Lessons at Gorleben

Can U.S. learn from German mistakes?

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A fatal accident last May during site characterization work on a nuclear repository in a salt dome area in West Germany could have important lessons for similar projects in the United States, according to a study on the West German incident released this week.

The study, prepared by Bernd Franke and Dr. Arjun Makhijani for the Institute for Energy and Environmental Research and the Washington, D.C.-based Health and Energy Institute, points out similarities between West Germany's program and similar efforts in the U.S. to site a permanent, high-level nuclear waste repository.

A site north of Hereford, along with locations in Hanford, Wash., and Yucca Mountain, Nev., are currently the three finalist sites for the nuclear dump.

Gorleben, in northeastern West Germany along the border with East Germany, was nominated as the sole site after the government had earlier considered looking at several sites. However, the study notes, the West German government opted to study only one site for the sake of political expediency and to save money—much like the proposal of Louisiana Sen. J. Bennett Johnston which passed the U.S. Senate in an overwhelming vote Wednesday.

The Gorleben site has several critical differences between it and the only current salt repository candidate—Deaf Smith County—in the U.S.

The Gorleben site had been a salt mine at one time, and some of the salt went above an aquifer that ran underground. Because there was no "seal" between the aquifer and the salt, the salt was eroding at a much more rapid pace than geologists had previously believed.

The Gorleben dome is also moving upwards. Geologists believe the salt formation underlying northern Deaf Smith County is considerably less active, although there is some change.

Work has also proceeded much further at Gorleben than at any of the three candidate sites in the U.S. Site characterization work has been underway, to a degree, since 1977.

West Germany has already begun the major work that will not begin here, if the current schedule is maintained, until at least late 1989—the drilling of exploratory shafts, and the freezing of the ground to prevent seepage from the Ogallala Aquifer into the shaft.

Despite warnings in 1982, which were kept secret until this year, that the characterization work was unsafe, work proceeded at Gorleben to sink the shafts about 2,000 feet below the surface and to try to freeze the ground and the

PCBAN rally is Monday

Local committee workers are hoping to have at least 400 Hereford residents in Amarillo Monday evening when the Panhandle Citizens for a Better Amarillo Newspaper (PCBAN) hold an "old-fashioned rally" to voice displeasure against the regional newspaper.

PCBAN is providing free buses for area citizens to make the trip to Amarillo, and Hereford residents can call the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office to make reservations on one of the buses. The buses will leave from the Community Center at 4 p.m. Monday.

The rally is scheduled to start at 5:30 p.m. in the Amarillo Civic Center Exhibition Hall. Refreshments and entertainment will be provided and the rally is scheduled to last about one hour.

Dr. Hap Cavness, local rally chairman, held a planning session for interested citizens here Friday afternoon and about 40 persons attended. He asked each person to contact at least 10 other people about attending the rally. He said the buses would return immediately after the rally, and those planning to attend the "Meet the Herd" party would be back for the 8 p.m. event. Cavness said the buses would be at the Community Center and anyone needing a ride to the Center could call the chamber office Monday morning.

Mike Bowles, C of C president; Mayor Wes Fisher, and Mike Carr, C of C executive vice president, spoke to supporters at the planning session.

Fisher said that Amarillo businessmen "have taken the ball and are running with it, but Hereford initiated this protest and we need to show our unity with Amarillo and other Panhandle communities."

Bowles urged local supporters to distribute lawn signs, badges and rally tickets to promote the Monday meeting. "Let's not forget what the Amarillo paper did to us in its eight-day series of 38 articles, portraying our community as being unfair to drug users and pushers, as well as presenting an unbalanced and biased picture of racial relations."

Andrew Littlefair of Amarillo told the group that PCBAN is distributing about 100,000 of the rally tickets in Amarillo and is expecting at least 2,000 people to attend. He said the rally is being advertised on television and radio, area newspapers and in The Amarillo Globe-News.

Littlefair, who is associated with Mesa Petroleum, also told the group that Billy Morris, owner of Morris Communications Corp., which owns the Amarillo and Lubbock newspapers, was in Lubbock Friday and had his top Globe-News officials meet with him in Lubbock.

"We believe we have his attention and we think the rally could have a big impact on our project," said Littlefair.

Engler, the PCBAN leader, said The Globe-News has "repeatedly refused to respond to questions and criticisms from the community . . . and only Panhandle citizens acting together can cause a change." In a letter mailed to area community leaders, Engler said the goal "is to improve the quality of journalism in the region and to have a newspaper that is a part of the community, not an active detractor."

PCBAN's announced goals include a promotion urging Panhandle citizens to cancel their subscriptions to the paper, and an appeal to advertisers to refrain from placing ads in the paper each Tuesday, starting Nov. 24.

Cavness reported that the local committee had invited the Chamber Singers to participate in the rally. Members of the group will meet Sunday afternoon to determine if the scheduling can be worked out, he added. The committee had also invited the HHS Band to participate but Cavness reported that idea had been dropped due to complications

Monday is 'Nealy Culp Day'

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

"Nealy Culp Day", as proclaimed by Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher, will be observed in Hereford Monday, Nov. 23, and will be highlighted at 10 a.m. by the dedication of a special plaque to be placed at Hereford Municipal Airport.

The plaque will honor the late Mr. Culp for his unofficial role as "goodwill ambassador" for the airport from 1975 to 1984. The idea for the special ceremony was initiated by Wayne W. Daniels of Colorado Springs, Col., a frequent user of the airport.

The mayor's proclamation cites Culp as "a common man who gave of himself to an uncommon extent, lifting the spirits and enriching the lives of all he touched." In addition to the plaque, pilots who knew Culp, were asked to send letters of commendation to be included in a small booklet.

The plaque to be hung at the airport is inscribed with this beginning: "Welcome to Hereford Municipal Airport! If Nealy Culp could be here to greet you, he would make you feel right at home."

Daniels, a relative of the Culp family, said the tribute to Nealy was also designed "to boost aviation in general and the Hereford Municipal Airport in particular." He believes the local airport is one of the best little airports in the country, with a unique terminal building and a friendly atmosphere.

"Nealy contributed much to further the friendly image to visitors while serving as an unofficial greeter. Even the uncommon efforts of ordinary people often go unrecognized, so I think it is appropriate to provide a lasting memento to Nealy's contribution," said Daniels.

Culp and his wife, Esther sold a farm near Plainview and moved to a farm near Hereford in December, 1951. After four years, they sold the farm, moved to town and Nealy worked for the Texas Highway Department for 22 years, retiring in 1974.

While looking for something to do and supplement his retirement income, Neely expressed an interest to Donna and John Smith—operators of the airport—about a part-time job. This led to an association with the Smiths that lasted until he died May 8, 1984 at the age of 74.

Culp was supposed to work four hours a day when he started working at the airport. "He was a dedicated, reliable employee," says Smith. "He wasn't interested in making more money and he was the type you'd have to tell to go home. He'd come early, make coffee and get his chores done so he could greet and visit with visitors to the airport."

Smith said Culp would put in so many hours that he'd have to think up ways to help compensate him. "Once, on his wedding anniversary, we named him 'goodwill ambassador' for the airport and sent him and his wife on a shopping trip." He was a "reliable" backup man for the Smiths. "Hiring him was one of the smartest decisions I ever made," said John.

The airport people gave Culp an appreciation dinner in late 1983. At the start of 1984, Nealy began to miss some days at work due to his battle with cancer. Donna Smith, who sometimes carried him to Amarillo for treatments, said that Culp never complained. "He was very religious," she added. Culp's daughter and son-in-law were missionaries to Argentina and he helped underwrite some of their expenses. His daughter talked him into coming to see them one time in Argentina.

In addition to his widow and daughter, Nealy was survived by two sons—Niles and Richard, both of Hereford. Mrs. Culp has seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Suit continues

FNB gets $1 million summary judgment

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Over $1 million was recently granted to First National Bank in a partial summary judgment against James Sears, his brother Wheeler Sears and trustees of the Cimarron Corporate Employee Stock Plan.

The summary judgment, handed down by Judge David Wesley Gulley in 22nd District Court in Deaf Smith County, totaled $1,154,689.84 in favor of claims of the bank against the defendants.

The suit, filed in late April, alleged improper insider lending against James Sears, a former director of the bank. The suit also accuses Wheeler Sears of defaulting on three loans made to him by his brother.

In addition to the charges of improper lending, the suit states the two brothers "acted with a conscious and reckless disregard for the financial solvency and well-being of the bank. Their acts and commissions were grossly negligent and were willful and malicious breaches of their fiduciary and statutory duties."

The bank's pursuit of actual, punitive and compensatory damages is partially achieved through the summary judgment which states that Wheeler Sears is liable to FNB for the principal amount of $170,000 with interest to the date of maturity (Dec. 16, 1986) in the amount of $8,390.55

Union Trust Company was found liable for the principal amount of $250,000 with interest to the date of maturity of $12,339.01 and for attorneys fees of $25,000.

Finally, Wheeler Sears, Ivan B. Yarger and Raleigh S. Usry, trustees of the Cimarron Corp., were found liable for the principal amount of $599,431.92 with contract interest of $29,585.17 and attorney's fees of $59,943.19. Interest after the date of maturity on the loans was set at 18 percent per annum in all three findings.

Gulley ordered a trial on remaining issues listed in the suit.

Jessica goes home

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Jessica McClure coasted out of the hospital in a little green wagon, but doctors say the toddler who captivated the nation's heart in a dramatic rescue should bear few scars from her 58½-hour ordeal inside an abandoned well.

The 19-month-old girl left Midland Memorial Hospital Friday after a 35-day stay and several bouts with surgery, hobbling upright briefly despite her cast to show the crowd of more than 40 people she can walk.

Her father, Chip McClure, wished onlookers a happy Thanksgiving and added, "we know we'll have one. Thanks to the grace of God and some heroic men, we've got our baby back."

Shortly after being pulled from the backyard well Oct. 16, doctors feared she would lose her right foot due to circulation problems. But all that had to be removed was some dead skin and her right little toe.

"Her long-term prognosis is excellent at this point," Dr. Shelton

Viney said. "She's a young child, and she ought to be able to walk without any kind of noticeable limp."

Viney last week grafted skin from the girl's thigh onto her right foot, which was wedged in an awkward position inside the well. Doctors removed the toe on Nov. 4.

Jessica, who is wearing a cast on her right foot, will have scars on her thigh and foot, and a scar from the pressure wound on her forehead may require plastic surgery in 10 years or so, he said.

"I don't think she'll be in shoes for a while, probably three or four months. Provided everything goes as it has, she won't have to have too much out-patient physical therapy," he said.

"She's walking a lot more now than what we really anticipated," said Viney, adding the cast will stay on for another two or three weeks.

"In fact, we'd like her to stay off her foot a little more than what she wants, because we don't want it to get too swollen."

Doctors said Jessica's courageous and lively spirit aided her recuperation.

"The little girl has a fairly active, aggressive personality," Viney said.

"She's been feisty since day three," said Dr. Debbie Reese.

Jessica rode a green toy wagon down the ramp of the hospital and clutched a Winnie-the-Pooh stuffed animal. Her mother, Cissy McClure, then lifted her out so she could walk toward a forest of television cameras in front of the hospital.

McClure said the family was looking forward to spending the holiday with their family, but their exact whereabouts after leaving the hospital were not known.

Mrs. McClure's mother, Reba Wilborn, said the family was with friends "and they'll be spending the holidays out of town" with family members.

Wearing a black satin jacket bearing the name and seal of the Midland Police Department, Jessica waved from her car seat as the family drove away from the hospital.

Rescuers pulled Jessica, who was wedged 22 feet deep in a 18-inch pipe, from the well after digging through solid rock. Her rescue was televised nationally, and she was rushed immediately to the hospital.

The bill for Jessica's hospital stay added up to about $50,000, but "she's walking out of here with a zero balance because of the generosity of Midlanders," said hospital president Ray Branson.

Branson said the bills were paid by donors who earmarked their contributions specifically for that purpose. A separate trust fund has also been set up by the McClures, who have said they plan to use the donated money for Jessica's education.

Texas Commerce Bank of Midland, which is administering the fund, would not disclose the amount of money in the fund.

Clements slow to fill vacancies

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly a year after the state's consumer attorney in utility rate cases resigned, Gov. Bill Clements has yet to name a replacement for the post he once considered abolishing.

The state's Office of Public Utility

Counsel, established to represent consumers in utility rate proceedings, has been operating without a permanent director since Counsel Jim Boyle resigned in November 1986 after Clements' election as governor.

In addition, Clements apparently has been in no hurry to hire a new public counsel to represent consumers before the State Board of Insurance. The Legislature authorized the office to open Sept. 1, but no appointment has been made.

James Huffines, Clements' appointments secretary, said he was still interviewing candidates for public utility counsel and hoped the governor would make the appointment by year's end.

"It is a top priority for us, and we are in the process of interviewing prospective candidates right now," Huffines said Friday. He added that finding a replacement for Boyle has been difficult because of a lack of interest in the $60,976-a-year job.

"We have not had a lot of nominations, and it is not an easy position to recruit candidates for," he said. "As soon as we find the right person who will serve the state well, we will make the appointment."

But two state senators who have been active in utility matters said the governor's failure to fill the position shows he is insensitive to the residential and small business utility customers the attorney is supposed to represent.

"I am afraid it reflects his lack of concern for consumers, not only residential customers, but also the many small businesses across the state which are represented by the office," said Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville.

"The Legislature has authorized funding for the office, and I think the governor has an obligation to see that the office is permanently filled. It is essential that we have a strong and secure person in that position. Otherwise, the folks back home don't have their voices heard."

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, told the Dallas Morning News that the Legislature was serious when it directed the governor to appoint public counsels for utility and insurance matters.

"We passed a statute that says he must do it," Caperton said. "I hope the governor has enough respect for this branch of government to honor our policy-making prerogatives by making these two appointments soon."

Boyle, who is now in private law practice, said the acting head of the office, Geoffrey Gay, has been doing "a very good job" even though he could be replaced any day.

Rally planned for damaged chemical plant

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — A state disaster response team toured parts of a chemical plant damaged by twin explosions, while community leaders planned a rally for the company, which said the facility has an uncertain future.

Hoechst Celanese Corp. officials told workers they were optimistic the sprawling plant could be rebuilt following the blasts last weekend, but the process could take a long time.

Nearly 400 Hoechst Celanese employees were told it may be four to six weeks before company executives decide the future of the damaged Pampa plant.

"This is my estimate. This is not a Dallas estimate," said plant manager Ron Guard after the closed-door meeting Friday, referring to Dallas-based Celanese Corp.

Two people remained hospitalized Friday as a result of the blasts that rocked the plant Nov. 14. The explosions at the complex, six miles west of Pampa, killed three men and injured 37 people.

Two representatives of the state's Rapid Response Team and the Texas Department of Commerce arrived in Pampa Friday to assist with the needs of the community and the company and to make recommendations to local officials.

"Our mission is to assess the immediate needs and concerns of the Pampa community and to make recommendations of the state assistance and program resources which should be applied to this situation," said Andres Tijerina, manager of the department's workforce readjustment division.

