PCBAN picks up Amarillo, area support

Hereford's protest over what many citizens considered as "irresponsible journalism" by The Amarillo Globe-News "spawned a regional group and now Amarillo businessmen have taken the ball and are running with it," Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher said today.

"We probably wouldn't have gotten this protest movement off the ground had not the Amarillo business community agreed with our complaints and supported our goals," the mayor added.

The regional group—Panhandle Citizens for a Better Amarillo Newspaper (PCBAN), held a press conference to open its headquarters in Amarillo Wednesday. Paul Engler, chairman of PCBAN and owner of Cactus Feeders Inc., of Dumas, said the Globe-News needs a new owner or the city needs another newspaper.

Engler's announced goal is not shared by all supporters in the regional group. Dr. Hap Cavness, chairman of the rally campaign in Hereford, said he "didn't give a big rip" who owned the newspaper. "My primary objective is to stop the bombardment of bad publicity which the newspaper has aimed at Hereford," said Cavness. "You can put it any way you like to—whether it's lying, misrepresentation or slanted news, I don't like that kind of reporting."

Engler encouraged all interested supporters in the Panhandle to attend a rally scheduled Monday at 5:30 p.m. at the Amarillo Civic Center. Tickets are not required, although tickets are being distributed in the area for free refreshments at the rally.

Cavness is serving as rally chairman for Hereford, and he announced Wednesday that free buses will be provided for local citizens who wish to attend the rally. Persons wanting to ride a bus are asked to call the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office by Friday, in order for the committee to determine the number of buses needed.

Some things, like children trading lunches, never change. Third graders Jace West, right, and Wesley Blackwell, students at Tierra Blanca School, are among approximately 3,500 children local school cafeteria workers feed daily.

Texas School Lunch Week isn't until March, but Trudie Gray, food service director, said parents are welcome to eat lunch with their children anytime. Cost for adults is $1.60 and reservations may be made by calling the school office.

Johnston bill gets final okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed legislation Wednesday to overhaul the program that just five years ago was billed as the final solution to disposing of the nation's growing accumulation of high-level nuclear waste.

The revamped search for an underground radioactive waste site is the most contentious feature in a $15.9 billion appropriations bill providing money for energy and water development programs in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

Approved by an 86-9 vote, the legislation would scrap the delicate, hard-won compromise reached by Congress in 1982 to create two waste repositories, one in the West and the other in the East or upper Midwest.

The new Senate plan, advocated by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and the Reagan administration, would all but scrap the eastern site and tilt the selection process toward placing the western repository at Yucca Mountain, Nev.

The plan also would authorize an above-ground facility to serve as an interim cooling and packaging area for waste headed for the permanent facility. The Energy Department has proposed Oak Ridge, Tenn., for the so-called monitored retrievable storage facility.

In an effort to sweeten the pot for states getting nuclear waste, the bill would provide $100 million a year for hosting a permanent repository and $50 million a year for temporarily storing the waste.

The Senate proposal faces an uncertain future. The House version of the spending bill proposes no changes in the 1982 program and members of the House influential on nuclear issues have criticized the Senate plan.

Johnston says there now are some 40,000 metric tons of nuclear waste, much of it from power plants, awaiting disposal. The waste, growing by about 3,000 metric tons a year, is considered dangerous for 10,000 years.

Detailed studies as to their geological suitability are supposed to be conducted simultaneously. But Johnston says that $3.9 billion can be saved if studies focus on one site at a time and if the first site is deemed suitable, eliminating the need for further studies.

State gives final okay to WDIC budget

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

The governor's Nuclear Waste Programs Office signed a contract this week to continue funds for operation of the Waste Deposit Impact Committee, which serves as a representative agency of taxing entities within Deaf Smith County.

WDIC had requested a budget of $890,000 but received only $675,000 from the state office, which renegotiated agreements with all of its contractors as part of a reorganization process.

NWPO approved $155,000 for WDIC to conduct an economic assessment and growth management plan which deals with the influx of residents and dollars related to site characterization studies being conducted in the county for a nuclear waste repository.

"This is the most significant change from the previous contract," Phil Niedzielski-Eichner, executive director of the WDIC, said. "The plan concerns the consequences of a 'boom' or 'bust.' If the program proceeds, we want to make sure there is significant diversification within the community so that it is not dominated by the Department of Energy, and if the program closes we want to assure there is a sufficient dollar diversification in the economy to absorb the loss of the government dollars."

Other funds granted include $250,000 for the operation of the WDIC office, $35,000 for travel expenses, $210,000 for the issues council and developing plans to handle various perceived impacts, and $25,000 to assist community information and participation.

However, they denied a request for $200,000 tagged to implement plans to deal with impacts and an additional $15,000 designated for legislative monitoring and consulting.

"Basically they funded us to make the plans but not to carry out the program, pending further definition of the plans," Eichner said. "They have supplemental funds available which we can apply for once we are prepared to implement the programs."

Though $675,000 was granted, the actual contract was signed in the amount of $631,000, according to Eichner. The difference, $119,000, allows for money WDIC has spent since Sept. 1.

Eichner stressed that continued impact assessment is important to the community. "Economic decisions may be based on expectations related to the program, rather than reality. For instance, a merchant's perception may be that the program will bring growth to the community or it may be that the program will not help the community. Either way, his perceptions may influence decisions," he said.

He added that he sees the reorganization of the NWPO as positive and expects to see more coordination of efforts. "The state is clearly on the track of reducing duplication of efforts between itself and various communities involved," he said.

As for the WDIC, Eichner said, "To a greater degree, we will be emphasizing getting information out to the community."

Peso takes plunge

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — The Mexican peso's sudden plunge could help as well as hurt business on the Texas side of the border, where exchange houses dropped the Mexican currency to as low as 4,000 to the dollar, analysts say.

The peso, worth 26 to the dollar five years ago and trading at about 1,700 to the dollar Tuesday, was trading at 3,000 to 4,000 to the dollar on the streets of Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, late Wednesday.

Enrique Buj Flores, Mexican consul-general in El Paso, said the peso plunge means serious trouble for the twin economies of El Paso and Juarez.

"I think it will be devastating. I think it will be very serious indeed," Buj Flores said.

But Tom Flory, president of Texas Commerce Bank-Brownsville, said the sharp drop in the peso's value could stimulate investment in the border manufacturing plants, known as "maquiladoras," where U.S. firms use inexpensive Mexican labor just south of the border.

"It will help these twin plants, because it will lower the cost of investments," Flory said, adding that the drop also could boost tourism as people head south in search of bargains, he said.

