The forecast is calling for a 50 percent chance of showers tonight and a 40 percent chance of rain for tomorrow as another cold front approaches the region.

The front kept temperatures cool over the region Sunday and Monday, with a high Monday, under intermittent sunshine, of just 80 degrees.

Partly cloudy skies, warm to hot temperatures and scattered showers and thunderstorms are forecast across Texas through Wednesday.

A high pressure system aloft was the state's main weathermaker, but a low pressure system at the surface caused showers and thunderstorms to linger today along the Texas-New Mexico border in extreme West Texas and in the Panhandle.

Forecasters say the showers and thunderstorms could be expected over most sections of the state through Wednesday but said they would be scattered Li widely scattered with many areas not expected to receive an significant rainfall.

DOE studying land reports

By DEBE GRAVES Staff Writer

The Salt Repository Project Office of the Department of Energy in Hereford is reviewing a Land Acquisition Planning Report prepared by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers that could allow DOE to soon begin attaining land in northern Deaf Smith County.

The report was initially due in DOE offices in mid-July but was held up in the Corps' offices due to a medical emergency of one of the reviewers. A further delay was caused when SRPO officials reviewed the plan and requested more backup of some recommendations with more specific details.

The report will be reviewed by local DOE officials and then will be sent to Washington for review and approval by the DOE head office, according to Linda McClain, manager for Institutional Relations for SRPO from one to two weeks and then comes back to the Hereford office for public release," she said. "Barring any further problems the plan will hopefully be public within the next

The plan is expected to outline the process by which DOE plans to pbtain land within a nine square mile area in northern Deaf Smith County for site characterization studies for the potential placement of a highlevel nuclear waste repository.

The plan will also provide information for area farmers regarding land, outside the nine square miles zone, the DOE will want to lease for field studies.

The Corps of Engineers has announced earlier it plans to hold a meeting with landowners, then begin a private negotiation process for purchasing the land. DOE has said that condemnation of the land would be a final alternative.

Hance gets RRC position

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Vowing to "fight for the roughnecks" throughout the state, former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance accepted an appointment to the Texas Railroad Commission.

Hance, twice rejected by voters in bids for statewide office, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to replace Democrat Mack Wallace,

"I will fight for the roughnecks and oil field workers throughout the state of Texas," Hance said Monday as he announced his acceptance.

Hance, 44, will become the first Republican on the three-member panel that regulates the trucking and oil and gas industries.

He said he promised Clements he would run for the commission post in 1988 to complete Wallace's unexpired term, which ends in 1990. Hance said he made no commitment about a 1990

"We agreed that 1990 is just too far in the future," Hance said. "So many things can happen in two years."

Hance said his acceptance of the vices, a subsidiary of West Texas RRC job will force him to give up an earlier appointment from Clements to the Texas College and University Sytstem Coordinating Board. In addition, he said, he will have to sell his interest in the law firm in which he is currently a partner.

Hance said he plans to use his experience as a former congressman in the $70,000-a-year RRC post to exert influence in Washington on behalf of Texas energy producers. He said he plans to work with state and federal officials, as well as with members of the energy industry, to develop a policy to strengthen domestic energy production.

"We just can't afford to let the oil and gas industry go down the drain, considering the national security and economic importance of the industry. We're on the verge of losing the industry if we don't do something, and we just can't let that happen," he said.

New tax is real garbage

Texans begin paying new state sales taxes on various services in October, including their trash pickup.

The garbage tax is the result of the record $5.7 billion tax increase passed during a July special session by the Texas Legislature to make up for revenue lost by dropping oil prices.

The sales tax will add a 7.25 percent charge to the cost of city-run and private garbage pickup service. The state comptroller's office estimates the new tax will net the state more than $100 million and cities will reap $30.6 million.

