To school board

Parents complain about placements

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Two parents complained to the Hereford Independent School District board of trustees Thursday night about the placement of their children in schools outside of their attendance zone.

At the special, called, meeting, the board made final changes in the 1986-87 school budget and approved a $17.9 million budget for the 1987-88 year.

The board set the tax rate for the coming year at 69 cents per $100 valuation, unchanged for the past several years.

One parent asked for a closed hearing before the board, which is allowable under state law, to consider moving their child to another school.

Another parent, Christie Barton, asked to appear in open session to request that her five-year-old child be allowed to attend Aikman Primary School's kindergarten instead of being bused to Bluebonnet Intermediate School.

Barton said her family moved to Hereford earlier this year and chose their house because it was across the street from Aikman, where her kindergarten and another child, a second grader, would attend school.

However, when Barton went to enroll her daughters, she was told that the Kindergarten section was already full at Aikman and her child would have to attend Kindergarten at Bluebonnet, over a mile from her house.

"I may be an overprotective parent," Barton said, "but my five-year-old is not old enough to go on a bus, by herself, all the way to Bluebonnet."

"I also feel that if the records were examined, the chances are that at least one child enrolled at Aikman actually lives closer to Bluebonnet and could go to school there."

HISD Superintendent Charles Greenawalt explained that only two Kindergarten sections, one for regular students and another for bilingual students, are taught at Aikman, and state law limits the school to have no more than 24 students in any class. There are 24 students in the regular section at Aikman.

There are only 20 students enrolled in the bilingual class.

"Are you telling me that if my child were Spanish she could go to Aikman?" asked Barton.

"If the child was reading primarily in Spanish she would qualify for the bilingual program," Greenawalt explained. "We actually have several other parents who live closer to Aikman that must send their child to Bluebonnet. You are not the only parent with this situation."

"Any child that lives within the Aikman zone has just as much right to attend school there as anyone else in the zone."

Greenawalt said she might visit with friends, who Barton said did have Kindergarten-age children, to see if they might transfer to Bluebonnet and allow Barton's daughter to attend school at Aikman.

Aikman principal John Poindexter said he would do everything he could to allow students to transfer to Aikman as students withdraw, and Barton promised she would "call you every day to see if there was an opening."

The final, amended budget for the 1986-87 school year was $16.86 million, about $1,000 less than the budget began last August.

The budget for the new school year is over $1 million high than last year's budget because of planned expenditures for new construction at LaPlata Junior High and remodeling at Hereford High School.

The board also accepted a bid of $6,417 from Plains Insurance. It was the lowest of two bids submitted.

Friona man killed in truck wreck

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A few steers roamed free near Amarillo following a fatal accident involving a cattle truck.

A man was killed and his brother suffered a broken leg during Thursday morning's rush hour when their cattle truck overturned at a highway interchange, releasing dozens of cattle onto Interstate 40 and U.S. 87.

Volunteers spent the day trying to round up the cattle, but six were still at large early today, a police spokeswoman said. The cattle blocked all lanes of the highways for about three hours and wandered through downtown and nearby residential areas, police said.

Police identified the dead man as Phillip Jesko, 24, of Friona. His brother, 23-year-old Jeffrey Jesko of Muleshoe, was in satisfactory condition at Northwest Texas Hospital with a broken leg, police spokesman Ralph Fletcher said. Officials said the younger brother, who owned the truck, was driving and Phillip Jesko was sleeping in the back when the semi-tractor trailer containing 134 head flipped near an exit ramp and slipped down a shallow embankment. Fletcher did not know their destination.

"We have both our sheriffs' departments involved, police and people from the Amarillo Livestock Auction on horseback looking for them," Fletcher said Thursday morning. "They're searching on foot, in pickups and cars — it doesn't make any difference. If you've got a rope, we will throw you out there."

Amarillo lies in both Potter and Randall counties, and I-40 runs along the boundary. Officials from both counties were summoned to round up portable pens, but many cattle had strayed two or three miles by the time officers arrived, Fletcher said. About 25 volunteers had rounded up most of the cattle up by early afternoon, Fletcher said.

Tough Choice

Choosing lunch pails, folders, notebooks and "Trapper Keepers" from designs ranging from cartoon characters to art graphics remains part of the fun of preparing for school. Brad Lemons, who will be entering LaPlata Junior High next week, received some advice from store clerk Esther Zepda. Lemons thought buying school supplies was okay, but he is really looking forward to football tryouts for the Mavericks.

"No way, Sonny," she replied. "Are you telling me that this is your first flight and you're not nervous?"

"Not at all," she said. "I'm 80 and you're 30—you are the one who'd better worry!"

With Deaf Smith County selected as one of three sites in the nation to undergo extensive study for a proposed nuclear waste repository, the news content of The Brand has taken on an added dimension. Wednesday's front page was an example of how the DOE project affects local news as most of the front page was dominated by events involving the repository study.

Some readers probably think we have too many articles about the DOE project, while others believe we should have more information—especially toward their point of view. There is an old newspaper adage that applies: "We don't make the news; we just report it."

Speaking of the nuke waste issue, Congressman Larry Combest had the following to report in a recent mailout to constituents:

"Many of us have believed for some time that there are serious flaws in the site selection process for the nuclear waste repository. At last, others around the country are coming to recognize these problems and agree that a new approach is needed. Even Congressman Morris Udall, the author of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act, recently said on the House floor, 'I am coming around to MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Rebel troops attempting to overthrow President Corazon Aquino today seriously wounded her son and seized key military installations before loyal forces launched a fierce counteroffensive.

The coup attempt by hundreds of mutineers was mounted about 1 a.m. on strategic facilities, including the presidential compound.

It was the gravest challenge yet to the 18-month-old administration of Mrs. Aquino, who was not injured. Health Secretary Alfredo Bengzon said at least 14 people were killed and 105 were wounded before the counteroffensive began.

In an afternoon national television address, the president said she had ordered Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos to "terminate this mutiny immediately" and to offer no terms to "these traitors."

Moments before the address, two battalions of loyal troops stormed Camp Aguinaldo, headquarters of the defense ministry and general staff, in a bid to drive off rebels who had occupied much of the complex.

Reporters could hear bursts of automatic gunfire and explosions shook windows blocks away as marines and elite scout rangers pounded rebel positions with artillery, machine gun and small arms fire.

Associated Press reporter James Hatton, reporting from the scene, said World War II-vintage bombers mounted air strikes against the rebels. Hatton said he counted at least nine bombs dropped on the rebels.

The attack sent hundreds of civilians who had gathered at the main gate scrambling for cover. Huge columns of black smoke rose from the camp.

Reporters said loyal troops had engaged about 450 mutineers around the garrison's communications facility, but the exact number of rebels was unclear. Ramos said first reports listed the death toll at four soldiers killed and six wounded.

Government troops also attacked Villamor Air Base, headquarters of the air force, which rebel forces had also taken earlier.

Ramos said rebels were still holding the ground floor of the air force headquarters at Villamor, which abuts Manila International Airport. But he said loyal troops controlled the base's aircraft.

