GOP may be probed

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, predicting that a grand jury soon may look into the Republican Party's presidential petition scandal, is criticizing the GOP for including in its primary some candidates who submitted forged petition signatures.

Mattox, a Democrat, contends that the GOP's decision to make all six major presidential candidates eligible for national convention delegates raises questions about the validity of the party's primary process.

"It kind of goes back to what we had in Watergate, if you recall — 'all's fair in politics' — when it's not all fair in politics. ... They've got themselves in a real quagmire, and it's difficult to try to resolve that problem," Mattox said Thursday.

"In all likelihood, some of these matters will be presented relatively shortly to a Harris County grand jury by the Harris County district attorney's office," Mattox added.

Casey O'Brien, the assistant prosecutor handling the case, in a phone interview from Houston declined to predict whether a grand jury would be used.

"There may be a misconception that a grand jury comes to play only when we are presenting it for indictment. For prosecutors, oftentimes it can be a useful tool for investigation," O'Brien said. "That's not to lead you to believe that a grand jury will be involved in any fashion."

The Harris County district attorney and FBI have been investigating the GOP petitions since news reports uncovered alleged forgeries on petitions filed by four candidates — former Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, New York Rep. Jack Kemp and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont.

The party certified two other candidates for the March 8 primary ballot — Vice President George Bush and former television evangelist Pat Robertson. No questions were raised about their petitions.

GOP Chairman George Strake said it had become "impossible" to verify signatures on the other four petitions, and the party declared that all six are eligible for a share of Texas' 111 GOP national convention delegates.

Mattox criticized that decision.

"The Republican chairman's action has brought into question the validity of the entire balloting process in Texas for the Republican Party," Mattox told a news conference.

"When you do not abide by the law or the rules of the party, well, then of course you have those kinds of things happen. I think that the Republican Party's created a mess for themselves because of what has taken place."

Responding, the Republican chairman disagreed, saying the decision was designed to let voters have the final say on all candidates.

"I find it strange that the self-styled 'people's lawyer' disagrees with our decision to let the people make their own judgment," Strake said. "We appreciate the interest of the Democratic attorney general, but the Republican Party continues to believe our decision was the only just and fair decision for the voters of Texas."

Mattox also complained GOP officials hadn't been cooperating with his office.

"They have not been willing to let us look at those (petitions), although they have allowed a great number of you (news reporters) to look at them," he said.

Mattox said it now appears the FBI "is moving out of the case because they have not found serious federal violations." However, he said there appears to have been a number of violations of state law.

Stronger economy forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy will probably make it through 1988 without a recession, but economic prospects would improve if the Federal Reserve engineered a decline in interest rates, several top economists say.

The economists, who testified Thursday before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, agreed that the record 508-point drop in stock prices on Oct. 19 will lower growth for this year. But they said a variety of business statistics since the market collapse indicate that the shock to consumer confidence will not be enough to abort the five-year economic recovery.

The hearings into economic prospects for 1988 and possible government policy changes was to continue today with further testimony from private economists.

The analysts who testified Thursday agreed with the Reagan administration that the economy will expand at a modest pace in 1988 with no pick-up in inflation.

Some of the analysts criticized current Federal Reserve policy, contending that the central bank should pump more money into the economy as a way of lowering interest rates and lessening the chances of a recession.

"At the present time, the Federal Reserve is waiting to see the whites of the recession's eyes before it alters monetary policy. Unless its eyesight is very good, it risks acting too late," said David Wyss, chief financial economist for Data Resources Inc., an economic forecasting firm.

"On the whole, I wish that the Fed were a little more afraid of a recession right now and a little less afraid of inflation," Wyss said.

Michael Hadjimichalakis, an economics professor at the University of Washington, said that without an easier money policy on the part of the Fed, the areas of the economy expected to do well this year will not be able to supply enough strength to keep the country out of a recession.

The Reagan administration is forecasting that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, will expand at a modest pace of 2.4 percent in 1988, down from an estimated rate of around 3.5 percent in 1987. The 5-year-old recovery from the 1981-82 recession is already the longest peacetime expansion in U.S. history.

Many of the economists said they were putting most of their hopes for continued economic growth this year on booming export sales, which they said would offset weakness caused by slower growth in consumer spending. Exports, aided by the weaker dollar, rose a remarkable 29 percent in the past 12 months.

Wyss said he believed the improving trade deficit would contribute fully half of the 2 percent GNP growth his firm is forecasting this year.

