Man arrested after robbery

A 29-year-old man was arrested early this morning for aggravated robbery after he held up a man at knife point behind a local store.

The robbery occurred behind the Town and Country Convenience Store at the intersection of U.S. highways 60 and 385 in Hereford.

The robber threatened the man at knifepoint and took $150 from the victim. After the robber fled, the man went into the store and called police, and gave a description of the suspect.

Within minutes, the suspect was seen walking down a street near the store. He was immediately arrested and taken to Deaf Smith County Jail, where he was awaiting arraignment this morning.

Other offenses reported by police include a burglary trying to pry a radio out of a car on Sycamore Lane; a prowler reported at 426 Ave. C; a spare tire stolen from a truck parked at Great American; a $50 flower arrangement stolen from a room at Deaf Smith General Hospital; a woman was ticketed for allowing her dog to run loose after a man reported he was attacked by the dog in the 300 block of Union;

A woman reported her checkbook was stolen from her vehicle at some point over the weekend; two B-B holes were shot in the front windows of the Sears store on Main Street; a prowler was reported at 417 Ave. E; charges were filed against a woman for assault in an incident at Blue Water Gardens; a woman has filed charges against another woman for cursing her; and a gunshot was reported in the area of Kingwood and Plains, but officers found nothing suspicious.

Hereford police issued 10 citations and investigated one, non-injury accident.

Senate ready for post-Bork

WASHINGTON [AP] - The Senate, moving toward a seemingly inevitable rejection of Robert H. Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court, appears ready to focus on a substitute nominee even while it debates Bork's qualifications.

The debate on Bork, scheduled to continue today, began Wednesday with senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., calling for a quick vote.

But after more than seven hours of spirited speech-making, there was no agreement as to when the final vote would come.

Fifty-four senators already have announced they will vote against Bork, and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., acknowledged that last-minute conversions are a longshot.

"There may not be any changes, but there could be," said Thurmond, a leader of the Bork supporters.

While speaking out against Bork, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., urged President Reagan and his advisers "not to make the Bork mistake again, and to nominate someone who is in the mainstream of constitutional jurisprudence."

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said the "foregone conclusion" of Bork's defeat "has eliminated the deliberative process."

But Specter, the only Republican to join the Senate Judiciary Committee's 9-5 majority in opposing the nomination, urged the Senate to question future Supreme Court nominees as aggressively as Bork was quizzed about his judicial philosophy and ideology.

Reagan administration officials have refused to discuss any substitute nominee while Bork's nomination is pending.

If a successor nominee reaches the Senate too late in the year, Congress might adjourn before action could be taken. Since lawmakers traditionally take a few months to gear up for a new session, the delay could hurt months.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court already has begun its 1987-88 term one justice short. Bork was nominated last July 1 to replace Justice Lewis F. Powell, who retired June 26.

Bork opponents and supporters on Wednesday accused each other of jeopardizing judicial independence by waging political warfare.

"It's President Reagan who has politicized this matter," contended Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

But Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, blamed Democrats and liberal groups for "partisanship."

Referring to the effort to defeat Bork's nomination, Hatch said,

"This is a new and devastating threat to the independence of the federal judiciary."

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., said of the anti-Bork campaign:

"This has been a rotten process." But Kennedy referred to such charges as a "sideshow of sour grapes."

Bork, rejecting advice that he withdraw after the adverse committee vote, insisted on a floor debate and vote by the full Senate. He was not in the Senate gallery Wednesday, but his wife, Mary Ellen, and son, Robert, were.

Missile hits oil terminal

KUWAIT [AP] - A missile, believed to be a Silkworm, hit Kuwait's offshore oil loading terminal today, setting off a loud explosion and causing "bad damage" and at least three injuries, sources said.

The location was given by the sources as nine miles east of the Al-Ahmadi terminal where Iranian Chinese-made Silkworms hit a U.S.-owned ship and an American-flagged tanker last week.

The explosion was heard in Kuwait City, about 20 miles to the northwest of the Sea Island terminal, at 10:49 a.m. today.

Initial reports from diplomatic and shipping sources said there were no ships at the terminal when it was attacked.

A fire was blazing, the sources said, but the extent of damage was not immediately known.

It was not clear who fired the missile. Iran has targeted Kuwait's shipping since last year, charging that Kuwait aids Iraq, Tehran's enemy in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf War.

It was because of those attacks that the Reagan administration agreed to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers and provide them with U.S. Navy escorts.

A U.S.-escorted convoy today was approaching the opposite end of the gulf, hundreds of miles from the site of the missile blast.

The Sea Island oil loading terminal is a long pier connected by a pipeline to shore terminal facilities nine miles away. It is used mainly for loading supertankers with crude oil.