The tax on garbage is only required in cities that bill residents a direct fee for pickup. Cities such as Houston that provide garbage service through property taxes or other general city funds aren't required to charge the sales tax. Those cities are not legally considered to be "selling" garbage ser-

To many Texans, the additional charge is rubbish.

The state law also exempts cities that don't have a local 1 cent city sales tax.

Residents in Dallas and San Antonio and many other Texas cities will have to pay the added charge.

Although municipal officials statewide supported the concept of a broadened sales tax, many are upset with items that lawmakers included in the list of taxable items.

"It almost seems like you're being taxed twice," said Tom Davis, acting director of the department that runs gabage pickup in Fort Worth.

"We're simply implementing what the state passed. We have no choice," Davis told the Fort Worth

In Fort Worth, the tax amounts to 46 cents more per monthly bill of

School viewing AIDS education

HOUSTON (AP) - A new $100,000 AIDS education program formulated by the Harris County Medical Society for teens has been unveiled, but officials at the Houston Independent School District have not decided whether the students will see it.

Dr. Max Butler, the medical society's president, said the program is three-pronged and includes a videotape for teachers, a videotape for students ages 12-18 and a booklet written for those over age 16. It will be made available to schools and the public free of charge, he said.

But although Butler said HISD officials participated in every phase of the program's development, Superintendent Joan Raymond said she and her staff have not yet seen and evaluated the booklet or the videotape for students.

The videotape for teachers was her priority, she said. That will be shown to school nurses, health and physical education techers, life science teachers and elementary school counselors beginning Thursday.

"I do know they have been working on a booklet. We have not seen or reviewed the booklet," Raymond told the Houston Chronicle.

"We are most anxious to get the video for the teachers," she said. "The booklet is another step. We will determine for ourselves the best way for it to be used."

She said she would review the material when she receives copies of it. It will probably be presented to the school board Sept. 4, Raymond

The purpose of printing 200,000 copies of the booklet was to get the information into the hands of high school-age students, Butler said.

Judith Livingston, director of health education for the Houston Academy of Medicine, said it is up to each of the 23 individual school districts in the Houston area to decide how to use the books.

"It was written for students ages 16 and older," she said.

"We are planning to offer it to all districts," she said. Plans now call for the medical society to provide schools with classroom sets of the

The program will be presented to all superintendents at a meeting Sept. 10, Butler said. Complimentary copies of the tapes will be made available to elementary, junior high and high schools.

Dr. Adan Rios, another member of the physician advisory committee, plans to translate the booklet into Spanish as soon as possible.

The program, funded by the medical society and the Houston Academy of Medicine, is the most massive education effort directed at students in the area, he said.

Attorney says

Textbook case will go to Supreme Court

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Seven families, said he would appeal to the families whose award of more than $50,000 was overturned in a suit dubbed "Scopes II" pledged a U.S. Supreme Court battle to shield their children from "godless" books like "The Wizard of Oz."

"We didn't start it to lose," said Robert L. Mozert, one of the fundamentalist Christian parents whose lawsuit was rejected Monday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. "A temporary delay will not spoil the victory in the end."

The appeals court reversed a decision by U.S. District Judge Thomas G. Hull, who ruled last October that the Hawkins County school board violated the families' rights by ignoring their religious beliefs and requiring their children to read the assigned texts or leave public school.

Hull, who heard the case in Greenville, awarded the families damages of more than $50,000. He also ruled that children could be taught reading at home and go to public school the rest of the day. The appeals court ordered Hull to dismiss the entire

Vicki Frost, a Rogersville mother and leading witness in the case, said she was not disappointed that Hull's decision was reversed, saying the case was not over.

The parents listed more than 300 objections to the assigned readings, including passages from "The Diary of Anne Frank," which was said to instruct that all religions are equal in God's eye, and from "The Wizard of Oz." which they said contradicted the Bible's lesson that all witches are

The lawsuit also objected to passages in stories by anthropologist Margaret Mead, science fiction writer Isaac Asimov, and fairy tale author Hans Christian Andersen.