Gov. Bill Clements and other state leaders have been invited to a Celanese rally, scheduled for 2 p.m. Dec. 3 at Pampa High School's Harvester Field. Organizers of the two-hour rally planned to sell T-shirts, while high school students were making buttons that read, "Pampa Loves Celanese."

Organizers said they planned to send notices to every home and business in the West Texas community of about 23,000 in advance of the rally for Pampa's largest private employer.

Residents of area communities will also be invited to participate in the rally.

"Celanese is a neighbor to us — just like a friend," said Pampa Mayor David McDaniel. "All of us are hurting a little ... we had a friend injured."

McDaniel said the rally idea originated in the school system, where students have been working on sympathy cards to send to those most affected by the disaster.

About 50 civic leaders attended a planning session in the school board chamber for the rally. They said stores and other businesses would close during the rally and schools would release students early for activities.

Although Celanese employees will remain on the payroll pending a decision whether to rebuild the plant, nearly 200 contract laborers were laid off as a result of the disaster.

Most of them were employed by Arthur Bros., the largest contractor at the chemical plant.

Rally proceeds will be placed in a Christmas fund, suggested by Guard for Arthur Bros. and other laid-off contract employees.

U.N. can't meet December payroll

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — United Nations employees were told not to expect their December salaries, partly because the world body's largest contributor, the United States, owes $342.8 million.

In a statement Friday to worried U.N. employees gathered in the General Assembly for the annual Staff Day, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said: "All reserves have been depleted."

"I tell you very honestly that as of today, there are not sufficient funds to pay salaries in December. But I assure you that I and my colleagues are determined to ensure the United Nations will not be closing down next month."

He said the United States, which normally contributes about a fourth of the U.N. budget, owes $342.8 million in unpaid assessments for 1987 and previous years. Dues owed by other members total $113.6 million, he said.

Perez de Cuellar implied the U.S. Congress and Reagan administration may help rescue the U.N. from its financial crisis when he said: "We expect to hear from them very shortly."

Last Nov. 21, the United States

paid $100 million in U.N. dues, providing critically needed funds at the last minute. But Washington's efforts to reduce the federal budget deficit could make such a rescue unlikely this time.

In another development at the United Nations, Angola on Friday asked an emergency meeting of the Security Council to demand the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of South African troops from its territory.

"It is clear that the racist regime of South Africa is seeking the political destabilization of my country," said Deputy Foreign Minister Venancio De Moura.

Last week, South Africa acknowledged it sent troops into Angola to help rebels battling the Marxist government and some 37,000 Cuban military personnel in the country.

South African law and custom is dominated by apartheid, which establishes a racially segregated society in which the 25.6 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

"The large financial investment in the one place which must be written off if failure is admitted;

"The lack of assurance that a second site will not be a similar failure due to the absence of adequate comparative data;

"The reluctance to re-open a political debate on a subject which is, and will remain, highly controversial;

"The fear on the part of the nuclear establishment that an admission of serious problems at one site will call into question its competence to select another.

According to the study, the most serious pressure to go with a site, even though it may be seriously defective, comes from political considerations.

Simply put, nobody wants the repository. In the final vote on Johnston's amendment, the measure passed 89-6—only three senators from non-candidate states voted against the measure. Other legislation has had similar votes—states that aren't candidates aren't going to help prevent repositories from being located at one of the potential briny water that laid underground.

The freezing technique failed, according to the study, because of the high concentration of salt around the shaft—an unexpected event.

Also unexpected, and still unexplained, were the sinking, by 16 meters, of the groundwater level in the area; ice columns, followed by several cubic meters of brine, flowed through the shaft; stones began falling out of the shaft, injuring a worker; and a temperature rise in the "frozen" shaft from -17 degrees C to -7 degrees C.

The West German mining company had a solution to the problems—secure the wall with steel reinforcement rings.

The rings failed, fatally. A shaft worker was killed and three others were injured when one of the rings slipped from the shaft wall.

The rings moved, according to the study, because the freezing attempt had turned the subterranean rock and clay into "something like soft soap."

West German engineers are contemplating plans to correct mistakes made at Gorleben. they plan to continue characterization work at the site.

American lessons

The study indicates many lessons the U.S. could learn from the West German program, and the work at Gorleben. The lessons could become even more important if the Johnston bill, which would allow only one site at a time to be characterized until a suitable site is located, becomes law.

"A sequential process creates tremendous pressure to continue on with the first site that is investigated," the study says, "despite serious problems that may be found with it. The large expenditures of funds and the immense institutional momentum and commitment of the process are responsible for such pressure."

Other pressures, according to the study, could come from:

—The desire of the nuclear power industry to get rid of the accumulating spent fuel at reactor sites;

sites, and they'll support legislation to keep the candidates where they are, out of their states.

The study says:

"The sequential characterization which is now being proposed for the three sites ... is a process which may well result in a failure to find a suitable site. The technical requirements of a repository are quite stringent, if we are to provide future generations with reasonable assurance that the wastes will be isolated from the human environment for extremely long periods.

"Each one of the three sites ... has potential problems which are so basic that they could result in the disqualification of the site.

"... If sequential characterization is chosen, it will have prolonged the search for a solution to the deadly problem of long-term management of radioactive wastes.

"Sequential characterization is a tool of political expediency. History shows that approaches which are short on technical integrity and long on political expediency have repeatedly failed."

unable to cope with change, saying that, when beset by difficulties, they "again resort to old methods to check the manifestations of some negative tendencies by issuing strings of orders."

"But now such methods won't do," the Soviet leader said.

In the past, economic managers executed orders handed down by Moscow, and were subservient to local party bureaucrats.

Reforms have raised new questions about the role of the 19-million-member Soviet Communist Party, which holds a monopoly on political power.

"I am not sure that we now clearly see all the details of future work," Gorbachev said. "I am not sure, since everything is only clear to the one who is not going to change anything and who thus continues working as he worked before."

Gorbachev warns opposition

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist officials who oppose or only timidly support the nation's drive for more openness and efficiency in industry and society could be expelled from the party, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said.

"If you become convinced that a person does not accept new things, rejects democratization and the new economic mechanism, it is necessary to part company with him, and decisively so," he told a Central Committee meeting Friday.

Gorbachev said his drive for change had entered its second stage, from the formulation of reform policies to their implementation nationwide, and that Communists now face new challenges. The meeting was called to discuss the party's role in that implementation.

It was not a plenary session of the policy-making body, and several top officials were absent.

Gorbachev said the changing conditions in Soviet life could lead to ideological clashes, but said they were normal.

"Once democratization is brought into play and the potential of the people has been geared to all the processes of reconstruction, matters cannot be conducted in the old way," Gorbachev said.

His comments appeared to be a warning to Communists not to slow down the Kremlin's program of "perestroika," or restructuring, because of the firing of Moscow's party boss, Boris N. Yeltsin.

Yeltsin, 56, a protege of Gorbachev, was fired from his party post Nov. 11. At the time, Gorbachev accused Yeltsin of putting personal ambitions before party duties and of expressing radical rhetoric.

Gorbachev has often criticized party members for not energetically endorsing his program. On Friday, he seemed to map a middle course, condemning both "pseudo-revolutionary" attitudes and the cocksureness of conservatives.

In an apparent reference to Yeltsin, Gorbachev condemned "artificial avant-gardism" and excessive ambition. He also told top party officials they must abandon their old habit of issuing "strings of orders."

Gorbachev said Communists could lose their party cards even for being too timid in supporting the drive for more openness and efficiency.

In remarks reported later by the official Tass news agency, Gorbachev said Communists need to find new ways of leading the country under economic changes that make local factory and business bosses more independent.

He criticized some party bodies as

Guest Editorials

By The Associated Press
Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state:

The Prison Summit

Gov. Clements last week said he would hold a "corrections summit" after Thanksgiving with prison officials and Dallas, Harris and Tarrant County officials to discuss problems stemming from prison overcrowding.

... Texas is caught between the remorseless rules of mathematics and the federal courts. The TDC quota system allows for the admission of 750 new prisoners each week. So why not boost the quota? Under federally mandated prison reforms, the TDC cannot exceed its rated capacity, or it runs the risk of subjecting the state to massive fines.

The counties, of course, are involved because prisoners who would otherwise be in TDC facilities are being kept in county lockups — at county expense. ...

... All of this is more than a little unsettling... It also bolsters the case for alternative sentencing — to include restitution centers and work-release programs — for non-violent offenders. At this juncture, Texas can't afford to dismiss any reasonable options out of hand.

Wright's Initiative

Confused and lacking initiative, the Reagan White House is making too much of Speaker Jim Wright's involvement in the Central American peace process.

Wright has not interfered. ... The administration should be doing what Wright is doing, but it isn't.

... One day last week, he met with Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo — who has offered to act as an intermediary between the Sandinista regime and the contras — with Secretary of State George Schultz and then with contra leaders.

... Wright has helped to bring Ortega and Obando together to get the negotiation process started.

... If the Reagan administration were more willing to help that process along, it would not find itself jealously criticizing those who are making a good-faith effort to do so.

Why So Many Caesareans

More than 900,000 American women gave birth last year by Caesarean section. Only about half that number should have.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Public Citizen Health Research Group, affiliated with consumer advocate Ralph Nader, found that 24 percent of all births in 1986 occurred by Caesarean surgery, four times the proportion in 1970.

Has this unnecessary increase come because physicians are greedy for the higher fees brought by the operation? That cynical explanation does not fit the facts: It is hardly plausible that some doctors have become that much greedier since 1970.

A more likely theory is that obstetricians are more afraid of being sued for malpractice. Ironically, the litigious climate encouraged by Nader's groups seems to have fed the very problem that one of them now deplors.

Mattox And The Treasurers

A number of county treasurers in Texas were understandably upset over the timing of an Attorney General Jim Mattox campaign solicitation a few days ago.

The solicitation for money and political support from county treasurers came just days after Mattox told treasurers a legal opinion that could erode their powers was pending before him, news reports said.

... Even if it was a coincidence as Mattox campaign spokesmen claim, it was very poor timing and it is certainly easy to understand why some of the treasurers were offended.

... All elected officials ought to exercise great care to keep the conduct of official duties totally separate from political activities. Just a hint of the use of official power to further political interest ought to be objectionable to all citizens.

An Interest In Horses

Horse race betting is back in Texas on a local option basis. But since it's unlikely that a race track will be built near Wichita Falls, no local option election is expected here.

That doesn't mean we should have no interest in racing. The horse business, which has fallen on bad times recently, nevertheless is and will continue to be of economic importance. And the more racing that occurs in Texas, the stronger the horse breeding and training business will be.

So the old political saying that North Texas "didn't have a dog in that fight" isn't true at all. A strong horse industry means economic progress, and the more racing, the more important the horse business is likely to become. ...

Bootleg

Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek discovers something about international finance this week.

Dear editor:

According to an article I read a while back between Supreme Court nominations, Japan, Germany and England are all demanding that the United States put the financial affairs in order and reduce the deficit.

Now what business is it, I thought, of theirs how we run our government? Let them take care of their own problems.

Then I read something else, I guess it was along about the time of the second Supreme Court nomination, or maybe the third.

It reported that the United States is now the world's greatest debtor nation, deeper in foreign debt than Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, and, for all I know, Mongolia and Chad.

We owe 263 billion to foreign countries, and that of course doesn't count the $3 trillion the U.S. government is in debt to its own citizens. You borrow 6 or 7 billion every Monday morning as the U.S. has been doing for the last 5 or 6 years and you're no better off than the guy with five or six used-up credit cards.

So it dawned on me, I can understand why Japan and Germany and England are demanding that the U.S. start getting back on safe financial ground. It's their money we're operating on.

I don't expect it will come to that, but could a country file for bankruptcy under Chapter Eleven?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

The Penultimate Word

HOW TO BE BROKE AND HUNGRY

The best way I know to end up broke and hungry is to dine in a gourmet restaurant. I was a guest in a gourmet restaurant in Los Angeles last week. I could not read a single word on the menu. I finally found an item that seemed to have shrimp in it and placed my order. The waiter asked if I knew the item was an appetizer. I acted like I was well aware of that fact and told the folks at the table I was not hungry and usually ate light in the evening. I was hungry and do not eat light in the evening but the entree cost twelve dollars and I assumed anything that cost twelve dollars would feed an army.

To save face I ordered a salad. What ever happened to lettuce? They brought out a plate that looked like it was full of the stuff you get when you weed the yard. It was hairy and full of the end pieces of some plant. I ate the two tomato halves, and sort of grazed around on the weeds.

They brought my meal and I still do not know what it was. If it was an appetizer it must have been designed to whet my appetite for gravy train. It was some kind of pasta with a little piece of something in the middle. The something was supposed to be shrimp but you could not prove it by me. The whole thing was covered with a white sauce that tasted like gravy made by a brand new bride.

I noticed the entrees brought to the rest of the party. One person ordered veal. They brought it out covered with a silver dome like in the movies. When they removed the dome there were three little pieces of meat about the size of a silver dollar, three green beans laid out with care, and two carrot slivers placed just so on the plate. If mine cost twelve dollars I could only imagine what this magnificent repast set the guy back.

We ate and talked about how wonderful the food was, then we paid a bill the size of the national debt, and left hungry. As soon as the party left I ran to a hamburger joint to get some food.

I invited the group to come to Hereford some day so I could take them to one of our gourmet restaurants. I think I will take them out to Westway on a Friday. The setting is early leftover kitchen dinettes. They do not have to make the place look old, it is old. But they bring out a plate full of real food. The potatoes started the morning as potatoes with peeling on them. The gravy is thick enough to float a steak. And the whole thing is topped off by a chicken fried steak, the kind of food God intended for people to eat. The shock may get them.

Nonsense on low-paying jobs

By Richard L. Lesher,
President

WASHINGTON — "Fifty percent of the new jobs being created under Reagan are menial, dead-end jobs paying $7,400 or less per year," said Rep. Richard Gephardt in a recent presidential debate. "We're trading good manufacturing jobs for low-pay service jobs."

With all due respect to Rep. Gephardt, I'm getting a bit weary of listening to that nonsense. It's based upon a report produced by the AFL-CIO last December which purports to show that nearly 60 percent of all new jobs created between 1979 and 1984 were "low-pay."

Well, figures don't lie but liars will figure and the AFL-CIO report was absurd in the extreme. It was produced with only one thought in mind—to create political support for protectionist trade legislation.

In fact, the AFL-CIO data do not support its own conclusions. The U.S. Department of Labor examined the data base used for the AFL-CIO report. It showed that since 1981, nearly 47 percent of all new jobs were "Managerial and Professional", the highest pay category and only a minuscule 7 percent were in the low-pay sector.

And in more recent months, the picture looks even brighter than that. From July 1986 through July 1987, a full 59 percent of all new jobs created were in the high pay category.

So why is the AFL-CIO orchestrating this disinformation campaign? The reason is simple. The country is not losing high-paying jobs, but the unions are. The backbone of union strength has always been in manufacturing and in that sector, sure enough, some high-paying jobs are disappearing. The unions hold foreign competition responsible for this trend and want Congress to impose trade barriers which presumably would protect manufacturing jobs — and union strength.

