DOE, PCBAN head 1987's stories

1987 closed with tragedy for some, happiness for others—and all from the same place.

1987 will be remembered—perhaps indelibly etched—as the year Congress, in an eleventh-hour move, both by design and Nevada as the site of the nuclear waste repository.

That, in fact, was the top story of the year. For it was in the months preceding 1987 that DOE, changes in schools, including curriculum and leadership, the passing of civic leaders and the needless loss of life, problems and changes at Deaf Smith General Hospital, and local battles involving local financial institutions.

Leading the list was the nuclear waste story as it had for the five years since Deaf Smith County was officially designated as a possible site for a nuclear waste repository.

See Texas Top Stories, Page 3A

Action surrounding the Department of Energy, by the agency and its related contractors, and by opposition groups reached a fever pitch during the year. The work force involved with the project went over 900 occupying buildings, living here working here.

All of that changed a week before Christmas, when Congress passed and President Reagan signed the Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987.

That bill, which passed at 3 a.m. Dec. 18, contained an amendment that singled out Nevada for further characterization and ordered work in Deaf Smith County shut down. The full effect of that measure is still the matter of speculation by most and worry for some.

Here is a review of many of this year's top stories as reported in the Brand:

JANUARY

- 1—Cattle feeding remained one of the bright spots in the Texas economy in 1986. It was reported at the annual year-end news conference of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association in Amarillo, Texas feedyards set a new record in 1986, marketing 5.2 million head of cattle. No other state has ever reached the 5-million mark, and Texas did it for three years in a row. The Brand's top news stories for 1987 were listed as Deaf Smith County being named as one of three finalists for a nuclear waste repository site, a major drug bust, the death of a 9-year-old due to a cocaine dosage, and a tragic house fire that left three children dead.
- 2—Building permits for 1986 totalled just over $2 million, a big drop from the 1985 total of more than $10 million. The final total for the Christmas Stocking Fund was reported at $10,646 on Jan. 4. The fund provided aid for more than 100 families in the community.
- 3—Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative announced the prepayment of $6.6 million on total notes, saving approximately $3 million plus interest.
- 4—Helen Langley was named "Woman of the Year" by the Women's Division of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.
- 5—Mrs. Langley was cited for leading a successful United Way drive, in addition to volunteer work for various community and church projects. H.C. (Hank) Williams, 75, former Deaf Smith County judge, died Jan. 6 following a lengthy illness.
- 6—Sunny, cool weather forecast after two inches of snow blanketed the Hereford area overnight.
- 7—Howard Birdwell was elected as United Way president. A local doctor confirmed that two local men are being monitored for AID's related complex.
- 8—Hereford's two junior high schools will become one and ninth graders will be on the high school campus by the fall of 1988, the Hereford school board decided. The board heard public comments the night before the regular meeting. The board agreed to put 7th and 8th graders at La Plata campus and

- 9—The City of Hereford approved the abandonment of the 400 block of Juniper Street, paving the way for a $250,000 addition by the Church of the Nazarene.
- 10—The Department of Energy announced it will locate the Salt Repository Project offices in Hereford, housing about 50 DOE and 250 contractor support staff. The detailed study of the Deaf Smith site is estimated to cost about $1 billion.
- 11—At least 80 percent of the residents surveyed in Amarillo and nearby Panhandle counties remain opposed to a nuclear waste dump, the TDA reported.
- 12—Gene Brock, cited as "teacher, preacher, friend of high school youth leaders and of the mentally handicapped"—was named "Citizen of the Year" at the annual chamber banquet. Dale Van Horn of Raleigh, N.C., was the featured entertainer.
- 13—A cross-section of Hereford residents made plans for a trip to Columbus, Ohio, to outline community information to DOE and Battelle employees who may move to this area.
- 14—Hereford recorded 3 to 4 inches of snow this morning with more expected overnight.
- 15—Protestors bombarded DOE officials with questions at a briefing in the Community Center, where both ball rooms were opened to take care of the standing-room-only crowd which was estimated at 600 to 700 persons. The WDIC held a briefing with DOE officials and learned that the Nuclear Waste Policy Act does not provide grants for impact damages during site characterization.
- 16—The Nuclear Waste Task Force hosted a national meeting of anti-dump representatives here at the Community Center, with several visitors relating bad experiences with DOE projects. Delbert Devin, NWF president, urged members "not to be a part of polarizing your community."
- 17—At a meeting sponsored by the Concerned Citizens of Deaf Smith County, about 100 teachers, parents and school officials heard a representative of the Texas Education Agency present a program on bilingual education.
- 18—The DOE requested a report from Deaf Smith County outlining areas of potential impact as a result of the characterization studies scheduled in the county.
- 19—Leasha Deyke, an 8th grader at La Plata, won the county spelling bee, and Taylor Sublett, a 4th grader, was runnerup. Greg Coplen, a 6th grader at West Central, won the junior bee. Clara Gillentine, 74, wife of former Brand publisher Jimmie Gillentine, died.
- 20—Opponents of site characterization and nuclear waste repository location in Deaf Smith County voted to become a Hereford chapter of POWER (People Opposing Wasted Energy Repositories) and to affiliate with the Nuclear Waste Task Force. Dempsey Alexander will serve as president.
- 21—The City of Hereford approved a $4.2 million budget with no tax hike, but providing for a 3 percent hike in salaries. Mark Artho and Michelle Mason were named "Mr. and Miss HHS" at the high school's annual Koobrey assembly.
- 22—A surprise blizzard left hundreds stranded in the Texas Panhandle and dropped three inches of snow on Hereford. A Candidates' Forum for the April city, school and hospital board elections drew about 100 people to the Community Center.
- 23—Delight Thames was crowned as Miss Hereford of 1987, winning the title over 17 other contestants. Roni Kay Love and Deanna Hobbs were first and second runners-up.

Hereford Bull

There is nothing the matter with me
I'm as healthy as I can be
I have arthritis in both my knees
And when I talk, I talk with a wheeze
My pulse is weak and my blood is thin
But I'm actually well for the shape I'm in Arch supports I have for both my feet
Or I wouldn't be able to be on the street
But every morning I find I'm all right
My memory is failing, my head is in a spin
But I'm awfully well for the shape I'm in

Escaped from TDC

Hunt on for killer

A former Hereford man who pleaded guilty to killing a Hereford woman eight years ago is being sought after he escaped Thursday night from the Texas Department of Corrections' Jester III Unit near Richmond.

Minard Moon, 47, escaped after he used a tire to mask his disappearance at about 10 p.m. Thursday.

Few details of the escape were available, but TDC spokesman David Nunez said Moon apparently started a fire in a boiler room at the prison to cover his getaway, then went over a fence during a power outage.

Moon was sentenced to life in prison on April 24, 1980 for the brutal murder of Laine Mae Walker, 50, of Hereford, in June, 1980.

Moon, then 43, was reportedly living with Walker, a widow. She was found living in a pool of blood in her bed by her grandchildren.

When police arrived at the scene, they discovered that she had been beaten in the head by a hammer and that an electrical cord had been wrapped around her neck. The cause of death was listed as strangulation.

Moon fled the scene in Walker's station wagon. He was apprehended two months later in Eugene, Ore., and was extradited to Hereford, where he pled guilty to murder charges and was sentenced to life in prison by District Judge Wes Gulley.

Moon, a Lampasas native, had been imprisoned in 1974 on a burglary conviction in Lampasas. He was paroled in 1977, but returned to TDC later that year for violation of his parole. He had not been in Hereford long before Walker was murdered.

Authorities said they have no idea where Moon may be headed, and are conducting a statewide search.

Top Stories of 1987

- 1. Congress passing, and President Reagan signing, a bill with an amendment that would do away with all activity leading to a possible nuclear waste repository in Deaf Smith County.
- 2. The ongoing nuclear waste story—local opposition groups, DOE and contractors leasing buildings and moving in with a work force of over 300 persons.
- 3. A battle between Hereford citizens and the Amarillo Globe News after an eight-day, 38-article series entitled "Hereford and the Hispanics." The battle climaxed in an area-wide rally in Amarillo, and featured cancelled subscriptions, "Amarillo Globe-News-buster" buttons, and bumper stickers.
- 4. Deaf Smith General Hospital. It lost a long-time administrator, hired a new one at the close of the year, and finally sold $1.5 million in bonds after a year-long effort.
- 5. Continuing drug problems. The mother of late basketball star Lonnie Lee visited with groups and school children, but the problem remained, with intermittent drug arrests for everything from marijuana to heroin.
- 6. Schools. Dr. Harrell Holder's contract was bought out, and Charles Greenawalt was hired as new superintendent. The schools were changing the junior highs will be consolidated, new buildings were constructed, and the curriculum was fine-tuned.
- 7. Generosity in a troubled economy. The United Way campaign exceeded its goal by $10,000, and the Christmas Stocking Fund set a new record by $3,000.
- 8. Financial institutions. The First National Bank filed suit against former president James Sears and others, and won a $3 million summary judgment with the possibility of more coming. 24 former officers and directors of Ft. Plains Savings and Loan were sued for $119 million.

APRIL

- 1—The WDIC approved the addition of a representative from the High Plains Underground Water District to the interlocal governing body. The WDIC was formed with the city, county, hospital district, Hereford and Walcott school districts as members.
  - 2—Results of the April 4 elections saw more than 2,000 voters go to the polls, where five of six incumbents were returned to office on the three local governmental bodies. Mayor Wes Fisher won reelection and Sylvana Juarez became the first woman elected to the city commission.

REVIEW

sion. Tom LeGate was reelected and Paul Hamilton and Jerry Walsh won at-large seats on the expanded commission. On the hospital board, Dr. Jerry Payne won reelection and Dr. Jim Herberson and Ralph Detten took the other two seats. Jo Garcia and John Fuston were reelected to the school board and Dennis Newton won an at-large post. A special county election to authorize a one-half cent sales tax won overwhelming approval.

8—Boyd Foster, apparent loser by 14 votes in the Place 3 city commission election, filed for a recount.

10—A recount of votes in the Place 3 city commission race confirmed the reelection of Tom LeGate by a margin of 15 votes. The panel found Foster had one less vote in the absentee box.

12—A 20th anniversary open house was held at the Deaf Smith County Museum.

15—Nevada may become the focus in the search for the nation's first nuclear waste dump due to escalating costs of testing, when Nevada looks like the most acceptable site anyway, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. Hereford School Board approved an $85,000 ag building project and hired Frank Belcher of Groom as the new girls' basketball coach.

19—The Hereford School Board approved a buyout of Supt. Harrell Holder's contract and accepted his resignation effective May 29, 1987. The board agreed to pay Holder $50,000 for the remaining year of his contract.

21—Hereford City Commission adopted a resolution to do its part in attracting the Department of Energy's Superconducting Super Collider project to the Panhandle. The city would consider the contribution of effluent water should the project come to the area. A Hereford

Civic Center, was called a "huge success" by its backers.

25—A battle erupted over land on which the Walcott school sits at a Walcott school board meeting, with board members, including two family members who own the land, split over the issue.

DECEMBER

2—100 persons attended a public meeting about AIDS here.

2—Salt Repository Project Assistant Manager Bob Wunderlich said that Deaf Smith County had a 50 percent chance of being named the site to be characterized for a possible nuclear waste repository if Nevada was not singled out for characterization.

3—Hospital Management Professionals presented a proposal for managing Deaf Smith General Hospital.

3—Steve Nieman was awarded the coveted Bull Chip Award at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce "Eat Your Heart Out, Neiman-Marcus" Fun Breakfast.

6—The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. filed a $119 million suit against 24 former directors and officers of Hi-Plains Savings and Loan in Hereford.

6—Filings began for county offices in the March 8 "Super Tuesday" primary.

11—Manuel Medeles, 78, of Hereford, was sentenced to two years' probation and fined $500 after being found guilty of assaulting Hereford Police Det. Sammy Sanchez in a May 4 incident at Medeles' home.

11—Hunters began entering the city in preparation for the 1987 pheasant season.

15—A storm dumped 17 inches of snow in Hereford in the first big winter storm of the season.

16—The administrator's job at Deaf Smith General Hospital was offered to Gary Moore after the board voted not to accept a management proposal from Hospital Management Professionals.

18—An amendment was passed by a House-Senate conference committee singling out Nevada for site characterization work and calling for work in Deaf Smith County and Hanford, Wash., to cease within 90 days of enactment.

20—The local Christmas Stocking Fund campaign set a new record, going over the $10,000 mark.

22—The Walcott school board offered $4,216 for 15 acres of land on which the school rests to Mrs. N.A. Brown and Sons.

23—The House and Senate, working until 3 a.m., finally passed a budget reconciliation bill that included an amendment that would stop all nuclear repository-connected work in Deaf Smith County by late March.

Jessica, Saragosa top '87 Texas stories

DALLAS (AP) — The plight of toddler Jessica McClure, trapped in a well for 2½ days as a nation waited for her rescue, was voted the top state story of 1987 by Texas Associated Press newspaper editors and broadcasters.