Mrs. Frost said the families' attorneys will first ask all 16 judges of the 6th Circuit to review the threedge panel's ruling. Michael Farris, a Washington, D.C., attorney representing the nation's highest court.

"We always viewed this level of the decision as just a whistlestop on the way to an ultimate decision by the U.S. Supreme Court," said Farris, reached by telephone. He represents Concerned Women for America, a Washington-based lobbying group retained on behalf of the Rebecca Hagelin, a group spokeswoman, said the organization works to preserve the rights of families and Judeo-Christian traditions.

Timothy Dyk, a Washington lawyer retained by the liberal lobbying group People for the American Way to back the county Board of Education in the lawsuit, called the appellate ruling "a wonderful decision. I think it's a great triumph for the public school system."

The parents sued the board in 1983, claiming that the required books violated their beliefs by teaching evolution, secular humanism, the occult, feminism and other beliefs they consider godless.

Chief Judge Pierce Lively, writing for the appeals court, ruled that there was no violation of First Amendment rights because the school board did not force the children to believe what they read in a series of Holt, Rinehart, Winston textbooks. The July 1986 trial took place 150 miles from Dayton, where Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryan argued in the 1925 "Scopes" trial whether evolution should be taught in Tennessee public schools. The 1925 law outlawing the teaching of evolu-tion was repealed by the Tennessee Legislature 42 years later.

The Department of Transportation received more than 10,000 complaints from disgruntled airline passengers last year, up from less than 7,000 in 1985. Editorial criticizes Baptists for employment policy tack on the wife of the Rev. Walker the nation's largest Methodist weekly newspaper criticizes Southern Baptists for a policy that requires its employees to profess that the Bible is true in all areas.

The editorial, written by the Rev. Spurgeon Dunnam III in the Aug. 28 edition of The United Methodist Reporter, calls the policy "disturbing" and "regrettable."

"Pragmatically, adopting a policy that attempts to dictate the beliefs of others is more likely to polarize and increase disunity among Southern Baptists than to produce the soughtafter conformity," Dunnam said in the editorial.

"Theologically, Protestant Christians long have emphasized that one's conscience should be regarded as inviolable," the editorial continued.

the Southern Baptist Fome Mission Board. The Atlanta-based board oversees evangelism efforts in the United States and has about 365 staff members and more than 3,600 domestic missionaries.

The employment policy was adopted earlier this summer by the Home Mission Board and requires all future missionaries and staff employees to profess that the Bible is historically, theologically, scientifically and philosophically ture. That belief reflects the opinion of conservative and fundamentalist members among the 14.6 million Southern Baptists.

The editorial, written by Dunnam and associate editor Stephen Swecker, was meant to elucidate differences between Baptist and Methodists, Dunnam said Monday.

"This kind of issue has an educational function," Dunnam told the Dallas Times Herald Monday. "This points out how our tradition is different. It's narrowness vs. broadness."

DALLAS (AP) - An editorial in biblical infallibility, the idea that the Bible is correct in all areas, saying, "we should challenge them to explain their doctrinaire belief in biblical infallibility when the Bible makes no such claim for itself."

The editorial surprised and upset some Texas Baptists.

"I kind of resent people taking us to task on this when we know what our own internal business is," said the Rev. Rudy Hernandez, a San Antonio pastor who is a member of the Home Mission Board.

"If I believed like my sweet Methodist brothers, I'd be a Methodist," he added.

The Rev. Elton "Butch" Ikels, another San Antonio pastor who is a member of the Home Mission Board, had a stronger reaction.

People who don't believe in a literal hell and heaven, the Genesis account of creation and Jesus' resurrection shouldn't be called Baptists, he said.

"These are some very elementary basic beliefs," Ikels said. "If we don't have these things in common maybe we are two separate denominations."