Rebels, many of whom wore inverted Philippine flags on their chests, took air force commander Maj. Gen. Antonio Sotelo hostage, but Sotelo slipped away through a skylight and was later rescued by helicopter, Ramos said.

In Cebu City, 350 miles to the south, local reporters said regional military commanders announced support for the rebels. Rebel troops then drove through the city hauling down Philippine flags from government buildings and disarming private security guards at banks and other offices.

They also ordered all local radio and television stations off the air. Cebu City is the country's second major metropolitan center.

Earlier today, the mutineers in Manila also seized the government broadcast center in suburban Quezon City and a constabulary garrison 40 miles north of the city in San Fernando.

The broadcast center was later retaken in a half-hour firefight that Manila Police Chief Brig. Gen. Alfredo Lim said claimed the lives of one government soldier. He said one rebel was wounded and 12 captured.

Ramos said rebels still held at least some of San Fernando garrison, though fighting was not reported there.

The rebels had predicted earlier that they would hold the nation by the end of the day.

The coup attempt was led by Col. Gregorio Honasan, former security chief for Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile, who Mrs. Aquino fired as defense minister after a coup attempt last November.

Mrs. Aquino said her only son, 27-year-old Benigno Aquino III, was wounded when rebels fired on civilians near the presidential palace. She said three of his companions were killed and another was in serious condition.

Palace sources said Benigno was wounded once in the neck and twice in the shoulder but was out of danger.

"Speaking as your president, let me assure our people that government is in firm control of the situation," Mrs. Aquino said. "We are at this very moment moving to destroy this threat."

Ramos said that two rebel officers (See AQUINO, Page 2A)

GOP sees opportunity

Proxmire won't run

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire's decision to retire raised GOP hopes and saddened Democratic admirers of the five-term legislator who handed out Golden Fleece Awards for wasteful spending and once was re-elected on $178.

The 71-year-old senator, a longtime physical fitness enthusiast, said Thursday he will not seek re-election in 1988 because "I'd be almost 80 years old when I retired in 1994. ... That's too old."

The announcement, which startled many politicians, came 30 years to the day after Proxmire was first elected to the U.S. Senate to fill the seat left vacant by the death of Republican Joseph R. McCarthy.

Suellen Albrecht, state Democratic chairman, said she was "disappointed, surprised and shocked" by the news. "Sen. Proxmire is a legend," she said. "He will always be remembered as the taxpayer's friend."

"He's a class act," said Republican Gov. Tommy G. Thompson.

Proxmire, chairman of the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, set a Senate record of answering every roll call since 1966, and captured 60 to 70 percent of the vote in his last three elections, in 1982, 1976 and 1970.

Because of his popularity, he spent little on winning re-election. In 1982, he spent only $177.75, mostly for postage and stationery to return campaign contributions.

"We obviously now have a great opportunity to recapture the Wisconsin seat from the Democrats," Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, said in Washington.

One of the GOP politicians reportedly considering a candidacy, Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner Jr., scheduled a news conference for this morning.

Proxmire said the Democrats have excellent candidates for the Senate, mentioning Assembly Speaker Thomas Loftus, former Gov. Anthony S. Earl, Rep. Jim Moody, D-Wis., and former Deputy Attorney General Edward R. Garvey.

"I'm not going to endorse anyone" at this time, he said.

After losing three elections for governor, Proxmire was a surprise winner against a former Republican governor in the special election for McCarthy's seat in 1967.

The maverick senator gained wide renown as a fiscal watchdog with his sardonic Golden Fleece Awards for such examples of government spending as $50,000 for playing cards and a $46,000 study of how to break an egg.

Proxmire visits his state frequently, showing up at fairs and sporting events to greet voters. He once estimated he shook hands with 200,000 people a year.

He said Thursday he has thoroughly enjoyed being senator, and regrets he couldn't achieve his chief objective of bringing "sanity to our fiscal spending."

Proxmire's wife, Ellen, said the family tried to dissuade him when he confided his plans Tuesday.

"We mounted many arguments," she said. "He's at the peak of his career and in fine health."

"He wouldn't have a hard time winning, and he likely would have been president pro-tem of the Senate because of his seniority," she said.

Poindexter wants to quit Navy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, the pivotal witness in the Iran-Contra investigation, plans to resign from the Navy this fall to avoid having the service tainted by an expected indictment, according to Pentagon sources and a close associate.

As he requested the resignation, however, Poindexter injected what is bound to be an element of controversy by asking that he be retired at the three-star vice admiral rank he held while at the White House, instead of the two-star rear admiral title he reverted to after leaving as the affair unraveled last November.

Such a request would put President Reagan on the spot, since he would have to approve the move, as would the Senate. Poindexter testified that he shielded Reagan from knowledge of the diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Some members of the congressional investigating committees say they have lingering doubts about Poindexter's story, and that the question of whether Reagan knew about the diversion may never be put to rest.

The Navy on Thursday confirmed that "Admiral Poindexter has announced his intention to retire" but refused to give details.

Pentagon sources, however, said Poindexter disclosed his decision to top officials Wednesday, specifying a desire to step down effective Oct. 1 after nearly 30 years service.

According to the Navy, a two-star rear admiral with 29 years of service can retire with a pension of $52,764 a year. A three-star vice admiral with the same amount of service can retire with a pension of $53,016 a year.

Since he resigned his post as presidential adviser, Poindexter, 51, has been a special assistant to the chief of naval operations for long-range planning.

Retired Adm. Clarence A. "Mark" Hill Jr., a Poindexter friend who is trustee of the admiral's legal defense fund, said Thursday that Poindexter is "very concerned about the image of the U.S. Navy."

Hill said Poindexter wants to leave the service before Iran-Contra independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh obtains grand jury indictments, which Hill said he expected would name Poindexter.

"He said he left the hearings with his head held high," Hill said. "He's in the position to do that from the Navy now. ... I think it makes good sense."

He said it would be "extremely difficult" for Poindexter to remain in the Navy and try to regain any job that would restore his three-star status, because of the role he played in the Iran-Contra affair and the opportunity senators would have to block his appointment.

Tehran claims first plane tested, dismisses embargo

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran scoffed at the threat of a United Nations arms embargo, saying it has flight-tested its first home-produced plane and vowing to press its 7-year-old war with Iraq to victory.

Meanwhile, sandstorms blowing across the Persian Gulf on Thursday reduced visibility and made it difficult to determine the location of the latest northbound convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti oil tankers and U.S. Navy warships.

Sources in Kuwait and Washington on Thursday denied reports the convoy was off the coast of Saudi Arabia or had arrived in Kuwait.

In another development, Pentagon officials in Washington said the aircraft carrier Ranger and eight escorting warships arrived Thursday in the northern Arabian Sea, south of the gulf, to relieve the carrier Constellation.

The scheduled turnover will enable the U.S. Navy to continue providing air cover for convoys of Kuwaiti tankers and their U.S. escorts through the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq have targeted commercial shipping.

Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi, speaking at a meeting Thursday of officials in charge of Iran's war effort, urged them to "be fully prepared" for a "direct conflict" with the United States in the gulf, Tehran Radio reported. "All the country's resources should be mobilized for this cause," Musavi said in a Tehran Radio report monitored in Cyprus. Musavi was quoted as saying the war with Iraq was at "its most critical juncture."

He said Iran now produces many of its own weapons and through "hard efforts" obtains arms from other unidentified sources, the radio said.

The United States has given 11 Kuwaiti tankers U.S. registry and the American flag so the Navy can protect them.

U.S.-protected tanker convoys to Kuwait began July 20. Iran has spent billions of dollars since the war began in September 1980, buying weapons on the international black market despite a U.S.-inspired arms embargo that the United States itself violated in an arms-for-hostages deal.

U.S. officials have identified more than 20 countries, including China and North Korea, which keep Iran's arsenal supplied.

Musavi on Wednesday said Iran will not compromise in the war. That was seen as an apparent rejection of a July 20 U.N. Security Council resolution calling for an immediate cease-fire.

U.S. officials are consulting with other members of the 15-nation Security Council on the possible sanctions against Iran, including an arms embargo.

Iraq and other Arab countries have urged the United Nations to impose sanctions on Iran for failing to comply with the cease-fire call. At a meeting of the Arab League on Tuesday, Arab nations threatened a break diplomatic relations with Iran if it doesn't accept the U.N. resolution by Sept. 20.

Some military analysts do not believe an arms ban would work because Iran has in the past been able to secure weapons abroad and because communist countries are not likely to stop providing weapons.

Western military analysts say Iran has mobilized its factories, and even colleges and schools, to make missiles and guns over the last 18 months.

Information pieced together from Iranian statements, Western intelligence reports and other sources indicate that Iran now is manufacturing relatively primitive surface-to-surface missiles, rocket launchers, anti-tank missiles and mortars along with much of its ammunition requirements.

AQUINO

and 45 enlisted men had surrendered at Camp Aguinaldo and remaining rebel positions at the sprawling garrison were "being reduced or neutralized."

He was operating out of Camp Crame, the headquarters of the Philippine Constabulary which is across the street from Aguinaldo.

Villamor is about 5 miles south of Manila; Camp Aguinaldo is about 3 miles from the presidential compound.

Before her speech, Mrs. Aquino met with aides at her office inside the presidential compound, from which loyal troops had repulsed several hundred rebels in a long battle in residential areas a few hundred yards to the east.

The revolt occurred two days after militant leftist unionists began the biggest strike of Mrs. Aquino's administration. Tear gas and water cannon were used against the demonstrators protesting fuel price hikes and at least 127 people, including a top labor leader, were arrested. Many strike leaders went into hiding today.

The U.S. military today confined its 40,000 troops, civilians and dependents to bases except for those with urgent business or those who live off post. Most U.S. troops are stationed at Clark Air Base and Subic Bay naval station, within a 50 miles radius of Manila.

Honasan told reporters before he and his men managed to enter Camp Aguinaldo that the mutiny was aimed at restoring "national unity." He accused Mrs. Aquino of knuckling under to leftist demands and of creating a "personality cult" instead of solving national problems.

But Ramos affirmed the loyalty of the 150,000-member military to Mrs. Aquino and denounced as "propaganda" reports the mutineers supported him and Enrile.

Former President Ferdinand Marcos, ousted by a civilian-military revolt that thrust Mrs. Aquino into power in February 1986, said from Honolulu, where he lives in exile with his wife, Imelda, that he wasn't involved in the uprising.

"I am afraid that Madame Aquino is in real trouble," Marcos told ABC News today on a special edition of "Nightline." He claimed she had been ousted from her palace.

Asked if he saw himself as regaining the presidency as a result of the rebellion, Marcos laughed and told ABC it was not clear whom the rebels wanted as a political leader, adding: "They might choose somebody else."

Tomas Gomez, the Philippine consul general in Hawaii, said he believed Marcos was involved in the coup attempt, but gave no evidence.

In Los Angeles, President Reagan today condemned the coup attempt.

"I am profoundly concerned by reports of elements of the armed forces of the Philippines who have engaged in military action against the democratic government of President Aquino. The United States condemns this attempt at extra-constitutional action," he said. "I wish to make absolutely clear America's unqualified support of President Aquino."

After being "lost" for more than 30 years, the thin-spined porcupine has been rediscovered in the tropical forests of eastern Brazil. The species, Chaetomys subpinosus, was feared extinct. Scientists know so little about the creature that they are not sure it is a porcupine at all. The nocturnal rodent taxonomically appears to fall somewhere between the porcupines and the spiny rats.

Shuttle rocket test firing postponed

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — A rocket booster test considered critical to the space shuttle's future has been reset for Saturday after "nuisances," including a broken water main and cranky ground control equipment, delayed the firing.

Morton Thiokol Inc. engineers twice carried the countdown to within seconds of ignition Thursday before ground equipment failed. Another attempt was halted just three minutes from ignition.

The booster was redesigned to eliminate the flaws that caused the Challenger to explode last year, but the new system must pass a series of ground tests before shuttle flights can resume.

Thursday's failed test will not affect the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's plans to resume shuttle flights next June, but the schedule is tight, said Richard Truly, the agency's chief of space flight.

The test failures were caused by "nuisances" not associated with the motor, said John Thomas, director of the booster redesign program for NASA.

The firing was to be the first of the redesigned rocket using the full 1.2 million pounds of solid propellant.

About 500 space industry officials stood in the bright Utah sun from 1 p.m., when the first attempt was stopped, until 4:57 p.m., when the final countdown was aborted, peering up at the 126-foot-long white rocket perched 9,000 feet away on the side of a brown hill.

A highway beside the Thiokol test site was lined with spectators for two miles, but the crowd thinned as the long afternoon wore on and the mood among officials went from upbeat to grim.

The first countdown started at midnight and "everything was just nice" until 10 a.m., Thomas said.

"The first nuisance was a six-inch water main that failed," he said. The water is used to cool the rocket casing after it has fired. The countdown was held.

The pipes were fixed in 90 minutes, said Thomas, and the countdown resumed just after noon, an hour before the planned ignition.

Preparations proceeded smoothly and continued to within 10 seconds of ignition when the water system failed at another connection.

The countdown was stopped while repairs were made and then resumed toward a new firing time of 3 p.m.

Just three minutes before the appointed hour, a computer checked test equipment and the results "looked strange to us so we held for three minutes," Thomas said. "We couldn't explain the problem to our satisfaction so we aborted and cycled back to one hour."

At this point, some of the Thiokol technicians had been working for more than 12 hours straight. Truly visited the blockhouse and told them that if they were tired the attempt could be halted.

Truly said the engineers were eager to resume and he agreed, provided the test would be canceled for the day if one more problem occurred.

JASPER JOHNS EXHIBITION

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An exhibition of artist Jasper Johns' prints will be on view at the Fort Worth Art Museum through Aug. 30.

Spanning 25 years of Johns' print-making, "Jasper Johns: A Print Retrospective" includes 175 lithographs, etchings, silkscreens and monotypes.

