noted.

Orchids are a member of the second or third largest plant species in the world, claiming about 450 general and 7,500 species. "There are so many myths about these plants, such as their alleged fragility and the existence of the famed black orchid," says Stevens.

Often perceived as fragile and temperamental, orchids are quite durable and relatively simple to grow, according to Stevens. "Orchids actually thrive on neglect. You can leave them unattended for a month and they will do fine. Once I received an orchid shoot from an Albuquerque man who told me to lay it under my greenhouse shelves and forget about it as it would be some time before it bloomed. I never paid attention to it; the only water it received was drainage off the other plants. Sure enough, two and a half years later, it bloomed!"

According to Stevens, orchids are hearty plants that only require proper air circulation, high humidity, light, and sparse water. "Too much water won't harm the plant but it will slow its growth; a general rule of thumb is, when in doubt, don't water," he states.

The regulation of humidity may be tricky as it should stay around 50 percent and no less than 40 percent; a higher setting results in a fungus problem. As for temperature, Stevens keeps the thermostat at 50 degrees in the winter and at a moderate setting in the warmer seasons.

"There is no such thing as a black orchid," Stevens said. "There are some that are deep, dark purple and appear to be close to black. The only black orchids exist in some mystery books where a fictitious detective claims to raise them."

The Cattleya orchid is Stevens' favorite specimen. "These orchids are the showiest and one stem may yield three blossoms, which makes them a commercial success and less expensive. The white ones with deep colored throats are my favorite."

When asked if he ever sells any of his orchids, Stevens responds: "No, I raise them for beauty—this hobby is strictly non-income producing. I don't want to work at it, but I have sold some orchids to desperate florists in case of an emergency." He notes that Cymbidium orchids are corsage orchids which yield several blooms per stem, but it is too hot here to have much success with them as temperatures should be less than 80 degrees.

Ironically, the only flower show Stevens ever entered with two orchids yielded him awards. "I entered the Buds to Blossom flower show two or three years ago just to see if there was anyone else in the area who raised orchids, not because I thought my plants were good." Stevens was disappointed, however, to find that no one else dabbled in the expensive hobby.

STEVE STEVENS and the results of a green thumb

Between the Covers

BETWEEN THE COVERS
By Rebecca Walls

In the summer of 1985, people all across the country were fascinated and disturbed by the July 9th Benson murders. Two pipe bombs planted in the family car exploded & killed multimillionaire Margaret Benson and her adopted son—an up-and-coming tennis star about to make his debut at the U.S. Open.

Margaret's beautiful Boston socialite daughter, Carol Lynn, was severely burned, but her other son, Steven, who left the car only seconds before, was unscathed. Little more than a year later, Steven barely escaped the death penalty & was sentenced to live in prison for trying to murder the other three.

This is the "heir to the Benson & Hedges fortune" and here is the story: Steven has caused his mother to fear for her life; he had embezzled more than $2 million from her. Upon learning that he was to be disinherited from his portion of the $400 million, he cold-bloodedly planned the demise of his entire family. In the end he simply stood and watched the sole survivor, Carol Lynn, writhe and burn in agony, all the while staring blankly without coming to her aid, and even turning his back on her screams.

Here was a story of greed and folly, obsession, and fear. Here were the facts that pointed to clear-cut guilt. Facts that spelled out a life sentence at the very least for the spoiled and demented Steven Benson. The only trouble was, almost none of these "facts" were true.

Money To Burn by Michael Mewshaw, a spellbinding true-crime drama, is the first complete and objective report on the Benson murders.

Ed McBain's new mystery Puss In Boots is "detective fiction in the hands of a Grand Master."

Prudence Ann Markham was as careful as her name. After she packed up the film she'd been editing, she checked the studio gear, hit the three digit code on the alarm pad, snapped off the lights and locked the door. When she headed across the deserted parking lot to her car, it was 10:40, Prudence Ann never made it to 10:45 p.m.

Carlton Barnaly Markham didn't know what his wife had been working on at the time of her murder. All Carlton knew was that the film was missing & that he was residing in the Clause County Jail, charged with first-degree murder. As Matthew Hope, Carlton's lawyer, dug deeper into the evidence the cops had amassed, it soon became apparent it would take more than claims of innocence to clear his client.

The Summer Reading Club ended July 18 with 948 children enrolled and with 519 completing the required reading. The response was so great that we ran out of prizes again the last week. Because of the terrific effort these children made to be a part of the program, we replenished our supply of prizes and have a list of all the readers that were not given their prizes on or before July 18. If you or your child is one of these readers, please come by the library for your awards.

We hope to see you soon.

Wedding date set

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Pal of Granview, Mo. announce the approaching marriage of their daughter Dr. Michelle Pal to Dr. Anthony Albracht, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Albracht of 125 Sunset Drive of Hereford.

