Naval Hospital for the round of tests on their way to a three-day weekend at the presidential retreat in Maryland.

Reagan has undergone the routine tests every January and June since his 1985 bout with colon cancer. Each time, doctors have removed small, fleshy growths called polyps that have proven to be benign. The president will turn 77 on Feb.

Although Reagan suffered from an upset stomach Tuesday night and early Wednesday, his examinations have nothing to do with his stomach trouble, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday.

"The president is in great shape," Fitzwater said. "He's back on a normal schedule."

Reagan was scheduled for a colonoscopy, a CAT scan, a chest X-ray and a stress test at Bethesda.

During the colonoscopic examination, physicians use a long-flexible tube to visually inspect the full length of the large intestine. It was by using such an exam that doctors first discovered Reagan's original

By using fiber optics technology, doctors view a magnified image of the colon. If a polyp is found the operator can use a tiny wire loop at the end of the colonoscope to snare it and clip it off.

Polyps are common among people over age 50, and occur with increasing frequency as people get older. The vast majority are benign, but since some have the potential for developing into colon cancer, they are ususally removed.

The CAT scan is a threedimensional X-ray which provides a highly detailed and accurate picture of the brain, lungs, pancreas, kidneys and other organs.

On July, 12, 1985, doctors removed a small, benign polyp from Reagan's colon. They also found another, larger one that was removed the following day, along with 2 feet of the president's intestinal tract. The larger polyp was found to be cancerous, but the doctors said the cancer had not spread beyond the tissues that were removed.

Doctors said they were satisfied they had removed all the cancerous tissue from Reagan's colon at that time, but cancer patients are not considered cured until they have survived five years without a recurrence of With update on '88 farm program

Bork quits D.C. court

WASHINGTON (AP) - The bitter debate surrounding Robert H. Bork's rejected nomination for the Supreme Court is about to ignite again, as he takes off his judicial robe to free himself of any restraints against attacking his critics.

Thursday that President Reagan had reluctantly accepted Bork's decision to step down from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia after six years, effective Feb. 5.

Bork said that as a sitting judge, he could not respond to what had become "an essentially unanswered campaign of misinformation and political slogans" about his nomina-

"If, as a judge, I cannot speak out against this attempt to alter the traditional nature of the courts, I think it important to place myself where I can," he said in a letter to Reagan.

He said "constraints of propriety and seemliness limit the topics a federal judge may address and the public positions he may advocate." He said he wanted to "to speak, write and teach about law and other issues of public policy more extensively and more freely than is possible in my present position."

Bork's nomination was rejected by the Senate on a 58-42 vote Oct. 23. He insisted on forcing a vote, even though defeat was already certain.

Bork's critics argued that he was an extremist who would turn back the clock on civil rights and civil The White House announced liberties. His supporters said he was a brilliant jurist and an advocate of reasonable judicial restraint.

"The unprecedented political attack upon you which resulted in the regrettable Senate action was a tragedy for our country," Reagan wrote in a letter accepting the resignation.

Speaking to reporters outside his home Thursday afternoon, Bork said he was "very grateful to the president for his letter to me." And, he said, "There is a lot of misunderstanding of the role of courts in this country and I intend to engage in the debate about what the role of courts

A hero of hardline conservatives, Bork was Reagan's first choice to succeed retiring Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. When Bork was defeated. Reagan turned to federal appeals judge Douglas H. Ginsburg, only to have him withdraw after it was disclosed that he had smoked marijuana in the past.

Reagan's third candidate is federal appeals judge Anthony M. Kennedy. He is expected to win Senate confirmation by a wide margin after Congress returns to work later this month.

The 60-year-old Bork, a longtime faculty member at Yale Law School, first came to national attention in the 1973 "Saturday Night Massacre" during the Watergate scandal.

As U.S. solicitor general, he agreed to then-President Richard Nixon's demand that he fire special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox. The action fell to Bork after Attorney General Elliot Richardson resigned rather than comply with Nixon's order and Deputy Attorney General William Ruckelshaus was

Game show winner arrested for scam

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The biggest winner in the history of TV's "Password" game show was arrested after he was spotted on the air by Alaska bank officials who wanted him in a $25,000 credit card scam, authorities said.

"The guy's a real flim-flam artist ... who perpetrates frauds all over the country," said Ron Williams, assistant to the agent in charge of the Los Angeles Secret Service office.

Kerry Ketchem, 36, was arrested Thursday when he went to the Los Angeles office of Mark Goodson Productions to pick up a check for $58,000 he won in four appearances on "Password," which aired last week and earlier this week.