The works range from early prints that focus on common objects and popular imagery such as flags, targets, numbers and maps, to later entirely nonobjective prints.

NEW HARVEST FELLOWSHIP (13th and Ave. K)

Darrell Ellis, a missionary to the Navajo Indians in Counselor, N.M., will be speaking Sunday at 10:30 a.m. and the service at 7 p.m. A nursery will be provided.

COMMUNITY CHURCH

LAMB, the group that pioneered the sound that today has become known as Messianic Praise and Worship, will be in concert at 10:30 a.m. at the Community Church. The public is invited.

The group includes Joel Chernoff and Rick "Levi" Coghill. In their music, they use straight forward scripture-oriented lyrics. They are known for their innovative use of the latest stage and sound equipment.

LAMB's first album was made in January of 1973, making it one of the first contemporary gospel records and the first Messianic music record. The group was also the first to record Hebrew with Messianic lyrics and the first to record middle Eastern modes, scales and sounds.

FIRST UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday School Promotion Day will be held in First United Methodist Church children's and youth classes Sunday morning at the usual class meeting hour, 9:45 a.m. Teachers will escort classes to the next age level at 10:25 a.m.

Some new teachers will begin their duties that day, and enrollment is urged for those who plan to join the classes, as new lesson series will be started.

This annual "moving day" in Sunday School signals the beginning of fall in several areas of the church. Children's and youth choirs will start weekly rehearsals Sept. 16 after summer vacations. The Sanctuary Choir and the Jubilate Ringers, ladies' handbell choir, are already in to their fall schedule. All these groups invite interested singers and musicians to join them.

United Methodist Women will have their first fall meeting at 10 a.m. Wednesday, starting a study program that will continue the following week. Eleanor Hudspeth will be leader for the study, "Toward Health and Wholeness."

United Methodist Youth Fellowship, both senior and junior high sections, will have an end-of-summer swimming party at Green Acres Pool at 7 p.m. Sunday, instead of their usual "Sunday Night Live" programs. Members will invite friends for this party.

WOMEN ON THE GO

WINTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — By the end of 1987, it's estimated that women will constitute 50 percent of the nation's traveling population.

Patti Fishel, travel services manager for R.J. Reynolds, says business travel for women does not have to cause fear and anxiety.

Fishel, whose department arranges more than 20,000 business trips a year, says the nation's hotels are doing a better job of accommodating female travelers, particularly with regard to safety concerns.

"But you have to help them," Fishel adds. "Ask to be moved to another room if someone is bothering you. Keep your door locked at all times. Stay out of dark hallways and know where the fire exits are."

Excellent cancer care for children reality at center

State-of-the-art cancer care for children of the High Plains will soon be a reality now that Charlene Holt, M.D., FAAP, has joined The Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center as Director of Pediatric Oncology. Already Holt is seeing patients, and she will be the guiding force in the development of a comprehensive treatment program for children with cancer. Holt also will be involved in clinical research and the development of a cancer control program, to include both cancer education and screening for area residents.

PHYSICIAN BACKGROUND

As scholar, scientist and physician, Holt is recognized internationally for her expertise in research and treatment of children with cancer. She comes to Amarillo from Adria Laboratories in Ohio, where she was the associate director of clinical development in oncology.

Holt graduated Magna Cum Laude from Florida Southern College and earned her doctorate in medicine at the University of Miami School of Medicine. There she developed an interest in research and served as a summer research fellow in pediatrics. After internship and residency at the Baptist Hospital and University of Tennessee in Memphis, Holt continued pediatric oncology Fellowship. She served on the staff of St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, and was Assistant Professor of Pediatrics at the University of Tennessee School of Medicine.

Holt continued her academic career at the University of Colorado School of Medicine when she was selected as Director of Oncology at the Denver Children's Hospital in 1969. Five years later, Holt became the founding director of the Colorado Regional Cancer Center, a comprehensive cancer care facility designated by the National Cancer Institute (NCI).

In 1975, Holt was commissioned to design a cancer control program for the state of Idaho. During that time she also served as consultant and director of pediatric oncology at the Mountain State Tumor Institute and later as director of the Intermountain Youth Cancer Center. Since 1978, Holt has been involved with the U.S. Army Medical Corps, consulting and directing oncology programs and research at facilities in the U.S. and Central America.

Holt's extensive consulting work includes everything from developing an oncology program in the Middle East to serving as technical medical advisor for television and films. She also has remained an active researcher, receiving several prestigious grants from the NCI and other notable sources.

Holt is a Fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics, and a Diplomate of both the American Board of Pediatrics and the National Board of Medical Examiners. She is an international speaker and is substantially published. Holt also has been widely honored for service and contributions to the profession.

Challenges and Potential Of Pediatric Oncology

In our country, cancer is the leading cause of death in children, second only to accidents. Although the Harrington Cancer Center has been successful in developing a comprehensive program for adults in the region, the majority of children with cancer could receive only follow-up care at the Center. In the last five years, nearly 150 children have had to travel hundreds of miles away to receive treatment.

Bringing modern, multi-disciplinary care to children with cancer in the High Plains is the goal of the Harrington Cancer Center's pediatric oncology program. In this region, an estimated 35 children each year will be diagnosed with cancer. The pediatric oncology program is a joint effort of the Harrington Cancer Center and the Texas Tech School of Medicine. A second goal is to develop a core curriculum for teaching medical students, family medicine and pediatric residents about the cancer problem and its management in children.

"Cancer in children is the great imitator, with symptoms such as a fever of unknown origin or a lump or bump. Any physician seeing children must be aware—without creating ear in patients," cautions Charlene Holt,

M.D., FAAP, Director of Pediatric Oncology. "The techniques for early detection and prevention in adults are not feasible in children because the biology and types of tumors and leukemias seen are entirely different."

In the last 20 years, a tremendous amount of progress has been made in the diagnosis and management of these illnesses in children. Cancers such as Wilms' tumor have come so far that health care providers now are looking for minimizing treatment. Scientists and specially trained physicians throughout the U.S. have teamed up to design a variety of treatment protocols to answer basic science questions and provide state-of-the-art therapy in the child's home setting.

"Now the average child with leukemia has better than a 71 percent chance of surviving longer than five years and enjoying a relatively normal life with full activities. Twenty years ago, the survival rate in this illness was four to six months," Holt says.

The solid tumors of childhood aggressively with surgery, radiation therapy and appropriate combination chemotherapy also are yielding cure in early stage disease. Children with all stages of Wilms' tumor, neuroblastoma, lymphomas and sarcomas have an overall survival rate of greater than 50 percent. Holt says major progress in cancer care, supportive care with blood component therapy, newer antibiotics, and specialized personnel in oncology services, psychosocial support and rehabilitation have improved survival rates and quality of life.

"By establishing a pediatric oncology program in the Texas Panhandle, we hope to deliver the latest, best care to children in this region. This means working directly with national cooperative pediatric research groups and the National Cancer Institute so modern medical care can be given nearer to the child's home setting. This, of course, eases the burden of travel to distant centers and causes far less family disruption and expense," says Holt.