The missiles last week were fired from Iran-held territory in the Faw peninsula of southern Iraq, about 50 miles to the northeast.

The first missile, on Oct. 15, hit a U.S.-owned supertanker, causing minor damage. The second, 24 hours later, wrecked the crew quarters of the U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tanker Sea Isle City, injuring 18 crew members including the American captain.

In retaliation, the U.S. Navy destroyed two Iranian oil platforms in the central gulf on Monday. Several Iranian leaders have vowed revenge.

At least one and perhaps as many as three of the anti-ship Silkorm missiles also were fired into Kuwait's coastal region in early September.

An explosion was heard in the same area Wednesday but the cause has not been established.

The same day, the Kuwait Cabinet held an emergency session and said later that "protective measures to face all contingencies and contain them" had been reviewed. The Interior Ministry issued a later statement prohibiting civilians from approaching beaches after dark.

Four U.S. Warships were accompanying the two reflagged tankers headed today toward the narrow Strait of Hormuz, the exit to the gulf. Iran maintains Silkworm missile emplacements along the strait.

The convoy, led by the 80,000-ton petroleum product carrier Ocean City, was preceded by minesweeping helicopters. It included the 46,000 ton liquefied petroleum tanker Gas King and the Navy ships Ford, Raleigh, Hawes and William H. Standley, said reporters on the Raleigh.

A U.S. Navy official said there were no signs of unusual Iranian activity.

Kuwaiti officials refused to comment on the cause of a loud explosion Wednesday near its southern coast, where the Mina Saud oil port is located. A shipping agent in Kuwait, who reported the explosion, said there were power outages in the area.

Crash could paralyze Texas

By The Associated Press

If the wobbly U.S. stock market does spur a recession, it will have a far more profound effect on Texas and the Southwest than other areas of the country, experts predict.

"It is simply that we are starting at a higher level of unemployment than other regions," said Cheryl Abbot, an economist with the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Dallas.

Higher unemployment would be one of the first negative effects and it would touch every Texan in some way, Ms. Abbot said Tuesday.

"If you have a job and your brother-in-law doesn't, you may have to support the brother-in-law," she said. "It all spreads from there."

Ms. Abbot added, however, that it is too early to make the assumption that the market retreat portends a recession. She said it will be much more serious for the U.S. economy if the market decline is sustained.

"We will give it a week or so to find out," she said.

Martin Katzman, a professor of economics at the University of Texas at Dallas, said the country could suffer a business downturn, but nothing near the scale of that in the 1930s.

Texans won't be selling apples on Dallas and Houston streets in a 1929-type depression because of built-in stabilizers such as a federal deposit insurance program for banks and similar insurance for savings and loans, unemployment insurance and Social Security, he noted.

Katzman said the Texas economy might be more sensitive to oil price fluctuations than to market gyrations.

"What happens in the Persian Gulf is more important [to Texas] than what happens on Wall Street," he told the Dallas Times Herald.

However, one Dallas economist said history suggests a recession is in the making.

Trends that followed the market crash of 1929 suggest there is "a pretty good chance" of business recession in eight or 10 months, said Daniel Slottje, a professor of economics at Southern Methodist University.

Slottje said most of the stocks that declined in the market crash of 1929 were a broad group of the smaller, lower-growth companies, and that "this time it is the larger blue-chip stocks, which means a lot of heavy manufacturing [that] will not affect us as much."

The implications of the market crash on the Texas economy also was debated Monday by economists at the American Bankers Association meeting in Dallas.

Bud Weinstein, director of SMU's Center for Enterprising, said the flight from the stock market could bring a needed injection of capital to the Texas economy. "If people are taking money out of the stock market, they're probably going to be putting it into local banks and S. L.'s" Weinstein said.

SMU economics professor Ravi Batra, author of the controversial book, "The Great Depression of 1990," took a less rosy view of the possible side effects, suggesting that the falling stock prices could translate into reduced spending by consumers and businesses.

He said that could lead to business layoffs, which in turn would increase unemployment.

But Batra said he doubts that will happen because the 500-plus point decline Monday was just a "minicrash," and not the real disaster that he describes in his book.

"The real thing is still coming," Batra said.

Dr. Benjamin resigned his privileges at DSGH in a letter dated Sept. 1, according to acting administrator Phillis Morrison. The privileges had never been revoked.

SSC backers begin big commercial blitz

AUSTIN [AP] - Backers of the "super collider" bond proposal are buying $400,000 in television advertising time to push the plan they say will help build Texas' economy.

Uniting such political foes as Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the commercials will begin airing Friday and run until the Nov. 3.

"The point is that this is a project that's so important to Texas that everybody across the whole political spectrum and outside the political world...thinks it's a good thing for Texas," political consultant John Deardourff said Wednesday.