Williams said the Secret Service was alerted after employees of the Anchorage, Alaska, bank saw Ketchem using the alias Patrick Quinn on the NBC television show. Williams said he didn't know the

"He got false applications and then he got credit cards under the name Patrick Quinn and then the bills came back to the bank unpaid. They did a little research and determined somebody was using the bank and then they saw the guy on TV," he said.

Japan's proposal on public works disliked

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Japanese proposal to open its public works programs to American bids falls short of Reagan administration demands, and the United States will consider retaliation if negotiations fail, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter says.

Yeutter said Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, on his first visit to the United States since taking office two months ago, appears to want to resolve the issue. Yet the plan "is a bit vague in terms of which public works programs are going to be opened up," Yeutter said.

The proposal calls for U.S. builders to penetrate the multibillion-dollar Japanese construction market by forging joint ventures with Japanese companies. Takeshita's government also plans to increase public works spending by 20 percent, presumably fattening whatever share U.S. companies might win.

"Our preliminary judgment is that the proposal ... does not meet our needs and that we're going to have some tough, hard negotiations ahead," Yeutter said in a National Public Radio interview Thursday. "We certainly are a ways apart and we'll have to make our own judgment whether retaliatory action will be needed to achieve that objective."

Takeshita planned to leave today for Toronto, Canada.

Yeutter's evaluation of the Japanese offer was in contrast to the vague but hopeful terms President Reagan used to describe the plan after meeting with Takeshita for three hours Wednesday.

The trade representative's comments differed even more radically with those of a U.S. official who said Tuesday the construction contract problem was heading for resolution during Takeshita's visit. The official had briefed reporters only on condition of anonymity.

Members of Congress also questioned whether Japan would take additional actions to back Takeshita's pledges to stabilize financial markets, pay more for defense and donate more to needy countries.

deficit with Japan said of Takeshita,

Resistance to letting U.S. goods into Japan is so entrenched in that nation's economic system that "it takes more than a statement by a prime minister," Danforth said.

Officials of both sides had billed Takeshita's visit as a chance for him to get acquainted with Reagan and perhaps establish the kind of close relationship his predecessor, Yasuhiro Nakasone, was said to have had with Reagan over the past five

With that apparently in mind, the president and his wife, Nancy, issued an unscheduled invitation to Takeshita and his wife, Naoko, to have tea Thursday afternoon in the Reagan's private living quarters. The White House said the event would help the two couples get to know each other better.

Earlier, in a speech and questionanswer session with reporters at the National Press Club, Takeshita outlined the economic and defense steps Japan is taking.

They include increased contributions to the maintenance of U.S. forces in Japan and to Japan's own defenses, the expenditure of $30 billion to help indebted nations, actions to stabilize the ratio between the dollar and the yen and budgetary measures designed to increase Japan's consumption of foreign

Officials criticize department after mom gives daughter heroin

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - The case of a 16-year-old prostitute whose mother provided her heroin prompted sharp criticism from El Paso officials who say the Department of Human Services is not doing a good job.

Prosecutors and District Judge Enrique Pena said the DHS' child protective services officials were told in October that the girl was getting heroin from her mother, but did nothing about it. She was arrested and convicted last month of prostitution.

Before sentencing the teen-ager Thursday to a year's probation in a residential treatment center, Pena criticized DHS officials for hiding behind a "shield of confidentiality" and suggested they quit their jobs if they can't do them better.

"You are public servants, just like I am," Pena said. "And that is why I have taken it upon myself to make these hearings open to the public, to the media, so that they can report to the people that pay your salaries what a lousy job you are doing in this community." Pena has been a vociferous critic of the DHS. Last fall, he lectured DHS officials after he discovered that the agency knew of, but did nothing to help, a 10-year-old boy who slept in ditches to avoid his father's beatings at home. Earlier this week, County Attorney Joe Lucas asked Attorney General Jim Mattox to investigate the DHS because of the deaths of three El Paso children.

The teen-age prostitute was taken to William Beaumont Army Medical Center in late October for heroin addiction, hepatitis and sexually transmitted diseases, Assistant County Attorney Ken Barnes said Thursday. The girl's mother told a hospital social worker that she and her husband had given their daughter heroin, Barnes said.

When the Beaumont social worker contacted DHS officials, they refused to do anything, Barnes said.

"That's a clear case of child abuse, or at least neglect, when a mother admits to giving her own daughter heroin," said Barnes, who prosecuted the prostitution case.

The teen-ager was arrested and convicted on the prostitution charge last month.

DHS spokeswoman Pat Ayala said Thursday that the criticisms by Pena, Lucas and Barnes are unfair because confidentiality laws prevent the agency from defending itself

"We are bound by state and federal laws to keep our clients' cases confidential," Ms. Ayala said. "It makes it very difficult because if we are criticized for the actions we bound by these laws."

