Rescue has rocky going

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Rescuers battling time and rock so hard that it dulled diamond-tipped drills today tunneled toward an 18-month-old girl crying for her mommy from 22 feet below ground in an abandoned backyard well.

"If she's crying, she's breathing. It's as easy as that," said Dr. Chip Klunick, an emergency physician at the scene, said late Thursday.

"Maybe by 6 in the morning, if the good Lord's willing, we'll be done," said Police Chief Richard Czech, who at 10 p.m. estimated that rescuers were about 2 feet from Jessica McClure, trapped since Wednesday in the narrow shaft.

Reba McClure, the girl's 17-year-old mother, periodically yelled down to her daughter, drawing cries of "Mommy." In between brief naps, the child also hummed and sang verses from "Winnie the Pooh," police said.

Rescuers with hand-held air drills sank a shaft 5 feet from the well shaft and began tunneling at an angle toward the girl. They expected to reach her by Thursday evening, but the tough limestone dulled drill bits.

"We can't let ourselves get depressed and frustrated and start getting in a hurry," said police Cpl. Jim White. "The worst thing we can do down there is get in a hurry and somehow jeopardize her. We are going to go at the same slow tedious pace."

Fire Chief James Roberts said doctors assured him that a toddler in Jessica's condition could survive easily up to four days without serious dehydration or other ill effects.

Steve Alcorn, a rescue worker, said just before midnight that a microphone dangling near Jessica's head picked up the drilling, suggesting rescuers were getting close.

The girl's 18-year-old father, Chip McClure said, "With the Lord's help and your prayers, we know that little girl is going to make it."

Tommy Johnson, the girl's uncle, called her "a fighter."

The 20-pound child fell into the narrow well Wednesday morning as she played behind a home that her mother and aunt use as a day care center.

The 8-inch opening had been covered with a rock or flower pot, said Sgt. Jeff Haile. The well widens underground and then narrows to 6 inches where Jessica landed.

About 25 volunteers took turns in the rescue shaft Thursday drilling at the dense caliche, or hardpan. "It drains you a lot because you have to work on your knees," a dusty David Perry said after his turn in the hole.

Oxygen was pumped to the girl and rescuers working under floodlights used hot-air blowers to keep the girl warm.

No food or drink was lowered to her because of fear it might cause her to slip farther into the well, Klunick said. He also said he wanted the girl's stomach to be empty in case surgery was needed when she was freed.

"She could have any kind of injuries down there. We just don't know," he said.

Czech said a U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration official brought in from New Mexico said the rescue effort was on target, but the going was tough.

"We're digging along and it's very hard, and all of a sudden we hit a spot and we go five or six inches just like that, and then, bang, we're back in the hard stuff again," he said.

Permian has many old wells

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Many property owners in the oil-rich Permian Basin probably don't know that their land may harbor one of hundreds of abandoned wells like the one that trapped a toddler, a hydrologist says.

Neighborhood children said they occasionally threw rocks down the 8-inch abandoned water well casing that turned into a trap for 18-month-old Jessica McClure.

"What it does is call attention to the hazard, as well as the liability of these (old wells)," said Joe Reed, a Midland hydrologist and environmental consultant with Reed and Associates.

"There are many, many wells all over town," although no one knows a specific number of abandoned wells veiled by the thick prairie grass, he said.

Reed said Thursday that many old wells still have pumps inside their casings, but if the pumps have been removed, the casings should be capped with a welded steel plate or plugged with cement.

Under the Texas Water Well Drillers Act, landowners are responsible for plugging old wells with cement that haven't been used for six months or more, said Mike Leach, investigator in Austin with the Water Well Drillers Board.

But enforcement of the law is generally left up to the landowner, and sometimes people buy land and are not aware of wells on their property, he said.

"That's why it's a big concern. I'm sure there's hundreds of holes out there that are just open and a lot of people don't even know they are on their land," Leach said.

Reed said during his 20 years as a hydrologist in Midland, he has rarely run into an 8-inch casing — water-well casings in the city are usually 4 to 6 inches in diameter.

"That's very unusual to find someone falling in something that small," Reed said. "It's not totally uncommon, but again it's something

Sign-up delayed for wheat

Sign-up for the 1988 wheat program, which was scheduled to begin Monday, has been indefinitely delayed because of work in the U.S. Congress on budget reconciliation and Gramm-Rudman restrictions.

However, the delays should not affect wheat already planted, according to Trudy Lewis, press spokesman for U.S. Rep. Larry Combest (R-Lubbock).

Lewis said the only program provisions that have not been announced are advance deficiency payments and a final decision on the "0-92" aspect of the wheat program.

Reports indicate ASCS offices were informed of the delay through a low-key announcement issued Tuesday by the USDA computer center in Kansas City, Mo. The center is responsible for computing payment checks and printing sign-up forms for farmers participating in USDA programs.

