Recovered Property

Deputies Robin Ruland, left, and Herman Lopez of the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office begin an inventory of stolen property

they and Deputy Fidel Reyna recovered Sunday. The items could lead to the solving of several Hereford burglaries.

Deputies recover property

The Deaf Smith County Sheriff's deputies had a busy and profitable weekend as they solved a number of burglaries and recovered numerous items which had been taken.

Last Friday, Deputy Jimmy Hudgens, investigator, and Deputy Robin Ruland solved a burglary within two hours of the report and recovered $1,400 worth of miscellaneous tools taken from Winget Pump Company, east of Hereford.

Ruland and Fidel Reyna assisted Deputy Herman Lopez in solving burglaries which occurred Saturday and Sunday mornings in the San Jose Labor Camp area south of Hereford.

"Sunday morning a lady walked in on some juveniles who were burglarizing her home," Ruland said. The woman provided enough information for the deputies to begin investigating and their trail led to the arrest of a group of juveniles who had been involved in the burglaries and in vandalism.

"We spent Sunday from 12 until 6 p.m. checking on various locations in the Labor Camp," Ruland said.

Among the property deputies confiscated were two televisions, video games, trophies, clothing, coins, a bicycle and a punch bowl set. Not all of the stolen property has been catalogued as yet and no value has been assessed.

T&C parade winners named

The concluding day of the annual Hereford Town & Country Jubilee Saturday saw more participants in the parade than in the seven-year history of the event.

The overall winner in the floats

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says one of these days somebody is going to come up with a book on "How to Get Out of Doing It Yourself," and he'll make himself a fortune.

"Good morning, ma'am. I'm from the gas company. I understand there's something in your house that won't work."

"Yes, he's in the den watching TV."

School is a building that has four walls—with tomorrow inside.—Lon Watters

Congratulations to all those who helped make the Town & Country Jubilee another great success! A pat on the back goes to Waldo Baxter and Mike Carr, co-chairmen of the annual event, and to all the committee leaders and workers. Committee leaders included Suzy Wall, Hawk Kreig, Jim Ward, Charlie Bell and Bill Bankston.

Carr reported the Jubilee Junction had its largest number of booths ever, and the parade participation was the largest ever. The chamber manager said some people were unhappy that Jubilee Junction was held at the Bull Barn.

"Next year, we may schedule Jubilee Junction for the Bull Barn and then move it to Dameron Park for lack of rain," quipped Carr.

Speaking of the jubilee, there was a good article and colored photograph in the Amarillo Sunday News-Globe about the T&C event. Several folks at Sunday School remarked that it was nice to see some good news reported by the Amarillo media.

On the same page, reporter Jane Grandolfo wrote a column, under the subhead of "Pointless protest", about the recent demonstration led by Jesus Moya. "In choosing a lame campaign to seize upon, Moya has cast a shadow upon a group of Hispanics—called Concerned Citizens—who not only have to live in Hereford year-round, but who are also earnestly seeking reform," wrote Grandolfo.

If Moya "truly wants to make a significant contribution to the people of Deaf Smith County, he should get his facts straight before he demonstrates," she concluded.

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: Larry Crabtree, in the Vernon Daily Record, told about a doctor who told his seriously ill patient that rest was the best solution for his illness.

"The best thing for you to do," advised the doctor, "is to give up drinking and smoking, forget about women, get up early in the morning and go to bed early at night."

The tired businessman considered it for a moment, then shook his head slowly. "No, Doc, I don't deserve the best. What's the second best?"

was an entry by the Hereford Senior Citizens Association. The parade theme was "We The People," in honor of the U.S. Constitution, and the Hereford State Bank entry was awarded the "best theme" award.

The winners in each of parade divisions: Agribusiness—1. Hereford Bi-Products. 2. Oglesby Equipment. 3. White Implement.

Commercial—1. Ramirez & Sons Flappers. 2. Larymore Dance Studio. 3. Southwestern Bell.

Religious—1. First Assembly of God Missionettes. 2. Country Church of God. 3. Cub Scout Pack 54 (St. Anthony's).

Service Club—1. DSC Extension Homemakers. 2. DSC 4-H Club. 3. Golden K Club.

Open Division—1. DSC Library. 2. King's Manor. 3. Golden Spread Foster Home Association.

A sidelight of the parade was a Suburban convoy, arranged by Earl Stagner of Stagner-Orsborn Buick-Pontiac-GMC. Stagner reported there were 56 Suburbans in one group and six others in the parade.

"Whether or not it was a world record is unresolved, but we consider it a victory because of the enthusiastic response," said Stagner.

Weather still hot

By The Associated Press

Mostly fair skies and hot temperatures were forecast across most of Texas through Thursday with excessive heat to continue across central and southern portions of North Texas.

Highs in the area are expected to reach about 107, forecasters say.

There is a chance of isolated thunderstorms over West Texas and along the Red River Valley in North Texas through tonight.

Forecasts are calling for mostly fair skies and hot temperatures statewide through Thursday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 70s and 80s except in the mountains of West Texas and the Panhandle where readings will be in the 60s.

Highs Thursday will again be mostly in the 90s, ranging upward to as high as near 105.

Carbajal gets max: 99 years, $10,000 fine

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Florentino Carbajal was found guilty of murder and sentenced to the maximum penalty of 99 years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine by a seven-man, five-woman jury Tuesday afternoon in 222nd District Court here.

Carbajal, 28, was convicted of the Dec. 29, 1986 murder of his 18-year-old wife, Marina, which was witnessed by two members of her family.

District Attorney Saul closed four days of testimony by reminding jurors of what he termed as "overwhelming evidence" in a "relatively unusual case with testimony on issues not normally raised."

Jurors heard Carbajal's claims that his wife and her mother, Mary Soyla Tamez, were engaged in the practice of witchcraft.

Though Carbajal, taking the stand in his own defense on Monday, testified that he was not claiming he was under a "witches spell" when he shot his wife, he graphically described events which he said he saw, including ritualistic sacrifices of chickens, burning candles, spell casting and an incident of worship in which he claims his wife's eyes glowed green while she spoke in tongues, and another incident during which he claims Tamez began speaking with the voice of a man.

In his closing remarks, Saul stated that in spite of side issues, the major issue was the murder of Marina and that no testimony the defense presented contradicted the facts about how the shooting occurred.

Referring to defense witnesses who testified that the victim had a violent temper and had been an unfaithful wife, Saul said, "Some defense witnesses seemed to be designed to run Marina Carbajal down but none of these witnesses knew anything about the shooting itself."

Those who testified about the shooting during the course of the trial included the victim's sister, Loretta, and her husband, Armondo, who witnessed the incident.

In their separate testimonies they told jurors that Marina had left Carbajal and was staying in their home until her mother could come and get her.

On the day of the shooting they said that Carbajal came to their home and requested to speak with his wife. According to their testimony, Marina stepped out on the front porch to talk with Carbajal. They said they heard a noise and Marina fell through the door and was lying on her back.

Carbajal then stepped in the door and aimed a .38-caliber handgun at Loretta, who testified that he pulled the trigger but the gun didn't fire.

She said he then aimed the gun at Marina, who was twitching from the first shot which crossed the top of her head.

According to testimony Carbajal then pulled the trigger again and shot Marina through the chin. It was this bullet, which lodged against her spine, which Dr. Ralph Erdmann, a forensic pathologist, said killed Marina.

"Florentino Carbajal took the stand and testified about their relationship and indicated it was all Marina's fault," Saul said.

"Marina Carbajal is not here to defend herself, the defendant took care of that," he said. "She cannot be here to tell you the fear she felt when he was beating her and then when she ran from him."

Saul also referred to Carbajal's testimony concerning having a sexual relationship with Marina, which began when she was 10 years old; a case of aggravated assault against her, to which he pleaded guilty; and a felony theft charge, for which he served a sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections, all of which Saul said Carbajal blamed Marina.

Carbajal said it was Marina's fault he went to prison for a burglary he admitted to, but now says she did. He said it was her fault he assaulted her because she attacked him, and he said it was her fault he had the gun, Saul pointed out.

"I suppose he wants us to believe it was her fault she was gunned down in cold blood," he said.

Defense attorney Jerry Smith told jurors in his closing arguments that the rocky relationship between his client and the victim and the issue of a strong belief in witchcraft were important.

Furniture bids go to Amarillo

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

A $630,000 furniture procurement contract was awarded to an Amarillo firm this week, according to an announcement by Battelle's John Treadwell at an early morning Department of Energy Salt Repository Project Deputy Manager's meeting today.

The contract for sophisticated modular office furniture was awarded to Herring Design Group of Amarillo. Treadwell said that no Hereford vendors submitted bids for the procurement.

Phillip Niedzielski-Eichner, executive director of the Deaf Smith County Waste Deposit Impact Committee, said he had been informed that a provision requiring a large daily penalty for each unit not installed by a deadline date was prohibitive to local vendors wishing to participate in the bidding.

Robert Wunderlich, DOE's deputy manager for the nuclear waste site characterization project, said that they had been unaware of any problems on the part of the local vendors.

"If people had any issues they had an opportunity to bring them up and if they didn't, like the old saying goes, 'Sorry about that,' we are not reopening that procurement," Wunderlich said.

"That (reopening the bidding) is not the point," Eichner said, "We would not pursue that as long as the winning bid met that requirements."

Representatives of DOE and its field contractor, Stone and Webster, will be meeting with WDIC this week to begin discussions on upcoming field activity.

Wunderlich said there are now 146 project personnel working in the area, an increase of eight over last week's figures.

With central offices of the contractors located in Hereford, 48 of those employees are in residence and 23 of those are transfers into the area.

Making the daily commute to Hereford to work are 56 employees from Amarillo, which includes 44 transfers and is a gain of four from last week, and 17 from Canyon, a gain of two.

Project transfers are now expected to total 35 additions in the remainder of August, 45 in September, 56 in October and 35 in November.

Stone and Webster will soon begin gaining project personnel; however, Wunderlich expects none of those employees will live in Hereford.