In Lucas' letter to Mattox, he mentioned the case of a despondent father who killed his two sons by setting fire to their house on Christmas 1986 - a few days after the DHS returned the boys to his custody. Lucas also cited a case in which a 15-month-old boy died of blows to the head last May 7. The department investigated an abuse report a month before, when the child was hospitalized with a skull fracture, but a supervisor closed the case because of "staff shortages," Lucas reported, adding that he was told the supervisor was later reprimanded.

Alluding to that case, Pena said at the sentencing hearing: "With Mr. Lucas, who is present here .. hopefully things will change, and if that means that everybody from the agency be fired, resign, because I can't conceive of somebody being reprimanded where a child has died.

... If you all can't do the job, maybe it's time that you all sit down and think about it and quit and get into something else."

Ms. Ayala said child protection workers learn to deal with intense criticism because they are subjected to it whatever they do.

"They're here because they want take, we can't comment. We are to help people; they're not here to make a lot of money," she said.

Spaceflight simulator to be made in Houston for schoolchildren

HOUSTON (AP) - A prototype spaceflight simulator for schoolchildren, built in connection with the Challenger Center, will be constructed at the Houston Museum of Natural Science.

'This museum is the beginning of a grand scheme," said June Scobee, whose husband, Dick, died aboard the ill-fated space shuttle Challenger. "I think the crew would be proud of what's grown out of a terrible tragedy," she said Thursday.

The project, paid for with a $150,000 private grant, will serve as a model for dozens of similar projects at science museums throughout the country. Construction is to begin im-

It will work in tandem with the Challenger Center Space-Life Station, to be built in Washington, and similar "mission sites," training and research centers for teachers. The program is meant to be a memorial to the seven astronauts killed two years ago when the space shuttle Challenger exploded shortly after takeoff.

Mrs. Scobee is chairman of the board of The Challenger Center. Also present at ceremonies Thursday were Jane Smith and Cheryl McNair, whose astronaut-husbands perished aboard Challenger.

The simulator will carry the name "2061 Simulator" and give children the impression they are on a mission in that year.

The year is significant, according to Kerry Joels, director of educational facilities for Challenger Center, because it marks the 100th anniversary of spaceflight, the 75th anniversary of the Challenger, and the next visit to our solar system of Halley's Comet.

For about 90 minutes, about 30 children and their instructors in the simulator will be facing problems and performing experiments astronauts likely would encounter aboard a space station.

"We know that under the stress of the moment, these teachers and students will forget this is a museum and they will be in space," Joels said. "These students are working toward a specific goal."

"For children, this is not just a case of having a good time, but they study before they get here and once here, make them think," said Frank Hughes, flight training chief at Johnson Space Center. "We want to make it as much as astronaut training as we can so it will leave a lasting impression on children."

The first Houston simulator is scheduled to be open for students in May. Initially, it is intended for children in the fourth through sixth grades.

The Houston affiliate center, and others built from it, each could handle about 10,000 children a year,

"If we have to run all day and all night, we'll do so," Carolyn Sumners, the museum's director of astronomy and physics, said.

Officials hope the center can be duplicated at other science museums for between $75,000 and $100,000, a price tag they said museums easily could afford.

Eventually, all the affiliates will be linked by satellite to the Washington center and other mission centers planned for the country.

Teenagers say they were made to sign filing forms

HOUSTON (AP) - Teen-age temporary workers say a partner in a political consulting firm told them to sign other people's names on presidential candidate filing forms, two newspapers reported today.

Travel agent Penny Harmening says her two children Jay, 18, and Stacy, 19, were hired in late December through a temporary employment agency by a man representing Southern Political Consulting, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Mrs. Harmening said her children were hired to gather signatures on petitions required to qualify Republican presidential candidates for the party's March 8 primary.

Southern Political Consulting collected signatures for Sen. Robert Dole, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont, who under party rules has to submit petitions bearing at least 5,000 valid signatures by Jan.

The FBI has impounded Dole, Haig and du Pont's petitions and Republican party officials are conducting their own investigation, following newspaper reports last week that found signatures under names of Democrats, supporters of other candidates and dead people on some petitions.

The GOP decided to leave all six candidates' names on the March 8 ballot. But if a candidate failed to submit the required 5,000 valid signatures to qualify, votes he receives will go to the "uncommit-

We welcome to the pulpit this Sunday, Don Stribling, who is director of Adult and Youth ministries at First Presbyterian Church, Amarillo. His sermon title is "What Are You Looking For?" The Scripture text is 1 Samuel 3:1-10; 1 Corinthians 6:12-20: John 1:35-42

Mission yearbook: Project Amistad is a compassionate outreach of the Gospel in Nuevo Mundo, a poor section of the Texas-Mexican border town of Piedras Negras, Mexico. Where teenagers had been vandalizing, Project Amistad, through the work of volunteers from Texas churches, transformed the vandalized area into a playground. "Ever so slowly", writes one worker, "We taught them...to settle arguments without hitting one another. These actions underscored the Sunday school lessons that presented to them each week the Savior who spread kindness, fairness and peace." Please pray TODAY for this ministry.

