23 dogs confiscated after complaints

By ANDREA LAMB
Staff Writer

An investigation into a complaint that dogs were being mistreated changed its tide when county officials saw that the dog owner's living conditions were worse than the dogs'.

County authorities and a representative with the Department of Human Resources in Amarillo escorted 71-year-old Audrey Mills from her home Friday south of Hereford to Northwest Texas Hospital's psychiatric ward in Amarillo because of her questionable mental health.

Mills had apparently been living in a station wagon outside her house with two dogs locked inside and approximately 23 other dogs stashed in two sheds and in her house.

"My original complaint was that her (Mills) German shepherd was terrorizing my dogs by eating their food," said Virginia Thompson, Mills' neighbor who lodged a complaint. "Then I mentioned the fact that she lived with two dogs inside that station wagon, and things started rolling after that."

Thompson then called Suzanne Vogler, a founder of the new Help Save Our Pets organization, and explained the situation. Vogler contacted Karen Green, pet detective from Amarillo, Vernon Hope, an investigator for the local district attorney's office, and sheriff's Deputy Jimmie Hudgens to accompany her to Mills' home to inspect the complaint Tuesday night.

Hope and Hudgens were unable to locate Mills and left. But Vogler and Green returned that night, located Mills, and persuaded her to open her house to them.

"What I found was awful, the smell was absolutely awful," said Vogler. "There must have been 10 to 15 dogs locked up in that house, and dog poop was so caked on the floor it was cushiony when I stepped on it."

Hudgens said that Mills slept in a chair inside the house, but spent most of her time in the station wagon with the two dogs.

"There's really nothing wrong with the dogs except that none of them have had their rabies shots," said Hope. "They've certainly been fed and watered enough."

Green said that after she had seen the house, she thought Mills was mentally unstable and filed charges against Mills Wednesday with the Department of Human Resources. Mills will receive a physical and psychiatric questioning at Northwest Texas Hospital which will determine if

WDIC looking for funding for plan

By SPEEDY NIEMAN

The Waste Deposit Impact Committee—set up to protect Deaf Smith County from negative impacts of the waste repository study—is now seeking funding to complete a comprehensive community economic stabilization, transition and development plan to help with the withdrawal of the program.

The Nuclear Waste Policy Amendment Act of 1987 declared Yucca Mountain in Nevada as the lone site for repository study, called for an orderly withdrawal of the project from Deaf Smith County and Hanford, Wash., with the termination of all site specific work within 90 days, and terminate financial assistance to states and its contractors—which includes the WDIC.

Phil Niedzielski-Eichner, executive director of WDIC, believes the community can overcome the negative economic impact that may result from the withdrawal and come out as strong or stronger than ever, but he emphasizes that it won't happen "on a wish and a hope—it will take teamwork and good old Panhandle hard work."

Eichner outlined his comprehensive plan during a program for the Hereford Board of Realtors this week and has been presenting his views for implementing the process to other organizations and groups. He and a WDIC assistant, Dianne Pierson, have already interviewed more than 40 business and community leaders to get an indication of interest in growth and development.

While Eichner feels confident the WDIC will be successful in establishing a comprehensive plan, he stresses that WDIC can only facilitate the planning process.

"The community will need to carry the burden. The chamber, businesses, financial institutions, community groups, Realtors, city and county governments, and others who can offer time and interest will have to commit to make it happen," said Eichner.

"Most importantly at this time, the community needs to decide if it wants to promote growth and development. All successful efforts require broad community support, a positive community attitude about itself and it must be progressive and aggressive in its efforts—in short, it must become a 'can-do' community," added the WDIC director.

While presenting his planning process, Eichner stresses three points: the need for community reconciliation, the need to say yes or not to economic development, and the need to approach development systematically and, ideally, with community consensus.

Eichner said WDIC is a few weeks away from being able to identify the implications of the withdrawal of the Department of Energy and its con-

"This community had to cope with one of the nation's most controversial and divisive issues. Reconciliation must take place."

tractors, but the preliminary numbers look like this:

- A. 84 Hereford residents (38 local and 46 non-local)
- B. 25 homes
- C. $3 million payroll
- D. $3 million in procurements
- E. 3 renovated buildings
- F. Perceptions of community's economic viability

Eichner said rumors have been rampant the past few weeks that DOE and its contractors will maintain a longterm presence here, that the Nevada site will be disqualified and that Deaf Smith would be next in line again. However, the WDIC director said he has detected little potential that an on-going presence will be maintained and that the chance of the project returning to this county are so remote that "dwelling on the potential would be a waste of time and energy."

In his assessment, there will be a substantial drop in DOE personnel by March 21, another substantial drop by mid-summer, and only a small contingent to remain through the end of the federal government's fiscal year—perhaps the end of the year itself.

So, declares Eichner, the community's time and energy would be better applied in helping develop and implement an economic development plan. But the community's interest in growth and progress needs to be known explicitly, so that effort and resources can be put to effective use, adds the WDIC director.

"Always bear in mind that this community had to cope with one of the nation's most controversial and divisive issues," points out Eichner. "If there remains a residual bad feeling from the repository issue, then reconciliation—restoring friendship and harmony—must take place."

He adds that a key part of the change process is the completion of an honest assessment of the community's assets and liabilities—those things that promote development or inhibit it. "My assessment is that the assets clearly outweigh the liabilities," says Eichner, "but the negatives must be addressed for meaningful development to occur."

Among the assets listed by Eichner are schools, housing stock, fiscally sound governments, good transportation facilities, surplus utility capacity, labor supply, a relatively high wealth factor, and entrepreneurial agricultural history.

In his assessment, the liabilities include unresolved community relations (race, pro and anti-groups, farmer vs. businessman), quality of life factors, absence of venture capital, depressed retail sector, and a defeatist mentality.

"We must define what we desire to be... we must establish a vision for the 21st century, and a plan must be pulled together that defines the steps necessary to realize the vision," stated Eichner.

Strong community leadership is an important factor in economic development, says the WDIC director. "I'm not talking about elected officials but that second tier of leaders—key individuals in business and civic positions. He relates that he asked a number of people in the county to name the community leaders and there was little overlap of names."

"My assessment is that the torch has been passed from the hands of people like Henry Sears and Jim Witherspoon but perhaps has been dropped or bobbed by the next generation," says Eichner. He adds that it is essential for the torch to be picked up, or more tightly grasped, by the "up-and-coming leaders."

In summary, says Eichner, the WDIC will continue to monitor the DOE withdrawal and work to minimize the impact as long as the committee is in operation. "Our key effort will be the completion of a development plan. For this to be an effective activity, the community must make a commitment, establish a plan and support its implementation, and concerned citizens must become involved and become leaders for the community."

Bank deposits mixed

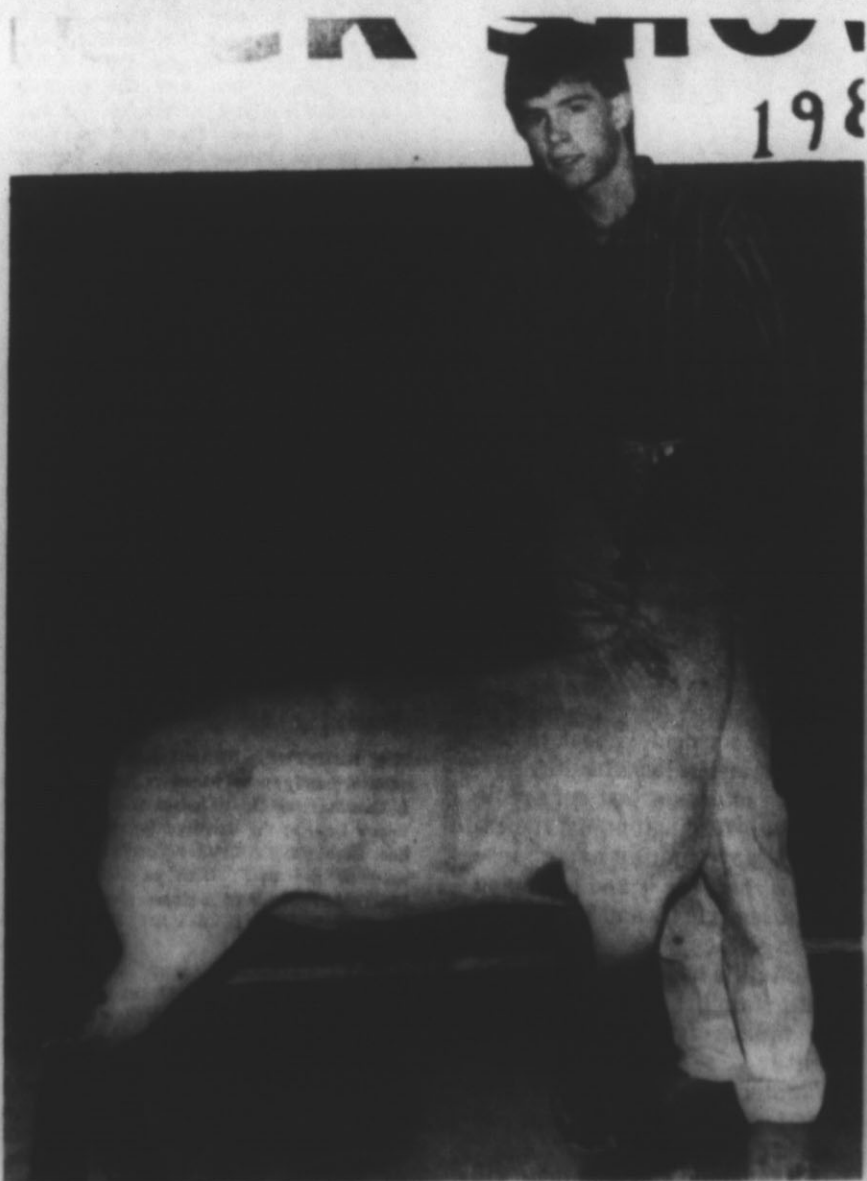

Total deposits at Hereford's two banks amounted to $150.6 million at the close of business on Dec. 31, 1987, according to statements published by the financial institutions.

While one bank showed an increase in deposits and the other a decrease, the total for the two was down $10.9 million over the same time a year ago. Loans totalled $92.1 million for both banks, up only $13,000 over the close of business in 1986.

Hereford State Bank's statement showed deposits of $68.3 million—an increase of almost $8 million over the same period a year ago. The bank listed loans at $41.8 million—an increase of about $6 million.

First National Bank listed its deposits at $86.3 million—a decrease of about $14.6 million from December 1986. Loans totalled $50.3 million on Dec. 31, compared to $56.7 million a year ago.

Kylie Gibson and David Piaz, both 17, are in custody at the Parmer County Jail in Farwell. Two other youths are being sought.

The four are charged with stealing liquor from Cattle Guard Liquor Store. No money was taken.

Congress and family don't mix

WASHINGTON (AP) — The California congressman stalked into a meeting and announced that his Easter vacation, as usual, didn't coincide with his children's time off from school. "That's it," he said. "I'm quitting."

Maybe that wasn't the only reason Tom Rees retired 10 years ago.

But in the cloakrooms of the Capitol, in the corridors and over dinner, talk often turns to the difficulties many congressmen know all too well, the compromises they make in trying to balance family life with what amounts to two other jobs — serving constituents at home and making laws in Washington.

"It's a great job," says Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., "but it's a lousy life."

Not even a chief executive officer in the corporate world has to put up with 3:30 a.m. floor votes, weekends on the road and — particularly for House members with two-year terms — near-continuous campaigning to survive the next election.

"When other people are having weekends working around the house, riding a bike, playing touch football... what we do is go out and stay in Ramadas and make speeches, tour factories," says Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo. "I don't say that to complain. It's part of my job and I love the job. But I say it as a matter of fact. Most people wouldn't consider that a bang-up weekend."

The logistics are complicated, starting with whether to leave the family at home or bring the wife and kids to Washington. The psychological aspects are tough; lawmakers themselves describe their job as self-centered and pre-emptive. And the demands on members, from weekend travel to late-night legislating, often create or aggravate tensions between husbands and wives.