But it would never work. Congress could not protect those jobs even if it were inclined to try. It is changing technology more than foreign competition that is eroding employment in manufacturing. Quite simply, we have entered a post-industrial age in which the value of manual labor is headed inexorably downward.

Nor should this phenomenon be a cause of anxiety. To the contrary, the services industries derided by the unions are on the cutting edge of advances in science and technology, leading the way to a higher standard of living for all of us. Indeed, that is why such an astoundingly high proportion of new jobs being created today are high pay.

The loss of manufacturing jobs is not a sign of an economy in decline. Rather, it is a harbinger of good things to come, a positive indicator that our country is in the forefront of progress, as is Japan, which is also exporting manufacturing jobs overseas to South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore and Hong Kong.

The myth about low-paying jobs is a pathetic lie concocted to invoke protectionism in a futile effort to stave off progress. Like the Luddites of 19th century Britain who destroyed industrial machines, the unions want to preserve the status quo. We dare not permit them to succeed.

We are creating millions of jobs—good jobs—because we are ahead of the progress curve. We can and must stay there.

YOUR EYES

GLAUCOMA
 Q. Does a decrease in side vision indicate the onset of glaucoma?
 A. There are many reasons for a decrease in side or peripheral vision. Although it is true that uncontrolled glaucoma damages the part of the eye that gives us clear side vision, it's unwise to make the assumption the condition exists without a total eye examination.

Glaucoma is a condition in which there is an increase of pressure inside the eye. This is not related to high blood pressure. But like high blood pressure, inter-ocular pressure can be controlled and damage to the eye can be avoided. And as with high blood pressure, it is best to detect and control the condition in its earliest stages.

In some types of glaucoma, there are virtually no symptoms in the early stages. Therefore, it is important for anyone over 35 to be tested for glaucoma during the regular eye examinations. Most cases of the condition are picked up during eye examinations and referred for treatment.

In Houston-Cleveland game Sunday

Kosar, Highsmith are rivals

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Miami teammates Bernie Kosar and Alonzo Highsmith will be on the same field again Sunday, but this time they'll be rivals.

Kosar and Highsmith were members of the Hurricane's 1983 national championship team and performed together in the 1984 Fiesta Bowl.

Then Kosar left to join the Cleveland Browns and will go into Sunday's divisional showdown against the Houston Oilers with a 16-6 record as the Browns starter.

Highsmith, the Oilers' No. 1 pick in the 1987 draft, was a lengthy holdout before signing a four-year contract with the Oilers after the NFL players strike ended.

He has played briefly in two games, rushing four times for 4 yards. He also fumbled in his first game as a pro.

"But he's getting better each week in every area," Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville said. "It's just a matter of time."

Highsmith hopes his time comes Sunday in the high-stakes showdown for the AFC Central Division lead. Both teams enter the noon CST kickoff with 6-3 records.

"I think it would be a good time for me to break out," Highsmith said. "I feel like I've improved each week I've been here and I'm ready to contribute."

Kosar already has contributed to the Browns' success. "The experience I've had has really helped me," Kosar said. "When I came here three years ago there were a lot of other younger guys. They've also matured over the years."

In four games against the Oilers, Kosar has completed 49 of 114 passes for six touchdowns and four interceptions.

Kosar has thrown a touchdown pass in 11 straight games, including last week when he completed 24 of 36 passes for 346 yards and two touchdowns in a 27-21 victory over Buffalo.

Kosar said the Oilers defense will give the Browns another severe challenge.

"The biggest thing about them (Oilers) is there are a real quick and aggressive team that likes to come after you," Kosar said. "They have 11 players who know their assignments and are coming after the football."

Kosar is the third-ranked quarterback in the AFC with a 93.6 rating. He's completed 125 of 197 passes for 1,547 yards, 11 touchdowns and six interceptions.

"You can't say too much about Bernie, he's the greatest," Highsmith said. "I think he and (Oiler starter) Warren (Moon) are tribute."

very similar."

And Kosar hasn't forgotten his former backfield mate. "Alonzo is without a doubt the surest and best pick in last year's draft," Kosar said. "He will be a great player for a long time in this league. He has all the tools. He can run, block and catch."

Pelluer gets his first start at quarterback this year for the Dallas Cowboys Sunday night against the Miami Dolphins, and he hopes his confidence doesn't vanish.

"I'm ready for my shot," Pelluer said. "I haven't been tested, and the thing is to just go in there and do it when I get the call."

The Cowboys have decided to start Pelluer and hope he can do the job while they rest Danny White's sore wrist. Pelluer worked with the Cowboys' first team this week preparing for the nationally televised (ESPN) meeting with the Dolphins.

He hasn't thrown a pass this year, but "I'm confident I can handle the job, although I'll probably be a little rusty," Pelluer said.

Pelluer's start won't hurt White's feelings, although White admits "it might be a little hard to accept that I'm no longer the starter."

"I know my inconsistent performance hurts the team," he said. "I just can't do some things physically that I could do in the past. Maybe a week's rest would help me. I'm not sure."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said he might use White in a relief role.

The oddsmakers also have been uncertain, finally settling on Dallas as a two-point favorite. Dallas is 5-4 in the NFC East, and the Dolphins are 4-5 in the AFC East.

Dallas and Miami haven't met in a first-round draft pick in the 1986 National Football League draft, tackle Mike Schud, played for Queen's University in Canada, and was the first Canadian ever chosen in the opening round.

The first round of the 1986 National Football League draft took 4 hours, 13 minutes, the second longest in its history.

In a game against New Mexico State in 1969, Dennis Shaw of San Diego State threw nine touchdown passes for an NCAA record.

San Diego paid only $22,633 after not paying any such bonus money for two straight seasons. Philadelphia offered $350,000 and paid it all, some to Cy Young winner Steve Bedrosian.

Players with between two and three years' experience in the majors earned an average of $189,391, down from $243,000 the previous season. Those with nine to 10 years' time increased from $777,000 to $877,193.

With 'missile launchers' Free, Short

Rockets have new look

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

By acquiring World B. Free and Purvis Short, the Houston Rockets appear to be trying to live up to their name.

In a combined 21 NBA seasons, during which their teams made the playoffs a total of five times, Free and Short earned a reputation for launching missiles from anywhere on the court.

"Let's face it, if a team is dropping off Short or Free in order to put double coverage on our big people, their chances of burning you are pretty good," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said. "I don't think either one of them will pass up an open shot."

Last season, Houston's three most prominent guards — Robert Reid, Allen Leavell and Steve Harris — all shot worse than 42 percent from the field.

So the Rockets' reasoning in picking up a pair of veteran outside shooters is simple. They needed shooters who could draw attention away from the Twin Towers, Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson.

"I think both Free and Short have been misrepresented as only shooters, but they can help us even if all they can do is shoot because they're on the right ballclub for that," Fitch said. "Our big people get so much attention inside that they need somebody to take up the slack outside."

Free, who will be 34 on Dec. 9 and has little hair left on the top of his head, likes the idea of defenses keying on someone else. In the past, his legs-apart jumper most often has been taken with a hand in his face.

"It's easier when you're got those Twin Towers under there," said

Free, who averaged 21.4 points per game in the first 12 years of his career. "They double-team those two all the time and all I have to do is stand there and wait for them to do it."

Free, who played only 20 games for Philadelphia last season, has been effective early in the season, especially in the fourth quarter.

On Nov. 12 against Sacramento, the Rockets trailed 95-79 in the fourth period, but Free scored 19 of his 37 points in the final quarter as Houston rallied to win 116-114.

"It was one of those nights when everything went in," said Free, who was 15-for-21 from the field against the Kings. "There was nothing I could do about it."

Free also scored 10 of his 19 points in the fourth period in a 108-106 victory over Seattle on Nov. 15 and eight of his 16 points in the fourth quarter of a 118-111 win at Portland on Nov. 10.

Fitch projected Free as playing 18-20 minutes per game, but he has done so well that he is averaging 27 minutes and 16.4 points.

Free has been far from perfect, however. Two nights after his 37-point performance at Sacramento, he went 1-for-11 from the field against Utah.

"He got 37 because when he got it going, he got a lot of minutes, and when he went 1-for-11 he didn't get a lot of minutes," Fitch said. "I control that and that's the way I see his role — when he gets it going, he'll be out there. He's not the guy the club is built around, but he can be a very important ingredient in terms of the team moving up another notch."

Short, who averaged 19.4 points (with a high of 28.0 in 1984-85) in nine years with Golden State, was acquired by Houston just before the season started and hasn't found a niche with the Rockets. He averaged only 12 minutes and four points in Houston's first seven games.

"A lot of players look forward to getting with a team with a chance to go all the way," said Short, who played eight years with Golden State before making the playoffs with the Warriors last season. "With the Warriors, we were just worried about getting to the playoffs every year."

"On the Rockets, I want to fit in any way I can. I'm still learning the plays and learning the players. It will all come together."

"Purvis joined us so late that he hasn't found a role, but we're playing him at guard and forward to see how it takes shape," Fitch said. "He could very well take over the starting guard spot, with World coming off the bench."

Free said that arrangement would be fine with him.

"It doesn't matter to me anymore," Free said. "You have your day to start and when your day to start is over, you don't start anymore. It's sort of like a Vinnie Johnson-Fred Brown role. It's a good feeling to know when you're coming in and what the coach expects from you."

Sampson, averaging nearly 20 points per game, said he was happy to have Free and Short on the team.

"We got that kind of outside shooting from Lewis Lloyd when we went to the championship, but we haven't had it since," Sampson said. "It's a little early to see how things will change, but once we get in synch, it should be a lot of fun to see how they'll do."

Pelluer gets start

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Steve Pelluer gets his first start at quarterback this year for the Dallas Cowboys Sunday night against the Miami Dolphins, and he hopes his confidence doesn't vanish.

Half of major league teams had payroll reductions

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Half of the major league teams had payroll reductions last season while the World Series champion Minnesota Twins showed the sharpest increase, according to documents prepared by club owners.

Figures released by the Player Relations Committee to teams showed the New York Yankees with the highest team total at $18.5 million and Seattle lowest at $5.6 million. Atlanta was second-highest at $14.4 million with Los Angeles and the New York Mets also over $14 million.

The Twins, who already have raised ticket prices for 1988 in anticipation of bigger salaries, saw their payroll rise nearly $3.5 million to $13.3 million. World Series MVP Frank Viola and Kirby Puckett are eligible for salary arbitration and playoff MVP Gary Gaetti has filed for free agency.

Both Oakland and St. Louis paid about $2.3 million more in 1987 than in 1986.

The Chicago Cubs, having unloaded high-priced Ron Cey, Dennis Eckersley, Steve Trout and Gary Matthews last season, reflected the biggest savings, cutting about $4 million to just under $13 million. Atlanta, Boston and Cincinnati also trimmed more than $3 million.

Pittsburgh paid nearly as much to players on its roster as it did to players whose contracts were bought out. The Pirates' active payroll was $4 million; they spent an additional $3.5 million on players such as Steve Kemp, Jason Thompson, Sixto Lezcano and Johnnie LeMaster, all of whom were released.

Los Angeles paid $2.2 million in termination costs and the Yankees, Minnesota and Toronto each paid more than $1.5 million. Detroit, for the second straight season, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Texas and the Mets were the only teams that did not have

NEW TEST FOR AIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Blood banks, hospitals, health centers and physicians have been given a new tool to test patients for AIDS. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has approved an investigative new drug status for Fluorognost, an advanced AIDS confirmation test, according to Thermascan Inc., developer of the new checkup system.

Some 10,000 of the tests will be conducted at New York's Beth Israel Medical Center, the Sacramento Medical Foundation Blood Center, the Karolinska Institute, Stockholm, and the Institute of Hygiene, University of Innsbruck.

Fluorognost detects antibodies in one or two weeks after infection, compared with six weeks or more with current confirmation tests, says Detlev Baur-Krey, Thermascan president.

In The First Place...

"The battered women's movement is really helping victims all over the world," said Julian Thompson, Director of the Hereford Outreach Office for Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence.

Rape and domestic violence are the two most unreported crimes in America. FBI statistics show that half of all marriages will experience some kind of domestic violence, yet only 10% call the police. A rape occurs every six minutes, but only 1 in 10 is reported.

Since May 1, the Hereford Outreach Office has been assisting victims on a 24-hour basis.

Emergency overnight shelters are available as well as guidance through the criminal justice system. "I really enjoy helping these people."

Here at the First National Bank we welcome Julian and the services of Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence. Thanks for making a difference.

Farm and Ranch

Less acres, but still big '87 corn crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's farmers scaled back their corn acreage this year, but high per-acre yields and generally good weather have sent Agriculture Department statisticians looking through the record books anyway.

The 1987 corn harvest was practically history by Nov. 1, when many farmers in the Midwest are usually still trying to bring in the crop, the Agricultural Statistics Board said Monday.

Midwestern farmers frequently face muddy fields and freezing rain this time of year, delaying the harvest. But an estimated 93 percent of this fall's corn acreage was harvested as of Nov. 1 this year, far ahead of the year-ago pace of 61 percent.

Even over the longer haul, only 63 percent of the corn is normally harvested by now.

Corn production is estimated at nearly 7.17 billion bushels, slightly more than forecast a month ago but still down 13 percent from the 1986 harvest of 8.25 billion bushels. Farmers cut back to about 59.6 million acres from 69.2 million acres a year ago.

A major reason for the acreage cutback was participation in government programs in which farmers agreed to idle part of their cropland in return for price supports and direct payments. In all, farmers signed up to take 54.4 million acres from crop production this year, including corn, wheat, rice and cotton.

In addition, farmers so far have agreed to idle almost 23 million acres of marginal, highly erodible land for 10 years.

Corn output this year is the smallest since 1983, when drought and government acreage programs reduced production to 4.18 billion bushels. The record output was 8.89 billion bushels in 1985.

But corn inventories will remain huge for at least the coming year, despite some decline in the national stockpile expected because of increased use, including larger shipments to overseas buyers.

"The U.S. average yield per acre is forecast at a record high 120.3 bushels, up 0.4 of a bushel from the Oct. 1 forecast," the board said in its report. "The previous record was 119.3 bushels set in 1986. Record yields are forecast for Indiana, Minnesota and Nebraska."

Officials said the "all crops" production index as of Nov. 1 averaged 107 percent of the base year of 1977, up a percentage point from October and just one point shy of the 1986 reading.

The index reached a record high of 117 percent in 1981 and 1982 before dropping to a decade low of 88 percent in 1983, when drought and government acreage cutbacks reduced production. It rose to 111 percent in 1984 and matched the record of 117 percent in 1985.

Soybean production was estimated at 1.96 billion bushels, down fractionally from the October forecast but up from the 1986 harvest of 1.94 billion bushels. The record was 2.26 billion bushels in 1979.

The cotton harvest, based on Nov. 1 indications, was estimated at 13.9 million bales, up 4 percent from last month's forecast and 43 percent more than the 1986 harvest of 9.73 million bales. The record was 18.95 million bales in 1937.

