Passing the gavel

Mike Bowles, left, handed over the president's gavel to Larry Malamen Tuesday night during the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce installation dinner at the Hereford Country Club. Other new officers for the 1988 chamber year are Rocky Lee, vice president, and Carol Sue LeGate, treasurer.

Chamber installs officers

While the recognition of new officers and directors of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will take place at the annual banquet Feb. 18, the formal "changing of the guard" took place Tuesday night when Mike Bowles passed the president's gavel to Larry Malamen.

Rocky Lee and Carol Sue LeGate were installed as vice president and treasurer, respectively. Mike Carr, C of C executive vice president, installed the new officers as well as the new directors—Doug Josseland, Rocky Lee, Berta Ottesen and Temple Abney. Sue Malamen also joins the board as president of the Women's Division. Ottesen and Abney were unable to attend the dinner meeting at Hereford Country Club.

"Nothing good ever comes easy," Malamen told the board, "but I believe when you persevere that good things happen." Malamen added that he would look to Lee, his vice president, for ideas. "With his experience and my youthfulness, we plan to keep you busy this year."

For the first time in the history of the chamber, a husband-and-wife team will head up the board and the women's division of the chamber at the same time. Carr and two other husband-wife duos had held the positions in different years—Speedy and Lavon Nieman and Clint and Margaret Formby.

The newly-formed board was holding a workshop retreat this morning at the country club. Topics to be discussed included the functions of board members, the 1988 program of work, committee chairmen recommendations, a look at major projects, a membership report, and the approval of the budget for the new year.

Holdover directors on the board are B.J. Gilliland, Fred Rivera, Lajeun Henry, Allen Parsons, David Emerick, Ike Stevens, LeGate and Malamen. Bowles also remains on the board as past president. Directors whose terms expired were Terry Bromlow, Doug Manning, Bill Harris and Bowles.

Bills introduced to fight diesel tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three bills were filed in the first two days of the new sessions calling for repeal of a new tax provision requiring farmers and other off-road diesel users to temporarily pay a 15 cents per gallon tax.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, who want the tax change reversed, described it as an unfair burden on already suffering farmers and small businessmen. Rep. Hal Daub, R-Neb., filed a similar measure.

The tax provision, contained in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, requires diesel purchasers to pay a federal excise tax for off-highway use at the retail level and apply for a refund at the end of the year.

Under previous law, farmers, ranchers and small businessmen were exempted from paying the tax.

"It makes absolutely no sense to needlessly tax off-road diesel fuel users," Combest said. "By requiring wholesalers to collect the diesel excise tax rather than the retailers, many agricultural and other off-highway users will be severely penalized."

If left unchanged, he said, "this policy will create an economic hardship for farmers, oil field workers, and numerous small business owners."

The three bills, which were introduced on Monday and Tuesday, would reverse the newly enacted tax legislation and restore the tax-exempt status for off-highway users.

"In many cases this will have the effect of increasing their costs for diesel fuel by some 25 percent," Gramm said on the Senate floor Monday.

"It's as if somebody in government said, 'How can we make life tougher for farmers?' and the answer was 'Make them pay a tax they don't even owe,'" Gramm said.

The provision was advanced last year by President Reagan's then-Federal Highway Administration chief, Ray Barnhart, who said it would reduce tax evaders and net the government millions of dollars.

Barnhart said investigators have discovered many corporate tax dodgers, including one retailer which sold 20 million gallons of diesel fuel without paying a single dollar in federal taxes.

"In recent years the federal tax was raised 275 percent, from four cents to 15 cents per gallon, thus making evasion more profitable,"

Barnhart said in a letter to Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin. "However, federal collection procedures have not been adjusted to meet the greater challenge."

Pickle chairs a Ways and Means subcommittee that earlier last year held hearings on a similar provision dealing with gasoline excise taxes.

"The (Federal Highway Administration) believes there is ample evidence that widespread evasion of payment of the diesel motor fuel taxes is continuing, and that conservatively, upwards of a half billion dollars per year of those taxes which have been paid by motorists are not being forwarded to the IRS for credit to the federal Highway Trust Fund."

The diesel tax provision was among a slate of options proposed by the joint tax committee as ways to raise revenues, according to Dave Mason, Pickle's press secretary.

"They were looking for revenue raising provisions that the administration would support, and this was on the list that the administration would support," Mason said.

The American Farm Bureau Federation estimates that current diesel tax collection will be approximately $420 million annually, according to Combest.

Dallas mourns officer

DALLAS (AP) — At a candlelight vigil and a memorial service that drew thousands, citizens mourned the slaying of a young officer and rallied to the side of their embattled police department as some called for changes at City Hall.

While officer John Chase, 25, was eulogized as a peacemaker, a few hundred citizens declared war Tuesday on city officials and demanded an end to "harassment" of the police department.

"We have a lot of police officers here. I think we're trying to show them they've got friends," said Bill Caruth, who organized Tuesday night's candlelight vigil at City Hall, which drew a few hundred residents, most of them white.

Caruth's Support Your Local Police group did a bustling business in sales of pro-police bumper stickers and posters.

"I don't know of a better place to have this than right here in front of City Hall where they have been harassed," said neighborhood Crime Watch chairman Jo Ann Karr, whose eyes brimmed with tears as she spoke to the group.

During the day, thousands of residents offered a silent show of support for the police department as they drove to work with their headlights on. A group of about 25 homeless people donned black armbands showing respect for Chase.

Chase, a white officer, died Saturday when he was shot in the face three times by a black homeless man described as schizophrenic, who two witnesses said was encouraged by a few young black men who yelled, "Shoot him, shoot him."

The suspect, Carl Dudley Williams, 34, was shot and killed by two pursuing off-duty officers after he fired a shot at them, according to police.

Williams had an arrest record dating to 1978, including an August arrest for assaulting an officer, and a history of mental illness. He later was diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic.

Tuesday, about 200 people attended funeral services for Williams at Bethany Baptist Church. Many of those present were high school friends who had watched Williams progress from a promising athlete to a street person. Friends said they were shocked by the shootings, but believed Williams was a victim of mental illness.

Police questioned an estimated 45 witnesses in an effort to locate those who encouraged the shooting. But Lt. Jerald Calame said that only two witnesses had heard those comments and they did not have names or addresses of the young black men who cheered Williams on.

"I don't see an arrest. To be honest with you ... I don't have a lot of confidence in trying someone for (making) a statement," he said.

The shooting of Chase by the black vagrant heightened a growing tension between the mostly white department and the city's minority community, whose leaders have criticized the department for several police shootings of minorities.

Police Chief Billy Prince said the repeated criticism in recent months by city officials created an atmosphere that could provoke a mentally ill person like Williams. Though criticized by Mayor Annette Strauss for his comments, Prince refused Tuesday night to back down.

He attended the candlelight vigil along with several other officers.

Caruth, organizer of the event, who said he also is a member of the John Birch Society, an extreme right political group, called on the crowd to attend Wednesday's City Council meeting to press for abolishment of a new citizens review board.

He called the panel "the most continuing, egregious insult I can think of."

"(City Council members) have said you can take 13 civilians, 13 amateurs, who know nothing about police work and yet they can tell a police officer who has been through years of experience how to do his job," Caruth said.

The panel, which has limited subpoena and investigative powers, was created to review complaints against police officers, including the use of excessive force.

Ms. Karr spoke out strongly for letting police decide when to use their guns. "I believe in the use of deadly force. I believe in carrying it all the way, officers."

One citizen drew cheers by holding up a sign that said Mrs. Strauss and two other council members "must go. We need law and order."

But others at the vigil had non-political motives. A weeping Theresa Ybarra explained that her 8-year-old daughter, Nancy, knew Chase because he visited her school to talk about safety to the students.

CRP sign-up scheduled

The sixth sign-up period for the Conservation Reserve Program will be Feb. 1-19, according to the Hereford field office of the Soil Conservation Service.

During the sign-up, producers may submit offers for either the 1988 or 1989 crop years.