"It's easy to feel rejected," says Beverly Hubbe Tauke, wife of Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa. "It can be traumatic. A relationship that could otherwise be a wonderful thing could be destroyed quickly."

There are only 23 women in the House and two in the Senate, the great majority of them unmarried or mothers of children already grown. So the typical congressional spouse is a wife.

She often gets a taste of her new life the moment the moving van arrives and her husband isn't around to help out with the kids. Then there's the daily unanswerable question: Will he be home for dinner? And the annual hassle of trying to plan holiday vacations. Congress aims for October adjournment each year but has made that deadline only twice since 1979; in 1982 the final gavel didn't come down until Dec. 23.

Despite the pressures on political couples to stay together, a recent survey found 10 divorced or separated senators and 28 divorced or separated representatives. That doesn't include the many who have divorced and remarried.

"I know members who have spouses who don't like politics — they don't have a commitment to public service," says Rep. Tauke. "Under those circumstances, it's very difficult for a marriage to survive service in Congress."

Rep. Phil Sharp, D-Ind., and his wife Marilyn, author of best-selling thrillers such as "Sunflower" and "Falseface," are beating those odds with some accommodation on both sides. She strives to maintain her literary identity. He no longer assumes, as he did at first, that he is exempt from household chores and child care.

"This environment for me is very hostile," Mrs. Sharp said in an interview published in Washington Woman magazine. "I would go so far as to say that I am fighting for my survival, not in the sense of living but in having my dreams squashed."

Wined and dined and a celebrity in New York publishing circles, Mrs. Sharp was disoriented by her new role. She was taught how to send 250,000 Christmas cards, how to find a good caterer. On a Pentagon tour with other wives, she was advised to note a ship's kitchen.

Congressional wives "can often be treated as appendages. They'd better have a very strong self-image to deal with it," says Mrs. Tauke.

"When you go to a party, a lot of times you are sort of left out if you're not standing beside your husband — or even if you are," adds Frances DeWine, wife of Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio.

The two women say they don't let that kind of thing bother them. What matters more, they say, is squeezing family time into their husbands' jampacked days and weekends.

"If you don't plan it, pretty soon you don't spend any of the times that are supposed to be special together," says Mrs. Tauke, who was in Iowa the day of the interview to see her husband on her birthday.

"I call up the scheduler," says Mrs. DeWine. "If you don't say your kid has a Boy Scout banquet he'd like his father to come to, he's not going to be able to do it. You have to call early and get your name in."

Danforth, DeConcini and several others formed an ad hoc "quality of life" committee in the last Congress with the aim of making it possible for senators to lead less pressured personal lives.

"We were wasting a lot of time and not accomplishing anything but enormous amounts of wheel-spinning (in the Senate). That had an impact on family life," recalls Danforth. But the effort disintegrated with the crush of business. "This is not what I had in mind," DeConcini said wryly last fall as the Senate grappled with a spending bill at 3:30 a.m.

The quality-of-life campaign was revived over the summer with a slightly different spin. Proponents now refer to the "quality of work" and are seeking rule changes to improve efficiency. But the goal is the same: There should be time for life outside the Senate.

In the House, the length of a debate and the amendments to be offered are decided ahead of time. But House members still say they do not have enough advance notice of holiday recesses, late nights and votes clustered around weekends.

"We always seem to be able to schedule around the golf tournaments, key football games. We used to schedule around the Boston Red Sox. We can accommodate the Paris Air Show and the Kemper Open," Tauke notes dryly.

Wilson Morris, an aide to House Speaker Jim Wright, compares scheduling to the weather — "everyone complains about it but there's not much you can do about it."

The lurching progress of bills through committee often makes it difficult to pin down the legislative schedule, Morris says. Furthermore, he adds, you can't schedule recesses that coincide with vacations in every school district in the nation or three-day Washington workweeks that meet the needs of West Coast members who have to go home.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families, has sons aged 18 and 22. When it comes to living arrangements, "we've had it every which way." His younger son wanted to go to high school in California, so that is where the family lives now. Miller goes home every weekend with five other members from his area.

"The gift is that it lets you absolutely focus on the job," Miller says of the current setup. "To do that requires very long days... then on weekends you concentrate your time on your family."

Sen. DeConcini, D-Ariz., feels strongly about the quality-of-life movement although his three children are no longer living at home. "When I first came here, I really was upset," he recalls. "I felt I neglected my family. I was rarely home." Even now, he says, it's hard to schedule time with a daughter who is a doctor practicing right in Washington.

DeConcini's wife, Susie, a social worker, was active in her field for only three years. "It was her choice," the senator says. "She likes to travel with me. She's very involved. She's the best asset I have."

Mrs. DeConcini did an informal study of the Senate divorce rate in 1980 and found it below the national average. "That does not mean everything is just romantically Cinderella-land around here," says DeConcini. "This is a hard job for spouses, really hard."

Community still misses Christa

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Two years after the space shuttle explosion shattered his life, Steven McAuliffe is working his way back into public life, saying the death of his wife Christa has not made him anyone special.

"I'm probably violating my own rules (against talking about the disaster), but tragedy is not unique to me or any of the other surviving spouses — it happens to everybody," McAuliffe recently told The Associated Press in a rare comment about the loss of his wife. "Tragedies are all personal, all extreme, all immeasurable and they are not something that other people can fully understand, so there is no point trying to burden anybody else (with them)," he said.

Still, he realizes that people the world over still think about the Challenger crew members and their families. To them, he says: "We appreciate it very much and we need their prayers."

In the first year following the

Jan. 28, 1986, explosion, McAuliffe made several public appearances, all related to the shuttle, but refused to say anything about the accident or his family. His law office screened non-business calls.

Since then, he has become a state university system trustee, has publicly announced his choice in the Democratic presidential race: first Sen. Joseph Biden, and when he withdrew, Sen. Paul Simon. He has also spoken out for teacher pay raises.

But ever since the news media onslaught on Concord following the explosion, McAuliffe and family friends have vigilantly guarded the family's privacy.

"It's almost like there is an unwritten rule in town and everybody is tacitly obeying it," said a family friend whose son is a playmate of Scott McAuliffe, now a fifth-grader.

"We all know about them, but we don't discuss it with anyone," he said, speaking on condition that his name not be used.

McAuliffe, a 39-year-old trial lawyer, and his children still live a few blocks from the high school that Christa McAuliffe left to train to become the first private citizen in space.

Scott plays with classmates, many of whom were in the bleachers at Cape Canaveral when the shuttle exploded. Caroline is in the second grade. "If there is any message to send, the truth of the matter is that the kids are doing very well, not only the McAuliffe kids, but the other children too," said principal Clint Cogswell.

He and several parents said they believe the children have gotten over the grief better than the adults. "I still think it's a very sensitive issue," Cogswell said, noting that when new electronic equipment arrived with sample video disks provided by NASA, "the staff said they don't want those disks around."

DOGS

Mills may return to her home. But Hope says he doesn't think Mills' problems are psychiatrically based.

"It's more the environment she lives in than her mental state that concerns me," said Hope.

Meanwhile, Mills agreed that the city and county could take the 25 dogs and put them up for adoption at the city pound if they would leave two German shepherds and one poodle for her when she returns from Amarillo.

Ironically, this same scenario occurred in 1984 when another neighbor (the Owenses) had complained about the woman's dogs, but according to Hope, all charges were dropped because "the dogs were closed in a shelter. If there was a court order saying she couldn't have any dogs, I can't find it."

Ruby Stacy, one of Mills' neighbors who befriended her, said the dogs were, in fact, confiscated in 1984.

"They (county) took all the dogs away from her three years ago," said Stacy. "They told her she could only have one, so I hauled a dog out here for her, and it was pregnant. I guess that's where all the dogs came from this time."

Stacy added that she had never witnessed Mills' picking up stray dogs from town except for a cat Mills grabbed from a fenced yard in Canyon.

On Friday, Mills told Stacy that authorities were taking her to Amarillo for questioning, but Stacy, like Hope, said she doesn't think Mills is mentally ill.

"She seemed all right to me, and she works all the time pulling up weeds and taking water and food to the dogs. She just doesn't care about her living conditions. The poor thing does drink a lot; maybe that's the reason she doesn't care," said Stacy.

Mills' landlords, Clyde and Thelma Damron of Hereford, said Mills never allowed the Damrons inside the house since she moved in.

"She's always been a strange kind of person, but she's always paid her rent on time," said Thelma, who charges $135 per month to rent the house. "I don't think she's ever bothered a soul and I'd do anything I could for her, but I won't commit her to an institution. That's the family's job, not mine."

Meanwhile, Suzanne Vogler plans to create a Hereford Humane Society because "the dog situation is bad here. I want to form one to prevent this type of thing from happening."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: There has been a lot of talk and a great deal written about how women have improved their status in the workplace. But have they really made any substantive progress?

I don't know of any big companies that are run by or hire an impressive number of females. Most businesses do no more than is required to stay on the sunny side of the law; employ the minimum number of women so they won't be charged with discrimination on the basis of sex.

With so many top schools turning out large numbers of female MBA's you'd think that women CEOs would be all over the place, but they aren't. I find this not only strange but unfair.

Please speak to this in your column.—Skeptical in Rochester

DEAR ROCH: And how are things in Sleepy Hollow? Good grief! How can you not know that the number of women who head businesses and sit on corporate boards has skyrocketed in the last 10 years?

The following information comes from Savvy magazine:

The largest businesses in the United States run by women:

In first place for the fourth straight year is Estee Lauder cosmetics company, named for its chairwoman. Last year the revenue was $1.3 billion. (That's a lot of eye shadow.)

Next is the Washington Post Co., led by Katharine Graham, with $1.2 billion.

In third place is the advertising firm Wells, Rich, Green, which had $665 million in revenue last year. Mary Wells Lawrence is the CEO.

San Francisco's Esprit de Corp., is fourth, while Susie Tompkin is at the helm.

Christian Dior is fifth, headed by Colombe Nicholas.

In sixth place is Copley Press in San Diego, run by Helen Copley.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope a certain woman (I'll call her Mary) sees this letter. She is driving me crazy.

Mary calls me every night. If I am not at home she will keep calling until she gets me, even if it's 1 o'clock in the morning.

This woman is not informed and has very little to say.

I find myself struggling to keep up a one-sided conversation that I didn't want in the first place.

When I ask her a question she says, "Ungh-hungh, ungh-hungh..." and never wants to hang up until she is practically snoring. I have come to the conclusion that she uses me as her substitute for a sleeping pill.

Please publish this letter, Ann. Mary reads your column religiously and she will surely recognize herself. Thanks a million.—Somewhere in Pennsylvania

DEAR SOMEWHERE: Don't thank me until you read my answer. My remarks are for you, not Mary.

Forgive me for hauling out an old Landers cliché, but nobody can take advantage of you without your permission. The fact that you permit this nightly intrusion indicates that you, too, have a problem.

If you really want to put an end to it, say, "Sorry, but it's not convenient for me to talk now. I'll call you when I'm able. Good night." Then ring off.

DEAR READERS: Here's your laugh for the day. I read it in the Farmer's Almanac: No patient should attempt to leave the hospital until he is strong enough to face the cashier.

Everyone does drugs, right? Wrong. And today, more and more people are aware of the dangers involved. If you want to be in the know, too, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send $2.50 plus a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

Make Congress accountable!

"To preserve our independence, we must not let our rulers load us with perpetual debt," said Thomas Jefferson.

We are now spending $220 billion more than we accumulate in revenues each year. We face a debt of $2.2 trillion, and it's difficult for most of us to even conceive of a trillion dollars. If someone started ticking off the seconds today, it would take 31,700 years to count to a trillion!

With all the problems we face today, the problem of big government is among the most critical. Practical and understandable solutions have been offered and yet only a small number of these reforms have been implemented.

The Grace Commission in 1984 issued 2,478 specific recommendations and demonstrated how they could save more than $400 billion in the first few years after their implementation. Further, the Commission found that these cutbacks would actually improve public services, rather than curtail them.