"A Winnable War" will be the film shown at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at First Baptist Church. The subject matter concerns the fight against pornography and how it can be won.

After 14 months with the Attorney General's Commission on pornography, Dr. James Dobson became convinced that obscene material is having a devastating impact on a surprising number of Christian families. In this major new address, he explains why pornography is addictive, how it affects Christian homes, and what can be done to stem the tide of obscenity.

The Rev. Lanny Wheeler, Methodist chaplain at King's Manor Retirement Home and Westgate Nursing Home, was the authoritative speaker on gerontology. Wheeler explained that gerontology is the study of the aging process and only one stage of human development. He stressed the fact that age is not absolute and that everyone has his/her own way of growing old.

Several theories were discussed including the fact that society sometimes disengages the elderly and that activities should not be curtailed. Wheeler pointed out that the norm of the aging process is the middle-aged, and this should be evaluated and that individuals should not be sterotyped.

one reason the Kosar-led Cleveland Browns and the Elway-led Denver Broncos are playing for the AFC championship on Sunday. The styles, however, have meshed La Plata White scores pair Kosar, the cerebral one, is a precocious 24-year-old who has sparked the Browns to AFC Central titles in each of his three years in the NFL.

At 6-foot-5 and 210 pounds, he appears gawky as he squats behind the center and painfully slow as he drops back to pass. He has no mobility to speak of. But his ability to read defenses and get rid of the ball from varying angles with surprising arm strength more than makes up for it.

"He has a very unorthodox throwing motion, sometimes sidearm, sometimes underarm, but he gets it there," Reeves said. "I've never seen anyone throw it from so many different positions. You think he's going to throw his arm off. To throw the ball the way he does, you have to have a tremendously strong arm. He can really rocket the ball.

the ball when you think he's about to be sacked. And he's tremendously accurate, completing about 60 percent of his throws." Reeves has noticed more maturity in Kosar since the teams met in last year's title game, won by Denver

23-20 in overtime. Elway is cut from the more traditional mold, a drop-back passer with a classic delivery who also can throw on the run and is a constant threat to scramble. He ranked second on the team in rushing with 304 yards, and he led AFC quarterbacks in rushing for the fourth straight year. His ability to improvise after avoiding a sack is what sets him apart from his colleagues. The strength of his arm is legendary.

"He throws the ball so hard it's difficult not to catch it," Browns Coach

While his talents were clear from the moment he was the first player chosen in the 1983 draft, it took a galvanizing, 98-yard drive against Cleveland in last year's AFC title game to establish Elway as one of the game's best.

of the league, and I think that probably says it all."

Schottenheimer agrees with Reeves that the two are "totally different quarterbacks. Besides their opposite styles, Denver uses John in the shotgun a lot. We never use it. They use him on rollouts and bootlegs, and we hardly ever use those."

With Elway at the helm, the Broncos ranked as the No. 1 offense in the AFC this season, averaging 375 yards per game. Elway threw for 3,198 yards, 19 touchdowns and 12 interceptions.

Kosar was the highest-rated quarterback in the conference, having completed 62 percent of his throws for 3,033 yards, 22 TDs and just nine interceptions. Both quarterbacks are amused at attempts to make Sunday's game a Kosar vs. Elway matchup. "I don't concern myself with what the opposing quarterback is doing," Kosar said when asked his opinion of Elway. "I'm sure he feels the same." "He's a very efficient, smart quarterback," Elway said of Kosar. But the last time I looked I was going against the Cleveland defense. That's who I'm worried about."

6 The La Plata White seventh grade Wilson, Williams in NFC title game from varying paths

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Football Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's a bit of condescension when Doug Williams talks of Wade Wilson, the other erstwhile second-string quarterback who will start in Sunday's NFC championship game.

"Wade's been a career backup who's finally gotten his opportunity and made the most of it," says Williams, who for the second time in his nine-year career is a game away from becoming the first black quarterback to start in a Super Bowl. "I've always thought of myself as a starter."

Perhaps, but it's a strange set of circumstances that place Williams and Wilson a game away from the Super Bowl, starting ahead of the two quarterbacks who represented the NFL in last year's Pro Bowl, Washington's Jay Schroeder and Minnesota's Tommy Kramer.

Williams has been here before, in 1979, when as a 24-year-old secondyear-man he quarterbacked to Tampa Bay Bucs to a 9-0 loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

He's also one of those "whatever happened to ... ?" guys, a man who drifted into the USLF in 1983 after the Bucs wouldn't meet his contract demands.