The commercials tout the employment and educational benefits of bringing the super collider, the nation's largest scientific research project, to Texas.

They urge Texans to ratify Proposition 19, a proposed constitutional amendment to issue $500 million in bonds to make Texas a more attractive site.

The $4.4 billion super collider, a 52-mile-long underground atom-smasher, will be used in high-energy physics research. Nearly two dozen states are competing for the federal project, which backers say will bring thousands of jobs and enormous scientific prestige to the winning state.

None of the 10 television commercials say specifically that the amendment, if ratified, would allow the state to issue $500 million in general obligation bonds.

Karl Rove, an Austin-based political consultant working for the campaign, said backers believe voters understand that point.

"We think the people are smart enough to go in there and look at the ballot, if they've not already seen it, and realize it's a bonding issue," Rove said.

But he also said there is concern that the long list of other bond sale proposals on the Nov. 3 ballot might cost the super collider amendment votes.

"I think that's a very real fear," he said. "We've got 25 constitutional amendments and two ballot propositions. Voter confusion is going to be high."

In one commercial, Gov. Bill Clements says flatly that "unless we pass Proposition 19, the super collider won't be built in Texas."

In another, University of Texas President William Cunningham calls the atom-smasher "one of the most important scientific projects of this century."

Others featured in the ads include former Democratic secretary of state Myra McDaniel, Texas A. M. President Frank Vandiver and former astronaut Walt Cunningham.

Texas has proposed two sites, the Dallas-Fort Worth area and an area near Amarillo, for the super collider competition.

Hispanics chart course for unity

WASHINGTON [AP] - A group of Hispanic leaders today unveiled an agenda of campaign issues and said it will call 1988 presidential candidates to a forum to address their concerns.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, chairman of the National Hispanic Agenda '88 Unity Task Force, said the agenda was the first such document representing the unified stance by diverse elements of the Hispanic community, those of Mexican, South and Central American, Puerto Rican and Cuban heritage, and he said the effort stemmed from a sense that Hispanic concerns were "underattended" to in past political campaigns.

Denver Mayor Federico Pena, a conference participant, said the coalition is serving notice on the 1988 presidential contenders that "they have to respond to this agenda. We expect them to make a commitment to the issues that we have raised here today."

The coalition plans to set up a forum by the end of the year and invite all presidential candidates to respond to such agenda planks as appointment of Hispanics to the president's Cabinet and the Supreme Court, opposition to moves to make English the official U.S. language, a need for better cooperation and communication in U.S. foreign policy towards the Latin world, a need for reform in immigration and election policies, and political asylum for refugees.

The agenda was developed by some 120 political and community leaders, who said at a news conference today that their action was an effort at a unified position. Cisneros said the action marked the "explosion of the myth that because the Hispanic community was so diverse it was not possible to bring it together."

He said that one area in which no consensus was possible that U.S. policy on Central American regional conflicts.

The agenda, which also addresses Hispanic concerns in the areas of education, housing, business development and health care, states that "the new reality is that U.S. and Latin American interests are interdependent as never before...Newer issues such as the debt and trade situation, immigration, employment, the drug traffic, human rights and undocumented workers demand our attention. Historical U.S. policy concerns for ideological and strategic issues, while still valid, are insufficient."

It called for "a new U.S.-Latin American partnership" to develop "a new perception of and collaboration with Latin America."

Goals in the group's agenda include:

- Defeat of the English-only movement, which many Hispanics see as a threat to them in voting rights, criminal proceedings and education.
- Changes in naturalization rules to allow more Hispanics to apply for citizenship.

- Standardization of voter registration; establishment of a Justice Department enforcement office specifically to protect voting rights of Hispanics; and legislation to prevent gerrymandering that diminishes ethnic voting clout.

- Establishment of state political party affirmative action plans to increase Hispanic participation, and consideration of the Hispanic agenda for endorsement by the state parties.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., told the conference that the potential political power of Hispanics, "if used in the right way, can advance the economic and social aspiration of people who, until recently, have been all but shut out of the decision-making process in this country."

Stocks tumble hits 'wealth factor' hard

NEW YORK [AP] This week's collapse of the stock market hit especially hard at the wealth factor, at people on either end of the age spectrum, at the retirees and the yuppies.

The theory behind the wealth factor is that when people have assets beneath them, no matter how illiquid those assets are, they feel more financially secure than would be suggested by their annual incomes.

It is akin to those consumer confidence measures that retailers follow so closely, the notion being that when confidence is high people buy, and when it is low they sit on their wallets.

The latter would be a new experience for the yuppies.

But it is old stuff to the retirees, many of whom have sobering memories of those long gray days of the Great Depression.

Some, of course, actually had their ease and, if bountifully endowed with elements of the wealth factor, enjoyed their golf, their boat, their dining out, confident their stocks were sound and their dividends assured.

