Hall of Fame inductees

Maxwell, Satterfield, Youren inducted into Cowgirl Hall

Wearing bright red sashes with golden letters, the three women commanded center stage wherever they went.

And well they might, as the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center celebrated its annual Rhinestone Roundup Weekend to honor its three newest inductees.

The women -- Gertrude Maxwell, Dorothy Satterfield and Jan Youren -- came to Hereford from Arizona and Idaho to join an elite group of women who have shaped the American West by word or by deed.

Satterfield and Youren were the Cowgirl Honorees, Maxwell the Western Heritage Honoree.

Cowgirl inductees are chosen for "promoting the spirit of rodeo and allowing the Wild West to live on."

Western Heritage inductees gain their distinction for "their pioneer spirit of the West."

The actual induction was held on Saturday, with nearly 140 people gathering at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center for breakfast and the induction ceremony.

Following a meal of Western Omelet Saddlebags, fruit, pastries and desserts, the ceremony began.

Betty Sims Solt, 1990 Cowgirl Honoree, was mistress of ceremonies.

The honorees were presented to the audience and officially inducted by Hall assistant executive director Virginia Artho.

For the afternoon, it was an appearance at an open house at the Hall of Fame that brought out the crowds. Another open house was held the day before.

Hundreds of people packed the facility both days to tour the facility, meet the Honorees and look at exhibits commemorating their lives and selection.

Also during the open house, the 1993 Hall magazine Sidesaddle cover portrait was unveiled.

This year's cover belongs to Sacajawea, the Bird Woman, who guided the Lewis and Clark Expedition across the wilds of the continent. It was painted by Virginia Carlson-Foat of Apache Junction, Ariz., and was displayed in the entry to the Hall.

Finally, weekend activities wound to a close on Saturday night, with a concert by the country singing group The Dixie Chicks at the B Bar S Arena.

That session featured a barbecue brisket dinner and a dance to Texas Country. It was attended by several hundred people.

Rounding out the night was a performance by Joyce Thierer of Admire, Kan., who portrayed Calamity Jane.

Thierer is founder of Ride Into History, a historical re-enactment troupe.

Also presented during the weekend by the troupe were Ernie Prentiss, a female Civil War cavalry soldier who disguised herself as a man, who was played by Debora Charles at a private reunion dinner on Friday, and a presentation of Caroline Penelope Allen, the "proper woman" of the pioneering West, who was played during the induction ceremony by Lisa Miles.

Also Saturday night was a drawing for round-trip tickets on American Airlines, which were won by Becky Reinart, and a silent auction. Preliminary auction figures indicate it raised nearly $7,000.

Clinton says plan won't soak the rich

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton, defending his deficit-reduction plan against Republican attacks, says his aim is fairness - not to soak the rich.

"This is not about the politics of envy, this is about who can afford to pay the freight," Clinton said Monday on WCBS Radio, New York.

"In the last 12 years, we had tax decreases on upper-income people and tax increases on the middle class, even though their income trends were just the reverse," Clinton said.

Reversing that, he added, "is not about class war, this is about fairness."

Republican leaders have accused Clinton and his Democratic allies of an anti-business, anti-success attitude in writing a deficit-reduction plan that faces votes in the Senate later this week. The bill's biggest money-raiser would raise taxes sharply on those making more than about $100,000 a year.

"I don't buy the argument that just because we tax the rich a higher percentage, this therefore is a good bill," Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, senior Republican on the Senate Finance Committee.

Richards rapped for vetoing Social Security tax measure

AUSTIN (AP) - A key state budget official has criticized Gov. Ann Richards for vetoing a bill that would have stopped the state from paying employee Social Security taxes for new state employees.

Rep. Robert Junell, D-San Angelo, and chairman of the House budget-writing committee, said Monday, "This is the poorest public policy that the governor could possibly participate in."

He said Richards vetoed the bill because she promised the Texas State Employees Union that she would.

The veto will cost state taxpayers $150 million over the next two years, and make it that much more difficult to avoid a tax increase in 1995, Junell said.

Richards said she vetoed the bill because it would result in current state employees getting paid more to do the same work as future state employees.

In completing action on measures

Probation revoked, man assessed 6-year sentence in district court

A six-year term in prison was given in 222nd District Court Monday after probation of a defendant was revoked by Judge David Wesley Gully.

Jackie Terry previously was convicted of forgery by passing and sentenced to eight years' probation.

Another defendant, Lester Brown Jr., entered a plea of guilty to felony driving while intoxicated. The prosecution also had filed a motion passed during the regular legislative session that ended May 31. Richards also vetoed a bill that would have prevented highway speeding tickets under 70 mph from being reported to the driver's insurance company.

"The effect of this bill would be to abolish speed limits between 55 and 70 miles per hour, causing an increase in traffic accidents, injuries, and deaths. It would also lead to escalating auto insurance costs," Richards said.

The bill's author, Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, could not immediately be reached by The Associated Press. Earlier, Craddick had said his bill wouldn't encourage speeding. He said it would allow people to drive as they already do without risking higher insurance rates because of speeding tickets.

Richards won praise from the public watchdog group Public Citizen for vetoing several other measures.

to revoke probation on a previous felony DWI conviction. The two cases were consolidated and the defendant sentenced to five years' probation on the new charge and ordered to a residential treatment center.

Probation was modified on Casey Wade Jones, previously convicted of felony DWI. He was placed on intensive supervision for four months.

Commission approves one-way designations

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Traffic around Hereford High School during school hours will be routed on two one-way streets when classes begin this fall.

The Hereford City Commission Monday evening heard a request from Hereford Independent School District for the one-way designation on Avenue F, going north, and Union, going west, from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on school days.

In other business, the commission: -- Awarded the contract for installing new runway lighting at the Hereford airport.

-- Accepted a bid for fertilizer, herbicide and insecticide supplies for use at the John Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

-- Adopted a resolution providing city employees with a cafeteria plan relating to health insurance coverage.

-- Voted a contribution to the July 4th celebration planned in Hereford.

-- Appointed two members to the golf course advisory board.

-- Agreed to cancel the next regular meeting which would be on July 5, a city holiday.

Don Cumpton, HISD assistant superintendent, spoke to the commission about traffic problems around HHS.