"It would be backwards for them to live in Hereford and work in Amarillo," Wunderlich said. He explained that Hereford has inadequate temporary housing, such as apartments, to handle 700 short-term project employees.

Procurements for the project total $1.8 million in commitments of which $624,000 have been committed in Hereford. Amarillo procurements have topped the $800,000 mark.

Local Roundup

Woman found dead in home

Officers of the Hereford Police Department responded to a call at 111 Avenue E on Tuesday morning where they found Johnnie Fotheringham, 77, dead at the scene. Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine ruled the death to be of natural causes.

Officers made two arrests on assault charges on Tuesday. Arrested were a two men, 32 and 33 years old. A 19-year-old male was arrested for a second offense of no liability insurance, speeding, failure to have a child under two-years-old in a car seat and expired driver's license.

Furniture valued at $300 was reported missing as the result of a burglary of a residence on the 400 block of North 25 Mile Ave. Other thefts reported included a bicycle in the 300 block of Ave. B, a cassette tape from the 600 block of North 25 Mile Ave., and the possible theft of a dog from the 400 block of East Fourth Street.

Other offenses reported included a civil dispute on Irving, damages to a door in the 300 block of Lake and harassing phone calls in the 200 block of Greenwood.

One accident with no injuries was reported and 14 citations were issued.

WDIC board to meet

The Waste Deposit Impact Committee will meet Thursday at 7 a.m. at the WDIC offices, Park and Ave. A in Hereford.

The committee will meet in executive session to evaluate the performance of the executive director, Phillip Niedzielski-Eichner, over the past six months and consider a one-year contract renewal. Any action will be taken in open session following the meeting.

Persons wishing to provide input should contact a committee member: Troy Don Moore, Tom Legate, Frank Zinser, Dennis Brown, John Fuston or Troy Sublett.

Elementary registration underway

Registration for Hereford elementary students began today and will continue through Friday.

Elementary students may register at their schools from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. through Friday.

Registration will continue through Sept. 1 at Hereford High School and Stanton and LaPlata junior high schools.

School will begin in Hereford on Sept. 1.

Concerned Citizens meet Thursday

Concerned Citizens of Deaf Smith County will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Roger Scott, director of the Upward Bound program at West Texas State University, will conduct the program.

Upward Bound is a pre-college preparatory program for high school sophomores and juniors and is designed for students from low-to-moderate income backgrounds who may have the potential to pursue a college degree.

Sunny, hot weather to continue

There is a less than 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms today with a low tonight of 68. South wind 5 to 10 mph.

Thursday's forecast is for sunny and hot weather, with a high of 97. South wind 10 to 20 mph.

Today's low was 68 after a high Tuesday of 97 at KPAN.

First solo

Jennifer Fellers, center, took her first solo flight Tuesday morning at Hereford Municipal Airport. Sellers, who will be a senior this year at Hereford High School, and her father, Dick, right, have been taking lessons from instructor Chuck Cosper, left, who said Dick is only about two hours behind his daughter and will soon make his first solo.

Study shows rescue potential dropouts before high school

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Schools should not wait until high school to identify and rescue potential dropouts, according to a study by two Pan American University sociologists.

Many dropouts can be identified as early as first or second grade, reported Dr. David Alvarez and Dr. Manuel Lopez.

When talking about dropouts, people usually mean junior high or high school students, Alvarez said, "but you have to consider the kids who have dropped out in spirit, if not in body in the elementary grades."

In a research report commissioned by the McAllen Independent School District, entitled "Assessing the Dropout Problem: Students', Parents' and School Personnel's Perceptions," the professors report the following common characteristics many eventual dropouts shared in elementary school:

- Bad conduct grades.
- Older brothers and sisters who have dropped out.
- High rates of absenteeism.
- Low socio-economic status.
- A feeling they are falling behind in reading, English and mathematics.
- A feeling that education is not important to their parents and no one cares whether they succeed.
- Attending ethnically imbalanced schools.

By high school, Alvarez said, "It's too late to deal effectively with the dropouts because the things that lead to their dropping out are already established," Alvarez said.

Schools instead should focus, he said, at the elementary levels "where you still have time to do something."

The research was performed in the Rio Grande Valley, where the estimated 45 percent dropout rate is more than twice the national rate of 22 percent. But Alvarez said its basic points apply to other regions, as well.

One answer would be to put more counselors in the elementary schools, to deal with individual problems more effectively, Alvarez said. The study also recommends that schools increase efforts to reach out to parents.

The professors said at least one Valley principal took matters into his own hands when non-English speaking parents didn't attend Parent-Teacher Association meetings. He set up a meeting in the "colonia" where many of the students lived, and found many mothers and fathers came.

"It was in their neighborhood, in a setting where they felt comfortable," Alvarez said. "In that situation, the school is being pro-active. It is taking the initiative."

In the study, which incorporated information from students, parents, teachers and academic support personnel to compare groups of children, the sociologists found many students with the same characteristics as the dropouts did not leave school before graduation.

"The dropouts and their parents were much more likely to feel alienated by the school system, that nobody cared about them," Alvarez said.

Those who finished school also tended to be more conforming than dropouts, he added.

Students also need to know the consequences of dropping out, the professors said.

"They don't have a realistic grasp of what it takes to get certain types of jobs," Lopez said.

Cross winds cause airline crash

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) - Northwest Airlines Flight 255 took off in light rain from a runway where traffic was moved because of shifting winds, and rose less than 150 feet before it crashed, killing up to 158 people, investigators say.

The lone survivor of Sunday night's crash, the nation's second deadliest air disaster, was a 4-year-old girl who remained hospitalized today in serious condition, authorities said.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators stressed Tuesday night they were ruling nothing out as a possible cause of the crash near Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

"There is nothing that draws us to any particular area," said the board's John Lauber.

At least 152 people on the plane and as many as five or six on the ground were killed, according to the NTSB. The airline, which has refused to release an official passenger list, says 154 were killed on the plane. Lauber couldn't account for the discrepancy.

Commercial pilots who saw the crash from an adjacent taxiway told investigators the MD-80 aircraft climbed at an unusually steep angle. They and other witnesses said the plane never got higher than 150 feet.

The pilots' accounts differed from other witnesses who said the jet was ablaze before it hit the ground and exploded.

Lauber said Flight 255 was 5,000 pounds below its 149,500-pound limit when it left on a runway designated 30 minutes earlier for all traffic because low-level wind shifts, known as wind shears, were detected by the airport's computer-controlled detection system.

Wind shears cause airplanes to lose speed without warning and have been cited as a factor in several air disasters, including a 1985 crash in Dallas and a 1983 crash in Kenner, La.

Previous reports also said the weather was clear at the time of Sunday's crash but Lauber said a light rain was falling and a thunderstorm was about 20 miles away.

Cross winds were blowing at 10 to 12 mph at the time of takeoff, said Jack Drake, director of the NTSB investigation.

The cockpit recorder caught the flight crew discussing the storm, but their last exchange with the control tower was when they were cleared for takeoff, Lauber said.

Lauber said the cockpit recorder chronicled the computer-generated voice of a cockpit warning system saying "stall! stall! stall! only seconds after takeoff."

A preliminary review of the aircraft's maintenance records showed no problems, Lauber said. "It was characterized as a pretty healthy plane," he said.

Investigators today hoped to get their first look inside the plane's right engine, which survived the crash relatively intact. It was still at the crash site at Interstate 94, which reopened Tuesday.

Journalist returns home to family

LONDON (AP) - American journalist Charles Glass returned to his wife and five children today after 62 days as a hostage in Beirut. "We missed you Dad a lot. Welcome home," said a sign on the front door.

Glass, looking tired but relieved, arrived at London's Gatwick Airport about 30 hours after slipping out of wrist and ankle chains, locking up his snoring captors, and bolting from an apartment in west Beirut's pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem stronghold of Bir el-Abed.

At the airport, Glass said his ordeal brought him "closer to God. I found great solace in prayer, and this will stay with me all my life."

Asked what his plans were, he replied: "I hope to see my wife and children and have some privacy."

Glass, 36, was on leave from ABC to research a book on Lebanon when he was kidnapped June 17 while driving along a highway. The Los Angeles native, who lives in London, said he went to Beirut in the belief he would be protected by the Syrian military who police many parts of the city.

Asked if he thought it was unwise for him to go to Beirut, Glass replied: "I admitted it the moment that green Mercedes cut in front of my car...It was a mistake."

In an interview conducted Tuesday from a Syrian television studio in Damascus, Glass told ABC News he wrote notes in his own blood pleading for rescue and offering $10,000 to anyone who helped him. He said a gun was pointed at him when he made a videotape in which he said he was a spy for the CIA. The tape was released July 17.

Syrian troops whisked Glass from Beirut to Damascus after the early Tuesday escape. From there he flew to London, arriving today at about 12:45 a.m.

At an airport news conference, Glass said he had planned for some time to escape and loosened his ankle and wrist chains so he could slip them off. His chance for freedom came after midnight Monday, when his Shiite Moslem guards were sleeping, Glass said.

On Tuesday, Glass described sneaking out of the apartment and running barefoot down seven flights of stairs and into the road.

Police said Glass hailed a ride to the luxury Summerland Hotel on west Beirut's Mediterranean beachfront. He walked into the lobby at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday and told the startled receptionist: "I'm Charles Glass. I need a place to hide."

The former hostage said he doubted that Iran had allowed him to escape, as has been theorized in Washington and Damascus, although he acknowledged it was possible because of improved U.S.-Syrian relations.

Eight other Americans are held hostage in Beirut, including another U.S. journalist, Terry Anderson.

Lubbock cattleman facing $13 million suit by bank

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — First National Bank of Amarillo officials have filed a lawsuit against prominent cattleman Jim Kassahn, claiming he acquired a $13 million loan using cattle he did not own as collateral.

Judge Jairi P. Dowell of 108th state District Court has granted First National a temporary restraining order and set a hearing on an injunction request at 1:30 p.m. Friday in 47th state District Court in Amarillo.

The suit filed last Wednesday claims that Kassahn, a director of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, misrepresented his ownership of 37,000 head of cattle.