All that might remain so. The yuppie might keep his assets, and retirees might never have dividends cut or prices rise. But the wealth factor has been pierced by fear, and life today can't be as easy as it was last week.

The yuppie knows that further market vibrations could shake the economy's foundation, endanger his job, even cost him his home. He is aware that he has been tempted to swim far from shore, and now could be battling an undertow.

The retiree already knew that nothing financial or economic should be taken for granted, and that they must take precautions against the worst of events. But that doesn't mean they are better off than the yuppie.

The yuppie has time to recover. No matter what consequences ensue from the stock market decline, no matter how shattered the confidence, the yuppie knows recovery will come some day. He has potential earning power. And health.

The retiree might not have time. Recovery conceivably could come within the week, but it could take years. Earning power is down. Health could be poor. But above all, uncertainty has returned: Perhaps, as had been assumed, there aren't enough assets to maintain a good lifestyle over the remainder of the life.

Nobody can say for certain that economic fortunes of either group will be badly damaged. The incredible decline of prices earlier in the week could even turn out to be mainly a stock market aberration rather than an economic omen.

But lifestyles will change. The younger generation has learned first hand about the cyclical nature of things economic, and in the future it won't be as certain about a leveraged lifestyle.

The older generation has been reminded again about what it wanted to forget, that economic security is not always attainable, no matter how many years are invested in seeking it.

In each case, fear has pierced the wealth factor

Fired cook getting offers

MIDLAND, Texas - A cook who claims he lost his job with a catering business because he skipped work to help rescuers free Jessica McClure says he's had several other offers but hasn't made a choice.

Meanwhile, David Kelly's former employer said Tuesday her shop has been pelted with eggs and she's received crank phone calls. She said the firing was prompted by other reasons.

David Kelly, 40, said he learned Saturday he had been fired from Foods Fantastic after working round-the-clock in efforts to free 16-month-old Jessica from an abandoned well shaft.

The toddler was freed Friday evening, 58 hours after she tumbled into the shaft. Kelly said he passed signals to various crews and handled the air hose pumping fresh air into the cavity from Thursday through the rescue.

The cook said the catering company owner, Charlene Bunnell told him after his termination, "I understand your feelings at what was going on, but you don't care enough about the business."

Kelly said Tuesday he's received several offers of a new job, but hasn't decided what he will do next. Ms. Bunnell denies Kelly's account of the firing, saying she was angry that Kelly took the "vindictive action" of telling local reporters he had been fired because of his volunteer work.

"It would have been wonderful if I had done it a week before, but I didn't know this was going to happen," Ms. Bunnell said of Kelly's termination. "I am a typical small business employer trying to run a business. He was not treated any differently than any other employee," she told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Tuesday.

The episode has stirred up feelings in Midland, where as many as 200 police, paramedics, fire officials and other emergency personnel joined in the marathon rescue efforts.

"We're a little leery because we got several strange phone calls today," Ms. Bunnell said. "People were calling and asking what time we close and when we get out of here."

She said eggs were tossed at her store overnight Sunday after the first news reports that Kelly had lost his job. She said there have been no other acts of vandalism, and that no serious damage resulted.

Sessions set for ceremony

SAN ANTONIO, Texas [AP] - The FBI is investigating reports that a man sentenced in 1965 to 20 years in prison by U.S. District Judge William Sessions sought later to have Sessions assassinated, according to a published report today.

The San Antonio Light said Texas law enforcement sources, who asked not to be identified, on Wednesday confirmed an earlier published report. The threats against Sessions, the FBI director-designate, were reported Sunday by the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The central figure in the investigation, the Cleveland newspaper account said, is Jack L. Dickie of San Antonio, who was convicted of fraud in a highly publicized 1984 trial involving former Justice of the Peace Mike Hernandez.

The Plain Dealer said authorities believed Dickie, after being sentenced to prison in 1985 by Sessions, discussed a revenge killing of Sessions. Dickie was convicted Oct. 2 in a Helena, Mont., federal court of five racketeering charges in the deaths of three men who took out insurance policies in which Dickie and a co-defendant were named as beneficiaries.

Dickie, who faces up to 65 years in prison on the Montana charges, is to be sentenced Nov. 17.

Dickie is suspected of bringing two other men into the assassination plot, the Light said.

Sessions will leave his post as chief of U.S. district judge for the Western District of Texas when he takes the reins of the FBI on Nov. 2.

IMMIGRANTS SWELL POPULATION GROWTH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The population of the United States grew by about 2.25 million during 1985 — the most recent year for which figures are available — swelling the total to about 240.5 million, according to Internal Medicine News.

The population growth was due to a natural increase — excess of births over deaths of about 1.6 million — and a net immigration of 577,000, including undocumented immigration of 200,000.