"I'm surprised someone hasn't been hurt up there," Cumpton declared, adding that the one-way traffic on Avenue F and Union might alleviate the problem.

The commission voted unanimously, on motion of Commissioner Irene Cantu and second by Commissioner Roger Eades, to approve the request.

Bids on the runway lighting project were reviewed. The bid of $64,857.30 from Artex Electric will cover installation of wiring as well as concrete transformer boxes.

On the same proposal, Gifford Electric of Fort Worth bid $71,412.04 and JLF Electrical of San Antonio bid $82,149.50.

The city's share of the project is estimated at $6,700. State funds will pay the remainder of the cost as well as engineering fees.

Only bid received for the golf course supplies, was from The Scotts Company of Albuquerque, N.M. Total price is $13,226.84.

Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce executive, Mike Carr, appeared before the commission to request the city's help in staging the annual July 4th celebration.

A contribution of $2,500 was voted by the commission. Funds were allocated in the current budget.

Named to the golf course advisory board are David Workman and Marcy Hughes, presidents, respectively, of the men's and women's golf associations.

City employees may take advantage of the health insurance cafeteria plan with adoption of a resolution by the commission.

Three shootings, robbery mar weekend peace here

Hereford police were kept busy last weekend, as three separate attempted murders and an aggravated robbery topped incident reports.

According to a report issued Monday by the department, the three unrelated shooting incidents took place on Saturday, Sunday and early Monday.

The aggravated robbery was reported early Saturday morning.

In the first reported shooting, Luis Baldeaz, 19, told police that he and another person thought they saw a fight in the 100 block of Avenue E at about 1 a.m. When he looked further, a person got out of a vehicle, walked toward the men and pulled out a pistol.

The complainant said he and his companion were then pursued by the person and two other subjects. Several shots were fired, but no one was injured.

The suspect is believed to be a juvenile. The case is still under investigation and no arrests have been made as yet.

At about 2 a.m. Sunday, Miguel Gavina, 52, reported that someone drove by his house in the 300 block of Avenue B and fired shots.

Gavina told officers that the shots were fired from a tan or brown pickup. No injuries were reported.

The case is still under investigation and no arrests have been made as yet.

At 2:36 a.m. Monday, Frank Castillo, 60, told police two people stood outside his home in the 100 block of South Ranger and fired four shots at the home.

No injuries were reported and the matter is still under investigation.

Late Friday, Leo Rodriguez, 39, was robbed by four men in his yard in the 900 block of South Lee.

Rodriguez told police that the men approached his home at about 11:45 p.m. wanting to buy a jambox.

One subject jumped the fence and attacked Rodriguez, then the other three joined in.

As the fight progressed, police were told, one suspect was said to have pulled out a small black pistol and pointed it at the victim. Another person hit him in the head with a baseball bat.

Approximately $180 in cash and a watch were taken.

Rodriguez told police he would seek medical attention.

The investigation is continuing.

8-year-old injured in accident on Monday

An 8-year-old Hereford girl was treated at Deaf Smith General Hospital, then transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo this morning after she was struck by a car on Monday.

According to police reports, a 1986 Chevrolet Suburban driven by Amy Alvarez Tijerina, 17, of Hereford was traveling west on 15th Street at 8:10 p.m.

Elizabeth De La Cruz crossed the street south in front of the vehicle and was struck.

She was transported by ambulance to DSGH. The accident report noted she appeared to suffer from bruises, abrasions, lacerations and complained of a headache.

Prior to her transfer to Amarillo at about 9:30 a.m. today, De La Cruz was listed in stable condition at DSGH.

Sharp certifies revenues to cover two-year state budget

AUSTIN -- State Comptroller John Sharp has certified that revenue will be available to fund the state's two-year $71.2 billion budget, about $650 million more than the official revenue estimate at the start of the legislative session.

Approximately $39.4 billion of this amount is General Revenue.

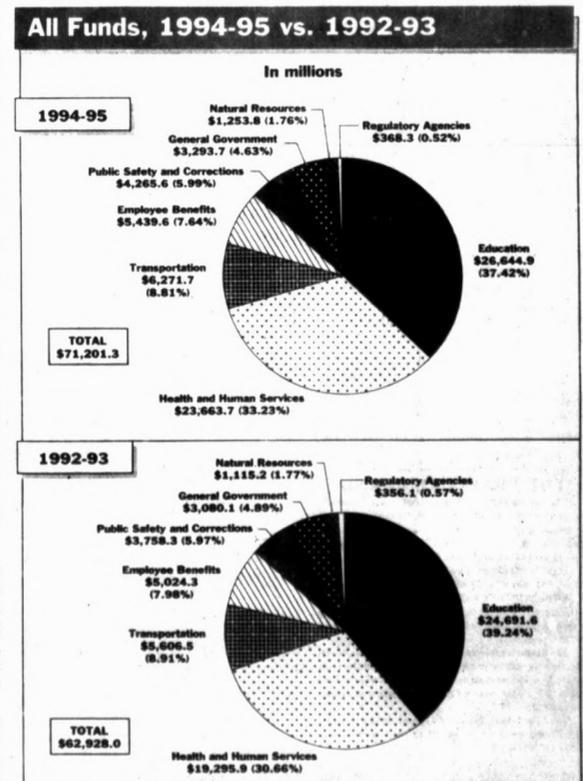

Under the "pay-as-you-go" provision in the Texas Constitution, Sharp is required to certify that sufficient revenue exists to cover state spending for the next two years. Only after the Comptroller certifies the availability of revenue can the Governor sign the Appropriations Bill into effect for fiscal years 1994-95.

The state's next fiscal year begins Sept. 1.

"I have informed the Governor and legislative leaders that the additional funds will be available, based upon economic growth, especially in the areas of motor vehicle sales tax and sales and use taxes, as well as higher-than-expected cash balances projected for the end of FY 1993," Sharp said.

"One of the principle reasons I am able to certify the 1994-95 state Appropriations Bill is because the Legislature adopted about 85 percent of the savings in Against the Grain, the Texas Performance Review's proposal for streamlining state government," Sharp said.

"Against the Grain laid out 460 detailed recommendations to improve government and save Texas taxpayers more than $4.5 billion in the next two fiscal years."