According to SCS officials, CRP offers farmers cost-sharing and annual rental payments to convert highly erodible land to permanent vegetation, a chance to bypass expensive conservation treatment, and to retain eligibility for USDA programs on other land they own or farm.

Farmers receive up to 50 percent cost-share assistance from the federal government to establish grass, trees or wildlife planting.

Farmers may bid annual rental payments for the 10-year length of the contract.

Persons considering entering a CRP bid should visit the local ASCS office before Feb. 1 to make an appointment to get the necessary files in order.

Study shows aspirin regimen could prevent heart attacks, problems

BOSTON (AP) — For many, an aspirin every other day keeps the cardiologist away, according to a major study that showed the common painkiller cut the risk of heart attacks nearly in half.

The study of 22,071 male doctors who had never suffered heart attacks or other serious illnesses found that a buffered aspirin every other day cut their heart attack risk by 47 percent.

Heart experts said Tuesday the research provides strong evidence that aspirin will be a major weapon against the nation's No. 1 killer, but some worried about side effects and said it will spur widespread use of aspirin without supervision.

"I hope this won't be given to the whole world as a panacea to stay alive forever," said Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, who called the study "very important."

A preliminary report on the study is scheduled to be published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

In the study, half of the subjects took aspirin for nearly ten five years, while the rest received placebos that looked and tasted like aspirin.

There were 104 heart attacks among the aspirin users and 189 in the comparison group. There were also 80 strokes in the aspirin group and 70 among the others, but this difference was not statistically meaningful.

Although the study, conducted at Boston's Brigham and Persons taking one aspirin every 48 hours cut their heart attack risk by 47 percent, and persons at-risk are most likely to be affected.

Women's Hospital, focused only on healthy men, its findings are being applied to women and men who may be less physically fit than those studied.

Aspirin works by making the blood less likely to clot. Heart attacks usually occur when clots form in the coronary arteries, choking off the heart's blood supply.

In general, experts said that anyone with risk factors for heart disease should be considered candidates for routine use of aspirin. The major risk factors include elevated cholesterol levels, high blood pressure, smoking, diabetes or a family history of heart attacks. Most Americans have at least one of these risk factors.

"Anybody who finds that their blood pressure numbers exceed 140 over 90 or their total cholesterol is much over 200 probably ought to think about taking an aspirin every other day," said Dr. William Castelli, director of the long-running Framingham Heart Study.

Anybody without the heart risk factors, he said, would be unlikely to benefit from aspirin and so should not take the small but real risk of regular use.

Lenfant agreed. "I think that people who are in a high-risk situation should be considered as candidates for this drug," he said. "But as with any other drug, they should be evaluated to see if the drug is the most appropriate for them."

Dr. Lawrence S. Cohen of Yale Medical School also agreed that women should take aspirin only if they have cardiac risk factors. But he also suggested that all men ages 35-70 take aspirin regardless of risk factors as long as it does not cause digestive upset or bleeding.

"It is my belief that anyone at risk of a heart attack can benefit," Cohen said.

Among those most cautious in interpreting the findings was the study's director, Dr. Charles H. Hennekens.

"It's a drug, even though it's safe and inexpensive and it's widespread use," Hennekens said.

He said the decision to use it regularly should be reached in consultation between doctor and patient, taking into consideration risk factors as well as aspirin's occasional side effect of bleeding.

The only serious hazard turned up in Hennekens' study was an increased danger of strokes that result from bleeding inside the brain. These are far less common than heart attacks.

Babbling Brooks

I ate supper the other night at the Hunan, the Chinese Place in town, and got in my fortune cookie the ultimate fortune for a procrastinator.

"He who hurries cannot walk with dignity."

I didn't know that. One of these days I'll get around to putting that to use.

Hereford really arrived, of course, when the Chinese Place opened. Sure, we've had the Mac Place and the Fish Place and the Pizza Place, signs a town is close to making it. But no town is complete until you can go down and get Moo Goo Gai Pan and Cashew Chicken and Mongolian Beef and Sweet and Sour anything pretty much on demand.

With the meal, whether you get a rib appetizer or get the meal for four for yourself, you get a fortune cookie.

It's always amazed me how fortunes either fit exactly or don't fit at all.

"Your participation in athletics will help you live a happy life," read the fortune the other night of a lady obviously into her 80s.

One guy wouldn't read his fortune aloud, but told his wife it sounded like it came straight from "The Scarlet Pimpernel, or whatever that book is."

There are, of course, fortunes we'd like for some people to get in their next fortune cookie.

Robertson fights decision

By The Associated Press

Saying he would relish a head-to-head race against Vice President George Bush in Texas, Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson has threatened a lawsuit over the party's campaign petition forgery dilemma.

"We're going to challenge it. If we have to take it to court, we're going to do it," Robertson said of the Texas GOP's decision to declare all six major candidates eligible to win national convention delegates in the March 8 primary despite apparent forgeries on petitions submitted by four candidates.

In interviews with the Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning News, published Tuesday, Robertson said his staff was researching a legal challenge to petition the decision.

John Weaver, executive director of the Texas GOP, said party officials had discussed the action with all six campaigns before the decision was announced last week.

"We talked with all six at the time of the decision, and no one had any objections at that time," Weaver said. "If he (Robertson) wants to sue, that's his prerogative."

Qualifying petitions submitted by four of the Republican presidential candidates—Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, Alexander Haig, former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and New York Rep. Jack Kemp—contained hundreds of bogus signatures.

But GOP Chairman George Strake last week abandoned an expensive and time-consuming signature verification process, saying all candidates would be on the ballot and eligible to win a share of the state's 111 national convention delegates.

"I frankly think it should be challenged and challenged quickly... It's like a filing fee that's paid with counterfeit money," Robertson said.

"Although our campaign laid back at first, I'm kind of itching to go after them. I think the time has come that they check" the signatures on all of the candidates' petitions, Robertson said.

Because he submitted over 9,000 signatures and Bush submitted more than 35,000, Robertson acknowledged that a legal challenge could result in a head-to-head race against Bush in the vice president's home state of Texas.

"I would love to have a head-to-head square-off with just me and George Bush, no extraneous issues. Me coming on as the conservative, him coming on as the liberal-moderate. Me as the Southerner, him as the Connecticut Yankee," Robertson told the Houston Chronicle. "I would absolutely love it."

In other developments Tuesday:

— Bush campaign staffers said the vice president's televised argument with CBS anchorman Dan Rather was a boost for Bush.

Kevin Moomaw, Texas political director, said the Bush campaign offices in Austin were receiving phone calls from voters who saw the Monday night broadcast.

"The people calling us were a lot of undecideds calling in saying that the vice president was forceful, showed leadership and, given this, they were going to be supporting his candidacy," Moomaw said.

— Secretary of State Jack Rains said his office has distributed more than 5 million voter registration cards and sent voter registration materials to more than 1,800 businesses and organizations. "It may not be realistic, but I'm still hoping we add a million new voters to the rolls this year," Rains said.

— Art Vega, who is running against Democratic Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, said his pledge to voters is that if elected he "will dispense justice fairly and equally for all Texans, rather than favoring corporate interests, major insurance companies, the powerful and wealthy."

Kennedy likely to be OK'd by Senate for court seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthony M. Kennedy, President Reagan's third choice to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court, is breezing through the preliminaries and heading for likely Senate confirmation next week.

Kennedy could join the nation's highest court before it ends its current recess and returns to the bench Feb. 22.

The Senate Judiciary Committee was to vote on Kennedy's nomination today, but the federal appellate judge from California already had the panel's overwhelming support.

Among the eight Democrats and six Republicans on the committee, only the conservative Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., said he might oppose the nomination.

A Senate leadership aide who requested anonymity said that Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., may try to waive a procedural rule to speed along a vote by the full Senate after he receives the Judiciary Committee's report Monday.

The aide said Byrd wants a Senate vote before a scheduled Feb. 8 recess.