The drama of efforts in Midland to bore through solid rock to free the 18-month-old girl transfixed residents across the state and mushroomed to grab the attention of the nation, as Jessica's rescue from the narrow well was nationally televised.

After the Oct. 16 rescue, the story of Jessica's progress — her remarkable hospital recovery and the successful efforts to avoid amputating her badly injured foot — continued to draw interest. The child and her young parents have received thousands of dollars in donations and her $50,000 hospital bill is paid.

"We tend to gravitate and react to the things that are closest to the heart," said sociologist Sheldon Eklund-Olson at the University of Texas in Austin, explaining the appeal of Jessica.

Voted by AP members as the second most important story was a more tragic event that also seemed to affect Texans on a personal level — the tornado in Saragosa that killed 30 and injured 160.

The May 22 twister destroyed much of the poor, mostly Hispanic, West Texas town of about 250. Among its victims were several children attending a pre-school graduation ceremony at the community hall.

Chosen third by AP members was Texas voters' approval in November of a statewide referendum allowing pari-mutuel betting for the first time in 50 years.

The referendum, approved 1,266,410 to 964,665, allows horse race wagering on a county-by-county, local option basis, and dog race betting in three counties. Experts predicted gambling might begin at established tracks by next fall.

In fourth place was the visit of Pope John Paul II to San Antonio where he drew the largest crowds on his nine-city, 10-day tour. John Paul visited a historic cathedral, rode past the Alamo in his popemobile, blessed the infant son of Mayor Henry Cisneros and met with a group of Texas Polish-Americans.

AP members voted the state's largest tax hike in history as the fifth most important story.

The Legislature was unable to balance the state budget during its 140-day regular session and adjourned without a budget for the first time since 1961.

Another special session resulted in a $5.7 billion package that included raising the state sales tax to 6 percent and holding the motor fuel tax at 15 cents per gallon, instead of letting it roll back to 10 cents on Sept. 1.

Lawmakers said that despite spending cuts, the tax hike was needed to offset a projected state government budget deficit of nearly $6 billion.

In sixth place was the football players payoff scandal at Southern Methodist University, which resulted in the NCAA's first use of its "death penalty" — the cancellation of the 1987 football season.

SMU later cancelled the 1988 season as well and abolished the university's board of governors. Tainted by the payoffs plan, which boosters, was Gov. Bill Clements. He acknowledged that as SMU board chairman he had allowed illicit payments to players to continue even after the school's 1983 probation.

Rounding out the top 10 stories were the crisis in the banking and thrift industries, seventh; the deaths included a $61,000 slush fund from of 10 teen-agers in a bus wreck in the flooded Guadalupe River, eighth; the suffocation deaths of 18 illegal aliens trying to sneak across the U.S. border in a sweltering boxcar, ninth; and the repeated closings of crowded Texas prisons, 10th.

The year saw a record 50 banks close and the government spent a total of $2.3 billion on separate bailouts for Houston's First City Bancorporation and Dallas' Vernon Savings and Loan Association — the latter being the largest thrift bailout in U.S. history. Major federal investigations were made into the Texas collapse of some Texas thrifts and several people have been indicted for fraud.

Near the Hill Country town of Comfort, Dallas-area teen-agers attending a church camp met with tragedy when a camp bus and van were swamped in the swirling waters of a flood-swollen river. Ten were killed.

Another tragedy occurred near the West Texas town of Sierra Blanca when 18 Mexican aliens suffocated in a locked boxcar. One man survived. Less than two weeks later, another group of aliens was freed just in time from another boxcar near Hebbronville.

Texas prisons closed 22 times during 1987 because population topped the 95 percent legal limit of capacity. The longest shutdown lasted more than a week. The governor declared a prison emergency several times to make hundreds of inmates eligible for earlier paroles or release.

Other stories drawing substantial votes were the new immigration law, Texaco's bankruptcy and the multibillion-dollar judgment against it in its fight with Pennzoil, a judge's ruling that Texas' school funding formula is unconstitutional and short-changes poor schools, and the flurry of East Texas tornadoes in November that killed 10.

IRAN

But other sources later said it was not clear whether the attack in the northern gulf was carried out by Iranian vessels or Iraqi warplanes.

If it was the Iranians, the strike would be the first this year by them in the so-called "tanker war," an offshoot of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. There were 34 confirmed attacks on ships in the gulf last month, the worst month since the tanker war flared in early 1984.

The two sides hit commercial shipping in the gulf in an effort to reduce their enemy's oil export earnings.

Iraq's official news agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Iraqi warplanes early today bombed the Talah Zink bridge, which was being used for military purposes, and "devastated their target." The agency quoted a military communique as saying all the jets returned from the 12:45 p.m. raid on the bridge northeast of Dezful.

The raid came amid expectations Iran will soon launch a new ground offensive against Iraq. The Iranians have massed more than 250,000 men in the southern sector of the front east of the Iraqi city of Basra.

Dezful, a key transportation hub, lies north of area where the Iranian buildup was taking place.

The Alga sustained minor damage and no casualties were reported, the salvage sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity. The attack took place near Farsi Island, used by Iran to stage hit-and-run attacks on merchant shipping in the gulf.

On Friday, Iraq reported its warplanes launched their last tanker raid of 1987 and the first one of 1988. The official Iraqi News Agency said "accurate and effective hits" against "two big naval targets," the usual term for oil tankers. The attacks were off the Iranian coast, one Thursday night and another Friday morning.

The Iraqi attacks could not be independently confirmed but delays of several days are not uncommon in such cases.

Iran usually matches each Iraqi attack with one of its own, firing neutral ships trading with Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, which it accuses of aiding Iraq's war effort.

Meanwhile, Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence reported that 1987 was the most dangerous year for shipping in the Persian Gulf since Iran and Iraq began fighting in September 1980.

Lloyd's said 448 ships have been attacked in the war and more than 250 seamen killed and another 200 injured. Tens of millions of dollars in shipping have been lost.

It said there were 178 attacks on merchant vessels in 1987, up from the second-worst total of 107 in 1986.

About 90 people were killed in the gulf during 1987, about the same as in the previous year, including 37 U.S. sailors who died when an Iraqi warplane fired two missiles at the frigate USS Stark last May 17. Washington accepted Iraq's apology that it mistook the Stark for an Iranian vessel.

Another 21 seamen were killed in December when Iraqi planes attacked the Norwegian-operated Susangird.

In Tehran, President Ali Khamenei warned on Friday that Iran would close the gulf, a major world oil route, if the United Nations tried to institute a naval blockade on his country to end the war.

In an effort to halt the conflict, the United States has lobbied for an arms embargo to enforce a July 20 cease-fire resolution passed by the United Nations Security Council.

Iraq has accepted the U.N. resolution in principle. Iran says it wants reparations from Iraq along with an apology for starting the war before it accepts the measure.

The Soviet Union favors an international naval force in the gulf, and opposes the presence of American ships there.

YOUR EYES
THE GIFT OF VISION
Good vision is a gift your whole family deserves at this holiday season. And the best way to preserve that gift is with regular eye examinations.
Children's eyes change from the moment they are born. These changes that effect the way they see often accelerate during the school years. Children rarely recognize these changes. They think that's the way they are supposed to see.
Adult eyes undergo change, too. Work loads, different kinds of visual tasks and stress affect the eyes in the work environment. General health also plays an important role in the way you see and in the health of the eye. In the retirement years, seniors experience eye health and visual changes just as they experience body changes. Changes in your eyes and the way you see cannot necessarily be prevented. They can, however, be corrected with prescription lenses and new behavioral seeing habits. In children, vision training often corrects assorted visual problems in order to allow them to function more efficiently at school.
The gift of good vision is a precious one. Season's Greetings to all from

Resolutions

We've got a new year ahead of us, and many folks made resolutions as the calendar rolled over. Whether you made some resolutions or not, we ran across an article that bears repeating and offers good advice for 1987. We don't know who authored the five points, but here they are for your consideration:

1. Remember that the past will never again appear in any form. It cannot materialize in a repeat performance like the second night of a play. It exists only in the private world of the mind. Therefore, we are to get yesterdays burdens off our back. Yesterday we had less judgment, less insight, and less wisdom. We are to forgive ourselves for the lesser persons we were, and to become what we know we can become.
2. If a problem has us down, gulping up our time that could be spent on something constructive, it is because we consent to it!
3. There are two fears in this world, fear of ourselves, and fear of the person or situation we are confronting. So when we lose the fear of ourselves, we will banish the fear of those we confront. We are to love ourselves for what we are. We must take the stand that life is for us, not against us. And by all means, we must remember that no one can make us feel self-conscious or inferior without our consent.
4. Many fine things can be done in a day if we don't make that day tomorrow. We are to grab hold of today's tasks, being solutions-minded instead of problem-minded. The answers exist, waiting our acceptance.
5. We are our future. There is no one else but ourselves responsible for it. Each day you should realize that it is the first day of the rest of your life, the beginning of a new lifetime. It is up to us to make it a lifetime of joy and constructive achievement.

No respect

Intelligent life exists west of Fort Worth. Perhaps an inane statement, at least in this part of Texas, but it is a fact that draws little regard in the other sections of our great state. West Texas historically and currently receives little respect from the so-called "powers that be". It is a simple question of numbers. They got 'em, we don't. At least, that is what we continue to hear and to believe.

Congressman Pete Laney, who represents a district north of Lubbock, continues to be a savvy individual who fights the battle, not just for his district but for West Texas as a whole. Our own representative, Jim Rudd, perhaps the one West Texan with the largest power base in Austin, has stood tall and we believe will continue to fight our battles. And Sen. John Montford has built a reputation of battling for his home folks and even winning on more than one occasion.

The rest of the South Plains officeholders seem to fill seats. In other words, our elected leadership is weak with the exception of the above-named politicians.

Adding to this sad fact, we must take a look at our so-called lobbying organizations—primarily the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. Simply and sadly, the WTCC is a joke. The most work the group has done in the past few years is to organize in-house funding campaigns and to collect dues.

The WTCC further degenerated just recently when it gave up the facade of battle altogether and melded into a state group based in Austin, now calling itself the Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Then we have the press. The printed word has not been used enough to decry our situation. This newspaper can take some of the blame, but others certainly share in it. Our two regional dailies seem more concerned with the government in Nicaragua than that in Austin. They worry more about specific school systems' choices of paddles than they do about the governor's choice of state committees.

Then we consider the leadership of our state. We have three individuals who claim state titles and claim to represent Texas as a whole. Their titles might more aptly be called the governor, lieutenant-governor and speaker of House of East and South Texas.

Several examples of their absolute disregard for West Texas can be seen within the past few weeks.

Late last week, a committee to study the state's medical schools was put together. Not one person west of Fort Worth was named to serve. Many of the members chosen have vocally slammed the Texas Tech medical school and associated teaching hospitals.

And, recently, many cities across Texas placed bids for penal facilities. Cities like Andrews and Snyder worked long hours readying proposals. Snyder landed a facility, but it took a great deal more for them to obtain a prison than their counterparts in East Texas.

It is time for us to band together and speak out in many voices to let these "state leaders" know West Texas exists. This lack of respect has existed for many years, it has cost this area industry, jobs and pride. It is a situation which continues to worsen and the Austin, Dallas and Houston bureaucrats offer less service while demanding more of our wealth. Their next target is our school systems.

In effect, we are seeing a slow usurping of what little control we have left. And, it is time to fight back.

We should fight back even to the point that the State of West Texas should be considered seriously.

It is time to show the "powers that be" that, indeed, intelligent life does exist west of Fort Worth.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek has a few predictions for 1988.

Dear editor: Because Congress isn't in charge of the calendar, 1988's arrival date is January 1, not sometime in July or August.

Congress just finished passing a budget bill that was supposed to be passed in September, three months ago. It was passed at 3 o'clock in the morning, is 1,000 pages long, and some people claim one or two people in Washington have read it top to bottom.

With that out of the way, it's time to follow the annual custom of predicting what's going to happen in the new year.

My first prediction is that most predictions won't be accurate.

Other than that, I predict that: Of the 12 or so candidates, Republicans and Democrats, running for President, one will be elected, even if the job is too big for him.

Television won't get any better and people will keep watching it.

Some jury somewhere will break the record and award half a billion dollars to somebody whose new shoes caused emotional stress from an ingrown toenail.

If any of the various wars going on are ended, others will take their place.

Some people will continue to criticize the public schools because their kids don't seem to be getting any smarter than they.

After 1988 ends, 1989 will begin, followed by 1990, 1991, 1992, etc., and the world will outlast turmoil in the Mideast, the Persian Gulf, the oil crisis, the stock market, paid college athletes, mini-skirts, low farm prices, most legislatures—in fact, nearly everything except maybe nuclear arms and the common cold.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

THE HABIT OF HAPPINESS
"A smile firms up the muscles of your faith by automatically exercising them."

—Marilyn Miller, Austin American, July 16, 1922.