The program, as announced last July, differs little from the 1987 program, except that farmers in the program must cut their plantings by 27.5 percent.

U.S.-owned ships attacked

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A missile believed to be a Chinese-made Silkworm fired by Iran slammed into a U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tanker in the Persian Gulf today and injured at least 18 people, U.S. officials and local sources said.

The missile hit the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, a petroleum products tanker, and started a fire, which was quickly controlled, the Kuwait news agency said.

A U.S.-owned supertanker was hit in a nearly identical attack in the same area just 24 hours earlier. Both occurred in Kuwaiti territorial waters, but neither ship was under U.S. warship protection at the time, military sources said.

Pentagon spokesman Cdr. Bob Prucha in Washington said this morning that the source of the attack was not being released as yet, but that "there was reportedly an aircraft in the vicinity at the time."

The Sea Isle City was one of four U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers that had arrived Tuesday in Kuwait in a convoy under U.S. Navy warship escort. U.S. warships do not enter Kuwaiti territorial waters and there were none nearby at the time of the attack, the military sources said.

The captain and the radio man of the Sea Isle City, both Americans, were among the 18 injured in the dawn attack, said Lt. Col. John Head, a U.S. military spokesman in Manama. Neither was immediately identified.

Eleven of the injured were hospitalized in Kuwait, four in critical condition, according to Head. In a statement released in Washington, the Pentagon said seven of the crew were seriously hurt.

The statement said the ship was hit by "a bomb or a missile" as it was in Kuwaiti waters moving toward a refueling terminal in Kuwait. A U.S. military source here, however, said it was "99 percent certain" that a missile had struck the ship.

The United States has 11 warships in the Middle East Force in the gulf and two battle groups in the adjacent Gulf of Oman and Arabian Sea. U.S. warships began escorting 11 Kuwaiti tankers in July to protect them from Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq. Iran and Iraq have been at war for 7 years and both have targeted commercial shipping for attack.

In Tehran, Iranian President Ali Khamenei today told a group of worshippers who were gathering for noon prayers at Tehran University that an American-flagged ship was "hit by a missile."

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, quoted the Iranian leader as saying: "Where the missile came from? The Almighty knows better."

The projectile crashed into the Sea Isle City's crew accommodation quarters as the ship moved slowly toward a refueling pier near Kuwait's main Al-Ahmadi offshore loading terminal, U.S. officials said. The tanker was empty at the time.

There appeared little doubt that the missiles that hit both the Sea Isle City and the American-owned Sungari were Silkworms, most likely launched from Iran-occupied territory in Iraq's southern Faw peninsula, 50 to 60 miles to the northeast.

Kuwaiti officials said the Sea Isle City attack involved a missile "of the same type" that hit the Sungari, a Liberian-flag supertanker.

In the Sungari attack, Iranian gunners fired the missile at the anchorage off Kuwait's main oil terminal early Thursday, hitting the 275,937-ton Liberian-flagged supertanker and setting it ablaze. No injuries were reported.

The Sungari was carrying about 1 million barrels of oil, but only one cargo hold was hit. Pollution experts described leakage as minimal.

The Sungari is managed by OMI Corp., identified by Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit as a U.S. company based in New York.

Meanwhile, Iraq said its warplanes hit "two big naval targets," meaning large ships, in simultaneous attacks at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

If confirmed, the Thursday night attacks would bring to 15 the number of ships reported hit along Iran's coast in the last 10 days in what Iraq says is a campaign to destroy Iran ability to continue the war.

Western diplomats said Iran may have attacked the Sungari in a show of defiance after two recent encounters with American forces. In the first such encounter, U.S. helicopters attacked an Iranian ship caught laying mines Sept. 21.

In the second clash, U.S. helicopters sank a speedboat and disabled two others last week. The U.S. said the second incident was an act of self-defense, but Iran denied its patrol boats fired first.

DSEC signs new agreement

New mortgage

The agreement frees up many of the cooperative's assets and increases member equity in the association.

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative has signed a new mortgage agreement with the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation to release lien restrictions on many assets of the $29 million coop.

The action would allow DSEC to negotiate for the lowest interest rates available when borrowing money for future construction, according to spokesman Tommie Weemes.

The new agreement was signed Monday by board officers Eldred Brown, chairman, Donald Wright, vice-chairman, and Jerry Roberts, secretary.

The new mortgage agreement has no lien on any motor vehicles, cash and other interest-bearing investments, accounts receivables, warehouse inventory, fuel, and certificates.

DSEC's old mortgage included a lien on all assets, but the cooperative retired all debt to the federal government last Dec. 30, at a 31 percent discount.

Retirement of that debt increased member equity in DSEC to 66 percent.

