City commissioner 'appalled' at sloppy condition of city parks

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Neglect, lack of funds and vandalism have wrecked havoc with our city parks, according to City Commissioner Silvana Juarez.

Juarez says she took a recent tour of the city parks and was appalled by what she found.

"Someone coming from out-of-town and stopping to have a picnic would judge Hereford as a dirty town by the sloppy appearance of our parks," she said.

But it is not the appearance which bothers the commissioner the most. It is safety.

"I have a scar on my leg where I was hurt by faulty equipment in Dameron Park when I was a little girl," she said, adding that she carries a vivid memory of her mother washing the blood off in the wading pool and the water turning red.

Juarez says the equipment in the parks and certain aspects of the parks themselves are a hazard for children and that she is worried.

"In Dameron Park the creek is filthy and the trees are grown up around it. This is hazardous because a child cannot see the creek is there and could fall in and really get hurt."

City Manager Darwin McGill agrees with Juarez that the parks need some attention. He says the city has $164,698 budgeted for maintenance of the parks and that new playground equipment will be purchased this winter as tax receipts fill the city coffers to meet budget demands.

The City of Hereford owns 13 parks for a total of 526.5 acres, including the 277-acre John Pitman Golf Course, which has its own $156,690 budget.

Two full-time and two part-time parks employees along with two full-time Community Center employees and six part-time swimming pool employees are paid out of the parks budget.

The golf course budget covers five full-time and three part-time employees. According to McGill the city's biggest problem is not neglecting the parks or even access to funds but vandalism. An accounting provided by parks manager Johnny Carr shows equipment in the parks disappears almost as fast as it is put out.

This year the city has ordered $1,180 of parts for the numerous swing sets, according to Carr. Of 12 nursery swing seats placed in the parks, one is left. Of 11 swings for older children, only six remain. Five of 13 aluminum picnic tables remain, at a cost of $297 each. Charcoal grills for cooking areas cost $104 each and five of 10 placed in the parks this year are already gone.

Two attempted suicides reported

Two incidences of attempted suicide were treated at Deaf Smith General Hospital on Friday night, according to officers of the Hereford Police Department.

A 29-year-old male attempted suicide by ingesting some unknown type of medication. He was taken to the hospital by private conveyance. The victim of a second suicide attempt was transported to the hospital by ambulance. She is a 33-year-old woman who also attempted suicide by ingesting an overdose of medication.

Also on Friday, officers responded to two reports of assault involving a domestic violence situation. No charges were filed. A third incident of domestic violence was reported as false imprisonment.

Disorderly conduct was reported in the 300 block of Bradley and the 600 block of East Park Avenue and criminal mischief involving damage to the door and window of a vehicle was reported in the 400 block of North 25 Mile Ave.

Two vehicles were burglarized. A purse was taken from a vehicle parked in the 800 block of Miles and a portable stereo and purse were taken from a vehicle in the 100 block of Sunset.

A prowler was reported in the 400 block of Bradley and theft was reported in the 600 block of North 25 Mile Ave.

Nine citations were issued and two accidents, one with possible injuries, were investigated. The Hereford Fire Department was dispatched to South U.S. Hwy 385 at Coronado Acres in response to a reported accident with injuries.

Grand jury indicts 11

11 persons were indicted Thursday by the 22nd District Court in Hereford.

Indictments included: Rigoberto DeLeon, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon; Manuel Rodriguez, driving while intoxicated;

Albert Gonzales, taking a controlled substance into a jail;

Jimmy Leon Weathers, bond jumping and failure to appear;

Bill Harbison, criminal non-support;

Jimmy Madrigal, indecency with a child;

Juan M. Montalvo, delivery of marijuana, under four ounces.

Four other persons were also indicted. Their names were withheld because they are still at-large.

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. warships guided three Kuwaiti tankers safely into home waters and prepared to link up with four other loaded tankers for a return trip through the Persian Gulf.

The Pentagon, meanwhile, said it was combining all U.S. military units in the gulf area in a new task force, and Saudi Arabia reportedly agreed to provide expanded landing rights and refueling support for U.S. aircraft.

In another development, the Soviet Union accused the Reagan administration of "artificially whipping up" tension in the gulf.

Shipping experts said they were surprised to learn that three reflagged tankers escorted by U.S. warships reached Kuwait Friday. The experts had reported earlier that high winds had stalled the convoy in the Persian Gulf.

"They pulled the wool over everyone's eyes again," one source said. "They used the bad weather and thick dust storms to slip away unnoticed."

The 294,739-ton supertanker Townsend and the twin liquefied gas carriers Gas Queen and Gas Princess, both 46,723 tons, entered Kuwaiti waters at 5:30 p.m. local Friday, the Pentagon said. The tankers were escorted by the destroyer USS Kidd and the frigates Hawes and Klakring.

The convoy was the third to reach Kuwait under President Reagan's plan to protect 11 Kuwaiti tankers from Iranian attack by registering them under the U.S. flag and giving them armed escort for the 550-mile voyage through the gulf.

Both Iran and Iraq have attacked foreign merchant ships in their 7-year-old war. Iran has targeted Kuwait, which it considers an ally of Iraq.

Kassahn suit has local connection

A Texas Panhandle cattleman, accused of defrauding First National Bank of Amarillo to gain a $13-million loan, had listed a Deaf Smith County feedlot as the location of a major portion of his cattle.

A state district judge Friday appointed a receiver to oversee the assets of Jim Kassahn. The cattle in question are located in Kassahn's feedlot in Lazbuddie and Barrett-Crofoot feedyard in Deaf Smith County. Jim Clements, a financial consultant in Amarillo, was appointed to oversee Kassahn's cattle interests.

First National Bank attorneys argued during the hearing Friday that a receiver was needed to oversee and administer assets that are in question. Other attorneys representing an interest in the case objected with the scope of the receiver's role. The judge set a hearing for 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in 108th District Court in Amarillo to address any modifications to the receiver's scope.

The hearing was set to address a temporary restraining order to prevent Kassahn of disposing any cattle assets that may be tied to his J.P.'s Family Inc. or BC&K, a partnership that allegedly owns several thousand head of cattle. Cattle associated with BC&K alone were reported to be worth $28 million, attorneys said.

Kassahn is accused of defrauding First National of Amarillo, the region's largest bank, to gain a $13 million loan by allegedly misrepresenting the size of his cattle empire, court documents show. Contending Kassahn did not abide by his loan requirements, First National declared the loan in default and now is calling in the $12.75 million that remains due, state the court records.

First National is also suing Barrett-Crofoot feedyard in Hereford to prevent it from selling cattle that the bank claims is collateral for Kassahn's multi-million dollar loan. Added as a defendant in the case Wednesday was Herbert F. Vogel and his Vogel Cattle Co.

Attorneys for Barrett-Crofoot have filed a motion to dissolve the temporary restraining order and for a change of venue. Grady Terrill, the feedlot firm's attorney, told the Amarillo Globe-News the case "needs to be moved to Lubbock where it belongs."

Kassahn, whose cattle empire reportedly is worth more than $36 million, is accused of telling First National he owned 37,000 head of cattle, according to court documents filed Aug. 12.

But the bank claims that an inspection was made and a bank vice president was told by Ed C. Barrett that Kassahn had an interest in only 16,000 head of cattle. Kassahn reportedly attributed the reduction of 21,000 head to a legitimate, contracted sale, but the bank claims this was not true.

Kassahn is a director of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, and he was on the board at American State Bank in Lubbock.

I'm not here today. I'm on the road between Hereford and Carlsbad, N.M., a place to which there are no shortcuts. I'm on the road to the end of bachelorhood, a long, somewhat enjoyable 31 years. I've already decided my main goal in marriage—avoid being the subject of an Ann Landers column. Many of the secrets I have, Mary Jane already knows. She knows I am not one for dressing up in her clothes or any of the other weird things we occasionally see in Ann's letters. She is aware that I occasionally spend Saturdays and Sunday afternoons in Fruit of the Looms, and I don't intend to begin answering the door in that, uh, condition. I also know she is not going to write Ann about how I won't change a dirty diaper. She has an eight-month-old son, Brandon, who I plan to adopt, and Brandon and I have gotten to know each other rather well. Besides getting a ready-made family, a son who I will love as my own and who will carry my name into the next century, mother's pleased to be getting a grandson. She has only a granddaughter, and while she loves Marissa, she needs a boy to balance things out. Brandon also has my physique, something I hope he grows up from and out of—he's eight months old and weighs 21 pounds. He's a big one. I also have his birthday memorized, indelibly etched in my mind. If anyone has any ideas on how to make a Christmas Eve birthday more special than Christmas, let me know. Maybe we'll give him the Teddy Ruxpin on Dec. 24. Lest someone worry, this idea of marriage is not something that we're rushing in to. Mary Jane and I have been good friends for 13 years, since we met while attending Hardin-Simmons University. We met because we were anti-socials of HSU, doing such terrible bad things as dancing (have you ever done the Bump to Paul Anka's Having My Baby?) and an occasional imbibing of spirits obtained from the big town of Impact, Texas. We had a mutual enemy at HSU who went into her dorm lobby one day and found that her picture, on an advertisement on the bulletin board for a sorority, had been, uh, retouched. Our mutual enemy had grown a moustache, and the retoucher did a very good job of matching the moustache to the right hair color. Mary Jane was unjustly accused of drawing the moustache and had to spend several hours in the office of Tid McAden, the women's dean of students, denying the allegations. Somehow, Mary Jane avoided being expelled (and she really didn't do it). I maintained a vigil outside of Tid's office while Mary Jane was on the hotseat, and that kind of cemented our friendship. Over the years, we've maintained our friendship. I dated other women, she dated other men. I kept a little fire burning for her, though, and, finally, we're going to tie the knot. I also hope I can stay out of Ann Landers.

Infant swing

This broken infant swing is typical of the condition of playground equipment currently in use in the city parks. Most of the swings sets have fewer than half of the swings available for use and some of the equipment is in dangerous disrepair.

Uneven lines of asphalt have been used in an attempt to repair deep cracks which crisscross the city tennis courts. City Commissioner Silvana Juarez is worried that children will be hurt on city property because of the lack of proper maintenance.

Girl who survived crash has surgery

DETROIT (AP) — The 4-year-old girl who was the sole survivor of the crash of Northwest Flight 255 was in serious but improving condition today after surgery to graft skin on burned hands and arms, and doctors said they expect a full recovery. Meanwhile, the grandfather and other relatives of Cecilia Cichan consulted social workers Thursday on how to tell the girl that her parents died in the crash Sunday, a hospital spokeswoman said. Cecilia suffered a broken leg and collarbone, a concussion and burns over 30 percent of her body in the crash, which killed up to 158 people, including her father, Michael, 32; mother, Paula, 33; and brother, David, 6. The child underwent four hours of skin-graft surgery Thursday on her burned hands and arms, said Sandy Lincoln at C.S. Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor. Cecilia was listed in serious but improving condition today, said hospital spokeswoman Toni Shears, adding no other operations were scheduled. "She's going to lay in bed and recover a bit," Shears said. It will be a week before doctors know if grafts of healthy skin from the girl's back onto burned areas are successful, Lincoln said. Well-wishers continued to flood the hospital with gifts and calls, Lincoln said. A man called from London wanting to know where to send a doll for the child. Cecilia's paternal grandfather, Anthony Cichan, 59, of Maple Glen, Pa., thanked the benefactors on ABC's "Good Morning America" show Thursday. "They are tremendous — even in my wildest dreams I didn't think the world had so many good people," he said. He said the girl had asked for her mother and her grandfather, and later demanded her doll. "She didn't ask for it, she demanded it," he said. Cecilia should be told "with great care" but directly and honestly about the deaths of her parents and brother, said Susan Zimmerman of Lansing, a Michigan State University administrator and grief counselor. "You never feel like you're doing enough, because you want to make it all better and make it go away," she said. But relatives can help by being present and listening, she said. Public interest in the lone survivor of the nation's second-worst air disaster has resulted in efforts to honor and provide for Cecilia. Detroit-area radio stations WNIC-

AM and -FM have spearheaded an attempt to get trees planted simultaneously in the child's hometown in Tempe, Ariz., and in the Detroit area, with plaques honoring Cecilia and those killed in the crash. Joel Lind, vice president of operations for the Dearborn radio station, said the project is still in planning stages. Lind said the station has collected more than $3,000 in donations.

place portable toilets in their place. The portable toilets have been regularly overturned, by vandals, requiring city employees to right them and clean the area.

In addition, an expensive brick pavilion in the park is marred with spray paint graffiti and signs prohibiting alcoholic beverages have dwindled from 15 to one, which stands alone in Dameron Park.

Though Juarez notes some areas which city employees have neglected, such as trimming the trees which line the creek in Dameron Park, she agrees with McGill that vandalism is a big problem for those who maintain the parks.

"I think there has to be a way to get our parks cleaned up," she says, "If we get some of these people on welfare or those in jail to spend two or three hours a week painting and cleaning the parks I think it would help."

Juarez points out that other cities have similar work programs which provide welfare recipients a means of holding on to a sense of pride by partially earning their welfare checks. She also suggests that area courts should take the problem into consideration when dealing with offenders.

"If vandals were forced to clean up some of these messes and pay for the damages they would stop and think before they did it again," she said.

Though Juarez is satisfied that the city has budgeted money to replace broken and dangerous equipment in the parks she is concerned that it cannot afford to do so now.

"We have to begin doing something now," she said. "There is no reason to wait until winter."

At stake in the competition are the trophy buckles, the titles of Junior and Senior All-Around Cowboys and the appreciative applause of up to 5,000 rodeo fans each afternoon. The Sunday and Monday performances will begin at 2:30 each afternoon with barbecue lunches available at noon both days.

All of the Ranch's boys will have some part in the rodeo. While most will be riding in the spacious arena, others will perform in specialty events, playing in the Boys Ranch Band and assisting with refreshments or helping visitors. Along with area riding clubs which will appear in the Grand Entries, special guests will include the girls and staff of Girlstown, U.S.A. who will share in the exciting festivities.

Plenty of tickets are still available for both performances. Reservations and information are available in Amarillo at the Boys Ranch Office at 600 West 11th or by calling 806/372-2341. General admission tickets for $2.50 may be purchased at the rodeo arena or at the Ranch office.

tankers has waited in Kuwait for almost a week to start its trip south through the Persian Gulf, out the Strait of Hormuz and into the Gulf of Oman.

The Pentagon has refused to say when it would leave. But Reagan administration sources in Washington said earlier this week that the trip would begin shortly after the latest convoy finished its journey.

The waiting tankers include the Bridgeton, which was damaged by a mine during the first convoy. The United States has blamed Iran for planting mines in the gulf.

Iranian Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani on Friday told a Moslem congregation in Tehran they should be ready for war with American forces. "We are not seeking a confrontation with America or the escalation of the (Iran-Iraq) war," Rafsanjani said in a Tehran radio broadcast monitored in Cyprus.

"But if a war is imposed on us we would be ready to defend ourselves." Meanwhile, The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Saudi Arabia, in a reversal, will allow U.S. carrier-based jet fighters and antisubmarine planes to land for refueling and other logistical aid.

AFDC case number and the signature and name of an adult household member.

Households not receiving food stamps or AFDC must list: names of all household members; social security numbers of all adult members or a statement that the household member does not possess one; total household income and the amount and source of the income received by each household member; and the signature of an adult member certifying that the in-

Pilots disturbed by backup systems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The apparent failure to deploy the wing flaps of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 violated a basic rule of flying, but pilots say they're equally disturbed by a breakdown in the backup systems designed to protect against such mistakes.

John Lauber, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board team investigating the crash of Flight 255 near Detroit, said Thursday that if a cockpit alarm had sounded the flight crew would have become aware of the incorrect flap setting in time to halt the takeoff.

A flight recorder taken from the wreckage showed the flaps, which should have been extended to allow for proper lift, were still in their retracted positions. And the alarm warning of the incorrect settings was not audible on the plane's cockpit voice recorder, Lauber said.

But he cautioned that investigators are still uncertain. A Northwest copilot who saw the takeoff said the wing flaps were extended, he said.

The McDonnell Douglas MD-80 crashed seconds after lifting off Sunday from the Detroit Metropolitan Airport. The crash killed at least 158 people, making it the nation's second worst aviation disaster.

Investigators said the recording of cockpit conversations and sounds during takeoff gave no sign that the warning ever sounded. They said the crew's first indication of a problem was a "stall" warning when the plane already was in the air.

The Air Line Pilots Association, which represents 34,000 pilots including those at Northwest, on Thursday criticized suggestions that the crash was purely pilot error, citing the failure of the alarm to go off.

Allan McArtor, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, called the case "a tragedy for our whole aviation community."

"You work so hard to build into our system safety margins, procedures, mechanisms to deal with the human frailty. Checklists. Warning horns. When these safety mechanisms break down, it just stuns you."