With the harvest of 1987 crops winding down, no new production figures were included for many earlier commodities such as wheat, oats and barley.

According to USDA economists, net cash income of farmers this year may be in the range of $54 billion to $58 billion, up from last year's record of $52 billion. Net cash income is the difference between cash receipts and cash expenses.

Consumer food prices overall are expected to average about 4 percent higher this year, compared with a 3.2 percent gain in 1986. That would be the largest annual increase since 1982, when there was also a 4 percent increase. Even so, that is only about half of the yearly food price increases in 1980 and 1981.

In a related report, the USDA said corn prices at the farm may average $1.60 to $1.90 per bushel in the marketing year that began Sept. 1, compared with $1.50 in 1986-87. That forecast was unchanged from October.

The "supply and demand" report showed that the smaller 1987 corn harvest will not keep pace with expected usage of 7.73 billion bushels — an increase of 100 million bushels from October — in the coming year.

Thus, the total stockpile of corn carryover next Sept. 1 may decline to around 4.325 billion bushels from 4.882 billion bushels on hand this Sept. 1.

Soybean prices paid to farmers were projected at $4.85 to $5.35 per bushel in the 1987-88 marketing year, 10 cents more than indicated last month and above the 1986-87 average of $4.80 per bushel.

Other crops in the November production report included:

—Sorghum, 740.6 million bushels and 70.5 bushels per acre, compared with 941.6 million and 67.7 last year.

—Rice, 129.4 million hundredweight and 5,547 pounds per acre, compared with 134.4 million and 5,648 last year.

—Peanuts, 3,579 billion pounds and 2,359 pounds per acre, compared with 3.7 billion and 2,407 last year.

—Tobacco, 1.23 billion pounds and 2,045 pounds per acre, compared with 1.16 billion and 1,198 last year.

—Fall potatoes, 342.7 million hundredweight and 315 hundredweight per acre, compared with 317.8 million and 307 last year.

Dryer efficiency

Grain drying can use a lot of energy, but there's a scheme that can make the process more efficient.

One way to increase the efficiency of high capacity dryers is to partially dry high moisture grain and then transfer it to a separate bin for tempering and cooling, points out Richard E. Withers Jr., agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"This technique, sometimes called dryeration, has been used in corn drying for many years," notes Withers. "It's also been used in commercial rice drying by making multiple passes of the rice through a high heat dryer followed by tempering and cooling."

According to the agricultural engineer, the process uses less heat and thereby reduces the amount of energy used.

In the grain drying process, individual grain kernels lose moisture to the surroundings air if its vapor pressure is less than that of the kernel. Kernels will continue to lose moisture until the vapor pressures are equal, explains Withers.

During this tempering stage, moisture moves from inside the kernel to its surface. Then cooling removes the surface moisture and does this more efficiently than if fans had been running continuously. As the surface of the kernel dries, the internal moisture movement continues.

"Any method that will dry grain to a safe storage moisture content fast enough and take advantage of tempering and cooling will use less energy and therefore should be efficient and economical," contends Withers.

When winter approaches, cattlemen must make decisions about a winter supplement for his herd. And, there are so many things to consider such as weight, moisture, protein, and the way the product is packaged, pellets, blocks, cubes, wafers, bales or stacks. However, Wichita County Extension agent, David Finley, says there are three major factors in choosing a winter supplement. First, quality. A producer must first determine the type of supplement that will fit his operation. If cubes seem best, inspect them to see if they crumble easily. Look at the matter in the mix. Does the supplement smell good or flat? Check the ingredients and uniformity and consistency. Second, check the nutritional value in terms of crude protein energy and mineral levels. A good supplement will contain calcium, phosphorus, potassium and magnesium along with trace minerals. And, of course, third, consider the economics. Look at the cost of the supplement combined with the ease of feeding. The amount of labor required in feeding, along with freight costs, must be taken into account when the cattlemen chooses his important winter supplement.

Vernon bailout begins Texas cleanup

DALLAS (AP) — Federal regulators say Vernon Savings and Loan Association is off the sick list with a $1.3 billion bailout, and they now plan to build up its strength to attract a buyer.

"What we're trying to do is to create a saleable entity," George

Barclay, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, said Friday. "We want to take this institution and over time return it to private hands."

Under the bailout approved Thursday, the costliest such rescue in the nation's history, Vernon's 10 offices will reopen Monday as the newly created Montfort Savings Association.

The new thrift will receive $200 million in cash and a $1.1 billion note from the FSLIC, which guarantees thrift deposits up to $100,000.

Federal officials decided to restructure Vernon after determining the damage caused by former officers was beyond repair, said FHLB Board chairman M. Danny Wall.

Vernon had accumulated losses of $716.86 million by Sept. 30, and was projected to top a negative net worth of $1 billion by next year. At the end of September, it had assets of $1.17 billion and deposits of $1.4 billion.

Montfort will initially have only the insured deposits of Vernon as well as some share loans on the liability side of its ledger. The cash and notes placed on the assets side will be supplemented later with some good assets from Vernon and other FSLIC receiverships, officials said.

"This may be one of the cleanest institutions in the whole United States today," said Tom B. Scott Jr., who took over as chairman of Vernon's board earlier this year and now will chair Montfort.

Barclay and Scott said they hope to have the thrift in condition to sell within 18 months, reducing the cost of the bailout.

"We'll be doing a modest amount of lending and that modest amount will be confined to single-family dwelling and some consumer loans," said Scott, who is president of Unifirst Bank for Savings of Jackson, Miss.

Barclay said finding a buyer won't necessarily be that crucial because many prospective buyers are "bottom fishing" for Texas institutions, following the slump in the oil and real estate industries.

Friday, federal regulators staffed the phones at Vernon's north Dallas office, answering calls from depositors and assuring them the institution would reopen as usual Monday.

A group of regulators worked out of the push office that had belonged to Donald R. Dixon, who acquired Vernon in January 1982. A balcony overlooked a wooded grove and artificial lake. Dixon's presence was evident in the initials "DD" inscribed on stained glass windows set into the doors.

Under Dixon's direction, the institution increased its assets tenfold by making large, speculative development and construction loans, according to the bank board.

The FSLIC filed suit in April for $100 million against Dixon and other former officers, charging fraud and other breaches of the officers' duties.

Dixon was ousted in March when Vernon was converted from a state charter to a federal charter and a new board of directors was appointed.

Analysts said the rescue is a positive sign, but doesn't necessarily mean a cure for Texas' ailing thrifts.

"I think it was inevitable," said Stephen Skaggs, vice president of Alex Sheshunoff & Co., an Austin-based information service and bank consulting firm. He called the bailout a positive sign.

"(Vernon) was burned with an enormous level of non-performing loans when the regulators took over the institution back in March of this year. It just had very little chance for recovery given the deck of cards new management was dealt," Skaggs said.

The new management, appointed by the bank board March 20, inherited a portfolio in which 96 percent of the loans were not paying.

The Vernon rescue is the biggest ever in terms of the cost to the FSLIC, said FHLBB spokeswoman Martha Gravlee. The earlier record was the $681 million bailout in 1986 of Sunrise Savings and Loan Association of Boynton Beach, Fla.

The FHLBB characterized the bailout as a "billion-dollar first step toward tackling Texas thrift problems."

Last week, Wall announced a study aimed at solving Texas thrift problems. He indicated the FLHBB has no immediate plans to close any other large problems thrifts in Texas soon.

Frank Anderson, an analyst with Eppler Guerin & Turner in Dallas said the bailout means Montfort will be able to work at lowering deposit rates, which were raised to make the troubled thrift more attractive.

The bank board had been forced to keep many insolvent S&Ls, so-called "zombie thrifts," because its insurance fund was technically insolvent.

President Reagan in August authorized a three-year, $10.8 billion recapitalization of the FSLIC, funded by long-term bonds paid off by healthy thrift institutions.

The FHLBB, regulator of 3,200 thrifts nationwide, said Montfort will operate as a mutual association owned by depositors under management by the bank board.

When Montfort opens Monday, it will honor the same rates and terms on all certificates of deposit, officials said.

Depositors with less than $100,000 in the institution will have immediate access to their money Monday. The small number of depositors with more than that must apply for access in writing, and Ms. Gravlee said it is not known what percentage of their deposits they will be able to get back.

Vernon is the 16th association to be liquidated by the bank board so far this year, the second in Texas. Two others Texas thrifts were declared insolvent and bought out by other institutions.

Star Wars goes metric

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American public has never shown much interest in converting to the metric system, but when you're in the military you take orders.

And when it comes to "Star Wars," the order is out: the English system of weights and measures is passe; metric is in.

"All newly designed, developed and produced systems and elements that make up the Strategic Defense System shall use ... metric units as the standard language and system of measurement," Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson declared in a recent directive.

"Systems will be designed and built in metrics; as opposed to being designed in inches and pounds and converted to metrics."

Abrahamson, the three-star Air Force general who oversees the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is formally known, issued his directive earlier this month.

Abrahamson wrote in a cover memo he had "carefully considered the difficulties and opportunities which this step represents, and I realize that practically all elements of the SDI program will be affected by this decision."

The general added, however, that by embracing metrics now, the Pentagon could avoid "significant front-end costs" and "facilitate production programs" if a decision is made to build and deploy a Star Wars system.

Although use of the metric system has been legal in the United States since 1866, it was widely ignored in favor of traditional English measures like inches and pounds. The rest of the world, including England, long ago converted to the simpler metrics, in which all units are based on multiples of 10.

Burma and Brunei are now the only other nations that cling to the older English system.

Spurred by U.S. industry, which foresaw the need to change to metrics to compete in foreign markets, President Gerald Ford signed the Metric Conversion Act on Dec. 23, 1975, setting up a system for an orderly, voluntary transition.

Today, almost 12 years later, Americans buy their wine and liquor in metric containers, and their automobiles are metric. But the general public has resisted the change, and politicians have been reluctant to push the issue publicly.

The federal government has stopped posting metric highway signs, and in 1982 the U.S. Metric Board — set up five years earlier to promote the changeover — was scrapped in a cost-cutting move. The government now focuses instead on education in the schools and assisting businesses to make the conversion.

Maj. Alan Freitag, a Pentagon spokesman, said Tuesday that the SDI Organization does not expect Abrahamson's edict to result in higher costs because Star Wars is still a research program and "most laboratories long ago began working in metric."

"There is probably no up-front cost involved in doing this now," he added. "We're not building a system yet."

Even if there's no extra expense, however, Abrahamson is taking no chances on back-sliding by individuals who are more comfortable with inches and ounces than with millimeters and grams.

The only person who can grant a waiver of the new policy is ... you guessed it, Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson.

Town split over phones

OVILLA, Texas (AP) — Residents of this small town on the Dallas-Ellis county line south of Dallas find it cheaper to reach out and touch someone than to call them by telephone.

Because of a quirk in the telephone boundary lines, the town has two telephone prefixes, and it's a long-distance call from one to the other.

"We've got people on one side of the street with a 223 (prefix) number who can't call people on the other side with a 576 number without making a toll call," said Charlie Morton, an Ovilla city councilman.

Residents of Ovilla, a town of 1,550, have been working to resolve the problem, and some of them appeared Monday at a Public Utility Commission pre-hearing on the matter.

After some initial resistance, council members said, Southwestern Bell began working with the city to find an alternative. The company is now neutral on any changes, a Bell representative said.

A state examiner gave the phone company and the city until Dec. 14 to agree on a solution.

City Council already has approved a plan to set up two new, still-undesignated exchanges, only for Ovilla. The change wouldn't cost residents anything, and could take place within three to four months of PUC approval.

Under the proposal, north-side residents would still call Dallas County toll-free, and south-side customers would still call toll-free to neighboring Red Oak. Both prefixes finally could call each other toll-free.

Andrew Greeley's Rite of Spring leads the new book list this week. "Quiet Man" Brendan Ryan, is about to discover that passion can transform even the mildest man into a fierce fighter ready to defend the women he loves.

Ciara Kelly and Brendan meet on a gorgeous day. This fiery woman with a light in her eye and all of Ireland in her laugh seems to have given him a chance at life, until a force of evil gathers to shatter the spring idyll and turn it into a medley of death.

After an explosion rips Brendan's precious boat Brigid apart, two bodies are found burned beyond recognition. Brendan becomes a murder suspect, and the lovely lady and his only alibi is gone. Or did she really ever exist? Even Brendan's law partners begin to doubt his sanity.

Omamori by Richard McGill is an epic tale of a magnificent and forbidden love. This tale is an unforgettable story of two powerful families, one American, the other Japanese, whose lives are bound by the traditions of a great business dynasty.

In 1871 Andrew Napier, a young American adventurer and Fujio Hosokawa, a descendant of a once proud samurai line, come together to create Hosokawa, limited, a producer of raw silk. From ancient Hosokawa lands would come the raw silk with which to weave a fortune; from Napier's gifted hands the machines to supply a waiting world with lustrous cloth.

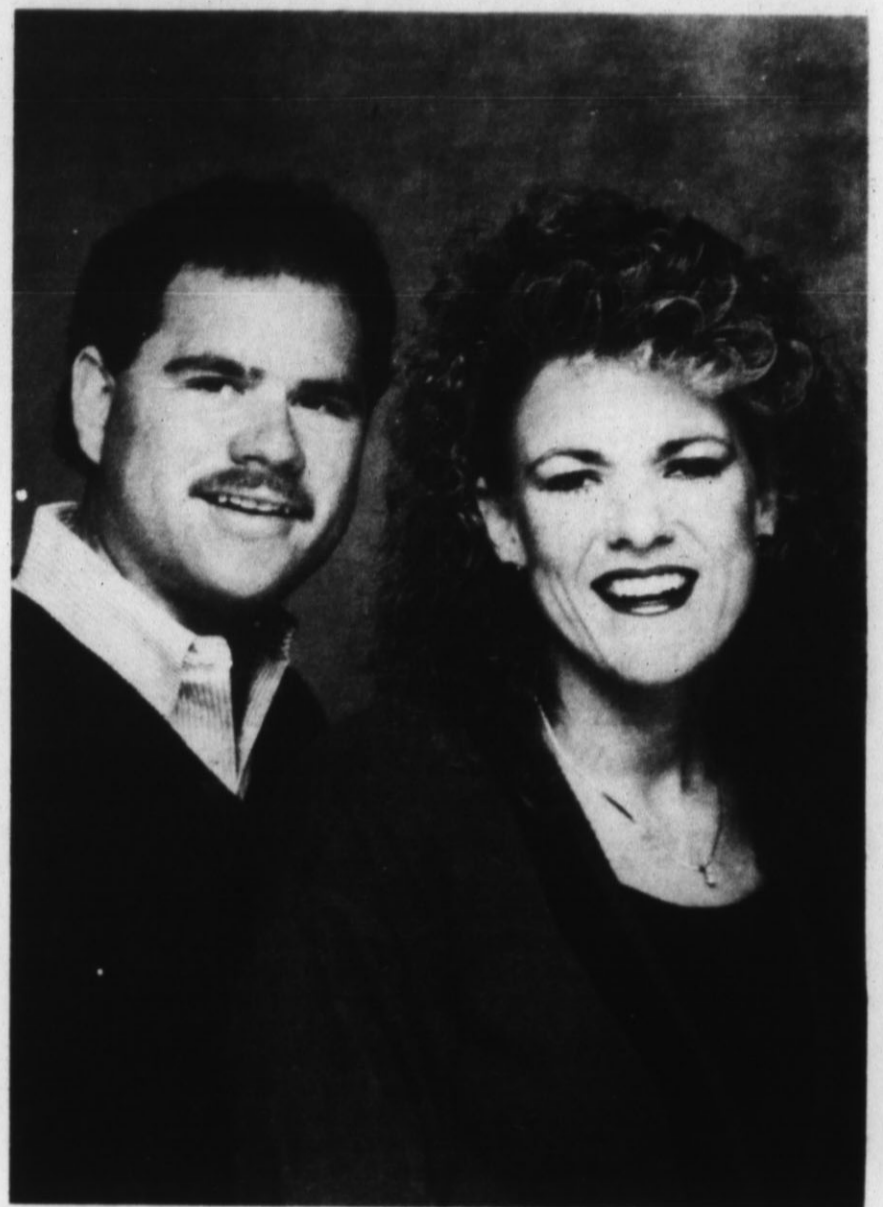

Thus two families fates become interwoven in a partnership that would flourish for three generations. In 1936 the Depression sweeps fortunes into dust and war lingers near, the looms of Hokoawa are silenced. Douglas Napier and Tadashi Hosokawa must preserve the legacy by whatever means they must. Now must they weave their silk into the weapons of war? Neither man is prepared for the devastating contents of the ancient document that forged the partnership, or for the way its dictates will change the destinies of both families. Omamori means "Keepsake" in Japanese and here is a story to be treasured.