Many of DSEC's requirements under the old mortgage remain unchanged concerning engineering and accounting standards, but officials said there would be many governmental restrictions, that are no longer applicable to the cooperative, that would not have to be followed.

INS to begin new alien policy

DALLAS (AP) - Federal immigration officials are expected to announce a new policy soon that allows children who don't qualify for amnesty to stay in this country without fear of deportation.

Administration sources told the Dallas Times Herald that the policy change responds to concerns of illegal-immigrant parents, but offers no blanket reassurances for families in which one spouse qualifies for legalization but the other does not.

The policy's advocates and several members of Congress, who had pressured the Immigration and Naturalization Service to relax its rules for all immediate family members, said they were disappointed by the plan.

The newspaper reported Thursday that the guidelines will simply instruct INS district directors to review cases involving spouses individually and take into account humanitarian concerns.

Parker Wilson, an attorney with Proyecto Adelante, a Dallas organization that helps Central American refugees, said the lack of more recognition of the spouses' plight could have "disastrous effects" on immigrant families.

Wilson said it could either force a husband or wife to leave the country or disappear to avoid deportation.

Gilbert Carrasco of the U.S. Catholic Conference said such guidelines would affect only a handful of children and will do little to remove the dread of family separation, he said.

"This is not going to do the job," Carrasco said.

Carrasco said the lack of protection for spouses is a major reason that fewer than half of the predicted illegals have applied for amnesty during the first five months of the program. As many as a third of all potential amnesty applicants have an immediate relative in such a situation, he said.

The newspaper said the policy, which INS Commissioner Alan Nelson was expected to announce soon, would allow minor children who fail to meet the requirements of amnesty to stay in the country, provided that one or both of their parents become legal.

Under the amnesty rules, only those illegal immigrants who can prove they have lived and worked continuously in the United States since before 1982 can apply to become legal residents.

Last week, the Senate defeated by a 56-45 vote an amendment that would have allowed unqualified spouses and children of eligible applicants to apply.

Nelson and other INS officials have said that the agency doesn't like splitting families, but has no choice but to follow the law passed last October by Congress.

They also say that granting amnesty to illegal immigrant spouses would be unfair to the millions of legal residents who wait as long as a decade to bring their relatives to the United States.

Vanna Slaughter, the director of immigration counseling services for Catholic Charities in Dallas, said that 20 out of every 100 amnesty applicants counseled there are in similar situations. She had hoped the INS would ease their plight.

"I really had expected something more generous," Ms. Slaughter said.

House, Senate work on tax

WASHINGTON (AP) - House and Senate tax-writers, steering Congress onto a collision course with President Reagan, are recommending tax increases of about $12 billion, including a Medicare tax hike for some 8 million wage-earners.

The tax increases would underwrite about half of this year's deficit reduction required under the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

The Senate Finance Committee hoped to wrap up work today on its tax plan, the main feature of which is the Medicare tax increase aimed at upper-income taxpayers.

On a party-line vote, the House Ways and Means Committee gave final approval Thursday night to its own version, which includes limits on the mortgage-interest deduction for the well-to-do and a tough crackdown on corporate raiders.

But if Reagan sticks to his guns, the tax-writers' efforts will be for naught.

"Simple prudence — a simple sense of responsibility — would make it possible to meet the deficit-reduction targets with no new taxes," Reagan said in a White House statement. But, he added, "if reason should fail, if Congress should actually pass a tax hike, my answer will be simply this: veto."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of Ways and Means, called the president's statement "a sorry state of affairs" and reminded Reagan that some of his own proposals are in the bill.

Rep. John Duncan of Tennessee, senior Republican on the committee, accused Democrats of going on "a spending-and-tax spree."

Republicans boycotted the House tax-writing effort and when the bill was approved on a 23-13 vote, all Republicans voted no. The nine GOP members of the Finance Committee played hands-off as the 11 Democrats wrote their bill, but planned to be on hand for final consideration today.

Congress has required itself to cut $23 billion from the deficit in the budget year that began Oct. 1. Most Republicans want less reliance on taxes and more spending cuts, and there is no assurance that enough Democrats will go for the proposed tax increases. But unless Reagan and Congress can agree on a package, automatic across-the-board spending cuts will take effect Nov. 20.

The House tax bill cuts the deficit by about $12.3 billion, and the package includes about $2 billion in new tax breaks. The Senate version raises $11.5 billion in taxes and adds new tax cuts worth more than $1.5 billion.

Both bills contain dozens of provisions with little impact on most people or businesses. Both committees refused to raise excise taxes on alcohol and tobacco or to tamper with the income-tax rates enacted last year. Most of the burden of either bill falls on corporations and upper-income individuals.