"Smiling lips must be accompanied by smiling eyes. One can smile with the eyes and not the lips, but never with the lips alone."

—Josephine Huddlestone, Austin American, March 9, 1924.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: The Bible says, "A merry heart doeth like a good medicine." (Proverbs 17:22.) The merry heart that brings happiness into the lives of others is in him who is truly a "partaker of the divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4.)

Such a person does not think of trying to "put on a mask" to try to look good in the eyes of others. He has made happiness a spiritual habit and most always his associates recognize the spiritual happiness through his smiles—the smiles with the lips and the eyes. The divine nature blesses one with the desire to cheer up other people's lives.

The opposite of this is described in this quotation: "A grouch is just an ordinary individual with a conviction that he has a monopoly of trouble." (Austin American, Sept. 28, 1922.) Such a person spreads gloom wherever he goes, and as an old proverb declares, he makes people happy—when he leaves!

In 1825, the first locomotive to haul a passenger train was operated in England by George Stephenson.

In 1894, President Grover Cleveland proclaimed amnesty for people convicted of polygamy.

In 1904, a woman was arrested for smoking a cigarette on Fifth Avenue in New York City.

The Penultimate Word

WHAT DO WE DO NOW?

I hate to sound preachy. I hated sounding that way when I was paid to do so. Most of the time half of the folks thought I sounded too preachy and the other half thought I did not sound preachy at all. Now, here I am doing it again, probably with the same results.

We have been hit with some rather large economic blows recently. The farm economy is tough, the sudden demise of the waste repository, and now the Panhandle is out of the running for the supercollider. No matter what attitude we might have had about these projects the fact remains we have to face some hard economic realities. I think it is of utmost importance that we do not let these realities create a spirit of doom and gloom. Doom and gloom tend to be self-fulfilling prophecies.

I have been guilty in the past few days of just this spirit. I was about ready to print a sign that said, "Will the last person to leave Hereford please turn off the light." Then I remembered where I was and who I was talking about. This is Hereford, Texas, and we are talking about Herefordians. We are survivors. The toughest heritage I know is ours. The folks who settled this country laughed their way through a depression and a dust bowl, and so can we. We will rise again.

It is going to take all of us working together, if we make it, so it is time to forget which side we were on and get together in the task of coming back. Some of the things I think will be necessary in this struggle are:

We need to redouble our efforts to shop in Hereford. We can not be a strong community without strong merchants. It is sort of the old chicken and the egg business. Do strong merchants create strong business, or does strong business create strong merchants? We need to try both.

We need to strengthen our Chamber of Commerce. We must have strong and constant efforts at promoting this city.

We need to tell all of the doomsayers to hush. This town and this people have been counted out before. They were wrong then and I think they will be wrong now.

You know sounding preachy feels pretty good.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

We have met the enemy . . .

By Richard L. Leshner,
President

WASHINGTON -- The truly frightening and discouraging thing about the continuing budget crisis is not that Congress is ignoring the will of the people, but is apparently heeding that will all too precisely.

The fundamental duty of Congress, of course, is to reflect the will of the people. That is why the Founding Fathers provided for regular elections—so the people could evict politicians who failed to respond to the public will.

Which is a major reason we have such a large budget deficit and why Congress does nothing about it. If public opinion polls are to be taken at face value, the public dislikes deficits, but not enough to want either spending cuts or tax increases. Stated another way, the American people want all the benefits of generous government but do not want to pay for them.

That is perfectly understandable sentiment but not one that inspires confidence. At best, it is irresponsible. At worst, it is irrational and self-destructive.

But it cannot be denied. Poll after poll reveals the same thing—little public support for either spending cuts or tax increases. A recent survey conducted by The New York Times and CBS suggested that if anything in the federal budget should be cut, it would have to be the military. But even there the demand was weak as only 28 percent of respondents actually called for cut-backs in the Pentagon's budget.

Indeed, upon studying the Times-CBS poll results, one is struck by the quaint absurdity of the results. A full 55 percent of respondents endorsed more spending on farm subsidies. We are already spending over $20 billion a year to produce agricultural products we have no use for, at a time when our budget is knee-deep in red ink and the people think we should spend more.

In the face of such illogical and contradictory public opinion there is little wonder our elected representatives have so little inclination to make the difficult decisions required to bring our budget into balance. Nevertheless, the fact remains that our spending mania is grossly out of control and that higher taxes are not the answer. Indeed, experience with tax increases demonstrates clearly that they inevitably lead to even higher spending than before and slower economic growth. There is only one way to address this problem, and that is on the spending side of the ledger.

If the public does not understand this reality, it is because our elected leaders are not telling them about it. They are too busy seeking partisan advantage and, let's face it, no one wants to be the bearer of bad news.

But sooner or later someone must step forward and force the American people to resolve their own contradictory attitudes. There is a critical need at this juncture of American history for leadership in the heroic mold, politicians more concerned about our country than their own political careers. There has been enough finger pointing. In the words of the comic character Pogo, "We have met the enemy and he is us."

Gulf Cleanup

Texas is blessed with 642 miles of coastline along the Gulf of Mexico. It pays big dividends not only in recreation, tourism and shipping, but is a habitat crucial to many birds, fish, whales, sea turtles and other wildlife.

Those are reasons we must keep it clean. Our Gulf coast is economically important, but ecologically vulnerable.

The U.S. Senate has taken a first step toward the solution, but there is a second step, proposed by our senior U.S. senator, Lloyd Bentsen, which should be carried out.

The Senate adopted an amendment proposed by Bentsen to declare the Gulf of Mexico a "special area" in the handling of garbage.

The problem of Gulf garbage can be solved, if the special designation is granted as a way to stop dumping.

Never Too Old

When an elderly Houstonian recently went before the judge for sentencing on attempted murder charges, he wasn't worried. And his expectation for leniency wasn't ill-founded. The courts will often take a criminal's advanced years into consideration and forgo a prison sentence. That's assuming he doesn't ask for trouble.

"I should have killed her," this particular fellow said about his intended victim. "I could have shot 10 people," he bragged. "What would they do to a 75-year-old man?"

Sentence him to eight years in prison, that's what. The official charge was attempted murder, but the old coot's also guilty of arrogance in the first degree.

ALCOHOL, DRUG ABUSE AND PREGNANCY
By George W. Moreley, M.D., President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Many experts call alcohol a drug because it hurts the functions of the brain, nervous system, and heart. Generally, when people drink, their behavior changes, their speech slurs, and their coordination fails. This means that the alcohol has entered their blood system.

During pregnancy, your baby receives all its oxygen and nourishment from your blood system. So, if you drink alcohol, that's the same as handing your baby a cocktail. The alcohol readily crosses the placenta to the baby, reaching its bloodstream in the same concentration as in yours. If you get drunk, so does your baby.

Doctors know that pregnant women who drink heavily risk miscarriages and stillbirth. They also know that heavy drinking can cause harm to unborn babies who will have "fetal alcohol syndrome" (FAS), a series of alcohol related abnormalities and birth defects. These babies have small bodies and heads, and never catch up to normal growth. Many have some mental retardation, are jittery and poorly coordinated, and have behavioral problems. Many have facial abnormalities and heart defects. Sadly, no amount of care after birth can correct the damage.

Even if you think you drink moderately, you may be more likely to have a miscarriage or stillbirth. You may also cause problems for your baby, such as low birth weight, hyperactivity, a lower IQ, learning difficulties, and emotional problems. And, your baby will never catch up to normal.

Scientists have been able to estimate at what stages alcohol causes specific damage. During the first trimester, alcohol can seriously damage developing organs resulting in birth defects. During the second trimester, alcohol can stunt your baby's growth and also cause you to miscarry. During the final three months, when your baby's brain is developing, alcohol can affect brain growth.

Even after birth, alcohol can harm your baby if you nurse and drink. Alcohol passes to your baby in your milk, and can cause developmental problems.

Remember, no form of alcohol is any safer than another. Beer and wine are as damaging as hard liquor.

If you plan to become pregnant, or are pregnant already, you will want to cut down on the amount you drink, and if you are unsure of how much you should drink, don't drink at all. If you have problems with your drinking, talk honestly to your doctor about your drinking habits. After all, if you don't drink, neither can your baby.

Are you pregnant, or do you think you might be? If so, then you should know that many drugs you may use - whether prescription, over the counter or illegal - can cause permanent harm to your baby, from discolored teeth to severe birth defects. The safest rule is to take no medications or drugs during pregnancy unless under direct doctor's orders.

Any drugs you can use circulate through your baby's body as well as your own. What effect the medication will have on the baby depends on what the medication is, when in pregnancy you took it, how much you took, and for how long. Researchers feel that the baby is most likely to be affected by the medication during the first two months when it is in the critical stages of development. Later in pregnancy, some drugs can retard your baby's normal growth.

Many women believe that over the counter drugs are safe because they are sold without prescription. But that does not make them safe for pregnant women. Even large amounts of aspirin taken during the last three months of pregnancy can cause excessive bleeding in both mother and child.

If you have taken medicines prescribed to you before you knew you were pregnant, be sure to ask your obstetrician about them immediately. If you have an illness, such as epilepsy or heart disease, that requires a medication, be sure your doctor chooses a drug that will offer the least risk to your baby. Never self-medicate, nor use a medicine prescribed for someone else.

If you use illegal, or street drugs, you can harm your own health. If you use them when you are pregnant, you can harm your baby's as well, and possibly cause birth defects or deformities. If you have a drug habit, tell your obstetrician immediately so both of you can work together to ensure your health and that of your

Be gentle on microwave

Here's a chili recipe you're sure to enjoy. But remember to treat your microwave gently when cleaning splatters and spills. Mix a solution of 2 tablespoons baking soda with 2 cups warm water and sponge down the interior.

- QUICK CHILI
- 1 pound ground beef
  - 1 cup chopped onion
  - 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
  - 1 clove garlic, minced
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1 can (1 pound) whole tomatoes, drained
  - 1 can (1 pound) red kidney beans, undrained
  - 1/4 cup seeded, chopped green chili peppers
  - 2 tablespoons tomato paste
  - 1 tablespoon chili powder
  - 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
  - 1/4 teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce

Crumble ground beef into a 2-quart glass or microwave-proof casserole. Add onion, green pepper, garlic and salt; mix well. Cover. Cook about 8 minutes, stirring several times. Stir in tomatoes, beans, chilies, tomato paste, chili powder, cumin and pepper sauce. Cover. Cook 8 to 10 minutes, stirring twice during cooking.

CHANHASSEN, Minn. (AP) — Rock star Prince is throwing an invitation-only New Year's Eve concert and party to raise money for Minnesota's homeless.

Three hundred people are being invited to the $200-a-plate bash, Prince publicist Robyn Riggs said Tuesday. It will be held at Prince's new Paisley Park studio in this Minneapolis suburb.

Proceeds will go to the Minnesota Coalition for the Homeless, Ms. Riggs said. Coalition spokeswoman Sue Watlov Phillips said the money will be used to provide shelter and transitional housing for the state's homeless.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten films on top of the hit TV series "Bosom Buddies" have made Tom Hanks quite a success at age 31, anyone would agree.

How did he do it? "I was funny when I needed to be funny, and I was lucky. That's all I know," Hanks said in an interview in the January issue of Gentleman's Quarterly magazine.

Musing further about the comic abilities he showcases in the forthcoming movie "Punchline," Hanks said: "I am funny. OK, fine. I'm not as funny as everybody, but I can be somewhat amusing. And I know it's something I cannot plan or explain or communicate, it's just that I am."

Hanks plays a stand-up comic and co-stars with Sally Field in "Punchline." His previous films included "Splash," "Volunteers," and "Dragnet."

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — Gerald D. Crowley, who rescued a police officer from attackers, said he is splitting a $2,500 Carnegie Hero grant with the officer.

"I'm splitting it with him because I helped someone this one time and I'm getting all the awards. He hasn't gotten anything and he does this every day," said Crowley, who was among 18 Americans to receive the award this year.

He was honored last week with the grant and a bronze medal for helping Officer David Poole of Holyoke in a May 1986 scuffle at an amusement park. A crowd had surrounded Poole and was shouting "Kill the pig!" when Crowley tackled a 200-pound man who tried to take Poole's gun from his holster.

The assailant escaped and tried to run over Crowley with a car. Another attacker was arrested after Crowley tackled him.

Both men were convicted and sentenced for beating Poole, who said at the time that Crowley was the only person to come to his aid out of a crowd of 200.

"Actually, I think it's embarrassing," Crowley said of the prize. "I didn't do it for any award."

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Director Stanley Kramer has returned from Hollywood to prepare a script for a movie about Lech Walesa, founder of Poland's outlawed Solidarity union federation.

Kramer, 74, and Oscar-winning screenwriter Dan Taradash have interviewed Walesa in Gdansk, Poland, where the Nobel Peace Prize-winning labor activist works as an electrician in a shipyard.