J. Peter Grace, who headed up the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, points out that most of the recommendations made by the commission were ignored. One of the reasons, he says, is the fact that the federal government is controlled by Congress. Most of us don't realize how many day-to-day actions of government are affected by the 535 elected members of Congress. They exert a powerful influence on each government agency and they don't want to give up that power.

And when members of Congress "micromanage" these agencies, says Grace, absurdity leads to absurdity. You've heard of two-cent screws bought for $91 and $7.50 hammers for $435. That's because of specifications imposed by Congress, not because the Pentagon doesn't know a bargain when they see it.

The commission's survey revealed that the Defense Department has certified that the United States needs 326 military bases. We have 4,000. Even with Congressmen looking for political plums, you'd think 535 bases would be sufficient.

Grace reports he ran into a number of obstacles in his survey. For example, he asked the OMB how many social programs the government sponsors, and the answer was "110 to 130." Further research by the commission turned up 963 social programs.

"They are all formulated in Congress and many of them are called 'entitlements.' Keep that word in mind, says Grace, 'because you're a sucker if you're not getting anything—you're 'entitled' to a lot of these programs.'" Grace adds that it is possible to enroll in 17 of them simultaneously and draw 160 percent of the minimum wage.

"The real job of government is not to give us 963 social programs but to protect our liberty. We ought to be living up to the principles of our forefathers. We ought to be vocal about waste and fraud in government," says Grace.

"We need a knowledgeable, informed electorate that doesn't depend on the nightly news for what it knows about what goes on in this country," declares Grace. "We need citizens willing to make Congress accountable for the travesty which passes for democratic government today."

Grace concludes that until we have those citizens, "we will continue to be bamboozled by Congress which, in its turn, knuckles under to the bureaucratic establishment and the 500 special interest groups entrenched on Capitol Hill. We can start by making the government fiscally responsible, but whether we can muster the political will to do so is up to us alone."

The Tragedy of Crime

The brutal slaying of 25-year-old Dallas policeman John Glenn Chase Saturday is a dramatic example of the urgent need to rebuild community support for Dallas police officers.

Chase was writing a ticket for a routine traffic violation in the heart of downtown Dallas when a bystander intervened, wrestled the young officer's pistol away from him and shot him to death. As he lay dying, the officer pleaded for his life — but some of the onlookers reportedly egged on the assailant by chanting words to the effect of "Shoot him, shoot him, shoot him."

That reaction should raise alarms in all corners of the city. Respect for law enforcement in Dallas has been dangerously eroded. And if the law officers are not safe in this city, then no one else is, either.

... What's needed now is not more finger-pointing. What's needed now is not more racial division. What's needed now is more cooperation from the entire city council, from the whole community, north and south Dallas, in rebuilding support for law enforcement in Dallas.

U.S. Ignores Bitter Dependency Lesson

Congress and the Reagan administration continue to ignore the facts.

The United States slowly is becoming more dependent on foreign oil. Must we repeat the bitter lesson of the 1970s, when Americans waited in long lines to purchase expensive gasoline?

The American Petroleum Institute reported this past week that the United States now imports 40 percent of its oil.

With consumption increasing and domestic exploration decreasing, Americans once again will find themselves vulnerable to the oil shocks we experienced during the 1970s.

Oil experts have urged Congress to repeal the windfall profits tax so investors would keep drilling for new oil wells. Drillers now say oil prices are too low to encourage drilling.

Some experts want an oil import fee that would help increase domestic oil prices. Obviously, that's a political problem because consumers naturally do not want to pay any more for gasoline.

But neither do consumers want a repeat of the oil crisis.

Those who do not learn from past mistakes are doomed to repeat them, according to an old saying. And it looks like the United States is heading toward a repeat of the 1970s oil crisis.

The Penultimate Word

IF CONGRESS SAVES US
WE ARE BETTER OFF LOST

Remember when there was one phone company? I cursed them for their attitude but the phones worked and we only had one bunch to deal with. Now I have two systems for long distance and neither of them work. I have spent the morning listening to the two little beeps on one system and a voice saying thank you on the other. The two little beeps give hope but no call. The voice I could do without if they would just get the things to work.

I bought my own phone system. It made sense at the time. My big mistake was in paying it off. If I owed them money I could load up the whole mess in a wheel barrow and dump it in their office. It is paid for and it is mine-headaches and all it is all mine.

Remember when the phones worked? They did not have as many bells and whistles on them but they worked. I can't remember taking one of them in for repair. Now even Ma Bells phones are designed to last three days past the warranty. I have made so many trips to the phone store they call me by my first name.

What happened to the phone service? We were saved by Congress. Not many things can happen to a person worse than being saved by Congress. They decided the phone company was too big and must be divided into several companies. Now there is a separate company for each function. I have one phone company for the basic service. They own the lines. Another company sold me my own personal phone system. Another company theoretically furnishes me long distance service. This is supposed to be better for me? How could higher bills and less service be better? And no matter what the problem it is always the other company's fault. Service is a game of ring around the rosie. One day I am going to get lucky and get all three present at the same time. Then it will be the weather's fault.

I am glad Congress hasn't gotten around to saving me from General Motors. There would be a separate company for motors, bodies, windshield wipers, and bumpers. The cars would cost $200,000 and we would have to go to at least three places to get the oil changed. I have had about all of the saving I can stand.

Another budget debacle

Richard R. Lesher,
President

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration missed the January 4 deadline for submitting its 1989 budget to Congress, but for one no one is blaming the President, not even Congress.

The delay occurred because Congress was so late completing action on the 1988 budget which didn't reach the President's desk until December, two months after the fiscal year began.

You might wonder why our elected representatives again missed the deadline for budget action. The answer is simple—the Congressional budget process has broken down. We keep getting further and further behind, and with all the distractions of a presidential election coming up, it is safe to assume Congress will get bogged down even more in 1988.

The chaotic disarray of the budget process fosters an array of ills, not the least of which is the golden opportunity it offers Congress to abuse the public trust. The President is supposed to receive 13 separate appropriations bills one at a time, a process that would enable him and his experts to go over them with a fine tooth comb and identify excesses and sundry shenanigans. Instead, at the last minute, the President gets a massive, 2,000-page document, which he must either sign or permit the entire government to be shut down. Knowing this, various members of Congress seize their chance to load up on pork for the home folks and carryout personal vendettas against real and imagined enemies.

Permit me to cite a few examples from the latest sampling: $8 million to build a school for African Jews in France; $6.4 million for a new, Bavarian-style ski resort in Idaho; $2.6 million to promote consumption of fish; $500,000 for a bridge over Mud Creek in Oklahoma; and how about $250,000 for wild pig control in Hawaii.

Worse still were the hidden requirements inserted to punish those who offended certain members of Congress. For example, two years ago, the Defense Department refused to fly the girlfriend of Congressman Charles Wilson of Texas around on a junket in Pakistan. Wilson finally got his revenge, an all but invisible requirement in the budget package stripping two aircraft from the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Even more offensive was a provision that will probably force publisher Rupert Murdoch to give up the money-losing Boston Herald newspaper. That apparently was the brainchild of Senator Teddy Kennedy of Massachusetts who is often criticized by the conservative Herald.

Now there's a new precedent for Congress using the budget process to stamp out freedom of speech. How long can this go on before responsible members of Congress acknowledge the problem and enact meaningful reform?

"The trouble with bucket seats is that not everyone has the same size bucket."

—Boyd Pierce, Sudan Beacon-News, Sudan, Texas, May 22, 1969.

"Definition of a dinosaur is a lizard built the way the government would do it."

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek discusses the Presidency this week, more or less.

obo

Dear editor:

At last count there were 13 candidates running for President, give or take one or two—practically nobody can name all of them off the top of his head.

With such a wide selection—some say narrow—there is considerable discussion on what qualities a President should have, not just what issues he's for. All 13 are in favor of balancing the budget and not one can tell you how it can be done.

One expert said a President ought to be completely honest but right off the bat that puts a lot of Senators and Congressmen and possibly preachers out of the running.

Another said he must have a sense of history, because those ignorant of history are doomed to repeat it. This ignores the fact that most wars and other human disasters have been caused by men who were very familiar with history.

I have a short list:

First, a President shouldn't be tongue-tied. When asked a question he ought to answer it, and if he can't, he ought to say so. I seems like it'd be hard to get 13 candidates who're all tongue-tied, but we've done it.

A President shouldn't be color blind. When he reaches for a White House phone to tell some former associate he's sorry he's been indicted, he ought to get the black or white one, not the red one. The red one can lead to World War III.

He should wear cuff links. French cuffs are a foreign invention and have no place in the White House. It's hard to roll up your sleeves and go to work if you're worrying about misplacing your gold cuff links.

Finally, a President should have a sense of humor. He ought to know, when his speech writer has inserted a joke in his State of the Union address, whether it's funny or not.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

SPIRITUAL INTEGRITY

"Education is the drawing out of the good qualities within us and the development of a longing for a fuller and better knowledge of the truth."

—Arthur Domonoske, Autumn Leaves, Larnoni, Iowa, December 1908.

"Education is the capacity to think properly, and to think properly means to speak and to live properly. Education is not intended to enable its possessor to live without working, but to qualify him for being of the greatest service. Better no education than to use it for selfish purposes. ... Education is not meant to live better than others, but to live better for others."

—Dewitt McMurray, Dallas Morning News, Feb. 10, 1923.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: Gaining and maintaining integrity cannot be accomplished without knowing or learning what is right. "Whatever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." (Philippians 4:8.)

Spiritual education is the drawing out of the quality of integrity within us and the development of a longing to be honest in our dealings with our fellowmen — to help make life better for others. We cannot do an evil deed in the name of the Lord Jesus, for that is dishonesty before Him.

Faith without the works of integrity is dead. Gratitude is a sign of integrity before God, recognizing that He is the source of all good, the Giver of all our blessings.

YOUR EYES

THE DEVELOPING CATARACT

A cataract, the clouding up of the natural lenses of the eye, develops gradually. In its earliest stages, a cataract does not interfere with vision. Its existence is generally discovered during a routine eye examination. As the cataract progresses, vision begins to get hazy. Bright lights may cause glare that is often uncomfortable. Seeing grows more difficult.

At this stage, various types of glasses can help the patient see better. Sunglasses are effective for some. A newer glare-control lens that filters out blue light, rather than darkening light, appears to be highly effective for others.

When the lens becomes cloudy enough to impede vision, the cataract is "mature" and must be removed by surgery. After its removal, a lens implant or contact lens replaces the natural lens. Glasses are still needed for near vision tasks, and sometimes to see clearly at a distance as well.

Hereford coach calls win an upset

Lady Whitefaces win over Pampa, 57-49

The Hereford High School varsity girls' basketball team scored a 57-49 victory at Pampa Friday night, a win that was called an upset by Lady Whiteface head Coach Frank Belcher.

Pampa went into the game with a 15-7 season record. Hereford's victory puts the Lady Whitefaces at 4-9 in District 1-4A games and 9-17 overall. Pampa is now 6-6 in the district.

"I felt that Carmen Brockman and the whole team did a good job on Pampa's Yolanda Brown. She's probably averaging 30 points per game and we held her to eight," Belcher said.

"We started slow, but everyone came back and did a good job on offense. We played good defense all night.

"We shot the ball well when we had to. Early on, we didn't do well against the press and man-to-man defense, but we kept hanging in there on defense. Early in the second half we were down by 12, but our girls came back and kept whittling at Pampa's lead," Belcher said.

The Lady Whitefaces trailed Pampa 12-8 after one quarter of play, and were behind 30-21 at halftime. When the third period ended, Hereford had sliced Pampa's lead to one point, 40-39.

Hereford then outscored Pampa 18-9 in the fourth period to win by eight points, 57-49.

"Pampa has been ranked in the top 10 this year, and it was good for us to go over there and beat them there. The most important thing is coming back after we were blown out by Canyon on Tuesday," Coach Belcher said.

"Jeanette Mumau did a good job coming off the bench when Carmen fouled out, and made some good rebounds late in the game," he adds.