Here are some major provisions:

—The Senate would require workers to pay Medicare taxes of 1.45 percent of all their wages. Present law taxes 1.45 percent of the first $43,000 each year for Medicare. The change would affect about 8 million people earning over $43,000 and over $45,000 in 1988. For example, a worker earning $100,000 next year would pay $797.50 instead of $652.50.

—The House would limit the deduction for home mortgages to the interest on up to $1 million of loans taken out to buy or improve one or two homes; that could include interest on home-equity loans of up to $100,000. Mobile homes and boats could not qualify as second homes for the interest deduction.

—Both would extend the expiring 3 percent tax on telephone service for three years.

—Both, responding to lobbying by some big-name writers, would allow authors to deduct research expenses before they receive income from a book or article.

—Both would toughen rules that require corporations to pay their taxes in advance.

Northwest alarm powerless to help

WASHINGTON (AP) - A warning device that would have told two Northwest Airlines pilots they were taking off with flaps in the wrong position did not sound because electrical power was interrupted to the alarm, aviation sources say.

The finding by the National Transportation Safety Board reinforces speculation that the circuit breaker was tripped either by an electrical surge — and unnoticed by the pilots — or by the pilots themselves to eliminate nuisance alarms.

The Northwest airliner crashed Aug. 16 moments after taking off from Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Investigators have said the flaps, which need to be extended for takeoff, actually were fully retracted, preventing the plane from gaining lift.

Investigators were expected to shed additional light on the circumstances surrounding the accident, which claimed 156 lives, when they release an array of documents today.

Alan Pollock, a spokesman for the safety board, declined to comment Thursday on the contents of the documents, which include the transcript of conversations in the jetliner's cockpit during the 30 minutes before the crash.

A source who has seen the transcript said it contains no "smoking gun" that would reveal specifically why the flaps were not set properly, although it is expected to give some indication whether the crew was distracted from their normal pre-flight duties.

The Detroit Free Press, in today's editions, says the cockpit voice recorder showed the pilots discovered another serious mistake in pre-flight preparations as the plane headed down the runway for takeoff.

Investigators said earlier it appeared the pilots ignored parts of a pre-flight checklist on the McDonnell Douglas MD-80.

The transcript of the pilots' conversation shows they also failed to set the thrust computer indicator, which prevented the automatic throttle from engaging, the newspaper said.

The error, while not apparently contributing to the crash, was more evidence that the flight crew ignored standard pre-flight procedures, it said.

"It (the automatic throttle) won't stay on," Capt. John Maus said to copilot David Dodds.

"Won't come on?" Dodds asked. "But they won't stay on," Maus said.

"OK, power's normal," Dodds said.

After two clicks are heard, Maus said: "TCI (thrust computer indicator) was unset."

"Yeah. Can you get 'em r There you go," Dodds said.

After that, Maus swore and laughed, an apparent nervous reaction to the error.

The finding about the power cutoff to the warning system reinforced speculation that the circuit breaker to the alarm may have been tripped, although no clear evidence has yet been uncovered that the pilots pulled the breaker.

Investigators have said previously that no mention has been found on the cockpit recording about setting the flaps, which is one of the first items on the mandatory pre-flight checklist and a basic maneuver before departure.

WELLS

that's preventable." Old water wells are abundant in Midland because during the 1940s and '50s, many homeowners tapped into the shallow High Plains aquifer underneath the city to irrigate their lawns and gardens, Reed said.

And Jessica's neighborhood was once known as rural Midland where wells may have been drilled to use as a primary source of water, Reed said.

Senior City Planner Becky Hamm said the neighborhood known as the Permian Estates was annexed into the city in 1952. Neighbor Maxine Sprague said the well where toddler Jessica McClure was trapped has not been used for 20 years.

Jessica's aunt, Jamie Moore and her husband, James, have rented the home where the 8-inch well is located, since May, Mrs. Sprague told the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Jessica's mother, Reba Gayle McClure, was babysitting at the home Wednesday morning when the accident occurred.

Bystanders said a flower pot was used to cover the opening on the 8-inch casing, but whether the Moores knew about the well is not known.

Authorities speculated that the pot was removed and Jessica accidentally fell into the cavity or was mistakenly dropped in by other children playing with her.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the City Council will be asking for a review of the accident, and that an ordinance placing stricter controls over abandoned wells could result.

Manhunt continues for escapee

WELLINGTON, Texas (AP) - A manhunt by lawmen in Oklahoma and Texas was expected to resume this morning for a convicted murderer who escaped from the Jackson County Jail in southwestern Oklahoma.

Authorities in Jackson County said the search centered Thursday on a seven-square-mile ranch between Memphis and Wellington where a cowboy reported seeing Daniel Juan Revilla, 19, on Wednesday. Revilla escaped from the jail in Altus on Tuesday, Sheriff Joe Boldin said.