"Without this continued improvement in exports, I would expect a recession in 1988," he told the committee.

"Even with the narrowing of the trade gap, a recession is possible if financial markets panic once again."

The economists generally agreed that there are no signs that inflation is threatening to get out of hand and they predicted that consumer inflation, which rose by 4.4 percent in 1987, will rise by a similar amount in 1988.

F. Thomas Juster, an economics professor at the University of Michigan, said direct ownership of stocks is highly concentrated among wealthy Americans and this helped to limit the adverse impact on overall consumer confidence.

He said 80 percent of American households do not directly own any stock while two-thirds of all common stock is owned by the wealthiest 2 percent of all households.

Task force calls for strong vocation

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' vocational education programs must offer a sound foundation in basic skills, says the chairman of a task force that studied the way the state teaches trades.

Larry Jenkins said the most common complaint from employers is that vocational education students they hire cannot read and communicate well enough.

"I think the data would suggest that we certainly are bringing out — and I'm not sure it's limited to vocational education — too many students who can't read or write," Jenkins said Thursday.

His panel, the Governor's Task Force on Vocational Education, presented its report to Gov. Bill Clements at a Capitol news conference. The report said the State Board of Education's long-range plan for vocational education offers an excellent approach for improving the system.

"The task force is unanimous in endorsing the stress on developing the basic skills of reading, writing, calculating, communicating, analysis and problem solving as an essential foundation upon which a sound vocational education program can be built," the report said.

Jenkins, a vice president for Lockheed Corp., said some Texans must change their attitude about vocational education.

"Vocational education cannot be viewed as simply a weapon to be used in the fight against dropouts. It is an important weapon and can be developed to be most constructive in aiding the individuals who are not going to pursue a very extensive education." (See EDUCATION, Page 2)

INS nets 74 aliens

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Four seizures of vans allegedly carrying illegal aliens netted immigration authorities 74 people in four days in the South Plains and Panhandle area, officials said.

Border patrol agents said they impounded four vehicles — three outside Amarillo and one near Dickens, about 60 miles east of here — carrying the aliens, all of whom were bound for Florida and jobs picking tomatoes and fruit.

"We've been up to our eyes this week," said Border Patrol agent Gene Dickson, an anti-smuggling agent from Marfa.

Charges were to be filed today against two aliens arrested Wednesday night on Interstate 40 near Vega driving 13 other aliens from Baja California and Oaxaca, Mexico, Dickson said. The group had traveled from Madero, Calif., he said.

Dickson said Thursday that authorities suspect that at least two of the suspects arrested in the busts are part of the same smuggling ring.

Reyes Hernandez-Pineda was charged with six felony counts of transporting illegal aliens after a van carrying 19 aliens from Guerrero, Mexico, was stopped on I-40 for weaving and being overloaded, according to the Border Patrol.

The following day, agents arrested Hernandez-Pineda's brother, Raul Hernandez-Pineda, driving a van with 14 aliens, also from Guerrero, aboard. One of the 14, Enrique Villatorres, was charged along with the driver with transporting aliens.

Agents in Lubbock Wednesday charged Marcelo Solis Romo of Durango, Mexico, with transporting illegal aliens after a van driven by him crammed with 23 aliens was seized, officials said.

The van's occupants, including a 15- and 16-year-old, were from Durango and had crossed the border at El Paso, said Border Patrol Capt. Don Vaughn in Lubbock. The group was headed for Florida and had arranged to pay $400 to $500 each for transport, Vaughn said.

Border Patrol agents said the number of aliens apprehended was unusual but that the Panhandle and South Plains area had long been a heavily traveled area for alien smugglers.

"We have a lot of aliens that traverse this area from El Paso and west because the large numbers that seek employment in the Southeast," said Vaughn.

Alamo film has flag flap

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A city councilman is challenging the authenticity of a flag used in a new movie depicting the battle of the Alamo.

Councilman Walter Martinez said he plans to ask the Daughters of the Republic of Texas why a flag he believes is historically incorrect was used in "Alamo ... The price of Freedom."

But Marjorie Hardy, chairwoman of the Alamo committee of the DRT, said four flags were flown over the Texas shrine before it fell to Mexican troops in March 1836.

"Nobody knew for certain which flag flew over the Alamo," Ms. Hardy said.

She said the film script called for the four flags to be posted throughout the movie in the interest of historic authenticity.

Martinez said about two dozen Hispanic leaders have called for the movie producers to scrap the current version of the film and remake it.