McArtor told The Washington Post. McDonnell Douglas officials declined to discuss the accident specifically. But the aircraft's manufacturer said it is designed with a computerized voice that warns "Flaps, flaps" if the flaps are not in the proper position when the plane begins rolling down the runway.

"This oral warning is the last line of defense that the flight crew has (to) ... abort a takeoff and prevent an accident," said Don McClure.

Jamie Andrews and his family would like to thank everyone involved in providing his new electric wheel chair.

In The First Place...

Herschel Thurston, better known here in Hereford as Brother T., has spent most of his life in the Texas Panhandle. The second of nine children and the son of a Methodist preacher, he began his preaching career in the Methodist church in 1923.

Our friendship with Brother T. began in 1936, during the Depression, when he borrowed $100 for a 1932 Chevrolet, and he's been doing business with us ever since. "I've always stayed with First National because they took care of me when times were tough."

Brother T. spends his time these days with his wife, Jo, mostly over in New Mexico, where he puts his green thumb to good use growing plants and transplanting trees, but he says his banking business is best taken care of in Hereford with First National.

Thanks, Brother T., for our long friendship. We at the First National Bank know it's people like you who make a difference in our part of the country, and especially right here in Hereford.

Growing gray ranks

How long will it be before you are unable to drive your car to the dentist's office or prepare your own meals?

Will you have alternatives to a nursing home when that happens, and will you be able to pay for the care you will have to have?

You might not be thinking about these things right now, but there are a lot of people who are.

As a group, the older segment of the population is growing most rapidly.

And the fastest growing segment of the population is the group over 80 years old, according to the Oklahoma Health Sciences Center and the Alliance on Aging.

In fact, there are more than 40,000 people in the United States who are over 100 years old. Willard Scott, the NBC weatherman, shows picture of these oldsters every morning on his show.

In 40 years, the over-65 group will double in size and the over-85 group will triple.

These figures will exert a tremendous pressure on the national health care system.

By 1995, the demands of the growing senior population will have a greater impact on the health care system than any other single issue, according to a projection made by 1,600 experts commissioned by the American College of Healthcare Executives.

As the population grows older, indeed it should be expected that they need more medical care. The problem will become intense when there are more old folks with bills to pay than there are young folks to support them.

That time is in the future, to be sure. But as the population ages, demands on Social Security increase along with Medicare. An older population is presumably retired and out of the work force and this has an effect upon ability to pay taxes.

It is a new era for America, this aging population. Yet it is a problem that must be faced and now is the time to begin.

More Saragosa victims

Apparently, Saragosa did not escape vultures in the wake of a May tornado that virtually wiped out the small West Texas community. But the birds of prey appear to be the human kind.

Unconfirmed reports of missing donations have been circulating since truckloads of food, furniture and clothing started pouring in.

Only recently have those rumblings become loud enough for the general public to hear.

... The thought that a person or people would be callous enough to steal goods intended to ease the suffering of tornado victims is appalling.

But the long-term effects of such thefts could have even more impact.

The thousands of Good Samaritans who came to the aid of Saragosans couldn't be blamed for having doubts about the fruits of their efforts. It would be easy to say "why bother" the next time tragedy strikes ...

... A thorough investigation of missing donations — by an outside agency — is in order. By getting to the bottom of the apparent thievery, officials can remove a stigma from a community that has suffered enough.

High hearing costs

Ollie North & Co. diverted $3 million, a tidy sum, from the Iranian arms sales to the Nicaraguan rebels, but investigators of the Iran-Contra affair have already spent more than $4 million, and their total is still rising.

The $4 million-plus sum, reached last month, does not include such extras as hiring guards for the congressional hearings, building a special rostrum for committee members to sit on and printing transcripts from 11 weeks of testimony.

The House panel has a $1.95 million budget and expects to spend "the bulk of the money." The Senate committee projects its final cost at $2 million.

... The Iran-Contra matter is often called a "scandal," and it may be one. However, the same word can be applied to the way the probers are going through the public's money.

Improving schools

After 13 years of foot-dragging, the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation finally has been put on notice that it must get its act together.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders held the department and the Fort Worth State School in contempt of court for failing to provide adequate care for retarded patients.

... He ruled that more state funding is needed, but he noted that supervision of residents has been woefully inadequate.

... Money is a large part of the problem at the Fort Worth State School and at other institutions operated by the MH-MR department. But the tragic truth is that care and concern also are lacking, as evidenced by the poor leadership and lax supervision by the state agency. Judge Sanders should issue stern orders to the agency to carry out the reforms it agreed to long ago.

No budget amendment

President Reagan, who has never submitted a balanced budget during his two terms, continues to press for a constitutional amendment requiring one and goes so far as to suggest that if Congress doesn't produce an amendment there could be a constitutional convention.

That's two bad ideas in one breath. Fortunately, there are signs that people are beginning to understand that. It would still be best if states that have indicated support for a convention would repeal their support.

Mr. Reagan's balanced budget amendment is unnecessary. Any president has to do is submit a balanced budget, yet he has never done so and it is becoming clear that the reason is that he doesn't want to. He really believes one can spend his way out of debt ... The amendment push is a dodge to obscure his incredible spending spree.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek examines the stock market this week, in his own way.

Dear editor:

Provided it hasn't taken a nose-dive by the time you get this letter, the stock market continues to baffle everybody by climbing higher and higher.

According to an article I read last night, the stock market in its continual rise in the last five years has produced profits of 2 trillion dollars.

The next question is, how far will it have to fall before it produces losses of 2 trillion?

The thing that puzzles me is that the price of a stock apparently has no bearing on what it yields in dividends to its owner, just as a while back during the land boom the price of a farm had no bearing on how much money you could make on it per acre.

As I understand it, people and institutions are buying millions of shares of stocks expecting to sell as the price goes up. When it does, they sell to people who expect the price to go up so they can sell to somebody else who thinks they'll go even higher. By then, the first sellers, seeing they'd sold too soon, buy back.

This leap-frogging continues until somebody down the line, not noticing where he's leaping, leaps over a cliff. The experts call this "market correcting" but the guy over the cliff calls it ruin.

I can justify this detailed discussion of stocks because I'm a stockholder. Thirty years ago I bought two shares of stock in a new insurance company for $16 apiece. Today those two shares are worth 50 cents each.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: How often have we started a day feeling quite happy ourselves, only to have somebody at home or at work try to impose his unhappiness upon us? We end up becoming a victim of that other person's own unhappiness.

We come to feel that we cannot say anything to such a person, for fear that he will blow up in a temper tantrum at us, and impose his misery upon us.

Looking at it from the other end of the spectrum, let us remember what Truett said when we find ourselves in the spiritually weak state of discontent or grouching. Let us remember that if we feel that way for whatever reason (such as from physical tiredness, frustration of failure, or an inferiority complex), we have no right to impose our unhappiness upon others, according to the laws of God.

THE AGE OF AQUARIUS

Last week there was some kind of special event happening in the sky. It seems there were several planets lined up. This was supposed to be a rare event in history. Folks who watch that sort of thing decided there was a great deal of significance in the event. To them this signaled the dawning of a new day. Like the song about the age of aquarius, these folks thought if enough of us would gather and meditate we could usher in world peace.

I have never been one to miss a chance to meditate, especially if it gets me out of work. I am not sure that I meditate, I have a hard time knowing the difference between meditation and daydreaming. I spend enough time off in another world to be an expert. So when they ask for all of us to gather for meditation I was ready. The only catch was that the meditation had to take place at designated areas around the world. These areas were called Power Areas. I do not know who decided where the power areas were. I do not know why these areas are more powerful than other areas. It may have something to do with the alignment of the stars. When I saw a map of the areas I decided the power areas where most of the nuts live. California of course was one of the chief areas. As far as I could tell Texas was

As much as I enjoy meditation, and other forms of loafing, I was not about to go all the way to California to daydream. I decided to usher in the new age right here in West Texas. So I meditated, or at least I tried. I spent an hour trying to get in the so called Lotus position. The Lotus position consist of contorting the legs into a corkscrew with each foot on top of the knee on the opposite leg. Then the hands are held palms up, while you utter a chant with eyes closed and face toward the sun.

I do not know whether I ushered in a new age or not. I do know I ushered in some new pains. Sitting outside in the sun in a position never meant for the human body may be the way to find peace for some. For me it was the way to find sunburn like you would not believe, mosquitoes that had not eaten in years, and a trip to the emergency room to get me out of the Lotus position. Have you ever tried to explain the Lotus position to a doctor who had to be called away from a golf game? Somehow he did not see the humor in the situation at all. It is hard to meditate with a Doctor screaming in your ear.

DOE should take its time

By JIM HIGHTOWER

Texas Agriculture Commissioner (EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is reprinted from "Viewpoint", a forum on energy and environmental issues.)

Right now a lottery is being held to see which region of the country will serve as the national site for nuclear waste contamination for hundreds of thousands of years.

The sponsor of this lottery, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), is implementing a nuclear waste repository program which ignores long-term effects on a state's environment and economy in favor of a political quick fix.

The DOE has proposed establishing the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository in Texas, Nevada or Washington state. As the Agriculture Commissioner of Texas, I have had a front row seat at DOE's nuclear waste follies; and like officials and citizens of Nevada, Washington state and the eastern states being considered as potential second-round waste site, I am not amused.

The Department of Energy did not choose just any region in Texas; it chose the state's most productive agricultural county as a target site. Deaf Smith County, in the Texas Panhandle, overlies the Ogallala aquifer, the largest aquifer in North America. Texas farmers rely on the water from that aquifer to produce beef, corn, wheat, sorghum, and sugarbeets-enough to make it the nation's twelfth most productive farming county and second most productive cattle county. Should this water be contaminated by radioactivity leaking from a dumpsite, or of any other vibrant area chosen as a dumpsite, would be destroyed. We can't afford to see American's agricultural economy damaged any further. Yet is easy to understand why processors, wholesalers, and consumers would reduce their purchases of will be no accidental escapes of radiation, that planned radiation emissions from shipping casks won't hurt us, that they can seal a shaft through an aquifer for eternity with no leaks, and that radioactive particles won't enter the biosphere before they have decayed to safe levels.

DOE's record of past performance does not build confidence in these claims, however. This is the same agency that has already contaminated soil and water at several of its low-level nuclear waste facilities and that refused to meet safety standards established by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for shipping cask safety until forced to do so. The record shows that DOE can't even manage a short-term project, much less a program that must ensure safety for centuries.

Even if DOE were out of the picture, the disposal of radioactive waste in the ground using current technology is a risky one. Chances are, over the millenia, radiation would get out of the canisters. The only question is how far it would travel through the rock, at what speed, and how much damage it would wreak.

Even if DOE's assurances about safety were true, the effects of instituting a nuclear waste disposal program in the Panhandle would be devastating. Farmers, ranchers, food processors, and area residents tell the Texas Department of Agriculture that they will relocate if Deaf Smith County gets the radioactive black bean.

Even without a nuclear waste accident, the economy of the Texas Panhandle, or of any other vibrant area chosen as a dumpsite, would be destroyed. We can't afford to see American's agricultural economy damaged any further. Yet is easy to understand why processors, wholesalers, and consumers would reduce their purchases of Panhandle products if Texas becomes the home of the waste dump.

Congress is currently considering placing a temporary 18-month moratorium on all DOE waste siting activities and establishing an independent commission to review the waste program to date and make recommendations for the future. This plan is a sound one and one that I support.

In addition to studying what has gone awry with the DOE's waste disposal program, Congress should simultaneously commit this nation to intensive research and development of new waste reduction/management technologies and alternative energy technologies that would not result in the production of deadly waste by-products.

A generation ago, the Manhattan Project brought us nuclear technology. A second Manhattan project, Manhattan II if you will, is essential if we are to leave future generations more than just "Good Luck and Keep Out" signs at nuclear waste dumps.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has determined that wastes can be successfully stored in water basins at the plant that produced them for at least 30 years beyond the expiration of a reactor's operating license. Dry waste storage technologies would allow the waste to be stored on-site even longer, by shoring up temporary on-site storage facilities, we can buy the time necessary to examine the options for permanent waste disposal.

Neutral place for kid exchange available

DALLAS (AP) — Without fail, at 6 p.m. every first, third and fifth Friday of the month, Bill Turner pulls up in a blue convertible to a house filled with toys and posters proclaiming "Kids Are People, Too."

Waiting inside is his 9-year-old daughter, Jennifer, who was delivered to the place by her mother, Pat, and stepfather, John Curtis, at 5:45 p.m.

Here, on the front porch of an old, two-story house in Oak Lawn, the children of divorced parents wait to be picked up by mothers and fathers who don't want to see, speak or be at the same place within 15 minutes of each other.

At Kids Xchange, everyone is on neutral ground.

"It's better than pulling into my ex-wife's driveway because I could always anticipate something tense happening," says Turner, a salesman for Tel Plus Communications. "We'd exchange a few words. Sometimes it would get nast and emotional. It wasn't easy for Jennifer, either."

Turner and his ex-wife — who has custody of Jennifer — were married for five years when they divorced in 1979. Jennifer was barely a year old at the time. The couple has been using Kids Xchange — the only service of its kind in Dallas — for the past seven years. The cost is $30 for each exchange.

Pat, who remarried six years ago, says "the tension got severe" when her ex-husband used to pick up Jennifer at her Dallas home for a weekend visit. Worse, Jennifer would witness those confrontations between her parents, Pat says.

"It wasn't good for any of us. Not for me, not for Bill and more importantly, not for Jennifer. Through Kids Xchange, Jennifer has peace of mind and we all can carry on with our own lives," she says.

Ed Rodela, 43, the center's director and a psychologist, says children are often caught in a power struggle between divorcing parents. It was for that reason that 36-year-old Sarah Griego-Rodela, Rodela's second wife, started the Kids Xchange in 1982. Sarah had been having visitation problems with her ex-husband, Rodela explains.

Together the Rodelas have built their service, and added a second in Austin, into an agency that today gets referrals from divorce attorneys and family law judges. More than 200 divorced parents — several who live outside Texas and have to travel to Dallas to pick up a child for a visit — use the service in order to avoid words and fists during the exchange of a child from one ex-spouse to another.

Such confrontations witnessed by a child could lead to psychological problems for the youngster, Rodela says. "A child in such a case could start getting bad grades in school, develop behavioral problems and discipline problems. I remember a 4-year-old child who developed ulcers, another who had suicidal tendencies and several who became depressed," he says.

Because of the service's growth, the Rodelas moved Kids Xchange out of their home and into its own headquarters last February. The house has two playrooms to accommodate the 40 youngsters between 18 months and 17 years old who are dropped off and picked up by divorced parents each weekend. In most cases, a child waits for 15 to 20 minutes before a parent arrives.

Kids Xchange also handles court-ordered controlled visits — cases in which the visiting parent is permitted to spend up to four hours with the child, but is not allowed to leave the premises. A kitchen is provided for parents to cook a meal. In supervised visits, a counselor accompanies the parent and child on trips to the zoo, a movie or McDonald's. Fees are $12 an hour with $3 tacked on for each additional child. The center also offers counseling to parents and children by one of three trained staff members.

"We're not a babysitting service or a day-care center," Rodela says. "We're neutral ground for parents who can't get along. There are no fights on our front porch and no put-downs are exchanged because our parents don't run into each other. If they do, they ignore each other or say 'Hello' and are on their way.

"Our main concern is always to protect the interests of the child. That's number one. We want to see the child react to a parent in a very warm, positive way," says Rodela, a former counselor with the Dallas County Family Court Services, which deals with cases involving parental conflicts over child visitation.

Almost all of the children dropped off at Kids Xchange are there because of court orders handed down by judges or attorneys who recommended the services to parents involved in visitation disputes, Rodela says.

Judge Catherine J. Stayman of the 305th District Court says, "It's tragic that the service is essential, but we're living in a day in which there are so many custody arrangements being made between separating or divorcing parents who are in a volatile situation and the child is trapped in the middle. The nature of the service is one that is very valuable to the court system."

Judge Merrill Hartman of the 303rd Family District Court agrees. He has ordered the use of the Kids Xchange in many cases.

"When the parents are divorced the most frequent occasion to see each other is around the exchange of the children. If there's a history of violence between the parents and the parents are using the exchange of children to torment each other, then we order them to use the service. It's a very effective remedy. It's sort of like not having a cat and a dog in the same room," he says.

When ordered by the court, Kids Xchange will be used until both parents agree "they've got their anger in control," Hartman says.

Linda Hahn, manager of the county's Family Court Services, an agency that handles evaluations of custody and visitation disputes for the courts, says Kids Xchange keeps parents' tempers cool.

"In one family I worked with, there was extreme physical violence throughout the marriage. And during the couple's separation, the violence continued," Ms. Hahn says.