Japan can't 'withdraw from world'

Clinton hoping for successful economic summit

By TERENCE HUNT

AP White House Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) - Blaming Japan's political upheaval on a legacy of scandals and corruption, President Clinton says Tokyo will have to open up its markets to the West regardless of who is elected to head its shaken government.

"They can't withdraw from the world or shut us out now," Clinton said Monday.

He said the political turmoil would complicate next month's seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo but said he was confident they could make progress nevertheless.

The president said he wanted to take his 13-year-old daughter, Chelsea, on the Asian trip but was concerned that the educational value of the journey would be undercut by the intense press scrutiny she'd face.

Clinton made his remarks in an interview with Mutual Radio's Larry King, one of six radio interviews the president gave as he tried to seize the offensive to win Senate approval of a plan that he says will cut the budget deficit by $500 billion.

The White House is worried that Republicans have been able to characterize Clinton's programs on their terms as simply another tax-and-spend plan.

"There's been so much rhetoric around this economic program and so much inaccurate information put out there that it's not going to be easy to get the senators to make the tough choices to pass the bill," the president said.

Following fast on Clinton's heels, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., appeared on the same radio stations and said Clinton was ignoring Republican offers to help with the budget.

"They want to play politics instead of dealing with the deficit," Dole said, challenging the budget savings claimed by Clinton.

In his interviews, Clinton argued repeatedly that his plan is fair and balanced, that it includes $250 billion in budget cuts and that most of the tax increases he proposes will be absorbed by Americans with incomes above $100,000.

Clinton also took a slap at an unrelenting critic, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Clinton noted that he supports the space station and the super collider, two projects important to Texas' economy, and pointedly said, "Sen. Gramm may need me this week because I agree with him on this issue."

Clinton's comments about Japan's political troubles were his first since Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa failed to win a vote of confidence in Parliament last Friday. The move forced him to call early elections.

It was only the third no-confidence vote in postwar Japan, ostensibly prompted by his refusal to fight for reform after political scandals.

"What's happening in Japan now I think has more than anything else to do with the legacy of the various political scandals and the political corruption," Clinton said.

"It's pretty clear to me that no matter who winds up being prime minister of Japan and what faction they come out of... that they're going to have to continue to open their economy to our products and they're going to have to continue to stimulate their economy because they don't have a budget deficit; they've got a surplus."

Looking ahead to next month's economic meeting, he said, "It's going to be a challenge to get a lot done at this summit but I'm convinced we can." He said he would press European leaders to lower interest rates and seek progress on a long-stalled international trade agreement.

Public works law repairing roads but adds few jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) - A massive federal public works law enacted in 1991 is helping restore America's transportation system but has not lived up to advance billing as a job-creator and has other growing pains, an Associated Press survey shows.

Across America, vast stretches of highways are being repaved and scores of bridges replaced.

In two years, the law has helped pay for new bus yards in California, bicycle storage lockers in Ohio, park-and-ride lots in New York and a pedestrian overpass spanning Las Vegas' famed casino strip.

But an AP survey of two dozen states shows many projects put on hold because the federal government has provided only about 85 percent, or nearly $41 billion, of the $48 billion Congress originally promised for 1992 and 1993. The law has four more years to run.

The economic stimulus package President Clinton sought this year would have restored the missing funding for 1993. The package was filibustered to death by Senate Republicans in April.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, a strong supporter of the legislation, said, "We've got to recognize it's time to invest in America" or "we will have a country in the year 2000 we may not like."

Officially called the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991, it was signed into law by President Bush who predicted it would generate 4 million jobs by 1997.

That goal apparently will not be realized.

If all the states were the same size and slated to get the same amount of money, that would average out to about 80,000 jobs per state.

Even the largest states say they will fall short of the average.

Officials in California, one of the bill's biggest benefactors, attribute only 11,000 new jobs to the spending and predict another 37,500 over the final four years of the bill.

In New York, some 36,000 jobs were created and saved last year by spending under the bill. In Florida, some 50,000 new jobs are expected over the six years.

"I can't say it will create 4 million jobs. But it will create tens of thousands," said Jerry Donaldson of the Advocates for Highway and Auto Safety, which represents consumers and insurance companies.

"It was not conceived as a jobs bill," added Jim Lewis, spokesman for The Road Information Program, a highway research and trade group. "That became the political good news. But it is a sound means of investing in our economy. It is not fluff. It is not pork."

Generally, the government picks up 80 percent of highway project costs while states pay the rest. The federal money comes from a 14-cent-a-gallon tax motorists pay at the gasoline pump.

Faced with a growing deficit, Congress decided not to give the states the full amount it promised for the program's first two years.

Politically influential Northeastern states - with key members of Congress among the chief sponsors of the legislation - were among the big winners, the AP survey found.

In New York, officials are earmarking hundreds of millions of dollars to buy buses, create park-and-ride lots, build a new subway line to relieve congestion in Queens and purchase new diesel cars for the Long Island Rail Road.

"They found a lot of money for New York," said David Murray, a spokesman for that state's transportation department. "It was obvious they had New York state in mind when they drafted the bill."

Masonic Lodge presents awards

Betty Henson, left, was recently presented the "Community Builders Award" by Hereford Masonic Lodge. Robin Ruland, worshipful master of the lodge, made the presentation for Henson's "years of devotion to the people of Deaf Smith County." The lodge also presented a 25-year service award to Jay Spain. Harvey Milton, worshipful master-elect, made that presentation.

'Smart gun' won't fire without decoder ring

HOUSTON (AP) - A local inventor says he came up with the idea for a "smart handgun" after a San Antonio police officer was shot and killed with his own gun.

The specially designed .357 Magnum developed by Kenneth J. Pugh uses a magnetic decoder ring to keep unauthorized users from firing it.

"I refer to it as a smart gun because it knows who to shoot for and who not to shoot for and, yes, I believe it is the safest gun in the world," Pugh said.

After the police officer was shot with his own weapon in 1989 during a struggle with a motorist, Pugh said he took apart one of his guns to find a way to keep that from happening.

With Pugh's invention, the gun's owner wears a ring with a magnet planted inside. The gun will only fire when a person is wearing the ring.

To prevent an unauthorized person from putting on the ring and pulling the trigger, the gun also has a customized grip to sense its owner's hand and prevent anyone else from firing it.