"It will have some positive as well as negative effects," Flory said.

The big loser, he added, probably will be the retail sector.

In Brownsville, exchange houses, or "casas de cambio," as they are more commonly known, stopped selling dollars Wednesday morning until the banks in Mexico closed.

Amelia Torres, who operates the Casa de Cambio Anahuac with her husband near the principal international bridge in Brownsville, said exchange houses lost money with the sharp decline Wednesday.

"We bought pesos yesterday at 1,720," Mrs. Torres said.

Casa de Cambio Anahuac and other exchange houses sold pesos Wednesday afternoon at 2,000 for each dollar a customer handed over, but charged 3,000 pesos for each dollar sold.

"We have to protect ourselves to recover the loss and to protect ourselves for tomorrow," Mrs. Torres said in explaining the 1,000-peso spread.

On Tuesday, exchange houses in Mexico closed buying dollars for 1,712.50 and selling them for 1,714. In Mexico Wednesday, the peso dropped to as low as 2,500 to the dollar, a one-day dive of about 30 percent.

Iran-Contra affair

Report criticizes Reagan cabal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress seems determined to tighten control over the government's covert intelligence operations after concluding that a secret White House cabal took power into its own hands in the Iran-Contra affair.

But lawmakers concede it will be up to independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh to provide some elusive final answers in the scandal.

Congress is likely to act next year to force the administration to give it quicker, more thorough notification of secret operations, and may establish an independent inspector general at the CIA, said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, a member of the Senate investigating panel and the Senate Intelligence Committee.

"I think the report's chief value will be as a deterrent," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House panel. "I think it's going to be a long time before a national security adviser will say, 'The buck stops with me.'"

Hamilton was referring to the testimony of former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, who told investigators during the summer's hearings that he alone had authorized the diversion of profits from Iran arms sales to help Nicaragua's Contra rebels, and that he had not told President Reagan.

The report was harsh in its judgment of Reagan and his top aides, saying the president failed in his constitutional duty to uphold the law and that he contributed to the deception of the American people about his secret policies.

Reagan himself had no comment on the report, saying only, "You don't want to hear it," when asked his opinion. His spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, called the report "mostly subjective opinions."

Among the conclusions drawn in the report:

—Reagan bears ultimate responsibility for the scandal because he allowed a "cabal of the zealots" to seize control of policy and bypass the law. "The common ingredients of the Iran and Contra policies were secrecy, deception and disdain for the law," the report said.

—Reagan's secret weapons sales to Iran "succeeded only in replacing three American hostages with another three, arming Iran with 2,004 TOW (anti-tank missiles) and more than 200 vital spare parts for Hawk missile batteries."

—One of the Iranian officials described by administration officials as "moderates" in fact masterminded the kidnapping of at least two of the American hostages.

—The secret covert operation that participants called "the enterprise" took in some $48 million and spent about $16.5 million on the Contras and $15.2 million on the Iranian initiative. It said $6.6 million went to those who ran the enterprise, retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, his Iranian-American business associate Albert Hakim and former CIA agent Thomas Clines.

—Reagan failed to tell the public the whole truth after the Iran arms sales were disclosed in the news media in November 1986.

—North received "an offer from a third party to engage in sabotage and other activities inside Nicaragua, to be financed" by the private covert arms sale operation. North was instructed by his superior, Poindexter, "not to become involved in conspiracy or assassinations."

The report said the plan was never implemented because North was dismissed when the Iran-Contra diversions became known.

The New York Times, quoting government officials it did not name, reported in today's editions that the third party was Panama's military leader, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Those issues, if they are ever to be resolved, now fall to Walsh, who continues to interview witnesses and sift through documents — including more than 2,000 pages of recently obtained Swiss bank records — in his criminal investigation.

Issuance of the report marked the end of a 10-month process. The House and Senate committees interviewed more than 500 witnesses, looked through some 300,000 documents and held 40 days of public hearings. The total cost is expected to come to about $4 million.

Summary of the Iran-Contra reports

By The Associated Press

Here, at a glance, is a brief summary of the combined report of the Senate Select Committee on Secret Military Assistance to Iran and the Nicaraguan Opposition and the House Select Committee to Investigate Covert Arms Transactions with Iran, and related developments.

CONCLUSIONS

—The majority report concluded that President Reagan bears ultimate responsibility for the affair that plunged his administration into crisis because he allowed a "cabal of the zealots" to seize control of policy and bypass the law.

—The common ingredients of the Iran and Contra policies were secrecy, deception and disdain for the law," the report said. "A small group of senior officials believed that they alone knew what was right."

—These committees found no direct evidence suggesting that the president was a knowing participant in the effort to deceive Congress and the American public. But the president's actions and statements contributed to the deception."

NEW DISCLOSURES

—Some U.S. weapons supposedly provided to strengthen Iranian moderates actually went to Iran's radical Revolutionary Guards, and U.S. officials were told that one of the "moderates" in U.S. dealings in fact masterminded the kidnapping of William Buckley, the Beirut CIA station chief who died in captivity.

—The document, reflecting information recently furnished by the Israeli government, also indicated that as early as Dec. 3, 1985, National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver North had plans to use

Iranian weapons sales to generate profits that could be used to support Nicaragua's U.S.-backed Contras.

RECOMMENDATIONS

—The committee's specific recommendations dealt primarily with the conduct of covert operations, and included:

—A call for changes in the National Security Act to require that Congress be notified of approval of a covert operation within 48 hours. Current law calls only for unspecified "timely notice" to Congress.

—A requirement that all presidential decisions to initiate a covert operation be in writing and personally signed by the president. Retroactive "findings" or decisions to initiate covert operations should be banned.

—A requirement that the administration identify to Congress all agents involved in covert activities, including private parties and foreign countries. The investigators warned that other countries may well expect something in return for their help and that use of private money may be an attempt to circumvent the control exercised by Congress over the government's purse strings.

—A requirement that all covert operations be dismantled one year after they are first authorized unless the president certifies to Congress that continuing them is in the national interest.

WHITE HOUSE REACTION

—Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said there was nothing new in the report that White House officials had not seen during the televised hearings "except the subjective views of the members."

—Gary Bauer, presidential assistant for policy development and leader of conservative forces in the White House, said conclusions were "predictably partisan, one last attempt to discredit a president they were never able to defeat at the polls."

Straight Shootin'

By Debe Graves

For years people have asked me how I stay slim, and I have denied dieting or the many other trendy ways to remain svelte.