In the psychosocial realm there are concerns about long term survival, interpersonal relationships, education and employment potential. The parents' feelings about participating in clinical trials and randomized studies must be considered in addition to the socioeconomic impacts on the family.

Holt sees increased collaboration with existing community resources such as practicing pediatricians and all physicians seeing children, the Ronald McDonald House, and crippled children's services. Eventually she would like to develop educational programs in the schools to establish long term preventive concepts in cancer control. Holt expects the pediatric oncology program to have the full range of comprehensive services, complemented by a collaborative relationship with other major children's cancer programs in the United States.

Holt emphasizes cancer in children often strikes the young family who is not adequately equipped for the extreme financial and emotional burden. She says financial support from private and community resources is needed to help the program grow.

Patients with diagnosis or suspected diagnosis of cancer now may be referred to the Harrington Cancer Center. Physicians may refer directly to the Center by calling (806)378-HOPE, ext. 4117. New patients and those currently receiving treatment at distant facilities also may be referred by their physician.

Bake easy bread enriched with soy

DEAR POLLY — Do you have the recipe for Cornell Formula bread, which is fortified with soy flour for extra nutrition? Thanks. — P.C.

DEAR P.C. — Here are the basic ingredients for an enriched bread developed by Cornell University. The proportions are sufficient for three standard loaves.

Mix 3 cups warm water, 2 packages active dry yeast, 2 tablespoons sugar, 6 cups unbleached enriched bread flour, 3 tablespoons wheat germ, 1/2 cup full-fat soy flour (stirred before measuring), 1/4 cup non-fat dry milk, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons melted vegetable shortening.

The dough is mixed as for any bread dough, kneaded and allowed to rise twice before shaping into loaves, given a final rise and baked at 350 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Nutrition Boosters," which has a recipe for Cornell Bread as well as recipes and tips for enriching the nutrition content in other main dishes, vegetables, breads and desserts. Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We read so many stories these days about murder, rape, muggings, people getting ripped off, swindled and done in that I thought you might enjoy a letter that proves there are still some kind and generous souls out there. Here is my story about a good person:

A few months ago I was driving a car with a 23-foot trailer. My passengers were my blind husband, Ted, and our dachshund, Bub.

It was Ted's responsibility to remind me to check our gas tank whenever we pulled into a town. Somehow he slipped up and we found ourselves in western Wyoming without a drop of gas in the tank. I was lucky to make it over to the shoulder out of harm's way. We were both feeling mighty low because there was no sign of life anywhere around, and it was getting dark.

My usually upbeat husband looked forlorn and concerned. He asked, "Now what are we going to do?"

I replied, "I'm going to try to hitch a ride."

After waiting for what seemed like an eternity, I saw a car coming down the road. I hurried out of my car and got my thumb in position.

A pick-up truck came to a screeching halt. A 10-gallon hat was all I saw, but I heard a pleasant voice say, "Havin' trouble, ma'm?"

I replied, "I'm out of gas. Can I ride with you to the next town?"

"Yup," was the reply. "Climb in."

I told him that I was hitting the road because my husband was blind and had to stay in the car with the dog. He allowed as how the next town was Kemmerer, about five miles up the road. That was all the conversation we had.

When we arrived in Kemmerer my driver disappeared for a few minutes, went into a building that looked like a garage, came out and tossed something in the back of the truck.

"What's that?" I asked.

"A container," was the reply. "I've got a barrel of gas on the truck but we needed something to put it in. We're going back to your car now."

In less than half an hour I greeted my husband with a big "Hello! I'm back with a keg of gas!" Need I tell you he whooped with joy?

Ten-gallon hat put several gallons of gas into the car, tossed his container back into the truck and said, "Well, I'll be on my way now."

"How much do I owe you?" I asked.

"Nothing," he said. "Glad I was able to help you out."

He tipped the 10-gallon hat and was gone. I don't even know his name. But I do know he restored my faith in humanity. That anonymous gentleman made me a firm believer in the goodness of people.—E.S., Lincoln, Neb.

DEAR E.: Beautiful. It's a joy to publish such a positive commentary. I checked and found that Kemmerer is 100 miles from Salt Lake City. I hope 10-gallon Hat reads my column in the Salt Lake City Tribune. If so, here's a big hug from Chicago.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.50 plus a No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0662.

DR. GOTT

If it sells it isn't taboo

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

A pleasant-looking young man appears on the television screen and, without the slightest embarrassment, gets right to the point. He looks earnestly at the viewer and announces: "My mother-in-law recommended Preparation H for my hemorrhoids. It's all right, she's a doctor."

Here we go again. Do advertising executives really have to scrape the absolute bottom of the barrel? Can you imagine asking your mother-in-law for medical advice? My mother-in-law is a very lovely woman, but I wouldn't for the life of me ask her about hemorrhoids, even if she were hospital chief of staff — at least not as long as I have the boob tube to tell me what to do.

The advertising world takes a lot for granted these days. For one thing, they'd like us to assume that a 30-second commercial reflects real life. Also, we're expected to fill in the exchanges that took place before the camera started rolling.

As an example, here is what our earnest young man, if he were real, would go through before purchasing Preparation H.

"Hi, Mom, how are you doing?" "Fine, Son. You've been married to Buffy for six weeks. Is everything going well?"

"Yeah, I suppose so. But to tell you the truth, I have a problem."

"Oh dear! Has my little girl not been treating you right?"

"No, no, Mom. Nothing like that. You see, I have this painful itching area in my..."

"You can be honest, dear. Do you have a personal problem? Let's talk about it. Even though I'm a pathologist, I should be able to help."

"Gosh, I don't know where to begin. I have this problem... It's my behind."

"Clark, don't you worry about such a thing. Just drop your trousers right here in the kitchen and let me have a look. My, you certainly do have a problem there. I'd use Preparation H."

Unlikely, you say? Sure, but how else is a newlywed going to obtain advice, free of charge, from his physician mother-in-law? Would you, as a doctor, hazard a diagnosis without first seeing what the ailment is?

Anyway, most doctors don't diagnose and treat close relatives' illnesses because physicians cannot be purely objective in this situation. More important, is this the kind of information that we need from television? I mean, the guy's brother — a certified emergency medical technician — undoubtedly could have given him the necessary knowledge... and a lot more useful advice, to boot.

This silliness reminds me of the current brouhaha about condom ads on TV. My reaction is: So what? We already have dinner-table/prime-time commercials about tampons, menstrual pads, scented douches and feminine sprays. What's the problem?

Is your stomach going to sour any faster if you're watching a condom ad during dessert than if you have to put up with one more second of the female genital tract? The barn door is already open; what difference does another cow or two make?

If you really want to gag, take a close look at what's already being advertised on TV. A condom ad that says, "I don't want to die for love" would certainly be an improvement over the beer commercials that encourage our youth to hang out at the Silver Bullet or guzzle a six-pack on the beach. With enough brew circulating in your system, the use of condoms becomes an afterthought, along with "Where the heck are the car keys? They were here a few minutes ago."