Since May 1991 - when Pugh was issued Patent No. 5,016,376 for his "Magnetic Actuated Firearm Locking Mechanism" - he has been working to market the gun, which he officially has named the SSR-6 (Smart Safety Revolver six-shooter).

Pugh, a 46-year-old former Radio Shack store manager, formed a company called Fulton Arms and teamed up with a Humble jewelry maker to produce specially designed 14-karat gold rings.

Hereford student attends UT energy symposium

Robert Jimenez, 16, son of Robert and Alice Jimenez, recently joined more than 300 outstanding high school science students and teachers at the 33rd annual Texas Energy Science Symposium in Austin.

The affair was held June 8-11. Jimenez, who attends Hereford High School, was among 40 students and teachers who represented schools throughout the Panhandle and South Plains areas.

Their trip was sponsored by Southwestern Public Service Company.

The four-day symposium featured tours and presentations on various energy-related subjects, such as the Superconducting Super Collider near Waxahachie.

A highlight of the symposium was a tour of the Balcones Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin. Balcones is the University's research hub for studies ranging from biomedical engineering to micro-waves.

The symposium was sponsored by six electric utilities in Texas, including SPS.

The placid bay of Deception Island, of the Antarctic Peninsula, literally boiled in 1924 when the volcano underlying it erupted.

Organize for the great outdoors

As the temperature rises most of us look forward to spending more leisure time outdoors.

Get organized for trouble-free fun in the days ahead--let the experts help you get the most out of the weather with these timely tips:

-Keep your backyard patio or deck neat and safe during barbecue season. Fasten paper tablecloths to the picnic table with small pieces of adhesive-backed hook and loop fastener attached to the cloth and to the underside of the table. Sew small pieces of the fastener to fabric or vinyl tablecloths to attach them easily to the outdoor table.

-If your favorite pastime is boating or camping, you know that organization is the key to trouble-free fun. Make a checklist of equipment before starting out. And stow gear safely in your RV, boat or tent with handy, adjustable cinch straps.

-Use self-stick fasteners to anchor small flower pots or vases and keep them from being blown over during windy weather; or to stick a bird feeder to the side of the house, so it's easy to remove for refilling.

-Create an easily removable rain protector for your screened porch, using several pieces of adhesive-backed hook and loop fastener on plastic sheeting.

-Make cool, easy-care lawn chair covers by sewing six small pieces of loop fastener on a large towel. Stick six pieces of self-adhesive hook fastener on the chair, and press firmly to attach. On laundry day, pull to remove.

-Golf towels are easier to use if they're attached to your golf bag with hook and loop fasteners.

4. Is she ready to be tied down? (Absolutely not.)

5. Is she ready for diapers, cooking and housework? (No way) Then I asked myself the following questions about me:

1. Do I like kids? (Only if they belong to someone else.)

2. Do I want to be married? (Not for a few years.)

3. Am I ready to sit home at night with a wife and kid? (No.)

4. Am I ready for rent, insurance, car payments, doctor's bills, sick kids, dentist's bills, etc.? (No way could I handle it. I'm still in high school.)

DEAR LUCKY: Thanks for a letter that is sure to rattle the molars of a few million teenagers. I hope this column goes up on a lot of high school bulletin boards--and junior high schools as well.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been dating a great guy for the past four months. "Cal" is perfect in every way, but he has womanly breasts. He told me that when he was 13, he began developing breasts and has worn a bra ever since he started to "show."

I am really hung up on Cal but am worried about marrying a guy who has a sexier figure than mine. Please advise me.--Busted in Laguna Hills

DEAR LAGUNA: Cal has a condition called gynecomastia. It can be caused by tumors, medication (digitalis is the most common) or a sensitivity to hormones.

Cal should see a doctor. If his condition can't be controlled medically, surgery could solve the problem.

Gem of the Day: My heart goes out to the young woman who spent four years learning how to behave in polite society and the rest of her life trying to locate it.

Resident honored on 90th birthday

Willie Formby was honored June 15 with a party to celebrate her 90th birthday. The event was held in the Lamar Room at King's Manor Retirement Home.

The honoree was born June 15, 1903, in Dallas. She moved to Hereford in the early 1980s. She was married to John Formby who died in 1989.

Hosting the party were the honoree's son, Clint Formby; her grandson, Chip Formby; and her two great-grandsons, Jonathan and Lane Formby.

Special readings were given by Clint and Chip Formby prior to the group singing happy birthday. Rev. O.L. Knowlton played the piano and Edra Claborn registered guests. Pearl McClain and Bea Noland served refreshments which included a birthday cake with 90 candles, quiche, mints and punch.

Mrs. Formby was also honored with a surprise party Thursday, June 17, at the Hereford Country Club. Entertainment was provided by Greg and Kim Buckley who dressed as clowns and handed Mrs. Formby her gifts as well as entertaining the great-grandchildren. Balloons filled the room along with bouquets of white lilies. The clown theme was further carried out with party hats, blow horns, cookies and cake.

Hosting the surprise party were Clint and Margaret Formby. Grandchildren and great-grandchildren present were: Chip and Lisa Formby and their sons, Jonathan and Lane; Brenda Formby of New York; Marshall and Betty Formby and their daughter, Alison, of Peachtree City, Ga.; and Scott and Kathy Formby of New York.

All In The Family
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - "Kissin' cousins" often became marriage partners in colonial New England, according to John Waters, a history professor at the University of Rochester.

The world of kin played an important part in nuptials in the mid-1700s, says Waters.

Through an analysis of demographic information gleaned from property ownership records of East Guilford, Conn., Waters found that in one out of four families, at least one child married his or her cousin.

Brothers and sisters from one family often chose a mate from the siblings of another family, too.

Pool tips offered

Ready to take the plunge and become a pool owner?

A new pool can quickly become the focus of family fun and festivities.

Just follow these suggestions from pool care experts and you'll be in the swim of things in no time. Each week:

-Use a shock treatment. This "shock" is an extra dose of chlorine that cleanses the pool water of bacteria, algae and other contaminants, such as suntan oil, dirt and perspiration. Also use a shock treatment when ever pool water isn't crystal clear; when there's a strong chlorine smell present (the odor indicates that the pool is filled with contaminants); and before and/or after an unusually large number of people use the pool.