Now, the secret is out — I confess to steadfast faithfulness to a rigid diet. The diet, which I came across while back, is designed to help cope with the stress which builds up during the day.

Breakfast consists of one-half of a grapefruit, one slice of dry whole wheat toast and eight ounces of skim milk.

With such a good start to the day how could anything go wrong?

Lunch includes four ounces of lean broiled chicken breast, one cup steamed spinach, one cup herb tea and one Oreo cookie.

As the day progresses, tension builds and dietary needs change so a mid-afternoon snack is permitted. It consists of the rest of the Oreos in the package, two pints of rocky road ice cream, one jar of hot fudge sauce, nuts, cherries and whipped cream.

At last, time to go home, relax and unwind.

For dinner this diet allows two loaves of garlic bread with cheese; a large sausage, mushroom and cheese pizza; four cans, or one large pitcher, of beer; and three Milky Way candy bars.

After watching the late evening news the dieter may find it necessary to snack on an entire frozen cheesecake eaten directly from the freezer.

This diet is not a laughing matter. There are rules.

Rule number one is that if you eat something and no one sees you eat it, it has no calories.

If you drink a diet soda with a candy bar, the calories in the candy bar are canceled out by the diet drink.

When you eat with someone else, calories don't count if you don't eat more than they do.

Food used for medicinal purposes NEVER counts. This category includes hot chocolate, brandy, toast and Sara Lee Cheesecake.

Movie-related foods do not have additional calories because they are part of the entire entertainment package and not part of one's personal fuel. This category includes Milk Duds, buttered popcorn, Junior Mints and Tootsie Rolls. We're unsure of the calorie content of gargantuan pickles.

Cookie pieces contain no calories. The process of breaking causes calorie leakage.

Things licked off of knives and spoons have no calories if you are in the process of preparing something. Examples are peanut butter on a knife while making a sandwich, and ice cream on a spoon while making a sundae.

Foods that have the same color have the same number of calories. Examples are spinach and pistachio ice cream, mushrooms and white chocolate. Please note that chocolate is a universal color and may be substituted for any other food color.

Finally consider this advice from a friend: If you fatten up everyone else around you, then you look thinner.

Happy eating, er, dieting.

Contra report shows

Hunt gave $475,500

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dallas businessman Nelson Bunker Hunt contributed $474,500 to aid the Nicaraguan rebels after a private meeting with Oliver North at Dallas' exclusive Petroleum Club, the final report of Congress' Iran-Contra committees shows.

The meeting was arranged in September 1985 by private Contra fund-raisers Daniel Conrad and Carl "Spitz" Channell, whose tax-exempt foundation supplied the chartered plane for North's trip.

Hunt is one conservative Contra supporter whose story is highlighted in the Iran-Contra report, which was released Wednesday as the committees completed a 10-month investigation.

Congressional investigators determined that of the $10 million raised by Channell and Miller from donors like Hunt, "only approximately $4.5 million was funneled to, or spent on behalf of, the Contras, including more than $1 million for political advertising and lobbying."

The rest, according to the report, went for the fund-raisers' salaries and operating expenses — such as $8,000 to $9,000 to charter the plane to bring North to Dallas in September 1985.

The report said that the private fund-raising network was part of a "flagrant violation" of the Constitution by administration officials.

Some of the funds earmarked for the Contras went through the Swiss accounts that North used to pay for the secret network supplying the Contras and also for the money from the clandestine U.S. arms sales to Iran.

In a section that details Channell's fund-raising techniques, the report describes how North showed Hunt a $5 million shopping list of items the Contras needed, half of which were lethal supplies such as grenade launchers and Maule short-takeoff airplanes.

North then told Hunt he could not ask for the funds himself, but advised Hunt that he could contribute to Channell's tax-exempt National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty.

North, at the time a top National Security Council aide, "then left the room, a maneuver that had been prearranged," the report says.

Channell continued the sales pitch. And, as a result of the dinner, Hunt made a donation and a loan to Channell, each of $237,500. The loan was repaid without interest in January 1986, and two months later Hunt donated another $237,000 to the Contra cause, the report says.

Hunt, however, was so concerned about avoiding publicity "in the liberal media" over the contributions that he had his Dallas law firm — Shank, Irwin & Conant — issue its own checks backed by Hunt funds, according to the report.

Beefing up Girlstown

Nicole Axe, 4, daughter of Edwin and Pat Axe, and Marn Tyler chairman of the Hereford CattleWomen's "Beef for Girlstown," share some girls' talk—about Girlstown. Nicole donated a yearling calf, named Mildred, to Girlstown a few months ago, and is currently bottle-feeding two more calves to donate. Recently, Mike Betzen and Champion feeder donated two heaves, which were hauled to Amarillo by Bradford Trucking at no charge for processing. Tyler has headed up the Beef for Girlstown project since 1974.

at 7 p.m. Monday. The rally is expected to last about an hour, and the buses will immediately return to Hereford. A number of local citizens will be attending a "Meet the Herd" party at 8 p.m. at La Plata Junior High.

Engler's call for a change in ownership of the paper came after the announcement that Jerry Huff, general manager of The Globe-News, is leaving the newspaper to head a newly-selected team to direct coverage of The Globe News and The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

"Mr. Huff's departure from town, I don't think is going to deter this committee's actions, functions and so forth one iota," Engler said Wednesday. Engler said Huff's departure was a result of the committee's action, but it was not the committee's goal to replace individuals.

Meanwhile, Globe News Executive Editor Garet von Netzer said Huff's transfer had nothing to do with the committee action, that his new duties had been in the planning stage for some time. Carl Cannon, group manager for Morris Communications Corp., announced Wednesday the Amarillo newspaper will institute several programs to meet the concerns of many local and area residents.

Cannon will be interim general manager of The Globe-News, according to an Associated Press report. He said he is in the process of contacting five city leaders who in turn will appoint a group of interested individuals to become part of an "editor's forum." Secondly, the newspaper will establish a Reader Representative program.

Cannon said the newspaper will have a person on the staff whose duties will be "to answer complaints that readers might have and to do so openly and honestly in the newspaper." He added that this staff person will function independently of the management of the paper.

Huff leaves Amarillo post

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The parent company of the Amarillo Globe-News says general manager Jerry Huff has been reassigned to head a team of executives to direct coverage of the 1988 presidential campaign.

The announcement Tuesday of Huff's reassignment by Globe-News parent, Morris Communications Corp. of Augusta, Ga., came in the wake of protests against the Globe-News by a group that includes Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens, a frequent critic of the newspaper.