Told of that projected schedule, court spokeswoman Toni House said an investiture ceremony could be held during the current court recess if Kennedy is confirmed.

Confirmation appears assured, a tranquil conclusion to a ferocious political battle that began last summer when Justice Lewis F. Powell retired.

The Senate rejected the president's first choice for the job, Robert H. Bork. A second nominee, Douglas H. Ginsburg, withdrew after admitting he had smoked marijuana while a law professor.

Kennedy, 51, has been a federal appeals court judge for 12 years, and has authored hundreds of judicial opinions. He lives and works in Sacramento, his lifelong home.

$2.7 million raised at Connally's 'going out of business' auction

HOUSTON (AP) — The sale of hundreds of items belonging to former Texas Gov. John Connally netted nearly $2.7 million, but the money raised during four auction sessions will only put a dent in the millions he owes to creditors.

Items sold during the final auction Tuesday were rather ordinary — cocktail napkins, ashtrays and wastebaskets — but the day's sales still brought in $240,000.

A terracotta cooking vessel that went for $80 and a camera that sold for $50 were among the cheapest items auctioned Tuesday. Even a used exercise trampoline brought in $250.

Connally, who sat next to his wife, Nellie, through most of the four auctions at Houston's Hart Gallery, said Tuesday that the sales have been "emotional and draining. I go home each evening exhausted."

Watching the couple's belongings being sold is hard, he said.

"You can't just sit there, no matter how small, without evoking some memory about where we got it. It's not easy," Connally said.

"A great many of those, nearly all of those things, we had given to us or we acquired for a particular reason. All those plaques that just went through we bought in Hong Kong because we liked them."

The Connallys parted with the memories and treasures of a lifetime including artwork, china, furniture, saddles, jewelry and gun collections in an effort to pay creditors.

The 70-year-old Connally, governor from 1963 to 1969, filed for personal and professional protection under federal bankruptcy law in July, vowing to sell his possessions to repay creditors.

But the four-day auction will pay only a fraction of Connally's debts. He listed liabilities of $93 million when he filed for protection, and says his debt is now about half that.

Items sold over the weekend include a painting of an Indian chief and his pony for $120,000; a mural of Texas history for $70,000; a copy of a Amedeo Modigliani painting for $22,500; the desk, chair and other furniture Connally used when he was as governor for $24,800; and a prized saddle for $10,500.

Connally, Navy secretary in the Kennedy administration and Treasury secretary under President Nixon, started real estate and development ventures with former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes at the peak of the oil boom.

But the boom went bust, ruining Connally, Barnes and others.

Under bankruptcy rules, Connally is selling all properties except his house and 200 of the 3,400 acres at Picoso Ranch, his homestead in Floresville south of San Antonio. The law allows Connally to keep $30,000 in personal possessions.

Connally said he was not sure of his future plans, except that, "I'll never run for public office again."

He said he has received several offers from law firms but at this point in his life would like to work at his own pace. Writing an autobiography is a strong possibility, he said.

In addition, Connally has done a commercial for University Savings Association in Houston that will debut Sunday. Ninfa Laurenzo, owner of Ninfa's restaurants, and Bum Phillips, former head coach of the Houston Oilers, also have done commercials for the savings association.

Candidates braving water and snow

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

The presidential candidates are searching for votes by land and by sea, with Jesse Jackson heading for North Carolina to sail the "red tide" that has put thousands of fishermen out of work, and Rep. Richard Gephardt taking a spin on a snowplow as winter weather curtailed his campaign travel.

George Bush's campaign claimed a public-relations victory in his high-voltage clash with CBS anchorman Dan Rather. But his fellow candidates — Republicans and Democrats alike — failed to offer much sympathy for the vice president.

Counting down the final days before Iowa's Feb. 8 caucuses and New Hampshire's Feb. 16 primary, several contenders stumbled in those states but others scattered from Miami to Maine.

Twenty-four hours after the live confrontation with Bush, Rather made an on-air bid to clear the air, saying he intended no disrespect in his aggressive questioning of Bush about the Iran-Contra affair.

"The intention of even persistent questioning in a spirited interview is to do an honest, honorable job," he said during Tuesday night's newscast.

Bush, campaigning in Wyoming, played down the incident, saying he didn't want a running battle with Rather. But his spokesman, Peter Teeley, said the interview triggered a flood of supportive calls.

"Phones all over the country just went wild," he said.

Harrumph, said the rest of the field.

"The bottom line is that this issue's not going to go away," said chief GOP rival Bob Dole. "And the Democrats are going to use it if Bush is the nominee."

Alexander Haig, who has himself needed Bush about the Iran-Contra affair on live network television, said the incident showed that questions persist about Bush's role in the matter.

Another Republican, Pat Robertson, called Rather a "good newsman trying to get at the truth." Noting the political benefits the Bush campaign was reaping, the former television evangelist added that Bush "came out looking a bit like a martyr."

"I wouldn't criticize Dan Rather," former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont said in Manchester, N.H. "He's not running for president. George Bush is."

Rep. Jack Kemp's campaign chairman, Ed Rollins, said Bush "may not look like a man who did well under pressure."

The Democrats took much the same tack.

Sen. Paul Simon, in Des Moines, said Bush "won the immediate exchange" but added: "I didn't think it sounded very presidential."

Jackson, citing news accounts that said Bush cursed the network off camera, told a meeting of newspaper editors that the vice president has displayed "a pattern of petulance."

Bush said CBS misled him about the interview topic. The network denied that.

"I don't think any one of us should go on a program and say, 'Gee, you didn't tell me you were going to ask that,'" said Gephardt, in Manchester, N.H. "We're running for president. You can ask anything you want."

But Gary Hart, who has been known to tangle with reporters himself, crossed party lines to side with Bush, saying Rather "went too far."

after news reports of his relationship with Miami model Donna Rice, has made criticism of press coverage one of his campaign themes since re-entering the race in December.

Suspects foil authorities by pushing car off cliff

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two men fleeing police in Texas and New Mexico briefly foiled authorities by pushing their stolen sports car over a cliff, but were later caught on foot.

The crashed car didn't work long Tuesday after police climbed to the bottom of a 200-foot cliff to look at the wreckage of the vehicle they had been chasing from Texas to New Mexico and back.

There were no bodies and no sign of a driver.

The car's occupants had enough of a lead on their pursuers during the hour-long chase that they were able to stop the car, push it off the cliff and escape, police said.

A few hours after authorities found the car, they found two suspects after searching on foot. Jimi Fonseca, 19, of El Paso, was arrested and charged with burglary of a business, El Paso police spokesman Mike Murphy said. Charges were pending against the other man.

Fonseca is suspected of stealing the car, a pickup truck and some typewriters from a used-car lot late Monday or early Tuesday, Murphy said.

The chase began about 1 a.m., when Texas state trooper Luis Carrillo spotted a speeding Chevrolet Camaro IROC Z on Interstate 10 in El Paso and pulled it over. When Carrillo got out of his patrol car to issue the ticket, the Camaro sped away, Department of Public Safety Sgt. Robert Collins said.

Carrillo chased the suspects 23 miles into New Mexico before losing sight of them.

Las Cruces, N.M., police spotted the car and pursued it toward Texas on I-10, but the Camaro got away, Las Cruces police Capt. Jim Wells said.

"Hi Tops" Cast

Thirty-four junior and senior high youths of Hereford are involved in the Good Guys Nazarene Youth Ministries. The young people are currently rehearsing for the humorous musical production of "Hi Tops" to be presented to the public at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Hereford

High School auditorium. The play deals with the problems teenagers in today's society must face. The play is under the direction of Ted Taylor with assistance from Jeff Love, Cathy Bunch and Keith Ann Gearn.

Teenage problems theme of production

Young people's problems are not new but they are increasingly greater than ever before. The humorous musical production of "Hi Tops" deals with teenage fads and trends, the need to fit in, the pressures of dating, sex, drugs and alcohol. The play will be performed for the public at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Tickets are priced at $3 per person and are available at Thames Pharmacy, Merle Norman Cosmetics, Caryn's Hallmark and Accents Unlimited. A book of 10 tickets may be purchased for $20.