First National, contending Kassahn did not abide by his loan requirements, declared the loan in default and is calling in the $12.75 million that remains due, court records show.

Kassahn sits on the board of directors at American State Bank in Lubbock. Calls made by The Associated Press to his home in Lubbock were unanswered Tuesday.

First National also is seeking to prevent sale of cattle the bank claims is collateral for Kassahn's loan.

The bank claims the loan was made after Kassahn claimed the firm he owns with his wife, Paula, J.P.'s Family Inc., owned the 37,000 head of cattle.

To verify ownership, a First National official visited the feedlot Aug. 11 and was told that Kassahn had an interest in only 16,000 head of cattle in his feedlot.

The bank learned that the cattle in question were held jointly by a partnership of Kassahn and two other businessmen.

Kassahn attributed the reduction of 21,000 head to a legitimate, contracted sale, but First National claims that is not true, according to court documents.

Kassahn, who owns a feedlot near Lazbuddie, told First National when he sought the $13 million loan last December that he owned about 57,000 head of pasture cattle valued at more than $17.8 million and 5,600 feedlot cattle worth $3.4 million.

In an inventory count prior to the inspection by the bank two weeks ago, Kassahn told First National that cattle totals had increased giving him a collateral base of $35.1 million, plus another $1.1 million in assets at J.P.'s Family Inc. unrelated to cattle.

In the past, Kassahn had borrowed from American State Bank, court documents show. But he went to First National because he needed a line of credit larger than what he could get, according to federal law, as a director of the Lubbock institution.

Third convoy sets sail for gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) - The third convoy of American-flagged Kuwaiti tankers set sail for the Persian Gulf today, accompanied by U.S. Navy warships and a fast patrol boat filled with armed American soldiers, shipping sources said.

The convoy set sail before dawn, and by 7:30 a.m. it had traveled more than halfway through the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow gateway to the gulf. The sources said the three warships and four tankers cruised past batteries of Iranian anti-ship missiles and were near Iran's Qeshm island, another base for missiles, this morning.

On Tuesday, Iranian commandos in speedboats fired on a Liberian-flag tanker in the Strait of Hormuz, causing minor damage to the vessel. Iran, which has fought Iraq in a 7-year-war and accuses Kuwait of aiding its enemy, has threatened to attack the U.S. convoys.

The convoy moved in a single file today led by a supertanker and a frigate, and it included a large vessel topped by "what looked like aircraft hangars," the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

A U.S. Navy fast patrolboat with armed men on board scouted near the ships, the shipping experts said.

In Kuwait, officials of the state Kuwait Oil Tanker Company confirmed that three of their reflagged tankers had started the journey through the gulf, which is about 40 miles wide.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified the ships as the supertanker Townsend and the gas carriers Gas Queen and Gas Princess.

Shipping sources said another tanker, the Middleton, was also part of the convoy, but the Kuwaiti company did not confirm their report.

Since President Reagan agreed to reflag and escort 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from Iranian attack, two convoys have sailed north through the gulf. A supertanker in the first convoy, the Bridgeton, hit a mine near an Iranian island about 120 miles from Kuwait. The Pentagon accused Iran of setting the mine.

The second convoy finished loading oil off Kuwait Saturday, and has been preparing for its return voyage.

Shipping agents at the United Arab Emirates ports of Fujairah and Khor Fakkan, where the first convoys assembled, insisted they knew nothing about any preparations for the surprise convoy. They said the tankers must have grouped two or three days ago well south of the Gulf of Oman, where several mines have been discovered in the past week.

CARBAJAL

"The issue of witchcraft and the facts of the case created by the involvement of the parties is important," he said. Smith argued that his client did not blame everything on the victim but said that the events were a result of their relationship.

"He never said the assault was her fault. He admitted he busted her lip," Smith said. "He is not blaming her but merely reacting to her actions."

Smith admitted that the facts surrounding the actual shooting were not in dispute but advised jurors, "You can and should look at former provocation."

He reminded jurors of testimony that Marina gave the gun to Carbajal as an early Christmas present and said, "It is passing strange that she would give him a gun and ask that he use it to end their relationship. Put yourself in his shoes and ask 'Why would my wife do this?'"

A witness for the prosecution, Mike Ahrens of the Hereford Police Department, testified that Carbajal had told him a conflicting story about the origin of the gun.

Ahrens testified that Carbajal told him the gun was stolen during a burglary of the Chester Harrison residence. Ahrens said Carbajal claimed that he, Marina and her brother, Alex, had burglarized the home and that Carbajal provided information which led to the recovery of a television, taken in the burglary, which he had sold.

The district attorney said, "I submit to you that shows just what a liar he (Carbajal) is. He admitted he lied during previous cases and said he lied to protect her (Marina) but he wouldn't lie to protect himself."

Relaying events in the couples' lives from their childhood infatuation to the time of the shooting, Smith told jurors that the Carbajals, who married just months before Marina's death, were passionately in love.

He told jurors that whether or not Marina and Tamez actually practiced witchcraft (Tamez testified she did not) was not an issue but that Carbajal's belief that they did combined with his passion for Marina led him to kill her in a moment of temporary insanity or an act of passion.

"They were children growing into an adult world and not understanding the responsibilities," said Smith, "The practice of witchcraft, which he did not like, compounded by her admission of self-aborting his child and flushing it down the toilet, compounded by her unfaithfulness, created their problems, which became a double-edged sword which reached the point both were getting cut."

Smith reminded jurors that Carbajal testified that Marina told him she wanted him to use the gun and kill himself and taunted him that if he wasn't man enough to kill himself she would kill him.

"He thought she would use witchcraft and I submit this took him to a boiling point," Smith said. "Chapter after chapter of Florentino and Marina Carbajal's lives have been written," Smith said, "In some ways it is a happy story because of their love, but in other ways sad because of hardships they endured and because of the hardship of living without her he will carry the rest of his life."

The jury wrote the final chapter of the story of Marina's life, in Smith's words, with their conviction and maximum sentencing of Florentino Carbajal for her murder.

Some law enforcement officers and judicial system employees predict that Carbajal will serve only a third, or less, of the 99-year sentence, and when he gets out, Cristella Ramirez says she will be waiting for him.

When she met Carbajal, Ramirez was being held in Deaf Smith County Jail on two cases of injury to a child. The two formed a friendship and began passing notes back and forth, according to Ramirez.

Their relationship developed into a romance, she says, and was discovered when Laura Shepard, a jailer, caught Carbajal passing a note.

"There were several notes between them," Shepard says. "The basic content was how much they loved each other and the hardship of being separated as well as plans for the future."

Ramirez admits that their relationship became general knowledge when a comment she made to her husband about the possibility of getting pregnant in jail was reported to Jail Administrator David Castillo.

"David Castillo questioned me about the remark," Ramirez says, "and I admitted that Florentino and I had had intercourse."

She says the couple would leave GED and AA classes offered for prisoners and meet in the shower where they established a more intimate relationship.

Ramirez is on probation now and says she will wait for Carbajal.

"I know I love him. He tells me he doesn't remember anything about the night Marina died and I believe him."

Legion Lunch Well Attended

People of all ages turned out Tuesday for the Country Lunch served by the American Legion Auxiliary as a fundraiser for local projects. Approximately 300 people were served roast beef and all the trimmings. Servers were kept busy

Railroad history seen in Galveston

To tell the story of a giant railroad, you need a giant exhibit and plenty of space.

So the Galveston Railroad Museum has set aside 365 feet of track in its depot and 1,250 square feet of gallery space for a special exhibit on the Union Pacific Railroad.

Beginning with a massive locomotive and freight cars, the Union Pacific exhibit also includes wall-sized display panels, movies, slide shows and exhibits that tell the 136-year history of the giant railroad.

The Union Pacific is a 22,000-mile rail system that serves 21 states from Illinois to Oregon and Washington in the north, and from Texas and Louisiana to California in the south.

The Railroad Museum will feature the Union Pacific Railroad in its exhibits and programs through Labor Day.

Already the largest collection of restored rail cars, locomotives and railroad artifacts in the Southwest, the museum has designated a full gallery and one of its five depot tracks to the Union Pacific.

Inside the museum, visitors eavesdrop on conversations of travelers in the old 1930s passenger depot.

Other tracks contain restored Pullman cars, steam and diesel locomotives, exhibit cars, freight cars and a restaurant inside two restored dining cars.

The museum, located at the corner of Strand and 25th Streets in The Strand Historic District, is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week. Tickets for admission to the museum are $4 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and $2 for children, ages 4 through 12. Children under 4 are free.

For information about the Union Pacific exhibit or other exhibits at the Railroad Museum, call (409)765-5700.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 24, been married eight months and have had sex with only one person, my husband. (I'll call him Brad.)

Brad and I enjoyed romantic evenings (and even some nights), but I decided to save myself for marriage. If all this sounds super-moral or an unusual amount of self-control let me assure you that you are giving me more credit than I deserve. I never really wanted to go all the way because I wasn't that turned on.

Our wedding night was no big deal. I faked excitement I didn't feel. Frankly, I thought it would get better in time, but it didn't. I finally decided to go to a gynecologist and find out if something was wrong with me.

When the doctor told me I had a hooded clitoris I didn't know what he was talking about. I'd never heard of such a thing. (It's a layer of skin over the most sensitive part of a woman's genitalia that prevents her from feeling very much.) The doctor removed the skin in just a few minutes. No pain except a few seconds when he injected novocaine. He said I'd be "a different woman" in a few days.

Ann, I couldn't believe it. I'm enjoying Brad in a way I never dreamed possible. Need I tell you that he is thrilled?

It's almost like a miracle. I'm writing because I've never seen this topic mentioned in your column, and I want to share my discovery with all the women who may need this little surgical correction and not know it. I'll sign my letter—Joy Unlimited in Santa Monica

DEAR JOY: I have discussed this problem in the column before, but it's been a long time and I'm sure I've added some new readers since then. Thanks for giving me an opportunity to improve the quality of life for a number of people.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Half the summer is gone but there are still several weeks of vacation left for millions of people all over the country.