"One Smart Cookie" by Debbie Fields is the biography of the woman who became the founder of Mrs. Fields Cookies, a multimillion-dollar company. She did it by: never spending one penny on advertising, based all her decisions on woman's intuition; giving away cookies for free; and totally ignored the experts and marketing studies. By the time Debbie was 18 she had developed the perfect chocolate chip cookie.

After marrying Randy Fields and trying to fit into his world, she struck out on her own and started a small cookie store in Palo Alto. Three years later Debbie Fields had three daughters, a happy marriage, and a multimillion-dollar international corporation listed on the Landon Stock exchange. Her philosophy of achievement is "Good enough never is" and "If you chase money you'll never catch it." This is one book I'm sure you will not want to miss.

The Library will be closed No. 26-28 for Thanksgiving.

MR. AND MRS. KENNY KLINE

Crume, Kline recite wedding vows

Staci Crume became the bride of Kenny Kline in an evening ceremony Nov. 14, at Central Church of Christ with Roy Shave officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Crume of 733 Country Club Drive and the groom is the son of Windwood Kline of Overland Park, Kan.

The church altar was softly lit by a candelabrum which was entwined with greenery and silk pink and blue flowers. A large basket of blooming Swedish ivy also adorned the altar.

Serving as maid of honor was Trevia Carroll of Hereford and best man as Chris Irwin of Galveston.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sisters, Kathy Knight of Normal, Ill. and Karen Crume of Hereford. Groomsmen were Kevin Crume, brother of the bride, and Bobby Mayberry of Odessa. The bride's uncle, Phillip Crume of Conifer, Colo. and Bobby Mayberry served as ushers.

Shannon Crume of Conifer, the bride's cousin, registered guests and lit candles.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white wedding gown fashioned with a high neckline which was accented with lace and jeweled beads. The bodice was enhanced with lace and jeweled beads and gave the illusion of being off-the-shoulder style. The long sleeves were puffed at the top and were fitted from the elbows to the wrists and featured lace inserts. The skirt and train were made of soft organza and were trimmed in lace.

A tear-drop cap of jeweled beads crowned her waist-length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink and white silk roses nestled with baby's breath on a white lace fan with streamers of white and pink ribbons used as accents.

Her jewelry consisted of a pair of pearl earrings and her grandmother Dorothy Subben's wedding rings which were given to her Nov. 14, 61 years earlier.

The maid of honor's dress was made of pink sunlight and the bridesmaids wore dresses of blue sunlight. Each dress was designed with one shoulder accented with a large bow and a flowing tea-length skirt. Each carried a nosegay of pink and blue silk flowers.

A choral group from Central Church of Christ vocalized "I Pledge My Love", "Wedding March", "O God of Infinite Mercy" and "The Lord Bless You and Keep You."

During the reception, the refresh-

Bay View Study Club met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wesley S. Fisher.

The meeting was called to order by the President Nancy Hays. The minutes of the Oct. 15 and Nov. 5 meetings were read and approved.

The membership committee gave a report and the treasurer also reported to those present.

The following members were appointed to the nominating committee: Mrs. Meredith Wilcox, Mrs. Earnest Langley and Mrs. R.W. Eades.

Wilcox introduced her special guest, Juanita Giesler. She was welcomed by members.

Helen Eades read a letter of thanks from Michael Grauer, Curator of Art at Panhandle-Plains Museum. Helen Langley read a letter from Dwight Huber, professor, Amarillo College.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Langley, program chairman. She introduced the speaker for the afternoon, N.D. Kelso, government teacher at Hereford High School. Kelso gave the members a test and then explained some of his teaching methods and goals in his classes to teach "living government."

Refreshments were served to the 17 members and two guests present.

Honor society to induct local youths

Several members of First United Methodist Youth group were notified last week of their selection into the Society of Distinguished American High School students. Such an honor makes the Hereford youths eligible for over $700,000 in scholarship funds.

According to FUMC youth leader Robin Roth, 21, students from the Hereford church group, which includes youths from other denominations, were selected into the 19-year-old honor society for 1987.

They include: Jason Bodner, Christy Burford, Craig Waddell, Julie Allison, Noel Avery, Amy Conway, Tiffany LeGate, Shaun Moore, Steven Sims, Brent Berry, John E. Barnes, Stuart Mitts, Matt Coplen, Carl DeLozier, Susan Bell, Jared Victor, Kirsten Abney, Annette Thorell, Carrie Skelton, Jessica Dearing, and Nikki Hutson.

The youths were recognized for their excellence in leadership, scholarship, and civic contribution. As the students' sponsor, Roth was presented with the Society's National Appreciation Award for "devotion to the development and encouragement of student leaders."

Membership in the Society is designed to be a national honor and incentive for top performance among high school students. To be accepted, candidates must excel in academics, extracurricular or civic activities.

As members, these students will have the opportunity to compete for college scholarships through The Society's National Awards Program. This year, 141 colleges have earmarked more than $700,000 in scholarship funds for Society members.

Additionally, The Society sponsors members-only cash awards of up to $2,000 per recipient for higher education purposes, and its college referral programs recommend members for admission and grants-in-aid to 350 major colleges and universities.

To preserve the honor for students, members' names and their high school accomplishments will be listed in The Society's 1987 Membership Registry, which is published and distributed nationally.

In the year 1880 the population of the United States was 50,155,783.

Turkey specials keep cost down

Thanksgiving dinner may be one of the most economical you eat this year - especially if you have a family tradition of serving a whole bird and making side dishes from scratch.

"Most supermarkets use turkey to attract holiday shoppers, so retail prices don't necessarily reflect wholesale prices," says Dr. Dave Mellor, a poultry marketing specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX).

He says unbasted, store brand turkey could be as low as 60 cents a pound, while basted, national brand turkey will be in the $.90-1.00 per pound range.

A whole bird is the traditional favorite and less expensive than further processed turkey parts or roasts. For example, cooked drumsticks are running about $1.80 per pound, ~~pre~~-basted breast about $1.40 per pound, and boneless smoked turkey about $4.58 per pound.

"More people are ordering fresh turkeys from supermarkets or meat markets, although they will be somewhat more expensive," says the specialist.

"There may also be little difference in quality, Mellor concedes. "Turkeys that are frozen immediately and held for sale months later could be fresher than turkeys that are refrigerated for up to two weeks before sale."

TAEX nutrition specialist Marilyn Haggard adds that the ultimate in convenience—the stuffed, cooked whole turkey from a deli or restaurant will top the list in cost.

"Some consumers want to trade the expense of a prepared bird for the extra time they can spend with the family, attending a football game, or using their energies to make special side dishes and desserts," she remarks.

Preparing a Thanksgiving dinner from scratch is instructive, claims Haggard, since it underscores the amount of money that goes toward convenience.

"The basic ingredients of a Thanksgiving feast, like corn meal, bread, celery and onions for stuffing, cranberries, plain canned or frozen peas, white potatoes and yams are relatively inexpensive foods," she says. "But if you choose instant potatoes or stuffing mixes, prepared cranberry relish and frozen peas in a special sauce, the cost will go up by half or more."

Both Extension specialists agree that among other things, Americans can be thankful for the fact that our food prices are among the lowest and our food quality among the best in the world.

OVERHEATING HURTS OIL

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — The temperature of a turbocharged engine can get as high as 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

Recreation vehicles and passenger cars pulling heavy loads can reach similar engine temperatures, says Phillips 66. The magnitude of heat produced tends to break down and thin out motor oil, which can lead to engine damage. The firm recommends that owners of turbocharged gasoline and diesel engines use a multiviscosity oil to maintain oil thickness.

New Officers To Serve

New officers for the Hereford CatleWomen were presented recently by Irene McKinster, at left, when the group met for their monthly meeting at the Hereford Country Club. Those elected to serve for 1988 included (from left) Charmayne Klett, president; Karen Keeling, vice president; Lori Hall, treasurer; Renee Heflin, secretary; and Dee Anne Trotter, parliamentarian. The next meeting is planned Dec. 1. Anyone interested in joining the organization is asked to contact Charmayne Klett.

Wyche Club names new officers during meeting

Wyche Extension Homemakers Club met in the home of Beverly Jesko recently. She gave the opening exercise, "If I Were Santa."

Louise Packard, vice-president, called the meeting to order and members repeated the TEHA prayer. Carol Odom served as secretary. Roll call was answered by members of "my favorite Thanksgiving dish." Committee reports were given.

Program chairman Argen Draper stated that the next meeting will be a Christmas party in the home of Marcie Ginn on Dec. 17, at 2:30 p.m.

Cheer chairman Camelia Jones reported sending a get well card to Maude Richards of Westgate from the club. Esther Thuett, a former member, was a visitor and Draper presented a gift from the club to her.

Louise Axe, chairman of the nominating committee gave the names of the newly elected for 1988. They include: Andrey Rusher, president; Louise Packard, vice-president; Coreen Odom, secretary-treasurer; Clara Trowbridge, reporter, and Marcie Ginn, council delegate.

Camelia Jones introduced Coreen Odom and she gave a book report on "Willie, A Girl From Town Called Dallas," written by Willie Newburg Lewis.

Members present were Axe, Draper, Ginn, Jesko, Jones, Carol Odom, Coreen Odom, Pet Ott, Packard, and Trowbridge.

Painting Signs

Members of La Madre Mia Study Club are busy preparing for their 17th annual Holiday Tour of Homes set from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6. Jenna Simons, kneeling, and Marlene Watson paint one of the signs that will be placed in front on each tour home. Residences which will be featured this year include the homes of Rick and Shavon Lloyd, 110 Redwood; Raul and Sara Pesina, 108 Quince; and Garth and Susie Merrick, located three miles east of Hereford. Tickets are priced at $2 per person and may be purchased at any of the homes, from study club members or at Deaf Smith County Museum where refreshments of cookies, hot spiced tea and coffee will be served during tour hours. Proceeds will benefit the Christmas Stocking Fund and a scholarship for a Hereford High School senior. Hereford bucks will be given during the home tour.

Holiday Tour of Homes to highlight season

Bright Christmas plaid taffeta vests and name badges will be worn by members of La Madre Mia Study Club who will be serving as hostesses during the club's 17th annual Holiday Tour of Homes from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6.

Three Hereford residents will be open for public viewing that day. They include the homes of Rick and Shavon Lloyd, 110 Redwood; Raul and Sara Pesina, 108 Quince; and Garth and Susie Merrick, three miles east of Hereford.

Each will be uniquely decorated for the Christmas holidays. The Merrick home will be displaying an 18 foot Christmas tree in their 1,200 foot livingroom; the Pesina home, which was just recently built, will feature a touch of holiday decorating; and the Lloyd home will display a large collection of Christmas folk art.

Tickets are priced at $2 per person and may be purchased from any study club member, the tour homes, or at Deaf Smith County Museum where refreshments of hot spiced tea, cookies, and coffee will be served during tour hours. Hereford bucks will be given during the tour.

Proceeds from the tour will be used for Hereford city projects including the Christmas Stocking Fund and a scholarship for a Hereford High School senior.

Lavon Nieman is serving as this year's tour chairman, Mary Beth White is chairman of the ticket committee, and she is being assisted by Ruth Black.

The signs committee includes Marlene Watson, chairman, Gladys Merritt and Jenna Simons. In charge of buckets and badges is Betty Lady and Nancy Paetzold, and publicity is being handled by Nieman, newspaper; Pat Walsh, radio; and Betty Taylor, television.

Refreshments chairman is Lucy Rogers and her committee consists of Betty Martin, Joyce Allred, Carolyn Baxter, Mysedia Smith, Paetzold, Taylor and Betty Owen. Hostesses at the Lloyd home will be Francyn Bromlow, Black, Mary Herring, Judy Williams and chairman, Georgia Sparks. Hostesses at the Merrick home will be Sharron Hodges, chairman, and White, Jenna Simons, Merle Clark, Susan Robbins, Debbie Tardy and Gladys Merritt. Beverley Lambert will be hostess chairman at the Pesina home and assisting her will be Betty Lady, Pat Walsh, Tricia Sims, and Marlene Watson.

Don't let poisoning spoil tradition

Perhaps nothing evokes nostalgia like the tastes and aromas of traditional holiday foods. On Thanksgiving and Christmas, more often than not, the main course of the family meal will be an imitation of former meals, sometimes calling for recipes dating back for generations.

But no matter how "tried and true" a recipe may be, mishandling of meats can lead to spoilage, and possibly to food poisoning. Modern, mass-quantity meat processing methods can contribute to bacterial contamination of commercial poultry and meat. And cooks, especially those unaccustomed to preparing large meals, need to follow strict rules of cleanliness in the kitchen.

Food spoilage, and its result, food poisoning of anyone who consumes the food, occurs when bacteria in the food are allowed to multiply and either infect the victim themselves, or produce toxins which are harmful to humans. Victims of food poisoning may have relatively mild symptoms—nausea, vomiting, diarrhea—but may also require hospitalization to prevent death.

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) recommends the following steps in preparing and serving a holiday turkey. They ensure against salmonellosis perhaps the most common form of food-borne illness.

-Cooks should be sure to wash hands, cooking surfaces, utensils, and all foods thoroughly.

-A turkey should be thawed in the refrigerator, or under cold running water (70 degrees or below).