Last week a group of about 80 people, including Pickens, protested what it said was the newspaper's negativism and poor quality. The group called for a boycott by Globe-News advertisers and readers.

"The Amarillo Globe-News refuses to become part of our community. It has consistently undercut efforts to bring new jobs and investments into our region," said Paul Engler, chairman of the group.

Wednesday the group, which calls itself the Panhandle Citizens for a Better Amarillo Newspaper, opened a headquarters office.

The protests began after the Globe-News did a series of stories earlier this month focusing on Anglo-Hispanic relations in Hereford.

Pickens, a well-known corporate takeover artist and chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co., raised complaints about the Globe-News last year, urging his employees to stop subscribing to the newspaper for what he called "negative reporting."

Garet von Netzer, executive editor of the Globe-News, said plans to create a team to coordinate presidential campaign coverage for Morris Communications had been under consideration for about a year. He said the announcement should have been made earlier.

"It gives people the impression this was a spot decision for some trumped-up project when in fact the decision...the commitment was made six months ago," von Netzer said.

Huff, who has been with the Globe-News since 1974, will coordinate the Morris team's coverage out of Atlanta, New Orleans and Washington, D.C.

Von Netzer said Carl Cannon, former Globe-News general manager and now a group manager for Morris, will be the interim general manager.

Huff had been general manager since October 1986, von Netzer said.

Breakdown of Hispanic family tradition said to contribute to dropout rate

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech University President Lauro Cavazos says a breakdown of the Hispanic family tradition is contributing to the increasing Hispanic student dropout rate.

During a panel discussion Tuesday night at Texas A&M University, Cavazos also said raising the awareness of the Hispanic dropout rate is needed to help solve the problem.

"We must nurture and extend Hispanic family tradition because there is a loss of human potential in dropouts," Cavazos said. "Meaningful change starts with caring and involving the family in the discussion to establish guidance."

The A&M program Tuesday focused on unique problems facing Hispanic students — who are leaving high schools and colleges at higher rates, national statistics indicate.

Dr. Tatcho Mindiola, a University of Houston sociologist and director of Mexican-American studies, said the family is just part of the problem.

"Saying the answer lies with the family is like blaming the victim. If the family is the source then that aboves society, which means you're overlooking discrimination and prejudice," Mindiola said.

"The problem begins with history — Mexican-Americans have been perceived as an inferior and conquered people. Schools and society are not fully concerned with the educational curriculum being offered to Hispanic children," he said.

A disproportionate number of Hispanic students are steered toward vocational education programs, he added.

Mindiola also suggested that political power is an important part to equality in education.

"We have gone beyond the stage of having a brown face in a high place and we need to hold those individuals accountable for problems facing our communities to obtain a quality product in the public school system," he said.

Cavazos said 17 percent non-minority students won't finish school, 28 percent of black students won't finish and 45 percent of Hispanic students won't complete their high school education.

Sixteen percent of the U.S. population 25 years or older has completed only eight years or less of school, but that figure increases to 41 percent for the Hispanic population, Cavazos added.

Negotiators inching toward deficit-cut accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talks between Congress and the White House on shrinking the deficit are snagged over details of the plan, but negotiators predict they will strike a deal before Friday's deadline.

The bargainers, set to hold a 19th closed-door session today, were hoping to shake hands on a proposal that would save about $30 billion in fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1, and at least $45 billion more next year. About $9 billion in new taxes this year, and more next year, would be included.

But the negotiators still have several persistent problems to solve, including the threat that even if they reach an agreement, the House or Senate might reject it. Liberals have complained that more military cuts are needed, while conservatives want more reductions in domestic programs and fewer taxes.

"There is no plan, believe me, that is going to be passed uniformly," said Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La.,

after Wednesday's meeting in the Capitol.

Even some members of the bargaining teams have been openly critical of the package that has been emerging, complaining that many of the savings are of the one-shot variety and that even more red ink should be eliminated.

"We had a chance for beefsteak, and we end up with gruel," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, one of the negotiators, said, "We continue to make a little progress. We're slugging away."

Without agreement by Friday, $23 billion in spending cuts would automatically be triggered under the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law, half in domestic programs and half in defense.

A growing number of lawmakers say, however, that if an agreement is reached, Congress will be asked to pass legislation extending that deadline until mid-December.

Participants said there are remaining disagreements over the precise size of the new taxes and defense reductions, as well as a continuing insistence by administration bargainers that they have some say on the types of taxes that would be raised. Lawmakers want to leave that decision up to congressional committees.

There also remains uncertainty over how to ensure that agreements reached among the negotiators over spending cuts can be translated into legislation, without being changed during the lawmaking process.

In addition, some participants said that for technical reasons, from $500 million to $1 billion of the reductions might have to be changed to ensure that the package meets the minimum savings required by Gramm-Rudman.

The proposal under discussion would slash $2.6 billion from domestic programs such as law enforcement and highway projects, $2 billion from Medicare, and another $1.6 billion from farm price supports, student loans and other benefit programs.

The Pentagon would receive $285.5 billion, $4.9 billion short of keeping pace with inflation.

The Treasury would receive $5 billion by allowing rural electrical cooperatives to repay federal loans early, $1.6 billion from tougher tax collection and $1.4 billion from new procedures for selling Veterans Administration loans and from pension premium changes.

Treasury also would receive $400 million from higher fees charged for federal services, and save $1.3 billion from lower interest payments on the debt that result from deficit-cutting.

Cultural Club hosts dinner

The Cultural Extension Club met recently at Virginia and Ted Sumner's home for a family Thanksgiving covered dish supper, which consisted of turkey and all the trimmings.

The five guests included Tom Hargrave, John Hunter, George Pope, Ted Sumner, and Amanda Fellers.

Following the meal, Byrdie Fellers, vice-president, called the meeting to order and Virginia Sumner read the opening exercise, "I Have Noticed."

Roll call was answered by nine members with a "turkey project I have used."

The new slate of officers for next year were elected and include: Byrdie Fellers, president; Nell Pope, vice-president; Bertha Dettman, secretary; Wilma Goetsch, assistant secretary; Carrie Mae Doak, treasurer; Marie Thames, reporter; Mildred Lewis, assistant reporter; and Jewell Hargrave, council delegate.

Those in attendance were Edith Hunter and S.T. Walton in addition to the members already mentioned.