No, television commercials are already ready the pits. They appeal to our most basic concerns about body odor, bad breath and pimples. In my view, the Great Condom Issue is just a pseudo-prudish ploy by network prigs who would flail their own mothers-in-law during "Wheel of Fortune" if the act could be turned into profit.

What we need are four out of five doctors who don't endorse ANYTHING. Then M.D.-mothers-in-law would confine their consultations to the office and devote more time to beneficial services, such as babysitting the children while you and your wife catch a movie downtown. But be sure to take a soft pillow to sit on. Those hard theater seats can be murder on hemorrhoids.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

In 10 Innings

Royals defeat Rangers, 3-2

By CRAIG HORST
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals may have rediscovered something special in their first game under Manager John Wathan.

The Royals became known for comebacks in 1985, coming back time and again until they finally won the World Series.

Lackluster play this year brought a 62-64 record and the downfall of Manager Billy Gardner, who was fired Thursday.

With Wathan in the dugout Thursday night, Kansas City rallied behind a two-out ninth inning home run by Bo Jackson and a two-out 10th inning home run by George Brett for a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"The sign of a good team is to battle back and play hard and not give up," a relaxed Wathan said afterward. "It's an exciting feeling to win close games. I think that's what we're going to have to do, win the close games."

Brett hit his 17th home run to left off reliever Dale Mohorcic, who had just come off the disabled list.

"I didn't want to strike out three times, I didn't want to make any errors for him (Wathan)," said Brett, who had struck out in his two previous at-bats. "We started playing together in 1971 in the Instructional League and we played together in the minors. We lived together many times in spring training."

"It's just great to see him get a chance and it's great to see him get his first win. I think we played with more enthusiasm today, there was more hustle, there was more cheering on the bench."

Jackson, who had been benched while struggling through a 1-19 slump, got his first home run since July 30 on a 3-2 pitch from Paul Kilgus.

Jackson, who had doubled in the second inning was 2-25 with 15 strikeouts in his last nine games before getting his 21st home run.

The Rangers had gone ahead 2-1 in the ninth when Pete Incaviglia and Larry Parrish led off with singles. After Pete O'Malley grounded out, Royals starter Bret Saberhagen intentionally walked pinch hitter Geno Petralli to load the bases.

Wathan called for reliever Jerry Don Gleanon, who got pinch hitter Bob Brower to foul out. Gleanon then worked to a 1-2 count on Oddible McDowell before walking him on a 3-2 count and forcing in the lead run.

Ruben Sierra had given the Rangers a 1-0 lead with an inside-the-park home run with two outs in the first inning, his second inside-the-park homer in three games.

Sierra hit a drive off Saberhagen that bounced off the rightfield wall just out of the reach of a leaping Danny Tartabull. Sierra circled the bases for his 26th homer as center-fielder Willie Wilson chased the ball down.

Kansas City tied the game in the fifth on doubles by Ross Jones and Wilson around a groundout by Larry Owen. Kevin Seitzer and Brett grounded out to strand Wilson.

Each starting pitcher deserved better. Kilgus went 8 2-3 innings and gave up just the one run on five hits before Jackson homered.

Saberhagen, who has struggled with a 6.91 earned run average since the All-Star break, did not allow the Rangers a hit after the third inning until the ninth.

Mohorcic fell to 6-4 with the loss. John Davis, the third Royals pitcher went to 3-0 with the win for 1 1-3 innings of relief.

The Quarterbacking Crew

The quarterbacks on the Hereford High School varsity football team this season are, from left: Jason Scott, Raymond Romo, and Stuart Mitts. Today at 7:30 p.m., a varsity scrimmage is scheduled against Lubbock Monterey High School, at the Monterey field. Before that, a sophomore scrimmage is set for 3:30 p.m. and a junior varsity scrimmage is scheduled at 5:30 p.m.

A Hereford Bass Club tournament at Conchas Lake this month was won by Bruce Johnson, who totaled 93 and one half points.

That was 17 points higher than runners-up Sonny Nikkel and Jerry

NFC West preview

Will New Orleans finally make playoffs?

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One of these seasons, the New Orleans Saints might reach the National Football League playoffs and make San Francisco 49ers Coach Bill Walsh look good.

"It seems like I say this every year, but I think New Orleans is on the verge of breaking out and getting into the playoffs. They've been flirting with it every year," Walsh said in a pre-season look at the 49ers' opponents in the National Football Conference's Western Division.

"The Atlanta Falcons have a fine young team, but their quarterback has to become established," Walsh said, referring to 25-year-old David Archer.

Those two teams are trying to break into what has been a California monopoly in the division.

Walsh is heading into his ninth season with the 49ers, who won their fourth NFC West title in the last six seasons by finishing 10-5-1 last year and edging the Los Angeles Rams, 10-6. The Rams have one division title and four runner-up finishes so far in the 1980s.

Atlanta last made the playoffs in 1982, the strike-shortened season, and hasn't had a winning season since. Last year's Falcons went 7-8-1, and an off-season change brought Marion Campbell back for his second tour as head coach.

The Saints, in their first season under Coach Jim Mora, were 6-5 at one point last year, then faded out of the division race and finished 7-9. In 20 NFL seasons, Saints have never posted a winning record or made the playoffs.

"Once the Saints have that first winning season, it's going to help a lot," said Mora, who is making no promises for the coming season. "It's hard to catch up when the teams ahead of you are trying to improve, too."

What the Saints have going for them are a highly regarded defensive line and linebacking unit; Rueben Mayes, who rushed for 1,353 yards as a rookie and their superb placekicker, Morten Anderson.

David Wilson and Bobby Hebert again are competing for the starting quarterback job. Hebert, the former USFL star, was knocked out of the starting lineup by a broken foot last season. The two passers combined for 12 touchdowns and were intercepted 25 times.

Mora considers improvement of the passing offense and pass defense essential. Lonzell Hill, a rookie from Washington, could break into the lineup as a starting wide receiver, and several rookies are getting shots at winning jobs in the defensive backfield.

Atlanta's Archer was another of the many NFL quarterbacks injured during the 1986 season. He helped the Falcons to a 5-1 start, but the team was 5-5-1 when he suffered a shoulder injury in November, and backup Turk Schonert took over. The Atlanta passing offense ranked 25th in the NFL, and the quarterbacks were sacked 56 times.

The Falcons' strong rushing attack is led by Gerald Riggs, who has gone over 1,000 yards three straight seasons. Second-round draft pick Kenny Flowers from Clemson joins the running back contingent this year.

Defensively, Atlanta ranked in the middle of the NFL pack last year, with a mix of veterans like linebackers Buddy Curry and Joel Williams, and young players, including linemen Rick Bryan and Tony Casillas.

Coach John Robinson of the Rams has a new offensive coordinator, Ernie Zampese, formerly with the San Diego Chargers. Zampese will oversee the annual challenge of giving the team a passing offense to adequately complement NFL rushing champion Eric Dickerson. The Rams' passing offense ranked dead last in the NFL last season.

Jim Everett became the Rams' starting quarterback late in his rookie season and is the unchallenged at quarterback entering into his first full NFL season on a team that for a decade has played musical signal-callers.