If Methodists would take a stronger stand on the Bible, Ikels continued, their numbers might not be decreasing. Membership in the United Methodist Church has been declining for several years while Southern Baptists have had slight

"We don't look to people outside our denomination for advice on how to do things," Ikels said. "And we certainly don't look to other people whose numbers are dwindling.'

Skinny-dipping charges dropped

AUSTIN (AP) - Citations issued to three nude sunbathers at a popular Lake Travis nude beach will be voided because it's not against the law to do a little skinny-dipping in Texas, a prosecutor says.

The citations were issued Monday to three swimmers, two men and a woman, after an anti-pornography group complained to Travis County authorities.

Travis County Sheriff Doyne Bailey says the citations issued at Hippie Hollow will be voided because he and County Attorney Ken Oden determined that the swimmers committed no crime by skinny dipping in the rock, shrubbed cove.

Nude swimming or sunbathing at Lake Travis is technically illegal, but the sheriff's department receives few complaints about it, Bailey said. Besides, a sign at the beach's entrance warns patrons of possible

"Under this set of circumstances, it is stretching the law to penalize somebody for it," Bailey said.

"The fact is, it is not illegal in Texas to get naked," Oden said."It is not illegal in Texas even to go skinnydipping."

"It is only illegal to go skinnydipping in public, and (to be) reckless in that you realize someone might be present who would be offended or alarmed, and you decided to do it anyway," Oden continued. The citations were issued by a sheriff's deputy after complaints by members of Citizens Against Pornography, led by Executive Director Mark Weaver.

"This is part of our overall program to clean up our city and county parks of indecent and lewd conduct," Weaver said.

He said the group objected to the sign, which reads: "Nude swimming or sunbathing may be occurring beyond this point. Consult attendant for details of nudity statutes."

Weaver said the sign gives the impression that nudity is allowed, but it is his opinion violations of state law are occurring.

"I think he's got a good point," Bailey said. "But that's like traffic signs: I don't have any input on that."

Weaver said he has witnessed homosexual activity at the park, including during a Texas Gay Splash Bash earlier this summer. About 10 percent of the crowd was nude at the gathering, Weaver said.

"Public lewdness, sexual conduct in public, will be prosecuted, or indecent exposure will be prosecuted," Oden said. He noted that the law defines indecent exposure as "a nude performance in public that is intended to give sexual gratification."

Jail Administrator David Castillo approached the commission seeking a decision on the advisability of initiating tuberculosis testing of incoming inmates. He reported that Dr. Tim Revell, public health officer, said that the testing would not be necessary in this area because of a low incidence of TB.

Commissioners instructed Castillo to get a letter from Dr. Revell to have on file and said they were in agreement with his assessment.

Castillo also received approval to initiate a plan for inmates to pay for their medical and dental costs while incarcerated, as allowed by House Bill 2308, which became effective in June. The bill says that prisoners will be responsible for the payment of medical or dental bills and stipulates the county shall assist an indigent prisoner with need for health care services.

Surgery may be beneficial

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT - Some time ago I developed a small epigastric hernia just above my navel. At the same time I developed very troublesome stomach problems (heartburn, belching, etc.). How are these related? Nothing my doctor has prescribed has helped, and he's also told me I am susceptible to more herniations. I'm a muscular, hard-working farm girl and would find it difficult to change my lifestyle.

DEAR READER - Abdominal hernias are weaknesses in the abdominal muscles that allow portions of bowel to herniate or protrude. The epigastrium, the part of the abdomen above the navel, is a common location for hernias to occur because the abdominal muscles are thin in this area and abdominal pressure (during straining and lifting) can enlarge any weakness, turning it into a hernia.

Many people with large abdominal hernias experience no serious symp-toms whatsoever. On the other hand, some patients with small hernias are troubled by digestive disturbances, such as gas and discomfort. If, as you say, your symptoms started at about the same time your hernia appeared, I'd be tempted to blame your heart-burn and belching on the hernia. In this case, surgery to correct the hernia would remove your symptoms.