The movie, tentatively titled "Polonaise," is being funded by Polish-Americans, Kramer said in a recent interview.

Kramer, the director of "The Defiant Ones" and "Guess Who's Coming To Dinner," said the project was one reason he moved back to the Los Angeles area after eight years in Seattle, where he has written a newspaper column and been host of a local weekly television show.

"I've only been happy once in a while in my checkered career," said Kramer. "But this project makes me feel like a young filmmaker. We're giving it its full chance."

Defeat Oklahoma Sooners 20-14 in Orange Bowl

Miami wins another national title -- finally

By The Associated Press

The Miami Hurricanes were ranked No. 2, but they are college football's national champions.

Coach Jimmy Johnson's troops handed a 20-14 defeat to top-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl New Year's night, paving the way for the Hurricanes' coronation Sunday when the final Associated Press poll is released.

Miami defeated the Sooners by doing what they do best — passing and dominating on defense.

Steve Walsh, a distant second to Vinny Testaverde in the glamour ratings at Quarterback U., did what the Heisman Trophy winner never did: win the big one. Protected by a patchwork line, he threw two touchdown passes and befuddled a defense that has led the nation in pass defense for three straight years.

Bernard Clark, George Mira Jr.'s second at middle linebacker all season, did what Miami's all-time leading tackler could not do. Filling in for Mira, who was suspended for failing an NCAA drug test, Clark led Miami in tackles as the Hurricanes put the clamps on the Sooners' wishbone, which entered the game averaging 500 yards and 43.5 points per game.

Oklahoma ran for only 179 yards, compared to its season average of 428.

The bowl victory was the first at Miami for Johnson, breaking a string of three straight losses that included defeats in each of the last two seasons which cost Miami a chance at the national title.

"They've been hurting for the last three or four years and so have I, so this makes the hurt a little better," Johnson said of his players.

Johnson also finally escaped the shadow of former boss Barry Switzer by knocking him out in a winner-take-all matchup between 11-0 heavyweights.

It was the third straight year Miami has beaten Oklahoma — the Sooners' only three losses in that span.

A crowd of 74,760 watched Miami control on both sides of the ball and in the kicking game, where they were hurt in last year's Fiesta Bowl loss to Penn State. This time, Greg Cox kicked an Orange Bowl-record 56-yard field goal that broke a 7-7 tie in the third quarter and later added a 48-yarder, while punter Jeff Feagles had a 68-yarder.

The Hurricanes, who won their second national crown in five years, wound up the only 12-0 team in the nation.

Miami scored more points than anyone this season against Oklahoma, which led the nation by allowing just 7½ per game and had not yielded more than 14. "The best team won," said Switzer, who resorted to a trick play — the "fumblerooski" — to score with two minutes left and Miami leading 20-7. All-American offensive guard Mark Hutson lumbered 29 yards into the end zone after picking up an intentional fumble.

Miami recovered an onside kick, punted inside the Oklahoma 10 with 56 seconds left and then forced quarterback Charles Thompson to fumble to end the Sooners' hopes.

"We're 6-0 against bowl teams (Florida State, Florida, Notre Dame, Arkansas, South Carolina and Oklahoma)," Johnson said. "No one can match that. So we played our way to the national championship."

Miami drove 65 yards for its first touchdown, a 30-yard shot from Walsh to fullback Melvin Bratton down the left sideline.

Walsh teamed with Michael Irvin on a 23-yard TD pass in the third quarter that made it 17-7. Irvin streaked past All-American defensive back Rickey Dixon, whose interception set up Anthony Stafford's 1-yard tying touchdown run with nine seconds left in the first half.

Walsh completed 18 of 30 passes for 209 yards, almost double the 102-yard average Oklahoma allowed this season. Bratton tied an Orange Bowl record with nine catches for 102 yards.

Walsh got good protection from an offensive line decimated by the loss of its two tackles. John O'Neill also failed a drug test and was suspended and Matt Patchan was injured.

Coached by Mira on the sideline,

Clark was in on 14 tackles.

Oklahoma fullback Lydell Carr, playing for the first time since a knee injury Nov. 7, gained only 38 yards on 16 carries up the middle.

Thompson was just 4-for-12. The redshirt freshman, who filled in for injured Jamelle Holieway and beat then-No. 1 Nebraska for the Big Eight title in the final regular-season game, ran 19 times but gained only 29 yards.

"I thought maybe our offense would be able to move the ball better," Thompson said. "I didn't think they would stop us like they did."

But Miami did. Again. And finally. The Orange Bowl game capped a busy day in which six bowl games were played.

Elsewhere, No. 3 Florida State edged No. 5 Nebraska 31-28 in the Fiesta Bowl; No. 6 Auburn tied No. 4 Syracuse 16-16 in the Sugar; No. 8 Michigan State downed No. 16 Southern California 20-17 in the Rose; No. 13 Texas A&M beat No. 12 Notre Dame 35-10 in the Cotton and No. 14 Clemson downed No. 20 Penn State 35-10 in the Citrus.

Leading 10-3 with the wind at his back and threatening to score again late in the second quarter, Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz liked his team's chances in the 52nd Cotton Bowl Classic.

"But boom, boom, we had three mistakes in a row. We were about to be ahead 17-3 and in a two-minute span, they are ahead 18-10," Holtz said after his team's 35-10 loss Friday to Texas A&M.

The biggest came when Notre Dame quarterback Terry Andrysiak threw into the end zone and A&M cornerback Alex Morris made a leaping, one-handed interception to end the threat. The play changed the momentum of the game.

"Our guy was beat on the play. I was supposed to be on the other side, but I saw the quarterback rolling and went to that side. He threw it right to me," Morris said.

"I think we wanted it more than they did," said A&M freshman quarterback Bucky Richardson, who scored twice and was voted the game's outstanding offensive player.

"I thought I played well. I didn't throw too well, but I ran the option well enough to put some points on the board," Richardson said.

"I didn't think we would dominate the game, and I don't think they did either. But our linemen are big and can push people around."

For the game, A&M had 294 yards rushing to 74 for Notre Dame.

"We felt like we had to run the football, but we were unable to. They basically dominate the line of scrimmage," Holtz said.

"Their ability to run the ball, and our inability to, was the difference in the game."

Jackie Sherrill, A&M's coach, thought his defensive line was equally important in the win.

"I didn't think their skill people were going to be able to perform if the defensive line didn't allow them to," Sherrill said. "And certainly our defensive line controlled their offensive line."

Freshman running back Darren Lewis gave the Aggies a 10-10 tie in the second quarter by taking a pitch from backup quarterback Lance Pavlas and tossing a halfback pass to Tony Thompson for the touchdown.

"It let some people know the Notre Dame defense wasn't all that it

BOWL GAMES

In AFC wild-card game

Oilers battle Seahawks

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Another piece of Coach Jerry Glanville's plan to bring the Oilers back to NFL respectability fell into place last Sunday when high-priced rookie fullback Alonzo Highsmith played his best game of the season.

Highsmith scored his first two touchdowns, one on a tackle-breaking 33-yard pass reception, to help the Oilers defeat Cincinnati 21-17 and gain the playoffs for the first time since 1980.

Highsmith will start again this Sunday when the Oilers host the Seattle Seahawks in the AFC wild-card game in the Astrodome. Kickoff is at 3 p.m. CST.

Glanville resisted pressure from fans and media to play Highsmith earlier.

"The worst thing you could do is put someone in who is not ready," Glanville said. "You're counting on them for a big play and all of a sudden he doesn't know if he can do it or not."

Highsmith missed six games in a highly publicized contract fight before signing a 4-year, $2.6 million contract on Oct. 28.

He played briefly three games later against San Francisco but has slowly earned more playing time each week.

"I think that's the way we brought him along, so he not only would be ready but would have confidence about what he could do."

Confidence?

"When we're on the one yard line and I've got the ball, I don't think I can be stopped," said Highsmith, who scored one touchdown on a 1-yard dive.

"I want my teammates to have confidence in me in that situation."

Highsmith also thinks there will be plenty of offensive opportunities to keep all of the Oilers happy.

"Somebody has to catch a touchdown pass and it might be Mike Rozier and maybe I'll have to pick up a linebacker to allow Warren Moon to throw a long pass," Highsmith said.

"And maybe someday it'll be my turn to score some touchdowns. But I'm not here for individual stats. I'm here to win."

Highsmith gained 61 yards against the Bengals and caught one pass for 33 yards and a touchdown.

"I think I've shown the people that I'm a competitor," Highsmith said. "I come from a program where losing is not tolerated and I told the people when I came here that I would not tolerate losing."

Highsmith played on national championship teams at Miami and will face off against former Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth on Sunday.

"He's a good football player but I don't think about individuals on a team," Highsmith said. "If I'm called on to block him, I'll do it."

The Seahawks will play without Curt Warner, their leading rusher, who suffered a sprained ankle in last week's game against Kansas City.

seemed," Lewis said.
"I felt the trick plays were the key. You have to fake the run and hope the defensive back comes up, and he did. I was just hoping I could get the ball to him. It was just pure luck," Lewis said.

On the first play after the kickoff, A&M recovered a fumble on the Irish 21. A&M scored in four plays, and then used another trick play for a 2-point conversion and an 18-10 lead.

The center shuffled the ball sideways to 6-5, 232-pound Wally Hartley, who lumbered around left end for the two points.

Linebacker Adam Bob was the outstanding defensive player.

"In the pre-game drills, we were running plays and nobody was supposed to get hit, but (halfback Keith) Woodside went through and Adam knocked the snot out of him. I thought we'd lost Woody for the game. I knew right then Adam Bob was really going to have a game."

The wins by A&M over Notre Dame and by Texas over Pittsburgh in the Bluebonnet Bowl helped the Southwest Conference, Sherrill said.

"No question about it. We needed to beat Notre Dame. I don't think there's anyone else, other than maybe Oklahoma, that could have come to the Cotton Bowl and been better for us, as far as getting respect."

Tom Brown, Notre Dame's Heisman Trophy winner, was a factor in the opening drive that gave the Irish a 7-0 lead, but scarcely after that.

"The first half, they played basic zone coverage. The second half they put a free safety on him and really started blitzing — probably one out of two or one out of three plays," Holtz said.

"A blitz doesn't really bother us, but it doesn't give you much time.

Our problem was we never made them pay for the blitz," Holtz added.

Fiesta Bowl

Florida State quarterback Danny McManus completed 28 of 51 attempts for 375 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Seminoles over Nebraska. The attempts and yardage were Fiesta Bowl records, while the three touchdowns tied the bowl record.

Florida State finished its season 11-1. Nebraska wound up 10-2.

Sugar Bowl

Winn Lyle's 30-yard field goal with one second remaining gave Auburn its tie with Syracuse, ending the Orangemen's perfect season and their slim hopes of a national championship.

The first-ever Sugar Bowl tie gave the Orangemen an 11-0-1 record.
"Why would you not go for the tie?" Auburn Coach Pat Dye said afterward. "Our kids played just as good as their kids. If they wanted to win, they should have blocked the field goal."

Rose Bowl

Lorenzo White ran for two touchdowns and John Langeloh kicked a 36-yard field goal with 4:14 left as Michigan State beat Southern California in the Rose Bowl.

Langeloh's field goal, his second of the quarter, put the Spartans ahead again after Southern Cal tied the score 17-17 with 8:33 left. A 36-yard pass from Bobby McAllister to Andre Rison set the stage for Langeloh's game-winning kick.

Michigan State, 9-2-1, had not played in a Rose Bowl in 22 years.

Citrus Bowl

Rodney Williams passed for 214 yards and Tracy Johnson scored three touchdowns as Clemson handed Penn State its worst bowl defeat ever.

Williams' passing was complemented by a 285-yard rushing attack against the nation's 12th-ranked defense.

Penn State, the defending national champion, finished 8-4. Clemson, the Atlantic Coast Conference champion, wound up 10-2.

Sunday's game is biggest in New Orleans Saints history

By AUSTIN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Defensive end Jumpy Geathers was excited to be returning to the New Orleans Saints lineup just in time for the biggest game of the team's history.

Geathers, the Saints' best pass rusher, underwent knee surgery during the preseason. But he'll be ready Sunday for the Saints' first-ever playoff game, at home against the Minnesota Vikings in the NFC wild-card game.

"Nobody thought I could come back. Nobody but me and Doug (Arnold, an intern trainer)," Geathers said.

Geathers said playing 15 downs against Green Bay last week helped restore his timing and confidence.

"He'll need it against the Vikings. They have a great offensive line," he said. "We've got to get some pressure on their quarterback."

The Saints went 20 years without making the playoffs, and the Vikings, once Super Bowl regulars, haven't been since 1982.

The Vikings won a wild-card berth with an 8-7 record, the Saints with a 12-3 mark, second-best in the NFL, behind NFC West rival San Francisco.

The Saints have won nine straight. The Vikings have lost three of their last four.

Saints Coach Jim Mora gets upset by references to the Vikings having "backed into" the playoffs.
"That's a lot of malarkey. They're 8-7, and they earned the right to be here," he said.