-Clean and check the circulation system: skimmer, pump strainer, drains and filter--removing any debris. Make sure the pump runs about eight hours per day.

-Brush pool walls to prevent dirt and algae build-up.

-Vacuum to remove submerged particles.

-Hose down the pool area, making sure debris is washed away from the pool.

Aikman had surgery before it was too late

By ARNIE STAPLETON
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Many a cringe has accompanied Troy Aikman's instincts to stay in the pocket and take a hit.

But 1993 might have been a disaster for the defending Super Bowl champions if not for the intuition of their star quarterback.

Aikman probably saved his season - and that of the Dallas Cowboys - when he sought medical attention on his own after the rest prescribed by team doctors did nothing to help his ailing back.

Team physicians prescribed six weeks of rest and downplayed the need for a magnetic resonance imaging test.

But the muscle spasms and aches that prevented him from putting on his pants earlier this month continued to frustrate Aikman, who finally walked into a suburban hospital Thursday and asked for an MRI himself.

The next day, Aikman flew aboard owner Jerry Jones' private jet to consult with Dr. Robert Watkins, a renowned neurosurgeon at the Kerlan-Jobe Orthopedic Clinic in Los Angeles.

Watkins found a herniated disk, which probably had been deteriorating over a number of years before announcing itself one day last month when Aikman was squatting 300 pounds.

Watkins operated Saturday, slicing away a 1-inch-by-1/2-inch "tough piece of gristle" from Aikman's lower back.

Aikman was released from Centinela Hospital on Monday and will return to Dallas on Friday for a few days of rest before beginning rehabilitation in Los Angeles on July 5. He plans to join the team in Austin shortly after the start of training camp to continue his rehabilitation there.

Watkins said the Super Bowl MVP will miss up to 12 weeks while recovering from surgery and recuperating the muscles in his back.

That would force Aikman to miss all of training camp and two regular season games, although Aikman insists he will be ready for the season opener against the Washington Redskins on Sept. 6.

Watkins said that's certainly a possibility, but he cautioned Aikman that "willpower won't speed up the healing."

Watkins told Aikman that had he not undergone the procedure, the first good hit he took this season might have been his last. He said it was a good thing he sought a second opinion, and then agreed to have surgery.

Watkins said he understands why the team's doctors didn't order an MRI earlier.

"You don't need an MRI every time somebody sprains a back," said Watkins, who emphasized that Aikman didn't exhibit the normal signs of a herniated disk, such as sharp pain in his buttocks and pain or numbness down one leg.

That being the case, he said, "I would have followed exactly the same course" that the Cowboys did.

Aikman's agent, Leigh Steinberg also refused to second-guess the Cowboys. "At this point, we're just focused on his physical care and rehabilitation."

Steinberg told Aikman that being ready for the season opener isn't as important as he thinks. He brought up Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder Darryl Strawberry, whom many believe tried to return from back surgery too soon and now is on the disabled list again, nine months after his operation.

"At the point they start to feel better, they're so aggressive and competitive that they go too hard, they overexert," Steinberg said.

"It's important to continue to remind him that his long-term health is the first priority. Second is his ability to play a football career. Third is his ability to play the 1993 season and the lowest priority is the ability to play in a particular game," Steinberg said.

"And for most athletes, that's priority list gets turned on its head."

It seems nobody wants to second-guess the team for not seeking a second opinion. They are, however, grateful, that Aikman had second thoughts.

"Our fear was that if Troy had simply used an exercise regimen to try to rehabilitate his back without surgery and gone to training camp, the first time in a game that he got popped, this would have happened and then he really would have missed a lot of this season," Steinberg said.

"Now he plays most, if not all, of the season."

Seeds survive upset attempts at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Jennifer Capriati struggled early against an unheralded Briton before rolling to a first-round victory today as the women took center stage at Wimbledon.

Shirli-Ann Siddall, a 5,000-1 shot ranked 325th in the world, delighted Court Two fans by capturing the first set before the seventh-seeded Floridian prevailed 6-7 (7-5), 6-2, 6-1 in a match lasting nearly two hours.

Also advancing were No. 6 Conchita Martinez of Spain, winning 7-5, 6-3, over American Ginger Helgeson and No. 16 Nathalie Tauziat of France, with a 7-5, 6-4 victory over Rennae Stubbs of Australia.

The two top seeded women appeared headed for easy victories in their first-round matches against Australians. Steffi Graf, seeking her fifth Wimbledon title, faced Kirrily Sharpe, a qualifier ranked 231st, and second-seeded Martina Navratilova, seeking her 10th title, played Michelle Jaggard-Lai, ranked 89th.

No. 13 seed Mary Pierce withdrew from the tournament because of flu. Her place against American Beverly Bowes was taken by Louise Fields of Australia.

The men's top-seed, Pete Sampras, was to open today against Australian Neil Borwick after getting a one-day delay because of a sore shoulder.

Three-time champion Boris Becker, seeded fourth, also moved into action in an all-German battle with one of the tour's rising young stars, Marc Goellner. Ranked 37th in the world, Goellner has a powerful

Janzen won Open his way

By JIM LITKE

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) - He did it his way, which is to say the way it is almost never done.

Lec Janzen skipped much of the suffering, most of the dues-paying and the entire bit about having to learn to lose a major before you can win one.

In three previous U.S. Opens, he failed to so much as make the cut. And despite sharing the first-round lead in both the most recent Masters and British Open, the fourth-year pro was never in serious contention for either of those, nor golf's two other major championships.

Royals, Angels, ChiSox battle for AL West lead

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Before the season began, no one could seem to settle on who was the favorite in the AL West. As the halfway mark approaches, it's easy to see why.

The Kansas City Royals, picked by some to win the division after making several major moves, are 35-32.

The Chicago White Sox, thought to be a team in waiting this year, are 35-32.

The California Angels, considered a longshot with so many young players, are 35-32.

All three clubs wound up tied for first place Monday night after California won at Kansas City 4-3 and Chicago defeated Texas 7-6.

"We've seen everybody in the division now," said Chuck Finley, the winning pitcher for California. "We've seen everybody twice. We've been talking about it and we don't see anybody running away with it."