He didn't play at all from the summer of 1985 - no NFL team seemed interested - until the Redskins signed him as a backup to Schroeder a year ago. And last year, he three all of one pass - it was incomplete, naturally - as the Redskins reached the NFC title games, losing to the New York Giants, 17-0.

But this year, the 26-year-old Schroeder hurt his shoulder in the opening game against Philadelphia and the 32-year-old Williams came off the bench to lead the Redskins to a 34-24 victory, throwing for 272 yards and two touchdowns. He started for Schroeder in the second game, a 21-20 loss to Atlanta, then went back on the bench.

But three weeks later. Williams was back when Coach Joe Gibbs inserted him in the second quarter and he threw two touchdown passes to lead the Redskins to a 20-13 victory over Detroit. He started the next game, a 30-26 loss to the Rams, then was back on the bench the following week.

He won the job for good, ironically, against the Vikings in the final regular-season game, coming off the bench to throw for 217 yards in the second half as Washington won in overtime. And he started again in last week's 21-17 playoff victory over Chicago, completing 14 of 29 for 207 yards and a touchdown.

Wilson's route has been more traditional, although until this year he was thought of as just another career backup, sort of a northern Don Strock or Jeff Rutledge.

In six years with the Vikings, he had thrown a total of 438 passes, 195 of them in 1984, when Kramer was out with an injury.

He began this year as the starter after Kramer underwent alcohol rehabilitation treatment, then suffered a pinched nerve in his shoulder when he returned.

When Kramer got healthy again, the two alternated, often replacing each other in mid-game. But Wilson played enough to throw 264 passes, completing 140 for 2,106 yards with 14 touchdowns and 13 interceptions. Suddenly a scrambler, he also was the team's third-leading rusher with 263 yards in 41 carries, including 75 in a 27-24 overtime loss to the Redskins in the season's final game.

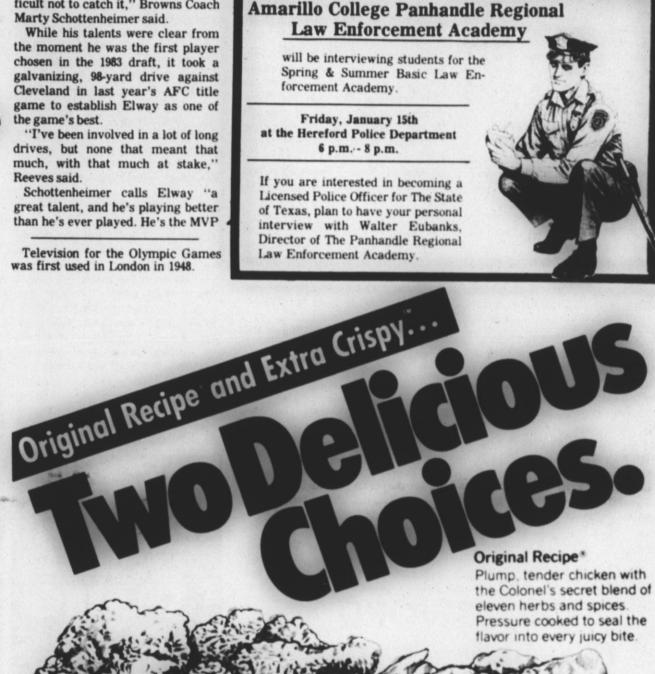

Kramer started the opening playoff game in New Orleans but fumbled on the first two possessions and Wilson came on to lead the Vikings to a 44-10 victory. Against San Francisco last week, he was 20 of 34 for 298 yards and two touchdowns, a Minnesota playoff record.

Yet Wilson has remained officially the backup and remained so even after the San Francisco victory. Coach Jerry Burns said, somewhat facetiously, that he might not start against Washington.

"I'm one of those guys you always think of as a second-stringer," Wilson said somewhat bitterly during the season."

Rockets win without Floyd, 103-98

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - It took the Houston Rockets until the final minutes of the game to figure out how to win without suspended Sleepy Floyd. Then Allen Leavell and Robert Reid showed them the way.

Leavell hit 12 consecutive free throws, extending his string to 31 in a row and rallying the Rockets to a 103-98 NBA victory over Portland Thursday night.

Reid hit several key baskets and connected on five of six free throws down the stretch, contributing to the uphill victory.

Floyd was suspended for one game and fined $5,000 Thursday for his part in a fight with Phoenix's Jeff Hornacek Wednesday night.

Leavell, who scored 20 points and handed out 9 assists to lead the Rockets, wanted no credit for the vic-

"Sleepy and I both could go down and we'd still be all right," Leavell said. "My game is the same even if he's in. "There's no more pressure. We have six capable guards." Houston trailed through most of the game until a slam by Akeem Olajuwon with 1:57 to go gave them their first lead since 7:26 of the second quarter.