"They lost to Chicago, Green Bay and Washington, and that's three pretty good football teams."

The Saints led the league with 30 interceptions. The Vikings have thrown 23 interceptions, fifth-worst this season.

But the big concern was the passes caught by Vikings, rather than opponents. And the ones caught by Anthony Carter were of particular concern.

"Other than Jerry Rice, he's the best we have played," said Saints free safety Brett Maxie.

"He's such a great receiver after the catch. He can really run with it.

Defensive coordinator Steve Sidwell said there is a danger in paying too much attention to Carter, even though he has averaged more than 24 yards on his 38 receptions this year.

"You concentrate on Carter, and Darrin Nelson will hurt you out of the backfield, or Steve Jordan or Hassan Jones or Leo Lewis," Sidwell said.

Mora said it doesn't make any difference that Tommy Kramer is back as Minnesota's quarterback, instead of Wade Wilson.

"They're both excellent quarterbacks, and they've both proven they can win."

The year in sports in Hereford

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles reviewing the Hereford sports news of 1987. Part 2 includes the months of April through July.

APRIL

A Hereford boy, Ronald Torres, won local and district titles in the Elks Lodge free throw shooting competition, and then placed fourth in the state contest in Temple.

The Whiteface varsity baseball team, after winning its first five District 1-4A games, was ranked sixth in the state.

The HHS girls' golf team continued to increase its district lead — to more than 100 strokes after the Canyon and Dumas rounds. Hereford went on to win the district girls' golf title by 166 strokes, and Amy Coneway, Suzanne Hardage and Kathy Neill finished as district medalists, the top three individuals in the district.

Hereford placed third in the regional tournament, missing out on a trip to the state tournament by 13 strokes.

Stanton's ninth grade girls' track team won another meet, the Canyon meet in the first weekend of April.

The HHS varsity baseball team went undefeated in the first half of the district season, and was ranked fifth in the state in mid April.

Frank Belcher was hired as the new Hereford High School head girls' basketball coach. Belcher came to Hereford from Groom where he had a 68-32 record in four seasons, including two playoff teams.

Brent Warner was named the new assistant golf pro at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

District 1-4A tennis titles were claimed by a Hereford boys' singles player, Kevin Hansen, and a boys' doubles team, Jason Bodner and Brad Allred. They qualified for regionals, along with Lana Kosub, who placed second in girls' singles.

A boys' 400-meter relay team on the Hereford High School varsity set a school record in the District 1-4A meet in Canyon. Marcus Brown, Vincent Brown, Brooke Perkins, and Jimmie Hazzard set the school record with a time of 42.40 seconds.

Hereford's Alina Benitez and Nancy Garza qualified for the regional girls' track meet. Benitez won the District 1-4A 1,600-meter run, and Garza won the 3,200-meter run and placed second in the 1,600-meter run.

The La Plata Junior High School seventh grade girls' track team won the Hereford Invitational Meet, and then won the district championship.

Nearly $2,000 was raised for the Casey Smith Memorial Scholarship Fund when the KFDD Long Rangers played the Hereford Coaches in a basketball game at the La Plata gym. The scholarship fund was named in memory of a former Hereford High School and West Texas State University football player who was killed in an automobile accident. The Hereford Coaches won the game 47-40.

MAY

The Hereford High School baseball team clinched an undisputed District 1-4A championship by defeating Pampa 4-3 on Saturday, May 2. The victory was the 12th straight in the district for the Whitefaces. Hereford's quest for an undefeated district title was thwarted by Lubbock-Estacado, but the Whitefaces went on into the playoffs.

The annual Hereford Cablevision-Hereford YMCA Racquetball Tournament was held at the YMCA. Division champions included Becky Lovin in women's "A" singles, Weldon Knabe and Roger Eades in men's "A" doubles, Odess Lovin and Becky Lovin in mixed doubles, Gilbert Frausto in men's "B" singles, Elsa Montes in women's "B" singles, and Chad Sandoval in the junior division.

The Texas Migrant Council Headstart youth track team of Hereford won a regional track meet in Plainview, defeating teams from six other Migrant Council Centers.

More than 500 boys and girls competed in the annual Kiwanis Elementary Track Meet at Whiteface Stadium.

Athletes of the year, honored at the Hereford High School all-sports banquet, were Bobby Baker in boys' sports and Nancy Garza in girls' sports. The "Fighting Heart" awards went to Amy Coneway, Kyle Streun, and Mark Artho, and Keith Anderson received the Casey Smith Memorial Award.

The media award winners, outstanding athletes in each sport, were: Susie Kalka, girls' basketball; Tricia Kahlich, volleyball; Lana Kosub, girls' tennis; Amy Coneway, girls' golf; Alina Benitez, girls' track; Nancy Garza, girls' cross country; Brad Allred, boys' tennis; Jimmie Hazzard, boys' track; Arthur Valdez, boys' golf; Jason Bodner, boys' tennis; Todd Shire, football; Bobby Baker, boys' basketball; Bobby Medina, baseball; and Benny Carrasco, boys' cross country.

Also at the all-sports banquet, the Hereford Whiteface Booster Club honored Dargrell Gibson as the "Fan of the Year."

The "Fighting Maverick Awards" at La Plata Junior High School were presented to Stacy White, Libby Kosub, and Russell Backus.

A rainstorm throughout West Texas postponed the first game of the bi-district baseball playoffs in Lubbock between Hereford High School and Andrews High School, and also cut short the Red Raider golf tournament in Hereford.

Hereford High School shut out Andrews 10-0 in game one of the bi-district playoffs on Friday, May 22. The next day was a nightmare for the Whitefaces, not so much concerning the outcome of game two of the playoffs, but rather the fact that they traveled to Lubbock, Andrews, Hobbs, N.M.; Eunice, N.M., and finally Jal, N.M., where they found a baseball field to play the game at.

Hereford edged Andrews 7-6 late that evening, to advance to the next round of the playoffs against Wichita Falls Brewer.

The weather interfered with the playoffs again, postponing game one from Thursday, May 28 at Snyder to Saturday, May 29 at Andrews. The series had to be changed from a best-of-three series to a one-game playoff.

Hereford suffered a 5-1 defeat to Brewer in the one-game playoff, ending an outstanding season by the Whitefaces. Five HHS players were named to the all-district first team — pitcher Keith Anderson, player of the year; pitcher Bobby Medina, first baseman Kyle Streun, second baseman Keith Herrera, and outfielder Rodney McCracken.

A Clovis team — Anna Crook and Gail Kenyon — won the Hereford Women's Partnership golf tournament, winning by two strokes over Helen Ann McWhorter and Tiffi West of Hereford.

JUNE

James Salinas and Mike Fields won the Hereford Two-Man Partnership golf tournament, Salinas and Fields shot a two-round total of 128, four strokes better than Kelly Kitohens and Paige Burrelsmith.

A world discus record was set in Hereford during the Hereford YMCA-TAC Track Meet. Wendell Palmer of Pampa threw the discus 152 feet, one and one half inches to break the world record in the 55 to 59 age bracket, six and one half inches better than the old record.

Chasity Rickman of Hereford won the all-around title for girls in the Sherman County 4-H Rodeo.

In the Hereford Junior Rodeo, the girls' 16-18 all-around winner was Jana Johnson of Hereford, and the seven and under all-around winner was Misti Davis of hereford.

The Hereford Tennis Tournament was held at the Hereford High School courts. Division champions from Hereford were Brian Thomas, T.J. Head, Brenna Reinauer, Kristie Allison, Kirsten Abney, Jeff Eades, and Stacey Sanders.

JULY

First baseman Kyle Streun of the District 1-4A and bi-district champion Hereford Whitefaces was named to the Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association all-state team.

The Hereford Kids Inc. girls' major league softball team placed third in the U.S.S.S.A. state tournament in Lubbock. Three members of the Hereford team, Stacy White, Shantel Cornelius, and Veronica Casarez, were named to the all-state team. The winning team in the Hereford Whiteface Booster Club golf scramble was Jeff O'Rand, Tommy Bowling, Scot Russell, Ruby Cottle, and Robert Kubacak.

The Cattle Town team won the YMCA co-ed softball league championship by defeating Tri-State Feeders 13-12 in the playoff championship game.

Twenty-five members of the Hereford Track Club qualified for the state TAAF meet. They placed first or second in events at a regional meet to qualify for the state meet.

Early preseason high school football predictions included Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine rating of Hereford and Jasper as the top two teams in the state.

The Bronco district tournament of the Pony Baseball organization was held in Hereford. Host Hereford lost its first two games of the tournament and was eliminated.

The Key Club Four-Man Golf Scramble was held at Pitman Municipal Golf Course, with the team of Bill Allen, Chris Leonard, T.R. Sartor, and Larry Walterscheid coming in first place. In a junior flight, the winners were Tim Long and Trent Bowling.

Sixteen golfers from Hereford met to organize the Hereford Men's Golf Association. Officers elected were Ron Weishaar, president; Joe Kerr, vice president; Bob Baker, secretary-treasurer; Max Goforth, tournament director; and Gene Coulter, membership chairman.

Farm and Ranch

Lyng says it's a happier New Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not all farmers will have a happy new year, but Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng says most are ending 1987 in generally better shape than a year ago.

"Agricultural exports are recovering, stockpiles (surpluses) are dropping, farm income is setting a record — net cash income — farm production costs are lower, farm land values are firming, and farm debt is declining," he said Tuesday.

Lyng told a news conference there still are "pockets of financial stress" among some low-income farmers who are saddled with large debts. About 10 percent of all farmers fit that category, he said.

Another 12 percent are burdened with heavy debts and 22 percent are struggling with low incomes. But about 56 percent of all farmers are in "favorable" financial shape, Lyng said.

Agriculture Department economists forecast that net cash farm income, or the difference between gross cash income and cash expenses, will reach a record $57 billion this year. It could decline to a range of $50 billion to $55 billion in 1988, they said.

Lyng said he believes farmers' net cash income next year will be nearer the upper end of the forecast range and possibly match the record level of this year.

He said consumers can expect a modest rise in food prices of 2 percent to 4 percent next year. "There will be plenty of food at reasonable prices in 1988," he said.

The huge acreages idled under federal commodity programs and the costly outlays to support those programs are two other problems cited by Lyng.

This year, 69.3 million acres are being idled by farmers, up from 44.8 million in 1986, 30.7 million in 1985 and 26.8 million in 1984.

A record 77.8 million acres were idled in 1983 under a one-time "payment-in-kind" program to curb rising surpluses.

Lyng noted that the long-range Conservation Reserve Program accounts for a large part of the 1987 idled acreage — 16.8 million acres — and will continue to increase as farmers sign up.

The goal is to have 40 million to 45 million acres of erosion-prone cropland idled and planted in grass or trees by 1990.

The cost of farm commodity programs rose to a record $25.8 billion in 1986 but is expected to decline this year to $23.1 billion. Program outlays by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. in the 1988 fiscal year, which began on Oct. 1, are expected to be in the range of $19 billion to $21 billion, the smallest since 1985, Lyng said.

But Lyng's new forecast for 1988 commodity programs was substantially more than the $16 billion projected by department budget experts last summer.

These experts said the higher 1988 estimate reflects advance payments that will be made to farmers under next year's commodity programs.

Under the earlier, $16 billion, forecast, no advance payments were to have been made, as they were in the past. Congress recently restored the practice.

If Lyng could change one thing in American agriculture, what would it be?

"I'd like to see more freedom for farmers to produce what they want to produce," he told a questioner. "And to accomplish that we'd have to get rid of the problems in the international trade scene."

A big step toward that would be if all countries would adopt a U.S. proposal to eliminate subsidies and trade barriers, he said.

If this were done, Lyng said American farmers and consumers "would do very well" under a free-trade situation.

Retail beef prices to fall

Watch for slightly lower retail beef prices in 1988, in spite of a projected 4% to 5% reduction in beef supplies.

Usually, a reduction in the supply of beef would signal significant increases in retail prices. But, according to Jim Gill, market director for the Texas Cattle Feeders Association in Amarillo, supplies of poultry and pork will be up sharply in 1988 and the abundance of meat protein available to consumers will keep a lid on prices throughout the year. In fact, Gill estimates total red meat and poultry production will hit a record 220 lbs. (retail weight) per person next year, up from the record 216 lbs. per person in 1987.

"Retail beef prices could drop to around $2.35 per pound in 1988, down from the 1987 average of $2.41 per pound," Gill estimates. "However, consumers have turned back to beef and demand for our product should stay strong. The beef industry has undertaken an aggressive campaign to help boost demand and that, coupled with new product development, should prevent retail beef price from dropping much below $2.35 per pound."

A reduction in beef supplies portends a good year for cattlemen, Gill says. Cattle feeders saw 12 consecutive months of profit, on the average, in 1987. While 1988 may not be quite that robust, fed cattle prices should maintain their strength. Gill estimates fed cattle prices will range from $58 to $64 per cwt. in the first quarter of 1988; $65 to $70 in the second quarter; $66 to $70 in the third quarter; and $68 to $72 in the fourth quarter.