An operation will neither protect you from developing future hernias nor make you more susceptible to them. However, your digestive distur-bances may be due to other factors for example, peptic ulcer or hiatal hernia. Therefore, before opting for surgery, you should have upper-gas-trointestinal X-rays (or endoscopy) to see if your upper tract is normal.

My future mother-in-law has a sister who is a lesbian. Her gay companion has skillfully managed to get herself included in a great many family affairs, and there's been a lot of resentment about her pushiness.

My family is quite conservative. They feel strongly that the aunt should attend the wedding alone. The problem is that the two of them go everywhere together. We really want the aunt but we definitely don't want the companion.

It has been suggested that the bride have cards printed to enclose in the invitation saying, "please, no guests." Or do you feel it would be more gracious to send her a personal note and request that she come alone, in the interest of family har-

Incoming freshmen undecided

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) -More than 80 percent of incoming freshmen say they may change their major at least once during their col-lege years, according to a Penn-sylvania State University study.

'From 1982 to 1985, 81 to 84 percent of freshmen participating in an educational planning survey have said they may switch majors at least once," said James J. Kelly, assistant director for the division of undergraduate studies.

"We have learned that engineers are just as uncertain as liberal arts students," he said. "Many students may make their choices in their last year of high school or even in the beginning of their freshman year."

Arr average of 60 percent of the 40,000 freshmen surveyed over the four-year period knew only a moderate amount about their choice of majors; from 21 to 25 percent knew little or nothing about their selections.

HOME-GROWN ENERGY

ATLANTA (AP) — America's paper industry generated an estimated 38 billion kilowatt hours of electricity in 1986.

That, says Georgia-Pacific Corp., is enough power to sustain a metropolitan area the size of New York City for nearly a year. It says paper makers tradi-tionally have led U.S. industry in producing energy through cogeneration, a process that creates electricity and steam power from a single fuel source such as wood chips or other byproducts.

I was awakened one night by a noise coming from the kitchen. When I went to investigate, I found Lady, the old sneak, had gotten into the trash and taken out an empty tuna can that I had neglected to rinse. The sharp edges of the can had cut her mouth horribly and blood was all over the floor. Yet she continued to lick at it, trying to get the last tiny bit of fish.

When I realized there was no way I could stop the bleeding, I called my vet. Dedicated soul that he is, he agreed to meet me at his office at 3 in the morning. With surgery and luck, Lady is still with me.

It just takes a few seconds to rinse a can and bend the lid in. And it could save a pet or a tsray that has to look for his dinner at the dump a lot of misery .-- One who Cares For Animals.

In scrimmage

Herd outscores Guymon six touchdowns to one

The Hereford Whitefaces outscored Guymon High School six touchdowns to one in a preseason scrimmage last Friday in Dumas.

Hereford High School's head football coach, Don Cumpton, said, "We're pretty happy. It's kind of the end of two-a-days.

"We made some mistakes, but there's been a lot of improvement. It was a good scrimmage for us. We saw some things we need to work on," Cumpton continues.

"We came out of it healthy, and we're looking forward to our next scrimmage," he adds.

That scrimmage is this Friday against Lubbock Monterey. The scrimmage will be played at the Monterey High School field. The time is to be announced.

Whiteface running back Marcus Brown scored with a 70-yard run in the first play of Friday's scrimmage against Guymon.

Quarterback Raymond Romo played a part in the next two touchdowns scored by the Herd. Romo rushed 18 yards for a touchdown, and later completed a 60-yard pass to Rodney McCracken for a touchdown.

Glenn Parker carried the ball for a two-yard touchdown run for the Whitefaces' next score in the scrim-

Quarterback Jason Scott threw touchdown passes for the other Hereford touchdowns. Those passes were an 18-yarder to Rodney Mc-Cracken and a nine-yarder to Robby

DA dragging feet on absorbency ratings

CHICAGO (AP) - Federal regulators are guilty of dangerous delays in requiring standard ratings for tampon absorbency that could help millions of women reduce their risk of toxic shock syndrome, a public health advocate says.