Steve Johnson tied it at 97-97 but Reid sank two free throws with 48 seconds to play and Leavell added four more free throws to complete the comeback.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I refer to 'M.M. From Mass." who wrote about repairmen forgetting their tools. She should have added something about shoddy work.

Last year my furnace serviceman left an expensive long-handled brush behind. Another furnace person came the following day and hooked up the stack switch control improperly.

It turned the furnace on and off four times an hour, 24 hours a day. This went on for three days until they sent someone to fix it.

The garage mechanic, after changing a tire on my car, started to put the nuts back on with one turn of the wrench, then he left to pump gas. When he returned he said, "I'm finished." I told him that the nuts weren't tightened. He replied, "By golly, you're right! It's a good thing you were watching!"

Last April the roofing man put the gutters on improperly and the drained to one end of the house and flooded my cellar.

Another carpenter began to put rain-soaked insulation into the walls of our new addition. He had left it out in the rain all night. When I pointed this out to him, he said, "Gee, my mind was somewhere else."

Your advice to M.M. who complained about rotten work was, Shake a leg and take your business elswhere." Where, Ann Landers, is ELSEWHERE"? Nine out of 10 workmen have had darned little experience, they charge too much, and they don't stand behind what they mess up. It doesn't matter how many times you take your business "elsewhere," it's like playing Russian roulette. The only difference is that the rare good serviceman is out there someplace but you have no way of finding him.-J.S., Maine

DEAR MAINE: I can see why you are bitter, but there are options. You

THE MEANING OF SERVICE

'Serve: what does it mean? It means that I am going to use all my faculties, but I use them for others and help to make other men noble.

"The man who has served self becomes worn out and weary and disgusted with himself, and goes down to the dust unwept and unsung. But if he serves, other hearts love him and a social circle clings around him, and continual joy blesses his spirit.

'Concentrating on himself, he dwindles and dwarfs until self is not worth saving. But, serving others, self is widened and broadened until the soul partakes of the nature of God.

"What a wonderful thing sympathy is! How it makes us bear and enter into the woes of men! ... Paul says, 'I would not have dominion over you; but I would help your joy."

"If I can only wipe away the tears of the sick child; if I can only speak words to the brokenhearted mother; if I can only speak comforting words to the sick and dying as they go down into the darkness of the night, I shall serve with joy. Such works are called sacrifices in the Scripture. ... The service is to become a service of sacrifice. The sacrifice is to be painful. We often quote, but few of us understand, the words, 'Labor of Love.' This means a painful labor, not less painful because love demands it - a service of selfsacrificing love."

-Alpheus W. Wilson, Dallas Morning News, Nov. 18, 1901.

can refuse to pay for shoddy work. If you have paid for part of it in advance, report the slobs to the Better Business Bureau. And, when you find that gem who does first-class work, treat him well and recommend him to your friends.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read the column in the Buffalo News describing the humiliation of a woman whose husband ran an ad in the paper saying that he would no longer be responsible for her debts.

For those who believe this is a new approach, I offer a bit of research. On April 23, 1824, the Niagara Sentinel in Lewiston, N.Y., printed the following advertisement: "Whereas my wife Catharine, having eloped from my bed and board without just provocation, I forbid all persons to harbour or trust her on my account, for I am determined to pay nothing of her contracting.

"Furthermore, if any person likes her better than I do, they are welcome to her. Stephen Howel Porter (April 6, 1824).

If you choose to print this, Ann, go ahead .- Donald E. Loker, Local History Specialist, Niagara Falls Public Library (N.Y.)

DEAR DON: Thanks for the research. Ah, "the more things change the more they remain the

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a big bet on with my husband. The prize: a shopping spree.

Doug says the expression, "You've got your work cut out for you," means who have a lot of work to do yet. I say it means you have LESS to do, since it's been "cut out" for you. Who is right-Stacey in Grand

DEAR STACEY: Sorry, honey, You lose. Doug is right. "Cut out" in this sense does not mean diminished. It means staked out or defined. So, actually, you have more to do.

Feeling pressured to go "all the way" because everyone else is doing it? You're not alone. For answers to your questions about sex, and to learn how your peers really feel about it, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "Sex and the Teenager." Send $2.50 plus a selfaddressed, stamped No. 10 envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill., 60611-0562.

Metabolism as weight factor being studied

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Scientists had long suspected but had been unable to prove that the potential for getting fat is linked to the body's metabolic rate - how fast calories are burned to produce energy.

Now, however, federally funded studies of one of the country's chronically overweight populations, the Pima Indians of southern Arizona, are confirming that fat people are likely to have a "slow" metabolism. Lean people are likely to have faster metabolism.