Authorities believed Revilla was accompanied by a 17-year-old Hobart girl.

A spokesman in the Jackson County sheriff's office in Altus, Okla., said the search was called off Thursday night and would resume this morning in the same area.

"We believe he is in that area," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

Assistant District Attorney Brent Haynie of Jackson County said a juvenile delinquency petition was filed Thursday accusing the girl of assisting a prisoner to escape. Haynie said a motion also had been filed to have the girl certified as an adult.

Haynie said Revilla's father, Victor, was being held on $100,000 bond on a charge of aiding in an escape.

Revilla was convicted of the Jan. 26 death of Mark Gomez, the 13-month-old son of Revilla's girlfriend. Revilla was awaiting formal sentencing on the jury's recommendation that he be sentenced to death for his first-degree murder conviction.

Boldin said police learned of the possible hiding place after questioning the elder Revilla, who is from Wellington. Boldin said Revilla and his father lived and worked at the ranch several years ago.

Boldin said a farmer saw Revilla and the girl at the ranch about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

13-year MH-MR battle is settled

DALLAS (AP) - A 13-year legal battle over conditions in Texas schools for the mentally retarded was apparently settled when parties agreed to a plan that should pump an additional $203 million into the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, officials said.

Under the plan, signed Thursday, the state has agreed to hire hundreds of new employees, monitor conditions in the schools for another decade and follow new accreditation standards and investigative procedures to battle abuse and neglect.

Staff-to-client ratio at state schools will be increased by 15 percent over the next three years, including doctors, nurses and physical therapists, the department said.

The signing came 24 hours before U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders was to penalize the state for its failure to comply with a 1983 settlement agreement. In August, Sanders had held the state in contempt of court for violating both the settlement and clients' constitutional rights.

Sanders approved the agreement in open court, saying it was "the right thing to do."

MHMR Board Chairman Roger Bateman said the contempt citation provided a "stimulus" to settle the suit, but denied that Sanders had forced the state to reach an agreement with the plaintiffs.

But plaintiffs' attorney David Ferleger said the state was muscled into the agreement by Sanders' deadline, and by his proposal that the judge hold individual contempt hearings for other schools.

He said the plan was unprecedented because Texas is the first of 30 states involved in similar litigation to guarantee improved conditions at all state schools. Only three state schools — in Fort Worth, Denton and Austin — were named in the original suit.

"This decree goes further than any other in the country in ensuring that, at the least, people will not be warehoused at the risk of life and limb," Ferleger said.

The Legislative Budget Board on Tuesday reviewed the initial 1971 case, Leisz vs. Kavanagh lawsuit settlement, which has been agreed to by attorneys on both sides. "I think it's a good settlement," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, board chairman. "I think it's probably the best result that could have been achieved."

MHMR had estimated earlier that it would cost an extra $17.7 million in fiscal year 1988, $31.7 million in fiscal 1989 and $31.2 million in fiscal 1991 to comply with the settlement agreement, said Tom Suehs, deputy commissioner for management and support.

But Ferleger said $63 million in state and federal money was agreed to be given to the state school funds for this biennium and $140 million for the following one. Of those figures $109.8 million will be paid by the state, Ferleger said.

"Those dollar figures will have to continue in the future," Ferleger said. "And the probable result will be that more patients will be moved out of the schools and into the community in order to avoid costs of institutional improvements. That is just what we want for the patients."

The negotiated agreement of the lawsuit over care of the mentally retarded is the second accord in less than two months, MHMR Board Chairman Roger Bateman said. An agreement was signed in September in the RAJ vs. Miller lawsuit over care of the mentally ill.

Total estimated cost of both settlements to the state is $26.2 million for 1988-89 and $78.4 million in 1990-91, Suehs said.

Officials said money could be shifted within the department budget initially, avoiding the need for lawmakers to meet before the 1989 regular session. An emergency appropriation will be required at the beginning of that session, they said.

Toni Hunter, an attorney for the state, said state school superintendents are prepared to begin implementing the agreement, which mandates that most of its goals be accomplished within 18 months.

Hospital Coffee Held

A Halloween theme was carried out in the Medical Records Library at Deaf Smith General Hospital Thursday morning as Karen Dunn, Debbie Foerster, Billie Crofford, and Jane Moore, from left, were among medical employees recognized for their efforts during National Medical Records Week. The week-long observance, set for Oct. 12-16, was climaxed by this local coffee where nurses, doctors, staff members, and hospital personnel gathered for refreshments and fellowship. Dunn serves as quality control clerk; Foerster is medical records director; Crofford is DRG coordinator; and Moore works as a medical transcriptionist.

U.S. WITHOUT A CONSTITUTION?