She says on more than one occasion, when the ex-husband went to his ex-wife's house to pick up his children for a visit, he dragged his ex-wife by her hair out of the house and then beat her on the front lawn in front of the children.

"The woman feared for her safety if he had any contact with her. So we set up a situation where he picked up the children from the Kids Xchange. It not only protects the adults, but also the children," Ms. Hahn says.

Robert McDermott and his ex-wife mutually agreed three years ago to use the service to exchange their 5-year-old son, Dillon. Since then, McDermott has picked up Dillon every other weekend. Before Kids Xchange, there was inconsistency in visits, he says. There also was a spat or two between the couple, he says.

"Both of us were experiencing bad feelings of the divorce every time we came into contact with each other and that was having an effect on Dillon," says McDermott, national marketing and sales director for Enviro-Med Clinics Inc.

"Using the place to exchange Dillon has been wonderful in that those feelings have been eased. I like the consistency and the lack of conflict. I can get along with the rest of my life and Dillon feels comfortable."

McDermott says he will continue to use the service until he and his ex-wife agree to meet on common ground when arranging visits with Dillon. Until then, he says, the present arrangement suits him fine.

Says Rodela, "When parents outgrow us, then we realize in some way we've helped parents to better understand what a child is going through. We all like to feel we're under control, but sometimes when negative feelings between people are brought up there's always the potential for emotional and physical violence. At least here, that kind of violence is avoided until parents can learn to control their behavior."

Supplements eliminate heart disease problem with cat foods

NEW YORK (AP) — Commercial cat foods that had been found to cause a feline heart ailment that kills tens of thousands of cats in this country each year have been changed to make them safe, a researcher says.

In a report published today in Science magazine, Dr. Paul Pion and colleagues at the University of California at Davis said that the cat foods caused the ailment by failing to provide enough of an essential nutrient.

Cats with inadequate amounts of the nutrient, taurine, in their bloodstreams developed dilated cardiomyopathy. Treatment with taurine cured the disease, said Pion, a veterinarian.

The disorder is similar to a human ailment that can be treated only with a heart transplant or an artificial heart.

The cat research might one day lead to discovery of the cause and a treatment for the human disease, called congestive heart failure, Pion said.

"What we have found applies directly only to cats," he said. "Whether there's a human component, we don't know yet. We have people who are looking at that."

Pion said the products found to cause low taurine in cats have been now been supplemented with taurine.

"There's no blame here, and there's no way anybody could have known taurine deficiency caused this disease," Pion said. Taurine is found in fish and meat, he said.

Roy Martin, director of science and technology at the Pet Food Institute, said, "We're confident today that the amount of taurine in most foods is adequate to meet the requirements for the pets we are feeding."

According to the Washington, D.C.-based institute, which represents makers of pet foods, U.S. families own 56.2 million cats.

The foods that had been found to produce low taurine levels in Pion's study were Hill's C-D, Hill's Science Diet Maintenance, Hill's H-D, Purina Cat Chow, 9 Lives Beef and Liver, Blue Mountain Kitty O's and Carnation Fancy Feast Beef and Liver, according to the Science magazine report.

Pion said that he believes the formula for Blue Mountain Kitty O's has been changed and all the other products have been supplemented with taurine.

He said taurine deficiency is a major cause of dilated arder, those are minimum rates. If extras are required, such as special feed at precise temperatures for upscale exotics of the bird world, those cost more.

The USDA agency operates three quarantine facilities for bird importers at Newburgh, N.Y.; Miami and Honolulu.

20 HHS grid teams have been in playoffs

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles on Hereford High School football history. Part 2 deals with the Whiteface teams that made the playoffs.

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Twenty Hereford High School varsity football teams have made the playoffs during the school's history, including six in the last 20 seasons.

Eight teams from the 1920s and 1930s played in playoff games in a playoff system different than the one used today in Texas high school football.

The old playoff system included sectional playoff games within a district, plus district semifinals and a district championship game. Head coach for seven of those early HHS teams was Tom McCollum, whose playoff record was 12-5-2.

In 1926, the HHS football team was in the playoffs for the first time, under Coach J. Forrest Riggs. Hereford suffered a 10-0 loss to Canyon in the district semifinals.

But two years later, McCollum directed Hereford High School to a district championship. After defeating Panhandle in the district sectional playoff game and beating Dalhart 19-0 in the district semifinals, Hereford went up against Memphis in the district championship game.

Reports in the Brand in 1928 indicated that the winner of the Hereford-Memphis game would advance to play Post in the bi-district playoffs.

But what happened on Nov. 29, 1928 is quite puzzling. Hereford and Memphis battled to a 6-6 tie at Memphis, and a week later on Dec. 7 the two teams played again, at Hereford, with Hereford defeating Memphis 13-7.

Why didn't a team advance in the playoffs on penetrations or first downs after the tie game? One article in a Brand issue seemed to say that official statistics were not kept at the game, and thus the teams had a rematch.

I suppose that when football was in its early years in high school athletics, it was a learning experience for all — students, coaches, and administrators. The rematch turned out to be the last game of the season, and why Hereford did not continue in the playoffs is an unanswered question.

That district championship was the first of 15 in Hereford High School football history. Hereford repeated its district title in 1929, advancing to the regional championship game.

In that regional title game, Hereford tied Olney 7-7, but Olney won on penetrations, 4-2. Regional championships were as far as a team could advance in those early years, even as late as 1942 when Hereford won the regional title.

Back to the McCollum era (1928-39), Hereford lost in the district semifinal games in 1931 and 1932, and lost in the district championship playoff game in 1933.

In 1934, Hereford defeated Dumas 6-0 in the district championship game, but lost to Shamrock 33-7 in the bi-district game.

Hereford added another district championship in 1935, defeating Dalhart 18-0 in the playoff game for the district title. Hereford then beat Panhandle 13-6 in the bi-district game, and lost to Matador 19-13 in the regional championship game.

That was the last McCollum-coached team to play in playoff games. Two coaches, each head coach at Hereford one season, directed their teams to district championships, only to suffer big losses to Phillips in bi-district games.

The Whitefaces, under Coach Mac Best, won the 1940 district championship with a 4-0 district record. Hereford was shut out by Phillips 40-0 in the bi-district game.

In 1941, under Coach Logan Ware, Hereford had an undefeated 6-0 district record. Hereford suffered a 34-7 loss to Phillips in that year's bi-district game.

H.V. Stanton, who coached the HHS football team from 1942 to 1948, directed the Whitefaces to a third straight district championship. Hereford, 4-0 in district games and 7-0 overall, battled Phillips to a 7-7 tie in the bi-district game.

Hereford won on penetrations, 2-1, in that tie game, to advance to the regional championship game. Hereford shut out Wellington 14-0 for the school's first regional football title.

Hereford had to face Phillips two more times in bi-district games during the Stanton era. After winning the district championship in 1944, the Whitefaces lost to Phillips 27-0 in the bi-district game.

In 1945, Hereford successfully defended its district championship, but failed to advance in the playoffs past the bi-district game. Hereford and Phillips tied 14-14 in the bi-district game, with Phillips advancing on penetrations, 3-2.

The next 23 years saw Hereford win just two district championships to qualify for the playoffs. Dalton Criswell's 1950 Whitefaces lost to Shamrock 20-0 in the bi-district game, and Larry Wartes' 1968 Whiteface team fell to Kermit 21-14 in the bi-district playoff.

The rest of the years, to the present, that saw Hereford High School in the playoffs, have been 1971, 1973, 1981, 1983, and 1986. The modern playoff system includes advancement all the way to a state championship game.

Coach Larry Dippel's 1971 and 1973 teams each won bi-district playoff games as well as district championships. Hereford beat Pampa 28-20 in the 1971 bi-district game and beat Caprock 13-7 in the 1973 bi-district game.

Hereford beat El Paso Coronado 29-12 in the 1971 regional game, but tied Coronado 7-7 in the 1973 regional game — losing on penetrations 5-3. In the 1971 state quarterfinal game, Hereford fell to Wichita Falls 28-8.

The Whiteface head coach of today, Don Cumpton, has directed Hereford twice to the state semifinals, once during his first era as head coach, in 1981, and the other time last year during his second era as HHS head coach.

Cumpton's 1981 district championship team scored playoff victories of 42-30 over Palo Duro, 22-0 over El Paso Bel Air, and 28-16 over Fort Worth Eastern Hills before losing to Richardson Lake Highlands in the state semifinals.

The other two HHS football teams in the playoffs qualified because of one of the last major changes in the Texas high school football playoff systems — second place teams in districts going into the playoffs as well as district champions.

In 1983, under Coach Jerry Taylor, Hereford placed second in district play and had to face Odessa Permian in the bi-district playoffs. Odessa Permian scored a 40-13 win over Hereford.

The Whitefaces tied for second place in the district in 1984, with Palo Duro — but Palo Duro went to the bi-district playoffs because of a 21-0 win over Hereford.

This year's Whiteface team includes many returning starters, especially on defense, from the 1986 team that went to the state semifinals under Coach Cumpton.

Hereford beat Big Spring 28-17 in the bi-district game, scored a last-second 9-7 victory over Cleburne in the area playoffs, and defeated Wichita Falls Hirschi 17-12 in the state quarterfinals.

The dream season came to an end when Hereford lost to McKinney 39-6 in the state quarterfinals. This year, the Whitefaces have been ranked second and third in the state in some polls, and in other polls, second or third in District 1-4A.

On Page 7A are a summary and list of the playoff games Hereford High School's football team has played in, and a year-by-year summary of Hereford High School football.

A gaze into the crystal football

Arkansas favored to win SWC title

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Crystal football gazing in the Southwest Conference can be hazardous to your reputation. August form charts can look like the funny papers in December.

However, if any horse has been running true to form the last two years in the SWC it has been Jackie Sherrill's Texas Aggies. Sherrill has made a lot of forecasters look smart. He's recruited the talent and it has paid off in back-to-back Cotton Bowl visits.

Sherrill may be a year away from another Cotton Bowl in 1987.

There's another horse that has been running second and is due to win.

The Year of the Razorback looms.

ARKANSAS — Coach Ken Hatfield's scrappers have finished second in the SWC the last two years behind the Cotton Bowl since it whipped Georgia 31-10 in 1976. All the frustration could end if quarterback Greg Thomas and running backs James Rouse and Joe Johnson have dynamite years. The Razorbacks and their fiery noseguard Tony Cherico are 2-1 favorites to make it to Dallas in January.

TEXAS A&M — Sherrill's talent cupboard is far from bare. If he gets excellent quarterbacking from Craig Stump and Lance Pavlas, then you can decorate the Cotton Bowl ball maroon-and-white for a third straight year. 3-1 odds.

TEXAS TECH — New Coach Spike Dykes will have a potent offense but his defense, particularly the secondary, is a big question mark. Quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver needs to have a big year. 10-1 odds.

RICE — Jerry Berndt has the Owls believing in themselves after a 4-7 season. Rice has the offensive horses to create some problems but you still have to have defense to win. The Owls are short on D. 15-1 odds.

HOUSTON — Jack Pardee has coached in two professional football leagues but he'll find the SWC can be just as tough a place to make a living. The former Texas A&M All-American is trying to rebuild a 1-10 club. He has enrolled a lot of junior college transfers and installed the run-and-shoot offense. You don't travel the road to the Cotton Bowl in one season. 20-1 odds.

SMU — It will be a silent, sad fall on Mockingbird Avenue.

Motta still will not say why he left Mavericks

DALLAS (AP) — Dick Motta, who retired as coach of the Dallas Mavericks in May, still won't talk about why he quit but he says he thinks he's through with coaching. "I made myself a promise that I would never get into that," he said. "That's part of my life that is all done now. I think I'm through — coaching is over."

Motta, who had 808 victories — third best on the all-time list — in his 19 years as a National Basketball Association coach, met with Mavericks owner Donald Carter on Thursday. He was in Dallas to wrap up personal affairs, including the sale of his home.

Flag football signup deadline is Wednesday

This coming Wednesday is the registration deadline for the boys' flag football leagues at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

Boys in the first through sixth grades may register. The leagues will be a first and second grade league, a third and fourth grade league, and a fifth and sixth grade league.

The flag football league season opens on Sept. 12. Practice sessions begin on Sept. 1. Registration fees are $9 for YMCA members and $15 for YMCA non-members.

Teams will be organized by the YMCA staff, and will be coached by adult volunteers.

Playing dates will be Saturdays for the third and fourth grade league and the fifth and sixth grade league. The first and second grade league games will be played on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:30 p.m.

Motta now travels the country making motivational speeches at executive meetings, trade association conventions and universities.

"No one knows why I left because I never said why," Motta said. "My private life is important to me, and I don't feel I have to share those thoughts with anyone."

Carter will not say whether he knows why Motta quit.

"I understand where Dick is and where he is coming from, and I respect it and appreciate it," he said.

Carter said he doesn't feel that Motta took advantage of him when the seven-year Mavericks coach resigned without warning.

"Without Dick, I wouldn't be where I am today, basketball-wise," he said.

Motta still is part of the Dallas franchise, Carter said.

"He is available as a consultant for about another five years," the team owner said. "There's a part of Dick in the Dallas team. I don't ever want that to be forgotten."

Although Motta won't comment specifically on his departure, he did talk about some of his views on the NBA.

"There are some things I don't like about pro athletics ... (guaranteed) contracts are paying people before they produce," he said. "That's the biggest problem with the league."

Motta has a three-year contract with Leighco, a Princeton, N.J., speaker's bureau which books such notables as Gary Hart, authors Alex Haley and Alvin Toffler, Harvard sociologist Daniel Bell and race car driver Johnny Rutherford.

When he isn't on the speakers circuit, he splits his time at a Stuart, Fla., condominium and his cabin in Fish Haven, Idaho.

Chris Returns A Serve

Chris Lyles returns a serve from opponent Jeremy Brock during a elementary boys' singles division match Friday in the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA Tennis Tournament. Results of elementary, junior high and high school divisions will appear in Tuesday's issue of the Brand, plus the results of the adult divisions that were scheduled for the weekend. 'Y' girls' volleyball deadline nears

First through sixth grade girls interested in playing in the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA's Volleyball leagues must register by Wednesday, Aug. 26.

The first and second grade girls may sign up for a league in which wallyball will be played (volleyball on racquetball courts). The third through sixth grade girls will play volleyball, but with four hits allowed per side, and the fifth and sixth grade girls will play regular volleyball.

The first matches of the season will be played on Sept. 14. Playing dates will be Mondays and Tuesdays at 5:30 p.m.

Registration fees are $9 for each YMCA member and $15 for each YMCA non-member.

Technology beginning to pay dividends

Texas farmers are being equipped with cost-effective technology to improve water use efficiency and engage in water quality management strategies.

Present-day water management strategies are focused on maximizing precipitation effectiveness, limiting irrigation and maximizing water use efficiency (crop yield per unit volume of water use), points out Dr. John Sweeten, agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Dryland, or totally rainfed, crop production is riskier but its acreage is increasing due to irrigation pumping costs. Key components of water management on dryland farms include reduced soil evaporation by conservation tillage and narrower row spacings for soil shading; weed control to reduce evapotranspiration; reduced runoff and increased soil moisture storage by conservation tillage land leveling, level terraces, deep chiseling and furrow diking; and selecting crops, varieties and planting dates to coincide with rainfall probabilities.

Conservation Tillage Improves Soil Moisture

For example, conservation tillage, which involves maintaining crop residues on the soil surface, has increased soil moisture by 2.1 to 2.8 inches per fallow season following irrigated wheat as compared to conventional tillage, according to agricultural engineers and soil scientists with the USDA's Agricultural Research Service at Bushland. Increased storage of rainfall results from increased infiltration and reduced evaporation.

Furrow diking, in which soil dams are mechanically placed every few feet along furrows, prevents runoff from most rainfall, notes Sweeten. Researchers have reported that dryland grain sorghum yields more than doubled using furrow dikes as compared to open furrows, which lost more than 3 inches of runoff. Furrow diking increased cotton yields by 25 percent at Lubbock. Other tests have shown benefit-cost ratios for furrow diking usually exceeded 10 to 1.

Graded furrow irrigation systems, which are the predominant type used in Texas, have been improved in recent years to reduce tailwater runoff and deep percolation losses, Sweeten points out. Irrigation water use efficiencies have been increased through the use of shortened furrows, land leveling, limited irrigation frequencies and amounts, tailwater collection and reuse systems, skip-row planting and irrigation, alternate-row irrigation, tractor wheel compaction in irrigated furrows, conservation tillage and furrow diking.