"Nobody is playing really well. I don't know if we've seen everybody when they're playing bad or what, but we just don't see anybody running away with it."

The Royals lost for the seventh time in 10 games. Kansas City has lost consecutive games for only the third time this season.

"We're just not bunching hits," Royals manager Hal McRae said. "We're scratching out hits. You get 13 hits and you get nothing. They get three hits and they get four runs."

Finley (8-5) won his third straight decision. He allowed two runs in six innings and Steve Frey got four outs for his eighth save.

Chili Davis hit a two-run double in the first inning and Greg Myers homered in the second off Hipolito Pichardo (4-4).

Gary Gaetti, cut by California earlier this month and signed by Kansas City, played his first game for the Royals. He went 2-for-4 and drove in one run and scored one.

Greg Gagne of the Royals was thrown out at the plate in the fourth inning and thrown out of the game by umpire Derryl Cousins. Gagne came up arguing and it appeared that the momentum of his slide carried him into Cousins. Gagne put his hand on Cousins' chest to stop himself and was tossed.

Indians 3, Brewers 0
Tommy Kramer and Jeremy Hernandez combined on a shutout and Carlos Baerga and Albert Belle homered as Cleveland won at home.

Kramer (3-2) gave up four hits in 7 1-3 innings. Hernandez struck out four in getting his second save.

Baerga led off the fourth inning with his 13th home run. Belle hit his 19th homer and also had a sacrifice fly.

Red Sox 6, Twins 3
Billy Hatcher and Scott Cooper homered.

Hatcher hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning into Fenway Park's left-field screen off Scott Erickson

(3-8). There was a rain delay of 2 hours, 8 minutes after the top of the fifth with Boston leading 4-2.

John Dohson (5-5) pitched five innings and Jeff Russell got his 15th save.

Athletics 5, Mariners 3
Craig Paquette's two-run single in the eighth inning rallied Oakland.

Paquette singled with one out and the bases loaded off Jeff Nelson. Terry Steinbach doubled home an insurance run in the ninth.

Storm Davis (2-5) got the victory in relief and Dennis Eckersley got his 15th save.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit his third two-run homer in two days. His 16th home run was a drive into the Kingdome's second deck in right field.

White Sox 7, Rangers 6
Jack McDowell, helped by home runs from Frank Thomas and Robin Ventura, became the first 11-game winner in the majors as Chicago beat

Texas. Carlton Fisk of the White Sox played his 2,225th game as a catcher, tying the major league record held by Bob Boone. Fisk is expected to break the mark tonight at Comiskey Park. McDowell (11-4) was given an early six-run lead, but struggled to hold it. He gave up home runs to Rafael Palmeiro and Gary Redus, and Roberto Hernandez got his 12th save.

Thomas hit a three-run homer, his 13th, and Ventura hit his 12th off Kevin Brown (5-6).

LA's Martinez blanks back-sliding Astros

By The Associated Press

The Houston Astros wish they could have appealed, too.

Ramon Martinez, who appealed his league-imposed five-game suspension earlier in the day, pitched a two-hitter and rookie Mike Piazza drove in five runs as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the visiting Astros 7-0 Monday night.

Martinez (6-4) recorded his 12th career shutout and second this season.

He was suspended by NL president Bill White earlier in the day for hitting Charlie Hayes of the Colorado Rockies with a pitch on June 15 at Denver, sparking a bench-clearing brawl.

"It was his decision," Martinez said. "I appealed, and we'll see what's going to happen. This has never happened to me before. I didn't worry about it when I came here. I just had to concentrate on the game and pitch my game."

Piazza broke a scoreless tie in the fifth inning with a three-run homer off Mark Portugal (5-3). He added a two-run single in the eighth and now has 15 homers and 51 RBIs.

"I'm just trying not to think about it (his numbers)," Piazza said. "I'm just going out there and trying to continue the things I've been doing."

Braves 8, Phillies 1

Sid Bream had four hits and drove in three runs to lead Atlanta past Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium for the Braves' third straight victory.

Greg Maddux (7-5) gave up seven hits and one run in eight innings for the victory before Mike Stanton finished.

Curt Schilling (8-2) lasted only 2 1-3 innings for the Phillies, giving up eight hits and five runs.

Giants 2, Padres 1

Trevor Wilson won his fifth straight decision and Willie McGee had four hits, leading San Francisco past San Diego at Candlestick Park.

The Giants, winners of six straight and 12 of 14, maintained a 7

1/2-game lead over second-place Atlanta in the NL West.

Wilson (5-3), is 5-0 with a 1.77 ERA over his last six starts. Doug Brocail (1-3) was the loser.

Cubs 5, Pirates 1

Jose Bautista won as a starter for the first time in four years, pitching four-hit ball over eight innings to lead Chicago past Pittsburgh at Three River Stadium. The Pirates had a four-game winning streak snapped.

Sammy Sosa's three-run triple followed Bautista's first major league hit in a four-run second inning. The game took just 1 hour, 56 minutes to play.

Zane Smith (0-2) took the loss.

Cardinals 4, Marlins 3

Joe Magrane won his fourth consecutive start and Gregg Jefferies hit his 10th homer as St. Louis beat Florida at Joe Robbie Stadium. The Cardinals climbed to 10 games over .500 for the first time this season.

Magrane (6-6) gave up five hits in eight innings. Luis Aquino (4-5) was the loser.

Mets 8, Expos 3

Bobby Bonilla homered and drove in four runs, and Dave Telgheder (1-0) won in his first major league start as New York beat Montreal at Shea Stadium to stop a six-game losing streak.

Telgheder (1-0) came up on June 11 and made three relief appearances. Mike Maddux worked the last four innings for his third save, allowing one run.

Brian Barnes dropped to 2-2.

Rockies 5, Reds 4

Dante Bichette's run-scoring single off Jeff Reardon (1-1) with two outs in the 10th inning lifted Colorado over Cincinnati at Mile High Stadium.

Rockies reliever Steve Reed (3-2) got the victory for the second straight game.

Home was not sweet in NBA Finals

By MEL REISNER
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX (AP)—The homecourt advantage the Phoenix Suns played for all season was no advantage at all in the NBA Finals.