-Thawing in a microwave oven is safe only when the food will be immediately cooked either in the microwave or in a conventional oven.

-When thawed, the turkey should be thoroughly rinsed and dried.

-Prepare the stuffing immediately before cooking. Dry ingredients can be mixed in advance, but eggs, oysters, butter, or other moist ingredients should be added at cooking time.

-Cooking the stuffing in the turkey cavity may result in its not being fully cooked in the center. It is safer to cook the stuffing separately.

-Cook your turkey in a preheated oven of at least 350 F.

-When fully cooked, the dense portions of the meat, such as the thighs, will have reached at least 180 F, measured with a meat thermometer.

-Remove the stuffing from the bird before serving.

-Never leave the turkey, the stuffing, or gravy unrefrigerated for more than two hours.

-If you plan to keep leftovers, cut the meat off the bone and refrigerate. Freeze any portions you want to keep beyond two days of refrigeration.

Karen and Temple Abney, Jean and Labry Ballard, Jeane and Bartley Dowell, Helen and Bud Eades, Dolores and Boyd Foster, Donna and Dan Warrick, Avis and Raymond White, Alice and Roger Eades; also, Jim Arney and Wayne Amstutz.

The next meeting will be an auction and tasting tea at Dolores Foster's home on Dec. 14, at 7:30 p.m.

Memorial Scholarship Fund

A memorial scholarship fund has been set up at The First National Bank in honor of Toby Torres Sr., who touched many lives. Toby was wellknown for his work affiliated with Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Kids Inc. & YMCA programs.

If the sum of all starlight that falls on the Earth could be concentrated in one object, it would equal a 100-watt bulb seen from a distance of 613 feet, or the length of two football fields.

Thank You

We express our appreciation and gratitude to those that supported us in our fund raiser (Dinner). Our sincere thanks to those that provided the things and ingredients to make our fund raiser possible.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 29-year-old career woman who moved to New York City from the Midwest several months ago.

I was engaged to be married in 1982, broke off with the man and have had only one serious romance since then. That, too, is over. I want to make it clear that I am not promiscuous and never have been.

My question, Dear Ann: My father wants to buy me a $500 membership to a club for AIDS-free singles. Prospective members are tested before they are permitted to join. The test costs an additional $90. Every four months another test is given for an additional $90.

I don't wish to appear ungracious but I am not enthusiastic about joining such a club. The unspoken message is that the members are interested in finding sex partners. This makes me uncomfortable.

Will you share your opinion of clubs of this nature? I am — An Oklahoma Transplant in the Big Apple

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I believe that AIDS-free clubs are a waste of money.

For openers: Club membership is no guarantee that all who belong are AIDS-free. Research has shown that it can take several months, or longer, after exposure to the AIDS virus before a positive test result registers.

Also, although club members take an oath that they will have sex with members only, there is no way one can be sure that they will honor that pledge.

The best safety measures are total abstinence (which is unrealistic for a person of 29 who has been sexually active) or maintaining a monogamous relationship with a totally trustworthy person and remain faithful.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been looking for an office job for several weeks. Finally, I was hired by a very good firm and today was my first day at work.

The manager of our department greeted me nicely and made me feel at home. (He is a rather heavy man about 45 years old.) Immediately after lunch he came by my desk and said, "My zipper broke. Can you fix it? All you need is a needle and thread."

I was very embarrassed, looked at the zipper and saw that it had broken away from the fabric. I didn't know if he expected me to sew it on him or if he planned to remove his trousers in the men's room or what. I also wondered why he was asking me, a brand-new person in the office. Surely there were others who knew him a whole lot better.

I was awfully flustered but managed to say, "I'm a terrible sewer. I think you'd better ask someone else." He replied in a clipped manner, "Well, you're not much help," and walked away. I kept my eyes glued to my training manual, never once looking up to see where he went.

I'm afraid I got off on the wrong foot, Ann. Was I wrong to refuse? Please tell me if I did the right thing.—Uncertain in Mo.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: The man sounds as if he is a quart low. Asking a brand-new female employee to mend his trousers showed a shocking lack of judgment.

You certainly did the right thing. Be on the alert for this dingbat. Lord alone knows what he will ask you to do next.

Everyone does drugs, right? Wrong. And today, more and more people are aware of the dangers involved. If you want to be in the know, too, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send $2.00 plus a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Preparing For Play

Laura Schlabs will be portraying the character of Grace in the play "Amazing Grace" to be presented by the children of the Community Christian School which is located at 15th and Whittier. Others in the play include Christi Duggan and Michael Rushing. The public is invited to attend the performances planned at 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday. There is no charge.

The full Moon is nine times as bright as a half-moon, since the surface of the visible half-moon is extremely rough and mountainous, which makes for more shadows and less reflected sunlight.

Gambler Three airs Sunday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Boxleitner, back with Kenny Rogers in the third movie inspired by the country singer's hit "The Gambler," says that this time the film has a message about Indians.

"It's a lighthearted adventure," he says, "although this time we do play against a historical backdrop, the Ghost Dance and the events leading to the Wounded Knee massacre in the 1880s, the death of Sitting Bull and the revenge of the 7th Cavalry. I don't want to say we're preaching. We all know the Indians got ripped off."

The two-part movie, "Kenny Rogers as 'The Gambler' III — The Legend Continues," will be televised by CBS on Sunday and Tuesday.

Rogers stars as Brady Hawkes, the character fashioned from the song, and Boxleitner once again plays Billy Montana, a character he describes as a "frontier airhead."

The first film based on "The Gambler" was the highest-rated TV movie in the 1979-80 season. The second movie, expanded to two hours, was in the top five for 1983-84.

"In the first movie we were headed for San Francisco," Boxleitner says with a laugh. "Seven years and three movies later we still haven't gotten there."

Guest stars in the new version include Charles Durning as a senator trying to ram through a bill taking away 90 million acres of Indian land,

George Kennedy as the army commander of the Dakota Territory, Dean Stockwell as a scheming Indian agent, Melanie Chartoff as Billy's love interest, Linda Gray as a schoolmarm, Matt Clark as a cavalryman seeking revenge against the Sioux, and Jeffrey Jones as Buffalo Bill Cody.

Boxleitner spent the last four TV seasons working on "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," before it was canceled.

Good timing. Boxleitner says it took four years to get a "Gambler III" script that satisfied everyone, and to coordinate everyone's schedules.

"Melanie plays my love interest since Kenny doesn't do that," he says. "Kenny makes no secret of the fact that he never has a love interest in any of his movies. So, Melanie's the female version of Billy Montana. The first time I meet her she picks my pocket. It's two frontier airheads. Two frontier yuppies trying to con each other."

"My character's still the Beaver. He's become more of a cowboy than a gambler. He's split from Brady and they meet up in Dakota. He's grown up some, too. I said, folks, I can't keep playing this 19-year-old kid. He has to know when to hold and when to fold."

Boxleitner previously starred in the Western series "How the West Was Won" as Luke Macahan, a young fugitive gunfighter. It was on the show that he met his wife, Kathryn Holcomb, who played his sister.

Boxleitner finished work on "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" in March, then took off for the Cook Islands in the South Pacific to do "Angel in Green" with Susan Dey. He did "Gambler III" in Santa Fe, N.M.

"I take these things because I like to travel," he says. "I've filmed in Europe, Singapore, the South Pacific. It makes for great adventure. My son Sam, who's 7, went with me to Santa Fe. He did some extra work. Kenny's son Christopher was there, too. It was a real family affair."

Boxleitner and his wife also have another son, Lee, 2.

Boxleitner's next project is another Western. He will play the Montgomery Clift role in a remake of "Red River" for CBS.

"I think it's a better script than the original 1948 movie," he says. "You can do more things now than when the Hayes Office was censoring movies. And people don't know who Montgomery Clift or John Wayne were. I know that sounds terrible."

Reynolds to marry

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Bradford Reynolds, the Justice Department's civil rights chief who found the memo in Lt. Col. Oliver North's files outlining the diversion of Iran arms sale proceeds to the Contras, is getting married.

Reynolds, 45, will wed Clare Matisans, a bookkeeper in the Arlington, Va., school system, in a church ceremony Saturday in Arlington, department spokeswoman Deborah Burston-Wade said Thursday.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III

plans to attend the wedding and reception, the spokeswoman said. CIA Director William Webster and Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia also are invited.

It is the second marriage for Reynolds, who is divorced. Reynolds is an assistant attorney general and counselor to Meese.

The memo led to North's firing, the resignation of national security adviser John Poindexter, congressional probes and a criminal investigation by independent counsel Lawrence Walsh.

Douglas files suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Kirk Douglas has filed a $17.8 million breach-of-contract suit over his firing as celebrity spokesman for the computer company Sperry Corp.

Douglas said he had a $2.5 million contract for a minimum of two years to do TV commercials and personal appearances and that it was terminated a year early after Sperry merged with Burroughs Corp. last fall.

The two companies have since renamed themselves Unisys Corp.,

with headquarters in Detroit and Blue Bell, Pa.

A Unisys spokesman, Peter Hynes, said company lawyers have not seen the suit, filed in federal court Thursday.

Former Police lead softens his Sting

LONDON (AP) — Sting, former lead singer of the British rock group The Police, displays a more reflective and adaptable side as a solo performer, but he still inflames mass adulation.

His recent second solo LP, "Nothing Like the Sun," has influences ranging from jazz to Latin to George Gershwin, and contains an underlying theme in praise of womanhood.

"Success to me is being allowed to make the music I want without compromising it for the purposes of selling a lot," Sting said in an interview. "This is the record I wanted to make. ... If it's successful and sells millions of copies, then great. If it doesn't, I'll make another one."

He has no regrets about leaving behind the vibrant formula with which The Police sold more than 50 million records in an eight-year blitz up to 1984, making it one of Britain's most successful rock bands since the Beatles and Rolling Stones.

Sting says he wanted away from the "mob psychology" that reached its height at the cavernous Shea Stadium in New York in 1983. Though The Police has never formally disbanded, it is unlikely ever to be resurrected.

His solo songs contain some familiar strands, such as social alienation and heart-stopping love, but are more often politicized, personalized. And, so far, they appear hardly less popular.

His first solo LP, "The Dream of the Blue Turtles," sold more than 6 million copies — as many as The Police's fifth and last smash-hit album, "Synchronicity."

The new 12-track album includes some potential hit singles, such as the bouncy "We'll Be Together," but is more memorable for its unifying theme of female superiority. Guest instrumentalists include guitarist Eric Clapton, Police guitarist Andy Summers and jazz orchestrator Gil Evans.

The opening track, "The Lazarus Heart," is dedicated to Sting's mother, Audrey Sumner, who died of cancer in June.

A tour promoting the new album opens Nov. 21 in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and will take Sting across the United States at the beginning of the year, then to Europe, the Far East and Australia in the spring, and perhaps back to North America in the summer.

The blond, photogenic multimillionaire is 36 and the father of four. The sex-symbol image of old is less studiously exploited.

Born Gordon Matthew Sumner in the northeast England coal mining town of Wallsend, Sting worked as a schoolteacher and, by night, played bass and sang in a local jazz-rock club. He quit his job in 1976, packed his wife and baby in an old car and traveled to London and on to stardom.

Within two years his slightly raspy voice, with a reggae backing fashionable in the punk era, was star material. The Police's first album, "Outlandos D'Amour," featuring "Roxanne," stayed on the British and U.S. pop charts for 96 weeks.

Wild Kingdom host real animal man

NEW YORK (AP) — Big Jim Fowler, naturalist, adventurer and talk show regular, once had to break up a fight between two grizzly cubs who were wrecking the kitchen of his Manhattan apartment.

How do you do that?
"Throw them some meat," answers the host of "Wild Kingdom," television's longest-running syndicated half-hour show.

But problems are not always so easily solved for a man in Fowler's line of work. For the past 25 years he's been showing animals for education, charity and profit — he's a frequent guest on the "Tonight" show — and he and his traveling companions have caused a few flaps.

It was Fowler who produced a 12-foot Burmese python at a Sept. 19 charity fund-raiser in Greenwich, Conn., that frightened the Duchess of York, better known to Americans as Fergie, the wife of Britain's Prince Andrew. Her hysterical tears prompted speculation among "royal watchers" that such behavior may indicate she was pregnant.

There was the time he had to wrestle down a cheetah about to make a meal of Zsa Zsa Gabor's "dahlings," three little poodles.

When Johnny Carson once started making faces at an irate ape with 2-inch incisors, Fowler quickly stepped in to head off an attack.

And there was the time he had to order fresh sirlon to lure down an eagle that had flown to the chandelier of a ballroom in New York's Plaza Hotel.

Fowler's friends have also trashed a few hotel rooms in their day, some have gotten loose in baggage compartments of airplanes, sending security men diving for cover, and he's been known to sneak unusual guests past the doormen at his apartment building.

Fowler, who has befriended birds and animals since his boyhood on a Georgia farm, has had many close calls.

There was the time an anaconda "swallowed" most of his arm — up to the shoulder — before he got free, the time a helicopter swooped him out of the path of a charging moose protecting her calf, and the time a wolf attacked somebody's lunch bag just as Art Linkletter was suggesting "Julie" seemed to be a German shepherd.

The late Marlin Perkins originated the "Wild Kingdom" show, with Fowler as his sidekick. The show currently runs on 200 stations. Twelve new episodes were filmed last year, 16 the year before and the rest are reruns of the classic winner of more than 60 awards, including four Emmy's.

Last year Fowler filmed six "Spirit of Adventure" specials for ABC and will do that again this year. He also syndicates a daily 90-minute radio spot called Nature Newsbreak.

Fowler bumped into the Gabor poodles while running a cheetah to a lure on a polo field for a World Wildlife Fund benefit.

"The cheetah had already noticed the polo ponies on the other side of the field. That's on the food list," Fowler says. "I had some food rewards but I knew I would have to grab her as soon as she finished because of the ponies.

"Just then another car pulls up and Zsa Zsa gets out with three little fluffs of poodle. I dove on the cheetah."

He wasn't hurt. But he'll show you tracks on his right arm from a not-so-successful encounter with a cheetah. He has been nipped, bitten and clawed, but was most seriously injured when he was gored by a white-tailed deer.

A deer?

"More zoo keepers are killed by members of the deer family than anything else," he explains. "We think of those antlers as hat racks, but they are very lethal weapons."

Born near Albany, Ga., Fowler trained birds of prey as a boy, walking through the fields of Mud Creek Plantation, the family farm. He graduated from Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., with degrees in geology and zoology, unsure of his career. He turned down a "bonus baby" offer from the Philadelphia Phillies, raised cattle for a while and continued working with raptors as a hobby.

He has traveled the world, diving for great white sharks off Australia, walking unarmed in tiger preserves in India, and becoming the first man to trap a harpy eagle in Brazil and bring it back to the United States alive.

He's lived with the Kalahari Bushmen in Africa, led expeditions to Peru to study the Andean condor,

Commercials aimed at men

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Ever wonder why men are featured in ads for athlete's foot remedies?