The journal reports that 26 percent of the U.S. population growth in 1985 was due to the influx of immigrants.

SUEDE BOOTS

Dear Heloise: I recently bought some suede boots (even the heels are covered in suede). I would appreciate it very much if you could offer some tips for cleaning them. Thanks. — Shirley Jones, San Antonio, Texas

Ways with Wine by David Hutchins

BLENDING

Blending is the practice of mixing or "marrying" wines of somewhat different characteristics. Virtually all sherries, including the best, are blends. Most but not all of the best Champagnes are blends as well. On the other hand, the finest table wines of the world are emphatically not blends. They would be much less interesting and not as good if they were. One legitimate reason to blend wines is to produce a wine of consistent quality and character year after year. This way, a consumer may buy with confidence under a familiar name or label. Another reason for blending is to produce something better in the way of a wine than any of its component parts. Lastly, blending may make acceptable a wine which otherwise would be much less so.

At THE STORE you will find a large selection of imported wines from France and Germany as well as many fine California wines. We are regarded by many in this area as "the place" to go for fine wines so why not join your friends who have already discovered us. In addition to domestic and imported wines in a wide price range we carry a large selection of beer. Come by and see us at 400 N. 25 Mile Ave. 364-7802. Open: Mon.-Sat. 10-9, use our drive up door until midnight for beer and wine, on Sun. only beer and wine is available from 12-12.

Names In The News

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Anthony Ray, a 25-year-old dancer on television's "Fame," was found beaten and unconscious in a Harlem bar, police said. Ray, who plays Leroy Johnson on the syndicated TV show based on the movie about New York City's High School of the Performing Arts, was treated at a hospital Thursday and released, said Sgt. Diane Kuebler. He refused to make a formal complaint.

ATLANTA (AP) — Mayor Andrew Young has become a grandfather. His oldest daughter, Andrea Young, gave birth Thursday to 7-pound, 14-ounce Taylor Marie Stanley in Washington. "Mother, father, grandmother, grandfather and baby are all fine," said the 55-year-old mayor's wife, Jean Young. The grandparents were coincidentally in Washington for a Democratic affair. Andrea Young, an attorney, has been married to the Rev. A. Knighton Stanley for two years. The couple live in Washington.

LONDON (AP) — Sir John Gielgud, the courtly British actor who has delighted stage and screen audience for more than six decades, returns to London's West End stage in February after an absence of more than 10 years, his agent says. The 63-year-old Gielgud will star in Hugh Whitmore's new play, "The Best of Friends," in a limited run, Laurence Evans said Thursday. Gielgud, who last appeared on the West End stage in 1977, will play the British intellectual Sir Sydney Cockerell, a friend of George Bernard Shaw. In December the actor goes to New York to star in "Arthur: On the Rocks," the sequel to the hit comedy "Arthur."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock 'n' roll legend Chuck Berry did his signature "duck walk" to the cheers of hundreds who watched the unveiling of the guitarist's star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. The ceremony Thursday was held in connection with the release of the Taylor Hackford film about Berry, "Hail, Hail Rock and Roll!"

U.S. Constitution analyzed by club

The Pioneer Study Club met recently at Something Special with Fern Sigle and Hazel Ford serving as hostesses.

Mary Panciera presided. The invocation was given by Ford; Eunice Petersen led the Pledge of Allegiance and Gladys Miller led the Salute to the Texas Flag.

The program continued the study of the yearbook theme, "We The People". Helen Rose, guest speaker, gave the program on Story of 55 Men and Their Legacy to a Nation. Rose noted that the country was in chaos in 1787 as each state printed its own money, refused to pay taxes to a central government, and outraged farmers stormed the courts to prevent foreclosure on their properties. The national debt had risen to more than $100 million.

In May, 1787, in Independence Hall of Philadelphia, 55 men representing 12 states, excluding Rhode Island, met for four sweltering months had created the U.S. Constitution. Theirs was a difficult task, as diverse opinions threatened to destroy the convention: the smaller states were jealous of the large ones; the South distrusted the North; and large property owners disagreed with merchants. It was on July 16, 1787, that the constitution framers stuck the "Great Compromise" ensuring equal representation for each state in the Senate and representation by population in the House of Representatives.

From that point, it was relatively easy to complete the Constitution. On Sept. 17, 1787, the final draft was signed by 39 delegates as three refused to sign it, and 12 had returned home.

To continue the program, Billee Johnson gave a talk on "Human Liberties Shared By All: The Bill of Rights." She stated that when the newly-established Congress met in 1789 one of its first priorities was to amend the Constitution. James Madison proposed a series of amendments, 12 of which were adopted by Congress. In 1791, 10 of these 12 amendments were ratified by the states.