The Chicago Bulls won every game they played this season at America West Arena, including three in the final round of the playoffs, thereby debunking the theory that the team which plays the most playoff games at home has the best chance of winning the championship.

In this series, playing at home was actually a disadvantage. The only time the host team won was Game 4 at Chicago.

John Paxson, who hit the game-winning 3-point shot with 3.9

seconds left in Chicago's 99-98 victory Sunday, said the road team had an advantage that no one really talked about much.

"In this type of situation, you almost feel more comfortable going on the road," Paxson said. "At home, there are too many distractions - people, tickets, phone calls. It doesn't work out, so we seem to have played better on the road. We're 8-1 in three finals on the road."

The Bulls were 8-2 at home during the playoffs but only 1-2 against the Suns. Counting the home-and-home series during the regular season, the visiting team won seven of the eight contests between the Bulls and Suns in 1992-93.

"We lost three games on our home court. We didn't deserve to win the world championship," Kevin Johnson said.

Charles Barkley, bitterly disappointed at getting within one game and five seconds of a championship, said he wasn't interested in the pattern.

"We got to the finals. We must have won some home games," the Phoenix team leader said.

But Danny Ainge, who was playing in his sixth finals series with his third team, said he had never experienced a year where the homecourt was worth less.

The Suns almost didn't get out of the first round, dropping two home games to the Los Angeles Lakers to fall behind 0-2.

In the Western Conference finals against Seattle, the Suns lost one of four home games. Then came the finals, and the pattern stayed the same - Phoenix entered the record books as the first team to lose the first two games at home.

"We beat them three out of four in Chicago, too, and I don't know the explanation," Ainge said. "I thought we played a good enough game to win and obviously they did too. We had a chance to win this one, but losing two in a row at home really hurt us early in the series."

"We're just a good road team,"

Scottie Pippen said. "We played four in this Phoenix team's building and did what we had to do, and that's win big games."

Champion boxer Louis put on postage stamp

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Some years ago, Joe Louis Barrow Jr. was on a radio show, discussing the biography he did about his father, the former heavyweight champion of the world.

A man called to talk about Louis' stunning one-round knockout of German Max Schmeling in 1938, a fight that carried with it political implications for a world poised on the brink of war.

"The man was a survivor of the Holocaust," Barrow said. "He told me that my father's victory over Schmeling had given him the will to live, evidence to him that Germans were not invincible."

"I was humbled by his story."

Barrow, a Denver businessman, will be in Detroit today where the U.S. Postal Service honors the memory of his father on the 55th anniversary of Louis-Schmeling II.

"The stamp is one more recognition of my father, not as just a boxing hero, but an American hero who made a difference in people's lives," Barrow said. "He came along at just the right time in history, a time when the country was down because of the Depression. He gave people hope."

Typical was the second fight against Schmeling, who had defeated Louis two years earlier in what Germany interpreted as confirmation of Hitler's racist principles.

Their rematch in Yankee Stadium remains a heavyweight cornerstone. Louis had promised a reversal, and his handlers kept him isolated in the days before the fight, removed from the political hype surrounding the event.

From the start, Louis stalked Schmeling around the ring and knocked him out in 2:08 of the first round. It could not have been a more dramatic ending, the exclamation mark in the career of the man who ruled the heavyweight division for nearly 12 years through a record 25 defenses.

Louis became a boxing icon, a favorite of fans.

"He understood the impact he had," Barrow said. "He was a humble man, though. He liked to say, 'All I do is what I can do best.' He didn't revel in the impact he had."

serve and a Becker-inspired nickname - "Baby Boom Boom."

With the attention focused on established grass-court stars, Jim Courier is right where he wants to be - out of the Wimbledon spotlight.

The world's second-ranked player, devastating on other surfaces, won his first-round match as handily as any of the top contenders but left no doubt he enjoys his status here as a relative outsider.

US OPEN

Yet, in the course of a single round, by holding a lead and holding off one of the game's best chasers, Janzen's reputation made the leap from unknown to unbreakable.

"He's one of the so-called new breed out here," said Payne Stewart, the 1991 Open champion who trailed Janzen at day's end by the same two strokes he began it.

"I'm 36 and he's 28, so I guess it's OK for me to call him that. And like I said, he's got the game and he's got the ability and he's going to be around for a long time."

And so the collective groan that accompanied Janzen's final putt dropping amid the New Jersey foothills for a record-tying 272 was

"I'm certainly not going to complain about it," he said of the low-key media coverage he has received.

"I do like to slide in and out, and the less kind of commotion, the better. Particularly going into a big tournament, it's better."

Courier, seeded third, was among nine men's seeds winning their opening matches Monday. Only 15th-seeded Czech Karel Novacek was upset.

the pros who pursued him all week, but teaching pros everywhere who will now have an even harder time convincing their best pupils how genuinely tough the road is ahead of them.

"It surprised me little bit," Janzen, the youngest Open champion in 15 years, said Sunday without so much as a trace of guile.

"I have a belief that just because I don't have experience doesn't mean I couldn't do it. I still knew how to hold the club, where to aim and all I had to do," he added, "was hit good shots."

Let anyone think it was really that simple, however, think again.

Janzen made plenty of his breaks himself, principally by refusing to back down on those occasions when caution would have killed his chances. But he was also the beneficiary of so many other breaks that right about the time the first one occurred, he was moved to wonder about divine intervention. After sending his tee ball into the right rough at No. 10, a thinly hit, seeing-eye 5-iron sailed untouched through a stand of trees and came to rest 25 feet from the flag.

"I turned to my caddy and said it was amazing that the ball went through. Then I thought, 'Those are the kind of things that happen to guys that are destined to win.'"

"I knew there was still a lot of work to be done," Janzen added. "But I started feeling that way right there."

And reasons to keep feeling that way followed with almost stunning frequency. The second bogey of Janzen's round at No. 12 had leveled the match at five-under, and when he settled over a difficult left-to-right curling 18-footer for birdie two holes later, he was drained.

"I'd used up every ounce of energy in my body. I was tired. I didn't know if I would have enough to finish the round. Then making that putt gave me a surge of adrenaline. I was," Janzen said, "a completely different person."