Cow-calf and stocker operators will enjoy another good year in 1988, too, coming off a profitable 1987—a year that, for some, was the first profitable year in nearly a decade. "Cattlemen have been liquidating herds for about 12 years," Gill said. "While we may be near the bottom of the liquidation phase and could start rebuilding numbers soon, the U.S. feeder calf supply will continue to shrink in 1988."

That means prices will be strong throughout the year. "During the first half of 1988, feeder steers weighing 700 to 750 lbs. should average in the mid to upper $70s," Gill says. "Lighter calves will range from the high $80s into the mid $90s. Prices at these levels will keep the cow-calf producer in the driver's seat for another year."

Grain farmers could see higher prices in 1988, too. "In spite of predictions that feed grain supplies will remain abundant, tighter farmer holding combined with increased export activity should push prices higher," Gill says. "Also, reduced plantings generated by farm programs in 1987 may start to trim supplies late in the year."

TCFA lists Top 10

The Texas Cattle Feeders Association has listed its "Top 10" news stories for 1987. Here are the top news stories that impacted the cattle industry this year, according to Charles E. Ball, TCFA executive vice president.

"TOP 10" News Stories in the Cattle Industry for 1987, as selected by TCFA staff:

1. Twelve consecutive months of profit made 1987 a banner year to feed cattle. Steer prices topped $73 per cwt. and two volume records were set—a daily volume of 58,702 on August 10 and a weekly volume of 114,857 the week ending August 28.

2. $73 million was collected under the $1-per-head checkoff, funding the most aggressive beef advertising, promotion and consumer relations campaign ever.

3. ConAgra became the second largest beef packer in the nation when it purchased Monfort of Colorado and 50% of Swift Independent Holding Corporation.

4. "Good" grade beef was renamed "Select." The change was made to help satisfy consumer demand for lean beef.

5. Controversy over cattle futures surfaced. An NCA Task Force negotiated changes in the CME contracts designed to make them more useful to cattlemen.

6. Cattle numbers dropped again. The U.S. cattle inventory on Jan. 1, 1986, was 102 million head, the lowest in 24 years.

7. Consumer concern about residues in beef was addressed by the NCA Beef Safety Task Force, which recommended an industry-wide quality assurance program.

8. The American Heart Association endorsed beef in the diet. A historic first occurred when the American Heart Association embarked on a working relationship that brings the medical community and the cattle industry together.

9. An arbitrary cap on cash accounting was forced on the beef industry by Congress. The ceiling of $25 million in gross receipts sets a precedent for future reductions that could affect many more family farm corporations.

10. "Black Monday" slammed the stock market and cattle futures. The Dow Jones average dropped more than 500 points in a week and live cattle futures followed, down 410 points the following week.

USDA adds Simbrah

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has proposed adding the Simbrah Association to its official list of registered cattle breed associations.

Owners of cattle on USDA's breed list can receive federal indemnities if their animals become infected with brucellosis and then are destroyed to prevent the disease from spreading.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the indemnities "encourage owners to remove infected animals from their herds" before brucellosis spreads to others.

To receive payments for registered cattle, the owner must show a certificate of registration as proof that the animal belongs to one of 60 cattle breed associations listed with the department. Rates of indemnities range from $50 to $250 per head, depending on whether the animal is dairy, beef or bison and is registered with a breed association.

Simbrah cattle are a cross between Simmental and Brahman.

Irrigation meet is Money in margin

AMARILLO — When producers from across the Texas High Plains gather here Jan. 5 for the annual High Plains Irrigation Conference, they'll share their own successes and problems in crop and pasture irrigation, as well as those of scientists and specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

One of the popular features of the annual meeting, conducted by the Extension Service, is a panel of growers telling how certain practices and equipment have worked for them.

"This sharing of experience from on-farm demonstrations has been the backbone of our educational programs since Extension started some 80 years ago," said Leon New. He is Extension irrigation specialist and conference coordinator.

Panelists this year will be James Young of Stratford, Roy Carlson of Hereford, Bill Weidon of Earth and Ronnie Sherrord of Hale Center. The conference will be at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West. Registration and exhibits will open at 8:30 a.m. District Extension Director Paul Gross will introduce the program at 9:25 a.m.

Research to find the most efficient furrow irrigation methods for this area will be reported by Jack Musick, agricultural engineer with USDA-Agricultural Research Service, Bushland. Ways to refine existing irrigation systems will be explained by New. Dr. Allen Knutson, Extension entomologist at Dimmitt, will discuss adaptation of center pivot systems to provide effective crop chemigation.

Dr. Wyatt Harmon, agricultural economist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Amarillo, will analyze the economic potential of center pivot irrigation. Several commercial exhibitors will display the latest irrigation equipment and supplies. Additional information about the conference is available at county Extension offices throughout the area. Extension is an arm of the Texas A&M University System.

Annual vegetable meeting is Jan. 19

Ways to combine cultural practices and marketing strategies which meet market demands and provide producers the best possible return will be examined at the 1988 West Texas Vegetable Conference in Hereford Jan. 19. More than a score of speakers will address the theme, "Ride the Rising Stars."

scientists, Extension agents and specialists, and growers, will present information to help producers make the best decisions for the coming growing season, Roberts said. The morning session will stress major vegetable crops grown on the High and Rolling Plains, new opportunities in the market place and techniques for marketing and production that have proven successful. After a catered luncheon, the potato director of a leading biotechnology firm will trace potato propagation from test tube to farm. Then, two concurrent sessions will focus upon special concerns for the area's two major vegetable crops, potatoes and onions. Educational and agribusiness exhibits will provide growers a glimpse of new materials and equipment. The conference has been planned by the Extension Service with the cooperation of the Deaf Smith County Extension Vegetable Program Development Committee, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Tech University and the High Plains Vegetable Growers and Shippers Council.

INS clarifies I-9 recordkeeping

COLLEGE STATION — The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has made a further clarification regarding I-9 form recordkeeping (employee documentation) for producers of perishable commodities. An earlier interpretation was that I-9 forms need not be filled out for persons hired in the production and harvesting of perishable crops until December 1, 1988. This interpretation has now been somewhat modified, points out Dr. Richard Edwards, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Producers of perishable crops will not be penalized for hiring production and harvesting persons who cannot present proof that they have the legal right to work in this country," notes Edwards. "This is not a change from the earlier interpretation; the change relates to filling out and filing an I-9 forms." According to the INS, perishable crop producers must fill out an I-9 form within three working days and ask for qualifying documents. If documents are presented, the I-9 should be completed. If acceptable documents cannot be produced, the employer simply writes SAW (Season Agricultural Worker) on the I-9 form. When the employee obtains an employment authorization card, it must be shown to the producer, who then should complete the previously incomplete I-9 form. "This process is to continue until Nov. 30, 1988," says Edwards. "At that time, no persons should be hired unless they can present proper employment documents."

Time is ripe for soil testing plans

It's time to plan next year's crops and soil testing should be one of the first items considered, advises a soil chemist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Extension Service soil testing program provides advice which can guide producers in maintaining a soil fertility program and furnishes information to help make management decisions, explained Dr. Michael Hickey, soil chemist who directs the Extension soil testing laboratory at Lubbock.

ing is to subdivide the field, based on the overall appearance of the land and any known differences in past crop production. Hickey said this gives the producer an opportunity to sample problem sites separately so that site-specific fertility problems can be identified and the "average" fertility of the field won't be biased. Each sample submitted for chemical analysis should represent a composite of 10 to 15 individual samplings, randomly taken, within a given area. For each individual sample, the same amount of soil should be taken to eliminate bias. If the past crop was bed planted, the best sample will come from halfway down the bed. If last year's fertilizer was banded, try to avoid sampling from the band, Hickey urged. Prior to taking a sample, scrape the litter from the surface, he advised. Then push the probe into the soil to the depth of plowing, which will be six to eight inches. To use a sharp-shooter, dig a V-shaped hole and take a half-inch slice of soil from the smooth side of the hole.

While taking samples, it is a good idea to note any soil compaction or the occurrence of plow pans," the Extension specialist cautioned. Subsamples should be placed into a clean plastic bucket. After all subsamples have been taken for a given area, mix them thoroughly. Take about a pint of this composite mixture for chemical analysis by the soil testing laboratory. Soil sample bags which hold the proper amount for testing and soil sample information sheets which itemize details about the field and sample needed for interpretation of the chemical analysis are available at the local county Extension agent's office, or at the Extension soil testing laboratory in Lubbock. The information sheets should be filled in as completely as possible, Hickey stressed. Each soil sample should be marked with the producer's name and sample number, which should correspond to the number on the information sheet. The analysis desired should be marked on the sample, and the proper fee included.

Proper sampling tools will make the job easier, he said. Suitable tools include a soil sample probe, sharp-shooter shovel and a plastic bucket. The probe is best suited for sampling the sandy soils on the High Plains. If a probe isn't available or moisture conditions make clay loam soils stick in the probe, a sharp-shooter shovel can be used. "The goal of field sampling is to provide a measure of the average soil fertility in the field," Hickey said. The first step in sound soil sampling is to subdivide the field, based on the overall appearance of the land and any known differences in past crop production.

Irene Mullins, manager of Hereford Community Center, accepts a 55-cup stainless steel coffee urn from Ruby Sanders, right, treasurer of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority City Council. The Council, which serves as the governing body to the three local Beta Sigma Phi chapters, donated the engraved urn in appreciation of the Center's cooperation with the chapters.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing you this letter because my wife and I are distressed. Our 17-year-old daughter has just informed us that she is going to shave her head. She has always tried to stay one step ahead of fashion, but this time we feel she is going too far.

"Sara" is remarkably beautiful and has a lot of self-confidence. According to her, hair is only an ornament and the less of it you have the more it says about your self-esteem. She also feels that too many of her friends spend entirely too much time on their hair and some of them are actually obsessed with it.

We would hate for Sara to cut her lovely shoulder-length hair on a whim, only to have her regret it for months to come.

We realize that this may seem like a trivial matter or, worse yet, a put-on, but Sara is an avid reader of your column and has said that she would be interested in your opinion.—Nervous in Connecticut

DEAR NERVOUS: I have seen a few fashion models who saved their heads and once I got over the shock I had to concede that two of them looked quite striking. The others looked hideous. (In order to carry this off, a woman must have a perfectly shaped skull, gorgeous eyes, beautiful skin and a marvelous profile.)

If this is not an attention-getting device, Sara can get the same effect by having her hair cut very short. But I have a feeling that this 17-year-old is going to do as she pleases no matter what, so I hope you don't make a big deal out of it.

Hair does grow back, you know, and the worst that can happen is that you may have a bald-headed daughter for a few months.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I would like to express my concern about silence in relationships.

It has been my experience that people practice the worst form of cruelty when they fail to keep in touch, don't answer letters, forget to say thank you for favors done, and disappear from sight and sound, leaving families and friends wondering what has happened to them.

Silence can be devastating to the mental and physical health of the "victims," and it can be enormously self-destructive as well.

People know most of the time that they are hurting others when they are silent, and it is an easy weapon to use. My nephew has not seen his sister for five years and says he will never speak to her again. My husband and his brother had a misunderstanding and his brother has cut my husband out of his life. The years will go by in both these cases and they will grow further apart. How can people have so much pride that they cannot somehow try to love each other again?

The silence between generations is frightening. It is called the generation gap. Loneliness is created by this terrible silence, and loneliness can create depression and depression can cause death. Is there an answer?—Lonely in Mill Valley, Calif.

DEAR MILL VALLEY: There is no one answer. Each person must find his own, but of this you can be sure:

Love is better than hate. Talking is better than not talking. Forgiving is better than holding a grudge. While some relationships may be impossible, it is always wise (and healthier) to leave the door ajar. The saving grace of mankind is the knowledge that people can and do change.

Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish patriot, died in 1891.

Nursing shortage is expected to continue

Low pay, long hours and stressful working conditions are often cited as reasons for the national nursing shortage. But the dean of Texas Christian University's Harris College of Nursing believes there are many other contributing factors.

"The shortage is not because women are not going into nursing or because they're leaving the profession," Dr. Patricia Scarse stressed. "We're graduating more nurses now than ever before in history, but they just get gobbled up."

One of the problems is that nurses have more opportunities today than in the past, said Scarse. In addition to hospitals, nurses also are employed by state and federal legislators because of health care legislation, by insurance companies because of malpractice and by a blossoming home care industry.

Another problem is the fact that nursing is still seen as predominantly a female occupation.

"We have failed to attract a significant number of males into the profession, and that's unfortunate because I think there are some tremendous opportunities for males in nursing," noted Scarse.

The final reason Scarse cited for the shortage of nurse is that hospitals now require a much lower nurse-to-patient ratio.