For teenagers, summer means swimming, trips and freedom from school. For those of us on the staff of the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, summer means a tragic increase in admissions of young people whose lives will never be the same. Most of them will be permanently disabled because of accidents that could have been avoided.

More than 70 percent of the cases we see are the result of preventable accidents. Every summer dozens of swimmers misjudge the depth of the lake or the pool. They dive in shallow water and break their necks. To spend the rest of one's life in a wheelchair is a big price to pay for a moment of thoughtlessness.

This summer we encourage the nation's youth to enjoy their time off and have fun, but be careful. Never drink and drive. Obey the speed limit. Don't show off when you are behind the wheel. We are proud of our leadership role in rebuilding the lives of those who have become physically disabled, but we would rather that the job did not have to be done at all.

Every patient we see says, "I never believed this could happen to me." But it did.—Henry B. Betts, M.D., Northwestern University, chief executive officer and medical director, Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago

DEAR HENRY: As a member of your board for nearly 15 years I can only say thanks for the splendid job you do. I hope your letter will result in a dramatic reduction in the number of admissions in August. I never walk in or out of the Rehab without saying a prayer for the disabled.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.50 plus a No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Study shows rescue potential dropouts before high school

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Schools should not wait until high school to identify and rescue potential dropouts, according to a study by two Pan American University sociologists.

Many dropouts can be identified as early as first or second grade, reported Dr. David Alvarez and Dr. Manuel Lopez.

When talking about dropouts, people usually mean junior high or high school students, Alvarez said, "but you have to consider the kids who have dropped out in spirit, if not in body in the elementary grades."

In a research report commissioned by the McAllen Independent School District, entitled "Assessing the Dropout Problem: Students', Parents' and School Personnel's Perceptions," the professors report the following common characteristics many eventual dropouts shared in elementary school:

- Bad conduct grades.
- Older brothers and sisters who have dropped out.
- High rates of absenteeism.
- Low socio-economic status.
- A feeling they are falling behind in reading, English and mathematics.
- A feeling that education is not important to their parents and no one cares whether they succeed.
- Attending ethnically imbalanced schools.

By high school, Alvarez said, "It's too late to deal effectively with the dropouts because the things that lead to their dropping out are already established," Alvarez said.

Schools instead should focus, he said, at the elementary levels "where you still have time to do something."

The research was performed in the Rio Grande Valley, where the estimated 45 percent dropout rate is more than twice the national rate of 22 percent. But Alvarez said its basic points apply to other regions, as well.

One answer would be to put more counselors in the elementary schools, to deal with individual problems more effectively, Alvarez said. The study also recommends that schools increase efforts to reach out to parents.

The professors said at least one Valley principal took matters into his own hands when non-English speaking parents didn't attend Parent-Teacher Association meetings. He set up a meeting in the "colonia" where many of the students lived, and found many mothers and fathers came.

"It was in their neighborhood, in a setting where they felt comfortable," Alvarez said. "In that situation, the school is being pro-active. It is taking the initiative."

In the study, which incorporated information from students, parents, teachers and academic support personnel to compare groups of children, the sociologists found many students with the same characteristics as the dropouts did not leave school before graduation.

"The dropouts and their parents were much more likely to feel alienated by the school system, that nobody cared about them," Alvarez said.

Those who finished school also tended to be more conforming than dropouts, he added.

Students also need to know the consequences of dropping out, the professors said.

"They don't have a realistic grasp of what it takes to get certain types of jobs," Lopez said.

Cross winds cause airline crash

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — Northwest Airlines Flight 255 took off in light rain from a runway where traffic was moved because of shifting winds, and rose less than 150 feet before it crashed, killing up to 158 people, investigators say.

The lone survivor of Sunday night's crash, the nation's second deadliest air disaster, was a 4-year-old girl who remained hospitalized today in serious condition, authorities said.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators stressed Tuesday night they were ruling nothing out as a possible cause of the crash near Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

"There is nothing that draws us to any particular area," said the board's John Lauber.

At least 152 people on the plane and as many as five or six on the ground were killed, according to the NTSB. The airline, which has refused to release an official passenger list, says 154 were killed on the plane. Lauber couldn't account for the discrepancy.

Commercial pilots who saw the crash from an adjacent taxiway told investigators the MD-80 aircraft climbed at an unusually steep angle. They and other witnesses said the plane never got higher than 150 feet.

The pilots' accounts differed from other witnesses who said the jet was ablaze before it hit the ground and exploded.

Lauber said Flight 255 was 5,000 pounds below its 149,500-pound limit when it left on a runway designated 30 minutes earlier for all traffic because low-level wind shifts, known as wind shears, were detected by the airport's computer-controlled detection system.

Wind shears cause airplanes to lose speed without warning and have been cited as a factor in several air disasters, including a 1985 crash in Dallas and a 1983 crash in Kenner, La.

Previous reports also said the weather was clear at the time of Sunday's crash but Lauber said a light rain was falling and a thunderstorm was about 20 miles away.

Cross winds were blowing at 10 to 12 mph at the time of takeoff, said Jack Drake, director of the NTSB investigation.

The cockpit recorder caught the flight crew discussing the storm, but their last exchange with the control tower was when they were cleared for takeoff, Lauber said.

Lauber said the cockpit recorder chronicled the computer-generated voice of a cockpit warning system saying "stall! stall! stall! only seconds after takeoff."

A preliminary review of the aircraft's maintenance records showed no problems, Lauber said. "It was characterized as a pretty healthy plane," he said.

Investigators today hoped to get their first look inside the plane's right engine, which survived the crash relatively intact. It was still at the crash site at Interstate 94, which reopened Tuesday.

Journalist returns home to family

LONDON (AP) — American journalist Charles Glass returned to his wife and five children today after 62 days as a hostage in Beirut. "We missed you Dad a lot. Welcome home," said a sign on the front door.

Glass, looking tired but relieved, arrived at London's Gatwick Airport about 30 hours after slipping out of wrist and ankle chains, locking up his snoring captors, and bolting from an apartment in west Beirut's pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem stronghold of Bir el-Abed.

At the airport, Glass said his ordeal brought him "closer to God. I found great solace in prayer, and this will stay with me all my life."

Asked what his plans were, he replied: "I hope to see my wife and children and have some privacy."

Glass, 36, was on leave from ABC to research a book on Lebanon when he was kidnapped June 17 while driving along a highway. The Los Angeles native, who lives in London, said he went to Beirut in the belief he would be protected by the Syrian military who police many parts of the city.

Asked if he thought it was unwise for him to go to Beirut, Glass replied: "I admitted it the moment that green Mercedes cut in front of my car...It was a mistake."

In an interview conducted Tuesday from a Syrian television studio in Damascus, Glass told ABC News he wrote notes in his own blood pleading for rescue and offering $10,000 to anyone who helped him. He said a gun was pointed at him when he made a videotape in which he said he was a spy for the CIA. The tape was released July 17.

Syrian troops whisked Glass from Beirut to Damascus after the early Tuesday escape. From there he flew to London, arriving today at about 12:45 a.m.

At an airport news conference, Glass said he had planned for some time to escape and loosened his ankle and wrist chains so he could slip them off. His chance for freedom came after midnight Monday, when his Shiite Moslem guards were sleeping, Glass said.

On Tuesday, Glass described sneaking out of the apartment and running barefoot down seven flights of stairs and into the road.

Police said Glass hailed a ride to the luxury Summerland Hotel on west Beirut's Mediterranean beachfront. He walked into the lobby at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday and told the startled receptionist: "I'm Charles Glass. I need a place to hide."

The former hostage said he doubted that Iran had allowed him to escape, as has been theorized in Washington and Damascus, although he acknowledged it was possible because of improved U.S.-Syrian relations.

Eight other Americans are held hostage in Beirut, including another U.S. journalist, Terry Anderson.

Lubbock cattleman facing $13 million suit by bank

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — First National Bank of Amarillo officials have filed a lawsuit against prominent cattleman Jim Kassahn, claiming he acquired a $13 million loan using cattle he did not own as collateral.

Judge Jair P. Dowell of 108th state District Court has granted First National a temporary restraining order and set a hearing on an injunction request at 1:30 p.m. Friday in 47th state District Court in Amarillo.

The suit filed last Wednesday claims that Kassahn, a director of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, misrepresented his ownership of 37,000 head of cattle.

First National, contending Kassahn did not abide by his loan requirements, declared the loan in default and is calling in the $12.75 million that remains due, court records show.

Kassahn sits on the board of directors at American State Bank in Lubbock. Calls made by The Associated Press to his home in Lubbock were unanswered Tuesday.

First National also is seeking to prevent sale of cattle the bank claims is collateral for Kassahn's loan.

The bank claims the loan was made after Kassahn claimed the firm he owns with his wife, Paula, J.P.'s Family Inc., owned the 37,000 head of cattle.

To verify ownership, a First National official visited the feedlot Aug. 11 and was told that Kassahn had an interest in only 16,000 head of cattle in his feedlot.

The bank learned that the cattle in question were held jointly by a partnership of Kassahn and two other businessmen.

Kassahn attributed the reduction of 21,000 head to a legitimate, contracted sale, but First National claims that is not true, according to court documents.

Kassahn, who owns a feedlot near Lazbuddie, told First National when he sought the $13 million loan last December that he owned about 57,000 head of pasture cattle valued at more than $17.8 million and 5,600 feedlot cattle worth $3.4 million.

In an inventory count prior to the inspection by the bank two weeks ago, Kassahn told First National that cattle totals had increased giving him a collateral base of $35.1 million, plus another $1.1 million in assets at J.P.'s Family Inc. unrelated to cattle.

In the past, Kassahn had borrowed from American State Bank, court documents show. But he went to First National because he needed a line of credit larger than what he could get, according to federal law, as a director of the Lubbock institution.

Third convoy sets sail for gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The third convoy of American-flagged Kuwaiti tankers set sail for the Persian Gulf today, accompanied by U.S. Navy warships and a fast patrol boat filled with armed American soldiers, shipping sources said.