Surge Flow Reduces Water Loss

Surge flow is an innovative method of graded furrow irrigation in which furrow streams are intermittently applied in on-off watering cycles controlled by a surge valve and timer. Light irrigations of two to three inches can be applied. Surge flow irrigation results in faster furrow stream advance due to partial soil sealing during off-cycles and primarily reduces deep percolation losses, especially for the first seasonal irrigation, notes Sweeten.

Surge valve sales in Texas have increased from only one in 1982 to 3,000 in 1986 on an estimated half-million acres. It appears that a 20 percent water savings with surge flow, is a realistic expectation for many furrow irrigated farms, Sweeten points out. Benefits appear to be greatest on soils with moderate or high infiltration rates. Careful management is necessary to reduce excessive tailwater losses.

A Texas Agricultural Experiment Station engineer has developed an advance-rate feedback irrigation system (ARFIS) which is essentially a computer-controlled surge flow system for each furrow. Remote sensors in each furrow trigger calculations of rate-of-advance and infiltration rate and result in furrow stream adjustment. Irrigation water application efficiencies have ranged from 90 to 100 percent and distribution efficiencies 85 to 92 percent.

In center pivot systems, which are labor efficient, low pressure spray nozzles operated at 25 to 30 psi just above the crop canopy have largely replaced higher pressure nozzles, notes Sweeten. Low pressure nozzles reduce evaporation losses but tend to increase runoff, which can be virtually eliminated through conservation tillage, soil chiseling, and furrow diking.

LEPA System Pays Off

A Low Energy Precision Application system (LEPA) was developed by Experiment Station agricultural engineers at Lubbock to lower evaporation losses and energy requirements of sprinkler systems. The LEPA system consists of very low pressure emitters (5 to 6 psi), suspended from moving laterals, that discharge water 6 to 15 inches above each furrow. The LEPA system has consistently achieved 96-100 percent water application efficiency when furrow diking is used to control runoff. Higher application efficiencies combined with lower system pressures often mean a saving of 25 percent or more in both water and energy costs. The LEPA system costs much less per acre than drip irrigation, especially when an existing center pivot irrigation system can be converted to LEPA.

Engineers now have developed a new second generation LEPA system known as MFIS (Multi-Function Irrigation System), which contains an additional adjustable nozzle that can spray various types of agricultural chemicals while irrigating. The system is especially effective in controlling insects that usually live on the bottoms of leaves where they are protected from overhead sprays. The extremely high application efficiencies of MFIS are expected to minimize spray drift and chemical leaching below the root zone, says Sweeten.

Drip (or trickle) irrigation systems have been used in vineyards, orchards and nurseries in Texas for many years where high valued crops can justify the additional capital cost. Drip irrigation systems also have been used in West Texas cotton demonstration projects, where increased yields were usually obtained. High capital costs and the need for high quality management means that investments in trickle systems for row crops such as cotton are difficult to justify economically at this time.

Agricultural engineers in Texas are aggressively developing and helping to implement technology for water conservation, water supply enhancement, and water quality protection, says Sweeten. Enhanced productivity and economy, conservation of natural resources, and new business opportunities are frequent by the result.

Bad grounding accident cause

Improperly grounded electrical equipment and contact with unprotected pump engine drive shafts are a major cause of farm accidents each year.

Ken Carver, assistant manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 said irrigators should observe extra caution when working in the field.

Electrical hazards are among the biggest farm safety concerns. Accidents can occur when irrigators come into contact with damaged wires or improperly grounded equipment. Poor initial installation and inadequate maintenance of equipment can also lead to accidents.

For example, an improperly grounded electric control box on a center pivot or electric irrigation pump can cause the box to be "hot," even when it is turned off. Center pivot wires damaged by livestock or rodents can short out and send 440 volts of lethal electric current through the system.

Farmers can reduce electrical hazards by taking precautionary measures. A visual inspection of all equipment prior to operation can detect loose wires and/or rodent and livestock damage. All faulty or defective equipment should be repaired immediately. All equipment should be checked for proper installation and grounding. If there is doubt, equipment may be easily checked with an inexpensive tester, available at most hardware stores, which will register any electrical current passing through the unit.

Carver says irrigators should watch for and eliminate other dangerous electrical problems such as grounding connections made over painted or enameled surfaces, terminating aluminum and copper conductors in the same fitting, lack of grounding electrode at the pivot, failure to properly ground the frame of the pump or motor, and loose conductor terminations.

Contact with overhead highline wires is the most often reported farm injury. Many times, farmers moving aluminum pipe or trying to dislodge small animals from the pipe accidentally come in contact with the overhead wires and are electrocuted.

Another overlooked danger is the exposed drive shaft on internal combustion engines, such as those used to power irrigation pumps. The drive shaft normally turns at 1,750 revolutions per minute and will not stop unless switched off.

Carver noted that clothing can easily become entangled in the drive shaft and begin to pull the operator's arm or leg into the machinery. A shield or wire mesh guard over the drive shaft can help prevent this kind of accident, he added.

Snug-fitting clothing in good repair (cuff buttons in place and rips and tears mended) is less likely to become entangled in machinery. Gloves should fit well for the same reason. Clothing made of cotton, instead of synthetic materials, is recommended for wear in the field.

If caught in machinery, cotton fabric will likely tear, whereas a synthetic may stretch and cause the wearer to be pulled into the machinery. Clothing, such as shirt tails and pant legs, should be tucked in. Loose hanging jewelry should not be worn. Long hair should be kept close to the head.

Keisling heading TWPB

Kenneth Keisling, a 33 year old Moore County Wheat and feed grain farmer from Dumas, was elected as chairman of the state-wide Texas Wheat Producers Board at a regularly scheduled quarterly meeting and officers election Aug. 5, according to outgoing chairman, Cagle Kendrick of Stratford.

Kendrick had completed the Board's self-imposed two-year limit on officers serving in one position. Keisling, who had completed two one-year terms as vice-chairman, was re-elected to a new six-year stint on the Board in a state-wide June election of all producers. He farms 1800 acres of wheat and feed grains in Moore County. He lives in Dumas with his wife, Pam, daughters, M'Liss, Kenna and Pamela, and son, Michael.

Other officers elected by the fifteen-man board were Keith Spears of Vernon, vice chairman, and Jack Norman of Howe, secretary. C.L. Edwards, Panhandle, continues as treasurer. Foy Gibson, Lometa, elected to the board in the June state-wide election, was sworn in as a board member by Mark Moran, representing the Commissioner, Texas Department of Agriculture, for a six-year term.

The board was initiated in North Texas and the Panhandle in 1971 and expanded to a state-wide authority by a referendum of wheat producers in 1985. It conducts programs of research, market development and service designed to enhance the value of wheat and the economic positions of the wheat producer. It is supported by a one-half cent per bushel self-assessment on sales of wheat with collections being made at local elevators, feed yards, ASCS offices and other "first handlers".

Knowing the cow's family tree can lead to improved income. Dr. Larry Boleman, beef cattle specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, urges cow-calf producers to select the best replacement heifers to take the place of poorer producing cows. He stresses the most economically important beef cattle production trait is that of reproduction. A good breeder has to calve as a two-year old and continue every year of her productive life. To be knowledgeable in selecting good breeders, Boleman offers these guidelines. Study the prospective heifer's pedigree and performance information. Choose heifers coming from cows with proven reproductive ability, longevity, milking and mothering ability. Look at the heifers closely looking for sound quality and functional conformation. Experts also believe a producer needs to take the heifer's personality into account. A good breeder will be quite and easy to work with but also maternal and protective of her calves.

Texas buyers haven't changed over years

The portrait of Texas homebuyers has remained surprisingly stable in a period of rapid economic change. "An important conclusion about Texas homebuyers is that their characteristics, the reasons they move, the appeal of selected amenities and their financial arrangements remain remarkably consistent based on results of four annual surveys," says Dr. Don E. Albrecht, a research scientist with the Real Estate Center and in rural sociology at Texas A&M University.

A profile of Texas homebuyers emerges from Albrecht's studies:

—The median homebuyer is married, 33 years old and has one child. The homebuying age has remained stable for four years, and the fraction of married couples buying homes has ranged from 75 to 86 percent.

—The typical home bought is larger than the homebuyer's previous home and has three bedrooms and two baths. It cost slightly more than $74,000 in both 1984 and 1985. Nearly 94 percent of homes bought in Texas are single-family dwellings.

—The initial purchase price was the most important factor for Texans in deciding which home to buy. In 1985 the neighborhood became the second most important factor, beating two factors that tied for second position the year before—the home's layout and design and the financial terms of the purchase.

—Texas homebuyers have much higher incomes than the general population. While census data show the typical Texas family has an income of about $20,000, the median family income for homebuyers was more than $41,500 in each year surveyed.

—Texas homebuyers spent an average of three months looking for a home, and most homebuyers had the help of a real estate agent or broker.

—The median down payment was 10 percent of the purchase price. Almost all Texas homebuyers got loans from a mortgage company, a bank or a savings and loan association.

Albrecht's studies shows that Texas' economy, which went from boom to bust during the four-year survey period, has had some effects on homebuyers.

—Investment and tax advantages have become less important reasons for buying a home.

—During the 1970s and early 1980s, rapidly escalating home values made homes one of the best and safest investments available. Since then, the investment advantages have declined and so has the proportion of homebuyers who rank this factor as very important," Albrecht says. "It is still the most frequently mentioned reason for moving."

—In 1982, homebuyers said they paid more than a quarter of their after-tax incomes in monthly payments. The percent of homebuyers paying less than that amount increased from 25 percent in 1982 to 61 percent in 1985.

But Albrecht says these changes are small compared to the drastic changes in the state's economy during the studies.

"In the early 1980s, Texas had a favorable economic climate and a low unemployment rate that attracted hundreds of thousands of new residents. This created a boom in the housing industry," he says. "Now record unemployment figures and a sluggish economy have slowed that migration stream to a trickle."

On the positive side, interest rates have fallen, and people who could now previously afford a home are now potential buyers."

Decorating a Showhouse

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

There was a leak in February. Part of the ceiling fell down in March, and the painters were still at work on the eve of the public opening.

But never mind. When the 14th annual Kips Bay Boys' Club Decorator Showhouse opened this spring at one of Manhattan's flossier Eastside addresses, everything was as perfect as its 17 decorators could make it—and that was pretty perfect.

Though the Kips Bay Showhouse is one of the best known and most extravagant, all over the country similar scenes of trial and triumph were being enacted. Every spring what appears to be a growing number of mansions are being treated to the works, often by the best decorators in town, to raise funds for a worthy local cause.

Depending on the viewer's attitude, showhouses can provide inspiration for change or confirmation that it's never going to be like that at your house.

Looking on the positive side (and despite the fact that the decorator's choice in a room often means no expense has been spared), careful viewers could get some useful ideas for their own homes at the Kips Bay Showhouse this year.

For example, Josef Pricci came up with a new way of ornamenting the wall above a fireplace. Instead of covering over the recessed bookshelves that were there, and then placing a picture on the wall, the designer made use of the recess to hold a collection of porcelain. The fact that he selected rare and costly pieces of Chinese Export porcelain need not concern us.

He said that any related collection of interesting items would be equally effective and turn the fireplace wall into an attractive focal point.

Marshall-Schule Associates proved that a long skinny "bowling alley" can be turned into a comfortable bed-sitting room with foot-the-eye arrangement. The room's measurements—27 feet by a little more than 8 feet—were a challenge that Harry Schule and Ned Marshall met by visually dividing the space in two.

The walls at one end of the room were covered in a gathered, printed fabric and the area was furnished as a sitting area. The narrow space that was left over accommodated the bed along one wall. At one corner of the room's far end, they placed a bureau and mirror on the diagonal and at the other corner, they did the same thing with a decorative screen.

In showhouses, as in real life, imagination can take you just so far, and money is needed for the rest of the trip. Juan Montoya spared no expense, and his reward was a bedroom and bath which placed the latest electronic gadgetry within a richly furnished room with many references to the past.

Equipped with the latest in stereo, video and communications equipment, the room contained a custom-made bedside table in which controls for the home entertainment equipment, telephone, clock and temperature readout were placed.

A similar set of controls was handy from the custom-made bathtub, which featured glass sides set into a frame that suggested the verdigris finish found on classical bronze monuments.

Although the tub on display was merely a prototype made of wood, Montoya estimated it would cost approximately $1,500 to reproduce the tub in metal and glass so it would be functional. Besides his bathtub design, Montoya also rethought the bathroom sink. In place of the typical stationary sink, he installed a moveable sink that can be adjusted left or right and up and down for convenience.

To handle the delivery of water, flexible plastic piping that is exposed to view was used. The moveable armature that holds the sink is the technological advance that makes the product possible. Montoya says that this armature is currently being manufactured, so the idea is workable.

Although his room proves he appreciates technology, Montoya said that modern building techniques created homes that were difficult to decorate. According to the designer, it is hard to create a sense of shelter in modern homes and apartment buildings because the walls are so thin they provide almost no buffer between the interior and the outside.

He has evolved a method of making interior walls look thicker by softening the hard edges of sheetrock and then employing paint to suggest thick plaster.

This is the kind of idea that effectively separates the professional from the amateur. Few do-it-yourselfers would think of it, let alone try it. It is one of the reasons why people who can afford it hire a decorator.

David Barrett's luxurious and romantic master bedroom in the showhouse is another. Barrett broke the rules in this room by mixing colors, patterns and textures with abandon.

Among his transgressions, he employed a blue and white fabric on a canopy bed in a room with dark green walls and carpet.

"I call this room my salade noise because it has a little of everything," added the designer who has almost 40 years of experience.

Barrett said that only "two out of 10 clients would go for a room like this if I showed them the swatches. I went on instinct."

Someone asked him how long it had taken to put the complicated room together. "I told them it has taken me 37 years."

Here's the Answer

Q.—I recently have started to do wood finishing as a hobby. Some time ago, I read about something called a tack rag that is useful when you use varnish. As I recall, it is used for cleaning surfaces to be varnished. Could you tell me how to make it, since I understand it is something you can make yourself?

A.—First, the directions, then some advice. Take a piece of clean cloth, preferably cotton, and soak it in warm water. Wring it out, then soak it again, this time with turpentine. Add a little varnish and wring out the cloth so it is almost dry. Put it aside for a day or two, after which it is ready for use. You'll find it remarkably good for cleaning surfaces, especially those with dust on them that might interfere with the spreading of the varnish. The advice is to buy a prepared tack rag at almost any hardware store or establishment that caters to do-it-yourselfers.

Q.—I am building a brick wall along one side of our driveway. Can an ordinary sand mix be used between the joints of the bricks?

A.—The mortar used in brickwork differs somewhat depending on the job being done. The kind usually used for brick walls such as you are building contains mortar with hydrated lime in it. If you mix it yourself, the combination is one part portland cement and one part hydrated lime to six parts sand. You can buy ready-mixed mortar for the type of work you will be doing. It requires only the addition of water, the amount of which will be specified on the bag. It should be just enough to make the mixture fairly compressed but workable with a trowel.

Texas home sales improve during the second quarter of 1987, the rate of existing home sales in Texas increased 24.9 percent over the same period in 1986. After a brief slowdown in the first half of 1986 and steady rebound since the third quarter of 1986, sales volume is now reaching levels achieved in 1985, according to Bill Stinson, president of the Texas Association of Realtors (TAR).

"This tremendous increase is a reflection of many potential buyers who were waiting to see just how low interest rates would fall before jumping into the market. When rates stopped falling, they began buying, fueling sales in most areas of Texas," Stinson said.

Interest rates hit their lowest point since December 1977, when rates dropped to 9.09 percent in March. In April, rates edged up just slightly to 9.14 percent.

"While the increase was slight, it gave the green light to those waiting to get the lowest rates possible," said Stinson.

"Another factor in all this activity is investors shopping for bargains now that prices have declined to meet the market forces of supply and demand. I guarantee these investors are confident in the long term health of the Texas economy or they wouldn't be buying here now."

On a seasonally-adjusted, annual basis, the sales rate of previously owned homes in Texas rose to 226,500 units in the second quarter of 1987, compared to 181,400 units in the same three-month period in 1986. Sales include single-family houses, town homes and condominiums.

Texas ranked fourth among states in overall resale activity. The sales rate for the nation was up 5.6 percent.

Golden Triangle is rebounding

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer
BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A faded sign directs visitors to an obelisk that marks the spot where the fortunes of Texas were changed forever.

This is the site of Spindletop — the great Lucas gusher — where the black gold of oil spewing out of the ground 86 years ago put the word "Golden" in what became known as "The Golden Triangle" of Texas.

The aging sign seems to symbolize the Golden Triangle — Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange — once colorful and thriving and now trying to survive after repeated shocks to its economic foundation throughout the 1980s.

"We're in for some tough times. We've had some tough times," says Larry Cohick, president of SouthEast Texas Inc., whose job is to attract employers to the region about 90 miles east of Houston and 225 miles west of New Orleans. "But we think we're going to come out of it. And that makes it worth it."