The couple plan to exchange nuptials Sept. 5 in Grandview at the Church of the Coronation of Our Lady.

Dr. Pal received a bachelor of arts degree in biology and doctor of medicine degree from the University of Missouri Kansas City School of Medicine in 1985.

Dr. Albracht is a graduate of Hereford High School. He received a bachelor of science degree in chemistry from Texas A&M and a doctor of medicine degree from the University of Texas Southwest Medical School in Dallas in 1985.

They are doing residencies at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas.

About 9 million Americans are exposed to hazardous sound levels on the job, according to a report prepared for the Environmental Protection Agency. Millions more encounter damaging noises while walking city streets, fighting rush hours or enduring noises from low-flying aircraft.

Residents celebrate wedding anniversary

A reception was held Saturday afternoon at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center to honor Mr. and Mrs. James Gandy who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Guests were registered by the couple's grandchildren: Deborah Gandy of Denton, Kyla and Jamie Gandy of Dalhart and Meisha Warren of Hereford.

Other members of the houseparty were Mrs. Ted Sumner, Mrs. Tom Hargrave, Alice Lueb, Elizabeth Gandy and Pat Patrick.

The observance was hosted by the couple's children: Pat Patrick of Dallas, John Gandy of Denton, Eddie Gandy of Dalhart and Elizabeth Warren. They also have nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

James Gandy and Ruth Love were exchanged nuptials July 24, 1937 at Turkey, Texas in a ceremony officiated by the grooms' uncle, the Rev. Jess Barker. They resided in Hereford until 1945 when they moved to Texas and then to Capulin, N.M. They moved back to Hereford in 1956.

Gandy worked for Continental Grain Co., Hereford Feed yards, Southwest Feed Yards and Champion Feeders and retired in 1977. His wife has been active in Cultural Extension Club, American Legion Auxiliary and served in all offices of the Deaf Smith County Extension Council.

They are members of First Baptist Church.

Out-of-town guests represented Oklahoma, Missouri and New Mexico.

DR. GOTT Bright's disease is now rare

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Recently, while tracing my family tree, I found that my grandmother's death certificate listed her cause of death as "Bright's disease." Is this hereditary?

DEAR READER — Bright's disease is an obsolete term for a form of serious kidney disease called glomerulonephritis. This is inflammation and swelling of the kidney's filtering system. Bright's disease was formerly fatal; with no treatment, it progressed to renal failure.

Some experts believe that it probably was due to an autoimmune (self-allergy) phenomenon, following a streptococcal infection elsewhere in the body. Modern doctors are far more effective in treating both the glomerulonephritis itself and the infection leading to it. For this reason, the condition is, in my experience, rare. People almost never die of glomerulonephritis anymore, thanks to lifesaving measures, such as dialysis and renal transplants.

DEAR DR. GOTT — For the past year or so my 6-year-old son has been having frequent headaches. Some are quite severe, accompanied by hallucinations. He sees monsters or people who are not there and doesn't recognize me. The last time it took me over an hour to calm him down.

The doctor does not seem concerned. My son occasionally takes Theodor Sprinkle for asthma, but the headaches started before he began taking the Theodor. I'm told not to worry, but wouldn't you?

DEAR READER — Yes, I would. I don't know whether your son's fears and hallucinations are due to the headache, but surely the headache itself needs to be addressed. Also, I don't know why your son's doctor has such a cavalier and uncaring attitude; this is unusual in pediatricians.

In any case, ask for a referral to a pediatric neurologist, a specialist in nerve diseases of children. At the very least, you are entitled to a diagnosis and to treatment that will relieve your son's discomfort. The Theodor is probably not playing a role in the headache problem, although the drug in overdose can cause headaches.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a pacemaker implanted and have not been able to sleep in bed since. After about 1 1/2 hours, my pulse gets faster. I get a funny feeling in my stomach and my arms get numb. I think it's because of the electrical impulses emitted by the smoke detector in my bedroom, since this doesn't happen when I sleep on the couch. What do you think? Should I tell the nursing-home authorities?

DEAR READER — By all means, you should report this to the nursing-home administration — and to your doctor. Microwave impulses in your environment may be causing your pacemaker to misfire. If the pacemaker itself is malfunctioning, this can be determined (and corrected) under your doctor's supervision.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is infant botulism, how does one get it and why don't more doctors know about it? DEAR READER — Botulism is a serious form of food poisoning that can affect children and adults alike. It is caused by eating foods that are contaminated by a class of bacteria called clostridium botulinum.

Botulism does not produce the typical picture of food poisoning, such as stomach upset and fever. Symptoms occur between one and seven days after eating contaminated food that has usually been canned or improperly cooked. Weakness is usually the first sign; this is followed by double vision and difficulty swallowing. Nausea and vomiting occur in less than half of the cases.