The convoy set sail before dawn, and by 7:30 a.m. it had traveled more than halfway through the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow gateway to the gulf. The sources said the three warships and four tankers cruised past batteries of Iranian anti-ship missiles and were near Iran's Qeshm island, another base for missiles, this morning.

On Tuesday, Iranian commandos in speedboats fired on a Liberian-flag tanker in the Strait of Hormuz, causing minor damage to the vessel. Iran, which has fought Iraq in a 7-year-war and accuses Kuwait of aiding its enemy, has threatened to attack the U.S. convoys.

The convoy moved in a single file today led by a supertanker and a frigate, and it included a large vessel topped by "what looked like aircraft hangars," the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

A U.S. Navy fast patrolboat with armed men on board scouted near the ships, the shipping experts said.

In Kuwait, officials of the state Kuwait Oil Tanker Company confirmed that three of their reflagged tankers had started the journey through the gulf, which is about 40 miles wide.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified the ships as the supertanker Townsend and the gas carriers Gas Queen and Gas Princess.

Shipping sources said another tanker, the Middleton, was also part of the convoy, but the Kuwaiti company did not confirm their report.

Since President Reagan agreed to reflag and escort 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from Iranian attack, two convoys have sailed north through the gulf. A supertanker in the first convoy, the Bridgeton, hit a mine near an Iranian island about 120 miles from Kuwait. The Pentagon accused Iran of setting the mine.

The second convoy finished loading oil off Kuwait Saturday, and has been preparing for its return voyage.

Shipping agents at the United Arab Emirates ports of Fujairah and Khor Fakkan, where the first convoys assembled, insisted they knew nothing about any preparations for the surprise convoy. They said the tankers must have grouped two or three days ago well south of the Gulf of Oman, where several mines have been discovered in the past week.

CARBAJAL

"The issue of witchcraft and the facts of the case created by the involvement of the parties is important," he said. Smith argued that his client did not blame everything on the victim but said that the events were a result of their relationship.

"He never said the assault was her fault. He admitted he busted her lip," Smith said. "He is not blaming her but merely reacting to her actions."

Smith admitted that the facts surrounding the actual shooting were not in dispute but advised jurors, "You can and should look at former provocation."

He reminded jurors of testimony that Marina gave the gun to Carbajal as an early Christmas present and said, "It is passing strange that she would give him a gun and ask that he use it to end their relationship. Put yourself in his shoes and ask 'Why would my wife do this?'"

A witness for the prosecution, Mike Ahrens of the Hereford Police Department, testified that Carbajal had told him a conflicting story about the origin of the gun.

Ahrens testified that Carbajal told him the gun was stolen during a burglary of the Chester Harrison residence. Ahrens said Carbajal claimed that he, Marina and her brother, Alex, had burglarized the home and that Carbajal provided information which led to the recovery of a television, taken in the burglary, which he had sold.

The district attorney said, "I submit to you that shows just what a liar he (Carbajal) is. He admitted he lied during previous cases and said he lied to protect her (Marina) but he wouldn't lie to protect himself."

Relaying events in the couples' lives from their childhood infatuation to the time of the shooting, Smith told jurors that the Carbajals, who married just months before Marina's death, were passionately in love.

He told jurors that whether or not Marina and Tamez actually practiced witchcraft (Tamez testified she did not) was not an issue but that Carbajal's belief that they did combined with his passion for Marina led him to kill her in a moment of temporary insanity or an act of passion.

"They were children growing into an adult world and not understanding the responsibilities," said Smith. "The practice of witchcraft, which he did not like, compounded by her admission of self-aborting his child and flushing it down the toilet, compounded by her unfaithfulness, created their problems, which became a double-edged sword which reached the point both were getting cut."

Smith reminded jurors that Carbajal testified that Marina told him she wanted him to use the gun and kill himself and taunted him that if he wasn't man enough to kill himself she would kill him.

"He thought she would use witchcraft and I submit this took him to a boiling point," Smith said.

"Chapter after chapter of Florentino and Marina Carbajal's lives have been written," Smith said. "In some ways it is a happy story because of their love, but in other ways sad because of hardships they endured and because of the hardship of living without her he will carry the rest of his life."

The jury wrote the final chapter of the story of Marina's life, in Smith's words, with their conviction and maximum sentencing of Florentino Carbajal for her murder.

Some law enforcement officers and judicial system employees predict that Carbajal will serve only a third, or less, of the 99-year sentence, and when he gets out, Cristella Ramirez says she will be waiting for him.

When she met Carbajal, Ramirez was being held in Deaf Smith County Jail on two cases of injury to a child. The two formed a friendship and began passing notes back and forth, according to Ramirez.

Their relationship developed into a romance, she says, and was discovered when Laura Shepard, a jailer, caught Carbajal passing a note.

"There were several notes between them," Shepard says. "The basic content was how much they loved each other and the hardship of being separated as well as plans for the future."

Ramirez admits that their relationship became general knowledge when a comment she made to her husband about the possibility of getting pregnant in jail was reported to Jail Administrator David Castillo.

"David Castillo questioned me about the remark," Ramirez says, "and I admitted that Florentino and I had had intercourse."

She says the couple would leave GED and AA classes offered for prisoners and meet in the shower where they established a more intimate relationship.

Ramirez is on probation now and says she will wait for Carbajal. "I know I love him. He tells me he doesn't remember anything about the night Marina died and I believe him."

Railroad history seen in Galveston

To tell the story of a giant railroad, you need a giant exhibit and plenty of space.

So the Galveston Railroad Museum has set aside 365 feet of track in its depot and 1,250 square feet of gallery space for a special exhibit on the Union Pacific Railroad.

Beginning with a massive locomotive and freight cars, the Union Pacific exhibit also includes wall-sized display panels, movies, slide shows and exhibits that tell the 136-year history of the giant railroad.

The Union Pacific is a 22,000-mile rail system that serves 21 states from Illinois to Oregon and Washington in the north, and from Texas and Louisiana to California in the south.

The Railroad Museum will feature the Union Pacific Railroad in its exhibits and programs through Labor Day.

Already the largest collection of restored rail cars, locomotives and railroad artifacts in the Southwest, the museum has designated a full gallery and one of its five depot tracks to the Union Pacific.

Inside the museum, visitors eavesdrop on conversations of travelers in the old 1930s passenger depot.

Other tracks contain restored Pullman cars, steam and diesel locomotives, exhibit cars, freight cars and a restaurant inside two restored dining cars.

The museum, located at the corner of Strand and 25th Streets in The Strand Historic District, is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week. Tickets for admission to the museum are $4 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and $2 for children, ages 4 through 12. Children under 4 are free.

For information about the Union Pacific exhibit or other exhibits at the Railroad Museum, call (409)765-5700.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 24, been married eight months and have had sex with only one person, my husband. (I'll call him Brad.)

Brad and I enjoyed romantic evenings (and even some nights), but I decided to save myself for marriage. If all this sounds super-moral or an unusual amount of self-control let me assure you that you are giving me more credit than I deserve. I never really wanted to go all the way because I wasn't that turned on.

Our wedding night was no big deal. I faked excitement I didn't feel. Frankly, I thought it would get better in time, but it didn't. I finally decided to go to a gynecologist and find out if something was wrong with me.

When the doctor told me I had a hooded clitoris I didn't know what he was talking about. I'd never heard of such a thing. (It's a layer of skin over the most sensitive part of a woman's genitalia that prevents her from feeling very much.) The doctor removed the skin in just a few minutes. No pain except a few seconds when he injected novocaine. He said I'd be "a different woman" in a few days.

Ann, I couldn't believe it. I'm enjoying Brad in a way I never dreamed possible. Need I tell you that he is thrilled?

It's almost like a miracle. I'm writing because I've never seen this topic mentioned in your column, and I want to share my discovery with all the women who may need this little surgical correction and not know it. I'll sign my letter—Joy Unlimited in Santa Monica

DEAR JOY: I have discussed this problem in the column before, but it's been a long time and I'm sure I've added some new readers since then. Thanks for giving me an opportunity to improve the quality of life for a number of people.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Half the summer is gone but there are still several weeks of vacation left for millions of people all over the country.

For teenagers, summer means swimming, trips and freedom from school. For those of us on the staff of the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, summer means a tragic increase in admissions of young people whose lives will never be the same. Most of them will be permanently disabled because of accidents that could have been avoided.

More than 70 percent of the cases we see are the result of preventable accidents. Every summer dozens of swimmers misjudge the depth of the lake or the pool. They dive in shallow water and break their necks. To spend the rest of one's life in a wheelchair is a big price to pay for a moment of thoughtlessness.

This summer we encourage the nation's youth to enjoy their time off and have fun, but be careful. Never drink and drive. Obey the speed limit. Don't show off when you are behind the wheel. We are proud of our leadership role in rebuilding the lives of those who have become physically disabled, but we would rather that the job did not have to be done at all.

Every patient we see says, "I never believed this could happen to me." But it did.—Henry B. Betts, M.D., Northwestern University, chief executive officer and medical director, Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago

DEAR HENRY: As a member of your board for nearly 15 years I can only say thanks for the splendid job you do. I hope your letter will result in a dramatic reduction in the number of admissions in August. I never walk in or out of the Rehab without saying a prayer for the disabled.

Strikes out nine for Astros

Ryan bests Cardinals 4-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Veteran right-hander Nolan Ryan knows how to beat the speedy National League East leading St. Louis Cardinals. Ryan knows that first of all you have to keep them off the bases. He managed to do that Tuesday night as he pitched a three-hitter for seven innings to pick up his first victory since June 12, a 4-0 victory over St. Louis. It was the fifth straight win for the streaking Astros. Ryan, the all-time leading strikeout pitcher in major league baseball with 4,467, struck out nine Cardinals while walking only two and not allowing a hit until a two-out single by catcher Tony Pena with two outs in the fifth inning. "I had a good, live fast ball," said Ryan. "But the key was getting all three of my pitches over the plate tonight and I knew I was going to have to keep them off the bases. That is the way to beat those guys." Vince Coleman, the National League's leading base stealer with 81, struck out three times against Ryan, 5-13. "A walk to Coleman is as good as a double or triple," said Ryan. "Nolan was outstanding and at age 40, he is still a power pitcher," said Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog. "When he can control all of his pitches like he did tonight, he can beat anybody." "Credit Nolan Ryan tonight. You aren't going to beat him with the stuff he has," said Cardinals third baseman Terry Pendleton. The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning on a leadoff double by second baseman Bill Doran and a towering homer over the right field wall by catcher Alan Ashby, his 12th of the year. Ashby also drove in an insurance run in the eighth inning as did shortstop Craig Reynolds in the seventh inning for the final margin. Ashby's heroics made a loser of Cardinals starter Danny Cox, 8-4. Ashby now has a career high 55 RBI.