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - If the Constitution hadn't been ratified, the United States most likely would not have become an example of a successful liberal democracy to the rest of the world, according to a University of Rochester political scientist.

"More probably," says William Riker, an authority on the origins of the Constitution, "the continental U.S. would have become like Latin America - a collection of small, independent countries with oligarchical governments."

"The Old South would be more like South Africa today."

Financially speaking, a bull market is a market in which prices are on the rise. A bear market is just the opposite.

Signup deadline is Thursday, Oct. 22. The league is open to the first eight teams that sign up at the YMCA at 500 E. 15th Street.

Top two SCW offensive teams to battle Saturday

The top two offensive teams in the Southwest Conference battle this Saturday when Rice plays at Texas Tech at 2 p.m. at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

Rice leads the conference with 406 yards total offense per game, and Texas Tech is second with 393 yards per game. Texas Tech is 3-3 overall, including a 1-2 conference record, and Rice is 2-4 overall with an 0-2 conference mark.

Texas Tech leads the all-time series 19-17-1, including wins over Rice in four of the last five games and 10 of the last 12. Last week, Texas Tech lost to Arkansas 31-0 and Rice fell to TCU 30-16. Texas Tech beat Texas A&M 27-21 on Oct. 3.

About the loss to Arkansas, Texas Tech Coach Spike Dykes said, "We were concerned because we had to play with so much emotion against A&M. We have to learn how to play great teams back to back."

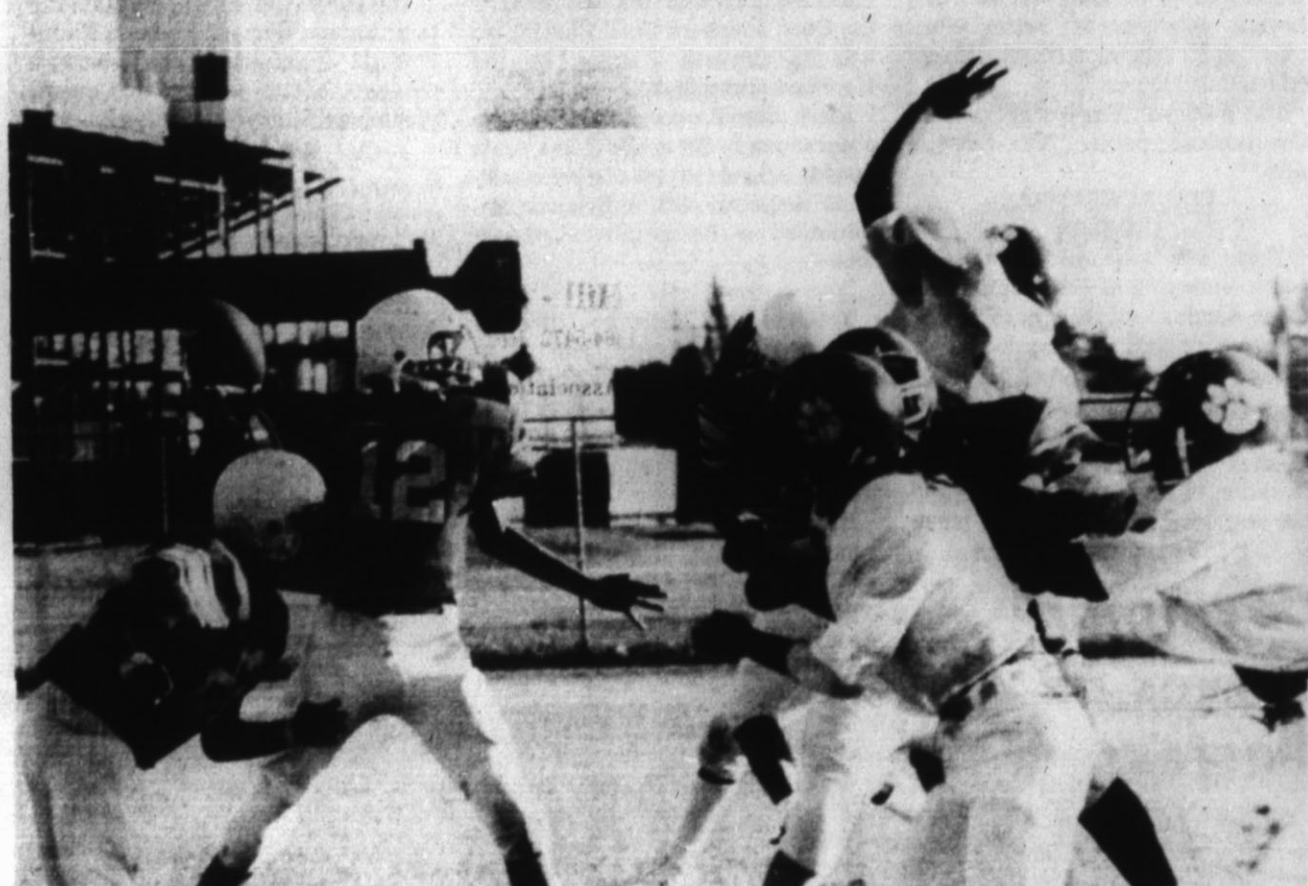

"It was a bitter defeat. We just didn't answer the bell. We couldn't contain their offensive line of scrimmage and that enabled them to control the ball on us. We moved the ball fairly well inside the 20s, but then we would get bogged down. Our inability to run the football was a problem that we couldn't overcome."