The play, which features many musical selections and choreography, is under the direction of Ted Taylor of the First Church of the Nazarene. Assisting him are Jeff Love, Cathy Bunch and Keith Ann Gearn as well as others who

Scholar's Day held recently

Kimberly Emerick of Hereford attended a Scholar's Day at Oklahoma State University.

Scholar's Day is held to recognize those high school seniors who have demonstrated academic excellence by scoring exceptionally high on either the PSAT/National Merit Qualifying Exam or the ACT/American College Test. It also encourages high school seniors to examine academic opportunities in Oklahoma and to visit a major university.

The students received information about courses, financial assistance and housing. They also had the opportunity to stay overnight in OSU residence halls and to see the play "Brighton Beach Memoirs" performed by OSU drama students.

Officers elected to advisory board

Members of the Hereford Advisory Board of the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Outreach Center gathered Friday at noon for their regular monthly business meeting.

Juliann Thompson, Outreach Center Director, filled new board members in on the role of the advisory board and the services provided to the community by the Outreach Center.

Officers were elected for the new year, with Cindy Simons to continue as chairperson; Bettie Dickson, vice-chairperson; and Janie Mendoza, secretary.

Thompson reported that the L'Allegra Study Club has consented to be responsible for presentation of the WHO program to area children. WHO stands for "We Help Ourselves" and is a project in anti-victimization developed by the Mental Health Association of Dallas County and sponsored locally by the Outreach Center.

Board members were reminded of the Volunteer Orientation scheduled for Feb. 6 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Community Center club room. People interested in volunteering for crisis intervention, office duties, transportation, publicity, speakers bureau, child care, or special projects are encouraged to call Juliann Thompson (364-7822) in order to attend this orientation session.

Board members in attendance were: Sharon Pennington, David Wagner; Gloria Hubner, Ross James, Herb DeLaRosa, Suzanne Stevens, Simons, Dickson, and Mendoza.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was interested in the letter from the gay man who resented being pursued by women. It seems that a great number of his social friends were quite certain they could make him straight if he would just give them a chance.

I am a lesbian who has had the same experience. I keep running into men who tell me that if I tried sex with a male I would never consider any other way of life. I feel like telling those egomaniacs that I HAVE had intimate relations with men (in fact I was married to one), and I prefer members of my own sex.

What those idiots do not understand is that who I sleep with or how I sleep with that person is an infinitesimal and unimportant part of who I am and what my life is all about. Heterosexuals are not pestered in this manner. I wish people would leave us alone.

I have been in my present relationship for more than 10 years and am extremely comfortable with it. The lesbian couples we know are all married, mature and faithful, which is more than I can say for the heterosexuals I work with. Also, not one of our circle has come down with AIDS, which has many of our straight friends worried sick.

Once heard you say that your mission is to educate people. With that in mind, I hope you will print my letter.—From Philadelphia

DEAR PHILADELPHIA: Thank you for your contribution toward my mission. I am sure many of my readers will be a little wiser because you wrote.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a senior executive in his company of 400 employees. This morning he left for a trip out of state with a group of about 70. The purpose of the trip is to reward this year's top achievers.

Business meetings are held during the day and there is entertainment at night. The entertainment consists of dancing and drinking. One of the employees asked if his wife could go along at his expense. He was told that a policy decision had been made against including spouses.

I believe such trips encourage hanky-panky, of which there is already enough in this company. I was very unhappy when my husband left. I don't like the idea of him spending a week with female employees who would love to make some points with the boss.

Am I some kind of a nut? What do you think, Ann?—Frustrated in Oregon

DEAR FRUS: It seems to me that this company's sales incentive plan is not doing much to support family togetherness, which is already in a whole lot of trouble.

If the husbands would band together and refuse to go on next year's outing without their wives, the policy would be changed. I recommend that you and the other left-at-home women band together and go to work on you rmen.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please settle an office argument. Who pays

Pep's homecoming scheduled

Pep's 29th Annual Ex-student Homecoming is set for Saturday at Pep Parish Hall.

Classes of '91, '41, '51, '61, '71, and '81 will meet at 4:30 p.m. in the Pep Parish Hall for their class reunions. "The Road Home is Never Long" is the homecoming's theme.

Registration is set for 5:30 p.m. with a banquet scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Immediately following will be an ex-student meeting with President Gary Franklin presiding.

Roger Jones, one of Pep's former teachers, will be the speaker. Recognitions and awards are to be made by Robert Smotherman.

Two scholarships of $300 each are to be awarded to a graduating girl and boy.

A country and western dance set for 9 p.m. will conclude the activities. The public is invited to attend.

RUG CHOICES OVERWHELMING
NEW YORK (AP) — The range of rug colors, textures and fibers can overwhelm a consumer, says Homeowner magazine.

The magazine says every situation involves a set of variables that include the function of the room, personal preference and lifestyle.

Although there are thousands of brands, there are only five common types of rug fibers. They are wool, nylon, polyester, acrylic and olefin. Wool enjoys the reputation of being luxurious, while nylon is considered the strongest of the synthetic fibers and represents some 80 percent of the fiber used in carpet face yarns.

Future of Texas to highlight series for the removal of organs from an organ donor's body?

It seems only fair that the recipient and/or the family should take care of the cost since the donor has already made the ultimate gift.

My co-worker says the donor's family pays the bill. True or false?—Midland, Texas

DEAR MIDLAND: False. Bill Brewster, executive director of The Living Bank in Houston, has asked me to make it clear that the recipient pays. Removing organs for transplantation is treated as a regular surgical procedure and is often covered by insurance.

Learning to rely on our "brains" instead of our natural resources is an integral part of a best-case scenario for the future of Texas, according to philosopher Dr. Pete Gunter of North Texas State University.

Gunter and geographer-anthropologist Dr. William M. Holmes, also of North Texas State University, will present a program entitled, "Texas Roots - and the Branches of the Future," 9 a.m. to noon, Saturday at Amarillo Central Library, 4th St. and Buchanan.

The program is the first in a three-part lecture/discussion series called, "Culture and Values in Texas: The 21st Century," to take place 9 a.m. - noon, Jan. 30, Feb. 6 and Feb. 13.

The other programs will feature Dr. Mary Gill, linguist, from West Texas State University, and Dr. Fred Kirstead, Futurist, from the University of Houston at Clear Lake, presenting "Speaking of the Future." Dr. Hunter Ingalls, local art historian, and Dr. Jim Ward Lee, professor of literature from North Texas State University, will present the third program titled, "Art and Literature - Enhancing the Future."

Gunter will pose three scenarios for the future of Texas - worst-case, best-case, and most probable case. "There are certain cultural influences growing out of Texas' distinctive past," said Gunter, "that will evolve as we approach the 21st Century. This series is a chance for people to decide in what directions we want the state to go, to identify what culture and values we live with now, and how they will change."

Holmes will set the stage for the theme of shifting literary, aesthetic and value-laden Texas scene of today by exploring the topics of changing economic conditions and a population still undergoing a shift from rural to urban. He will also address changing cultural and ethnic patterns, and changes in the places we live, occupations we follow and regional influences.