Belcher said a balanced scoring effort by the team was a key to the victory. Candie Robbins was high scorer with 14 points. Also in double figures were Susan Bell with 12 points and Brockman with 11 points.

Stacy White scored nine points, and Tricia Kahlich added eight points.

The Lady Whitefaces also had a good overall team effort in rebounding and in assists. Five players had five or more rebounds — Brockman, 14; Robbins, 11; Bell and White, six each; and Kahlich, 5.

Five players each had two or more assists, including Bell with four and Brockman and Kahlich each with three.

The Lady Whitefaces play their final home game of the season on Tuesday night, versus Dumas. Game time is 6:30 p.m. at the La Plata gym. A junior varsity game is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the HHS gym.

The Lady Whiteface junior varsity made it a sweep at Pampa with a 54-53 overtime victory. Jill West hit a shot with eight seconds left in the overtime period to give Hereford the victory.

The score was tied 50-50 at the end of regulation time. The other points for Hereford in overtime were scored by Jessica Dearing.

Chandra Brown led Hereford with 20 points, Dearing had 11 points, and West totaled eight points. Hereford trailed at halftime, 27-21, but moved into the lead in the third quarter, 39-34.

Chandra Brown also led Hereford in rebounding with 12. Dearing grabbed nine rebounds.

Offensively, Poppy Richardson had five assists, West had four assists, and Brienna Townsend had three assists.

Team drops to sixth in district

Herd falls to Pampa, 74-56

Frustrating times continued for the Hereford Whiteface varsity boys' basketball team on Friday when they lost at Pampa, 74-59.

That loss, coupled with the 51-50 overtime loss to Canyon last Tuesday, dropped the Herd to sixth place in the District 1-4A standings with a 5-6 record. Overall, Hereford has a 10-14 record.

Before this past week of action, Hereford was in a position to move into second place in the district.

"We played hard. Pampa shot the ball a lot better than they did the first time we played them this year," Hereford Coach Mike Fields said.

"They got a 10-point lead in the second quarter, and we just couldn't overtake that in the second half. We tried, but it was hard to get that last-second loss on Tuesday out of our system," he adds.

Scorers for Hereford included Kevin Hansen with 11 points, Rodney McCracken with 10 points, Marcus Brown with eight points, and Pat Mercer and John Mark Streun each with six points.

Brown and Hansen each scored a pair of three-point goals, and Mercer hit one three-point shot.

McCracken led in rebounds with 10, and three players each had three steals on defense — McCracken, Mercer, and Brown.

The Whitefaces have five district games remaining in the 1987-88 season schedule, including Tuesday's home game against Dumas at 8 p.m.

Other boys' games on Tuesday will be a sophomore game at 5 p.m. at the La Plata gym, and a junior varsity game at 6:30 p.m. at the Hereford High School gym.

The Herd sophomore team scored a 74-59 victory over Pampa on Friday, and the HHS junior varsity suffered a 66-49 loss.

In the sophomore game, Russell Backus poured in 26 points for Hereford, hitting eight of 15 shots from the field, two three-point shots, and eight of 11 free throws. Dee Nall was also in double figures with 11 points.

Jim Andrews scored eight points, and Nate Williamson and Chad Schroeder each scored seven points.

Rebound leaders for Hereford were Andrews with eight, Nall with seven and Backus with six. Backus had six steals and Schroeder had three steals.

The HHS sophomore boys now have a 6-12 season record.

The Hereford High School junior varsity boys' loss to Pampa was only their fifth of the season against 14 victories.

Three HHS players scored in double figures — Keith Brown with 13 points, and Todd Schroeder and Jason Scott each with 10 points. Hereford had five three-point goals in the game, two by Scott.

Darren Nikkel led Hereford with seven rebounds, and Scott had six rebounds.

Who will do what, on offense, defense, special teams

A look at the Super Bowl matchups

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Here are the matchups for Sunday's Super Bowl between the Washington Redskins and the Denver Broncos.

When Washington has the Ball

The Redskins will probably try to run against a defense that never looks the same on any two plays. George Rogers (38) will start in the one running back alignment, but no matter how well he's doing, he eventually will be replaced by Timmy Smith (36) with Kelvin Bryant (24) playing in passing situations and occasionally running the draw.

The Redskins tend to run left, over Joe Jacoby (66) and Raleigh McKenzie (63). Jeff Bostic (53) regained the center spot at midseason when Russ Grimm (68) was hurt and Grimm, a former All-Pro guard, hasn't been able to get his job back. They will outweigh the Denver front, particularly 245-pound nose tackle Greg Kragen (71), the smallest at his position in the NFL. The Broncos have compensated some by moving 240-pound Simon Fletcher (73) from defensive end to outside linebacker.

Washington's starting receivers, Gary Clark (84) and Ricky Sanders

(83) are both deep threats and will be augmented by Art Monk (81), the former All-Pro injured in November, who is expected to be back. The Skins use two tight ends, one of them in an I-back setup at fullback. Don Warren (85) is usually the blocker, Clint Didier (86) the receiver.

The key to the multiple Denver defenses designed by Joe Collier is Karl Mecklenburg, (77), a nominal linebacker who can line up either inside or outside, at defensive end or at tackle in a four-man front. He and right end Rulon Jones (75) are the best pass rushers with Ricky Hunley (98) often coming up the middle.

The Broncos secondary is banged-up with Dennis Smith (49) just back from a broken arm at strong safety to replace Mike Harden (31) who replaced him, then broke an arm. Mark Haynes (36) is the best cover man, back at his familiar left corner after a sub-par year on the right side after being obtained in a trade. Redskins quarterback Doug Williams (17) will probably go up the middle, which Cleveland exploited in the AFC title game or at Steve Wilson (45) on the right side.

Williams was just 9 for 26 and could be replaced if he gets off to a slow start by Jay Schroeder (10), a Pro Bowler a year ago, but just a 48 percent passer this year.

When Denver has the Ball

Like no other quarterback in the NFL, John Elway (7) is the Denver offense. He has lined up in the shotgun more than 50 percent of the time in the last two-thirds of the season, making the Broncos the closest thing to a single-wing team in 30 years. Sammy Winder (23) lines up next to him, occasionally taking a direct snap and running. Gene Lang (33) is the other running threat and Steve Sewell (30) is a kind of wingback — a running back who's an excellent receiver.

But the heart of the offense is Elway throwing to Sewell and the Three Amigos — Mark Jackson (80), rookie Ricky Nattiel (84) and Vance Johnson (82). What makes Elway most dangerous is his scrambling ability — he was the second leading rusher behind Winder this year and the threat of his running for 17 yards on a third and 16 slows down every opponent's pass rush, forcing many to shadow him with a linebacker. He's also adept at the quarterback draw, on which he scored a touchdown in last year's Super Bowl.

Elway could give Washington fits. He was 20 of 35 for 282 yards in Denver's 31-30 win at Mile High Stadium last year. And Randall Cunningham of Philadelphia, who shares Elway's athletic ability but not his experience, ran for 119 yards in 14 carries in two games against the Skins this year and threw for four touchdowns, although Cunningham was also intercepted five times.

The conventional wisdom is that Elway is less effective in the pocket and many teams like to shadow him with a linebacker. Washington's group isn't fast — the quickest is Monte Coleman (51) but he's usually used to cover receivers like Sewell out of the backfield. It's possible that Washington might use Dexter Manley (72) as the shadow, but that would also neutralize half of the best pass-rushing end tandem of this season, Manley and Charles Mann (71). The key may be how much pressure 295-pound Dave Butz (65) can generate in the middle against 255-pound center Mike Freeman (62), who replaced the injured Bill Bryan (64) early in the season. Butz had one of his best games of his career against Minnesota in the NFC championship game.

One problem for Denver might be Washington's four-man line — there are few in the AFC, although Cleveland used a lot of it in the AFC title game.

The Washington secondary prefers man-to-man with Darrell Green (28) shadowing the opponent's best receiver. In this case, that presents a problem — Jackson, Johnson and Nattiel are all deep threats and Steve Watson (81) a capable possession man. The other corner, Barry Wilburn (45) led the league in interceptions with nine, partially because quarterbacks threw away from Green. Strong safety Alvin Walton (40) is a strong run stuffer, not so strong on pass coverage, which may free Orson Mobley (89) or Clarence Kay (88) the Denver tight ends.

Special Teams

Denver placekicker Rich Karlis (3) had a good season, hitting 18 of 25 attempts this year and probably has an edge over Ali Haji-Sheikh (6), who isn't very accurate outside of 35 yards. But Karlis has missed some big kicks in his career, including attempts from 23 and 34 yards in last year's Super Bowl.

Steve Cox (12) does the punting and kicking off for the Redskins and also attempts field goals longer than 50 yards. He averaged 40.8 yards with a net of 35, fourth best in the NFC. Denver's Mike Horan, kicking in the thin air of Mile High Stadium, averaged 41.1, but his net was lower, 33.1.

Green has been used as a punt return man in the playoffs and it was his 52-yard punt return that gave the Redskins their 21-17 win in Chicago in the NFC semi-final. Eric Yarber (80) is the prime kickoff returner. Denver's prime punt returner has been K.C. Clark (27) who averaged 12.9, best in the conference and had a 71-yard return for a touchdown against San Diego in the snow. Ken Bell (35) and Nattiel are the kickoff returners.

Intangibles

The Redskins and Broncos are the only two teams this decade to play in back-to-back Super Bowls, with Washington having won over Miami in 1983, then losing to the Raiders 38-9 the next year in the first of four one-sided Super Bowls. It was also the last won by an AFC team.

That tends to negate the experience factor — most of the Broncos were there last year and Washington has 18 players with Super Bowl experience. The rest of the Redskins have been in plenty of big games — six playoff games since the loss to the Raiders and a lot of big division and conference contests.

Both these teams have incentive, although Denver's may be a little greater — they were deflated after losing to the Giants 39-20 in Pasadena last year and dedicated this season not just to getting there but to winning. But Washington, which lost to the Giants in the NFC title game a year ago, is not likely to be satisfied just reaching San Diego.

One possible factor is Denver's size, or lack of it.

In its last two big games — last year's Super Bowl and the AFC title game against Cleveland, the Broncos defense has been worn down in the second half. It surrendered 30 points to the Giants after intermission last year and allowed Cleveland a touchdown on its first four possessions this year — it would have been five of six had not Earnest Byner fumbled at the two as he was going in

A look at the matchups for Super Bowl XXII Sunday (regular season records in parentheses; department rankings are overall in regular season):

WASHINGTON (11-4) VS. DENVER (10-4) 6 p.m. NBC

LINE — Denver by 2½ points. The line opened with the Broncos favored by 2.

RECORD VS. SPREAD — (including playoff games) — Washington 11-6-0; Denver 10-7-4.

SERIES RECORD — The series is tied 2-2. Washington won in 1970 and 1974. Denver won in 1980 and 1986.

LAST TIME MET — Dec. 13, 1986. Denver rallied to beat Washington 31-20 at Mile High Stadium. After trailing 13-4, the Broncos outscored Washington 28-2 on two Sammy Winder touchdown runs (6 yard and 1 yard), an 11-yard John Elway run and a 19-yard Elway pass to Steve Watson. Washington tried to overcome the Denver rally on a 55-yard touchdown pass from Jay Schroeder to WR Art Monk and a George Rogers 3-yard run. However, a Rich Karlis 25-yard field goal with 3:10 left ensured the victory.

LAST GAME — Washington won the NFC championship 17-16 over Minnesota, limiting the Vikings to 250 yards on offense. Redskins QB Doug Williams threw two touchdowns passes, a 42-yarder to RB Kelvin Bryant and the decisive 7-yard score to WR Gary Clark. Washington gained 181 yards on the ground, as rookie Timmy Smith rushed for 77 yards on 13 carries. Rogers had 12 carries for 66 yards. Washington managed only 11 first downs and 119 yards passing. The Redskins' defense sacked Minnesota QB Wade Wilson eight times for 60 yards in losses. This is Washington's third trip to the Super Bowl during the 1980s.