"Rice has got a great offensive team. They move up and down the field. There is no reason we still can't have a good season. We were at this stage last year (3-3) and we able to go on and have a good year. We just have got to get our heads screwed on right and get ready to play football."

Last year, Texas Tech was tied with Rice 21-21 before scoring four touchdowns in the fourth quarter to defeat Rice 49-21.

In the other half of a doubleheader, Stanton's eighth grade team fell to Gattis 26-0. Gattis led 20-0 at halftime.

In the ninth grade game, Stanton's Larry Brown scored with an 87-yard run in the second quarter. Gattis tied the game 6-6 in the third quarter.

HHS junior varsity defeats Clovis 18-15

Hereford High School's junior varsity football team scored its fifth straight victory Thursday night by defeating a previously undefeated Clovis team, 18-15.

Hereford, which is now 6-1 for the season, plays at Palo Duro next Thursday at 4:30 p.m. On Thursday, Oct. 29, Hereford plays at Lubbock Estacado at 4 p.m., and the final game of the season will be at home against Canyon on Thursday, Nov. 5 at 7 p.m.

Hereford trailed the visiting Clovis team 7-0 at halftime. Clovis' touchdown, scored in the second quarter, resulted after a pass interception.

In the third quarter, Hereford running back Kelvin Brown scored with a 35-yard run. The extra-point attempt failed, and Hereford trailed 7-6. Brown began his run to the right and was hit by two defenders, but found a small opening and broke loose for the touchdown run.

Hereford gained a 12-7 lead later in the third period. Tate Smith rushed 20 yards for the touchdown. A two-point conversion attempt failed.

Clovis regained the lead, 15-12, with a touchdown and two-point conversion in the fourth quarter.

Later, Hereford's Moses Casas blocked a Clovis punt and Hereford gained possession of the ball at the Clovis two-yard line. Hereford was then faced with a third-and-five play with about a minute and a half left in the game.

Smith, who had more than 100 yards rushing in the game, carried the ball into the end zone, giving Hereford an 18-15 lead. The point-after kick was blocked by Clovis.

Hereford defensive Coach Bill Bridge said, "It was a tremendous emotional effort by everybody. The defense played well when they had to. Moses Casas was all over the field on defense."

Both teams had fewer than 200 yards total offense in the game. Hereford was held to minus yardage in the first half.

"Offensively, we played poorly in the first half, but in the second half we came back and fought adversity," Hereford offensive Coach Craig Yenser said.

"Carl DeLozier did an excellent job on the option. It was a real good ball game. Clovis has a real good ball club," Yenser adds.

Brian Fowler of Hereford kicked a 63-yard punt and averaged 39 yards for the game.

ENMU-Angelo State LSC showdown is Saturday

A Lone Star Conference showdown between Eastern New Mexico and Angelo State is scheduled Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Portales, N.M.

Both teams are 1-0 in conference games. ENMU is 6-0 for the season, and Angelo State is 4-1.

Eastern New Mexico was ranked 10th in the NCAA division II poll, and Angelo State was ranked 20th.

ENMU defeated Abilene Christian 17-13 last week after building up a 17-3 lead into the fourth quarter. Total yards in the game were only 131 for ENMU compared to 255 for Abilene Christian.

Angelo State led 20 after one quarter of play last week, and defeated West Texas State 36-7, rushing for 284 yards out of a total offense of 432 yards. The ASU defense limited WTSU to 160 yards total offense.

ENMU Coach Don Carthel said, "We don't want to get much respect from the other conference schools. You could tell that when we were picked sixth in the pre-season poll."

About the victory over Abilene Christian, Carthel said, "It was an exciting ball game. We were very enthusiastic. Defensively, we were outstanding."

About about the next game, he said, "Once Angelo gets a turnover, they start rolling. They are huge. They look just like the Los Angeles Rams when they come out on the field. When they come out for the pre-game warmup you can expect to see the field tilt to one side."

Angelo State leads the all-time series against ENMU 9-2. Last year, ASU scored a 35-14 win over ENMU, after ENMU had gained a 14-7 first quarter lead.