Stimulated by questions which will arise during the series of programs, a call for essays to be printed will be issued at the conclusion of the series on the topic, "A Texan Dreams: Culture and Values in the 21st Cen-

Parker, Whitaker nominated

Two local youth are among 18 high school students from the 19th Congressional District that have been nominated to U.S. Service academies by Congressman Larry Combest (R-Texas). James Parker of Dawn and Jeff Whitaker of Hereford were among several students nominated by Combest to the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo. Other students were nominated to the Military Academy at West Point, New York, and the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Maryland. "We have an excellent group of applicants and I am proud to nominate these fine young men and women," Combest said. "The students, who have all met strict eligibility requirements, will compete with other nominees from across the nation for an academy appointment. "With a tradition of excellence, our academies provide educational and leadership training for the future leaders of our armed forces," said Combest. The academies offer four-year scholarships and graduates are commissioned into either the Air Force, Army, Navy, or Marines. Abundant Life

NOT DISCOURAGED
By Bob Wear

It may not be possible for us to live without being discouraged sometimes about some things; however, it is possible for us to learn how to be disappointed without letting the disappointment become discouragement, and this is what we must learn to do. Discouragement has been called one of the most common afflictions of mankind. We are keeping in mind that discourage means to deprive of courage or confidence, to dishearten. It is a lessening of or loss of our mental or moral strength to persevere and withstand danger, fear, or difficulty. It is the impairment of the firmness of mind and will, and erosion of spirit, resolution and tenacity.

We must constantly seek ways to fortify ourselves against 'discouragement', and try to accomplish this without assuming an attitude of indifference and skepticism about the living experience. The consideration of some of the more common causes of discouragement will help us establish the fortification we need.

Much discouragement comes from faulty expectations. Therefore it is wise to let our expectations be sensible, realistic, and fully justified. Another cause of discouragement is inadequate preparation for the task we wish to perform, and with this, the over-estimation of our capabilities. Some of the other things which cause discouragement are: thinking too much about the things over which we have no control; failing to count and fully appreciate our blessings; listening to gloomy and skeptical talk; being immoderate in our behavior; and you may think of other sources of discouragement.

The Pollyanna attitude is not justified, the attitude of irrepresible optimism; but it is better, by far, than the attitude of 'overwhelming gloom'. We live somewhere between these two, and we can learn how to cope with the 'ups' and 'downs', the 'successes' and 'failures', the 'accomplishments' and 'disappointments'; without being overly discouraged.

Discouragement may come to our door, but we must not invite it in.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I am newly married and have lots of questions about cooking. This one has had me stumped for quite a while. I'm hoping that you can help.

Why do some eggs have blood spots? Does this mean the egg has been fertilized? What should I do with these eggs?

Any information you can share will be wonderful. — Kathy, Gunnison, Colo.

The American Egg Board tells us that these marks are occasionally found on egg yolks. They do not mean the egg is fertile. These marks are caused by the rupture of a blood vessel on the yolk surface during formation of the egg or by a similar accident in the wall of the oviduct. Less than one percent of all eggs produced have blood spots.

Both chemically and nutritionally, these eggs are fit to eat. The spot may be removed with a tip of a knife if desired. — Heloise

SWIMMING GOGGLES
Dear Heloise: I really enjoy your column and get so many helpful ideas from it. I thought other mothers would appreciate my little grandson's idea.

He called me in to help rinse the shampoo out of his hair. There he sat in the bathtub with his swim goggles on. What a clever way to keep the soap suds out of a child's eyes. I would never have thought of it.

Please share it with mothers so children won't fuss about getting their hair shampooed. — Marcia Mullinix, Fairfield, Ohio

TELEPHONE BOOKS
Dear Heloise: I try to recycle everything. Since I recently got a new phone book, the idea came to mind. I gave my old phone book to a friend who lives in a small town several miles out of the city. Now she can call places and people without having to call information. — Hazel Hemlock, Los Angeles, Calif.

INSTANT TEA
Dear Heloise: Here is a suggestion for instant-tea users. Don't throw away those pretty bright-colored tea jar tops when the jar is empty. They are great for coasters on the radio, picnic table or wherever you choose. Small ones fit nicely under some bathroom deodorants. — L.F., Newaygo, Mich.

CHILDREN'S PROJECT
Dear Heloise: Here is a great rainy-day project for children. Help them make bookmarks out of little poems or pictures. They can be covered in clear adhesive-backed plastic. — Ruth, Penrose, Colo.

ADDRESS CARDS
Dear Heloise: I keep all of my addresses on 3-by-5 cards. I put friends' ages, birthdays, children's names and anniversaries on the cards.

I go one step further by writing down the directions to their home. The next time I visit, some folks are frequently amazed that I have found their home again, perhaps even after several years. — Ruth Ann Mansell, Orange, Calif.

HAND WASHING
Dear Heloise: I do a lot of hand washing which means a lot of dripping clothes. After I wring them gently in a towel, I run them in the spin dry cycle of the washer for less than a minute.

It really removes a lot of water, and clothes dry faster without getting out of shape. — Robin Rade, Bloomfield, N.J.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 796000, San Antonio, Texas 78279. She can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in her column.

Hereford loses opportunity for second place in 1-4A

Herd frustrated by Eagles, 51-50, in OT

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Hereford Whiteface boys' basketball teams won two of three games over Canyon on Tuesday night, battled Canyon into overtime in two games, but the most important game of the night saw the Herd fall to Canyon 51-50 in overtime in the varsity contest.

Neither team was lacking in opportunities to win the varsity encounter in regulation time, and Hereford had its opportunities to claim a victory in the overtime period, but things did not go right for the Whitefaces in this second place showdown of District 1-4A.

A victory would have put Hereford into second place in the district standings at 6-4, with Canyon half a game back at 5-4. But instead, Canyon strengthened its second place spot with a 6-3 record while Hereford dropped to 5-5.

The game was played before the largest crowd of the season at the La Plata gym — the biggest crowds on both sides of the gym.

In the other games of the night, four Herd junior varsity players scored in double figures to lead their team to a 57-44 win over Canyon, and Chad Schroeder hit a shot as the buzzer sounded in overtime to give the HHS sophomore team a 50-48 victory.

The varsity battle saw the Whitefaces hold the lead over the Eagles for almost all of the regulation time, except for 2-0 early in the game. Canyon tied the game at 45-45 with 1:33 left in the fourth quarter, and neither team could score another point in regulation time.

Hereford held a 41-35 lead at the start of the fourth period, after Canyon had missed about six shots in the last 10 seconds of the third quarter. With Hereford holding a 42-38 lead, Rodney McCracken stole the ball twice from Canyon, but a missed shot and a turnover resulted after those steals.

The Whitefaces then led 43-40 when Kevin Hansen blocked a three-point goal attempt by Canyon with 3:12 left. One half a minute later, though, Canyon scored to move within one point, 43-42.

Two free throws by Hansen gave Hereford a 45-42 lead with 2:19 left, and then Canyon scored a field goal with 2:03 left. After Canyon tied the game at 45-45 with 1:33 left, each team committed a turnover in the next half minute.

A missed free throw by Hereford in the first shot of a one-and-one, plus Canyon's inability to get off a good shot in the last eight seconds, sent the game into overtime.

In the overtime, Canyon gained a 47-45 lead with 2:30 left. A field goal by Hansen tied the game at 47-47 with 2:10 left, and Canyon gained back the lead with a basket with 1:49 left, 49-47.

Hereford's Brad Smith blocked two shots by Canyon in the first two minutes of the overtime. Moments after the second block, teammate Bobby Robbins was fouled in the act of shooting.

Robbins made the first of two free throws, leaving Hereford behind by one point. Canyon rebounded the missed free throw, but Hereford's Hansen and Marcus Brown worked together to steal the ball away from Canyon.

A shot was missed and Canyon knocked the ball out of bounds, with 55 seconds left. McCracken put the Herd into the lead, 50-49, with a basket with 42 seconds left.

Canyon then missed a shot with 12 seconds left and Hereford was fouled on the rebound. Tragedy struck the Whitefaces when the first foul shot in a one-and-one was missed, and Canyon drove downcourt for a basket with two seconds left.

Hereford called a timeout to plan a last-second shot. The shot attempt fell short, and the victory went to Canyon, 51-50.

"It's tough for either team to lose this one. This is a real good rivalry. It's fun to play in these games, but it's not fun to lose them," Hereford Coach Mike Fields said.

"We're not out of the playoff race, but we're in a tougher position.

"Canyon put a lot of pressure on us defensively. We were four-for-18 in the second half and two-for-eight in the overtime." Fields continues.