Ever so slowly, things appear to be turning around, or at least achieving some stability. Major old-line employers like Texaco Inc. in Port Arthur are renovating plants. New small outfits like Texas Drydock Inc. of Orange are setting up operations. Announcements of new operations potentially employing 30 or 40 or 50 people are becoming more routine, local officials say.

What remains to be seen is whether numerous little developments can overcome the major shocks of the recent past.

"What we see is good news and a helluva lot of it," beams Joe Romano, port director for Orange and head of its economic development effort.

Romano points to a 343 percent boost in port tonnage over 1985 and 135 percent over 1986.

"I think the bottom is behind us, but I can't see the overall big picture," he says. "I couldn't be pessimistic and stay in this job. I'd be dead in a minute. We've had purveyors of doom that have come in and written us off. This area has seen ups and downs forever."

In 1980, 375,497 people called the three-county area home. Six years later, the number had increased by 303 — a mere 0.1 percent gain.

But in those six tumultuous years, thousands of people came and left. In 1984, population grew to 391,800. A year later, it had fallen by 10,000. Another 6,000 fled the next 12 months.

During those six years shipbuilding in Orange stopped, throwing thousands out of work. A major steel fabricating plant closed, the victim of less expensive foreign steel.

Texaco and Gulf Oil Co. consolidated operations at aging facilities in Port Arthur. Offshore oil exploration came to a halt as the price of oil plummeted. A parade of million-dollar offshore rigs, built during the heady days of $40-per-barrel oil, now sits idle in nearby Sabine Pass.

In 1981, the labor force averaged 179,800, with 7.1 percent — or 12,750 — unemployed.

The most recent Texas Employment Commission figures for June 1987 showed the workforce had shrunk to 166,600 while the jobless rate had doubled 14.6 percent, or 24,300 people.

"We've had a tremendous downturn in the last seven years," says Robert Crawley, labor market analyst for the Texas Employment Commission in Beaumont. "We've lost in industries that are labor intensive. A $50 million project in the '60s would produce 300 jobs. A $50 million project now would produce 25 jobs because of computerization."

"The recovery will be a long slow process. It's not going to be a miracle cure."

Typical of the kinds of new business is Texas Drydock, renovating cargo ships at the Port of Orange since May and using some of the 2,000 workers who were thrown into unemployment lines when Lev-ington Shipbuilding Co. folded in 1983.

"The majority of us have worked together for 20 years," says Raymond Masters, superintendent of Texas Drydock, pointing to men refitting and repainting a ship. "We're hometown grown. Everything we purchase we purchase local. It makes you feel good when you're back with people you've worked with for 20 years."

Romano, 58, who also lost a job at Levinston when the shipbuilder closed, notes the road to the docks six months ago was vacant and now is jammed with cars and pickup trucks of 350 to 500 new workers.

"It was just a lovers lane," he says. "We changed a graveyard to a grave train. These are my friends, neighbors and relatives."

The other side of that coin, however, is Don Nation, 43, of Orange, a pipefitter for 17 years who lost his job June 1.

"All you can do is handle one crisis at a time," he says. Nation risks fines and loss of his pension if he accepts non-union work, which pays wages half that of union scale.

"I'm damned if I do and damned if I don't," he says.

Nation's wife, Becky, works for the Texas Department of Human Resources and like other state workers, has not had a pay raise in years.

"There may be a light at the end of the tunnel, but with our luck, it's a train coming the other way," she says.

"There's no doubt a lot of people have been hurt," labor analyst Crawley says. "And there's no doubt it may take a lifetime to recover."

Cohick, whose fledgling SouthEast Texas Inc. is the area's first regional attempt to lure employers, is embarking on an advertising campaign in industrial trade journals to overcome what he sees as the area's greatest problem — the lack of any image at all beyond Texas.

"We have got to somehow begin to let people know where we are," says Cohick, who previously worked with regional economic development efforts in Virginia, North Carolina and Alabama. "It's really a cosmetic job as much as anything else — an identification of who we are and where we are."

"We are looking for anything that generates jobs," he adds. "It could be a nursing home. It could be a commercial business. It could be a manufacturing plant. The only criteria I have is that it be a generator of jobs. I don't care what industry it is."

S&L's changing loans

Deregulation has enabled savings and loans—the traditional source of single-family home loans—to alter the structure of their portfolios substantially and reduce the portion of their total assets devoted to single-family mortgage lending.

"A broad interpretation of the latest regulations would allow a savings and loan to invest up to 90 percent of its assets in commercial loans," says Dr. Wayne E. Etter, a professor with the Real Estate Center and of finance at Texas A&M University.

His study of changes in Texas' financial environment before and after deregulation raises basic questions about the availability and sources of future mortgage funds, particularly residential loans.

The supply of real estate funds in Texas shows that although the portion of savings and loan portfolios devoted to single-family home loans halved, there was actually a $5 billion increase in the total dollar volume of this type of loan held by savings and loans.

"While savings and loans diversified into commercial loans, total assets rose 148 percent between 1979 and 1984," adds Dr. Donald R. Fraser, professor of finance at TAMU.

Two acts passed by the U.S. Congress allow savings and loan associations to put their assets into many new types of investments. These statutes are the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 and the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982.

Before 1980 savings and loans could finance residential mortgages, equipment loans and federal government or housing related loans. Now, they also may offer most types of commercial loans, consumer loans, credit cards and state and local government loans.

But savings and loans have not rushed into all these areas. The principal shift in the make-up of loan portfolios is away from single-family residential loans toward other mortgage loans and mortgage-backed securities.

The portfolio share allocated to multifamily residential loans by Texas savings and loans increased from 3.4 percent in 1979 to 10.2 percent in 1984.

"There is little evidence of any major thrust into either consumer or commercial lending unrelated to real estate," Etter says.

The financial reform statutes will have the greatest impact on savings and loans, but all depository institutions will be affected.

Commercial banks increased their real estate lending activity three-fold between 1979 and 1984. The portion of their total assets devoted to real estate loans rose from 7.7 percent to 12.9 percent during this time.

"Commercial bank participation in financing real estate may increase in the future," explains Fraser. The development of a secondary mortgage market and the growing securitization of mortgages create more liquid mortgages. Growing competition has reduced bank profit margins, forcing them to seek higher-yield investment opportunities such as long-term mortgages.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Evans of Canyon. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ellis of 540 Sycamore, Hereford.

The bride's chosen colors of purple and yellow were carried out in the church. Two 15-candle candelabra accented the altar while pew bows marked the pews.

Sister of the bride Cathy Bunch of Hereford served her sister as honor attendant. Best man was Randall Ellis of Pleasanton, brother of the groom.

Groomsmen were Steve Meiwes, Paul Trolinder, and Jason Trolinder, who also served as a candle lighter.

Vocalists Melanie Davis and Jay Holcomb were accompanied by Linda Davis. Principal selections featured were "Always," "God, A Woman and a Man," and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown designed by Peccione made of white organza. It featured on/off the shoulder puffed sleeves, trimmed along the top of the bodice with the sleeves lined by a ruffle. The fitted bodice was trimmed in Alonson lace sprinkled with beading and was fashioned with a dropped waist. A gathered skirt extended into a chapel-length train detailed with matching lace trim.

To complete her ensemble, she wore a matching headpiece composed of a flowered wreath and fingertip-length veil.

She carried a cascading bouquet of yellow alstroemeria lilies, iris, and English ivy.

Bridal attendants wore dresses designed by Bill Levkoff featuring a jewel neckline made of white organza with a Schiffl lace overlay. Puffed sleeves, a fitted bodice, and a full A-line tea-length skirt completed the gowns.

PRE-NEED FUNERAL COUNSELING

Many Americans Already Know About The Option of Pre-Planning Their Funerals.

You Should Too!

Handle the financial aspects of funeral planning prior to death.

Ann Landers — Toothy babes discussed

DEAR READERS: Recently I volunteered the information that I was born with two teeth and my sister, Dear Abby, was born with one. A woman wrote that she too was born with a tooth and believed it to be a rare occurrence. She wondered if I knew of any famous people who had been born with teeth.

I had never heard of anyone except my sis and me, so I decided to run a survey. The questions: Were you born with teeth? If so, how many? Are you famous?

At this moment I am beginning to wonder if anyone in this world was NOT born with teeth. To date, I've received 42,000 responses, and the cards and letters are still pouring in.

Almost 80 percent of the respondents were born with two teeth. Almost 17 percent were born with one tooth. Two percent were born with three teeth. Only 1,000 readers were born with four teeth. Nine percent of those who specified the location said the teeth were in the lower jaw. The survey did not turn up anyone who was famous, although one reader said he was in Who's Who and had been captain of the high school football team in La Crosse, Wis.

Why are some babies born with teeth? According to Dr. Paul Goldhaber, Harvard's dean of dental medicine, teeth develop in utero and the baby born with visible teeth merely exhibits premature development.

How often does this occur? The Journal of the American Dental Association (September 1984) reported on a study by dentists Kates, Needleman and Holmes. They observed 17,155 newborns and found that 10 were born with teeth. A more casual study involving 11,000 newborns turned up one child with a tooth (or teeth) in every 3,667 births.

Here is a sample of what my week has been like:

Burlington, Vt.: My son was born with two teeth. They were loose but the doctor said to leave them alone. Three days later the teeth were gone. I was horrified, thinking he had swallowed them, but we found them under his crib the next day. He is not famous but might be one day. He will be a great leader one day." He became president of a distinguished university and serves there today.

Every survey turns up a few clowns. This one lives in Greensboro, N.C. He wrote:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your survey is bound to reveal some startling information but I challenge anyone to match this. I was born with 32 teeth but I am not famous because I learned early to keep my mouth shut.

Spring Hill, Fla.: My first child weighed 13 pounds at birth and had two teeth. My second child weighed 16 pounds and had three teeth. My mother's last son weighed 18 pounds and had no teeth.

Omaha, Neb.: A few minutes after my son was born the doctor asked me if I planned to breast feed him. I replied, "Yes." He said, "This kid has two very sharp teeth. I'd better take them out tomorrow." he did and I thanked him.

No Location, Please: Our son was born with two teeth and the doctor who delivered him said, "This child

MRS. MARK ANTHONY ZAMORA
...nee Martha Ann Guerrero

Wedding vows unite Guerrero, Zamora

Martha Ann Guerrero of El Paso became the bride of Mark Anthony Zamora of Hereford during an afternoon wedding held Saturday, Aug. 15, at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Hereford. Father Joe E. Bixenman, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin G. Guerrero of 525 Ave. H, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Pesina, Sr., of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ramon S. Zamora of 828 Ave. K, Hereford.

The church was decorated with a floral arrangement at the center of the altar which consisted of peach gladiolas, spider mums, and daisies. At each side of the altar there were brass spiral candelabra.

Serving her sister as matron of honor was Karen Guerrero of Hereford. Best man was Jessie Pesina of Amarillo, the bride's uncle.

Madrinas and Padrinos were: Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Alvarado of San Antonio, Iazo; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Pesina, Jr., of Hereford, Bible and rosary; Mr. and Mrs. E.P. Rodriguez of Hereford, cojines; Albert Zavala and Ms. Oralia Contereras, both of Mercedes, Texas, buque; Luis Zamora of Hereford and Miss Teresa Jimenez of Amarillo, arras.

Ushers were Randy Iruegas of Hereford, cousin of the bride; John Zamora of Hereford, the groom's brother; and Edward DeLeon of Amarillo, the groom's nephew.

Junior bridesmaid was Kathy Guerrero of Hereford, sister of the bride. Junior groomsmen were Kevin Prather of Oakland, Calif.

Trainbearers were Daphne DeLeon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward DeLeon of Amarillo and Brian Pesina, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Pesina of Hereford.

Flower girl was Kimberly Alvarado, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Alvarado of San Antonio. Ring bearer was Martin Guerrero, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin G. Guerrero of El Paso.

The bride's sister, Kristy Guerrero of Hereford, and the bride's cousin, Melissa Alvarado of San Antonio served as candle lighters.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Ramirez of Hereford sang "Security," "Here We Are," "Amarte Solo Asi," "To Me," "With You, I'm Born Again," "Resucito," "After All These Years," and "The Wedding Song."

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a satin and lace gown designed by her sisters. It featured

Venice lace trim, a Queen Anne neckline, a fitted basque bodice, and puffed modified Elizabethan sleeves. The full skirt was styled in tiers of Chantilly lace ruffles that extended into a cathedral-length train. Hand-sewn pearls accented the entire gown, as did crystals and sequins. She wore gloves of white satin adorned with side bows.

To complete her ensemble, she wore a two-tier tulle illusion veil which she made. It featured a fingertip veil and another veil of cathedral-length adorned with scalloped lace, handsewn pearls, and crystals. A gathered pouf at the top was connected to a crown of pearls, from which pearls and crystals dangled. A spray of silk and a spray of pearls cascaded from the crown along the sides.

She carried a bouquet consisting of cascading pearls throughout the bouquet along with crystals, white silk roses, and miniature silk peach roses. Lilies and satin streamers completed the floral arrangement.

To fulfill bridal tradition, she wore a 16-diamond, heart-shaped necklace given to her by her great-grandfather as something old. Something blue was a garter while something borrowed was a 19-diamond ring belonging to her mother. Something new was a satin and lace purse made by her grandmother.

Bridal attendants wore formal-length dresses of peach satin fashioned with an overlay of lace. They carried bouquets consisting of peach carnations and white roses, accented with a peach rose and peach and white streamers.

Candlelighters, the flower girl, and train bearer all wore white taffeta formal-length dresses bedecked with an overlay of white lace. They wore wreaths and wrist corsages of peach carnations.

A reception followed at the fellowship hall of the church and was catered by Sirloin Stockade. Cake was served by relatives while punch was served by relatives and friends. Mila Zamora, of Hereford, sister of the groom, was at the registry, as was Yolanda Iruegas of Hereford, the bride's aunt. The bride's cousin, Ruby Iruegas distributed scrolls.

The bride's table was decorated with a white lace tablecloth given to her by her grandmother. Two floral arrangements and candles carried out the bride's chosen colors and were placed at each end of the table.

which was further enhanced with satin streamers and bows. Behind the table was an arch covered with greenery and tiny miniature white lights twinkling lights where the bride and groom stood.

Each of the padrino's tables were similarly decorated. Also adorning the tables was an arrangement of satin ribbon, and pearl beads topped with a white heart entwined with satin peach ribbon as two small white bells cascaded down the middle.

Two three-tiered cakes were served. The bride's strawberry cake and groom's chocolate cake were drawn together by bridges that met at a center heart-shaped cake. Atop the center cake stood figurines of the bride and groom while figurines representing the bridesmaids and groomsmen adorned the bride.

Both cakes were topped with white icing, peach roses, and doves. In between the cakes were separating columns and gold crosses. Fountains underneath each cake were surrounded by greenery and little cupids.

Each table contained silver appointments. Heart-shaped wedding cookies were placed on silver platters.

Following the reception, a dance was held at the Hide-A-Way Club with music provided by two bands.

A pink jacquard dress fashioned with a blouson bodice, padded shoulders elbow-length sleeves, and a full skirt served as the bride's traveling attire. The couple left for a wedding trip to San Antonio.

A 1984 graduate of Hanks High School in El Paso, the bride was active in advanced modern dance, the art club, the Pan American club, the Spirit of '84 Club, and served as a student council representative.

The bridegroom graduated from Hereford High School in 1982. He attended TSTI and received an associate of applied science in auto mechanics.

Texas Baptists help rebuild Saragosa

Texas Baptist volunteers have erected the first new house at Saragosa, the West Texas town destroyed by a tornado on May 22, and plans are being made to rebuild the entire community Aug. 24-Sept. 11.

Included in the rebuilding plan is an around-the-clock building effort by volunteers on Labor Day weekend, Sept. 4-7.

About 450 Southern Baptist volunteers will take part in the Aug. 24-Sept. 11 building project, in which as many as 60 homes are expected to be rebuilt. Among the laborers will be 75 to 100 retired couples who work regularly with Olen Miles and the Texas Baptist Men Retiree Builders.

A group of Southern Baptists from Waco erected the first house at Saragosa July 29-Aug. 2. They were assisted by two Varones Bautistas (Hispanic Baptist Men) from Dallas. Their labor provided a two-bedroom home for Sophia Gomez, a 60-year-old widow who is rearing two children.

The home was prefabricated on the parking lot at Woodway First Baptist church and raised on-site by the volunteers. Most of the materials used in building the house were donated by Waco-area merchants, and other materials were purchased by churches in Waco Baptist Association.

Two Texas Baptist couples from Second Baptist Church, Lake Jackson are working on a one-bedroom Red Cross model home that is expected to be completed by Aug. 15. A group of Mennonite families from Kansas are erecting a three-bedroom home that also is being built with Red Cross funds.