She noted that the Articles have withstood the test of time but the exact meaning of some is still debated. "Judicial interpretation will continue to shade their precise meaning but freedom bestowed by these Articles are basic to our way of life," said Johnson. She then presented each member with a pocket size copy of the Constitution, pointing out that in 200 years, the Constitution had only been amended 26 times including the Bill of Rights.

Bessie Hill, for My Turn, told of the early history of the Pioneer Study Club. It was organized in 1909 in the schools as an anti-cigarette league and the first civic project was Mother's Park.

Willie Wimberly gave the Federation Report. Lunch was served from a table decorated in red, white and blue garden flowers.

Present were: Leatrus Clark, Fern Ford, Hazel Ford, Mabel Heard, Hill, Bea Hutson, Johnson, Eloile Manning, Miller, Panciera, Petersen, Sigle, Rosemary Thomas, Wimberly, and guest, Helen Rose.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I recently returned from a vacation that gave us an opportunity to walk through three airports—Atlanta, O'Hare in Chicago and Los Angeles International. In all three places we encountered clergymen begging for money.

My wife, who is a soft touch, dropped a dollar bill into every box she saw.

When I told her I thought it was a racket, she snapped, "It can't be. The airports wouldn't allow it."

In the Los Angeles airport, a kindly looking gentleman wearing a neat black suit and a clerical collar seemed friendly, so I asked him who benefited from the contributions. He said, "The homeless." I then asked how they helped the homeless. He replied, "We help people make their house payments." My wife picked up on the implausibility of that response and asked, "How can they be making payments on a house if they are homeless..." I didn't want any trouble so I quickly pulled her away.

What can you tell us about these airport solicitors, Ann Landers. Your readers depend on you to get behind the scenes and let us know what's going on.—Suspicious in Orange County

Dear Sus: I did a little digging and the best information came from a recent piece in The New York Times by Robert Lindsey. Here are some facts:

On a good day in the L.A. airport, a man who is dressed like a priest collects about $150. He wears a small badge identifying him as a minister of the Universal Life Church, a mail-order organization in Modesto, Calif.

Security officials say that at a growing number of airports, new groups asking for money have appeared. Maurice McDonald, manager of Lindbergh Airport in San Diego, said, "We have ladies that look like nurses but they aren't, men who look like priests but they aren't, and kids in training to be Hare Krishnas. They pounce on servicemen and dazzle them with sweetness. If you're 17 or 18 years old and haven't seen anybody but a drill sergeant for 14 weeks and someone smiles at you and says, 'Hi, where y'a from...' you might donate, too."

James Kapel, an assistant city attorney for Los Angeles, said, "The problem is that it is very difficult to take action against a religion."

I would like to suggest, Dear Readers, that if you want to donate money to a religious organization, don't drop money in a box at an airport or mail it anywhere. Give it to your local church. Most churches are struggling these days and they deserve your help.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: From time to time you mention support groups for readers who have a variety of problems and illnesses. I am sure that these groups do a great deal of good.

A number of us have rare diseases. There are no telethons for us nor do we get public support. There is, however, a place to write that will put people with rare diseases in touch with one another or help them start a self-help group. Please tell your readers about it. It has been wonderful for me and my family. The address is: National Organization for Rare Disorders, P.O. Box 8823, New Fairfield, Conn. 06812. Please enclose a long self-addressed stamped envelope with 39 cents return postage. Sign me—Happier Now

DEAR HAPPIER: So am I. Almost every day a plea from someone with a rare disease crosses my desk. I'm delighted to know help is available for them. Thanks for writing.

Hereford begins series against top 1-4A opponents

Whiteface-Eagle battle set for Friday

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Every game the last three weeks was a game that the Hereford Whiteface varsity football team had to win, and it will be that way the rest of the District 1-4A season.

Those games were Hereford victories over Lubbock Dunbar, Levelland, and Dumas. But the next three district battles will be against the teams that are ahead of Hereford in the district standings—Canyon, Lubbock Estacado, and Borger.

Hereford plays at Canyon Friday night, with a 7:30 p.m. kickoff at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium. The Whitefaces go into the game with a 3-2 district record and a 3-4 overall record, while the Eagles enter the game at 3-1 in the district and 5-1 overall.

Hereford beat Dumas 22-6 last week, and Canyon suffered a 10-7 loss to Lubbock Estacado.

"I think this is a special game for Hereford as well as for Canyon, because of the great rivalry between the two schools," Hereford head Coach Don Cumpton said.

"I certainly hope we have a packed house on the east side of the stadium, because I think that will definitely be to our advantage. I think it will be a heck of a ball game. I know our team is excited and so is theirs," Cumpton adds.

Friday's game is between two teams that are quite even statistically. Here is a statistical comparison:
Rushing offense: Canyon, 285.0 yards per game; Hereford, 199 yards per game.