Mission Yearbook: Betsy and Ray Yeager are missionaries in Cuernavaca, Mexico, a small town that has become a big city because of the migration to urban areas of Mexico and because of the overflow from Mexico City after the devastating earthquake of 1985. The Yeagers write, "On seemingly worthless lands, many have formed their own organizations to supply protection services and to petition for electricity, water, and roads. They work through Christian base communities which organize self-help programs of education, home construction, health needs and other services. This is a pattern being followed in many parts of Latin America and it has helped people survive under conditions of poverty." Please pray today for all the people of Mexico and Central America and for the ministry of Ray and Betsy Yeager who seek to bring the Gospel of Jesus Christ in practical and caring ways.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q. What's the difference in fat content between a serving of bacon and a sausage patty? E.G., Little Rock, AR

A. Little or none. Two medium slices of bacon have about a quarter-ounce fat after cooking. One brown-and-serve sausage patty has about a third of an ounce of fat.

Q. Does cream cheese icing need to be refrigerated? S.H., McConneville, OH

A. A cake frosted with cream cheese icing may be left at room temperature for up to 12 hours. But for best keeping quality, refrigerate.

Q. What's the difference between whole wheat flour and graham flour? A.S., Fort Atkinson, WI

A. None. Whole wheat and graham flour are different names for the same thing: flour milled with the complete wheat kernel left intact including the bran, germ and the endosperm. It's valued for the nutty flavor and chewy texture it lends to baked goods. When whole wheat or graham flour is used for making yeast breads, smaller loaves may result because the germ and coarse bran may interfere with gluten development.

NEW YORK (AP) — Busy brides-to-be should consider hiring a wedding consultant to handle some of the legwork involved in making the event memorable, suggests Barbara Tober, editor-in-chief of Bride's magazine.

"Using a wedding consultant or planner does not mean you give up control of your own wedding," she explains. "Rather, you add a very competent organizer to your wedding 'staff' — someone whose time, talent and resources you hire to turn your wedding fantasies into realities."

Two failed kicks in 1987 Super Bowl

Broncos' Karlis wants to forget misses

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — It's a subject best not broached in polite conversation — not with Denver Broncos place-kicker Rich Karlis, anyway. The subject is Karlis' two missed field goals in the first half of last year's Super Bowl. The Broncos had a first-and-goal at the New York Giants' 1-yard line but failed to get in on three plays, and Karlis then missed a 23-yarder. Later, he was wide on a 34-yarder.

So instead of a 20-9 or 16-9 halftime lead, the Broncos were up only 10-9 and had lost the momentum. The Giants roared back in the second half to triumph 39-20.

Karlis, weeping in the locker room, shouldered responsibility for the loss. "I really hurt us," he said. "I feel like I really let everyone down."

Asked about the two unsuccessful kicks as the Broncos prepared to meet Washington in the Super Bowl on Jan. 31, Karlis winced.

"I'm trying not to talk about them so I won't be thinking about them," he said Thursday. "But I know I'm going to be bombarded with questions once we get to San Diego next week."

"I was a little quick on both of those kicks. I felt anxious going into the game, and I don't know why. I wasn't like that in the Cleveland game (for the AFC championship) two weeks earlier. You just don't do a good job if you get into the ball too quickly, and that's what I did."

"It was nice tying the record last year for the longest field goal in a Super Bowl (48 yards), but unfortunately people only remember the other record — for the shortest miss (23)."

Relaxed and candid, Karlis appears to have put the trauma of last year's Super Bowl behind him.

"The only thing last year reminds me of is I want to go back this year and make the difference in the game," he said. "It would be sweet to win it with a field goal."

"I think Jim O'Brien (of Baltimore in 1971) is the only kicker to win a Super Bowl with a field goal. He was from the University of Cincinnati, as I am. Of course, he was cut the next year, too, so maybe that's not such a good deal."

Karlis, in his sixth season, has enjoyed a respectable year, hitting 18 of 25 field goals, 72 percent.

Like many kickers, he is a victim of past success. During his first two seasons, he was successful 84.6 and 84 percent of the time, the two best percentages in Broncos' history.

"Now, anything less than 80 percent seems horrible," he said, "and the fans seem to think that way, too. I have to remind myself that I'm attempting longer field goals now."

Monk rejoins Redskins in preparation for Super Bowl

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

HERNDON, Va. (AP) — Much to the delight of his teammates, particularly fellow wide receiver Gary Clark, Art Monk has rejoined the Washington Redskins to begin preparations for the Super Bowl.