According to the "Omni Space Almanac," Titan, the largest of Saturn's 20 moons, is the only moon in the solar system with an atmosphere. When U.S. spacecrafts Voyagers 1 and 2 flew by Saturn, they discovered Titan's atmosphere is composed of nitrogen, methane and several organic compounds, and that methane may flow on Titan as water does on Earth.

A Trip to Taos

Sandy and I became much more appreciative shoppers of Hereford merchandise after a recent trip to Taos, N.M.

Clutching our money firmly in hand, we descended on Taos art galleries, clothing stores, and craft shops the moment they opened for business. After trekking through 37 such establishments, we spent a total of $12.62 between us and decided to return with our disposable income to Hereford.

Handcrafted items such as woven rugs, baskets made of pine needles, Southwestern art paintings, Indian pottery, ceramic creations, and knitted shawls greeted us in every shop we visited. Turquoise and silver jewelry accompanied creations of rhinestones and semi-precious gems in locked glass cases everywhere. Prices of such items, when marked, were shocking enough that we knew unmarked items were beyond our spending power.

Handpainted T-shirts, while colorful and attractive, did not win either of us over with their pricetags ranging from $39 to $89. Nor did the beautiful skirt of brilliant hues which cost $287.

Swimwear placed on sales racks was marked down to a mere $59. (We thought such a cost was too much, but we were quite decisive in not buying the suit when the young clerk informed us that the suit was "cut way up to there and way down to there for skinny young people," implying that we were too old and fat to consider such a garment.)

But, as fate would have it, even items we didn't want were also exorbitantly priced. A large coffee table, comprised of some type of animal skin rug topped with a huge moose head whose antlers supported the round glass table top, sported a price tag of $3,300. Abstract paintings of unidentifiable, indistinguishable subjects could be picked up for only $2,000.

Yet beautiful large urns and vases created in a limited series really commanded our attention as we discussed the attributes of each and mentally rearranged our homes to accommodate such artsy pieces. "Oh, these simply mah-velous creations are priced at only $1,800 but we are running a special sale which brings the total down to a mere $1,500," droned the curator endlessly. "That specific work is number six of a series of 100 and is truly a collector's item." Hence the $12.62 purchase from another shop.

Dressed tastefully (?) in walking shorts, matching tops, and sandals, we inquired at one jewelry store as to the location of the best restaurant in Taos. After eyeing us disdainfully, she said, "Oh, every eatery is of the finest, exceptional quality in this town. But one roadside stand offers good burritos and other Mexican food at an affordable price and no formal wear is required," she sniffed.

After being thoroughly snubbed, we went into a nice cozy plaza restaurant and waited 30 minutes for our food to arrive. The crispy little chips, always served free with any Mexican food in Texas, were conspicuously absent from our table, so we requested them and were charged accordingly. After spending more than we intended for lunch, we continued our pursuit of the perfect Taos souvenir.

We soon learned that artistic creations in most of the galleries were priced way beyond our means but it was fun to window shop anyway. Gallery personnel, numbed from dealing with hundreds of tourists daily, would smile in a bored fashion or totally ignore us. An especially nice but obviously lonely proprietor attempted to enlighten us with a lengthy explanation of the featured artist's pottery techniques. "Incredible!" "That's great!" "Unbelievable!" came our cheerful replies as we tried to look knowledgeable about such facts. "Did you understand what she was talking about?" asked Sandy. "Oh gracious, no-I just smiled and acted impressed," I admitted.

Thus, after expending much energy and wearing out our shoe leather, we parted with little of our money in the New Mexico art center. Family members were amazed and pleasantly delighted with our frugality; little do they know that we plan to share our wealth back home in Hereford!

Fall fashions will vary across college campuses

By The Associated Press

Oversized sweaters, blue jeans and sweats are "in" for the nation's college campuses this fall, according to a national poll. Wide ties, neon colors, painter's pants and torn-neck T-shirts are "out."

Sunglasses were named as the accessory most essential to the collegiate wardrobe, while ties ranked as the least essential in the personal-interview survey of 1,000 students on 25 campuses.

The poll, conducted by the Roper Organization for Levi Strauss & Co., also indicated men like to see women in miniskirts and tight blue jeans, while women like to see men in khaki trousers, shorts, baggy blue jeans and business suits.

Other results included:
— More than three-quarters of students say their friends have the strongest influence on the style and type of clothes they wear.

— Vocalist Whitney Houston is the most admired female music star for her taste in fashion, and David Bowie is the most admired male.

— Blue jeans are worn 56 percent of the time by most students, and a majority prefer their jeans to be faded and worn (73 percent).

Students ranked bright colors as the most popular on campus (53 percent), with pastels a distant second (32 percent), followed by earth tones (27 percent), all black (26 percent) and Hawaiian prints (24 percent).

But there were regional differences in color and pattern preferences.

Students in the Northeast liked the all-black look, those in the Midwest preferred Hawaiian prints, and paisley patterns were popular in the South. Polka dots were the least popular pattern nationwide.

According to the survey, Whitney Houston was the choice of 21 percent as the best-dressed female music star, followed by Belinda Carlisle (16 percent) and Sade (9 percent). Tied with 6 percent each were Susanna Hoffs, Janet Jackson and Madonna.

David Bowie drew 15 percent of the vote for the male music star most admired for his taste in fashion, followed by Bruce Springsteen (13 percent), Huey Lewis (11 percent), Sting (9 percent) and Robert Palmer (8 percent). Tied with 6 percent each were Peter Gabriel and Lionel Richie.

In parts of England it was long believed that seeing a hen and rooster through a keyhole on St. Valentine's day foretold one's marriage within a year.

Moran, Schumacher exchange vows

MRS. CHRISTOPHER CHARLES SCHUMACHER
...nee Deborah Dawn Moran

Deborah Dawn "Debbie" Moran of Denton and Christopher Charles "Chris" Schumacher of Carrollton were married during an evening wedding Saturday, Aug. 1 at the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church of Denton. Father Daniel Williams of the church officiated. The bride is the daughter of Ken and Janell Moran of Denton. The bridegroom is the son of Joe and Ida Schumacher of Rt. 2, Hereford. The bride's honor attendant was Kalyn Steele. Best man was the groom's brother, Wayne Schumacher. Bridesmaids were Karrie Wolfe, Alison Love, and Kay Kelson. Groomsmen were Dick Reid, Dwayne Waters, and Norman Hill. The groom's niece, Tara Beth Artho of Wildorado, served as flower girl. Ring bearer was Kyle Keel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Keel. John and Melissa Bresnahan provided music and vocalized "This is the Day," "Sunrise, Sunset," "The Lord's Prayer," "Ice Castles Theme," and "Taste and See." Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a designer gown of shimmering white taffeta featuring an off-the-shoulder neckline bordered with pearls and Venice lace, which also enhanced the entire bodice down to the natural waistline. The puffed sleeves were embellished with matching white taffeta rosettes. Venice lace appliques accented the scalloped flounce skirt which flowed into a chapel-length train. To complete her ensemble, she wore a beaded headpiece from which a veil of bridal illusion flowed. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, pink roses, and baby's breath. She wore pearl and diamond earrings and necklace given to her by the groom. Bridal attendants wore tea-length baby pink taffeta dresses fashioned with a fitted bodice and puffed sleeves with a bow marking the back. They carried nosegays similar to the bride's floral arrangement.

A reception followed in the Crystal Ballroom. Servers were Laura Scribner, Gayle Moran, Jennifer Gage, Jonna Chapman, Vonda Kay Keel, and Julie Williams, who also presided at the registry.

At the reception, a country/western band named "Eldorado" played. Finger food was served and a champagne fountain was featured.

Still attired in wedding garb, the couple left for a wedding trip to Jamaica.

A 1983 graduate of Denton High School, the bride graduated in 1987 from North Texas State University with a bachelor's degree in secondary education. Currently a NTSU graduate student, she is a member of the Golden Key Honor Society, Dean's Honor Roll, and National Student Speech-Language Hearing Association.

The bridegroom is a 1981 graduate of Hereford High School and a 1986 graduate of NTSU. While there he was a member of Computer Information Systems organization, and was listed on the Dean's Honor Roll. He is employed by J.C. Penney Inc. in Dallas as a systems analyst.

Contest spotlights wool fashions

Wool will hold the fashion spotlight in Plainview Oct. 17 when the District 1 "Make-It-Yourself-With-Wool" contest is held at Wayland Baptist University, sixth and Smythe in the J. Lindsey Nun Building.

The contest, a preliminary event in the national competition, is to promote the use of wool, said Wynon Mayes, Texas Agricultural Extension agent in Hale county and coordinator of the local event.

The contest is open to any citizen in the Panhandle, South Plains and Rolling Plains areas, said Mayes. There will be four age divisions in the district competition: Pre-teen, under 14; Junior, 14-16; Senior, 17-21, and Adult, over 21, enabling all interested amateur seamstresses to enter. All entries must be registered two weeks prior to the contest, noted Mayes.

Each contestant must have sewn, knitted or crocheted a garment within the last year, Mayes said. Fabrics used for the contest must be at least 60 percent wool or mohair.

The District 1 event will begin at 8 a.m. Contestants will be judged while modeling the garment and accessories, and the garment then will be judged while off the contestant for construction techniques. There will be eight district contests held throughout Texas during October. The winners there will go on to the state competition Nov. 7 at Texas A&M University. Junior and senior winners at the state level will win an all expense paid trip to the national finals of the Make It Yourself With Wool contest. The national contest will be held here next January in San Antonio in conjunction with the National Woolgrowers convention.

Special thanks to all of the volunteers that helped with the Water Safety classes all summer. Congratulations to the students who worked hard at learning swimming and water safety.

Special thanks to everyone that helped with the Jubilee activities last weekend. A fun Saturday was had by many people. Thanks to Mike Carr and the Chamber volunteers for making it possible.

For over a century, the Red Cross worldwide has symbolized a universal spirit of humanitarian service in times of peace and war that rises above race, country, and creed. The emblem of the Red Cross stands for a practical idealism—a partnership of many people in the prevention and alleviation of human suffering.

For over a century, the American Red Cross has been implementing the international principals of the Red Cross.

The American Red Cross, as a national society, is a member of the

This congressional charter has been amended and updated periodically.

The American Red Cross is non-profit, nonsectarian, and non-political. It is an independent organization and is primarily financed by voluntary contributions. It has no counterpart in other humanitarian or charitable organizations in this country.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Waltzing With A Dictator by Raymond Bonner is a startling report on America's 20-year alliance with the "conjugal dictatorship" of Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos & his wife Imelda.

Bonner provides the most complete public account ever of Marcos's declaration of martial law in 1972 & the events he staged to justify his seizure of power.

Why did Washington look the other way as democracy was over taken? In this book Bonner addresses the broad question of why America, to its detriment, chooses to embrace dictators, be they Batista, the Shah, or Marcos.

Finally Raymond recounts in gripping detail the eventual downfall of Marcos, the role of Americans in helping Corazon Aquino, & the split within the Reagan administration over the support for Marcos. "Waltzing With A Dictator" is foreign-policy reporting at its finest.

Early Reagan by Anne Edwards is the first in-depth portrayal of Ronald Reagan's pre-government years. Ronald "Dutch" Reagan is the second son of a Scottish Presbyterian evangelistic mother & a Democratic Irish Catholic alcoholic father.

While attending Eureka College, Reagan led a student strike & had his first experience with public adulation. Edwards takes us through his jobless days during the Depression to his rise to regional celebrity status as a radio sportscaster in Des Moines, Iowa, and on to Hollywood. We watch him fall in love with actress Jane Wyman & understand why their marriage fails as his political ambition propelled him to the presidency of the Screen Actors Guild.

We witness Reagans' transformation from a New Deal liberal to a fervent anti-communist. The real story of his falling in love with Nancy Davis before becoming a spokesman for big business & finally making the choice to run for the governorship of California, is also a part of the complete portrait of the man who became this country's president.

After the heavy reading involved in the first two books it is time for something on the lighter fiction side. Blue Mountain by Margaret Gaan is set in Shanghai in the 1920's, the exciting, dangerous city whose underworld is ruled by "Big-Ears" Doo. In this thrilling account you will meet the members of the opium black market, Chiang Kai-Shek, and Mao Tse-tung.

Other titles included in this weeks new books are:

Reasonable Doubt - an investigation into the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

Fling by Louis L'Amour. Enchanted by Patricia Matthews and others.

Extension News

More outlet stores and even complete outlet shopping centers are opening in many Texas cities. Because reduced prices are the chief feature of these stores, shopping at an outlet store can be a money saver.

Although you can get real bargains at outlet stores, the merchandise will vary in quality and some may have flaws. One way to tell what you're getting is to know what the labeling terms on this outlet store merchandise means.

Here are some of the terms used in many stores:

Samples - These garments may have been used by sales representatives. They typically come in small sizes and may be "shop-worn."

Irregulars - This indicates an imperfection in color, size or fabric construction. The imperfections will not necessarily affect the wear of the garment and may not be visible. But make sure you know why the item has been labeled "irregular" before buying it.

Seconds - This term is applied to a garment with a visible tear, run, color loss or other imperfection.

Surpluses - These are generally "left-overs" either because they didn't sell well, or the manufacturer overestimated the number to make. End-of-the-season clothes and "odd lots" of broken sizes are also included in this category.

Mills-Ends are regular first quality fabrics that are from the end of a bolt of fabric. They usually come in short lengths and sell for a fraction of the cost. But check end of bolt fabric for flaws or wrinkles that may not press out.

Outlet stores were once usually located in low-rent districts or near the manufacturing plant, but now may be found anywhere. There are even some books that list outlet stores throughout the state or nation so people can take advantage of bargain shopping while they travel.

Remember that there will be some trade-offs for low prices. The stores are usually self-service, have few or no fitting rooms, limited shopping hours, no alteration services and allow no credit or returns but can be an effective saving for buying children school clothes.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Mexicans prepare for papal visit

By CAM ROSSIE Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Thousands of Roman Catholics planning pilgrimages to San Antonio, Texas, for the September visit of Pope John Paul II are being told to have their immigration documents in order and to be prepared to camp out.

"I would say not less than 20,000 people will be going to San Antonio" from Mexico, said the Rev. Carlos Alvarez, who is coordinating the event for the archbishop in Monterrey, the capital of the northern border state of Nuevo Leon and about 300 miles southwest of San Antonio.

"All the available buses in Monterrey, including school buses, already have been contracted," said Alvarez. Mexico, like all Latin American countries, is largely Roman Catholic.

Church officials estimate that nearly two million people packed the dry Santa Catarina river bed to see the pope during a stopover here on his 1979 tour of Mexico.

The pedestrian bridge where he stood to address the crowd is popularly called "the pope's bridge."

San Antonio is the closest to northeastern Mexico of the nine American cities on the pope's tour that begins Sept. 10 in Miami.

Similar preparations are under way in northwestern Mexico for possible visits to see the pope on his stops in Phoenix and Los Angeles.

Monterrey travel agencies offering package tours for the pope's Sept. 13 visit in San Antonio reported this week that little space remained.

"We're already full," said a spokeswoman at the Viajes Macay travel agency.

The Provotel agency, said the 100 rooms it reserved in San Antonio and the five buses it rented were filling up fast.

"There's a lot of demand," said Arturo Carcano of Provotel.

He said his agency is receiving reservations from all over Nuevo Leon state.

In Ciudad Victoria, the capital of northeastern Tamaulipas state 480 miles south of San Antonio, the Rev. Rodolfo Silva said buses were filling up fast for the trip.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm for the pope's visit," said Silva, vicar-general of the Catholic diocese in Ciudad Victoria.

Silva said about 100 people had signed up already this week to ride buses.

"Lots of people will go in their own cars," Silva said by telephone.

Church officials in Texas estimate that as many as 100,000 to 125,000 people from Mexico will travel to San Antonio for the papal visit.

Alvarez, who returned this week from a meeting with San Antonio Archbishop Patrick Flores, said campgrounds are being set aside there for travelers who haven't reserved hotel rooms.

San Antonio's approximately 17,000 hotel rooms reportedly already have been reserved for the Sept. 13 weekend.

Church officials in northern Mexico say they expect the pope to address border problems during the Mass he'll celebrate in San Antonio. "The topics are already set," said Alvarez. "The pope will speak of the problem of the undocumented workers."

Alvarez, who has written a book titled "Welcome" detailing the pope's travels throughout the world, said he'll go to Vatican City this week to present a copy to the pope and to begin a week of radio addresses from Rome to be aired on American radio stations.

Proceeds from the sale of the book in the United States and Mexico will go toward the construction of a chapel in honor of the Virgin of Guadalupe, Mexico's Virgin Mary, in St. Peter's Basilica, Alvarez said.