"We played good defense, too — when you shoot that poorly and you're still in the game. I was real proud of our kids. If Canyon's last-second shot doesn't go in, everyone's going to be real excited. But it went in."

Brad Smith, who led Hereford with 15 points, scored 13 points in the first half as Hereford built up a 31-21 lead. Hereford still led by as many as eight points, with 2:45 left in the third period, when Pat Mercer scored a basket off an assist from Kevin Hansen, who had stolen the ball from Canyon.

Hansen and Rodney McCracken finished the game with eight points each, and Bobby Robbins had seven points.

The Whitefaces made 19 of 56 field goal attempts, just under 33 percent, and had some problems at the free throw line, hitting just 11 of 20.

Leaders in other statistical categories for the Whitefaces were Smith with eight rebounds, and Hansen with seven steals and five assists.

A close ball game in the junior varsity contest quickly turned into a big Hereford lead when the Canyon coach was called for two technical fouls in the fourth quarter.

Hereford held a 39-34 lead with 5:35 left when the first technical foul was called. Less than a minute later, the second one was called. Hereford's lead had grown to 43-36. A basket by Darren Nikkel, and Keith Brown and Kyle Andrews each made a pair of free throws, helping Hereford build its lead to 49-38 en route to the 57-44 victory over Canyon.

Brown scored 10 points in the second quarter to help Hereford gain a 28-21 halftime lead. Brown was high scorer in the game for Hereford with 15 points.

Broncos' Kay should see passes coming his way

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — When the Washington Redskins send all of their linemen and a few linebackers in a mad rush for John Elway's head, and when the defensive backs are stretched deep to cover The Three Amigos, it leaves an area uncovered in the middle of the field.

It's an area the Denver Broncos' tight ends should visit frequently during Sunday's Super Bowl, and Clarence Kay will be only too glad to oblige.

Kay won't forget his catch that was ruled a non-catch in last year's game. Technical problems prevented the replay official from getting a clear view of the play until too late, when it showed it to be a good catch.

Moments later, the Broncos, instead of getting a big gain on Kay's reception, suffered a safety, and Denver had lost the momentum for good in its 39-20 loss to the New York Giants.

"I guess I'm destined to be the answer to a trivia question," Kay said Tuesday. "There was never any question in my mind that I had caught the ball."

"It was a big play, but it didn't go our way and that's the way it goes sometimes. I'd like to do something to make up for it on Sunday."

Kay figures to play a prominent role in Sunday's game against the Redskins. Tight ends have given the Redskins trouble this year. And Kay has turned himself into a big-play receiver for the Broncos this season — with 31 catches for 440 yards — after three previous years of being a one-dimensional player.

"He's the best-blocking tight end in football," Coach Dan Reeves used to say, conveniently ignoring Kay's receiving faults.

No more.

After Kay made two fingertip touchdown receptions in Denver's 34-10 playoff victory over Houston, Reeves said, "What he's accomplished has been incredible. He's not only a force as far as the running game is concerned, he's a force as far as receiving, too."

Yet Clarence Kay came perilously close to throwing it all away.

Alcohol and cocaine addiction caused his suspension late in the 1986 season. He spent more than three weeks in a Los Angeles-area rehabilitation clinic, returning for the playoffs last year.

He has, he says, been clean ever since.

He came out of the clinic with a renewed sense of self-worth. He worked on his skills, and suddenly Elway began throwing to him.

"John didn't have confidence in me," Kay said. "I couldn't blame him. Now I feel I have his confidence, and I don't want to betray it."

Nor does he want to betray the faith shown in him by his young fans.

"I guess I get a little tired talking about my problem," Kay said. "If it gives people moral support, that's fine. But it's probably time for me to move on to something else, to move on to the next phase of my life. I want to speak to young kids who are at that susceptible age. I think that's an area where I can be beneficial."

GAME CALLED: GUNS

NEW YORK (AP) — Game called because of an attempted revolt. That was new to the sports pages this past August. A group of 21 NBA players, coaches, referees and trainers journeyed across the Pacific to Manila for a pair of exhibition games.

They landed just in time to have box seats at a protest mounted by dissidents at the government of President Corazon Aquino.

"The morning after we arrived, Lenny Wilkens and I and four players walked across the street from our hotel," said Sonic Coach Bernie Bickerstaff.

"We saw soldiers with guns coming at us. We did a 180 and returned to the hotel."

The game was never played.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well — white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewives, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

ATVs Are Risky Toys
Three-wheeled all-terrain vehicles, or ATVs, look like large motorized tricycles, but the danger they pose to riders is no kids' play. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) has banned the sale of the three-wheelers after a two-year study in response to the large number of riders and passengers who have been injured or killed.

In 1982, when three- and four-wheelers were becoming popular, 8,585 ATV-related injuries were reported to the CPSC. In 1986, 86,400 such injuries required hospital treatment. As of Sept. 21, 1987, a total of 883 deaths were attributed to ATV accidents, and nearly 80 percent of them occurred in three-wheeled ATVs. Twenty-eight of the deaths occurred in Texas.

Program on "A Hug For All Seasons" presented by Jesko

Wyche Extension Homemakers Club met in the home of Virgie Duncan recently. The meeting was called to order by Audrey Rusher, president. Members repeated the pledges to the United States and Texas Flags and repeated the TEHA prayer. The opening exercise was an inspirational reading, presented by Duncan, entitled "Sharing the Gifts and Mutual Needs." Roll call was answered with "my most important New Year's resolution." Rusher was elected the club nominee for Extension Homemaker Club Woman of the Year. Club members completed the year-books for the year. Dancan introduced Beverly Jesko, who presented the program on the Hospice program of Amarillo across from St. Anthony's Hospital. She noted that the course consisted of 10 weeks of training. Jesko read the dying person's "Bill of Rights" and gave each person a brochure entitled "A Hug for All Reasons," which noted that "good hugs can help you bear anything." According to Jesko, "Hugs are not only nice, they are needed. They can help relieve pain, depression, make the healthy healthier, the happy happier, and the most secure of us even more so. Hugging helps one ease tension, provides stretching exercises if you are short, stooping exercise if you are tall, does not upset the environment, saves heat, is portable, requires no special equipment, makes happy days happier and impossible days possible." The minutes were read and approved and the financial report was given. Refreshments of sandwiches, nuts, cake, party mix, coffee, and spiced tea were served to Louise Axe, Duncan, Jesko, Correen Odum, Pet Ott, Louise Packard, Rusher, and a guest, Corinne Smith. The meeting adjourned. The next meeting will be held at Argen Draper's home on Feb. 4 at 2:30 p.m.

directs the Injury Control Program at the Texas Department of Health. Lloyd said more than half of the ATV crashes happened at speeds of less than 16 m.p.h. and were caused by: hitting an object or uneven terrain, attempting to turn or stop the vehicle, or having the ATV tip or overturn.

"The CPSC statistics show that nearly three of every four persons killed in an ATV mishap suffered a devastating head injury. That's not surprising, since about 80 percent of ATV riders do not wear helmets," she said. Nearly two million ATVs have been sold and none are currently subject to a recall. However, a new state law requires anyone riding an ATV on public land to be safety certified and to wear a helmet and eye protection. Riders younger than 14 years old must be supervised by an adult who has safety certification. "Using helmets can make a big difference. The CPSC has concluded that unhelmeted riders are three times more likely than helmeted riders to suffer fatal or serious head injuries in an ATV mishap. But helmet laws must be enforced to be of value," Lloyd said. Four-wheeled ATVs remain on the market, but are required to carry warning labels. The labels caution owners to wear helmet and eye protection, to prevent use by children under age 14, to carry only one person (the driver), to exercise care in fueling the vehicle, and to avoid drinking while driving. "A successful man is one who earns more than his wife can spend. A successful woman is one who finds such a man." —Evelyn Jeane McCarty, The Prairie, Canyon, Texas, May 9, 1944.