Monk, the No. 2 receiver in team history, ran pass patterns and agility drills during Thursday's two-hour session at Redskin Park. It was his first practice with the team since he partially tore a medial collateral ligament in his right knee more than six weeks ago.

"It's great to have Art back," said Clark, who has faced lots of double coverage with Monk out of the lineup.

"Having him in there takes some of the pressure off me and (wide receiver) Ricky Sanders," Clark said. "You know Art is going to take some defenders with him. He's just a great player, by far the best receiver on this team."

Coach Joe Gibbs said he would have to look at Monk for a few days before deciding whether the eight-year veteran is fit enough to play, or perhaps start, against Denver on Jan. 31.

The Redskins practiced without shoulder pads Thursday in their first on-field activity since last Sunday's 17-10 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in the NFC title game.

"We needed a practice like this. It was good to get some running in and get some of the kinks out," tight end Clint Didier said.

Monk wouldn't talk to the media after the practice, but his teammates had plenty to say.

"He looked pretty good," cornerback Barry Wilburn said. "Even though he wasn't running at full speed, he seems to have a clock inside his head that tells him when to turn it on. He'll be ready for the Super Bowl, no doubt about it."

Entering this season, no other NFL receiver could match Monk's 270 catches over the last three years. Although he was limited to 38 receptions this year because of the injury and the 24-day players' strike, he still commands respect from the opposition.

Monk's 504 receptions ranks 20th on the career NFL list. He has played in three Pro Bowls and set an NFL record when he caught 106 passes in 1984.

HHS sophomore boys' team suffers 42-35 loss to Clovis

The Hereford High School sophomore boys' basketball team rallied in the fourth quarter to move within two points of Clovis, 33-31, only to see the visiting Wildcats score nine straight points and win the game 42-35.

Hereford trailed Clovis at halftime, 22-19. Clovis then increased its lead to 33-25 in the third quarter.

Tate Smith, Keith Kelso, and Nate Williamson each scored a basket as Hereford opened the final period with six straight points. But some turnovers and missed shots by Hereford enabled Clovis to build up an 11-point lead, which came with 2:09 left in the game.

Anthony Tijerina was Hereford's leading scorer with six points. Russell Backus, Tate Smith, and Jason Walterscheid each scored four points.

The HHS sophomores, whose season record is now 4-12, will play at home Tuesday against Canyon at 6 p.m.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A few years ago you printed a column about teenage suicide. I don't know what made me save it but I did. I'm sending it on with a request that you run it again. The young son of some dear friends took his own life a few days ago. They need to see it. Thank you.—N.Y.

DEAR N.Y.: When that column first appeared many readers told me it was the best thing they had ever read on the subject. I'm glad you asked to see it again. Here it is. I hope it helps.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As an upper-middle-class suburban teenager, I hope I can offer some insight into the growing number of teenage suicides, especially among those who live in the more affluent suburbs. I have known some teenagers who took their own lives and I believe the major causes are as follows:

The pressure to succeed academically is really heavy. These teens are forced to strive for acceptance to Ivy League schools. If they don't get into Harvard, Yale, Princeton or Brown, they feel like failures. (It's especially tough if their fathers went to these schools.)

Life in an affluent suburb is often lonely. The parents are involved in demanding careers. They travel a lot and almost never do things together as a family.

The fact that so many teenage suicides occur in well-to-do areas such as Westchester County and Long Island as opposed to the working and lower-middle-class neighborhoods like Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island must mean that most rich kids are more seriously troubled than poor kids.—Nameless in Winnetka

DEAR N.W.: You may be right about some rich kids not having much fun. The real satisfactions in life come from what we accomplish on our own. Achieving something builds confidence and self-esteem. Money, gifts, cars, trips and credit cards handed over by parents have little value after a while. In fact, they become boring.

Suicide is the second-biggest killer among the 16 to 24-year-olds in this country. (Accidents are the first.)

Your letter suggests teenage suicide is the fault of the parents. I disagree. In my opinion easy access to drugs is a major factor. Many teens overdose accidentally by mixing drugs with alcohol. Thirty years ago kids didn't fool around with mind-altering substances like pot, Quaaludes, LSD, PCP and cocaine. They had alcohol, but teens rarely drank themselves to death.

I also believe that TV and movies are factors in teenage suicide. Too often death is glamorized and made to seem exciting and adventurous. Young people who are emotionally unstable have a tendency to imitate what they see portrayed on the screen. They don't realize that death is permanent.