Reports submitted by Dr. Jonas Salk, predicting the use of Salk's anti-polio vaccine would eliminate the threat of polio within three years, were read to an American Medical Association meeting in Chicago June 11, 1956.

Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were executed June 19, 1953, at Sing Sing Prison in New York, after being convicted as spies for the Soviet Union.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you stand another "throw the bum out" letter? I refer to the woman whose cheating husband had a stroke and now she wants to know if she should take him back.

Some of the women who wrote said the wife was a fool to consider such a thing. They insisted that she should take him, wheelchair, and all, and dump him and his belongings on his mistress' doorstep.

There's an awfully good chance that his mistress won't take him, in which case I hope the wife delivers him to the nearest nursing home.

I was married to one of those S.O.B.'s for 17 years and discovered that he had a whole other family on a farm 40 miles from here. I don't know how I could have been so dumb. There were telltale signs all over the place, but I suppose when a woman doesn't want to face up to the truth, she can be awfully blind.

How did the mail run on that one, Annie? I'd love to know.—Albany Alice DEAR ALICE: It ran 20 to 1 in favor of throwing the bum out. Here's another one.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll never be able to repay you for running that letter about the unfaithful husband who had a stroke. His wife didn't know whether to take him back or wheel him over to his sweetie's house so she could have the worst years of his life, since she had enjoyed the best.

My husband fooled around for at least 15 years that I knew of. I kept telling myself that the kids needed a father, although he was never at home and paid very little attention to them.

Two years ago Lover Boy developed a kidney problem and his blood pressure shot way up. The doctor prescribed medicine and told us both that the pills might interfere with our sex life. "You have a choice," the doctor said. "Either take the pills or risk getting a stroke." My husband flatly refused to take the pills. Since I was getting very darned little sex from him, I knew he was saving himself for another woman.

When I read that letter in your column, Ann, I packed my husband's bags and told him to go to her and stay there because I was filing for divorce.

Would you believe that within two weeks he had a stroke? Lucky for me I had already seen my lawyer so no one could say I threw out a sick man. My conscience is clear and I haven't been this happy in years. Ann, I owe you a lot.—Dallas

DEAR DALLAS: What a story! Thanks for sharing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am seven months pregnant with my first child. I am a branch manager at a bank and had decided to go back to work full time after my three-month maternity leave is over.

I must confess that as my due date nears I am losing confidence in my decision. Do you believe it is really OK to leave my baby when he/she is so young?

My husband and I make very good money and can afford excellent day care. But my career is important to me and I worked awfully hard to get where I am. I'm afraid if I am away too long I may lose out.

Many career women leave very young babies these days. It seems to be expected. Will you help me make a decision?—Cleveland Dilemma

DEAR C.D.: Some new mothers must go back to work, but how nice to have the luxury of a choice.

Since you are clearly ambivalent I suggest that you stay at home for a year. The bonding will be fairly solid by then and you'll be glad you did.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $2.50 plus a No. 10 self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Care, carving of turkey can be simple

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Is everyone ready for Thanksgiving? The following is a selection of recipes to help you through the holidays.

First, the turkey. The Bureau of Nutrition, Department of Health, City of New York, has these recommendations:
BUYING: Allow ¾ to 1 pound per serving from an 8 to 12 pound turkey. Plan to roast a fresh turkey within one day of purchase. Purchase frozen turkey several days in advance to allow sufficient time for thawing.

THAWING FROZEN TURKEY: Leave turkey in original wrapper. Place turkey on shallow tray in the refrigerator. Allow 2 to 3 days to defrost a 12 to 16 pound turkey. Or place the turkey in a pan or sink and cover with cold water. Change water often. Allow about one-half hour per pound of turkey. Thawing at room temperature is not recommended because surface bacteria can multiply to dangerous levels at room temperatures 60 degrees F and above.

If you've never prepared a turkey, or you'd like to try something new, here's a recipe for turkey and stuffing from "Apples, Apples, Apples" by Judith Comfort and Kathy Chute (Doubleday).

(NOTE: If you're a novice, be sure to remove the package of giblets from inside the turkey cavity. Line a shallow roasting pan with foil. You might also want to season the outside of the turkey. Do not stuff the bird until just before roasting.)

HOLIDAY TURKEY
8 to 9 pound turkey
Salt and freshly ground pepper
½ teaspoon marjoram

STUFFING:
1 cup finely chopped mixed dried fruits (apricots, pears, peaches)
2 tablespoons raisins
2½ cups diced peeled apples
1 cup day-old bread crumbs

BASTING SAUCE:
½ cup red wine
½ cup orange juice
Juice of a lemon
1/8 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
½ cup sour cream

Rinse turkey under cold running water and dry with paper towels. Sprinkle cavity with salt, pepper and marjoram.

Mix dried fruit, raisins, apples and bread crumbs in a large bowl. Stuff turkey and skewer openings closed. Rub skin with salt.

Place turkey, breast up, in a roasting pan. Cover with aluminum foil and bake on lowest rack at 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 2¼ hours to 3 hours or until internal temperature registers 190 degrees F when inserted in turkey thigh.

Mix red wine, orange juice, lemon juice and Tabasco sauce in a small bowl. After one hour cooking time, baste turkey with sauce. Cover again with foil. Continue baking, basting turkey every 30 minutes. When turkey is cooked, transfer to a platter and keep in a warm place for 20 minutes before carving. Skim excess fat from pan. Stir in sour cream and add a little water if necessary to make a thin sauce. Heat over low heat; season with salt and pepper. Serve with turkey and stuffing.

Makes 12 servings.

CARVING THE BIRD
Now that you've baked the turkey, how do you carve it? Here's one suggested way: With the tip of a knife, cut leg and thigh from the body of the turkey at the joint, then repeat for other leg and wings. Starting with the front end of the breast, cut at an angle and work downward, carving breast meat in thin slices. Carve the back end of the breast, then repeat on the other side.

HANDLING LEFTOVERS
The Bureau of Nutrition, Department of Health, City of New York, says that if possible, dismantle the bird completely after the meal. Always immediately refrigerate leftover turkey meat, stuffing and gravy in separate containers. The meat may be sliced or diced in accordance with plans for future use. Use leftovers within one to three days. Or freeze for longer storage. Plan to use frozen leftovers within one month.

DON'T THROW THAT CARCASS AWAY!

What about the day after Thanksgiving? And all those leftovers?