Houston Cougars' coach emphasizes defense

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Amidst all the talk about the University of Houston's run-and-shoot offense, Coach Jack Pardee would like to squeeze in a few words about defense. "Winning is a team proposition," said Pardee, preparing for his first season as head coach with the Cougars. "We know some good things are going to happen with our offense. "But every week down the line, we're going to be facing Texas A&M or Baylor or the like and our defense is going to have to get the ball back. "If the offense is playing against a good defense, our defense is going to have to pick it up." Pardee, who pioneered the wide-open offensive concept as head coach of the USFL Houston Gamblers, has brought along former Gambler assistant John Jenkins to operate the offense. The Cougars, who dipped to 1-10 last season, also have 10 offense and eight defensive starters returning and a new depth chart at quarterback. David Dacus, who transferred from Cisco Junior College and took part in spring drills, already likes to run-and-shoot. "The hardest part is deciding who to throw to because somebody is always open," Dacus said. "The biggest problem I had in the spring was trying to go deep all the time because it's always there. "You get so excited, but you have to calm down and nickel and dime them every once in awhile." The Cougars played last season under the cloud of an NCAA investigation, which still is on-going based on alleged payments to players. "We spent the first spring training evaluating the players that were here in Bill Yeoman's scheme and seeing how they would fit into ours," Jenkins said. In addition to the returnees, the Cougars also dipped into the junior college ranks in hopes of speeding the rebuilding program. Ed Powers, a 6-7, 220 quarterback from Pasco, Wash., and transfer receivers Edgar Cash and Jason Phillips, won't be available until fall practice. "You can build with freshmen all the way and take your lickings or you can try to get some things accomplished right away," Jenkins said. "That's what we've decided to do." Sloan Hood, the Cougars leading rusher last season, will be the Superback in the new system. Jet Brown, the team's top receiver last year, will be one of the slot backs. If the new offense is slow to take hold, Pardee is hoping the defense will help out. The defense also has changed to a 4-3 from Yeoman's 5-2. Glenn Montgomery has moved from nose guard to defensive tackle and will anchor the line. Linebackers Gary McGuire and Robert Harper also return along with safety Randy Thornton. The Cougars open their season Sept. 12 against Oklahoma State in the Astrodome.

Rangers beat Royals 3-1

Hough earns 13th victory

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers' Charlie Hough earned his 13th victory with a career-high 13 strikeouts but had to sweat it to the very end. It took Larry Parrish's two-run homer off Kansas City's Mark Gubicza with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning Tuesday night for a 3-1 Rangers' victory, snapping a three-game losing streak. Hough, who made 154 pitches in the stifling heat, was exhausted. "It was one of those games where you had to be bearing down every inch of the way because it didn't look like we were going to get much," Hough said. "With big league hitters, you have to keep from throwing the same pitch because no matter how good it moves, they time it and then they whack it." Hough said he wasn't discouraged with the Rangers trailing 1-0 going into the ninth. Kevin Seitzer had a sixth-inning homer for the Royals. "I felt if we could just get a man on we might pop one and, 'bingo', there it was," Hough said. Parrish said it wasn't easy.

"It was the best I've ever seen Gubicza pitch," Parrish said. "He was tough, throwing a fastball away, a good sinker and a slider. I couldn't touch him. I think I hit a slider." Gubicza dropped to 9-13 with the loss. A walk and a Pete O'Brien double tied the game but Manager Billy Gardner stayed with Gubicza. "It was tough for anybody to lose that game the way it was pitched. I left Mark in there because he was pitching so well. He had handled Parrish all night," Gardner said. It was 100 degrees at game time and Gubicza used 131 pitches. He struck out nine and allowed only five hits while Hough scattered five hits. The Royals' outfield did not record a putout or an assist, tying the major league record in a nine-inning game. The feat has been accomplished many times in both leagues. "Both pitchers threw an outstanding game," O'Brien said. "It's nice that our pitcher finally came out on top." Hough is now 13-6 lifetime against Kansas City and 3-0 in 1987. "I had good success all night to Parrish but he finally got a hold of a slider," Gubicza said. "Hough pitched great. I felt I did my job but I guess that wasn't good enough."

Aggies aim to continue Cotton Bowl tradition

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The Texas Aggies have represented the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl the past two seasons and Coach Jackie Sherrill would like to continue the tradition. But he believes it will take some growing up for the 1987 Aggies, who will be rebuilding from major graduation losses. "We're approaching this as a fresh start," Sherrill said. "The recruiting class of four years ago took us to the Cotton Bowl twice. "Now we've got to make a fresh start. We have some good veterans and some young people who are going to be good." The Aggies open the season against Louisiana State and Washington and also play Southern Mississippi before getting into SWC games. "We could be good by then or wishing we could start all over somewhere," Sherrill said. "We will not be like we were last year. "We had a good team, an outstanding football team, two years ago. Last year we had a good football team. This year, we have the capabilities of building ourselves back up." Quarterback Kevin Murray, running back Roger Vick and tight end Rod Bernstine were key offensive losses. Murray, who passed for a league-record 48 touchdown passes in his Aggie career, will be replaced by senior Craig Stump and budding star Lance Pavlas. Vick, a first-round draft pick of the New York Jets, will leave the running spotlight for Keith Woodside, a versatile performer last season. Woodside needs 21 receptions this season to become the Aggies' all-time leading receiver. He set a SWC record of 12 receptions for a running back in one game last season. "Stump is a five-year player who has lined up and played, and he's won some big games for us," Sherrill said. "Pavlas has a chance to be outstanding, but if he takes Stump's job we'll win a lot of ball games because Craig won't give up his job easily."

Defensively, Sherrill must replace seven starters, including his entire linebacking corps. The group included six four-year lettermen. But the Aggies are not without talent and Sherrill isn't anticipating a collapse. "The question is, how quickly, can this team mesh together and what kind of leadership do we have?" Sherrill asked. Sherrill reels off the names of some of the newcomers. John Roper, Dana Batiste, Tim Landrum and Basil Jackson are the new linebackers. "You're talking about some good players, they just haven't lined up every day yet," Sherrill said. Middle guard Sammy O'Brien is the lone returning defensive lineman. Safeties Chet Brooks and Kip Corrington and cornerback Alex Morris also return. Four-fifths of the Aggies starting offensive line returns and Sherrill says the Aggies will be faster at the skill positions. Guards Trace McGuire and Jerry Fontenot, center Matt Wilson and tackle Louis Cheek are offensive line returnees along with split end Rod Harris and kicker Scott Slater. Slater hit 21 of 27 field goals last season and became the first kicker in SWC history to score 100 points. "We're going to be able to put more speed at the skill positions than we've ever had here," Sherrill said. "Our problem will be youth and maturing."

Fifteen district championships in school history

HHS has had at least 20 head grid coaches

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles on Hereford High School football history. Part I deals with the head coaches and their records at HHS.

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

At least 20 coaches have directed Hereford High School football teams through the years, with current head Coach Don Cumpton having the best winning percentage for those who coached more than one season.

Cumpton, who was head coach from 1978 to 1982 and returned to Hereford last year after three years at Abilene High School, has a 49-18-1 record in his six seasons at Hereford High School.

Cumpton's winning percentage is .731. His record includes a 24-7 home record (.774) and a 26-11-1 road record (.702). His record includes a 22-9-1 district record (.742), a 21-7 non-district record (.750) and a 6-2 playoff record (.750).

Coach Cumpton's 49 wins rank him second for all-time victories among HHS head coaches. Tom McCollum, who directed the Whitefaces from 1928 to 1939, had 74 wins, plus 36 losses and six ties.

McCollum, whose winning percentage was .670, had a 12-5-2 playoff record (.706). The playoff system was different in McCollum's day than it is in Cumpton's day.

After qualifying for the playoffs under McCollum, the Whitefaces would play a district sectional game or a district semifinal game first. Then the district championship game would be played.

The farthest a team could advance in the playoffs was a regional championship game. Through the years, Hereford High School has claimed district championships 15 times.

Hereford High School's first district championship was in Mc-

Collum's first year as head coach, in 1928. Other titles won by teams under McCollum included district and bi-district championships in 1929, district championship in 1934, and district and bi-district titles in 1935.

Other district championships in Hereford High School football history have been these: 1940 under Coach Mac Best; 1941 under Coach Logan Ware; 1942, 1944, 1945 and 1946 under Coach H.V. Stanton; 1950 under Coach Dalton Criswell; 1968 under Coach Larry Wartes; 1971 and 1973 under Coach Larry Dippel; and 1981 under Coach Cumpton.

The Whitefaces were co-champions in their districts in some of those seasons. A bi-district title was achieved in 1973, and bi-district and regional titles were won in 1942, 1971, 1981, and 1986.

Hereford won state quarterfinal games in 1981 and 1986 under Cump-ton. Last year's team went into the playoffs as the second place team from District 1-4A.

In addition to Cumpton and McCollum, others who were head coaches at Hereford High School

HHS football research update

Since the first article in the series on Hereford High School football history was written, some additional information was obtained.

Brand sports editor Gary Christensen came across three HHS yearbooks - 1916, 1925 and 1926.

The 1926 yearbook, of course, included the 1925 season, for which Christensen already had a complete record.