"It'll be a gift from people all over America," he said.

American authorities, meanwhile, are warning Mexicans to be sure they hold proper visas to enter the United States.

Silva said his diocese has made special arrangements to provide entry for Mexicans crossing into the United States with only their birth certificates and a letter signed by the bishop there.

But Robert Brown, spokesman for the U.S. Consulate in Monterrey, said American immigration authorities would not be granting special dispensations to Mexicans wishing to see the Pope.

American authorities here and in the Texas border city of Laredo, where the majority of Mexicans are expected to enter, say security will be tighter than ever to prevent undocumented workers or terrorists from entering the United States.

Brown said Mexican authorities also are on the lookout for suspicious individuals trying to get into the United States.

"Mexican authorities don't want to be responsible for anything happening to the pope," he said.

MRS. DAVID JAMES MCKAY

Spiral candelabra, a unity candle, and floral arrangements of white and blue flowers accented with pink ribbons adorned the church.

Maid of honor was Tammy Engledow of Panhandle. Best man was Ronnie McKay, brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Donna Cornet, the groom's sister, and Sherri Howard, the bride's sister.

Groomsmen were Don Cornet and Dan Howard.

Organist Cynde Reynolds of Dimmitt played such musical selections as "Heaven" and "Lost in Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white gown of organza fashioned with a sweetheart neckline composed of Schiffli lace ascending into a Victorian collar accented with beads. The basque waist was fashioned with Chantilly lace and flowed into a ruffled chapel-length train.

To complete her ensemble, she wore a fingertip-length veil of bridal illusion cascading from a beaded headpiece.

She carried a bouquet composed of blue and white roses intermingled with baby's breath.

Her attendants wore pink and white tea-length dresses featuring puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline with white ruffled lace. They carried bouquets of white roses.

A reception followed in the church. Brenda McKay served cake while Stacie Hammock served punch. Kasey Saul registered guests.

A blue satin table cloth covered with white lace adorned the tables. Topping the table was a three-tiered cake decorated with blue and pink hearts. Silver appointments were used and a floral arrangement of blue, pink, and white carnations centered the table.

Following a wedding trip to Carlsbad, N.M., the couple will be at home at 419 La Paloma Lane.

The bride will be a candidate for graduation from Hereford High School in 1988. The groom graduated from HHS in 1986.

GRIEVING FOR LOST BABIES

by George W. Morley, M.D.
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

The grief over a lost baby can be devastating for the parents, their family and friends, and for the medical staff involved. But for the mother in particular, who has felt a certain bonding with her unborn baby, the grief can be particularly intense and long lasting. She may need help.

For that troubled mother, the grieving process never seems to end, and she may have unresolved feelings of guilt, inadequacy, anger, and sadness for many years. If she can't work through her feelings, she may have serious parenting problems when the next child is born.

Although no person or action can erase the grief, friends and family can help ease the process. The mother should be told exactly what caused the baby's death, and should take part in funeral arrangements. The mother may be comforted by seeing and holding her dead baby; this helps to dispel any haunting fantasy about the baby. She should be allowed to be alone with the baby if she wishes, and to keep any mementos as proof of the baby's existence.

There is no exact timetable for grief, and it can have many different stages. It usually begins with shock and disbelief, when the mother feels great pain and loneliness. During this period, she must be able to talk about her feelings, and not be judged for what has happened.

Philanthropist to be recognized

NEW YORK (AP) — When Alice Tully decided to give money for Lincoln Center's 1,096-seat chamber music hall 18 years ago, she had to be talked into allowing it to be named after her.

The granddaughter of the founder of Corning Glass and second cousin of actress Katharine Hepburn will finally have her portrait hanging in Alice Tully Hall on her birthday, Sept. 11. She will be 85.

It is her first portrait. "There never seemed to be a reason before," she said.

The painting by Thomas Buechner, a Corning, N.Y., artist, was the idea of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, and will be unveiled following a concert honoring the philanthropist on Sept. 11.

Miss Tully was born in Corning, granddaughter of Amory Houghton and daughter of State Sen. William J. Tully. Her mother and Katharine Hepburn's mother were first cousins, and she recalls the young actress coming to stay for two weeks.

"She was a lively one, all right," Miss Tully said in her musical voice. "I was very, very serious. My parents always thought I was too serious."

Miss Tully, who goes out to hear classical music several times a week, was always interested in literature, art and music. "I always wanted to sing," she said.

"I was 15 when I heard pianist Josef Hofmann and that opened up untold vistas to me. ... Then I heard (Enrico) Caruso at the Metropolitan Opera. It was just glorious."

She began voice studies in New York and continued in Paris.

"My parents allowed me to go, even though they didn't exactly understand why. They thought Paris was the best place for me," she said. Miss Tully made her debut in Paris in 1927. "They didn't want Americans in opera there unless they were phenomenal. They didn't want them over here either. All that changed after the war."

When World War II began, she returned to the United States. She gave recitals at Town Hall in 1936, '38 and '39.

In 1946, Miss Tully went back to Paris, which she visits annually. "There was no heat to speak of. The Opera was so cold. People sat in their overcoats. You could sometimes see the breath of the singers," she said.

After the death of her mother, Miss Tully accepted a suggestion to become principal donor of the $4.5 million chamber music hall and to help found the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center which would perform there. The late Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, who was then governor of New York, talked the modest Miss Tully into having the hall named after her.

She undertook other cultural philanthropies and also has given help and advice to young musicians.

ART OF THE FANTASTIC

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition of more than 100 works by 29 artists from 10 Latin American nations, "Art of the Fantastic: Latin America, 1920-1987," has begun a four-city tour at the Indianapolis Museum of Art.

The exhibition traces the evolution of the "Fantastic" movement in Latin America. The majority of the works in the show never have been seen in the United States, and many never have appeared on public display. A number of the works are considered national treasures in their countries.

After the exhibition closes Sept. 13 at the Indianapolis museum, it will be seen at the Queens Museum, New York, Oct. 10-Jan. 6, 1988; Center for the Fine Arts, Miami, Jan. 15-March 4; and Centro Cultural-Arte Contemporaneo, Mexico City, March 25-May 22.

Where The Wine Drinkers Are And where they aren't

The average American adult drinks nearly 3.5 gallons of wine a year, but consumption varies widely from state to state. In Nevada, the typical adult consumes 7.43 gallons of wine a year, while in Mississippi, the average is less than a gallon per year.

'Vietnam War Story' to air

NEW YORK (AP) — "Platoon," "Full Metal Jacket," "Goodnight, Saigon" and now the network series "Tour of Duty."

The Vietnam War is popular film fare right now. A bad time, perhaps, for executive producer Georg Stanford Brown to launch his "Vietnam War Story" on HBO. The trilogy deserves a spotlight, not just a spot in the crowd.

Brown is a former actor ("The Rookies") who has become a successful director of such television shows as "Hill Street Blues," "Miami Vice" and "Cagney & Lacey," which stars his wife, Tyne Daly. Brown, Daly and Edward Gold formed Nexus Productions, and "Vietnam War Story" is the company's first project.

The three half-hour stories inspired by real-life accounts from veterans make their debut as a 90-minute special Aug. 28 on HBO. The three segments will be repeated individually throughout September.

"The Pass" is set in a Vietnamese brothel that caters to U.S. soldiers by evening, the Viet Cong after hours.

We meet three American soldiers on passes. Two are hardened veterans of the bush. The third is a behind-the-lines clerk who hungers for action — and he gets it unexpectedly when one of his war-weary buddies announces he's not going back to the fighting and hides in a storage room.

After the speakeasy has closed, the two remaining Americans are trapped as the enemy unknowingly surrounds them.

In "The Mine," a squad of grunts is assigned a new man, K.C. They think he's a fresh recruit, until they see his scars. He has been returned to the front after being wounded. He shuns their attempts at friendship and refuses to talk about himself. The rest of the squad soon distrusts him.

Out on patrol, K.C. steps on a weight-sensitive mine. If he steps off, it will explode, so he must stand there for hours, under a blazing sun, watched over by two fellow grunts who don't like him but have been assigned to keep him company until a promised explosives team shows up. They all know it never will.

As the day wears on, K.C. wears down and finally confesses his biggest fear and the horror behind it.

"Home" is set in a military hospital stateside. Zadig, an irreverent amputee, is self-appointed cheerleader for the rest of the disabled vets in his ward, chiding them to overcome their lost limbs, lives and spirits while repressing his own pain.

"From now on, we gotta rely on our brains, charm and dynamic personalities," he tells the depressed Olson, who responds, "You mean we're in that much trouble?"

When the Marines announce Zadig will be awarded a Silver Star, the others don't think he should accept it.

"What I did, what they're giving me that medal for, I didn't do it for the president, I didn't do it for no Silver Star," Zadig counters. "I was doing it for my buddies. I didn't trade my leg for a medal. I lost it helping my buddies."

Adultery is either grounds for divorce or evidence of irreconcilable differences and a breakdown of marriage in all 50 states.

Unknowns appear in summer's sleeper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sleeper of this lucrative summer at the nation's movie theaters appears to be "La Bamba," Columbia Picture's depiction of the brief, fabled life of pioneer rock 'n' roller Ritchie Valens.

During its first three weeks of release, "La Bamba," made for $6 million, earned $22 million. Although it entered the market with little fanfare and no stars, it captured good reviews and a strong box office.

Reviewers have credited much of the movie's success to its hitherto unknown star, Lou Diamond Phillips, who seems to embody the Pacoima, Calif., schoolboy whose musical gifts produced three major hits — "Come On, Let's Go," "Donna" and "La Bamba" — before his death in an airplane crash at the age of 17.

Phillips was born in the Philippines to a military father who was Scottish, Irish and Cherokee, and a Filipino-Hawaiian-Asian-Hispanic mother. Thus, he was only marginally Hispanic, unlike Valens whose real name was Richard Valenzuela.

The role presented a number of challenges to Phillips.

"Technically, I had to learn the guitar and portray a rock star, which I am not. I had to lip-sync and give performance energy — specifically performance energy of the late 1960s, which is different from rock today. That was just one aspect of the portrayal.

Then there was the character of Ritchie himself. I'm 25, and I had to remember what it was like for me at 17. Falling in love at 17 and having a sibling rivalry are fairly universal. But all of that became a little more difficult when I realized we were in 1958. It was a different, more innocent era, something that I'm certainly removed from. Fortunately, we had a two-week rehearsal period, so I was able to work into it."

Phillips also had to understand the Hispanic experience, and for that he credits writer-director Luis Valdez, whose Teatro Campesino produced "Zoot Suit" and other successful plays.

Phillips, who was named for a World War II hero, grew up mostly in Corpus Christi, Texas, and graduated in drama from the University of Texas at Arlington. He plunged into the theater of Dallas and Fort Worth and appeared in a few Texas-made films as well as such TV series as "Dallas" and "Miami Vice." His "American melting pot" looks allowed him to play a variety of ethnics.

The casting of Phillips as Valens was the culmination of a national talent search. He was videotaped in San Antonio, then flown to Los Angeles as a candidate for the role of Bob Valenzuela, Ritchie's troubled brother. Instead, Valdez and Hackford chose Phillips for the starring role.

Valens' music was recreated by the popular Los Lobos band, with David Hidalgo on vocals. "Fortunately, David and I have similar voices," said Phillips.

Ritchie Valens was killed with Buddy Holly and J.P. "Big Bopper" Richardson on Feb. 3, 1959, when their tour plane crashed in a cornfield in Clear Lake, Iowa.

New James Bond featured in movie

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer

James Bond is a new man this summer — literally.

And the happy news is that Timothy Dalton, number five on the Bond hit parade, is an attractive addition to the gallery of actors who have portrayed Ian Fleming's debonair Agent 007.

In "The Living Daylights," Dalton gives us a Bond who is less worldly-weary than Roger Moore and more realistic about life than the daring Sean Connery. He takes risks out of necessity, not just for fun.

This may be the first 007 opus in which distinctions between good and evil seem to blur and definitions of good guys and bad guys aren't crystal clear. The girl in the movie — and there's always a girl — debuts as a villain but quickly is revealed as a heroine. And wonder of wonders, James appears to be practicing safe sex: In this film he's a one-woman man.

Maryam D'Abo is the beautiful cellist who wins Bond's heart. One wishes she projected a little more fire; she's a bit wimpy as a sidekick in his wild adventures.

Many of the gimmicks of the 007 formula for box office success remain alive after 25 years — and they're still fun. Bond's sportscar still performs marvelous feats, and that master of spycraft, Q (Desmond Llewelyn), is older but still inventing gadgets such as an exploding keyring with a whistled song as the trigger.

There are car chases, airplane chases and a breath-catching race down a ski slope with a $150,000

Stradivarius cello as a toboggan. James is always good for a few laughs.

There are spies, counterespies and spies whose affiliation is doubtful. Jeroen Krabbe, as General Georgi Koskov, a Russian defector (or is he?) is an urbane addition to the Bond bad guys. If Bond is monogamous, Georgi is not.

In the end, the story involving international arms and drug dealing seems incidental to the action scenes set in exotic locales including Morocco and Afghanistan.

Director John Glen keeps the action moving at a swift pace, and producer Albert Broccoli, who launched the Ian Fleming thrillers 25 years ago, has tampered with a successful formula.

Times change, but 007 is a constant for solid entertainment. And with those dimples and green eyes, the born-again James is sure to charm a whole new generation of Bond fans.

"The Living Daylights" is rated PG for violence, which is a Bond staple. Running time is 130 minutes.

Of success

Avocados, yogurt have sweet smell

WASHINGTON (AP) — In this dog-eat-dog world of happy winners and downtrodden losers, pause for a moment to consider the avocado. It's one of the big winners. Consumer use of avocados has climbed 100 percent since the 1951-55 period and more than 157 percent since the 1971-75 years, says the Agriculture Department's annual report on what Americans are eating, and how much.

Fresh, sweet and lowfat are how USDA researchers describe foods gaining favor with U.S. consumers. And the avocado's success pales beside consumption figures for a handful of other products. Apple juice consumption per capita is up 1,133.3 percent since the 1951-55 period, yogurt 2,900 percent and lowfat milk a dizzying 25,566.7 percent.

Though Americans increasingly turn to fresh food, consumption of frozen potatoes has gone up 4,750 percent since 1951-55 and 27.6 percent since 1971-75. Fresh potato consumption was off 49.6 percent and 11.8 percent respectively.

No product has suffered a falloff in consumer affections steep enough to compare with the upswing in avocados.

But passing years and consumer tastes have not been kind to lard.

Use of lard by consumers is down 80.4 percent from the 1951-55 period and 35.3 percent from 1971-75. Back in the 1950s, Americans consumed 11.2 pounds of lard per capita a year. Today it's 2.2 pounds.

Consumers are eating more chicken and turkey. Chicken consumption is up 146.8 percent from the 1951-55 period and 33.4 percent from the 1971-75 period. With turkeys, it's 133.3 percent and 52.6 percent.

Lamb is down 55.3 percent and 29.2 percent. Veal is off 74 percent and 9.1 percent. Butter declined 47.2 percent and 2.1 percent. Whole milk consumption dropped 51 percent and 32.3 percent. But cheese use increased, 171.1 percent and 52.6 percent.

Sweetener use per capita has climbed to record levels, primarily because of increasing soft drink consumption and increasing use of corn syrup and noncaloric sweeteners by the industry. Corn sweetener use was up 462.2 percent over 1951-55 and 145.4 percent over 1971-75.

Refined sugar use was down 25.3 percent and 26.8 percent.

Coffee, tea or milk?

If flight attendants are inclined to revive that old query, the response is likely to be a request for some sort of diet drink, at least if USDA consumer statistics are any guide. There was less overall demand for all three of the traditional offerings.

Coffee consumption was down almost 29 percent since 1965. Total milk dropped 18 percent.

Beer consumption in 1985 was up 41 percent from 1965 and hard liquor use 13 percent. Wine increased 150 percent over the last 20 years.

The 1985 figures still represented a drop of 9 percent for beer and 15 percent for hard liquor from the 1981-85 average. USDA attributed the falloff to "a backlash against drinking and driving and greater consumer interest in nutrition and fitness." An actual gain in wine consumption can be attributed to the growing popularity of wine coolers, mixtures of wine and fruit juice, which now account for 14 percent of total wine consumption, USDA said.

The USDA report, National Food Review, also contained information on food prices. Roast beef, for example, for 14 cents a pound; a quart of milk for nine cents; bacon, 19 cents a pound; potatoes, 75 cents a bushel; and eggs, 29 cents a dozen.

Don't run out to the store to take advantage of those bargains, though, unless you have a time machine. Those were the prices in 1869 — four years after the Civil War.

In 1986, average retail prices according to USDA were: roast beef $1.59 a pound, milk 56 cents a quart, bacon $2.08 a pound, potatoes $14.40 a bushel and eggs 87 cents a dozen.