"Most of the patients found in hospitals today would have been dead on arrival 15 and 20 years ago, so they have a much higher acuity level," the TCU nursing professor said. "If we had had the foresight to know what the intensive care and critical care units were going to demand, we would have known that we were going to run out of nurses in a hurry."

Celebration planned

Friends and relatives of Hazel Sparks are invited to a reception from 2-4 p.m. today at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center in celebration of her 90th birthday.

The event is being hosted by her children: Bud Sparks of Hereford and Alyce Sparks and Virgie Marshall of Amarillo.

Mrs. Sparks was born Jan. 3, 1898, in Indianapolis, Ind. She and her family moved to Hereford in 1910 from Indianapolis.

The family requests that no gifts be brought.

Some women will have high risk pregnancies

No pregnancy is totally without worry, but for some women, special problems can make pregnancy a time of high risk.

High-risk pregnancies can happen as the result of problems before or during pregnancy, or at the time of delivery. These problems can include medical conditions, as well as factors of the mother's lifestyle. The Texas Medical Association suggests see your physical if you are planning to have a baby, or if you become pregnant, to insure the best care for you and your developing child.

Several medical conditions that can result in a high-risk pregnancy and cause harm to both mother and baby are diabetes, high blood pressure, and heart and kidney disease, bleeding, and birth defects of the developing child.

Diabetes is a disease where the blood sugar levels in the body are too high. This can cause problems such as stillbirth (the birth of a fetus that died before or during the delivery) and premature birth (birth before 37 weeks). Sometimes diabetes can be diet-controlled, and in other cases, shots of insulin, a hormone that regulates blood sugar levels, are required.

High blood pressure can make women more likely to have heart attacks during pregnancy. High blood pressure can cause babies to be born too early or too small. If high blood pressure develops during pregnancy, it may be called preeclampsia or toxemia. This poses the same risks for the baby and mother as if the mother had high blood pressure before pregnancy.

Heart and kidney disease can make pregnancy a high risk. Since pregnancy makes all the body organs work harder than usual, added stress is placed on the heart and kidneys. This increases the risk of premature babies, as well as the birth of smaller babies.

Birth defects of the developing child also are factors in high-risk pregnancies. Some birth defects are due to genetic factors. Age and exposure to certain toxic elements are factors that also increase the risk of birth defects. Through careful testing and screening, some of these defects can be detected early in pregnancy.

Any vaginal bleeding during pregnancy, especially in the last months, can be a serious problem leading to high risk. Most of the time, this bleeding involves the placenta, which supplies nutriment to the developing fetus. Bleeding can occur when the placenta partly or completely covers the opening of the uterus, and in other cases, when the placenta separates from the wall of the uterus before the baby is born. Bleeding also can occur from trauma, such as a car accident or high blood pressure.

Some high-risk pregnancies can be detected by tests run by your physician. Three different tests can help determine high risk. An alpha-fetoprotein test can help identify women who might be carrying a fetus with defects such as improperly developed spinal cord. A procedure called amniocentesis, in which a small fluid sample is extracted from the sac in the mother's uterus, can be used to determine some birth defects. Another test, ultrasound, uses sound waves to create pictures of the fetus. Ultrasound can provide valuable information about the position of placenta and the baby.

The Texas Medical Association suggests to reduce the risk of a high-risk pregnancy, discuss your plans to become pregnant with your doctor. Genetic counseling can help identify a pattern of inherited genetic disorders. Adequate rest, exercise, and good nutrition are especially important before and during pregnancy. You can help your baby by stopping or limiting your smoking and drinking.

Red Cross Update

Extra-extra special thanks are in order for all volunteers that helped with the toys program for Christmas. An estimated 225 families with 690 children in those families were given gifts of toys, clothing and fruit.

The Concerned Citizens Group, Future Farmers of Hereford High School and George Warner Seeds gave fruit to make a fruit, candy and nuts sack for most of the families. I really appreciate all of the people that gave toys, time and effort to clean and sort toys and to those who delivered the toys. There isn't enough space to list the names of the clubs and individuals that helped, but you know who you are and we all say "Thanks!"

Donations are being taken at all Red Cross Chapters for the Disaster Relief efforts in Arkansas, where many families have suffered losses due not only to flooding but to previous tornados which struck a week earlier. Checks may be sent to our Chapter P.O. Box 1371 and they will be forwarded to Disaster Headquarters.

Congratulations to the Christmas Stocking Committee and the residents of Deaf Smith County for their work making Christmas special to so many people with many needs. Special thanks to the staff at The Brand and Speedy Nieman and to the staff at KPAN for their help with making Christmas in Hereford nicer for so many people.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

ADD ZEST TO LIFE

"If you desire to add zest to list, a preciousness and sweetness of which you have never dreamed, then do but follow these simple directions: Let every word and deed be spoken and done in the name of the Lord Jesus, and in everything give thanks to God."

—George Edward Walk, Dallas Morning News, Dec. 1, 1965.

Food bank's volume almost doubles in '87

During November, the 5 millionth pound of food passed through the doors of the High Plains Food Bank, announced Executive Director Melody Wattenbarger. "The food bank received its 5 millionth pound of donated food shortly after its fifth anniversary," said Wattenbarger. "However, more than one-third of that food was received during 1987."

The High Plains Food Bank has been a certified member of Second Harvest, the national food bank network since late Jan. According to Wattenbarger, the national certification is what has accounted for the dramatic increase in the amount of food received this year. The food bank now brings in donated food from all over the United States and the food is generally in truckload quantities. Large national food companies donate food by calling Second Harvest in Chicago. Second Harvest then allocates the food to its 82 food banks throughout the country. Food banks which accept the food are then responsible for the freight to bring the food into their communities.

"Local and regional freight companies have been very good about giving the food bank good rates," said Wattenbarger. "However, freight is still the second largest item in our budget. It is very important that the food bank continue to pay the freight because only through the food bank will this nationally donated food be available to the food bank's 165 member agencies in the Panhandle."

During 1987 the food bank's volume of food distribution almost doubled—from 65,000 pounds per month to 120,000 pounds per month. The food bank distributes food to 165 other charitable organizations in 30-county service area. Member agencies include churches, senior centers, children's homes, halfway houses, missions and other non profit organizations. While the number of receiving organizations has remained stable for the last two years, the volume has increased dramatically.

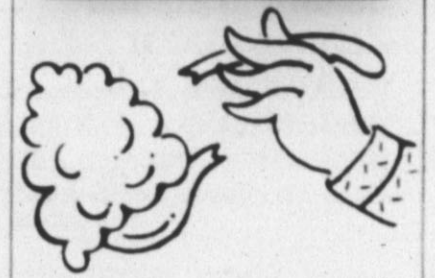

Part of the increase is due to the food bank's rural delivery program. Unique in the state of Texas, the rural delivery program provides delivery in the food bank truck to eight communities throughout the Panhandle. Begun in early 1986, the delivery program was expanded to eight sites during 1987. The food bank now delivers 30 percent of its total monthly distribution.

Another result of rapid growth at the food bank has been the need for computerization of the inventory. With grants from the Cabot Foundation and from Santa Fe Energy, the food bank was recently able to purchase a new computer and software to help automate many of the functions which have always been done manually. "We are so grateful to both Cabot and Santa Fe Energy for making this computer a reality," said Beth Duke, president of the food bank board. "Without the computer we would have had to hire an additional person, and this will be much more cost effective."

In early 1988, the food bank will begin construction on a 3,500 square foot addition to its warehouse at 815 S. Ross. The addition will be a specialized area for sorting retail salvage. Funding for the salvage addition came from a Community Development Block Grant, Hands Across America, Payless Cashways, the Hearst Foundation and local civic groups. Local groups contributing to the project include Golden K Kiwanis, North Amarillo Garden Club, American Legion Hanson Post No. 54, North Amarillo Kiwanis, Hi Plains Kiwanis and Downtown Kiwanis. "We are also pleased that these foundations and groups supported the salvage project," said Duke. "We expect to increase our annual distribution by 200,000 pounds with our reclamation center."

ASK DR. LAMB

Metabolic Boost BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I want to lose some weight in 1988. I am convinced that exercise is a better way to lose weight than trying to starve yourself. I'm not going to tell you how much I weigh, but I do need to lose about 20 pounds.

I was told at a health club that you lose calories for hours after you have exercised. My husband says that this is not true and that you only lose calories while you are exercising. I had hoped that a good exercise program each morning would be just what I needed to perk up my metabolism all day. Is he right that I'm getting a bill of goods at the health club?

DEAR READER: For many people, exercise really is the best way to eliminate excess pounds of body fat safely. Many fad diets are harmful to a person's health and usually don't work over the long term, anyway.

Exercise turns on the heat loss mechanism and you do literally lose more calories through the skin.

The biggest loss of calories does occur while you are exercising. But you can continue to lose calories after the exercise is over. How much you lose depends on how vigorous your exercise is and how long it lasts.

You can't expect an increase in your metabolism the next morning after moderate exercise. But you can expect an increase in your metabolism for 30 minutes after even mild exercise, such as walking. I like the idea of doing 10 minutes of exercise at frequent intervals during the day, if you are in shape to do it. That gives repeated spurts of increased metabolism that will last for a short while after your exercise is over.

More vigorous exercise has been shown to have effects for hours after exercise. In one study, exercise at 75 percent of maximum capacity for 80 minutes caused a significant increase in use of calories even 12 hours later.

I have discussed the effects of various levels and duration of exercise on calorie loss afterward in THE HEALTH LETTER 30-11. I am sending you a free copy. Others who want this issue can send $1 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to THE HEALTH LETTER, Dept 30-11, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Don't let your husband discourage you. A daily exercise program may be slow, but before 1988 is over — if you stick with it and don't overeat — it will have a significant effect on helping you to lose excess body fat the healthy way.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My daughter has been plagued with a red nose for eight years. She is 26 now. It is embarrassing, since her friends kid her a lot about having a boozier's nose or say, "How come you always have a sunburned nose?"

Dr. Lamb, she does not drink and is fair of skin. Could this be a deficiency of a vitamin? She has been to a skin specialist, but creams do not help. Can you suggest something?

DEAR READER: It sounds as though you are describing rosacea. The red nose can progress and cause enlargement of pores. Anything that increases circulation to the face may aggravate it, including alcohol, coffee, hot beverages and spicy foods. Most dermatologists agree that the most satisfactory treatment is tetracycline, beginning with 1 gram a day, and after the condition is controlled, very gradually decreasing the dose, usually to 500 mg a day. Frequently, a person must remain on maintenance tetracycline to prevent a recurrence.

Creams are used, but most dermatologists feel they are not very effective — although some claim to have had good results. I would suggest your daughter talk to her dermatologist about taking tetracycline if the creams have not helped. It is not caused by a vitamin deficiency.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

Myths about deaf still exist

Deaf people are not intelligent. Deaf people cannot drive. All deaf people use hearing aids and can lip read. Deaf people always have deaf children.

These are just a few of the commonly held misconceptions hearing people hold concerning the hearing-impaired.

Generally the public is becoming more aware and accepting of the handicapped, said Dr. Ann Liebert, assistant professor of communication pathology at Texas Christian University. However, more education is needed to dispell some of the myths.

"Attitudes are changing, but the misconception that the deaf are not capable intellectually still exists," Lieberth said. "You and I developed our language using our ears, and nothing is as good as our ears at helping us develop language. Because deaf people have sign systems which are not the same as hearing, they have some basic problems in language."

Although most individuals classified as deaf are not totally without hearing, Lieberth said putting on a hearing aid is not the same as putting on glasses. Not all hearing loss conditions can be corrected.

In addition, many of the deaf cannot read lips.

"At best, only 20 percent of what we say is speech readable," the TCU hearing expert noted. "Take the sounds K and H, for example. They're both made in the back of the mouth, so who can say if the word is cat or hat if you can't hear it."

"The true key to happiness is to labor for the happiness of others."

Social Security

SSNs FOR KIDS AND OTHER DEPENDENTS
By Jim Talbot
Social Security Manager in Amarillo

Soon over 100 million taxpayers will file tax returns for calendar year 1987. "Those who list a dependent age 5 or older will be required to show a Social Security number for that dependent," Jim Talbot, Social Security Manager in Amarillo, said. This is a requirement of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

About two-thirds of all children already have a Social Security number, so they will not have to obtain another one. But parents whose children are among the one-third without Social Security numbers should apply for a number for any child age 5 or older. Adults who are listed as dependents on tax returns also must have Social Security numbers, if they don't already.

"It would be wise to obtain a Social Security number for a dependent this year," Jim said. "If people wait until next year, Social Security offices may be very busy and there could be delays in issuing numbers."

Parents can apply for numbers for their children by mail or phone at any Social Security office. If a dependent is 18 or older, he or she must apply in person.

Evidence of the dependent's date of birth, U.S. citizenship or lawful alien status, and identity is required. A public birth record established before age 5 is generally sufficient to prove age and U.S. citizenship.

School, medical, day care, and certain other records can be used for identity.