We are learning more about instability and pathological behavior and how to recognize the symptoms and possibly save potential victims.

There are no definitive answers, because each case is different, but of this I am certain: There always have been and there always will be people who are emotionally fragile and break under the strain of life's challenges, while others are able to live through anything. You might call it "the survival quotient." Why some people fall into one category and not the other is still a mystery. I don't pretend to know the answer although more and more the finger points to genetics. I'm beginning to believe that heredity plays a bigger part than any of us suspected.

What are the signs of alcoholism? How can you tell if someone you love is an alcoholic? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. To receive a copy, send $2.50 and a No. 10, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Coffee Questions BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I read your column on coffee. Both my husband and I drink at least 10 to 12 cups of decaffeinated coffee a day. I have low blood pressure and it seems I need this to be able to keep going. Could you tell me if drinking decaffeinated coffee allows us to drink as much as we wish?

DEAR READER: In terms of caffeine intake you could drink as much as you like, as it is nearly caffeine-free. But there is a lot more to coffee than just caffeine. That includes the flavor oils that provide the taste you evidently like.

The main problem with decaffeinated coffee is that it can make digestive complaints worse. If you don't have burning in the pit of the stomach, gas, abdominal discomfort or bowel symptoms, then it is not likely to matter a great deal. Decaffeinated coffee actually increases stomach acidity more than caffeine-containing coffee. Anyone who has digestive complaints should stop drinking all forms of coffee, tea and cola.

There are some other questions about the safety of some of the natural ingredients in coffee. They are naturally mutagenic, which has caused some suspicion that they may play a role in cancer, although this has never been proven. I don't think you need to worry about the decaffeinating process causing cancer, either.

I have discussed this in my new Special Report 83, Coffee, Tea, Colas and Chocolate, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope with 39 cents postage to THE HEALTH LETTER/83, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

I don't think there is anything in decaffeinated coffee that will help your low blood pressure, but if it makes you feel better and you do not have digestive complaints, there is no reason not to drink it.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Recently my 37-year-old aunt was diagnosed as having Hodgkin's disease. After reading about the disease, I grew concerned because I have had swollen lymph glands on the right sides of my neck for several months. They grow and diminish, but never really go back to normal. I've seen a doctor, but he doesn't seem overly concerned.

There are about four nodes that I've noticed to be enlarged, and each becomes sore from time to time. I'm an 18-year-old male. I feel healthy most of the time, but still am distressed by my symptoms. Do you recommend a biopsy?

DEAR READER: I wish I could tell you that you don't have Hodgkin's disease, but it is true that in many cases the only sign is enlarged lymph nodes, usually of the neck. However, the lymph nodes are usually painless.

There are many causes for lymph node enlargement. Any time you have an infection, the lymph nodes will enlarge. A sore throat is commonly associated with enlarged and often tender nodes in the neck. Of course, a check for other nodes is indicated. Often the lymph nodes in the center of the chest undergo marked enlargement with Hodgkin's disease. The disease may first be found by means of a chest X-ray. If you do not have a sore throat, and if the nodes are large enough, a biopsy is not a bad idea in trying to find out which of the many causes for enlarged lymph nodes may be involved in your case.

Hodgkin's disease is a malignant disease. It can occur early in life. The diagnosis can only be established by finding characteristic cells in sections taken from a lymph node or spleen. By the way, it is often a curable malignancy using modern therapy.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

AL CAN'T SLEEP

WINSTON SALEM, N.C. (AP) — After winning first money of $135,000 in the $1 million Vantage Championship on the Senior PGA Tour, Al Geiberger discovered he couldn't sleep.

"I still couldn't believe I won that much," he said. "I kept trying to figure how many times $3,800 went into $135,000."

Al's first tournament victory in 1962 brought him a check for $3,800.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I was getting ready to vacuum my floor and realized I didn't have any of my favorite carpet deodorizer.

So, I used some baking soda. I just sprinkled some on the rug and then vacuumed it up. It had the carpet and vacuum cleaner smelling fresh.

From now on this is what I am going to use. Saves a few pennies and we all know how fast they add up. — Kelly, Pinedale, Calif.

They sure can! Baking soda is wonderful for all kinds of things around the house.

How about sending me your favorite? — Heloise

BILL-PAYING

Dear Heloise: Perhaps my little hint of keeping receipts and bills in order will help someone who can't find them when needed.

I use a three-ring notebook and fill it with pocket folders. They do sell organizers, but I find them neither big enough nor strong enough to endure years of wear and tear. Each month I place all bills and receipts in that slot and write the check number on the bill that I paid it with.