"Because athlete's foot is four times more common in men," says Dr. Janet Fairley, a University of Rochester dermatologist. Fairley says athlete's foot is caused by fungi that like a warm and moist environment where fresh air rarely enters. Feet are ideal since they are covered by shoes and socks and the toes are squeezed together.

She suggests people with athlete's foot change shoes and socks several times a day, use foot powder and other medications between the toes and "go barefoot as much as possible." For stubborn cases, she suggests seeing a dermatologist.

and walked, unarmed, footsteps away from a polar bear that had just killed another polar bear, a feat he would not repeat unarmed.

Besides his Manhattan apartment, Fowler has a home in New Canaan, Conn., and keeps the 1,000-acre family farm, where he raises elands, ostriches and zebras.

Married and the father of two teenage children, one of whom is missing his pet boa constrictor, Fowler has become a spokesman for endangered animals. Fowler also consults in designing zoos and parks. He wishes more zoo directors would do what he is doing.

"Some zoo directors have multimillion-dollar budgets for education and they bring black snakes and ferrets to demonstrations," he says. "That won't do it anymore. You've got to capture people's imagination, especially young people's."

"I can't go on a show with field mice and rabbits after I've appeared with a water buffalo."

Fowler, a big man just under 6-foot-6, uses zoo animals and trained animals in his demonstrations, sometimes meeting the animals just minutes before curtain time.

He also knows when to quit.

"I've always got backup animals in case one of the animals is out of control," Fowler says. "I would never put an animal in a situation where it could get hurt or be uncomfortable."

Once he was traveling by van with a 6-month-old cheetah named "Arthur," two anteaters that he used to walk on leashes in a Chicago park, a harpy eagle, and a python.

"I put the snake in the drawer. Hotel drawers make perfect little snake boxes," Fowler says. "I had the anteaters and the eagle, which is so big it eats 30-pound monkeys, in giant cardboard cages."

He "secured" the cheetah in the bathroom — taps turned tightly off, rugs and towels removed, door closed — and went out.

The motel management had no idea what was going on.

"I just back the van up and sort of slip things in one-by-one," Fowler confesses.

Upon his return to the motel, Fowler saw red emergency lights blinking outside his room.

"The whole fire department was there and water was pouring out," he says.

The firemen had opened the door and then decided prudence dictated shutting it. The chief was reassessing. A first look had revealed two anteaters hopping around on a sofa, an enormous bird aflap, and some kind of wildcat in the bathtub. They missed the snake.

The playful Arthur had knocked Kleenex into the basin and turned on the water, flooding the entire room, destroying the cardboard cages.

"I raced in there, afraid Arthur had drowned," Fowler says. But Arthur was nestled in the bathtub, the only dry spot.

Fowler smiles at his own stories. "People are always telling me I have the best job in the world," he says. "Maybe they're right."

Bride-Elect Feted

The Deaf Smith County Historical Society board members hosted a bridal luncheon recently for Juanita Phillips, bride-elect of Gene Koetting. Greeting guests during the celebration were, from left, Phillips' daughters, Lisa Albiar and Dallas Paetzold; Phillips, the honoree; and her mother, Mrs. Raymond Bean.

Phillips feted with luncheon

Juanita Phillips, bride-elect of Gene Koetting of Adrian, was honored with a bridal luncheon recently in the E.B. Black House. Hostesses for the occasion were Deaf Smith County Historical Society board members.

Greeting guests with the honoree were her mother, Mrs. Raymond Bean and her daughters, Lisa Albiar of Dawn and Dallas Paetzold of Canyon.

The table was centered by a 1,300-year-old bowl belonging to Ruth McBride which contained a floral arrangement in fall colors. The arrangement was created by Meredith Wilcox and included Pyramantha berries. Cornhusk dolls complemented the arrangement.

Phillips, who has served as executive director of Deaf Smith County Museum for the past two years, was presented a gift of linens from the Society board of directors.

Phillips and Koetting will exchange vows during a private ceremony set Dec. 5 in the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church of Vega.

Library receives book from Society

During a recent pot luck dinner in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library with members of the Deaf Smith County Genealogy Society in attendance, it was announced that a new book had been donated to the library.

Society member, June Rudd, reported that "Marriage Records of Deaf Smith County from July, 1891, to August, 1963" had been presented to librarian Becky Walls for the convenience of library patrons. Rudd and her committee use these records to finish completing the book. Copies of the book have also been sent to the Morman Library of the L.D.S. in Salt Lake City, Utah, and the Los Ciboleros Chapter of the DAR sent one to the National DAR Library in Washington, D.C.

The book has been dedicated in memory of Carlos Vaughn who had spent countless hours copying the records when the project was started in July of 1981. Vaughn died before the completion of the project but his assistance and other endeavors were remembered by the Society.

Also, during the business session, a report was made by Walls that the purchase of a new microfilm reader for the library was approved and that it should arrive in three to four weeks. Plans were made to demonstrate how to operate the new equipment to visitors and Society members at a January meeting.

Microfilm for "Texas Index To Death Records", covering 1963 to 1973, has been located. Members discussed purchasing rolls of the earlier records.

Before the conclusion of the meeting, new officers for 1988 were named. Serving as president will be Jeanette Ramey; vice president, Joe D. Rogers; secretary, Mildred Shetty; treasurer, Nell Norvell; reporter, Nina Brown; and historian, Wilma Clark.

Society Donates Book

The Deaf Smith County Genealogy Society recently donated the book "Marriage Records of Deaf Smith County from July, 1891, to August, 1963," to DSC Library. June Rudd, at right, with the assistance of her committee members, compiled the records. The book has also been sent to the Morman Library of the L.D.S. in Salt Lake City, Utah, and to the National DAR

Pop-up books are valuable

Next time you see a tot dissecting a pop-up children's book, try to distract him or her from the mission of destruction.

After all, despite their ephemeral nature, pop-up and other sorts of movable books are an art form of a kind as well as a craft and a science, according to Katharine Martinez, librarian at the Cooper-Hewitt Museum in New York. Martinez is curator of what is believed to be the first major exhibition (through Feb. 21 at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Design) of the scope of movable books from the 16th to the 20th centuries.

Although most books with illustrations in moving parts are primarily for children, the same techniques were used as early as the 15th century to illustrate scientific theories about the movement of planets, she

Q - I recently took up woodwork. I keep running into little problems, but have been conquering them one by one. Something that has me puzzled is how to bore a number of holes of exactly the same depth, especially when I have to be careful about their coming through the other side. Can you help?

A. Yes. What you need is a depth gauge. When you fasten it to your bit at a certain distance from the cutting point, you will be assured that all holes will be of uniform depth. When you run into something that is giving you trouble, explain it to your local hardware dealer and the chances are he can tell you of some product that will be of assistance.

Q. I want to reinforce a concrete slab with metal mesh. How do you figure out how much mesh should be used?

A. A rule of thumb is the mesh should weigh at least 40 pounds per 100 square feet of slab.

Q. When varnish penetrates raw wood, how deep does it go?

A. Varnish is a surface coating and technically does not penetrate wood fibers, although some of it actually does to a small degree.

Q. I often run across the word "jig" in connection with wooden projects. My dictionary gives an inadequate answer. Can you enlighten me?

A. A jig is a device for reproducing parts accurately. By maintaining the correct relationship between a piece of work and the tool, a jig enables the operator to turn out an indefinite number of identical parts.

Q. I have to put up a new ceiling in a room that already has one. Can regular ceiling tiles be installed to the old ceiling by cementing them?

A. Not enough details to give you a precise answer. Generally, you can't cement tiles to an old ceiling unless it is level and in good condition. You can put up furring strips and staple the new tiles to the strips or you can inquire about the various kinds of metal tracks on the market. The tiles are attached to these tracks.

Here's the Answer

Q - There is a crack about 15 inches long on our dining room ceiling. I intend to put up a heavy vinyl paper on the ceiling. Will this permanently cover the crack or will it eventually show through the vinyl?

A - The best way to be sure it doesn't show through is to fill the opening with a spackling material before you install the vinyl.

Q - I have to use a flush door soon for a room being added to our house. Do they come in standard sizes or should the opening be built to accommodate whatever size is available?

A - Most doors are 6 feet, 8 inches, but you can order any size you want.

Q - I would like to install plastic piping. Is this permitted by law?

A - Plastic pipe is permitted by most building codes, but better check with your local authorities. If you are having a licensed plumber do the work, he will know which types of pipes and fittings are allowed in your community.

Q - I want to finish the basement but am puzzled as to how to handle the water pipes that run across the ceiling. They are fairly high, but a bit away from the ceiling and I am afraid it would be awkward to hide them. Is there some way to disguise them a bit?

A - In a recent basement renovation, the owner neatly covered the hanging pipes with bamboo blinds, wound around the pipes. However, these were cold water pipes. You could not do it with hot water pipes unless you first insulated the pipes. The insulation would also prevent the formation of condensation.

Q - When I have paint left over, I seal the top of the can tight. But, no matter what I do, a paint skin forms on top of the paint. Is there any way to prevent this? If not, would it hurt the paint if the skin is carefully skimmed off?

A - You usually can skim off the skin with no damage to the paint. One way to prevent the skin from forming is to pour a little paint thinner over the paint before you close the top of the can. However, even this won't work if the paint is not used for a long time - say a year or two. Besides the thinner plan, place some aluminum foil or plastic wrap under the top of the can before hammering it down.

Q - How do you tell the difference between boiled linseed oil and regular linseed oil? Also, which one dries faster?

A - The question is puzzling, because each comes in a container plainly marked. But if there is some reason why you must know, boiled linseed oil - which does not require boiling, but is that way when you purchase it - is a much darker color. The boiled type dries much faster.

Q - My hardware dealer has recommended an ammonia he sells as a good stain for an old oak table I have. I spoke to several people about it. One of them has been working with furniture for years. Nobody seems to have heard of it. Is the dealer right? I do not want to ruin the table.

A - Ammonia, mixed with water, has often been used as a stain for oak. Be sure to follow the directions on the container for the proportions of water and ammonia in the mixture. The resultant color will be a dark brown, but test it on the underside of the table to be sure it is what you want.

Q - I have replaced the faucet washer in the stem of the cold water faucet in our kitchen, but it continues to leak from the spout opening. I have been told the valve seat probably is worn and needs regrinding. How is this done?

A - You can buy a grinding tool at any hardware store. It will come on a piece of cardboard that tells how to use it. The important thing is to turn the handle a little bit at a time. After a few turns, replace everything and try it out. Don't grind the valve seat too much. Be sure the water to the fixture is turned off before you begin work.

Q - The float ball in my bathroom toilet tank has a leak in it which causes the float to sink too low in the water. Can it be repaired?

A - Yes, but it is better to buy a new one. Better yet, consider the purchase of a completely new tank mechanism if you think you can handle the installation. It is not difficult, but does require a bit of skill with tools.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Ceiling not so hard to properly paint

You are very much in the minority if you like to paint ceilings. But you would have been an even rarer individual if you enjoyed painting ceilings before the days of rollers and extension handles.

Painting a ceiling while standing on the floor isn't quite the tiresome chore it was when you could not tackle the task without a paint brush in your hand. Surprisingly, many people still do not undertake it because they have heard it is a difficult job that is quite likely to give you a stiff neck and muscle strain. While these are possible consequences, they can be avoided if you remember one thing. Always keep the roller ahead of you, not above you. When the roller and the handle are held vertically, both your neck and your arms will begin to protest after half an hour or so.

The principles of painting a ceiling are the same as they are for painting walls. You should always roll from a dry area into a wet one. Most modern paints minimize the chance of getting brush or roller marks. Even so, you should not risk this possibility by halting the work for a while and then going back to it. Try to arrange your time so you will not have to stop for lunch or dinner until you have completed the entire ceiling.

Again, as with wall painting, do not apply too much pressure to the roller. This rule, important with all painting, is vital when handling a ceiling, because the splattering paint falls on you or the floor. Be sure everything is covered with drop cloths. Wear an old paint cap or something similar to keep from washing your hair with turpentine if you are using an oil paint and with water if using latex.

It is practical to paint a ceiling before painting the rest of the room. If you have to paint a ceiling alone, you will be surprised to see how seedy the rest of the room looks even though it seemed to be all right a while ago. You will need a small brush or edging roller to paint the strip where the ceiling and walls meet. In painting the ceiling, paint across the width of the room.

The color of a ceiling can affect the appearance of the room. A color darker than the walls "pulls down" a ceiling that is too high. Painting it a lighter color than the walls will raise a low ceiling. Painting it the same color will not affect the features of a room either way. All this fits into the optical illusion category, but the idea is sound.

Always read the directions on the labels of the paint can. They can be revealing, telling you, for example, such a seemingly simple thing as whether or not the paint should be stirred.

When a ceiling must be patched before painting, the spots that are treated should be primed. This usually can be done merely by covering the patch with a little of the paint to be used for the final coat. Then, when the paint is applied to the full ceiling, the patched portion is less likely to show.

If, for whatever reason, you should decide to dispense with a roller and use a brush for the entire ceiling, the job will be tedious if you work from a single stepladder. The best setup is one in which a plank is stretched across the lower steps of two stepladders. It then will not be necessary to keep moving a single stepladder every few minutes. Even then - with the two-stepladder arrangement - paint in fairly narrow strips across the width of the ceiling. If you paint in wide strips, you won't have to move the ladders so often, but you will risk leaving the lap marks discussed earlier.

Among certain primitive tribes a woman should not spin while her husband is eating or the game he hunts will turn like the spindle and he will be unable to hit it.

It's YOUR Money

—by Alex Schroeter

YOUR CHOICE OF LOANS

Buying a car really involves an arithmetic problem; only dollars-and-cents computations will reveal the best way to save money. If you are offered a super-low interest rate or a rebate on the car of your choice, which should you select?

First you need to determine what the dealer's loan will cost you, even at a low rate, after taxes. Remember that only 65 percent of the interest paid is deductible in 1987; 40 percent of interest paid in 1988 will be deductible; and 20 percent of 1989's interest.

How else might you pay for the car? A home equity loan may be cheaper, considering tax deductibility and the rebate offered. This only works if you itemize, aren't subject to the alternative minimum tax, and find a home-equity loan with low start-up costs.

For the time being, if the difference is minimal, and the time frame is the same, many financial advisors may recommend staying with the car loan. By 1990, when consumer interest is no longer deductible, it may pay to top up your figures again.

Renovation requires good building

Renovating and modernizing older buildings has achieved new levels of popularity in today's real estate market. Not every building, however, is an ideal candidate for renovation.

Before beginning any renovation project, property owners and managers must carefully study their plans to determine if their building is worth the effort, believes one real estate professional.

"There are certain steps that the property manager can take to evaluate the problem of whether or not the property is worth renovating and to accomplish a major remodeling project," said Irene T. Eshleman, director of property management, Northwest Division, for DeSantis Property Management Company of Columbus, Ohio.

"Determining which distressed properties to purchase and which to rehabilitate is not an exact science." Eshleman outlined four key criteria that can help owners determine if their building is worth renovating: the location of the proerty; the building's potential market; the initial condition of the building; and the enhancement factor, or the possibility of increasing the number of rentable units and the rent structure.