The 1925 yearbook enabled a near-complete record to be made of the 1924 season. An addition game was found, a Thanksgiving Day loss to Plainview, and the whole name of the coach was found - D.C. Arthur.

That additional game makes the all-time record against Plainview 10-19, and the record for all HHS football games 373-276-24. The only information missing now from the 1924 season is whether the Thanksgiving game was played in Hereford or Plainview.

The 1916 yearbook did not have a complete list of the football scores for the 1915 season, but Christensen felt before that he had a complete record of the games.

The photo of the football team had one adult in it - superintendent B.M. Harrison, who apparently did coach the team.

Anyone who has a copy of the 1928 HHS yearbook and any other yearbooks from years before 1928, is urged to contact Christensen at the Brand.

more than one season and had winning percentages better than .650 have been: J. Forrest Riggs, 15-6-1 (.714), 1925-27; Jerry Taylor, 21-10 (.709), 1983-85; and Dippel, 29-15-1 (.659), 1971-74.

Ware and Best each were head coach just one season. Ware's winning percentage with a 7-2-1 record in 1941 was .778, and Best's winning percentage with an 8-3 record in 1940 was .727.

Taylor had the top winning percentage in home games - .800 with a 12-3 record. For coaches with more than one season at HHS, the best road records have been Dippel's 17-7 record (.708) and Cumpton's 26-11-1 record (.702).

Four coaches - again with more than one season at HHS - have had winning percentages better than .700 in district games: McCollum, 31-9-2 (.775); Taylor, 18-6 (.750); Cumpton, 22-9-1 (.742); and Stanton, 27-10 (.729).

For non-district games, Cumpton's record of 21-7 has the best winning percentage, .750.

For a detailed record for all Hereford High School head coaches, see the chart on this page. The 1915 coach, B.M. Harrison, was also the school superintendent.

In 1919 and 1920, the Whiteface team had a pair of coaches, Ray Terry and Cliff Acker. Neither was designated as head coach, but one was the offensive coach and the other was the defensive coach.

The head coaches for the 1911, 1912 and 1914 seasons were not determined in sources available for research.

NEXT TIME: A closer look at the Hereford High School football history for the seasons that the teams qualified for playoff games.

Horned Frog fans say yes

Will TCU emerge in SWC?

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Nine months ago, Texas Christian ended a dismal, scandal-scarred football season as a 7-10 patsy for Texas A&M's Cotton Bowl-bound rowdies. It was an Aggie joke run amok.

The Horned Frogs, if not clinically dead, were mortally wounded.

But wait! With the irrepressible Jim Wacker entering the fifth year of his roller-coaster career, TCU fans insist the Frogs could once again emerge as the Cinderella team of the Southwest Conference.

"It can be done," said defensive tackle Kent Tramel, a member of the Miracle '84 team and one of three TCU veterans who sat out the 1986 campaign to play their final collegiate season this year.

"We've had talent in spots before, but I think our experience this year is going to make a difference," he said. "I have no doubts that we will win our share of football games."

Despite the adversity of the last two seasons, 1987 is the year Wacker has been pointing toward.

He's got 23 regulars returning, a proven quarterback in Scott Ankrum, a premier running back in Tony Jeffery and a couple of new coaches to add an exciting wrinkle to the offense and a bit of aggression to the defense.

Says Wacker:

"It's time to put all the garbage from the last couple of years behind us, move on and start winning again...and I think we will."

Says offensive tackle Brian Brazil:

"I think the situation at TCU is going to be better than it ever has been...from top to bottom."

And Scott Ankrum: "We're expected to win. There's definitely more experience on this team now. The people that experienced that (8-3) 1984 situation want to get back into it."

End David Spradlin on the 4-3 defensive alignment brought in by new defensive coordinator Rick Johnson:

"Everybody is excited. It's an aggressive defense and it's going to match our best against everybody else's best. And that's what makes football fun."

Wacker's got a superb receiving troika in tight end Ricky Stone, split end Reggie Davis and flanker Jarrod Delaney, who combine to give the Frogs' new dropback passing game a special dimension.

"No question, it should prove to be a major plus for our offense," he said.

But, he added, "Despite all the good things we had happen at running back, at the receiving spots, and with the quarterbacks, our line still was the most encouraging thing, offensively, of the spring."

He listed overall quality and depth as the biggest plus.

"For the first time, we have quality athletes two or three deep at practically every position," he said. "Also, this team has grown up and discovered that it's not so bad to work hard."

He said the defense needed to improve and he believes it will.

"We shouldn't be fighting with a short stick this season because we have proven players like Kent Tramel, David Spradlin, Tracy Simien and Falanda Newton.

"Our line should be our most solid area, but we were pleased with what we saw in our linebackers and secondary during the spring."

In the end, it could be the fragile legs of Scott Ankrum that determine the degree of TCU's success, since he is the "straw that stirs the drink."

In a lyrical but valid assessment, the TCU press brochure says:

"He stirs it with his swift, elusive running style, with a solid throwing arm and an electrifying scrambling ability, and with the cool and daring of a trapeze artist in handling the endless option decisions of TCU's Veer and Wishbone attacks."

All that on the legs of a kildeer.

TEXANS REAP MANY BENEFITS FROM H&R BLOCK TAX COURSE

Many successful Punahoa tax preparers have begun their careers by enrolling in the H&R Block Income Tax Course.

H&R Block has been teaching income tax preparation for more than 30 years. This year the Income Tax Course starts on September 9; morning and evening classes are available at over 7 Punahoa locations. Classes will introduce participants to the new tax reform laws for 1987.

Students may take the H&R Block course to get a new job or to advance in their present position. They look at the course as a good way to pick up or polish up tax return preparation skills. The 13-week course progresses from simple to complex tax problems. Students learn through a combination of classroom discussion, hands-on problem solving, and homework.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many Block employees find the flexible scheduling a real benefit. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are the graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes all materials, supplies, and textbooks. Successful graduates receive a Certificate of Achievement and 7.5 continuing education units.

Registration forms for the income tax course may be obtained by calling H&R Block at Amurillo 373-8777.

Parents are most important guides

Parents are probably the most important teachers their children will ever have, according to the new president of the National PTA.

"One parent is worth a thousand teachers," says Manya Ungar of Scotch Plains, N.J. "Studies indicate overwhelmingly that students do better academically when parents closely monitor their progress and their general whereabouts."

Children aren't the only ones who benefit from parent involvement, according to Bessie McLemore, principal of Atlanta's Fulton High School and the 1987 National PTA Outstanding Educator of the Year.

"Parents support us, encourage us, and help us get things accomplished for the school and children," McLemore says, adding that at her school, "even if the parents themselves didn't do well in school, they still show up to help their children succeed."

With 56 percent of all women working outside the home, the educator notes, today's parents have a limited amount of free time "but the impact of their influence on educational achievement remains the same."

Ungar says there has been a trend toward increased parent participation in education, pointing out that membership in the National PTA has grown for five consecutive years to a total of 6.1 million.

"We've found that parents see the PTA as a partner to help them participate in their children's schooling and upbringing," says the organization's head.

"Just as networking is important in business, it is necessary for parents to have a network as well. The PTA provides parents with a network of equally concerned members on the local, state and national levels, and a wealth of resource material."

One such resource provided members, she explains, is the "Parent Involvement Guide" which helps parents learn how to become more involved in their children's education, how to be school volunteers and supporters, and participate in the school's decision-making process.

Among its suggestions, the guide tells how parents can establish a homework routine by setting a regular time and place for children to do their studying at home.

Adults can help students with their homework without actually doing it for them by reading directions aloud or asking children to read them, the guide says. They can then make sure the directions are being followed.

If there are problems, parents can demonstrate one example, do the next one together, then have their children try one alone.

On April 12, 1776, North Carolina became the first colony to instruct its delegates to vote for independence in the Continental Congress.

Helping At Jubilee of Arts

Even youngsters got in the act of helping with arts and crafts displays during the recent Jubilee of Arts held in the Community Center. A number of booths displayed a variety of knick knacks for all to see during the annual Town 'n' Country Jubilee. The Hereford Fine Arts Association sponsored the Jubilee of Arts.

August rebates may support March of Dimes

Through August, consumers who purchase Johnson's odor-eaters products will have the option of receiving a $1.50 rebate themselves or donating it to the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation.
 Rebates apply to Sneaker-Tamers, Super-Tuff, Ultra-Comfort or Work-Tuff insoles featured in local Revco, Eckerd's Walgreens and K-Mart Stores.

COMBE, INC., manufacturer of Odor-Eaters has donated $50,000 to the March of Dimes to further programs of research, education and health services for the prevention of birth defects.

"We hope consumers will join us in the fight against birth defects by checking the March of Dimes box on their rebate slip," said Ivan D. Combe, founder and chairman of COMBE, Inc. "Public support of the March of Dimes will help assure healthier births for future generations."

Consumers who donate their rebate will receive an acknowledgement from COMBE on behalf of the March of Dimes.

According to U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates, the job classification with the most openings likely between now and 1990 is that of computer service technician.

Exam set for cosmetology

A pre-entrance exam for the cosmetology program at South Plains College will be given at 9 a.m. Sept. 21 in the SPC Student Assistance Center.
 Fee is $5.
 The pre-entrance test is required of all students who wish to enroll in the one-year cosmetology program offered by SPC, according to Pinny Jacquez, SPC counselor.

Additional exams will be given. For more information, contact Carolyn Newkirk, SPC cosmetology instructor, or the SPC counseling office at (806)894-9611.

HOLD THE CRITICISM

By Bob Wear

There is a type of criticism that is helpful and altogether appropriate. It is "the art of judging with knowledge and propriety the beauties and faults of works of art, literature, etc." This, however, is not the 'criticism with which we are concerned in this writing. We are referring to 'criticism' of other people, the practice of picking flaws and finding faults. Have you ever thought of the enormous amount of this kind of 'criticism' that is spoken each day? How much good do you suppose it accomplishes? How much harm is done?