Denver returns to the Super Bowl for the second straight year, after beating Cleveland 38-32 in the AFC championship game. With the Broncos ahead 28-21, Cleveland RB Earnest Byner appeared to be heading for the tying touchdown, but was stripped of the ball just yards short of the goal line. Denver took a 21-3 halftime lead, but Cleveland scored three times in the third quarter and tied the score early in the fourth period on a 4-yard TD pass from Bernie Kosar to WR Webster Slaughter. However, Elway hit Winder with a 29-yard touchdown pass with 4:01 to play, giving Denver the victory. Denver beat Cleveland 23-20 in overtime in last season's AFC championship game to advance to Super Bowl XXI.

COMMON OPPONENTS — The clubs only common opponents were Buffalo and Detroit. Denver lost to Buffalo 21-14, while Washington won 27-7. Both clubs defeated Detroit — Denver 24-4 and Washington 20-13.

REDSKINS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 7), PASS (No. 4), OVERALL (No. 2). Doug Williams completed 81-of-142 passes for 1,156 yards and 11 touchdowns. George Rogers was the leading rusher, gaining 613 yards on 163 carries. WR Gary Clark caught 56 passes for 1,066 yards and seven touchdowns.

BRONCOS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 12), PASS (No. 2), OVERALL (No. 2). Denver gained more than 200 yards in 12 of 15 games, producing 5,624 total yards. QB John Elway completed 224-of-418 passes for 3,198 yards, 15 touchdowns and 12 interceptions. WR Vance Johnson caught 64 passes for 684 yards and seven touchdowns. RB Sammy Winder ran for 741 yards on 196 carries.

REDSKINS DEFENSE — RUSH (No. 19), PASS (No. 24), OVERALL (No. 18). Washington gave up 285 points, only 54 in the first quarter. The Redskins had three interceptions and four sacks against Chicago in their first-round playoff win and eight sacks against Minnesota. They had 53 sacks, fourth-highest in NFL, led by DEs Charles Mann (9½) and Dexter Manley (8½). S Barry Wilburn topped the league with nine interceptions.

BRONCOS DEFENSE — RUSH (No. 20), PASS (No. 3), OVERALL (No. 3). Denver had seven players with at least three interceptions. LB Jim Ryan led team with 117 tackles. Broncos are only AFC team not to allow a 100-yard rusher during the regular season.

SPECIAL TEAMS — Denver K Rich Karlis was fourth in AFC with 91 points and had 19 kicks into the end zone in 69 kickoffs. He made all 37 of his extra points. WR Ken Bell was the leading kick returner with a 21.5 average. Washington K Ali Haji-Sheikh had 68 points, but his longest of 13 field goals was only 41 yards. Steve Cox had a 40.8-yard average on 63 punts, including 14 inside the 20-yard line.

KEY MATCHUPS — Elway has thrown for 540 yards and five touchdowns in two playoff games, completing 54.9 percent of his passes (28-of-51). The Redskins had four interceptions in two playoff games, and allowed 222.9 passing yards per game, fifth worst in the NFL.

The Redskins gained 100 yards rushing per game this season, while Denver gave up 134.5. STREAKS — This is Denver's second straight Super Bowl. The last team to accomplish that was Washington in 1983 and 1984. Denver has won eight of its last nine games; Washington seven of its last eight. The Broncos are 20-0 over the past three years when they led after three quarters. The Redskins have won their last 25 games when a running back gained 100-or-more yards.

"Don't talk to strange men" has always been the advice to many people. In Ruth Rendell's new suspense novel, Talking To Strange Men, you will become aware of how dangerous it can become, if such advice goes unheeded.

Mungo has just taken over as head of London Central. He is eager to find the counter agent he feels is responsible for the duel with Moscow Centre, and the reason for his brothers' resignation as the former head of London Central. As Mungo looks for the counter agent, he is totally unaware of the inquisitive clerk who thinks he is decoding messages from an international spy ring.

The sophisticated espionage and suspense never diminishes even though some of the operatives are school boys. The paths of adults and children constantly crisscross until a terrifying encounter makes it clear that it is no longer a game.

Hoffa's Man by Joseph Franco and Richard Hammer is the story of the rise and fall of Jimmy Hoffa. Joe Franco, author of this book, was Jimmy Hoffa's right hand man. A loyal and dependable strong arm, Joe Franco was willing to bend rules or break heads if it meant advancing the teamsters union in the name of James R. Hoffa.

Joe Franco never questioned an order, and Hoffa never questioned Joe's methods. Hoffa's Man tells of the corruption, bribery, extortion, and betrayal that comes with power abuse. Names like Bobby Kennedy, Frank Sinatra and others are interwoven in this story of greed and total defiance of the law. On July 30, 1975, Joe Franco watched as Jimmy Hoffa climbed into a limousine in a suburban shopping center parking lot, and never to be seen again. Joseph Franco knew why Hoffa was doing it.

Myrna Loy: Being and Becoming by James Kosilbas-Davis and Myrna Loy is one of the best movie autobiographies you will encounter. Myrna, a cattleman's daughter, was raised in Culver City, Montana, and neighbor to Gary Cooper. Because of her beauty, Charles Laughton described her as the "Venus de Milo at the intersection of Hollywood and Vine."

George Cukor said, "I don't know any other actress who has the wit that Myrna Loy has, the kind of wit that amuses me - under played, suggested, very, very subtle. She has something in that lovely face, something about her that touches your heart. As Myrna recounts the stories of her immigrant grandparents on through her working days with Rudolph Valentino, who discovered her, and Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, William Powell and others.

She will touch your heart. She participated in many presidential campaigns, and while working for the Red Cross at the beginning of WWII, "carried on a long distance mutual infatuation with F.D.R. As Myrna matures she moves on to more mature roles with unusual grace and success.

MELISSA LORENN BREWER, KIRK MILLER

Engagement announced

Melissa Lorenn Brewer of Hereford will become the bride of Kirk Samuel Miller of Amarillo on Saturday, April 16, in Avenue Baptist Church of Hereford.

Miss Brewer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monty Brewer of Rt. 1, Hereford. Miller is the son of Mrs. Stanley Boaz of Amarillo and the late Bobby Joe Miller.

A 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, Miss Brewer is employed at The Hereford Brand as an advertising sales representative. She is a member of the Camp Fire Council board of directors and is a member of the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

The prospective bridegroom graduated from Huntington Beach High School in Huntington Beach, Ca. He is a licensed master plumber and is employed at Guy's Plumbing in Amarillo.

Holmes gives program on favorite hymns

Calliopean Study Club met Jan. 28 in the home of Wilma Nobles with Irene Conway as co-hostess.

The meeting was called to order by president Cherry McWhorter, and after a short business meeting she turned the meeting over to Virginia Holmes to give the program.

Mrs. Holmes gave a program of favorite hymns. She gave a short history of the composer and the hymn and then played it with variations, doing so without any music before her.

She discussed various composers, noting special facts of each:

John Newton was once an infidel and libertine until he read Thomas A. Kempis' book, "Imitation of Christ." He then became a believer and follower of Christ's teaching and wrote the hymn, "Amazing Grace."

Isaac Watts was a very intelligent child and scholar who started writing verses while quite young. He became a Congregational minister and during his lifetime wrote more than 600 hymns among them "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

Joseph Scriver was dogged by tragedy all his life. His fiancée drowned the night before his intended wedding. Later he became engaged again, and this intended bride died before the wedding. He suffered poor health and trouble, but he wrote the beautiful hymn, "What A Friend We Have in Jesus."

Dr. Boring Gould wrote "Onward Christian Soldiers" as a marching song for the festival of the school children. It was used in Roosevelt's campaign and was a favorite during World War II.

Irving Stone wrote "Love is Eternal" citing the promise of God to the people that if they would forsake their evil ways and return to Him He would forgive and heal their land.

As Katherine Lee Bates stood atop Pike's Peak and surveyed the land in all its beauty she was inspired to write "America—the Beautiful." Many people would like to have it adopted as our national anthem.

Members present were: Irene Conway, Audine Dettmann, Marye Fraser, Jan Furr, Linda Gilbert, Virginia Holmes, Faye Holt, Mary Sue Hull, Claudia McBrayer, Cherry McWhorter, Kay McWhorter, Marjorie Mims, Wilma Nobles, Kathryn Ruga, Vera Threewit, Meredith Wilcox, Lee Cave, Zella Mae Crump and two guests, Nella Fay Watson of Clinton, Okla., and Rosa Cowart formerly of Hereford, but now of Riverside, Calif.

Next meeting will be March 10 in the home of Jan Furr.

Red Cross Update

Congratulations to the staff of the Hereford Day Care. The staff of 17 employees recently completed an Infant and Child CPR and Obstructed Airways class.

Lupe Chavez and Pat Michaels will be presenting a program on AIDS using the new material on AIDS designed for use as a class for teenagers and young adults. The class will be held Monday at 7 p.m. for the Vega F.H.A. in Vega. The video and related material is available at the Red Cross office.

This year marks the 125th anniversary of the founding of the International Red Cross movement. The Geneva Conventions were drafted in 1864, revised and added to in 1949 and again in 1977. The Geneva Conventions are international treaties designed for protection of victims of war, including wounded and sick military personnel, prisoners of war and the civilian population in areas of conflict. The four Geneva Conventions of 1949 have been translated in-

Ancient craft revived by local woman

By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

Japanese instruction booklets do not daunt Karen Flood's creative abilities—she cannot read the directions but she can make their baskets.

"I have about 30 'how-to' books featuring basket weaving and two of them are written in Japanese," the Hereford homemaker said. "But these foreign books show detailed pictures and diagrams on how to create animal and people-shaped woven objects, so I can tell from the photos what to do."

By her own admission, Flood was not always interested in crafts. "My mother is the home economics extension agent in Randall County, so she is always coming up with new ideas for me to try and teach various home demonstration clubs." Flood has also given basket weaving demonstrations in Amarillo, Muleshoe, Plainview, Clovis, N.M., and to various Hereford clubs, sorority chapters, and civic groups, and was October's artist of the month at Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

Yet basket weaving is but a small part of Karen Flood's life. She and her husband, Joe H., a farmer, reside at 230 Ironwood and are the parents of four children: Keith, age 11, Kyle, nine; Kurtis, six, and Kerri, three. The active mother plays in church league volleyball at the YMCA, is a 4-H co-leader, and is a member of Central Church of Christ.

"I've lived in Hereford ever since our marriage 13 years ago," she said. "Joe was born and raised here, but I was born in Crosbyton and graduated from Plainview High School in 1973."

Karen attended West Texas State University as a speech therapy major but didn't finish and has no desire to go back. "I enjoy being at home. I don't have to rely on a babysitter and I can work at my own pace with K Kompany." K Kompany is the name Flood uses when she sells her work.

"I began work for Creative Home two years ago and I began to stencil sweatshirts. The company sent me a brochure on basket making and informed me that I would learn this craft so I could teach it to customers."

Flood thought the company was kidding, but soon found herself and seven other women each struggling with a 100" roll of reed at an Amarillo seminar. "We all hated it; basket weaving was messy because you had to cut the reed into strips, soak it in water to keep it pliable, and the reed cut your hands. Our instructor said that everyone hates making their first basket, so we should weave one more before we decided we never wanted to do it again." Flood was the only one to take the advice and she has been hooked on basket weaving ever since.

"I've tried all kinds of hobbies, ranging from cross stitch to ceramic painting to faux finishing to creating fake stained glass. But I have found that basketweaving is the craft I do best and it is relaxing, although sometimes I get so involved I cannot put it down."

A family form of relaxation is located in the Flood's living room. Brightly colored salt water fish swim lazily about in the huge 300 gallon aquarium measuring three feet in width, five feet tall, and nine feet long. "When we moved here from the farm, eight men had to haul it in through the enlarged front door in three pieces," Flood remembered. "They then had to carry the piano downstairs, where they said it should remain forever!"