Meanwhile, a new study by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta confirms that tampons with high absorbency increase the risk of toxic shock syndrome, and that absorbency may be a greater factor than the materials used to make the tampons.

The study and an editorial by Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe of the Public Citizen Health Research Group in Washington appear in today's Journal of the American Medical Wolfe wrote in an editorial titled "Dangerous Delays in Tampon Absorbency Warnings" that the FDA received its first alert in 1981 that a study had found a link between higher absorbency and higher risk.

Yet despite that evidence and further studies, as well as the FDA's announced intention in 1984 to require standardized absorbency labeling, the agency has "gone on again, off again," he said.

"The failure of the Food and Drug Administration to warn women adequately based on evidence available more than six years ago, a failure prolonged by the tampon industry, has caused unnecessary risks to millions of American women who regularly use tampons," Wolfe

He termed the delay "unconscionable."

In a statement issued Thursday, the FDA said, "The agency did hope that an industry agreement on stan-dardization could produce useful information on the labeling quicker than by regulation."

But manufacturers could not agree, it said, and "the agency is completing work on a proposal now and hopes to publish it for public coment soon."

Dr. Claire V. Broome, one of the CDC researchers, said women must balance the convenience of highabsorbency tampons against "reducing the risk somewhat of a very rare relevance of the study."

"We're talking about only two cases per 100,000 menstruating women per year, which is a rare disease," she said in a telephone interview Thursday.

She and her colleagues said their study of 285 cases of tamponassociated toxic shock syndrome in 1983 and 1984 showed greater absorbency increased a woman's odds of getting the syndrome, regardless of the material the tampon was made

Use of the lowest absorbency tampon - Tampax Regular - was associated with 4.7 times higher odds of getting the syndrome than use of no tampon. But use of two of the highest-absorbency tampons -Kotex Super and OB Super - was linked with odds 57 times and 35.8 times greater, respectively.

Tina Barry, a spokeswoman for Dallas-based Kimberly-Clark Corp., which makes Kotex tampons, said,

She said the CDC failed to provide an analysis of the control group of healthy tampon users it compared with those suffering from toxic shock syndrome, and that statistics supporting the odds ratios in the study suggest the ratios and conclusions "are inexact at best."

Susan Keithler, a spokeswoman for Milltown, N.J.-based Personal Products Co., a Johnson & Johnson company, said labels containing absorbency rating numbers on the OB tampon package and expanded information inside will allow consumers to make an informed choice.

OB tampon packages display a numerical rating based on a standard laboratory test, Wolfe said. Kimberly-Clark plans to add the ratings to Kotex tampon packaging early next year, Ms. Barry said.

Wolfe's group is proposing that manufacturers be required to indicate on packages how their product rates on the standard scale of 2 to 20.

A total of 2,962 cases of toxic shock syndrome have been reported since it was first documented in 1978, and 127 cases have been fatal, Broome

A woman who uses tampons should know the symptoms of the syndrome - high fever, vomiting, severe diarrhea, rashes, low blood pressure and shock - and if she develops them, remove her tampon and see a doctor,

she said.

Newspaper Bible

WOULD THE DEVIL FIGHT HIMSELF?

Afterwards He went up into the hills and summoned certain ones He chose, inviting them to come and join Him there; and they did.

Then He selected twelve of them to be His regular companions and to go out to preach and to cast out demons.

These are the names of the twelve He chose:

Simon (He renamed him "Peter"). James and John (the sons of Zebedee, but Jesus called them "Sons of Thunder"),

Andrew,

Philip,

Bartholomew,

Matthew.

Thomas, James (the son of Alphaeus),

Thaddaeus,

Simon (a member of a political party advocating violent overthrow of the Roman government), Judas Iscariot (who later betrayed Him).