I also have all income and check stubs, insurance and utilities. I even write down interest paid with each payment. All I need is this one book for any information. At the end of the year I have it all! After paying taxes, I tie it up and put it in the attic.

I make a special folder for my car. All repair slips and bills go in this one. If I were to sell the car, I would give this folder to the buyer — it shows that the car was well-maintained. This is a life-saver! — Phyllis Heritage, Abington, Conn.

MAGAZINES

Dear Heloise: I was always losing articles I wanted to read or check into, since I have so many magazines.

I stapled a small piece of thin cardboard on the front cover of the magazine. I write down on the cardboard any interesting articles that it contains. This saves thumbing through many pages. This could also be done on a cookbook. — Helen Crowder, Alexander City, Ala.

PET TIP

Dear Heloise: If your dog has several metal tags on the collar, I'm sure you know the jingle this can make. Well, since my dog sleeps in my bedroom, the constant noise was very annoying.

I cut a piece of moleskin to fit the back of the tag where it touches the other. The pieces are easily changed when they become soiled and, best of all, the jingle will cease. — H.C., Cloverdale, Ind.

I like hearing Zinfandel's tags because I can always tell what she's into! — Heloise

DETERGENT BOXES

Dear Heloise: Do you always pour out more detergent than needed? Well, I used to, but now I open the detergent box with the pointed end of a bottle opener.

The detergent pours out evenly and doesn't spill. When you are finished, you can open it all the way to get it all out. — Janice Veltri, Flowilla, Ga.

DRAPERY PULL

Dear Heloise: One of two plastic pulls on a drapery cord broke. Having searched unsuccessfully for a match in stores, I went to my bag of plastic bottle caps and found one the same color. I save many caps from bottles which I toss out.

My hubby drilled a hole in the cap. Presto! I inserted the cord and have a free matching pull. — Ruth E. Yoder, Grantsville, Md.

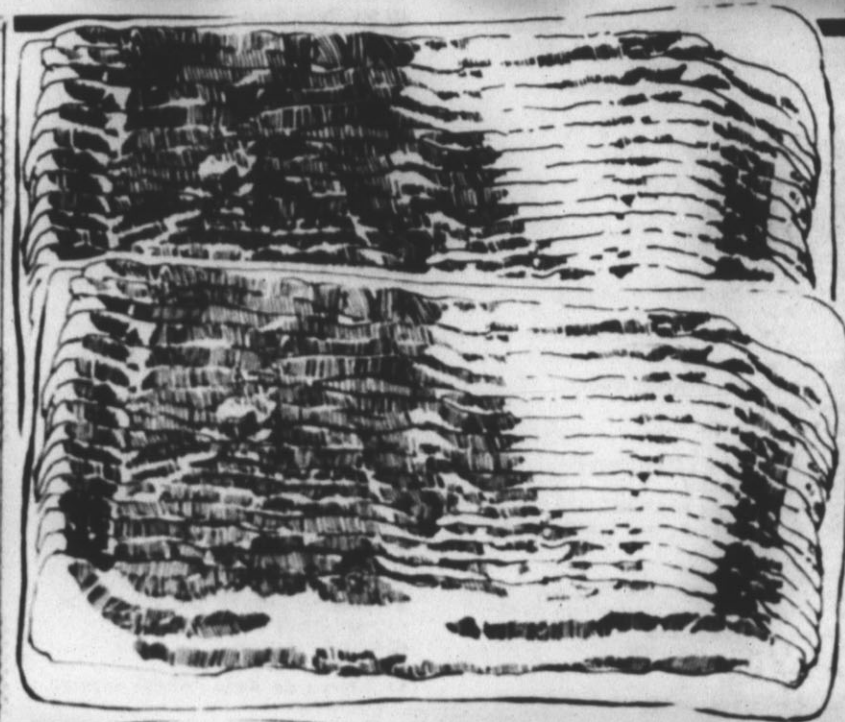

ANIMAL EXTINCTION

NEW YORK (AP) — The possible extinction of various animal species concerns environmentalists.

Species can be forced into extinction by such diverse factors as cattle grazing, canal and road building and agricultural and pesticide spraying.

This was the case for the dusky seaside sparrow, a Florida native, which passed into extinction with the death of a 12-year-old male named Orange Band.

The outlook is brighter for the black footed ferret. With the birth of eight ferret kits in 1987, the animal count has risen to 26.