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am worried about my husband. He used to be a very heavy drinker. He has cut down to probably less than half what he used to drink. Now he may go three to six weeks without drinking, but when he does, it will be 14 to 20 beers in one evening. He rarely drinks more often than every two weeks and never anything but beer.

He is overweight, doesn't exercise and has borderline hypertension and a high cholesterol, high triglycerides and a low HDL. His father had a heart attack at age 45 or 46. My husband is 41.

He quit smoking three years ago. How much harm is his present style of drinking going to cause?

DEAR READER: You have reason to be concerned. It is good that he has decreased his use of alcohol, but that is still a major problem for him. Binging on 14 to 20 beers in one night means his alcohol level goes way up, and he still has a serious alcohol problem. Excess use of alcohol is one cause of high blood pressure, evidently through its action on the kidneys. And that amount of alcohol consumption is not helpful in controlling his weight.

He has several major risk factors that increase his risk of both a heart attack and a stroke: high cholesterol, low HDL, hypertension and being overweight. Studies now show that lack of physical activity is nearly as important a risk factor as well. The good thing he has done for himself is to quit smoking. By this time, three years later, the increased risk from smoking has been largely eliminated. His family history is also a concern.

If he wants to avoid serious health problems, he will need to start doing something about his risk factors. I have discussed these in my new Special Report 133, Prevention of Angina Pectoris and Heart Attacks, which I'm sending you. Have him read it, and try to help him change his lifestyle. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/133, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. It would be best if he were under a doctor's care and on a good diet and exercise program as a first step.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I went to the doctor for a regular checkup and he found my spleen was enlarged. After some tests he told me I had a disease called myelofibrosis. Could you tell me a little about this disease and what to expect in the days to come? So far I am not taking any medicine but he is watching my blood count closely.

DEAR READER: This is a peculiar and uncommon disorder. To begin with, the bone marrow produces white and red blood cells and platelets from a single stem cell in the bone marrow. Which cells will arise from the stem cell is a neat balancing act of nature. But something goes wrong and instead of producing normal cells, the marrow becomes filled with fibrous cells. The marrow quits producing the needed quantity of blood cells.

In the adult, the bone marrow is the major site of producing blood cells. In infancy, they are also produced by the spleen and the liver. In myelofibrosis, when the marrow is not producing enough cells, the spleen and sometimes the liver resume forming blood cells. That leads to enlargement of the spleen and sometimes the liver. Often the disease is first found in its early stages from an enlargement of the spleen as in your case.

It may cause an anemia, which is why your doctor is following your blood count closely. Treatment is still controversial and depends on the course of the disease.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a retiree in my 80s. In the past six months or so, my physical condition has worsened. For most of my life I've been very active. I still walk daily and swim 25 minutes every other day. I don't smoke or drink and I eat well.

Until some months ago I was able to walk two or three miles daily. Now I can only walk a short distance before I become very tired. My doctor tells me it is due to old age. Other than the tiredness, my health is good. Is it true that as a person ages there comes a time when the process is accelerated?

DEAR READER: It is often difficult to separate the effects of aging from actual illnesses. As the body ages, many of the defense mechanisms decrease and a person is more susceptible to a host of diseases. Often what happens is the doctor finds the disease and treats it, and that helps, but reversing the aging process that allowed the disease to occur is not possible with our limited knowledge about aging.

It is important to have symptoms evaluated thoroughly, rather than simply thinking they are associated with aging. A frequent reason for fatigue in the elderly is depression. A mental depression can really sap your energy and cause you to tire easily. Things can be done to help this disorder at any age.

Another frequent cause is lack of physical fitness. Walking is fine, and it helps a lot of people. But it doesn't do a lot to maintain your muscle strength. That is why strength exercises that maintain muscle size and strength become so important. Strength exercises to develop muscles cause a release of growth hormone which is important in combating aging. Of course, such strength exercises must be done properly to not cause any harm, as fracturing a vertebra in individuals with osteoporosis. Perhaps a supervised exercise program would be of help in regaining your strength.

To give you a more complete idea of what aging really is and what can be done about it, I'm sending you a free copy of my new Special Report 134, Living Longer, Living Better. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/134, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537.

Many elderly people who cannot care for themselves get in this situation by not maintaining a regular fitness program suitable for their age. Whether one ages slowly or suddenly depends on many factors and is highly variable, but it is important to be sure that sudden apparent aging is not something else.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Recently I was told by my doctor that I have a caruncle of the urethra. I'm a 67-year-old female. He said it seldom becomes cancerous, but if I have any problems to see a urologist. Please tell me what to expect. I am in fairly good health otherwise.

DEAR READER: It is a prolapse or inversion of the end of the urethra with granulation tissue. It appears as a rosette around the entire opening. It is usually caused by dilated veins (varices) or injury and often in an older woman from atrophy of supporting tissue. It is relatively innocuous. It has a bright-red appearance and may cause bleeding on contact.

The condition is usually managed conservatively for any symptoms that occur. If it is removed by almost any means, there is a risk of a stricture forming which is then a problem. That is why surgery is not usually done unless the symptoms are severe enough to warrant it. There is no evidence that they become malignant.

Avoid food poisoning

You are more vulnerable to food poisoning in your home - and by your hand - than you think. According to the Food and Drug Administration, two million cases of food poisoning occur in the home every year.

Most of these cases are easily preventable if food is handled [properly] before and after its is cooked.

BEFORE YOU COOK:

-Never thaw frozen food on the kitchen counter. Thaw it in the refrigerator or seal it inside a plastic bag and submerge it in cold water, no warmer than 50 F.

-Slip packages of raw meat and poultry into plastic bags to prevent raw juices from leaking and contaminating other foods in the refrigerator.

-Immediately wash everything that comes in contact with raw meat.

AFTER YOU COOK:

-Refrigerate hot food as soon as possible after cooking - leaving it on the counter to cool gives bacteria a chance to grow.

-Divide hot food into several smaller containers to chill it more quickly.

-Refrigerate cooked food in containers covered with tightly fitting plastic lids or plastic wrap.

-If traveling with food, thoroughly chill it first and pack it in a cooler filled with ice.

The basics of food safety are: keep foods hot, keep cold foods cold, and keep raw foods away from cooked. With the wise use of plastic bags, wraps and sturdy containers, and with extra attention to cleanliness, you can prevent most cases of food poisoning.