"The location of the distressed property will play a major role in determining the success of any renovation project," Eshleman maintains. "In an area with a strong demand for a specific property use, a renovation of property in this category may be indicated."

If the location looks good, said Eshleman, a thorough market analysis is the property manager's next step. This analysis will identify prospective tenants and determine acceptable rent levels.

"The third step in the renovation process is to conduct a cost analysis to estimate the total rehabilitation costs and to conclude whether or not the total cost will be supported by the proposed rents," Eshleman continued. "Generally, we have found that if the proposed rent structure supports a minimum of 13.4 percent of the total cost of the project, then renovation is considered feasible."

The political climate of the area is also a consideration at this stage, warned Eshleman. If the community's zoning board is not in favor of rehab projects, or if the market's building codes are too strict, then Eshleman stated that any rehab attempt may prove too costly.

Eshleman also emphasized that cost estimates must be accurate if the rehab project is to succeed. She encouraged property managers to select reliable contractors to determine the scope of the project.

"Some major systems such as heating, electrical, and plumbing can be easily improved, even if they are severely outdated," explained Eshleman. "Kitchens and bathrooms often need new appliances and fixtures, but these are easy to install and their cost will be recovered through increased rents."

While some systems are easy and inexpensive to replace, she warned, the building's overall structure must be sound, or a rehabilitation project would be too costly.

"At what point would renovation not be considered as an alternative to saving the economic life of a building?" asks Eshleman. "Again this is not an exact science, but we have found that if a property can be brought back to a rentable condition for under three times the purchase price of the building, then renovation is considered to be feasible."

The final step of Eshleman's renovation process is the enhancement factor, which involves increasing the number of rentable units and the rent structure.

"As long as you are not venturing too far from the structure's original use, the rehab will be less complicated," said Eshleman.

For instance, Eshleman explained that a four-bedroom house can easily be renovated into a rooming house with shared kitchen and bath facilities. However, converting a rooming house into a four-unit apartment can be cost prohibitive.

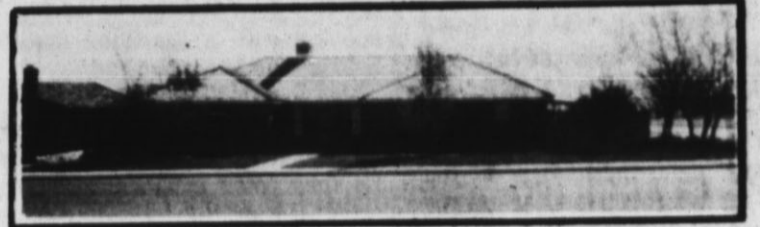

Despite the planning and work involved in renovation, Eshleman feels that renovation is worth the trouble.

Help, guidance for buying furniture

Furniture is available in virtually every conceivable style and many price ranges. But a missing ingredient in the buying experience has been adequate guidance and help.

Survey after survey reveals that consumers fear making a costly mistake. They see obtaining what they regard as helpful guidance as a problem.

At the recently concluded national furniture market in North Carolina, furniture makers and sellers addressed this issue on several fronts.

Attempts to provide the needed help include development of manufacturer galleries in retail stores, introduction of furniture, accessories and fabrics designed to go together and the addition of items, such as specially sized sheets for daybeds, that make shopping easier and less time-consuming.

For example, a number of brass bed makers now offer at extra cost sheets, comforters, dust ruffles and pillows sized to fit their daybeds. The bedding is displayed and sold in the furniture department so the necessary purchases can be completed at the same time. At the market, Dresher Inc. became the latest brass bed maker to offer an extensive selection of bedding made specifically for daybeds.

In another expansion of convenience, Vanguard, the upholstered furniture firm, began offering optional slipcovers at moderate prices with sofas.

One of the farthest-reaching efforts to give consumers guidance without the necessity of employing a decorator is a new furniture and accessories program offered by Guild Hall of St. Louis and designed by New York-based Gear Inc.

Raymond Waites, Gear's chief designer, has supervised the creation of five different country looks — three French and two American. Retailers will be required to show and sell all the products necessary to furnish a room and the producer will offer design guidance in arrangement of store vignettes in 900 square feet or more. Besides fabrics and accessories, wallpaper will also be available.

Since all the fabrics and other items are designed to go together, whatever the consumer selects can be assumed to coordinate successfully.

Richard Tallin is president of Guild Hall, a new division of a firm that specializes in importing furniture, accessories and antiques from Europe. He says the point of the new collection is to "help people have a nice home at middle price points. Many readers look longingly at the beautifully designed rooms in decorating magazines and know they don't have the ability to reproduce the wonderful rooms they see."

A signature of Guild Hall is to mix new and antique furniture and accessories to create an eclectic personal space.

One of the most talked-about developments to make retail furniture stores more professional and responsive to consumers is the growth of galleries. The term describes brand-name sections in furniture stores where a large assortment of a particular maker's furniture is shown. In some ways, the galleries duplicate the designer sections found in women's ready-to-wear departments across the country.

Some of the best-known gallery programs are those offered by Ethan Allen, Drexel Heritage, Pennsylvania House and Thomasville Furniture. Other companies which have gallery programs include Bernhardt and Henredon.

The first gallery program, inaugurated by Ethan Allen years ago, is a prototype for the newer examples. All the furniture and most other products, as well, in an Ethan Allen store are supplied to the retailer by the manufacturer.

Freed from many of the selection chores, retailers can concentrate on customer service. The manufacturer also provides extensive sales training, guidance in store arrangement, decorating help and emphasis on accessorizing the furniture.

According to Frank Burr, executive vice president of Thomasville Furniture, many consumers find galleries less-worrisome places to shop for furniture.

"They have the assurance of a manufacturer brand name and the retailer has been vetted by the manufacturer. But most important, a gallery program trains salespeople in product information so that they can answer consumer questions," he asserted.

Amelia Bloomer, the suffragette who lent her name to women's baggy trousers, was born in 1910.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — British rock star Sting was tuning up for tonight's opening of a world concert tour featuring music from his new record, "Nothing Like the Sun." Sting arrived here Thursday accompanied by a six-piece band and a technical crew of more than 20.

He is scheduled to perform in five Brazilian cities, then appear in Argentina next month.

Sting sang and played bass for the now-defunct group The Police, and has also acted in movies.

took her to the wrong town by mistake, promoters say.

Ms. Faye, who starred in movies in the 1930s and '40s, was to visit this sprawling retirement community south of Tampa on Wednesday.

She had made an appearance in Clearwater earlier in the day and was scheduled to address the gathering of senior citizens here that afternoon as a touring good-health spokeswoman for Pfizer Pharmaceuticals.

The program started with film clips. Many in the audience stuck around for two hours until the appearance was scrubbed when it was learned Ms. Faye had been driven to Sarasota 40 miles away and had a plane to catch.

view as the mother, and she would write her point of view as the kid. We would alternate chapters. And we would write the last chapter together."

Carrie, a budding singer and actress, also just finished co-starring with her mother in a CBS-TV movie, "Hostage," in which she plays a troubled girl who forms a friendship with a widow portrayed by Miss Burnett.

Miss Burnett was in Hawaii to film an episode of "Magnum, P.I."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Journalist Nicholas Daniloff, who was arrested in Moscow by the KGB and jailed last year, has been named a resident fellow at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government.

The promoters will try to reschedule the visit, said publicist Scott Grogan.

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronomer Carl Sagan says this nation's chief failing toward its children is its shrinking interest in space exploration.

"Unhappily — astonishingly — the United States may become the first nation to back off from the exploration of space," Sagan writes in the Nov. 22 edition of Parade magazine.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Carol Burnett is writing a book with her daughter Carrie, a former drug abuser, about the dark times the addiction caused in their household and what it took to overcome the problem.

The Cornell University professor says continued space exploration is needed so children will understand there is a future worth striving for.

"Our children long for realistic maps of a future they (and we) can be proud of. Where are the cartographers of human purpose?" Sagan asked.

Daniloff will join the Joan Shorenstein Barone Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy, according to an announcement Thursday by center director Marvin Kalb.

Daniloff will work on a comparative study of U.S. and Soviet press treatment world crises, the announcement said.

About six percent of all American households now have computers.

At the time of his arrest Daniloff was a contributing editor with U.S. News and World Report. His release was part of an arrangement by the two superpowers that led to the Reykjavik summit meeting in October 1986.

Carrie, 23, who last month celebrated six years of freedom from drugs, came up with the idea of writing the book after talking to junior high school students about drug abuse, Miss Burnett said.

4-H'ers honored at district banquet

By DAVY VESTAL
County Extension Agent-AG
4-H'ers Honored at District Banquet

Jeremy Myers and Aaron Savage of the Deaf Smith County 4-H were two of 39 Panhandle 4-H'ers recognized as Gold Star Award winners recently at the Annual District 1 4-H Banquet. The award, presented by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, is for outstanding 4-H accomplishments.

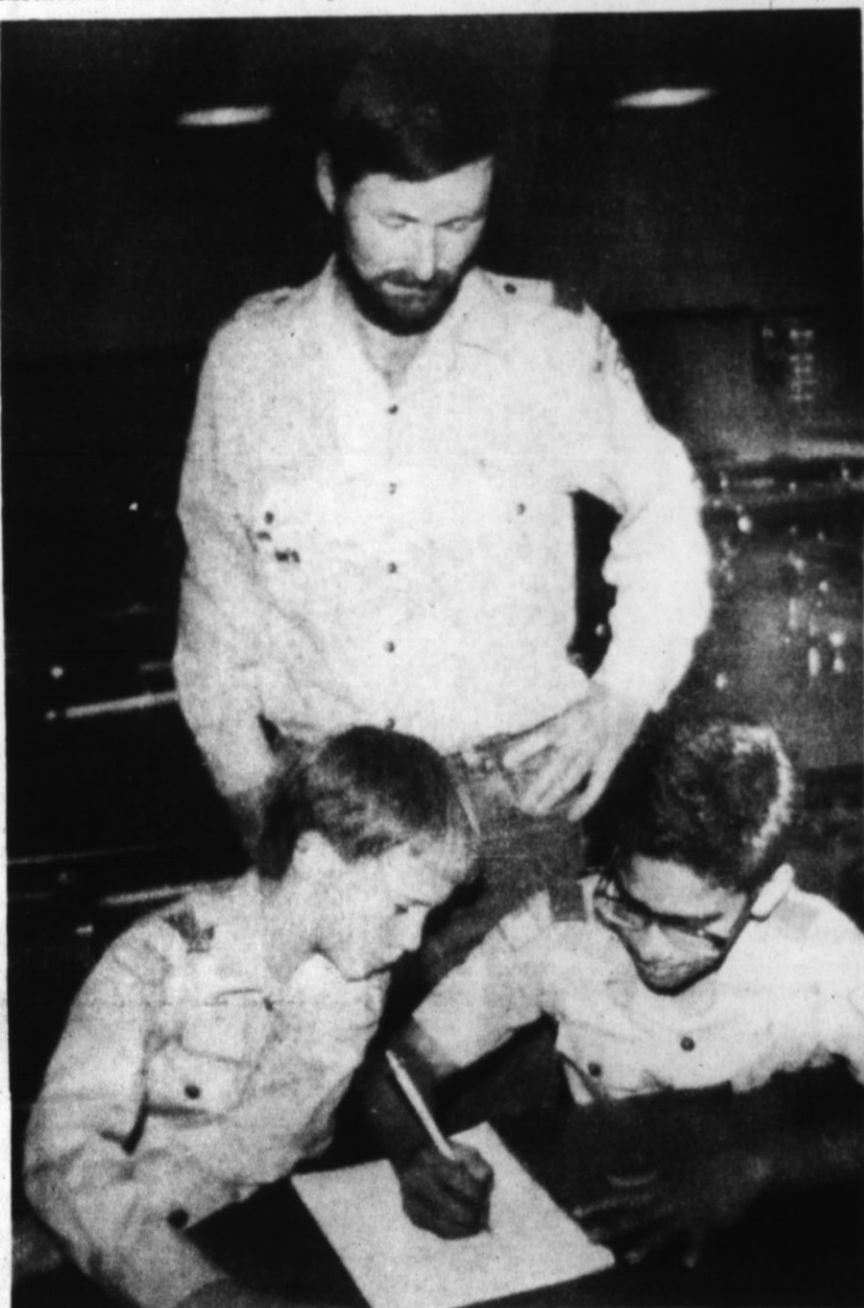

Jeremy Myers is the 15-year-old son of Charles and Judy Myers of Hereford. A sophomore at Hereford High School, Jeremy is active in many aspects of 4-H. Jeremy is widely recognized around the state as showing prize-winning 4-H steers. However, Jeremy is also active locally with 4-H projects. He was very instrumental in developing the 4-H Children's Barnyard back in 1985, a project held each year at the Hereford Town & Country Jubilee.

This past Jubilee in August, over 2000 people visited the Barnyard. Jeremy is presently serving on the County 4-H Council and is a member and officer of the Showmanship 4-H Club. Jeremy has participated in Method Demonstration, 4-H promotionals, and 4-H Beef Cattle record keeping in his 8 years of 4-H participation. He is also a partner in a cow/calf operation with his two sisters, an enterprise that began with a 4-H background.

Aaron Savage, a sophomore at Hereford High School, is the 16-year-old son of Helen and the late Cleatus Savage. His eight-year experience with 4-H has molded quite a style in Aaron's everyday activities. Aaron has taken several honors each year at the State 4-H Trap Shoot as a result of his 4-H shooting sports interest. Aaron has also developed useful skills on the ranch with a horse by his active participation in the 4-H Horse program in Deaf Smith County. Aaron has also taken part in 4-H sheep, swine and electric projects as well as representing project groups and clubs on the County 4-H Council.

He is a member of the newly organized Citizens 4-H Club and other interests include Rodeo Team, Future Farmers of America, football and a member of the Church of Christ in Hereford. Aaron completes his project record book each year in 4-H shooting sports.

Red Cross Update

Special thanks to Cecil Mabe of Sirlin Stockade for his help in making Thanksgiving a more happy holiday for many residents of Deaf Smith County.

Red Cross feeding and sheltering operations are now under way for hard-hit citizens of three states—Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Red Cross southeastern Texas surveys show property affected in nine counties: Brazoria, Galveston, Hardin, Bee, Jefferson, Lee, Orange, Matagorda and Burleson. Hardest hit counties appear to be Lee and Burleson, with 641 homes and mobile homes affected. Red Cross relief activities are being coordinated from

Red Cross Headquarters in Houston. A Northeast Texas Field Headquarters has been established in Tyler, Texas to provide Relief services for 10 disaster affected counties: Madison, Leon, Anerson, Cherokee, Smith, Upshur, Cass, Shelby, Nacogdoches and Rusk. Red Cross officials say damage assessment is being hampered by flooded roads and no estimate of homes affected is available. Workers believe the figure will be high.

Toys for the Christmas toys program are being accepted at the Red Cross office and applications for the Toys Program and the Christmas Stocking fund are being taken at the Red Cross office, 224 South Main