Passing offense: Hereford, 99.0 yards per game; Canyon, 85.7 yards per game.

Total offense: Canyon, 370.7 yards per game; Hereford, 290.0 yards per game.

Rushing defense: Hereford, 106.1 yards per game; Canyon, 113.8 yards per game.

Passing defense: Canyon, 58.8 yards per game; Hereford, 85.5 yards per game.

Total defense: Canyon, 172.6 yards per game; Hereford, 196.6 yards per game.

Each team's offensive attack includes one major threat in the running game—Hereford's Marcus Brown and Canyon's Tim Anuskiewicz.

Brown has rushed 87 times for 666 yards, for an average of 7.6 yards and seven touchdowns. Anuskiewicz has 559 yards in 101 carries for a 5.5 average and eight touchdowns. Anuskiewicz has also caught two touchdown passes.

Hereford has an edge statistically at the quarterback position. Jason Scott of Hereford has completed 37 of 71 passes for 557 yards and nine touchdowns, compared to William Langley of Canyon completing 22 of 56 passes for 393 yards and five touchdowns.

Scott's favorite target in recent games has been Rodney McCracken, whose season reception totals are 15 catches for 216 yards and five touchdowns. McCracken, a safety on defense, has also scored one defensive touchdown, returning an interception for a touchdown.

The Eagles run a veer offense and a ball control offense. On defense, Canyon uses both the 4-3 and 5-3 defensive patterns.

"Canyon is playing with a lot more intensity than they have for several years," Coach Cumpton said. "They're in the same situation we're in. They can't afford to have us beat them, because if they lose, they'll have to have help from someone else."

"We're still in control of our own destiny. We didn't care who won between Canyon and Estacado—we just didn't want a tie," Cumpton continues.

"The key to this game is that we can't afford to let them control the football or keep the ball. To do that, the best thing for us is to get the ball and keep it.

"The kicking game should be a big factor in this game. They have a good punt returner," Cumpton adds.

For the Whiteface defense, four players are averaging more than seven tackles per game, led by linebackers Michael Phibbs, and Lee Young each with 69 total tackles. Defensive tackle Edward Martinez had 57 tackles, and linebacker Joe Medrano has 52 tackles.

Against Dumas, Young led the team with 13 tackles, and Martinez had 12 tackles. Rodney McCracken had 10 tackles, as did Phibbs, and Martinez had two tackles for losses. McCracken also knocked down three passes, and defensive end Brad Smith causes two fumbles.

Hereford and Canyon have played three common opponents this season—Lubbock Dunbar, Levelland, and Dumas. Here are the final scores of those games: Hereford 22, Dumas 6; Canyon 62, Dumas 19; Hereford 25, Lubbock Dunbar 13; Canyon 35, Lubbock Dunbar 14; Hereford 28, Levelland 6; and Canyon 27, Levelland 14.

Golfer shoots his age in Tuesday round

A Hereford golfer achieved on Tuesday something he had been trying to do for years—shoot his age.

Don T. Martin, shot a 73 at Pitman Golf Course, reports Brent Warner, assistant golf pro at the course.

Three of Martin's friends witnessed the feat—Bill Davis, Bernie Orel, and Max Leon.

David Wottle of the United States won the 800-meter run in the 1972 Olympics while wearing a golf cap.

A Wide Open Pathway For Colvin

Stanton seventh grade running back Petey Colvin found a wide open field to rush 10 yards for a touchdown Tuesday in a game against Plainview Red. Colvin went into the game averaging four touchdowns per game, but the Stanton team was limited to just this one touchdown in a 14-6 loss to Plainview Red. [Brand Photo by Gary Christensen]

A Serve By Rachel

Rachel Alaniz, a Stanton Junior High School eighth grade volleyball player, serves the ball during Monday's match against Levelland. The Stanton volleyball season comes to an end this week when the eighth and ninth grade teams play in the Clovis Tournament today through Saturday.

Where Did This Tree Come From!

Would this wood be good for wooden trophies? Yes! says Loopy Crox, a tae kwon do instructor who builds trophies for the annual Texas Panhandle Tae Kwon Do Championship, held in Hereford each year. This year's tournament is scheduled on Nov. 21. Crox, who also builds trophies for other tournament, said he was suprised a few days ago when this tree was found next to his shed. Crox stands with his saw at the bottom left, and Riva Crox is standing in front of the tree. Students and friends standing on the tree are, from left: Danny Carbajal, Patrick Hayes, Israel Camargo, Stewart Jackson, Marie Crox, and Creta Crox.

Senator Bill Sarpalio Reports

AUSTIN — In the first two articles of this five-part series about the 27 propositions on the Nov. 3 ballot, we claimed the Texas Constitution was too tightly worded for its own good. In this, the third of five columns, we offer proof to back that claim — Proposition 15.