A naso tang, blue surgeons, and a lemon peel tang reside in the aquarium, which once held lion fish. "We didn't keep the lion fish because their poison could paralyze a human and they only eat live goldfish. We once had an eel, but that ended after my mother saw it stretched out, thought it was loose in the house, and screamed 'Snake!' I almost dropped the baby I had been rocking, I was so scared!"

Since the present fish require less care, Flood now devotes more time to basket making. She makes rag baskets, reed baskets, and yarn-wrapped baskets and hopes to try her hand at weaving baskets out of pine needles. "I'm looking into an African type of wrap technique and plan to do Oriental Mad weaving (weaving in three directions)." She has sold her creations in Midland, and locally while hoping to sell them in a craft shop in Leadville, Colo.

"People are often amazed at my prices. I tell them to go make one basket themselves and then decide if mine are too expensive. When they do, I have had them come back and say, 'Beat me if you want to, just don't force me to make another basket!' she laughed. "Then they appreciate my prices a little more." She noted that it takes her four hours to four days to make a basket.

She has fashioned baskets into various shapes, including a fish mouth design and an Indian wedding vase. "No basket ever comes out the same, so even if you re-use the same design you still come up with a unique creation. Once you get used to weaving the baskets, you experiment and your originality comes through. Since baskets can be bought anywhere cheaply, you have to have a special look to catch the customer."

Durability is an alluring aspect of Flood's baskets. "Some of my baskets can be reshaped easily—I know because my kids have stomped on them and sat on them. The biggest basket I have ever made, using 21" hoops, has served as a sleeping and playing place for Kerri."

Histories of the baskets also fascinate Flood. "I've learned about the wedding vases of the Choctaw Indians, the special baskets made by the Shakers, and the legend of the Bushwackers, who are people that have lived up in the hills for decades and spend their lives making baskets."

Flood has taught basket making classes in her home, providing kits, handles, rolls of reed, and clothespins. "The only thing the learner needs to bring is a pair of scissors." She will teach a class this spring at Canyon Community College.

"The first class I taught was quite an experience," she said. "I thought we would be finished by 3 or 4 p.m. but the class lasted until 6:30 p.m. I've heard of a technique where you can make a basket in one hour; it's my goal to someday achieve it!"

Flood appears in "Country Crafted Texas Directory" which is published by the Texas Department of Agriculture and Texas Family Crisis Hotline. It lists original Texas crafts people for the purpose of providing a directory of names, addresses, and information on Texas crafts people so that farm families have a chance to supplement their income. Flood and Michele Harder are the only two Hereford women listed among the Sept. '87 publication that has only 350 names in it. The booklet is separated into categories, with Flood's name found under "baskets," where it states that she makes "decorative handwoven baskets made from wicker, grasses, and rags."

"Making baskets has really helped me keep my sanity," said Flood. "And the technique is not limited to baskets; fences and ceiling fans, can also be made." Thus, opportunities abound through Flood's craft, a craft she plans to continue for years to come.

About the Deaf Smith County Courthouse?

Our Courthouse is somewhat of a landmark, because it is the only Texas courthouse made of Georgia marble. Originally built in 1911, the courthouse represents the dreams an early generation had for this county.

With all of its history and prestige, this building has not always been a pleasant topic of conversation. When the idea was first proposed in 1909, many residents felt the structure was unnecessary, and the cost of $125,000 was outrageous. After many heated arguments, a bond election narrowly passed approving the controversial expenditure.

Since 1911, the building has undergone one interior renovation and has been awarded the Historical Marker Medallion from the Texas State Historical Committee. The Deaf Smith County Courthouse is a timeless tribute to our city and county.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q Why do recipes no longer specify sifting flour? E.S., Hometown, IL
A Flour is already sifted many times during the milling process. For the most consistent results when baking, dip the measuring cup into flour and level it with a straight-edged knife. Take care not to tap or shake the cup.
Q My breads always come out with a hard crust. What's causing this? Mrs. A.B., Moorhead, MN
A A too high oven temperature may cause the problem. Compare the temperature on your oven controls to that of an oven thermometer. And, you may want to have your oven controls checked. Be sure to place rack in middle of oven and center food to be baked.
Q I'd like some new ideas for preparing red cabbage. E.S., Syracuse, NY

A Stir-fry cabbage with other vegetables in hot oil or make a cabbage soup with potatoes, ham, other vegetables and herbs. Roll a mixture of cooked sausage, rice, sauerkraut and seasonings in cabbage leaves and bake. Or make a simple tossed salad of red cabbage, tomatoes, green pepper and a light vinaigrette.
TIP OF THE WEEK: Self-rising flour makes pie crust mealy and tender rather than flaky and tender. Be sure to omit salt from recipe when using self-rising flour.

Lecture on menopause Wednesday

Dr. Ian H. Thorneycroft, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Tulane University School of Medicine in New Orleans, will present a program of interest to women and physicians at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, in the auditorium of Texas Tech University Medical School at Amarillo.
 His topic will be "Health Care Consequences of the Menopause." The medical school is at 1400 Wallace.
 According to Dr. Robert H.

Messer, head of the Amarillo medical school's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, "Women of all ages would benefit from hearing Dr. Thorneycroft, especially those of the age of menopause or approaching that age. It will help these women understand the importance of the menopause and its consequences in their lives."
 The menopause occurs in women around 50 years of age. It is that time when the ovaries cease to function.

The termination of hormone production by the ovary results in many symptoms such as hot flashes and the increased risk of osteoporosis (bone deterioration).
 "But there are other, less well known, changes in women due to decreased or terminated hormone production," says Dr. Messer. "One of these is an increased risk of cardiovascular (heart) problems."

RIDDING A PET OF FLEAS

NEW YORK (AP) — Washing a cat or dog with a mixture of orange oil and shampoo is one way to rid a pet of fleas without using flea powder or toxic chemicals.

Orange oil is a herbal insecticide. How often you should shampoo your pet depends on how badly it is infested. Weekly washings may be necessary at first.

DON'T DISMISS JOINT PAIN

ATLANTA (AP) — Severe joint pain should not be dismissed by an older person as simply due to "old age," says the Arthritis Foundation.

Any joint pain severe enough to keep someone from getting out of bed in the morning is not a normal result of age. A person with severe joint pain could very well have a form of arthritis or other serious condition and should see a doctor, says the foundation.

Meats market tightening

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may seem to some beef producers that every time cattle head up the trail to higher prices there are noisy oinks and clucks close behind. It's called competition for the consumer meat dollar.

This year total beef output is headed for another decline, perhaps down 4 percent or 5 percent from 1987, the Agriculture Department says.

But even though cattle producers are cutting back, hog and poultry producers are more than making up the difference.

"Supplies of competing meats will expand to boost total meat production to yet another record," USDA economist Ron Gustafson says. "The increase probably will be the sharpest since 1975-76."

And that will "hold down retail price gains for the already more expensive beef," Gustafson said in a new outlook report by the department's Economic Research Service.

The recent Wall Street stock market plunge and increased pressures on U.S. monetary, tax and trade policies have raised uncertainties about economic growth and consumer spending in 1988. Gustafson said consumer confidence probably has slipped but could recover with lower interest rates, improvements in the trade balance and progress in federal deficit reduction.

"Beef prices in the summer of 1987 were the highest since mid-1982," he said. "Much of this gain will be maintained in 1988, but slower economic growth and the large supplies of lower-priced competing meats do not indicate higher beef prices."

The average retail price of beef, as measured on an all-cut basis by the agency, reached $2.49 per pound last June, the highest monthly average price since July 1982.

"As beef supplies began to increase during the summer months, retail prices moved lower," Gustafson said. "Prices for 1987 likely averaged around $2.42. In 1988, a sharp increase in pork production and a 5 percent gain in poultry production will pressure retail prices for all meats. Choice retail beef may average near $2.44 per pound, only 2 cents above the 1987 average, but well above 1986's $2.31."

Meanwhile, market prices of "fed" cattle — those that wind up as the better grades of supermarket beef — are expected to remain in the low-to-middle $60s per 100 pounds in the first quarter of 1988, he said.

Some "modest price strength" will probably occur going into the second quarter as seasonal declines in slaughter help buoy cattle prices in the middle-to-upper $60s, Gustafson said.

"Fed cattle marketings are expected to pick up slightly during the summer quarter, forcing prices back to the middle $60s, where they will likely remain for the rest of the year," he said.

USDA seeks comment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is seeking comments on proposed procedures for a referendum among cattle producers and importers to see whether they will continue a $1-per-head assessment to promote beef.

J. Patrick Boyle, administrator of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service, said Thursday the proposal will be open for public comment until Feb. 8.

The Food Security Act of 1985 authorized the assessment or checkoff to finance beef promotion and research. The fees, charged on all cattle sold in the United States and imported beef products, have been levied since Oct. 1, 1986, raising more than $73 million in the first year.

But the law also requires that a referendum be held within 22 months to see if producers want to continue with the checkoff program. The promotion and research projects are administered by a 113-member Beef Promotion and Research Board, which includes producers and importers.

The law outlines general procedures for the referendum, one of which says that registration and voting occur on the same day at county extension offices, Boyle said.

Among "procedural details" being considered for the referendum are the assistance of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service employees to count ballots, determine eligibility of challenged voters, and report referendum results.

For the program to continue, it must be approved by more than half of the cattle producers voting in the referendum. No date was announced, but the beef board has recommended it be held May 10, 1988.

Comments on the referendum proposals can be sent by Feb. 8, in duplicate, to: Marketing Programs and Procurement Branch, Livestock and Seed Division, AMS, USDA, Room 2610-S, P.O. Box 96456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456.

Further information is available from Ralph L. Tapp, branch chief, telephone (202) 447-2650.

Japan leads potential markets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japan leads the list of potential markets for increased American farm exports over the next three years to five years, according to an Agriculture Department study.

Based on economic, trade and demographic indicators, Japan ranked first among 20 potential markets in a study by the magazine Foreign Agriculture, published by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Four of the top 10 came from the newly industrialized Pacific Basin and four from the European Community.

The study said cash-rich countries such as Japan, Taiwan and West Germany are ripe for high-value products such as processed foods, beef, fruits and vegetables, as well as the fast-food industry, restaurants and wood products.

Following Japan on the list are Taiwan, Canada, Hong Kong, South Korea, the Soviet Union, Italy, West Germany, the United Kingdom and Spain. After that come Brazil, France, Pakistan, Turkey, Venezuela, Iraq, Sweden, Mexico, Colombia and Egypt.

"This translates into promising export opportunities for companies that can supply quality products at a competitive price," said David L. Neubert, author of the study.

He cautioned, however, that while the Soviet Union ranks high on the list because of the size and growth of its market, buying decisions are often dictated not by the market but by government policy and weather conditions.

Japan has been the largest single customer of the U.S. farmer since 1964. In 1986, $5 billion worth of its $17 billion in total farm product imports came from the United States.

Imports of American farm goods and agricultural exports generally declined in the early part of this decade but the study forecast a 10 percent increase in 1988 — to $6.1 billion.

Even though Japan already buys a large amount of farm goods from the United States, many of its agricultural producers benefit from protectionist trade barriers.

These barriers hurt some U.S. farmers and lower the living standards of Japanese consumers. American beef, citrus and rice producers have been prodding Washington to get the Japanese to open their markets.

Culling can pay dividends

Culling non-bred and late calving cows can improve future pregnancy rates by eliminating sterile and subfertile cows, according to a beef cattle specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Dr. L.R. Spratt said several studies relating to cow culling to increase reproductive performance were conducted in the central and Gulf Coast regions of Texas. The studies were used to demonstrate the increase in pregnancy rates after culling non-bred and late calving cows.

In two herds all non-bred cows and a portion of the late calving cows were culled and replaced with early bred heifers, Spratt explained. In a third herd, no culling was done and no replacements were added.

In the two herds where culling and replacing were implemented, pregnancy rates increased by an average of 14 percent in the first year and were maintained at that level during the second year.

In the herd without culling and replacing, pregnancy rates showed no improvement over time and even showed a slight decrease.