The report said that the average American earned $791 a year in 1869. Of that, $479 was spent on groceries, according to USDA's Economic Research Service. That accounted for 61 percent of income compared with about 14 percent for food, tobacco and beverages in 1983.

In all, Americans spent $437.1 billion on food in 1986 compared to $438.4 billion for housing, $316.1 billion for medical care, $182 billion for motor vehicles and parts, $165.1 billion for clothing and shoes, $137.3 billion for furniture and household equipment and $114.2 billion for savings.

Food alone claimed 10.9 percent of the average American's disposable income in 1983. It was the low end of the international scale presented in the report. Other countries ranged from 46.7 percent in the Philippines to 12.3 percent in Canada.

Other selected countries: United Kingdom 13.5 percent, France 15.7 percent, West Germany 20 percent, Italy 21.3 percent, Honduras 42.5 percent, Korea 37.5 percent, Thailand 34.9 percent, Greece 29.9 percent, Columbia 28.5 percent.

Abandoned stations get business tune-up

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A large map of the United States stands against the wall in Donald Ervin's office here, its face dotted with yellow flags and yellow push pins that trace the extent of one of the country's most successful franchisors — Precision Tune Inc.

Each of the flags represents one of the dozens of subfranchisors developing Precision Tune centers in different parts of the nation, and each of the 366 pins marks the location of a single store.

An observer's eye is naturally drawn to the clusters of yellow pins that decorate several metropolitan areas on the upper right side of the map, but Ervin, chairman and chief executive officer of Precision Tune, pays more attention to the wide open areas in the rest of the country.

Ervin plans to triple the number of Precision Tune franchises in the next five years, to 1,000 centers, and most of the growth will come in those wide open areas.

Although most of Ervin's yellow flags and pins are concentrated in the heavily populated northern and eastern parts of the country, Precision Tune got its start in Beaumont.

Bill Childs opened the first Precision Tune in 1975 in an abandoned service station at 4th and College streets. Childs, who was running a janitorial service company at the time, was looking for a business that would do well in an economic slump. He found one.

He opened a second location in Groves six months after the first, and began franchising the shops in 1978. By 1979, the company had 30 franchises. That number had jumped to 150 two years later.

His formula for a specialty tune-up shop that could get the job done in a few hours and do it cheaply was a hit.

The original Precision Tune at College and 4th is still there, but it was sold to franchisee Kirk Broiles. Precision Tune sold its last company-owned store in 1986 and now operates only through its franchisees.

Ervin is a newcomer to Precision Tune. He was a banker for 28 years, the last 12 of them as president of Enterprise Bank in Fairfax County, Va., outside Washington, D.C. Those 28 years in banking were devoted to "supplying funds to small and growing businesses," Ervin says.

He became interested in franchising several years ago, and he was particularly interested in the auto aftermarket — specialty stores that provide service and repair to automobiles — because he was handling loans for a number of such businesses.

Ervin says he decided to leave banking because a number of changes in the industry had made his job less fulfilling. The franchise industry was a natural place to look for a second career because he believed franchise businesses would take an increasing portion of the consumer dollar in coming years. He was already familiar with Precision Tune through franchisors in the Washington area.

"I liked the way the company was run, and I liked the potential market for it," he says.

So last September he contacted Childs to see if he would be interested in selling his company, which by then had grown to about 350 franchises.

Ervin and a group of Washington investors completed the purchase April 30, and he took over as chairman, chief executive officer and president. He has wasted little time in gearing up the company to triple in size over the next five years.

Ervin says the key to any successful franchise operation is finding a good site. To this end he hired Bill Chaffee, whom he describes as "the top man in the franchising field on site selection." Chaffee, who recently joined Precision Tune as senior vice president for franchise development, comes from Grandy's Inc., where he headed up the site selection program for that fast food chain.

Childs, Ervin says, mostly left the site selection to the individual franchisors, but with Chaffee's hiring the company will become more involved in finding good locations for its franchisees.

Meanwhile, Ervin devoted his first two months at Precision Tune to developing a new marketing strategy for the chain. Marketing studies show that customers have become more interested in the quality of the service done on their cars, he says, so the company is changing the emphasis of its advertising.

In the past, Ervin says, customers were interested most in price and fast service, and this is what Precision Tune sold in its ads.

The first marketing change Ervin made was to double Precision Tune's warranty on tune-ups to 12 months or 12,000 miles and to emphasize that warranty in the company's advertising.

Precision Tune has its corporate headquarters, training center and central warehouse in Beaumont, with a total payroll of about 60 people.

The company's advertising is developed in Beaumont, franchisees and employees are trained here and the warehouse provides supplies for any dealers who want to buy from the company.

But Ervin may not keep the company in Beaumont. Precision Tune has only 18 locations in Texas, and with most of the 366 in the northern and eastern United States, Beaumont is an inconvenient place for a headquarters.

The company is now studying how it can best provide service to its franchisees, and Ervin says he expects at least some of the support services to eventually be located closer to the bulk of the franchisees.

Ervin hopes to develop a training institute to help meet the increasing demand for auto-service technicians that has accompanied the increasing complexity of the automobile. The days of the self-taught backyard mechanic are passing, Ervin says, and automobile service demands more and more training.

His institute would "retrain some of the qualified people who have lost their jobs in the industrial segment."

A Precision Tune franchise costs a minimum of $101,000 to $120,000 to open, and $15,000 of that is the franchise fee paid to Precision Tune Inc. A franchisor also agrees to pay a royalty of 7.5 percent of gross and devote at least 9 percent of gross to advertising.

The cost of beginning a regional subfranchise varies, depending on the population of the region and the number of potential sites, but it is usually at least $200,000 to $250,000, including the fees paid to the company and the set-up costs. A subfranchisor agrees to open up at least one center in his area and to establish a training center for his franchisees.

Ervin says a Precision Tune franchise grosses an average of $280,000 a year, and the system had total sales of $85 million in 1986.

NAS approves gene engineering

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's top scientists are trying to counter claims that modern genetic engineering is wrong and dangerous by warning that it isn't the technique that counts, but what you create.

A report issued Tuesday by the National Academy of Sciences said the new recombinant DNA techniques are "powerful and safe" and no more dangerous in themselves than traditional breeding and other techniques in use for thousands of years.

Recombinant DNA techniques involve the lifting of a gene from the DNA, the genetic material, of one organism and the insertion of the gene into the DNA of another organism. This technique is used to force bacteria to use human genes to produce human growth hormone in amounts useful for treating certain diseases like dwarfism in children.

Many don't realize that the older "engineering" techniques of fermentation and breeding mean "we have beer and yogurt, roses and race horses," said one of the authors of the academy report, Dr. Nina V. Federoff, an embryologist at the Baltimore station of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The new techniques offer great benefits in agriculture, medicine and pollution abatement and can lessen dependence on toxic chemicals like pesticides if society can achieve "a wise balance between the thrust of innovation and the restraint of regulation," the report said.

The panel, in calling for an urgent effort to draft guidelines "from an ecological perspective" for researchers and regulators, concluded:

"There is no evidence that unique hazards exist either in the use of recombinant DNA techniques or in the movement of genes between unrelated organisms.

"The risks associated with the introduction of recombinant DNA-engineered organisms are the same in kind as those associated with the introduction of unmodified organisms and organisms modified by other methods.

The Environmental Protection Agency requires notice, for its approval, of plans to release genetically modified organisms into the environment outside of laboratories.

DON'T WAIT 'TIL THE DOOR IS LOCKED!

Someone asked Jesus, "Will only a few be saved?" And He replied, "The door to heaven is narrow. Work hard to get in, for the truth is that many will try to enter but when the head of the house has locked the door, it will be too late. Then if you stand outside knocking, and pleading, 'Lord, open the door for us,' He will reply, 'I do not know you.'
"But we ate with You, and You taught in our streets,' you will say.
"And He will reply, 'I tell you, I don't know you.
You can't come in here, guilty as you are. Go away.'
"And there will be great weeping and gnashing of teeth as you stand outside and see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all the prophets within the Kingdom of God—for people will come from all over the world to take their places there.
And note this: some who are despised now will be greatly honored then; and some who are highly thought of now will be least important then."
A few minutes later some Pharisees said to Him, "Get out of here if you want to live, for King Herod is after you!"
Jesus replied, "Go tell that fox that I will go on casting out demons and doing miracles of healing today and tomorrow; and the third day I will reach my destination. Yes, today, tomorrow, and the next day! For it wouldn't do for a prophet of God to be killed except in Jerusalem!
"O, Jerusalem, Jerusalem! The city that murders the prophets. The city that stones those sent to help her. How often I have wanted to gather your children together even as a hen protects her brood under her wings, but you wouldn't let Me.
And now—now your house is left desolate. And you will never again see Me until you say, 'Welcome to Him who comes in the name of the Lord.'

"the winning choice"

Medicare patients could get better care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The thousands of Medicare patients needing heart bypass surgery each year could get top-dollar treatment at bargain-basement prices by going to hospitals that specialize in the operation, a government report says. "The irony is that we can afford to send our beneficiaries to the very best and have a good outcome and it will be cheaper," Inspector General Richard P. Kusserow of the Department of Health and Human Services said Tuesday.

The survey he outlined for reporters found that "hospitals and surgical teams that perform more than 200 (bypass) surgeries per year have better outcomes in terms of mortality rates, lengths of stay and charges." With the government spending about $1.5 billion a year on bypass surgery for an estimated 63,000 Medicare beneficiaries, the potential savings are significant. Noting that "some of the nation's most prominent cardiac surgeons and medical centers are offering package prices for (bypass) surgery," the report concluded: "If the Health Care Financing Administration negotiated similar rates for Medicare, more than $192 million could be saved each year in hospital and medical insurance reimbursement."

The report said the Texas Heart Institute, one of the nation's most respected bypass surgery centers, charges a flat $13,000 for the procedure compared with the average Medicare payment of $24,588. "If we were to fly the beneficiary and spouse (to Texas) first class, put the spouse up in a first-class hotel and give them an economy rental car we'd come out cheaper than Medicare does now," Kusserow said.

Medicare does not pay such travel expenses now but Kusserow said, "Maybe it should." However, he said he used the Texas example not to advertise the facility nor to suggest everyone should be sent there, but to "dramatize that there is a great differential" in costs.

In fact, the inspector general said he does not envision Medicare patients being diverted to a few nationally known centers, but merely to scores of regional hospitals that do enough bypass operations to offer top care for relatively low cost.

Moreover, he emphasized that he is not suggesting elderly Americans be forced to go anywhere for treatment.

However, Kusserow said he was convinced many Medicare beneficiaries would want to go to hospitals with the best track records if they understood the statistical advantages and had the option of having travel expenses paid.

Kusserow, like other federal inspectors general, was appointed by the president and approved by the Senate and operates independently of the agency he monitors.

His suggestions were made to department officials before being made public and are under consideration.

One was accepted outright: that peer review organizations look over planned elective bypass surgeries before authorizing them under Medicare.

That is in response to increasing controversy stemming from recent studies that suggest many potential bypass patients would fare better with drug treatment or other therapy than with the surgery.

Child support pay down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women's groups are reacting with dismay to a new government study showing that the average child-support payment to mothers on their own has dropped sharply.

"I'm astounded," said Sara Rix of the Women's Research and Education Institute.

Nancy Ebb of the Children's Defense Fund termed the findings

"certainly disheartening." And Ruth Sanders of the Census Bureau, who compiled the new report, said a drop in child-support payments is "certainly unfortunate," while admitting that the reasons are not clear.

Her study found that child-support payments averaged $2,215 in 1985, down from $2,528 in 1983, in constant dollars adjusted for inflation. That is a drop of 12.4 percent.

It wasn't the first time the average child-support payment has fallen, Sanders pointed out, with earlier studies finding a 16 percent decrease between 1978 and 1981. From 1981 to 1983 there was no significant change, she said.

Sanders added that on the positive side, the new study found an increase in the share of women with children being awarded child-support in their divorce or separation agreements.

That climbed from 57.7 percent to 61.3 percent of mothers raising children, she said. And it may help account for some of the drop in the average payment, she said.

It is possible, she said, that those are cases in which low income by the father would have resulted in no support award in the past. Now a judge has made an award, but it may be relatively small in these cases and pull down the average, she said.

Another factor that would pull down the average, Sanders suggested, could be that the number of very large awards has declined.

In addition, Rix said 1985 might have been too soon to see an effect from new federal laws toughening collection procedures from absent fathers.

John F. Coder, head of the Census Bureau's income statistics branch, said the amounts of child support awarded by judges have declined by about the same amount as the drop in actual payments.

The drop in child support was confined to white families, where the average support collection fell from $2,672 to $2,294, the study showed.

For black families the average payment rose from $1,582 to $1,754, and for Hispanics it edged up from $1,986 to $2,011.

White women were much more likely to have been awarded child-support payments in the first place, however, at 71 percent. That compares with 36 percent of black women and 42 percent of Hispanic women.

The report found 8.8 million mothers with children and absent fathers, up from 8.7 million two years earlier.

Insurers excluding AIDS

AUSTIN (AP) — Some Texas insurance companies have started to exclude coverage of AIDS in their group health plans, saying that claims from victims could cost millions of dollars.

The so-called exclusion riders are precautions that many companies take in writing individual policies, but group insurers generally had not considered such precautions necessary because the risks were spread over broad segments of the population.

Critics say that such measures will shift the burden of paying for AIDS treatment to the public.

"If people think it will save money, they're wrong, because they'll be paying for it in their taxes," said William Waybourn, president of the Dallas Gay Alliance. "It's the same game."

At Texas Investors Life Insurance Co. of San Antonio, founded two years ago, company officials excluded AIDS coverage because of the potential expense, said President Jim Long.

"We just felt at the time, and still do, that coverage for AIDS, because of the tremendous expense of a single case, for a young company like ours was prohibitive," said Long. "It could just put us out of business."

Five companies recently made unilateral changes in contracts already in effect, according to records of the State Board of Insurance.

One company's policy change sparked a protest from at least one person.

Robert Mooney, owner of J.R. Mooney Galleries in Austin and San Antonio, said he complained to the state board, legislators and congressmen after GIC insurance of San Antonio notified him of the change.

"And I'm not beginning to finish writing letters," said Mooney. "If they can single out something, there's no reason cancer shouldn't be next, or transplants — they're expensive — until all it covers is an occasional accident. And that's not what a major medical policy is for."

The state board doesn't have figures for how many firms took other steps to restrict or drop coverage of the disease, said spokesman Lee Jones. Such steps could include re-writing contracts as they expire or including AIDS in riders that apply to other diseases.

Jones said none of the practices violates state insurance regulations.

Other Texas insurers who have filed exclusion riders with the state board are American Security Life Insurance Co., Durham Life of Raleigh N.C., Employers Health Insurance Co. of DePere, Wis.

Public health authorities predict the number of people suffering from the disorder and its related diseases in Texas will be more than 16,000 by 1991. The cost of treating a single case from diagnosis to death has been estimated at between $65,000 and $75,000.

President William McKinley was shot by an assassin Sept. 6, 1901. He died eight days later.

But, Story, PRINCE VALIANT'S PLAN HAS WORKED. HE AND HIS MEN ARE INSIDE THE HORSE AND THE PEOPLE OF HIPPOPOLIS WANT TO GET RID OF IT. AT LONG LAST VAL HAS FOUND A WAY TO LEAVE THIS FORBIDDEN CITY. THE CITIZENS GATHER AROUND THE HORSE AS THE SOLON STANDS TO SPEAK:

"CITIZENS," HE SAYS, "WE MADE OUR DECISION, BUT HOW SHALL WE RID OURSELVES OF THIS ACCURSED MONUMENT?"

ONE FELLOW PIES UP: "I SAY WE BURN IT. WE TAKE IT OUTSIDE THE WALLS AND BUILD A GIANT PYRE AND BURN IT, AND MAYBE ROAST A FEAST OVER THE EMBERS TO CELEBRATE." VAL FEELS SEVERAL PAIRS OF EYES GLARING AT HIM.

"ALL RIGHT, ALL RIGHT," SAYS PRINCE VALIANT, "AT LEAST I HAD AN IDEA." THE LOOKS AROUND HIM ARE DECIDEDLY UNFRIENDLY.

NOW THE SOLON ADDRESSES HIS FELLOW CITIZENS: "WOULD IT NOT BE WISE AMASSING TO TOW THE HORSE OUT TO THE OLD ROAD NEAR THE EASTERN MEADOW AND WATCH IT ROLL OFF THE CLIFF AND BREAK INTO A THOUSAND PIECES?" THE CROWD DECIDES THAT THIS WOULD INDEED BE AMUSING. THEY SET TO WORK. NEXT WEEK: Rough Riders.