Because the diagnosis is difficult to establish, treatment with antitoxin is often delayed. About two-thirds of cases are fatal. Doctors know about botulism, but the disease is unusual, especially in sporadic forms, and does not come readily to mind when sick infants become infected.

Pediatricians recommend against giving honey in any form to children under age 1 because of the chance that it may contain botulism. Infants seem to be particularly sensitive to botulism in honey.

There is a major distinction between infant botulism and the botulism that adults get. Anytime a baby experiences difficulty in breathing, it is put on a respirator, which is one reason that infant botulism is not as likely to be fatal as is botulism in adults. Infant botulism is slow enough in developing that it can be waylaid by early action with the respirator.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Several years ago I began having heartburn continuously. I started eating a small piece of aloe vera each night and the heartburn quit. Is there a problem with eating aloe vera?

DEAR READER — Not to my knowledge. However, I think that you should discover the cause of your heartburn. You may have an ulcer, gastritis or peptic esophagitis, which would require specific treatment more effective than aloe.

Because hiatal hernia is a common cause of heartburn, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report on HIATAL HERNIA. Other readers who want a copy of this newsletter should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Hiatal Hernia.

Berry, Boyd special guests at shower

A bridal shower honoring Amy Berry of Corning, Ark. and Brent Boyd of Midland was held recently in the home of Pat and Wes Fisher, 116 Centre.

The honored couple plans to marry Aug. 15 in St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Midland.

Guests were greeted by the honorees; the bride elect's mother,

George Berry; and the prospective groom's parents, Bera and Bobby Boyd.

Refreshments of fresh fruit, assorted cookies, bacon crisp, cheese wafers, and punch and coffee were served from a table covered with a white cloth and centered with an arrangement of phlox, carnations and pinks.

The refreshments were served by Kristi Peters of Lubbock and Karla Hoyle of Wolforth, cousins of the prospective groom. Kim Sims of Hereford also helped with the refreshments.

Special guests were the prospective groom's grandmother, Mrs. Vurda Mae Boyd of Idalou, and his aunt, Mrs. Norman Sue Hoyle of Wolforth.

Hosts and hostesses included Billie and Howard Birdwell, Margaret Ann Durham, Dolores and Boyd Foster, Martha and R. L. Layman, Berta and Richard Otteson, June and Homer Rudd, Sue and Bob Sims, Elaine and Tony Calkins, Pat and Wes Fisher, Carol and Bill Gage, Mary and Bill Lyles, Nelda and Jack Rogers, Rose Mary and Philip Shook and Betty and Gene Volkman.

The Atomic Age began on Dec. 2, 1942, at the University of Chicago with the creation of the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction.

Policing of television evangelists needed

EULESS, Texas (AP) — Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart says there is a need for a national policing organization that would punish television preachers who are dishonest and unethical in the handling of money.

"The eyes of the whole world are upon us and if we don't set our own house in order something is wrong," Swaggart said Thursday. Swaggart was in this Fort Worth suburb to speak at dedication ceremonies for a new headquarters for Euless-based evangelist Mike Evans.

Recent scandals make the policing organization "with teeth in it" necessary. The organization will likely be set up through the National Association of Religious Broadcasters, he said.

"If people don't straighten up, we would just kick them out," he said. "It would just be that blunt."

Swaggart told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram he met Monday in Washington with evangelist Jerry Falwell and Ben Armstrong, president of the broadcasters group, to discuss the policing organization.

"The organization is already in place, but there's one thing missing, the teeth," Swaggart said.

"If we don't have teeth in it, it is meaningless, really," the Baton Rouge, La.-based evangelist said.

Swaggart said he Falwell and other national television evangelists will create a policing organization if the national broadcasters group doesn't.

"We've got to have it," he said. Swaggart said one example of policing would be to examine money raising letters sent out by all television evangelists.

"The committee would look at them not for doctrinal purposes, but for ethics, honesty and integrity and if there are things wrong the evangelist would be contacted and given an opportunity to straighten things out," Swaggart said.

Such a committee, he said, would require disclosure of salaries and benefits for evangelists and regulate appeals for money.

"If an evangelist take up money for Africa, it should be sent to Africa," he said.

The PTL scandals and the question of money raising efforts of evangelist Oral Roberts have badly damaged the credibility of all television evangelists, Swaggart said.

THE POWER OF ATTORNEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty percent of Americans will have an extended period of disability during their lives.

Arrangements should be made for someone to sign your checks, sell your car or arrange a loan if you become disabled. If arrangements haven't been made, says Family Circle magazine, family members might end up in a costly legal battle.

A durable general power of attorney authorizes someone you name a wide variety of powers. Simply fill it in, name a person as the agent, and have it witnessed and notarized. That person then has the right to act for you in the event of a disabling accident or illness.