"He's very competitive. He's very confident," Zampese says of the 6-foot-5 passer from Purdue who threw for 1,018 yards and eight TDs as a rookie.

Everett and the Rams should have the advantage of full-time play from Henry Ellard, the wide receiver who missed the early part of last season because of a contract holdout. Ellard caught 34 passes for 447 yards in nine games last season, after gaining 811 yards on receptions in 1985. He's also has a career 12.7-yard average on punt returns, best mark in NFL history.

The Los Angeles offensive line is one of the league's strongest and most experienced. Tackle Jackie Slater and guard Dennis Harrah are heading into their 12th and 13th pro seasons, respectively. The defense, which ranked fourth in the NFC last year, includes longtime performers such as safety Nolan Cromwell, linemen Reggie Doss and Gary Jeter, and linebacker Carl Ekern, all with at least 10 seasons of experience.

San Francisco's veteran players include several who starred on the Super Bowl championship teams of 1981 and 1984. Quarterback Joe Montana heads that list and, at age 31, would like to remain the 49ers' starter for several more seasons.

But it's unlikely that Walsh envisioned more than a year or two of backup duty for Steve Young when he traded with Tampa Bay for the 25-year-old quarterback, former Brigham Young All-American and USFL player. Young was a starter most of last season and took plenty of lumps, being sacked 47 times and intercepted 13 times while throwing for 2,282 yards and eight TDs.

Montana had back surgery in September and played only eight regular season games last year, yet passed for 2,236 yards.

The 49ers' most talented young players include wide receiver Jerry Rice, the 1986 league leader in receiving yardage with 1,570, fullback Roger Craig, and defensive linemen Michael Carter and Charles Haley.

Thalidomide-induced birth defects recently reviewed

Twenty-five years ago, Americans opened their Sunday newspapers and learned that a nightmare was happening: Thousands of babies were being born without true arms and legs, but with seal-like flippers, because of a new drug.

The helplessness of these children and the agony of their parents produced new, protective drug laws in Great Britain, the United States and much of the rest of the world.

The tragedy had been produced by a tranquilizer that had been promoted as providing quick, calm sleep with no hangover, and with none of the overdose dangers of barbiturates. Indeed, backers of the drug had pointed out that it was so safe you could take handfuls without killing yourself.

With such striking claims did the drug thalidomide go on the European, British and Canadian markets, beginning in 1958 in West Germany where it was sold without prescription, like aspirin.

A dozen grossly deformed infants were born in various parts of West Germany in 1959. The infants had a rare condition known as phocomelia, combining the Greek words for seal and limb. In these infants, malformed fingers or toes appeared at the end of a very foreshortened limb—giving them a flipper-like appearance.

No connection was made with drug use in general, much less with the use of thalidomide. After all, didn't the placenta prevent harmful substances in a mother's blood from reaching the unborn child?

Meanwhile, an application to sell the drug thalidomide in the United States was submitted to FDA by the century-old William S. Merrell Co. of Cincinnati which sought to manufacture the drug here. The studies submitted in support of the drug's safety filled four books the size of a telephone book.

In September 1960, the application was given to a new FDA employee, Dr. Frances Kelsey. "It was deemed to be a simple application and since I had just reported to work, it was assigned to me," she recalls. Under the law at the time, Kelsey had 60 days to review the drug—though deadlines could be extended if additional information was needed.

Kelsey was alerted to the unusual nature of thalidomide by the fact that it acted differently in people than in animals, inducing sleep in people but not in test animals.

She and the other reviewers asked the sponsoring company for additional information. "All reviewers found deficiencies," Kelsey says in her no-nonsense way, "and the company was so informed."

Then, in the United States in February 1961, Kelsey saw a letter in a British medical journal calling attention to the development of neuritis—a painful, tingling condition—in the fingers of patients who had taken thalidomide for a long time.

Kelsey, who had been interested in the research accumulating over the previous ten years about birth defects associated with drugs, wondered whether this neuritis in adult users' extremities might have a parallel in the fetus.

Evidence was accumulating that, rather than being specially protected, the fetus at some stages could be a good deal more susceptible to certain drugs than was an adult.

So the new FDA employee again asked the company for further information, and she suggested that perhaps the drug's labeling should state its safety in pregnancy was not assured. Some of the company's representatives made no secret of their displeasure, pointing out that the drug had been "safely" used in Europe for years.

Meanwhile, phocomelia was becoming an unexplained European epidemic. Some infants had no legs at all, just toes sprouting from their hips, along with arms foreshortened and seal-like. Some people blamed radioactive fallout, which concerned many citizens at the time. There was a search too for abnormal chromosomes, and reviews of the mothers' X-ray use.

In Hamburg, Germany, finally, a pediatrician began to make a tentative connection. Questioning showed that about 20 percent of the mothers bringing deformed infants to his clinic had taken Contergan, the German trade name for thalidomide. But, of course, this might be coincidence. Many people took thalidomide.

With great care, Dr. Widukind's sought out and questioned his patients. Now the percentage of mothers saying they had used thalidomide rose to 50 percent. (Many said they hadn't thought to mention the drug when first asked, since it was so commonly used.)

Similar reports came from Australia and Scotland.

Thalidomide was withdrawn in Germany and elsewhere at the end of November. The William S. Merrell

Co. soon thereafter withdrew its drug application.

All this happened without many Americans, even physicians, knowing it. But on July 15, 1962, the Washington Post disclosed the drama that had occurred at FDA.

"This is the story of how the skepticism and stubbornness of a Government physician," Post reporter Morton Mintz began, "prevented what could have been an appalling American tragedy, the birth of hundreds or indeed thousands of armless and legless children..."

The story was immediately relayed on the wire services. Americans watched as the toll rose to some 5,000 deformed infants in Germany alone. Britain had several hundred. Many pregnant women, having already taken thalidomide, carried their infants to term in great fear.

The media also reported that:

--FDA had discovered that thalidomide had been distributed to more than 3,000 women in the United States—a promotion in the guise of a clinical test. About ten deformed infants are believed to have resulted.

--FDA had discovered that some research submitted to get drugs approved appeared to have been misrepresented, or perhaps entirely fictional!

--A major drug firm had accumulated reports of jaundice and death with a drug for more than five years before reporting them to FDA.

The snowballing disclosures produced public pressure that quickly revived Congressional interest in drug law improvements that had been advocated, in various forms, by the Eisenhower Administration and Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee. Legislation requiring that a drug be proved effective and providing many other safeguards was soon passed and signed into law by President John F. Kennedy.

Kennedy also awarded Kelsey the Distinguished Civilian Service Award. It said, "Through high ability and steadfast confidence in her professional decision, she has made an outstanding contribution to the protection of the health of the American people."

Senator Bill Sarpalius

Reports

AUSTIN — Standard and Poor's Corp., the New York investment company, this week confirmed what we suspected all along—the so-called solution to the state budget crisis did Texas very little good.

Oh, the $5.7 billion tax bill and $38.3 billion budget passed during the recent special session kept state government operating at minimal levels for the next two years, but neither did anything to improve Texas' long-term fiscal outlook, a fact Standard and Poor's noted Monday when it lowered the state's bond rating from AA+ to AA.