The same studies also found that how much a person "fidgets" stays active while at rest - is linked to his metabolic rate and therefore his weight. Fidgeting probably is inherited. 'These results among the Pimas can be applied to the general population," said Clifton Bogardus, chief of clinical diabetic research at the National Institutes of Health facility in Phoenix.

The key to proving the link between metabolism and weight was the use of a specially designed, hightechnology device known as a respiratory chamber, in which a person's metabolic activity can be measured over 24 hours.

Using that chamber to monitor several hundred Pimas, NIH scientists found that the risk of gaining extra weight is about 70 percent for those with low metabolic rates, compared to 10 percent to 30 percent for those with normal or high metabolic Metabolic rate is defined as how fast a body processes food, burns calories and creates and uses energy, Bogardus said.

'A low metabolic rate over a 24-hour period is a significant predictor of obesity," he said. "But it is not the only factor.

"No matter who you are or what your metabolic rate, the fact is if you eat too much you will get fat," said Bogardus. "Your metabolic rate is part of the problem (of being overweight), but it is not the only reason people get fat."

People with low metabolic rates "simply have to eat less" than those with higher rates, "or they have to find a way to increase their energy expenditure," he explained. "How much people need to eat varies greatly from individual to individual."

Although it would seem that a person with a slow metabolism would have lower energy demands and thus less of an appetite, the opposite may be true, said Bogardus.

It is Bogardus' use of the Swissdesigned respiratory chamber to monitor patients for 24 hours that is giving his results more validity than other studies, said Jil Feldhausen, nutrition and weight studies researcher at the University of Arizona.

While in the small sealed chamber for a 24-hour period, patients in Bogardus' study were monitored for the amount of oxygen they inhaled and the amount of carbon dioxide they produced. When that was calculated against the amount of food they ate and the amount of movement they made, the result was the patient's energy expenditure - a figure that indicates the body's actual metabolic rate.

"The problem in studies like this has always been how to determine energy expenditure, and that has usually been somewhat inexact," said Feldhausen. "There is a recent study that shows that obese women actually burn more calories per day than lean women, but that study used less reliable methods to calculate that. A study that measures the metabolic rate over 24 hours should offer much more reliable results."

Because activity levels were also measured in the respiratory chamber, Bogardus was able to document the fact that people varied widely in how much they moved -

Fidgeting levels marked individual families - "supporting the idea that obesity is an inherited problem," said Bogardus.

ASK DR. LAMB

Dibenzyline will shrink the prostate and double the urine flow. Of course I understand all the reservations and conditions that are implied. But when a urologist flatly dismisses that statement - not its relevance to me, you understand, but in general - I see red. His smirk when I told him the source made me even angrier.

I've already concluded that his attitude precludes my need for his services. I do not believe any right-minded person would prefer a surgical procedure - which this physician endorses as the only option for an enlarged prostate - over a more conservative approach, if one exists. Is Dibenzyline an option under some conditions, especially if the only complaint is a decreased force and perhaps volume in the flow of urine? I am 64 years of age and in excellent health.

DEAR READER: Perhaps you misinterpreted your urologist's remarks. Dibenzyline will not eliminate the small benign tumors that grow inside the prostate and cause the obstruction. But the tumors are not the only factor in causing obstruction in many early cases of prostate enlargement.

It may be that the urologist you saw is not familiar with the work, reported in the July 1986 issue of the Journal of Urology, by Dr. Marco Caine of the Hadassah Medical Center in Jerusalem. He reported good results in relieving symptoms of prostatic obstruction using Dibenzyline.

According to Dr. Caine, the reason it works is that about half of the prostate gland is fibromuscular tissue, which can relax and contract like other muscles. That contraction of the muscle fibers in the prostate propels the orgasm fluid from the prostate during an orgasm.

In the presence of prostate disease including enlargement from tumors these muscular structures can contract too much, contributing to the obstruction. Dibenzyline acts by preventing the contraction. As these fibers are relaxed and the gland relaxes, it produces less squeeze on the urethra and relieves the obstruction enough to reduce or eliminate symptoms in some patients. These patients may not require surgery.