There's always turkey sandwiches... Or delicious turkey soup! The following recipe is from "I Must Have That Recipe," compiled by the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University in Bronx, New York. Corrine Katz of White Plains, New York, who edited the cookbook, is the contributor of this recipe:

TURKEY SOUP
1 turkey carcass plus bones (carcass may have to be broken in half)
8 cups water
1 large onion, left whole
4 carrots, peeled and left whole
4 stalks celery with tops, cut in half
1 bunch Italian parsley
1 clove garlic, peeled
Salt and pepper to taste
One 6-ounce package vegetable soup mix with mushrooms
Put all the ingredients in a large soup pot except for the small packet in the soup mix. Bring to a boil and then reduce heat to simmer. Cover and cook 1½ hours stirring occasionally. Add the packet from the soup mix and cook another 15 minutes.

When the soup is finished, remove carcass. When cool enough to handle, remove meat from bones and return meat to soup. Carefully remove any bones remaining in the pot. Slice the carrots and return to soup. Serve hot.
Yield: 2 to 2½ quart.

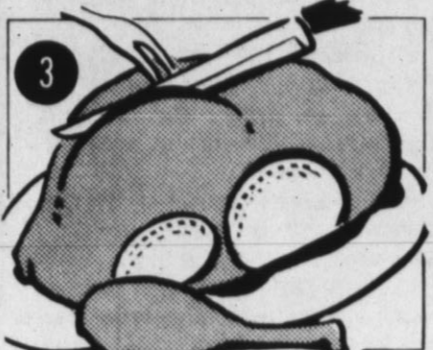

(These recipes were not tested by The Associated Press.)

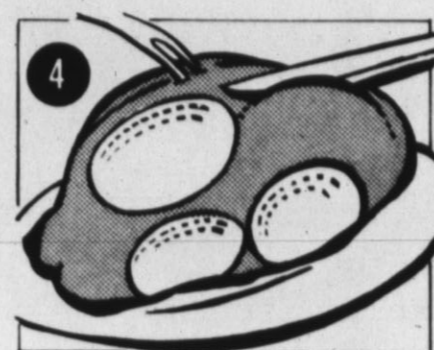

STEP 1 — With tip of knife, cut leg and thigh from body at joint.

STEP 2 — Repeat for other leg and wings.

STEP 3 — Cutting at an angle and working downward, carve breast meat in thin slices.

STEP 4 — Alternate front and back ends of breast. Repeat on other side.

50-year pin, certificate given to Eastern Star member

The late Mrs. Juanita Hershey was honored by the Order of Eastern Star Nov. 10 when members met in regular session in the Masonic Lodge.

At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Hershey was escorted to the East where her husband, Horace Hershey, presented her with the 50-year pin and a certificate. Wynema Wheeler, Worthy Matron, praised her years of service in Eastern Star. Grand Chapter report was given by Beverly Brooke, who had served as representative of the Hereford chapter in Dallas.

Refreshments of cake, punch and sandwiches were served from a table decorated in a Thanksgiving motif. Hostesses were Bonnie and Ed Hartley, Dorothy Noland and Mildred Fuhrmann.

Abundant Life

THIS DAY
By Bob Wear
This day may mean different things to different people, but, for all of us, it is a "little life", and it is about whatever we wish to make it. Of course, this is not to say that everything is as we wish it were; however, it is a fact that we have the privilege of choosing how we respond to the happenings and the situation which belong to this day. It is important to us to make the most of this portion of our life.

If we are aware of the inherent value of time; if we are fully conscious of our purpose for being; if we really know who we are; what we are doing and why we are doing it; where we are and the correct direction of movement; and what our ultimate destiny is we can make this day a good day. With this knowledge serving its intended purpose, we are not overcome by problems and difficulties.

We have the right to put out of our thoughts whatever may tend to discourage us, or otherwise make us ineffective. We have the capability to do this, and we can do it or we can learn to do it. The possibility for an effective, satisfactory life during this day of time is very real. There may be some frustrated wishes, some blighted hopes and some disappointments; but these can influence us only to the extent that we permit them to do so.

"Every morning is a fresh beginning, and every day is the world made new. The day is a new day. I have lived all my life up to this moment, to come to this day. I shall make of this day - each moment of this day - a heaven on earth. This is my day of opportunity." - Dan Custer.

We must not drag the past along with us, and we must not agonize about tomorrow; because doing so is not fair to 'this day'. Of course, all of this is easier said than done; but saying it will help us get it done, and it is a possibility for us.
This day is the only time of which we can be sure, and this does make it a very important day.

Rebekah Lodge Assembly president visits here

Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 was host recently to Marie Mason, President of the Rebekah Assembly of Texas, and other lodges of District V.

A salad supper was served to 52 members and guests preceding the joint meeting of Friona Rebekah Lodge No. 308, Muleshoe Rebekah Lodge No. 114, Dimmitt Lodge No. 54, and visitors from Amarillo and Fort Worth.

Mason inspired members with a resume of her program promoting friendship and love, a chance to care for others, and share the love that gives meaning to lives. Enthusiasm in lodge work and working together even when projects are not what are preferred, personally, was stressed. In her final statement, Mason wished for "God's bright rainbow to shine on each Rebekah and lead them to life's pot of gold."

Mason's secretary and traveling companion, Dorothy Greene of Fort Worth, was welcomed and recognition was given to District Deputy President Ursalee Jacobsen, lodge deputies, and appointed officers of Rebekah Assembly of Texas.

Represented at the meeting were Dick and Juanita Haines of Amarillo Lodge No. 222, Muleshoe Lodge No. 114 had 14 members; Dimmitt Lodge No. 54, four members; Friona Lodge No. 308, six members; and Hereford Lodge No. 228, 24 members.

Women of the Bible topic of club program

"Women of the Bible" was the topic of a program presented by Norma Walden when members of Veleda Study Club met recently in the home of Audry Martin.

Walden began her program by reading from the Forward II Timothy, 3:16-17, and statements from the apostle Paul. Choosing Rebecca, Miriam, Ruth, Abigail, Mary, Martha and Mary Magdalin as subjects, she read a brief synopsis and an analysis of influences on each of the women's lives.

The meeting was called to order by Suzanne Stevens and following the club collect. Norma Martin called the roll and members responded with a favorite scripture verse. Minutes were read, corrected, and then approved and Stevens called for reports from the treasurer and the standing committees.

Members discussed the club's Christmas party and it was decided that each would bring a favorite treat.

Those present included Marcella

Bradley, Ruth Fish, Betty Gilbert, Marjorie Lassiter, Martin, Joyce Ritter, Stevens, Walden, Margaret Zanser and the hostess.