Hereford High School graduate Mike Scott, a freshman quarterback, has moved into the No. 2 spot on the ENMU depth chart, behind starting quarterback Tommy Gonzalez.

Scott has played in three games this season, completing eight of 13 passes for 100 yards and one touchdown, with two interceptions. His pass efficiency rating is 120.8, compared to 133.9 for Gonzalez, who has completed 68 of 128 passes for 918 yards and 11 touchdowns, with five interceptions.

'Y' volleyball tourney set

October 22, 24-25

A consolation volleyball tournament with five divisions has been scheduled on Oct. 22, 24 and 25 at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

Entry fee is $25 per team, with an entry deadline of Tuesday, Oct. 20 at 10 p.m. Co-ed teams that have played together for several years, and would like to play with rules allowing men to spike, should enter the co-ed open divisions.

Co-ed teams that have played together for several years should enter the "A" division, and new teams with less experienced players should enter the "B" division.

There will be an admission charge of $1 for tournament spectators.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It is such an important subject! I hope you will print one more letter about a child who hangs around the home of a friend because her own life is so pathetic and empty and she longs for acceptance and a healthy home environment.

My childhood was so lonely that I hungered not only for a home-cooked meal but for acceptance. I can recall very clearly an emotionally painful experience at the age of 7 that wrecked my already battered self-esteem.

When a school chum invited me to play at her house after school I was elated. It was heaven to be in a real honest 'goodness kitchen and smell the aroma of dinner cooking.

I can still see myself standing at the kitchen door watching the family sit down to eat their meal, praying that I would be asked to join them.

Instead of an invitation, I was told to leave. I felt miserable and rejected as I trudged back home in the dark. And I was hungry. I had eaten that day (as every other day) a bowl of oatmeal with canned mild and sugar for breakfast and a piece of white bread with oleo and sugar for lunch. I knew that I would be going home to pancakes and brown sugar for supper. I tasted my first piece of fruit at the age of 10 and my first vegetable at 12. If I was lucky my mom would be there and not in a bar, passed out.

I was never invited back to that house again and I spent the rest of my childhood alone and lonely, playing hopscotch by myself.

I hope with all my heart that the mothers who read your column will encourage their children to bring some unhappy chums. (They will know who they are). Such kindness and generosity is sure to make a lifelong impression on a deprived youngster.—Ben There in Portland, Ore.

DEAR PORTLAND: I hope your letter starts a trend. Wouldn't that be wonderful? Thanks for sharing your story.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I ran into a woman I almost married 10 years ago. When she broke off with me I was crushed. Not until yesterday did I know the reason.

"Sara" was going abroad to visit her family. She didn't have enough time to take some of her jewelry to the safety-deposit box so she placed it in the flower pot that was suspended from the ceiling.

After Sara returned from abroad, she forgot what she had done with the jewelry. She thought she had left it in the usual place and somebody had robbed her.

Because there was no sign of forcible entry, and I had a key to the apartment, she suspected me but never said anything to anyone. She reported it to her insurance company as a theft. Eventually they paid her rather substantial claim and the case was closed.

A few years later when Sara moved out of her apartment, she found the jewelry and was terribly ashamed of having suspected me. Of course, I am glad we didn't marry and of course she did not return the insurance money. What should be done?—Staten Island Romance Gone Sour

DEAR STATEN: Sara owes the insurance company a substantial amount of money. Suggest to her that if the truth is ever found out, she will be in serious trouble. Meanwhile, thank your lucky stars that you didn't marry a woman who believed you would steal her jewelry.

What are the signs of alcoholism? How can you tell if someone you love is an alcoholic? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. To receive a copy, send $2.50 and a No. 10 self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Local recipe featured in Aggie cookbook

A recipe for peach-glazed spareribs by Hereford's Diane Hoelscher, member of the Golden Spread Club, will appear in the newly published Texas A&M University cookbook, "Aggies, Moms, and Apple Pie."

CattleWoman of the Year named Sunday

Randy Griffin was presented a silver cowbell and named CattleWoman of the Year by Dee Ann Trotter when members and guests of Hereford CattleWomen met Sunday at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center for a covered dish supper.

Griffin, a charter member of the organization, was recognized for donating much of her time to Hereford CattleWomen.

Trotter called the meeting to order and Lori Hall gave the treasurer's report. The nominating chairman, Kay Hall, presented the slate of officers for the 1988 year. Nominations were also given for Honorary CowBelle of the Year.

Names were submitted to represent the Hereford CattleWomen at the upcoming convention in Corpus Christi and it was decided that the group would serve lunch to the District X livestock feeder tour group Oct. 29.

The next meeting is set for Nov. 10 at the Hereford Country Club. Anyone interested in joining the CattleWomen may contact Dee Ann Trotter.