When He returned to the house where He was staying, the crowds began to gather again, and soon it was so full of visitors that He couldn't even find time to eat. When His friends heard what was happening they came to try to take Him home with them. "He's out of his mind," they said.

But the Jewish teachers of religion who had arrived from Jerusalem said, "His trouble is that he's possessed by Satan, king of demons. That's why demons obey him."

Jesus summoned these men and asked them (using proverbs they all understood), "How can Satan cast out Satan? A kingdom divided against itself will collapse.

A home filled with strife and division destroys itself. And if Satan is fighting against himself, how can he accomplish anything? He would never survive.

[Satan must be bound before his demons are cast out], just as a strong man must be tied up before his house can be ransacked and his property robbed.

according to old Irish belief, if you mus do it east to west. Going west to east was believed bad luck.

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) - Their college campus is not adorned with ivy and their shirts bear numbers rather than Greek letters.

But that doesn't stop about 40 students from looking forward to the fall term and further work on their master's degrees.

Ramsey is not a typical school. And people like James McCombs are not typical students.

"It's a positive way of coming out of a negative situation," says Mc-Combs, 49, a narcotics convict in the fifth year of a life term at the Ramsey I Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections.

The Texas prison system, the nation's third-largest behind California and New York, is the only state offering a master's program to inmates, says Bart Reddoch, principal at amsey I. The University of Houston-Clear Lake graduate studies program began at the prison last spring and offers inmates the opportunity to achieve a master's in humanities. The program concentrates on writing and includes courses in literature, philosophy and history.

"In the wings you can't sit around and cut up Shakespeare and Plato," says Ronald Danford, 39, who is serving 15 years for various convictions, including possession of marijuana. "I thought Plato was the Chicano connection out of east Houston before coming through here."

The classes are conducted in a few small classrooms in a prison wing where conditions don't always promote learning.

"Sometimes the inmates have a hard time studying because of the noise," Reddoch says. "And the George Trabing, director of the university's programs at the prison, says although college studies are not classified as rehabilitation, they serve best in that capacity.

One of the main things it does is change their (inmate's) attitude about themselves," Trabing says.

It's the top rung in a learning lad-der that starts with special education programs. All Texas prison units, except for a hospital facility, conduct classes under the auspices of the Windham School District. The Texas Board of Corrections also functions as the Windham Board of Education.

Inmates receive higher education through junior colleges and universities in cooperation with the Windham system, which in 1976 became the first prison system to be fully accredited by a regional agency, the "College education has given me the ability to think better," says Charles Jones, who dropped out of school in the sixth grade. "If I apply it crooked, I'll be a better crook."

The program makes prison seem less monotonous than it does to other inmates who spend their time dreaming of a "big score" awaiting them on the outside, students say.

Jones, 31, serving a life sentence for murder, says the program can be a form of escape for the inmates. "They can lock you up so tight that you can't see or hear anything, but they can't lock up your mind," says Jones, who gained a general education diploma while in prison.

Danford says he probably would not have gone to school as a free

"This is my fourth degree and I've never stepped in a college classroom," Danford says. The system has occasional pro-blems, Reddoch acknowledges. In-mates took school personnel hostage during an escape attempt at the Walls Unit in Huntsville in 1974. Two Windham people were killed.

But Trabing, who gives inmates classes in psychology and criminology, says teachers at the unit do not feel threatened in the environment and many have taught in prison schools for years. Only one guard is on duty in the school while about 180 inmates attend classes each day.

Inmates in the graduate program are treated like other university students and all of them work as much as 12 hours per day on prison

"About the only thing special we offer out here is that we let them withdraw during the semester if they're paroled," Trabing says.

Trabing says while the overall number of parolees sent back to prison hovers around 42 percent, only about 15 percent with substantial college credits will return. He says most parolees can find work on the outside, and the ex-inmates themselves are usually the ones who make their record an employment