The move means both major bond-rating companies, Standard and Poor's and Moody's Investor Service, have assigned the state AA bond ratings. For those of us who don't follow the bond markets daily, a lower rating reflects the investment companies' opinion that Texas' financial house is not in as sound a shape as it should be and that the state's general obligation bonds are not the investment they, once were.

All of which obliges the state to pay higher interest rates on the bonds it sells, thus guaranteeing that each state bond sale will not net the treasury as much as initially anticipated. In the current case, the lower rating applies to more than $2 billion worth of bonds scheduled to finance parks, water projects, student loans, farm and ranch loans and veterans' housing.

No exact estimate is available on the cost of the lower rating, but spokesmen for the State Treasurer's and Comptroller's offices have said the ultimate cost will be in the millions of dollars.

This indeed is a sad state of affairs for Texas, which enjoyed a AAA bond rating—the highest possible—from the early 1960s until May of last year, when Standard and Poor's lowered our rating to AA+. Moody's followed suit this past March by lowering the rating to AA. That move foreshadowed the rating drop announced Monday by Standard and Poor's.

To be specific about why the rating has gone down and why the state will lose millions in bond sales, let us quote from Standard and Poor's officials' explanation of their action.

"The recently passed tax package enables the state to fund current appropriations but does not create a financial cushion for the state to effectively address future downturns to its economy or revenue streams. Actions taken by the state to date do not address the critical long-term disruption of finances and the need to ensure fiscal stability in the future."

This, in fancy financial talk, is the equivalent of what we said at the beginning of the regular legislative session and what we said during the special session when we voted against the tax bill.

The citizens of this state have been taxed and taxed heavily during the last few years. We think these taxes have been relatively well spent and that the state has been fairly frugal in spending its citizens' money. Nonetheless, we said, Texans are reaching their limit. We vowed not to vote for another tax bill unless it provided a long-term solution to the state's problems.

We held out hope during the regular session and during the first part of the special session that a long-term solution would be found. But, by the time a tax bill reached the Senate floor, and despite our colleagues' best efforts, it was clear there would be no final answer.

Texas wound up with a tax bill that did little to improve the regressive and outdated nature of our tax structure. We certainly didn't get a tax bill that guaranteed fiscal stability for years to come. All of us no doubt will be paying in the future for that lack of stability.

State government began paying last Monday.

His big break

Lou Diamond Phillips rocks in 'Bamba'

By Frank Sanello

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — "La Bamba," the hit film about Ritchie Valens, contains a melodramatic subplot about the '50s rock star and his girlfriend, Donna, who rejects him because he is Latino. Donna's parents won't even let Valens inside their house.

Lou Diamond Phillips, 25, who portrays Valens, didn't have any trouble interpreting those scenes. The same thing happened to him at the University of Texas at Arlington.

Of Filipino, Hawaiian, Cherokee, Latino and Scot-Irish descent, Phillips dated a fellow drama student for a year. Her folks, who hailed from Kansas, treated him like a member of the family.

"Then one day I found out she had told her parents I was just a friend," Phillips recounts. "When she finally told them I was her boyfriend, they would only invite me into the vestibule. And this wasn't the '50s — it was two years ago."

"La Bamba" is set in that earlier era, and Phillips plays an entertainer who had to struggle with the same anti-Latino prejudices.

"Others looked more like Ritchie, but they said they chose me for my warmth and sensitivity."

Phillips was born in the Philippines. His father died when he was 2, and when Phillips' mother got remarried to a naval officer, the youngster moved from base to base in Georgia, Washington, D.C., California and Texas until the seventh grade.

In college, Phillips' fondness for M&M candy led to a pivotal event in his development as an actor. At a costume party for the cast members of a college production of "Hamlet," Phillips dressed up as a yellow peanut M&M with a large bag of the candy in jokes. But Roarke was also interested in the young man's talent, and gave him a job at his Film Actors' Lab in Dallas. Three years later, Phillips got the career-making call from the producers of "La Bamba."

Originally, Phillips thought he was auditioning for the role of Frankie Valli. "My agent's receptionist got role. "My knees were shaking. Tears came to my eyes. At that moment I felt like the prince had put the glass slipper on my foot — and it fit!" says Phillips. "Then I said something stupid like 'I'll think about it.'"

Until "La Bamba," Phillips had been subsisting on $125 a week as a drama instructor. During the shooting of the film, Phillips "slept in somebody's utility room" in an un-chic section of Beverly Hills.

Since wrapping up the film last summer, Phillips has appeared on "Dallas" and "Miami Vice." He also stars in and was associate producer for "Dakota," a low-budget feature about a confused young man who works on a horse ranch, which is slated for a spring release. On the set of "Dakota," Phillips met assistant director Julie Cyphers, whom he married last July. The two plan to have an upcoming European press tour for "La Bamba" double as their honeymoon.

Phillips isn't waiting for the phone to ring for his next acting assignment. He's already written four screenplays, one of which he says has a "big director attached to it."

The young actor deplores the fact that ethnics are too often typecast as criminals on TV and in films. In spite of this, he will play an East Los Angeles gang member in "Walking on Water," a PBS "American Playhouse" production, in December.

But Phillips is quick to defend his role: "My character drops out of the gang so he can study calculus."

— Lou Diamond Phillips

his hand. His future mentor, actor-teacher Adam Roarke ("The Stuntman"), had a sweet tooth and followed Phillips around the party, munching on his candy. "At the time he was only interested in my M&Ms," Phillips confused and left a message on my machine saying that I was up for the true story of Frankie Valli. I thought, 'Oh, no! I gotta get a perm, develop a falsetto and lose six inches in height.'"

Phillips was acting in regional films and theater in Texas when he learned he had won the Ritchie Valens

Show features a big pig

NORTH LEWISBURG, Ohio (AP) — One of David Letterman's scheduled guests on his late-night talk show weighs 1,205 pounds, and is a real pig.

Chief, the Buckeye Big Boar champion of the Ohio State Fair, is set to take center stage on "Late Night With David Letterman" on Friday.

"I don't think any other hog in this country will ever get this far," the 5-year-old swine's proud owner, western Ohio farmer Bob M. Corbett, said recently.

Chief has won the Buckeye Big Boar crown the past two years, and he isn't finished competing.

Corbett wants Chief to match the 1978 world record of 1,350 pounds, and plans to do it by feeding the hog shelled corn. Until now, Chief's regimen has consisted of a protein diet and exercise.

"I learned to raise this boar through body-building magazines," Corbett said. "The same thing that works for the human body works for him. He ain't got an ounce of fat on him. He's hard."

EXERCISE HELPS OUT

NEW YORK (AP) — Exercise helps older adults suffering from problems such as depression, anxiety, low self-concept and a feeling of loss of control, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says researchers studied 42 people between the ages of 60 and 75. One group took part in aerobic dance and walking-running. The other group did not exercise. The aerobic exercisers improved in all areas, it says, while the non-exercisers showed no changes.