Critical thinking is essential to effective living, and is used for making evaluations and for making choices. It must not dominate our thinking to the extent of controlling our speech. We must learn to deal with people honorably without their knowing about the 'criticism'. This is not hypocrisy, but is basic in treating others as we wish to be treated, with a high degree of kindness and understanding. We must not permit the 'criticism' to prevent our dealing with others on a congenial and productive basis. There is much more to people than that about which we may be critical. Of course, all of us have flaws about which others can be justifiably critical of us.

We will know what is going on, we will know the score; and know the people with whom we have some kind of associations, and this will include our critical evaluations. We must, however, for the good of all, be able to isolate the 'criticisms' in our mental storehouse so that they do not exert themselves. If we freely express our 'criticisms' of others, we will impair our personal effectiveness and damage our interactions with other people.

Criticism of others is usually on the down side, it is not encouraging, not uplifting, not helpful. More often than not it establishes barriers between us and others, and destroys what otherwise could be a pleasant and beneficial association. We never build ourselves up by tearing others down.

Here is a question to be answered by the working mother in a family relationship

"What if something happened to me?"

"I realize that managing a career in the business and professional world, being a mother with specific family responsibilities, and working to establish a loving relationship within the home put a burden on me. After thinking things through, I became concerned. I decided to make a will and bought life insurance. Also, I pre-arranged my funeral at Rix Funeral Directors. Although the occasion may be a long time away, one never knows.

"I do know that my family will be spared the burdens of planning and paying for my funeral. My desires and wishes will be carried out, and I found that pre-arrangement will help me control inflation. That's the reason I suggest that if your family depends on you, consider pre-arrangement.

"Planning for the inevitable is a wise decision because it allows you to make the most of today by eliminating the 'what ifs' of tomorrow."

Why don't you let the folks at Rix help you draw up your pre-arrangement plans?

Call or write Rix Funeral Directors for additional information.

Registration set by ENMU

Eastern New Mexico University will conduct its 1987 fall semester registration on Aug. 24-25 in the College of Business Building. Instruction begins on Aug. 26.

Graduate students and seniors will register first, followed by juniors, sophomores and freshmen. An alphabetical sequence will be used within each classification.

New student activities will be held on Aug. 22-23. Late registration will be permitted from Aug. 26 through Sept. 4 in the Administration Building.

Evening only students may register by mail anytime before Aug. 28, from 5:30-7 p.m. on the evening of their first class, or during regular registration.

For more information, contact the Office of the Registrar at 505-562-2175.

In 1973, the Senate voted 92 to 3 to confirm Gerald Ford as vice-president, replacing Spiro Agnew.

San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk were shot to death in 1978 at city hall by a disgruntled former supervisor.

New engineering programs accredited at area college

Two programs in the Amarillo College Electronics Engineering Technology curriculum have recently received accreditation from the Technology Accreditation Commission of the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology (TAC/ABET). The two programs so awarded are Electronic Engineering Technology-Computer Option, and Electronics Engineering Technology-General Electronics Option.

A massive self study of the academic program was prepared by AC Electronics teaching faculty, according to Program Chairman Dr. A.F. Adkins, for the accreditation process which began in Spring 1986. A TAC/ABET visitation team evaluated the programs on the AC campus during November 1986. Notice of accreditation was received in July 1987.

"The TAC/ABET accreditation will add greatly to the prestige and recognition of Amarillo College graduates of these two options," said Adkins. "This achievement can be considered another milestone in the advancement of high technology for the Texas Panhandle. Some hi-tech companies only hire engineering technicians who are graduates of TAC/ABET programs. Sandia Laboratories is one of these.

"Amarillo College is proud to have pioneered high technology in the Panhandle by establishing the Electronics Program in 1962. The program has earned the recognition and support of local industry. The recent accreditation will be an asset in attracting high technology industry to the Panhandle."

The teaching faculty of the Amarillo College Electronics Program has been a strong drawing card for prospective students. All three full-time faculty hold degrees in electrical engineering. Two are registered as professional engineers. H.N. Lowe served as project engineer for Collins Radio in Dallas before taking up teaching. Jerry Stafford was senior automation engineer with AMOCO Production Company before entering the teaching profession in 1974. Dr.

Adkins was named "Engineer of the Year" by the Panhandle Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers in 1986. Among Adkins' former students are two vice-presidents of Southwestern Public Service Company in Amarillo.

An Industrial Advisory Committee made up of local professionals meets regularly with AC Electronics Department faculty to make suggestions for keeping the academic curriculum up-to-date, according to Adkins. Representatives from Pantex, Southwestern Public Service, Southwestern Bell Telephone, Sandia Laboratories, Northwest Texas Hospital, High Plains Baptist Hospital, and Biomedical Electronics Co., serve in this capacity.

Electronics Engineering Technology is a two-year Associate in Applied Science degree program at Amarillo College. The curriculum consists of a core of first-year courses followed by a particular option of student concentration during the second year. Options include General Electronics Engineering Technology, Biomedical, and Computer.

Big beef changes coming to stores

When it comes to beef, there are big changes at the meat counter—and even more to come, according to meat scientists, producers and retailers.

"Beef products are being produced, packaged and prepared differently to give consumers leaner beef that is quick and convenient to prepare," said Dr. Dan Hale, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service meat scientist, speaking to the 1987 Beef Industry Conference, held Aug. 10 and 11 at Texas A&M University.

Consumer demand for less fat is being met both with leaner beef and beef that has been closely-trimmed, Hale remarked. USDA labels and beef industry "Nutri-Facts" labeling are now available to help consumers identify lower-calorie beef cuts.

"New ways of packaging beef make it a more convenient product for consumers to use," maintained the specialist. "Boned, trimmed cuts packaged for smaller families and singles reduce both preparation and clean-up time. Vacuum packaging of beef roasts and other cuts also extends the refrigerator shelf-life of the meat by seven days."

"For consumers interested in reduced preparation and cooking time, beef already trimmed and cut for stir-fry or shish kabobs and breaded for beef cutlets can be found in the fresh meat case at many grocery stores," he added.

Hale also pointed out that the beef industry has fielded several new products, such as beef bacon, beef strips, and nuggets. These products are made from "restructured" beef, or beef that has been chunked, flaked and then blended back together in various shapes. The process is also being used to make intermediate priced roast beef, beef steaks and chicken fried steaks.

What about future trends at the meat case? Dr. Rod Bowling, vice president of Monfort of Colorado, Inc., told conference participants that branded beef will grow in popularity. Similar to brand-name chicken products, branded beef will provide a consistent, lean-trimmed product for consumers.

William D. Parker, vice president for meat merchandising with the Kroger Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, predicted growth of completely cooked meats and branded pre-packaged fresh meats in grocery stores.

"Families are smaller today, there are many males and females living alone. A need for quick, convenient foods has forced manypeople to restaurants," he observed. "To compete with restaurants, frozen entrees, and fast-food alternatives, we wanted branded, fresh meat entrees, of restaurant quality, never frozen, that could be warmed by the consumer and enjoyed in a matter of minutes."

Parker said the Kroger chain is now carrying a line of 20 completely cooked meats, such as sliced beef au jus, barbecued beef ribs and roasts, in seven major markets, including Dallas and Houston. He projected that completely cooked meats will be a 2 billion dollar business for the chain by 1990.

In addition to items now on the market and those being test-marketed, efforts to develop new or improved beef products are continuing, noted Hale. Texas A&M University meat scientists, for example, are conducting research to find suitable salt and fat replacements for luncheon meats and sausage as well as increasing product applications for restructured beef.

A VARIETY OF PROJECTS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — While do-it-yourselfers in Cincinnati, Kansas City and Louisville were adding decks or patios, their counterparts in Dallas and Phoenix were building shelves.

According to a survey by Payless Cashways Inc., a building materials retailer, the most popular project among do-it-yourselfers varies from city to city.

In Denver and Sacramento, installing fencing topped the list, while in Houston the project most frequently tackled was interior painting.

But nationwide, adding a deck or patio remains the most popular project.

Screwworms sneak in from South

WASHINGTON (AP) — International jet travelers apparently have picked up some hitchhiking screwworms from Latin America lately, prompting the Agriculture Department to hurl millions of sexually sterile screwworm flies against the suspected invaders.

Later this week the first of a new wave of sterile flies will be released in two Southern cities in a biological campaign against screwworms that might have entered the United States from Honduras.

Bert W. Hawkins, head of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said Wednesday that approximately two million sterilized flies will be released twice weekly for about six weeks in areas 20 miles around Panama City, Fla., and New Orleans, La.

The agency will conduct surveillance and public awareness program in the two areas and along Interstate 10 between the two cities.

If screwworms become established in the Southeastern states, it could cost up to $100 million to eradicate them, Hawkins said.

Screwworms are the parasitic larvae or maggots of a blowfly species that feed on the flesh of warmblooded animals. The female fly — about twice the size of an ordinary housefly — lays eggs in an open wound, in which the larvae hatch and grow to about a half-inch long in five to seven days of feeding.

If not treated, the animal can die.

Humans also have been known to be infested by the maggots.

Adult female screwworm flies usually mate only once in their lifetime. Thus, when a natural, fertile female mates with a sterile male, she lays eggs that don't hatch — and no screwworms are produced.

Hawkins said the action was prompted after identification Aug. 5 of screwworms in a dog that passed through the New Orleans International Airport on its way to Florida from Honduras.

"The dog, a Doberman, was picked up at the airport on July 31 and stayed overnight in an outside kennel at a New Orleans motel," Hawkins said. "The next day, the dog traveled by camper to Panama City, Fla., where it was taken to a local veterinarian for treatment of a back wound."

Hawkins said the veterinarian discovered the larvae and informed a state veterinarian, who notified the USDA agency. Samples tested at the department's veterinary laboratory in Ames, Iowa, identified the larvae as screwworms.

The technique of releasing sexually sterile flies has been used successfully since the late 1950s in parts of the Southeast and Southwest. The United States was declared free of screwworms in 1966, although small infestations occurred after that, mostly along the U.S. border with Mexico.

In 1972, a cooperative program was begun with Mexico, and by 1985 screwworms were eliminated from virtually all of that country, Hawkins said.