Social Security

The annual earnings base—the maximum amount of earnings that counts for Social Security—will increase at $45,000 for 1988, up from $43,800 for 1987. In addition, the 1988 tax rate for employees and their employers will increase to 7.51 percent, up from the 1987 rate of 7.15 percent, Jim Talbot, Social Security manager in Amarillo, Tx. said recently.
 The increase in the age base is based on the change in average earnings levels from 1986 to 1987. The tax rate increase was already a part of the Social Security law. The effective tax rate for self-employed people will rise from 12.3 percent to 13.02 percent for 1988. The increase in the tax rate will amount to $7.20 a month for a person earning $2,000 a month.
 Other Social Security figures are scheduled to increase in 1988 as well, Jim said. The annual exempt amount used in the annual earnings test will increase. The annual earnings test in the measure used to determine whether a person who works will receive benefits during the year.
 The 1988 annual exempt amount for people 65 through 69 will be $8,400, up from the 1987 amount of $8,160. The 1988 exempt amount for people under 65 all of 1988 will be $6,120 up from the 1987 amount of $6,000.
 A person whose earnings do not exceed the annual exempt amount will receive all benefits for the year. A person's benefit is reduced by $1 for each $2 of earnings above the exempt amount. The annual earnings test does not apply once a person reaches 70.

The amount of earnings needed to earn a quarter of coverage—the measure of Social Security work credit—will be $470 in 1988, up from $460 for 1987. In 1988, a worker will earn four quarters of coverage if his or her annual earnings are $1,880 or more.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR WASTE DISPOSAL PERMIT

JIM NICHOLSON, Route 4, Box 40, Hereford, Texas 79045 has applied to the Texas Water Commission for a permit (Proposed Permit No. 02911) to authorize disposal of waste/wastewater from a 6000 head feedlot by evaporation and irrigation. The wastewater draining from the 27.1 acre feedlot site is to be collected in two retention ponds with a total volume of 40.8 acre-feet. The wastewater from the retention ponds will be used to irrigate 123.1 acres of wheat and grass. The solid waste that accumulates as a result of the feedlot operation will be used as a soil amendment and fertilizer on croplands in the surrounding areas. No discharge of pollutants into the waters of the State is authorized by this permit.

The feedlot and wastewater operations are approximately 2 miles southeast of the intersection of State Highway 385 and Farm to Market Road 1055 in Deaf Smith and Castro Counties. This location is in the drainage area of the Prairie Dog Town Fork of Red River in Segment No. 0207 of the Red River Basin. The Executive Director of the Texas Water Commission has prepared a draft permit based on the application submitted by the applicant and other information presently available.

Legal Authority: Section 26.028 of the Texas Water Code, as amended, and 31 TAC Chapter 305 of the Rules of the Texas Water Commission.

No public hearing will be held on this application unless an affected person who has received notice of the application has requested a public hearing. Any such request for a public hearing shall be in writing and contain (1) the name, mailing address and phone number of the person making the request; and (2) a brief description of how the requester, or persons represented by the requester, would be adversely affected by the granting of the application. If the Commission determine that the request sets out an issue which is relevant to the permit decision, or that a public hearing, would serve the public interest, the Commission shall conduct a public hearing, after the issuance of proper and timely notice of the hearing. If no sufficient request for hearing is received within 30 days of the date of publication of the notice concerning the application, the permit will be submitted to the Commission for final decision on the application.

Requests for a public hearing and/or requests for further information concerning any aspect of the application should be submitted in writing to Michael L. Woodard, Assistant Chief Hearings Examiner, Texas Water Commission, P.O. Box 13067, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711, Telephone (512)463-7905.

Caught between falling export prices and rising import volume, Latin America in 1986 used 72 percent of its export earnings to pay for imports, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. In 1983-85, the region was able to maintain a merchandise account surplus of over $33 billion, thanks to its high real exchange rate and the fact that developed countries were experiencing economic expansion.

Names In The News

NEW YORK (AP) — A trimmed-down Elizabeth Taylor says loneliness and low self-esteem led to the heavy drinking and overeating that destroyed her figure.

"The large amounts of food I ate were a substitute for everything I felt was lacking in my life," the 55-year old actress said in an excerpt from her autobiography "Elizabeth Takes Off" published in this week's People magazine.

Taylor, who shed nearly a third of her weight since peaking at 180 pounds in 1982, says overeating became a problem when she found too much idle time on her hands in the 1970s, during her marriage to U.S. Sen. John Warner of Virginia.

"But what was really starving was my self esteem, and all the food in the world couldn't bolster it," wrote Taylor, who got treatment for alcohol and drug abuse at the Betty Ford Center in 1982.

Taylor's fitness regimen included plenty of exercise and a diet limited to about 1,000 calories a day. Among her dieting tips: keep a picture of yourself on the refrigerator door.

SUNDANCE, Utah (AP) — Robert Redford has accepted an invitation from the Soviet Filmmakers Union to hold a festival of his movies in Moscow this spring.

"It's really quite an unprecedented invitation, and the details are quite complex," said Gary Beer, executive vice president of Redford's Sundance Institute.

Redford will screen and discuss six to eight of his films, probably in May, Beer said Saturday. The films have not been chosen, Beer said.

The festival is being planned in cooperation with the U.S. Information Agency and the American and Soviet Embassies, Beer said.

Redford's latest movie, "The Milagro Beanfield War," is scheduled for national release in March.

UNION CITY, N.J. (AP) — Pop singer Madonna is enchanting some here where she is filming a PBS-TV movie with Matt Dillon.

"I saw Madonna's hair just for a second," said Mariana Guerre, who works in a diner in a building where a scene of the movie "Bloodhounds of Broadway" was filmed.

Madonna plays a 1920s showgirl in the movie, which is based on short stories by journalist Damon Runyon.

Producers trying to capture the feel of 1928 New York City turned to locations in Union City and Newark, said publicist Lore Lawrence.

LONDON (AP) — Ballet star Rudolf Nureyev, who will be 50 in March, scoffed at London critics who panned his performances with the Royal Ballet this week.

"I don't pay any attention to the critics — not at all," the Soviet-born dancer told reporters Friday at Heathrow Airport before catching a flight for New York. "It doesn't matter at all what they say."

Nureyev performed in "Giselle" on Wednesday and Thursday at the Royal Opera House, his first appearance there in five years.

His partner, French ballerina Sylvie Guillem, 20, making her Covent Garden debut in the title role, won high praise.

"Unfortunately, her performance only served to accentuate the limp, flabby, agonizingly labored dancing by Nureyev," said the Evening Standard's critic, Robin Stringer.

Asked if it might be time for him to give up dancing, Nureyev, director of the Paris Opera Ballet, said: "I have no thoughts of retirement."

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Sally Jessy Raphael has coaxed many a guest to unveil secrets on her syndicated talk show over the years. But on Monday, five of her guests will bare more than their souls.

The five nudists plan to appear unclothed before a studio audience of about 200 people in a show to be televised Feb. 5, said Burt Dubrow, the show's executive producer.

"We're doing a show on nudity with nudists. If we're going to do it, you might as well do it. Why have them talk about it? ... It certainly makes it a bit more interesting," Dubrow said recently.

The viewing public will see modest close-up shots of the nude guests, who include a married couple as well as a mother and daughter, but the studio audience will see it all, he said.

ASK DR. LAMB

Pills for Blood Pressure BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Without medication, my blood pressure runs 190 to 200 over 84 to 93. It is 140 to 160 over 78 to 86 on medication. I take Minipress, Inderal and Moduretic daily — five pills a day.

I think that is a lot of medicine. My doctor says I have a stiff aorta, which causes the rise in systolic pressure. I am 65 and in fairly good health otherwise. I would like to take only one or two pills a day that I could take in the morning. My cholesterol is fine at 185 and my triglycerides are 145 to 150. I would like your opinion.

DEAR READER: Normally, when the oxygenated blood is pumped out of your heart to go to all of your body except the lungs, it is ejected into a very large artery called the aorta. Branches from this main artery supply everything from the brain to the feet. In young people, this big artery is very elastic. When the blood is ejected into it, the aorta simply expands like a latex tube. That keeps the systolic blood pressure — your upper reading — from going too high each time the heart beats.