Based on these data, it appears that rather rapid improvements in rebreeding rates can be made through culling of non-bred and late calving cows while simultaneously replacing them with early bred replacement heifers, Spratt pointed out.

Cattle like their wheats too. John Brethour, professor of animal nutrition at Kansas State University, reminds producers that when wheat prices are down, it's a good time to include wheat in their cattle rations. He says, "Wheat has a higher nutritional value than corn or milo and provides good animal response in growing and finishing cattle." However, he does remind producers that some precautions may be necessary since wheat is a rich, quickly digested grain. Sodium bicarbonate may be used to avoid digestive upsets and reduce feed intake. When prices are good, he recommends following these guidelines: Try to keep feed available at all times. Add wheat gradually to the ration, allowing adjustment time for the higher energy level. Only include wheat at no more than 30% of the grain portion of the ration.

Old collection revisits Cajun originals

NEW ORLEANS — It was a Sunday in 1934, when alcohol was illegal in Louisiana and Cajun French was spoken only by old fogies. But 20-year-old Lanese Vincent was in a bar and this young fellow from New York was asking if he'd sing some old-time French songs for a recording machine.

"I said no. I refused right away," Vincent recalls. "Then after a while I told him, 'If you promise not to play it around here where somebody knows me, I'll go.'"

So he and his cousin Sidney Richard went over to a rice mill warehouse — it was away from traffic — and sang into a microphone for the fellow from New York, Alan Lomax, who is now retired after a celebrated career as a special research scholar in the anthropology department at Columbia University.

"We sang songs my mommy and daddy used to sing when I was small," says Vincent, now 73.

He'd forgotten that day until Barry Ancelet of the University of Southwestern Louisiana's folklore program recently brought a tape recording to his home in Kaplan.

"We played a cassette for him and he said, 'It sure is me,'" Ancelet says.

Times have changed. Cajun is hot stuff around the country. And Vincent doesn't mind that some of the songs he and his cousin sang for Lomax more than 50 years ago have resurfaced from the dusty archives of the Library of Congress onto a two-album set.

"We have 38 brand new old songs, songs that have not otherwise been heard in 40 or 50 years," says Ancelet, who edited the albums from the Lomax recordings in the Library of Congress.

"We wanted to bring them back home so people could not only know where the music came from but so we could recycle the songs among young musicians who are interested in playing Cajun music."

In 1934, Lomax was 19 years old and out on a folk song-collecting trip with his father, John Lomax, then working on his autobiography, "Adventures of a Ballad-Hunter."

"He didn't speak any French and I spoke freshman French but was bold and young," Alan Lomax, 72, recalled in a telephone interview from Columbia, where he still keeps an office.

The Lomax recordings are a treasure-trove, Ancelet says.

Ancelet says commercial studios had recorded Cajun music in 1928, but they were bringing musicians into studios to record tunes they thought would sell record players to young people.

"The Lomaxes came six years later, in 1934," he says. "But they were recording people who were old then, and taking machines to houses and recording home music."

"They were recording a whole different side of music in south Louisiana — unaccompanied ballad singers and solo instrumentalists and unaccompanied group singing. They were recording styles that were old then, as opposed to styles which were popular then."

Lomax used the Library of Congress' 300-pound machine, which transferred the sound directly onto aluminum discs. That's one reason the sound is so clear on the new record, Ancelet says.

"The sound wasn't very hi-fi, but it sounds exactly today the same way it sounded then." When Ancelet went to listen to the Lomax recordings in the Library of Congress in 1980, he brought back 11 hours worth of tapes which deepened the roots of Cajun music and its black cousin, zydeco, far beyond anything he had known before.

"All anybody had ever heard was the commercially recorded stuff," Ancelet says. "Our notion of the history of Cajun music was based on what we had heard."

Allen's latest is compelling

What an adventurer Woody Allen is. Not only does he function as the screen's premiere comedy artist, forever seeking new vistas with his rare talent, but he has also ventured courageously into stark drama, as with "Interiors."

Now comes "September," a study of complex relationships of six emotionally battered people at a summer house. It is compelling drama, if not fully realized.

Just as "Interiors" displayed the profound influence of Ingmar Bergman, "September" is Allen's nod to Anton Chekhov. Carlo Di Palma's camera paints rooms with browns and beiges; brightness never invades. The mood is claustrophobic; we never see the New England scenery outside the doors.

A tense sextet occupy the rooms. Mia Farrow is on the verge of a breakdown, a victim of a girlhood tragedy. Her spirits have been raised by a summer romance with the guest house boarder, Sam Waterston, who is trying to write a novel during vacation. His attentions have turned to Dianne Wiest, Farrow's best friend and fugitive from a boring marriage. Denholm Elliott is the middle-aged neighbor who desperately seeks the love of Farrow.

The relationships are further jumbled by the arrival of Farrow's mother, Elaine Stritch, a loud, blowsy, one-time glamour girl, and her quiet physicist husband, Jack Warden. Stritch likes to keep everything in an uproar, and she revives the cause of her daughter's distress: The girl had reportedly killed her mother's hoodlum lover — an obvious connection to Lana Turner and daughter Cheryl Crane, a surprising touch for a Woody Allen film.

"September" becomes a kind of Chekhovian square dance, the players pairing off for scenes of deep emotion. All are artfully written and staged, but the action seems fragmented, like a series of exercises in a master acting class. The characters are so self-oriented that you begin to lose interest in whether they settle their problems.

Elaine Stritch dominates the film with a full-throttle performance worthy of Academy consideration. Mia Farrow is so wan and pitiable that it's understandable when Waterston turns his attention to Wiest. Elliott has little to do but moon over Farrow, and Warden's role is the least defined of all.

Music always plays an important role in a Woody Allen film, and "September" has a lovely background of period tunes and recordings, especially Irving

Berlin's haunting "What'll I Do?"

Robert Greenhut produced the Orion Pictures release. The PG rating is apparently for language and dramatic intensity. Running time: 82 minutes.

In Saudia Arabia

Couple finds experiences rewarding

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story excerpts a recent feature printed in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal with additional information provided by Raymond Higginbotham of Hereford.

Raymond Higginbotham's niece, Martha, and her husband, Terry Kirk, recently returned to their farm near Crosbyton after spending six years living and working in Saudi Arabia.

The couple's adventure began when Kirk saw a want ad in the paper seeking American men to farm in Saudi Arabia. When he asked Mrs. Kirk if she would like to move to that country she said, "Sure. Now where is that?"

Soon after they answered the ad, a sheik visited Lubbock and interviewed Kirk. In August 1982, the Kirks left for Saudi Arabia.

Kirk, who has a master's degree in rop science from Texas Tech University, managed a large farm located about 90 miles from Riyadh, the Saudi capital. The farm is owned by the Al Emar Group, a development company which deals with agri-chemicals, waterwell drilling and micro-nutrients.

Mrs. Kirk explained that through their experiences living in the foreign country, she and her husband realized how lucky and fortunate Americans are. "The things that we take for granted have to be imported there. Like iceberg lettuce-I paid as much as $3 a head for lettuce here. But things like mangos you can get for almost nothing," she added. For example, Mrs. Kirk said, the Saudis consider themselves lucky if they get to eat an egg once or twice a month. Their diet includes a large quantity of lentils and rice.

Many of the customs of the country changed the Kirks' lifestyle. Mrs. Kirk said she did not wear a veil, but did wear long dresses with long sleeves. "I never had to cover my face, but I did keep my elbows and ankles covered-that's the general rule."

Women aren't allowed to drive in Saudi Arabia, so Mrs. Kirk was furnished with a van and a driver. When she wanted something to do, she would travel around to the other farms, picking up the women for a shopping trip to Riyadh.

Another Saudi law left Mrs. Kirk with little to do because most women in Saudi Arabia aren't allowed to work. Her passport was stamped "Unable to work with or without pay." However, she said, their boss was educated in the United States and allowed her to work on the computer.

Living out in the desert provided the Kirks with new friends. "Some of our best friends are Bedouins (nomads or wandering tribesmen)," Kirk said. "They were very hospitable people, especially to Americans. They were very poor until oil was discovered there. They always invite you into their home and have plenty of food for guests."

Although located in the desert of Saudi Arabia, the Kirks were not isolated from civilization. Riyadh has several fast food restaurants, such as Dairy Queen, Hardy's and Kentucky Fried Chicken. "Yes, we would drive 90 miles for a hamburger," Mrs. Kirk said.

The Kirks' experiences included drinking camel's milk and eating camel's meat. Kirk said the meat is not so different from venison or jerky.

While living in Saudi Arabia, the Kirks were able to collect a variety of Saudi art pieces including brass items, paintings, and Oriental carpets.

Mrs. Kirk said that the 7,000-acre farm was just a desert when they arrived. But with deep well irrigation, they transformed the sands into a bountiful farm. The change was so great that their farm was named Green Sands.

Kirk said 5,900 of Green Sands' acres are planted in wheat, 500 acres in alfalfa and 600 acres in Rhodes grass, a grass originated in Rhodesia and accepted in the Gulf regions as food for camels and sheep. The yields have averaged about 90-100 bushel of wheat per acre for the past three seasons; alfalfa, about 10 metric tons per acre and the Rhodes grass, 15 metric tons per acre.

The Kirks also grew vegetables such as beans, corn, radishes, tomatoes, and watermelons. The only problem came in marketing the produce, Kirk said. The Saudi people consume a tremendous amount of produce but much of it comes in from other countries such as Jordan and Lebanon at a cheaper price.

A security team kept intruders off the unfenced land and camels away from the crops. Farming equipment used in Saudi Arabia is primarily American-made, Kirk said. "The tractors are John Deere and the diesel engines are Caterpillar. American-made is pretty much the standard of excellence there."

Some Texas farmers disagreed with the Kirks' decision to work in Saudi Arabia. "We didn't teach them how to farm—they don't want to learn, they want someone to do it for them," said Mrs. Kirk.

Now Kirk said they will return to the life of typical farmers in West Texas, but they hope to return one day to Saudi Arabia.

Extension council discusses luncheon

The Deaf Smith County Extension Homemakers Council met Monday in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library. In the absence of chairman Carol Odom, vice chairman Maudette Smith was in charge of the meeting.

Opening exercises and refreshments were furnished by the Cultural Club. Nell Pope gave a humorous reading titled "Zucchini Clubbing", a new kind of sport. She stated that surely the Hatfield and McCoy feud must have resulted from their dilemma over what to do with zucchini.

All clubs were urged to get their

"Hope is an incentive to faith and assists in its active exercise. Hope lightens the darkest horizon, and strengthens the determination to push forward, though everything around may seem to conspire to defeat the work we are seeking to do. It is akin to faith in that it inspires a continuance in well doing because of the hope of good and satisfactory results."

nominees of Woman of the Year and their letters of recommendation back to the extension office by Feb. 5. Nominees include Mariellen Homfeld, Bippus Club; Nell Pope, Cultural Club; June McCabe, Dawn Club; Sherri Blackwell, Draper Club; Edith Higgins, North Hereford Club; Carolyn Evers, Westway Club; and Audrey Rusher, Wyche Club.

Committee plans for E.H.C. 1988 were read and approved so they can be taken back to the clubs for their approval.

County extension agent, Beverly Harder, presented certificates to those attending the workshop on serving food to the public in January.

Those present were told they could pick up entry forms to enter the squash recipe contest at the extension office.

There were eight clubs represented and five had 100 percent attendance. Guests included Edith Hunter and Toni Vaughn.

All were encouraged to attend the annual Appreciation Luncheon, sponsored by The Hereford Brand, at noon Monday, Feb. 22, at the Community Center. The highlight of the luncheon will be the naming of the Club Woman of the Year.

Hereford resident marries in Canyon

MRS. GLENN THOMPSON
...nee Darla Faye Smith

Darla Faye Smith of Hereford and Glenn Norman Thompson of Boston, Mass. were united in marriage Jan. 23, in an evening candlelight ceremony in the First United Methodist Church of Canyon.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James N. Smith of Hereford. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Thompson of Boston, Mass.