I'm sending you Special Report 71, The Prostate Gland, for a more complete discussion of the enlarged prostate. Others who want this report can send $1 for it to THE HEALTH LETTER, Dept. 71, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DOCTOR LAMB: I am concerned about my 10-year-old granddaughter. She pops her joints all the time. There are no signs of anything wrong with her joints. She is very active on the bicycle, trampoline and in other activities. But she pops her fingers, toes, ankles and anywhere there is a joint. Is this a sign of some disease or just an attention

DEAR READER: It sounds like she has gotten her grandmother's attention. Joint popping is a harmless, even though annoying, habit. The sound is made by the rapid movement of tendons, somewhat like cracking a whip. The tendon is suddenly jerked and causes the popping sound. It is not associated with arthritis or any disease. One small study was reported that showed no damage factor in your cholesterol level. That from the habit. There is no evidence is why the total cholesterol level rises that it will lead to joint damage, in the male at puberty. It is also why

It may be a nervous habit. The habit is not confined to children. My grandmother used to entertain me by cracking her knuckles while she rocked and told stories. It may even relax tense muscles. It is really a stretching maneuver.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My 81-year-old mother has had dropsy for years. She has taken pills to relieve the water buildup, but her legs are still three times the size of normal legs. After two heart failures, she has had a new valve put in and a bypass on the right side. The left side has problems, but they left it alone. Why didn't they do the left side when they had her open?

My mother's blockage was calcium, which I have never heard about. How and why can this happen?

DEAR READER: Dropsy is an old term for congestive heart failure. When the heart cannot pump out enough blood, it is said to fail. That results in the accumulation of fluid (congestion) in the tissues; hence the term congestive heart failure.

When the left side of the heart fails, a person may be short of breath. That is from the accumulation of fluid in the lungs. When the right side of the heart fails, it prevents the normal return of venous blood to the right side of the heart. The veins drain the liver, abdomen, legs and all the body except the lungs. Because the veins don't drain properly, they become distended. You may see the neck causes the fluid to accu

DEAR DR. LAMB: You wrote that enlargement. I have seen patients who have retained over 70 pounds of fluid.

> Your statement that your mother had a heart valve replaced suggests that one cause for the failure of her heart to be able to pump enough blood was a defective valve. Either a leaky or obstructed valve can cause this. This was probably what was wrong with the left side of her heart.

> The coronary bypass suggests that she also had blockage of a coronary artery. Blocked coronary arteries will weaken the heart muscle and lead to heart muscle failure. This is the most common cause of congestive heart failure. They probably only bypassed the arteries that were significantly obstructed. Calcium can accumulate in the fatty-cholesterol deposits in blocked arteries. It is not that unusual

> I have discussed these features of congestive heart failure in greater detail in Special Report 64. Congestive Heart Failure. I'm sending you a free copy. Others who want this report can send $1 for it to THE HEALTH LETTER, Dept. 64, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

> DEAR DR. LAMB: I have been having an argument with my neighbor. She insists that the only reason I have trouble with my weight is because I eat too much. I insist that eat less than she does and my system can't use as many calories as hers. Who is right? I know I do not overeat.

> DEAR READER: You are probably right. The reason many individuals have trouble losing weight is because their bodies really do use fewer calories than those of their thin counterparts. A good study on this was reported from the Department of Nutrition, Kings College, University of London, in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition (volume 45, page 914, 1987).

> They matched 16 formerly obese women with 16 women of the same age, height, weight and level of physical activity. The never-obese women used an average of 1,945 calories a day, but the formerly obese women used only 1,298 calories a day. The study also shows that the basic problem - a low calorie requirement - that resulted in being overweight in the first place persisted, despite the women having lost weight.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Your articles on cholesterol lean towards eggs and fat being the culprit. I don't agree. In women, change of life and hormone imbalance are great factors. I know food can't be ruled out. It's such an individual thing.

Doctors don't check a woman's hormone balance enough. They push what we eat. The horrible side effects of medicine to lower cholesterol is staggering. My sister-in-law had a terrible reaction.

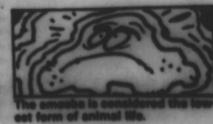

DEAR READER: You have a perfect right to disagree, but do you have the research data that the American Heart Association has used to base its recommendations upon? Remember, my comments are not just my personal opinion, but the recommendations of the American Heart Association based on several decades of research by the nation's top scientists. Everyone has a right to his opinion, no matter how wrong it

Yes, hormones are an important women are usually protected during the childbearing years, and why they may have higher total cholesterol levels after the menopause. Estrogen replacement will have some beneficial effects, but not enough to ignore the importance of the diet.

You comment on the bad effects of medicines, and some people do have reactions. Your own comments indicate why a diet to help control total cholesterol is so important. And the diet that helps to do that is limited in total calories and total fat, particularly saturated fat and have discussed the American Association's Heart recommendations for diet to control the total cholesterol in Special Report 48, Preventing Heart Attacks and Strokes by Diet, which I'm sending you, whether you believe in it or not. Others who want this report to help them with their diet guidelines can send $1 to THE HEALTH LETTER, Dept. 48, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA

You can plan a good, satisfying diet that improves your chances of not having a heart attack or stroke. But the choice to do so is indeed an individual matter. It is up to you to