Toys help kids understand about medical treatment

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Teddy bears with casts, braces, glasses, bandages, crutches or a neck collar are among the toys in a new catalog offered by a non-profit group that develops and distributes medical toys to help children understand health treatments.

"Seeing a treatment on their teddy bears helps children tolerate the same treatment on themselves," says Pat Azarnoff, founding director of Pediatric Projects Inc.

A stuffed dog with a sad look not only has an ice pack but also a hot water bottle, a tail bandage, foot blister pad, arm sling and nose bandage.

Parents of disabled children welcome toys that are more representative of their children's appearance than the standard dolls.

Ms. Azarnoff points out. And teachers use them to increase "disability awareness" in the classroom.

For a free copy of the catalog, write Pediatric Projects Inc., PO Box 1880, Santa Monica, CA 90406-1880 or call (213) 828-8963.

Professor provides answers to Stradivari's violin structure

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A Texas A&M University professor says he has discovered some of the long lost techniques used in making the famed Stradivari violins.

Joseph Nagyvary, a professor of biophysics and biochemistry, said Tuesday he has discovered that 17th century varnish played a major role in the look and sound of the coveted Italian violins.

Several years ago, Nagyvary also discovered the wood Stradivari used to make his violins was soaked in water, not dry-seasoned as commonly believed.

After examining five varnish samples taken from authentic period instruments under the microscope, Nagyvary found thousands of crystals and other particles in addition to linseed oil, and concluded the crystals came from a fine powder commonly found in Italian pharmacies.

"At that time, they used the fine powder called 'salt of gems' to keep from getting the plague and for other medicinal reasons," Nagyvary said. "But in this case, it most likely was used against the woodworm, which was a real problem in Italy at that time. The varnish may have been toxic or bad tasting to the woodworm."

He called the varnish a composite that is the ancestor of ultra-modern composite resins used in dentistry. The varnish was used by Stradivari and his contemporaries and probably made by the local drugstore, he said.

When Stradivari spread the varnish on his violins, the sediment settled into the wood and the linseed oil layered itself on top. Particles in the varnish functioned like wedges tightening up loose joints, Nagyvary said.

Combined with the dry and permeable water-seasoned wood, the varnish penetrates deeper into the minuscule crevices of the violin and adds to the mellow tone of Stradivari's violins, he added.

"Not only does the old varnish make a stronger outer covering to the wood, but it gives the wood a fire and brilliance because it is not perfectly transparent like varnishes today. Instead of a mirror shine, it has a warmer opacity," he said.

Nagyvary, who has been studying the violins made by Stradivari, Guarneri and other important 17th and 18th century craftsmen for the past dozen years, duplicated the old varnish and recreated the same molecular and crystalline make-up alchemists prepared centuries ago.

After researching and reinterpreting hundreds of old varnish recipes and alchemist records, Nagyvary found what he considers the key ingredients of the old recipe.

It is two pounds linseed oil, a half-pound red lead oxide, one-16th pound white lead oxide, three-16ths pound of burnt stag horn powder, ground glass, one-eighth pound gypsum, crab eyes, egg shells and dry bread crumbs — boiled for several hours.

That is the basic golden-colored composite to which the violin maker added his own artist's colors.

Several years ago, Nagyvary found that century-old traces of fungi that altered the shape of wood cells in the violin and concluded the fungi could have come only from water immersion.

The water fungi eat away the gummy material in the wood and make it lighter and drier. The fungi also force the cell walls to separate or loosen.

Names in the News

DENVER (AP) — "Right Stuff" author Tom Wolfe, the New Journalist who dubbed the '70s the "Me Decade," admits he's little jealous of whoever invented "the dread 'Y' word, 'yuppie.'"

"After successfully naming the '70s, I felt pressure to name the '80s," Wolfe said Thursday, on tour to promote his novel of riches, fame and success, "The Bonfire of Vanities."

"In the '70s, pornography was the new vice ... magazines that depicted pornographic acts flourished," said Wolfe. "Now, they aren't doing as well, and the ascendancy of magazines with descriptions of the very rich has become apparent."

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Archbishop Desmond Tutu of South Africa has given his endorsement of an album by a Montana folk music group that performed an anti-apartheid ballad for the Nobel Peace Prize-winner this year.

The album by the Montana Logging and Ballet Company, released this week, carries Tutu's signature and an endorsement. "As long as we have hope, no situation is hopeless," Tutu's inscription reads.

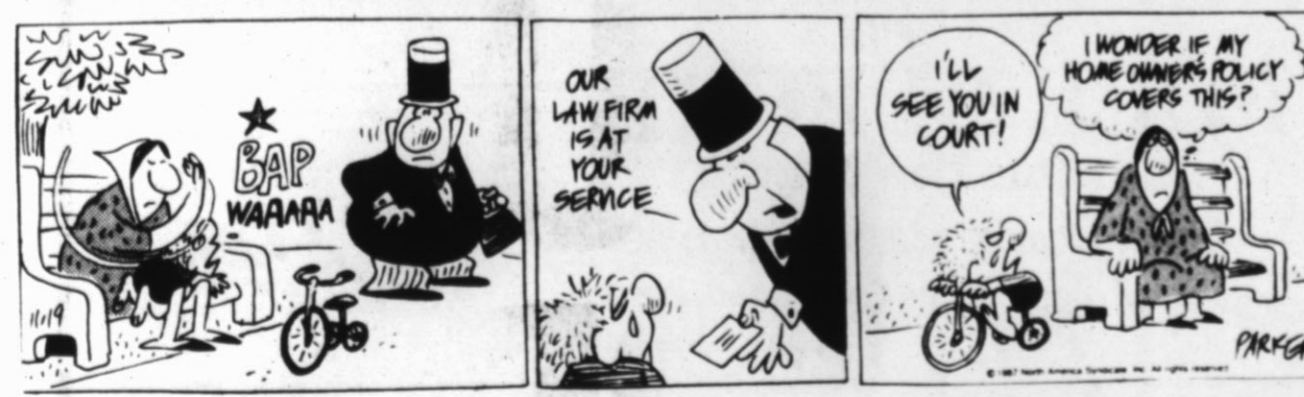

The group's four members met Tutu in March when they performed their anti-apartheid song "Take the Barriers Down" at a United Methodist Church gathering in Louisville, Ky.