Guests were registered by Jerrie Coffey of Amarillo, cousin of the bride.

Becky Weatherly of Hereford presented a program of piano selections. Cindy Lanin and Debbie Scroggins sang "Theme From Ice Castles" "Here We Are" and "That's The Way."

A 15-branch candelabrum of brass centered between two 15-branch matching brass spiral candelabra encircled the sanctuary with a soft candle glow. The candelabra were entwined with greenery.

The unity candle was accented with a cluster of white stephanotis and picot ribbon. Small white candles on each side of the united candle were lit by the mother of the bride and the mother of the groom as they entered the church.

The pews were marked with dusty rose bows.

As the bride entered the church, she wore a formal-length gown of white re-embroidered lace with seed pearls and crystal beads. The bodice featured a Victorian neckline and the sheer puffy sleeves were fitted with white satin bows just above the elbow. The elegant chapel-length train featured a large satin bow at the dropped-waistline.

She wore a fingertip-length veil which fell from a wreath fashioned of silk flowers and beaded with crystal beads and seed pearl sprays completely outlined in scalloped pearl loops. The headpiece was finished with a filament edged pouf illusion in the back.

The bride's bouquet was a cascade of white roses, stephanotis, carnations on a back of imported white lace, white picot ribbon, and French love knots.

Tana Hiner of Canyon was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Nini Kern of Lubbock; Julie Thompson of Houston, sister-in-law of the groom; and Anita Bagwell of Hurst, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore floor-length dusty rose taffeta gowns with scooped necklines featuring bows at the shoulders and three-quarter-length pointed sleeves.

Steve Gerrish of Ponca City, Okla., served as best man. Groomsmen were Ricky Buster of Canyon, Tommy Money of Canyon and John Delany of Lubbock.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Dorman Duggan of Hereford. Mrs. Agnes Thompson, mother of the groom, read a prayer before the couple lit the unity candle.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlor.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace overlay cloth. The bride's bouquet centered the table. The crystal punch service and crystal nut and mint dishes completed the table setting.

The three tiered wedding cake was accented by dusty rose sugar bells and was topped with white satin wedding bells with white silk flowers and white pearl hearts.

Cake and punch were served by Janice Stowers, cousin of the bride and Denis Lemons and Vickie King. The groom's table featured a dusty rose cloth with a hand-made lace overlay, made by the bride's great-grandmother. The silver coffee service completed the table setting. A German chocolate cake, nuts and mints, were served.

Following a wedding trip to Taos, N.M. the couple will make their home in Boston.

Grotegut selected for conservation honor

Gertrude Grotegut has been named the Conservation Homemaker of the Year by the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District.

Grotegut is a native of West Germany, and emigrated to the United States in 1961 to marry her husband, Joe, in Umbarger. She was born and raised on a farm which had been in her family for over 350 years, and graduated from an agriculture school where she studied home economics.

Grotegut stays busy with her four children: Jeannette, 22; Chris, 18; Monica, 17; and Donna, 15. The three youngest children are active in several school activities and FFA and 4-H, while Jeannette is an award-winning music major at West Texas State University.

On the farm, she can be seen driving a grain truck or doing whatever is necessary. "I drove a tractor up to the last year or two," she said, "but now that the kids are older, they help a lot during the summer and weekends." Gertrude also keeps the books and keeps her husband on schedule. "I even make my own applesauce," she said. Gertrude enjoys American and German cooking, and many of her recipes are old family recipes. "I especially like to make German desserts. Black Forest Cake is my favorite," and there is pride in her voice when she says her homemade bread is a favorite with family and friends.

Gertrude keeps busy with the Grotegut's garden, freezing and canning the family's vegetables, and prepares fruit from their orchard. "I even make my own applesauce," she said. Gertrude enjoys American and German cooking, and many of her recipes are old family recipes. "I especially like to make German desserts. Black Forest Cake is my favorite," and there is pride in her voice when she says her homemade bread is a favorite with family and friends.

Gertrude is also an accomplished seamstress, making clothes for her daughters. Needlepoint pictures, pillows, and homemade rugs adorn the home.

The family is active in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Umbarger, where she is a member of St. Mary's Altar Society and the Christian Mothers Society. She serves on the board of the Hereford Community Concert Association and has been in charge of the Concerteers for the past two years, and is leader of the 4-H Citizens Club.

The Groteguts have also sponsored several foreign exchange students-college students who visited the United States to study farming methods, sponsored by FFA and a German farmers organization.

Gertrude has also been a firm supporter of conservation, and is proud of the windbreak trees they have planted around their farm. She will tell you they were planted at her request.

WILLIAMS & WEBB AUCTION

AUCTION AN IRRIGATED SECTION OF DEAF SMITH COUNTY FARMLAND
Property being sold by the U.S. Small Business Administration in Foreclosure proceedings. (Said agency reserves the right to enter the bidding process)
TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2ND 10:05 A.M.
SALE LOCATION: Property to be sold on the south steps of the Deaf Smith County Courthouse-Hereford, Texas.
PROPERTY LOCATION: From Hereford, Texas - Go 2.5 miles Southwest on U.S. 60, then west 2 miles on paved road to the Southeast corner of the section.
LEGAL DESCRIPTION: All of Section 156, Block M-7, BS&F Survey, Deaf Smith County, Abstract No. 936, Certificate No. 1255, excepting there from an easement for roadway along and over a strip of land 30 feet wide along the east side of said tract, and being the east 50 feet of said land, the same being reserved for road purposes.
COMMON DESCRIPTION: A section of land containing approximately 641.7 acres, less approximately 3.5 acres contained in the above recited roadway easement. This land is situated on the north side of the paved county road that borders it for a full mile. The mill of the BARRETT-CROFOOT FEEDYARD is located across the road at approximately the southwest corner of the section. A county dirt road borders the property on the east side and a county maintained road serves as a boundary for most of the west side. This section contains the following described improvements:
HOUSE & EQUIPMENT SHED: A wood framed house containing approximately 1150 square feet is located on the southwest corner of this section. It has a single bath - 5 room floor plan, a wood shingled gabled roof, wood siding, some carpet and some paneling. Some repair to this house is desirable. An equipment shed measuring approximately 30' x 130' (3,900 square feet) is located near this house. It has one enclosed bay with the balance being open front. This shed is wood framed with a galvanized iron exterior. An additional stucco/wood framed hired hand house requires major repairs.
BARRACKS: There are three wood framed buildings covered with galvanized sheet metal that have been previously utilized as migrant worker housing. One measures approximately 20'x35' (1100 square feet) and has a concrete floor; another measures approximately 21'x45' (1945 square feet) and has a wood floor; the third building measures approximately 21' x 48' (1008 square feet) and also has a wood floor. These buildings have gabled roofs. Cattle have been allowed to occupy these buildings and they therefore would require cleanup and repair in order to be habitable. However, they serve as very nice livestock shelters.
BARN: A 36' x 120' approximately (4,320 square feet) wood framed barn covered with galvanized metal and with 14' sidewalls. This building has drive through sliding doors on each end. There are two graineries inside, with the balance of the area being open.
BOXCARS & SHED: There are two metal boxcars situated on the north side of the pens configured in tandem with the above described barn and an additional shed in order to provide a windbreak and shelter for livestock in the corrals.
CORRALS: A set of unsable cattle pens constructed of crosspost and cable stringers with metal gates. A crowding alley feeds a squeeze chute and working area. A loading chute is in place for double deck trucks. A wood fence provides an additional windbreak. Common tanks are in place providing all pens with water. Water is provided by the below described well with a submersible pump and pressure tank which is contained in a small well house located on the west side of the pens.
HANGERS: Two metal framed aircraft hangers are situated north of the livestock pens and barn. One measures approximately 30'x120' (3600 square feet) and the other measures approximately 32'x62' (1984 square feet). Both are metal covered with concrete floors. The south hanger has a petitioned office area. A surfaced mounted fuel pump is in place, but the tank has been removed. Both have sliding doors on each side in order to accommodate aircraft in the traditional T-hanger fashion. These hangers are in a good state of repair and would serve as shop areas or storage buildings.
RUNWAY: A northeast/southwest sod runway is in place but does not appear to have had recent use. The runway is lighted, but the lights may be inoperative. The length is unknown.
UTILITIES: All above described buildings and corrals are electrified and water is available where it is needed.
IRRIGATION WELLS: This property contains five irrigation wells. All are represented to be 400 to 700 gallon per minute wells with all being drilled to red bed which is represented to be 300' to 360' deep. The static water level has been represented to be between 190' to 190'. These wells all have 50 h.p. verticle electric motors which are included with the sale of the land.
STOCK WATER WELL: A domestic well utilized for stock water is located just west of the cattle pens. It has a submersible pump and pressure tank located in the well house.
UNDERGROUND PIPE: All four wells are tied together with underground pipe. This system is designed to feed both sprinkler pivots as well as feed the risers that are located to water areas not under sprinklers. A concrete open ditch is also in place along the west and south boundaries of the property, but does not appear to be in use.
SPRINKLERS: Two ten tower VALLEY electric driven sprinklers water two circles on this section. THESE SPRINKLERS ARE OWNED BY THE PRESENT OWNER OF THE PROPERTY AND ARE NOT INCLUDED IN THIS FORECLOSURE SALE. Mr. Smith has indicated a willingness to accept $16,000 each for units, should a buyer desire to leave them in place. However, please understand that the sale of the land is not contingent on the buyer being able to purchase these units. It is anticipated that a buyer would be able to pay for these sprinklers at the time the foreclosure sale is held, but this is not a requirement.
TAILWATER PITS: Two tailwater pits are strategically located on the farm in order to recover the maximum amount of irrigation runoff water. They are tied to the underground pipe.
ALLOTMENTS: The wheat base is established at 208.6 acres with a yield of 47 bushel irrigated and 19 bushels dryland. The milo base is 28.8 acres with a yield of 95 bushels irrigated and 36 dryland. There is also a 113.8 acre corn base with a yield established at 106 bushels irrigated and 40 bushels dryland. A total of 488 acres are presently in wheat and 153 acres are presently in permanent pasture.
TAXES: The taxes for 1987 for all entities including Deaf Smith County, Hospital District, School District, and Water District total $1,559.10 if paid in January 1988. All previous taxes are paid.
MINERALS: All oil, gas, and minerals owned by the Seller will be conveyed with the sale of this property. No guarantee is made as to what they are. However it is believed that the equivalent of 31/32ths remain intact on the north 246 acres and 32/32ths remain intact with the remaining 396.7 acres.
METHOD OF SALE: The land will be offered as a single unit.
POSSESSION: Possession of the property to be at the time of sale subject to the rights of any tenant or the present owner in any growing crops and subject to any valid contracts that may exist, if any. A more definitive statement concerning possession will be made at the time of sale. At press time it is believed that the present owner will be allowed to graze out or harvest the growing wheat crop, with the possession of all other land to be at the time of sale.
TERMS: This land is being sold in foreclosure proceedings by the U.S. Small Business Administration and said Agency reserves the right to enter the bidding process. It is being sold subject to any and all taxes due. The Seller requires all cash for the property (Checks are acceptable). The Seller will provide a Substitute Trustee's Deed conveying all rights, title and interest of the U.S. Small Business Administration to the Buyer. (The deed will be exchanged for full payment at the time of sale). The Seller will not provide a policy of title insurance or an abstract for examination. However, the Small Business Administration will guarantee ownership. Survey, if required, to be at buyers expense. See information about possession above. Please contact the auctioneers for additional information or for a pre-sale showing. 5-1-142-6c

Record number of banks fail

WASHINGTON (AP) — More banks failed in 1987 than in any year since the Great Depression, and prospects appear only a little better for this year, a federal regulator says. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. reported Tuesday that 184 commercial banks closed their doors last year. Another 19 institutions would have gone under without assistance from the agency's insurance fund. More than half the failures — 95 — came in three energy-dependent states that have been plagued by tumult in the world's oil markets. Fifty banks closed in Texas, 31 in Oklahoma and 14 in Louisiana. Fifteen of the assistance transactions were in those states.