Proposition 15 does nothing more than give the voters in Fayette, Gregg and Nueces counties permission to abolish their county treasurers posts at an election to be held at a later date. That's right; our vote on Nov. 3 doesn't abolish the posts. It merely gives permission to voters in the above mentioned counties to hold a subsequent election to take care of the actual abolition.

So it is with the Texas Constitution. Often as not, proposed changes in the way local governments conduct their business first must be submitted to voters statewide. This year proves no exception with a total of 11 amendments (including Proposition 15) dealing with local government going to the voters.

The most important to our part of the state is Proposition 25, which would allow an election in Randall County to determine whether the Amarillo Hospital District in effect can expand its tax base into that part of the county not served currently by any hospital district.

Proponents of the amendment point out that the Amarillo Hospital District already in reality is providing services to those Randall County residents in the so-called "no man's land" and that it would be only fair for the district to receive a tax reimbursement. Opponents say it might prove cheaper just to have Randall County contract with the district to cover the cost of serving any indigent patients who might reside in the "no man's land".

Either way, it is important to remember a vote for Proposition 25 does not guarantee the tax will be levied. Passage of the proposition means only that Randall County would be allowed to have an election to determine whether the tax will be levied.

Not surprisingly, most of the nine other local amendments on the ballot also deal with property taxes. Three, in fact actually would eliminate existing property taxes.

Proposition 11 would grant an exemption from taxes to property that is stored in the state for less than one-half of a year. This so-called "free-port" exemption is aimed at encouraging companies to manufacture in Texas products for export or at least store those export items in the state. The exemption had been granted by statute until state courts recently ruled the exemption needed to be backed by a constitutional amendment.

Supporters of Proposition 11 say the free-port exemption would be good for the state's business climate and point out that the tax never has been collected since the exemption has been in force, albeit unconstitutionally, for many years. Opponents say removal of the exemption would allow property tax burdens to be distributed more equitably. They also say the exemption is unfair to Texas businesses that don't produce products for export.

Proposition 20 would grant a property tax exemption to offshore oilrig equipment that currently is not being used. Everyone agrees the exemption would be beneficial to an industry that currently is in a bad slump. Opponents, though, say the exemption would put a heavier burden on individual taxpayers. They also wonder why the exemption isn't extended to inland equipment that is not being used.

Proposition 10 would create an exemption for personal property other than homes not used for production of income. In effect, we're talking about a property tax exemption for boats, airplanes, mobile homes, etc. Proponents say few tax dollars actually are collected from the items that would be exempted and that exemptions would stimulate economic activity. Opponents claim the exemption would shift property tax burdens from those most able to pay to those less able.

Moving away from exemptions, we turn our attention to Proposition 5, a complicated amendment that would allow the state to construct jointly with the Texas Turnpike Authority toll roads. The amendment also would allow counties with more than 400,000 people to sell bonds or levy property taxes to construct toll roads.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband suffered a transient ischemic attack (TIA) six weeks ago. He became very drowsy, lost his vision and was numb in the right leg. My doctor examined him and sent him to see a neurologist. He diagnosed him as having atherosclerotic cerebrovascular disease, TIA and diabetes. His diabetes had been under control for over four years. He had no history of high blood pressure or high cholesterol.

A CAT scan, angiogram and EEG were all normal. He was given medicine and aspirin. Since then he has had lightheadedness, dizziness and equilibrium problems when he stands.

He had been a heavy smoker, but he stopped smoking. I watch his diet. The neurologist says he is having symptoms and that something is going on. I would appreciate your opinion as to what his equilibrium problem might be. His ears checked out okay.

DEAR READER: I gather that your husband regained his vision and that the numbness in his right leg disappeared. The symptoms of a transient ischemic attack (TIA) are of short duration. They can be any of the varied symptoms of a stroke, including changes in vision, paralysis or loss of speech.

The exact basis for a TIA is not understood. It may be caused by debris that breaks loose from the wall of an artery and is carried to the brain. The debris may not completely block a large artery and may even pass through the circulation. They are dangerous, as they often precede a regular stroke. Spasm of arteries in the brain may produce similar symptoms.

I have discussed TIAs in more detail in my new Special Report 78, About Strokes, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope with 39 cents postage to THE HEALTH LETTER/78, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

The equilibrium problem may be from inadequate circulation to the brain. This can be a symptom of a stroke, and is often associated with blockage in the arteries that pass along with the vertebrae and enter the skull with the spinal cord. These arteries supply the brain stem, which includes areas concerned with balance.

Both smoking and diabetes can contribute to disease of the arteries to the brain (atherosclerotic cerebrovascular disease).