As some people get older, the aorta loses its elasticity. It can't expand very much. As a result, when blood is ejected into the aorta, and it is like a solid pipe, the systolic pressure goes up, although the lower pressure reading — the diastolic — may not rise very much.

You will understand this better after reading what controls your systolic and diastolic pressure in Special Report 72, Your Vital Blood Pressure. I'm sending you a free copy. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER, Dept 72, P.O. Box 18622, Irvine, CA 92713.

In most cases of high blood pressure, the elevated pressure is caused by constriction of the small arteries. In your case, it is the loss of elasticity of the aorta. But both forms are quite important. It used to be thought that only the diastolic or lower reading was important, but good studies show that elevation of the upper reading will also increase your risk of heart attacks and strokes. It is very important to control both.

The choice of medicines depends on a patient's response. Yours has been quite good. Your doctor may be able to adjust the time of your medications, but don't change anything on your own, as you need to keep your pressure down.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Several weeks ago my daughter's eyelid became infected. The doctor said it was a chalazion and prescribed eye ointment. The doctor also mentioned it may need to be surgically removed if it does not disappear on its own. Please tell me how it started and how long I must wait until deciding on surgery and the surgical process.

DEAR READER: There are specialized sebaceous glands in the eyelid, similar to the sebaceous glands for the rest of the skin. They are called the meibomian glands. They produce an oily sebum secretion that prevents the overflow of tears. A chalazion is a chronic inflammation of one of these glands, causing a buckshot-like lump. The sebum material literally clogs the duct that drains the meibomian gland. The lesion can become infected, like a pimple.

Small ones that cause no symptoms can be ignored. Otherwise they can be removed, usually with an incision at the inside of the eyelid and evacuation of the material. Small ones without complications may disappear spontaneously.

DEAR DR. LAMB: What can you tell me about polycystic kidney disease? My husband has this inherited disease, so we are told. My husband's doctor doesn't supply any information. What lies ahead for him?

DEAR READER: That depends on how severely his kidneys are damaged. This inherited kidney disease consists of the kidney tissues becoming large cysts. These may hemorrhage, causing blood in the urine. The kidneys may become enlarged and infected. The infection may cause the typical symptoms of a renal infection. Eventually, the kidney may become so badly damaged that it does not provide adequate function. I hasten to add again that that depends on the damage from infections and the progression of the disease.

Once that stage is reached, renal dialysis and kidney transplants can provide support.

This disease should not be confused with simple cysts on the kidney, which do not affect kidney function. On the average, half of the offspring will also develop the disease later in life.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 18622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Also power versus precision

It's force versus finesse in Super Bowl

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Power vs. precision. Force vs. finesse. The down-the-throat approach of the Washington Redskins vs. the confound-and-confuse style of the Denver Broncos.

Simplistic, perhaps, but accurate, even if irritating to the participants in Sunday's Super Bowl.

"We're trying to get away from the stigma of just being a finesse team," Broncos defensive end Rulon Jones said. "I don't believe we're one-dimensional."

But Jones, who at 6-foot-6 and 260 pounds is the biggest of Denver's linemen, knows the Broncos won't win with power.

"I'd rather play against a big guy," he said. "My abilities match up better. I think many of us are like that."

The Redskins have the edge in size virtually everywhere. Their defense relies on the brute strength of tackles Dave Butz and Darryl Grant, who make room for quicker — and nearly as big — ends Dexter Manley and Charles Mann, the sack artists.

Washington's blocking unit, the Hogs, is massive, led by 300-pound tackles Joe Jacoby and Mark May. Power fullback George Rogers and backup Timmy Smith are solid inside runners who advance behind the surging Hogs.

Even the Redskins' linebacking unit, despite being smaller than Denver's, is power-oriented, with little speed and even less deception.

The Broncos are undersized on both lines. They prefer to fool opponents with stunts and shifts on defense, traps and draw plays and reverses out of shotgun formation on offense.

"You could possibly say this is power against quickness," Grant said. "But they are also strong."

"Size is a funny thing. I remember watching teams on film with huge guys who didn't play that way, and other teams with small guys who played like 300- to 400-pounders."

"Another thing is the type of scheme you run. For what Denver does, they don't need 300-pound linemen. Their personnel is tailored to their scheme and they run all those trap plays and the shotgun. They need people who are quick and make that first hit and another hit and another."

While the Redskins like to pile one play on top of another, leaning on time-consuming scoring drives, Denver prefers a quick-strike attack. When you have a John Elway throwing to the Three Amigos and a bunch of quick running backs, it makes sense.

And when you don't have the bulk to push around opponents, you get tricky.

"It's real important to keep them guessing," Sammy Winder, Denver's top rusher, said.

The Redskins have several players who don't fit the muscleman mold — receivers Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders, running back Kelvin Bryant, Pro Bowl cornerback Darrell Green. And the Broncos have some outsized players, particularly linebackers Simon Fletcher and Karl Mecklenburg and tight ends Clarence Kay and Orson Mobley.

"You have to have elements of size, speed and smarts," Steve Sewell said. "Both teams do."

The quick running back could be a key Sunday because none of Washington's linebackers have enough speed to cover him.

"But Washington likes to line up and overpower you, use their strength to beat our finesse," Winder said.

"We're the type of team that has to mix it up really well. We have to run inside and out, use different formations, cause confusion. John's the best at that."

Elway is the best at a lot of things. What the Redskins fear most from Denver's quarterback is his creativity while scrambling.

What Elway worries about most is whether he'll be able to stay away from Washington's pass rush. Can his smallish line hold off the big bad Skins?

"We have to make Elway feel the heat," Manley said. "Get to him a few times, make him think about us."

He already is thinking about Manley and his buddies.

"We've got to stymie them on the line of scrimmage," the quarterback said.

What happens if the Broncos' style works, if finesse overcomes force? "If we do," Sewell said, "we'll be in Hog Heaven."

Monk hopes to play key role for Redskins

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Art Monk hopes to forget a frustrating season by returning a favor to his Washington Redskin teammates and playing a key role in the Super Bowl.

Monk hasn't caught a pass in competition since Dec. 6, when he tore a ligament in his right knee in a game against the St. Louis Cardinals. Now that the rehabilitation process is over, the talented wide receiver is ready to return to action Sunday when the Redskins meet the Denver Broncos.

Monk watched helplessly from the sidelines as Washington beat Chicago in the playoff opener. He figured he could help the Redskins beat Minnesota to earn a spot in the Super Bowl, but it was not to be.

"I thought I had a shot (the NFC championship game), but it didn't feel right so I decided to stay out," Monk said Tuesday.

The Redskins won without him, giving him another chance to show the form that has earned him a berth in three Pro Bowls.

"They deserve the credit for getting us as far as we've gotten," Monk said of his teammates. "Sure, I thank them for giving me another chance."

Monk plans to make the most of the opportunity. While he admits that he is not quite yet at 100 percent, he does not intend to hold anything back.

"I'm ready to go. I've got nothing to lose because it's the last game of the season," he said. "I've got a whole offseason to heal if something should happen."

Injuries have plagued Monk throughout his eight-year career. He hasn't played in nearly two months, and right now he's not too sure what it will be like when he breaks from the huddle for the first time on Sunday.

This year he caught 38 passes for 483 yards before twisting his knee. He hasn't played in nearly two months, and right now he's not too sure what it will be like when he breaks from the huddle for the first time on Sunday.

"It's a matter of getting my confidence back," he said. "I haven't had any contact in a long time, and if I get hit I don't know how it's going to hold up. My confidence level is what I have to worry about now."

And the Broncos have to be concerned about the threat that Monk poses. His addition to a formidable receiving corps that already includes Gary Clark, Ricky Sanders and Kelvin Bryant means Denver will be hard-pressed to decide who to double-cover.