Ways with Wine
by David Hutchins

KEEP IT SIMPLE
The time and place to serve the simplest of dry white wines is when simple food is on the menu. For example, an antipasto, Chinese food, or a simple fish dish call for a wine that is inexpensive and neutral in flavor. Most jug white wines (California "Chablis") fit the bill, as do the southern French whites. Or, consider turning to a standard Italian white such as Soave, or the Sardinian and Sicilian wines. Wines of these types should be served well-chilled at about 46 degrees F. Little fault can be found with a light supper accompanied by a simple white wine.
"A World of Wines" awaits you here at 400 N. 25 Mile, 364-7802 where we are open Mon.-Sat. 10-9. Use our drive up door until midnight for beer and wine. On Sun. only beer and wine is available from 12-12. Let THE STORE assist you in your choice of wines to compliment either the simplest food or your gourmet Thanksgiving menu and to insure you get the best value suited to your personal taste, budget as well as your choice of food. Have a very Happy Thanksgiving!
White wines have shorter corks than reds.

Moderate activity can avert heart attack death, study says

CHICAGO (AP) — Running is a needlessly strenuous way to fight the risk of a fatal heart attack, says a study published today that found yardwork and golfing are plenty of exercise for middle-aged men prone to coronary trouble. "Moderate and low intensity activities, done frequently enough and in long enough duration, can reduce the chances of dying of heart attack," said Dr. Arthur S. Leon, who conducted a study of more than 12,000 such men. "This would include walking, working around the house and yard, light sports, like golf and bowling, dancing," said the researcher from the University of Minnesota's School of Public Health.

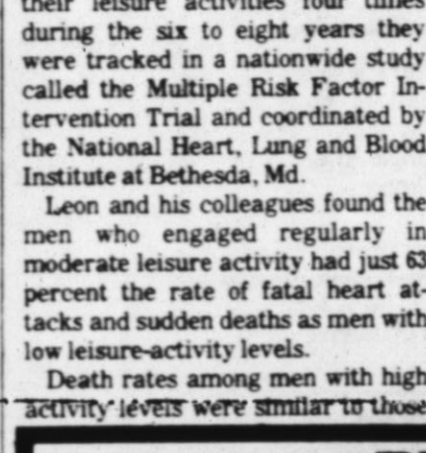

"About three-quarters of an hour a day of this type of activity seemed to offer this protection. That seemed to be the optimal amount." Longer periods of activity or more intense exercise offered little additional protection against coronary death in high-risk men, though it did reduce the risk of non-fatal heart attacks, he said. "There is no reason to assume that this is not also true for women," the researcher added during a telephone interview Thursday from Minneapolis. The findings come from a study of 12,138 men whose high cholesterol levels, high blood pressure and smoking habits put them in the upper 10 percent to 15 percent of risk level for heart disease among middle-aged U.S. males.

Results of the study by Leon and colleagues at the university were published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association. The subjects, ages 35 to 57 at enrollment, were questioned about their leisure activities four times during the six to eight years they were tracked in a nationwide study called the Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trial and coordinated by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute at Bethesda, Md. Leon and his colleagues found the men who engaged regularly in moderate leisure activity had just 63 percent the rate of fatal heart attacks and sudden deaths as men with low leisure-activity levels. Death rates among men with high activity levels were similar to those at moderate levels, but the combined rate of fatal and non-fatal heart attacks for the high-activity group was 20 percent lower, the researchers said. Men with low activity levels had a heart-attack death rate of 24.6 per 1,000, while subjects with moderate and high activity levels had rates of 15.4 per 1,000 and 15.8 per 1,000, respectively, the study said. The least active men averaged about 16 minutes of leisure-time physical activity per day, the moderately active men about 48 minutes and the most active men about 2 hours and 14 minutes, the researchers said. Just 570 men, or 4.7 percent, reported they engaged an hour or more a week in heavy physical activity such as jogging, stair climbing or singles in tennis, the study said. Experts on physical fitness often recommend three 20-minute sessions of heavy activity a week, Leon said. Findings were reached after correcting statistically for differences in heart attack rates that might have been caused by age, cholesterol levels, blood pressure, smoking and whether the subjects were getting a physician's treatment or counsel for cholesterol, diet and smoking. The study comes a month after an American Medical Association expert panel overwhelmingly recommended exercise as a way for heart attack or heart surgery patients to avoid recurring coronary problems, enhance physical and psychological well-being and get back to work quickly.

Dallas Mavericks struggle past Clippers

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks have yet to establish a pattern of consistency over their first seven games.

The defending Midwest Division champions had to struggle to defeat the Los Angeles Clippers 97-87 Wednesday night, and that victory came over a team that lost its 21st straight road game dating back to last season.

Friday night, the 4-3 Mavericks face their stiffest test of the season in Inglewood, Calif., against the NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers, undefeated over their first seven games.

"We'll have our work cut out for us," said Mavericks guard Rolando Blackman, who scored 19 points Wednesday. "We'll have to go out with a whole lot of intensity and see what we can do."

The Mavericks trailed by as many as 13 points in the first half before putting together a 16-2 spurt early in the third quarter to stake them to an eight-point lead.

"Coach (John) MacLeod was a little angry at halftime," Blackman said. "We weren't doing the job. We're still trying to find ourselves."

The Mavericks fell behind by a point early in the fourth quarter, but Derek Harper's jump shot put Dallas back in command at 80-79 with 7:30 left in the game. From that point, the Mavericks never trailed, making a 9-2 run to boost their lead to 89-81.

Six straight points by Michael Cage trimmed the deficit to two, but the Clippers couldn't come up with the tying basket.

Mark Aguirre led the Mavericks with 31 points, but after the game he wanted to talk more about the Mavericks defense than offense. Dallas held an opponent to less than 100 points for the third time in seven games this season.

"I'm not worried about our offense," Aguirre said. "We have plenty of offense. Tonight we worked hard on defense. We dove for loose balls, worked on both boards and did a lot of the hard-work things."

It was a strange night for Mavericks forward Roy Tarpley. He tied a club record with 10 offensive rebounds and was the game's leading rebounder with 16 as the Mavericks held a 54-37 rebounding edge. But Tarpley made only three of 16 field goal attempts, finishing with eight points.

"It's part of the game," he said, shaking his head as he scanned the final box score. "You're not always going to be consistent on offense. But you can be consistent on defense if you work hard enough."

The Clippers are trying to find their identity. With two rookie first-round draft picks — Reggie Williams and Joe Wolf — among their first six players, the Clippers figure to struggle early in the season.

"The cohesion isn't there yet as a unit," said Cage, who led the Clippers with 24 points. "Ordinarily a team would win given the opportunities we had tonight. Our attitude is good but this is a new team this year and we're still trying to mesh."