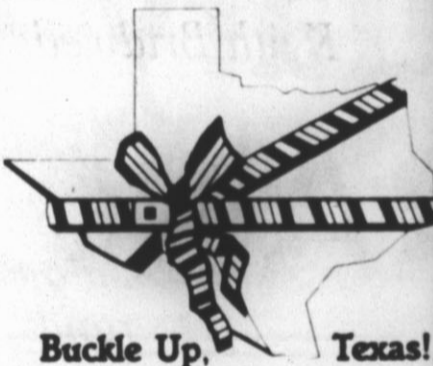

"Young people who obtain a Social Security number now," Jim said, "will be prepared to enter the work force later." Nearly everyone needs a Social Security number sooner or later because most work is covered by Social Security.

For more information about applying for a Social Security number, call 1-900-410-INFO. There is an 85-cent charge for this call.

Tips to quit smoking without gain

At the end of December many of us think about making resolutions for a healthier and happier new year. We think how much better we'd feel if we lost weight, quit smoking, or exercised. Weight gain often occurs when a person quits smoking.

"But, pound for pound, you're better off giving up cigarettes," according to Michael H. Crawford, M.D., President of the Texas Affiliate of the American Heart Association.

"Putting on pounds need not be a consequence of putting down cigarettes," Crawford said. By looking at the reasons that lead to weight gain, you can develop action plans to avoid an expanded waistline.

Reason 1: Increased appetite—When you quit smoking, you may experience an increase in appetite and food consumption. Choose foods that require work to eat. Since you no longer smoke after dinner, you may decide to have an extra helping, or a dessert. Suggested counteractions: cut food into smaller pieces to extend dinner time; eat more slowly so that you are not the first person finished; and get up from the table immediately after eating. Also, you can save dessert for later; substitute low-calorie treats for rich desserts; and brush your teeth as a signal that eating has stopped.

Reason 2: Oral craving—You are accustomed to having a cigarette in your mouth; food may become a replacement. Counteractions: Carry sugarless gum or mints. Occupy your hands with activities other than nibbling, such as puzzles, gardening or home repairs.

Reason 3: Munching—Associated with the oral craving is the onset of the "munchies." You put food, rather than a cigarette, in your mouth. Counteractions: keep a supply of raw vegetables, crackers, unbuttered popcorn or dry cereal on hand, but watch your intake. Be conscious of when and where you snack; keep food out of sight. Delay the snack time. Save a portion of your meal and use it as a snack.

Reason 4: Social situations—You may find yourself in social situations where you ordinarily would have smoked, or where friends are smoking. Counteractions: avoid these situations when you first quit smoking. Substitute a walk for a coffee break. Try to break the pattern where food or drink precedes or accompanies smoking.

Easier said than done? Increased consciousness of why you want to eat can help break the unconscious patterns which the "smoking you" established.

"Picture a complete new image of yourself," Crawford suggests. "You can be smoke-free and maintain your weight."

For more information, contact your local American Heart Association, listed in the white pages of your phone book.

BRANDED Women

By Sandy Stagner

A LETTER TO SANTA
Dear Santa,

I just thought I'd drop you a letter to let you know about Christmas 1987 at our house.

First of all, I'm happy to report there were no catastrophes, no major ones anyway, during the holidays. The Christmas tree didn't catch fire as I anticipated. If you remember, I have always used an artificial tree but this year John insisted on purchasing a "real" one. The children and I decorated our freshly-cut tree right after Thanksgiving so you can well imagine what the thing looks like now. By the end of three weeks, most of the pine needles were on the floor instead of on the branches. We plan to bury the naked tree this weekend.

After your arrival Christmas Eve, we spent time with my parents and other family members and watched as nieces and nephews ripped into packages. The entire procedure took 30 seconds. On Christmas Day we ventured out into the blizzard to have dinner with my new in-laws. The dinner was excellent, especially since I didn't have to prepare it.

John and I decided it would be fun to reciprocate the dinner invitation and asked his family over the next day for one last holiday meal. It didn't go as planned.

From past experiences, I know I'm not "Susie Homemaker" so I relinquished all kitchen rights to John and tended to setting the table. After a couple of hours, my husband asked me into the kitchen to sample his delicacies including turkey, dressing and all the trimmings.

The turkey was perfect but the dressing left something to be desired. As he put some into my mouth, he casually remarked, "I think it might be a little dry. We'll just tell everyone at dinner not to eat too much of it and we can create a giant hockey puck and play with it in the snow this afternoon."

Next, I took a very small taste of the giblet gravy and tried not to look surprised. "I don't know what happened to the gravy either," he explained. "The color is okay, the texture is perfect but it tastes bland."

I agreed. It did need something. I reasoned that since we had sage dressing why not add five or six tablespoons of sage to the gravy. (Big mistake). Now, it really tasted terrible, so I added salt, pepper, and a dash of something stored in an unmarked container in the cabinet.

It was nasty stuff but it was too late to make more so we just put it in the gravy boat and pretended nothing was wrong. I think out of politeness and not wanting to hurt our feelings, his family ate our meal with smiling faces and occasional nods of approval. (We still have a lot of leftovers that, hopefully, our pets will eat).

The children were not disappointed with your gifts. Andi loved her Bible, doll and clothes and Tim was exceptionally excited about his video games. I should have had more forethought about the games because on Christmas Day, my teenager came in and whined, "Mother, I have yet to get to play with the video games. John won't let go of the controls. Next Christmas, could you get some 'toys' just for him?"

Thank you for the electric throw you know the one, the mini-size electric blanket that you can use anywhere in the house? (John said that he requested this particular gift from you because he was tired of paying $200 a month gas bills. (It seems as though he was a trifle miffed because I kept the thermostat at 85 degrees last month).

Anyway, thank you for a wonderful Christmas.

Until next year,
Sandy Stagner

P.S. I think you and I may have a slight problem for next Christmas. My daughter suggested that a little brother or sister might be fun to have around. I told her to go out and rent one for the day and she'd change her mind!

ALEX SCHMUCKER, WENDY MORRISON

Engagement announced

Wendy Carol Morrison of Lubbock will become the bride of Alex Damian Schmucker, also of Lubbock, on Feb. 12, 1988, at St. Anthony's Catholic Church of Hereford.

Parents of the bride-elect are Danny and Kay Pagett of Hereford and Edwin Morrison of Amarillo. Bob and Vicky Schmucker of 221 Beach are parents of the prospective bridegroom.

Miss Morrison graduated from Hereford High School in 1986 and attended West Texas State University and Amarillo College. She is currently employed at J.C. Penneys of Lubbock.

Schmucker, also a 1986 HHS graduate, is a second-year student at Texas Tech University majoring in mechanical engineering.

Young Homemakers meet for Christmas party Tuesday

Landa Arellano's home was the setting for the Hereford Young Homemakers Christmas meeting Tuesday night. Members exchanged secret pal gifts and had refreshments.

A regular business meeting was called to order by President Dalene Burns. A special thank you to participating merchants for donations for Thanksgiving baskets for the needy were sent by secretary Andi Hudgens. They included Jack 'n' Jill, The Country Store, Save & Gain, Hereford Custom Slaughter, Girl Scout Troop 288 and Brownie Troop 282. Committees were formed for publicity for a seminar on Touch Love which will be co-sponsored by The Chemical People. It is set for 7:30 p.m. Jan. 12 at the Hereford Community Center ballroom. The public is urged to attend.

The next regular meeting will be Jan. 5 with The Chemical People to finalize plans for the seminar.

Anyone needing more information on the Tough Love seminar or on Hereford Young Homemakers may call Dalene Burns at 364-0891 or 364-1374.

Henry Mancini

Composer strikes a common chord

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After 35 years of composing television themes and film scores, Henry Mancini still is striking a common chord in music lovers galore, plucking his inspiration as always from the screen.

"I have to look. It all comes out of there," said the four-time Academy Award and 20-time Grammy winner, waving his hand toward an imaginary screen.

He takes the feeling, not the plot of TV shows, he said. "Newhart" is kind of New Englandy and 'Hotel' is more sophisticated. 'Remington Steele' is more driving."

For motion pictures, it's much the same.

"After it's all finished and they all know where it's going, I look at it in a big theater, usually alone," he said. "I like to see it in a big theater just to get the feeling of the size of it, what I can do."

What Mancini can do, and what he has been doing since the 1950s, is "Moon River" from "Breakfast at Tiffany's," "Days of Wine and Roses," "Dear Heart" and "The Pink Panther" from the movies of the same names, and the music from "10" and "Victor-Victoria" as well as the TV miniseries "The Thorn Birds."

His latest efforts include the score for the new movie version of "The Glass Menagerie," directed by Paul Newman and starring Joanne Woodward, and "Sunset," a yet-to-be-released film featuring James Garner and Bruce Willis. He's also teamed up again with opera great Luciano Pavarotti for an album of Italian tunes entitled "Volare."

The 63-year-old composer, conductor and arranger's prelude to prominence began in 1932 when, at age 8, he received a flute and a piccolo from his father, an Italian immigrant who labored in the steel mills of nearby Aliquippa. The young Mancini began studying the piano at about 13 and although that piqued his interest, his thoughts often strayed outdoors to football.

"My father said, 'You practice, then you go play.' So that's what I did," he recalled.

Mancini enrolled in New York's Juilliard School of Music in 1942, but was drafted soon afterward. Following his discharge in 1945, he was hired as a pianist and arranger for the Glenn Miller band under Tex Beneke. There he met his wife, Ginny O'Connor, a vocalist who sings with him on occasion, as do their three children. Mancini quit the band in 1947 and spent the next few years free-lancing before joining the composing staff of the Universal-International film studios in 1952. He left in 1956 to collaborate with director Blake Edwards on television's "Peter Gunn" and later "Mr. Lucky," both of which won him his first Grammys.

From there it was hit after hit, including his personal favorites, 1965's "The Great Race" and 1967's "Two for the Road" and "Wait Until Dark."

Played in TV role

Arkin relates to character

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Adam Arkin says he can relate to his character in NBC's "A Year in the Life" because he was living some of the same events in his own life.

Arkin plays Jim Eisenberg, a patent attorney who is married to Joe Gardner's youngest daughter in this new series about the lively Gardner household in Seattle. Richard Kiley plays Joe Gardner, the patriarch of the clan, and Jayne Atkinson plays Arkin's wife, Landley.

Those three, along with other members of a large cast, first appeared in the six-hour miniseries last season. It introduced the Gardners and told of a year in their lives, including the death of Kiley's wife, played by Eva Marie Saint, and the birth of Jim and Landley's daughter, Ruthie.

"I felt great kinship with the role because I was going through so many things in my own life that were in sync," Arkin says. "My wife was pregnant with our first child at the time. A lot of the scenes I was auditioning were about the wife expecting, the discomfort of her pregnancy and the anticipation of becoming parents. I think as a joke I said, 'I can do this. I know this role. It's happening to me right now.'"

He and his wife, Linda, also had a daughter.

Arkin says that when he did the miniseries he felt strongly that it would return as a regular series. The baby was born at the end of the second part and in the final chapter they were already in the throes of trying to deal with being new parents.

In a story that began in early December, Landley has invented a remote-control baby walker. It will return if the baby strays. When Jim tries to register the patent he finds someone else has also come up with a similar invention.

"We try to work out a settlement with this gentleman, but we wind up being talked into a partnership," he says. "That means we nearly adopt him. The guy's name is Billy Putzi and he's played by Brian Benben. His girlfriend is named Puppy. He's quite an operator. He's a multimogul, a multimillionaire."

It's the fourth series for Arkin, the son of actor Alan Arkin. His first show was "Busting Loose," which he began 10 years ago when he was just 19. He played a young man setting up his first apartment away from home. He was a schoolteacher during the brief run of "Teachers Only" five years later. "Tough Cookies," in which he was a police partner with Robby Benson, also had a brief run.

Arkin's father made a recent appearance on "A Year in the Life," playing his father, a con man. On "Busting Loose" he played his grandfather.

Arkin began acting professionally while still in high school, such as the 1971 movie "Made For Each Other," with Renee Taylor and Joe Bologna. He was in a short film, "People Soup," which his father wrote and directed. His brother, Matthew, was also in the film, but opted to become a lawyer.

"He decided acting wasn't theatrical enough for him," says Arkin. Another brother, Tony, works with his father and wants to be a director.

"I knew from the time I was 8 or 9 I wanted to be an actor," Arkin says. "We lived in Greenwich Village in New York near a renowned acting school. I went to the children's classes. I went to a lot of auditions. Nobody told me to get out of the business so I kept going."

He was also in such movies as "Baby Blue Marine" and "Under the Rainbow" and made dozens of guest appearances on episodic shows. Most recently, he appeared on NBC's "L.A. Law."

His parents were divorced when he was 5 and at the age of 11 he asked to live with his father. By then Alan Arkin had remarried writer-actress Barbara Dana.

Jillian's battle with cancer to air

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ann Jillian, who plays herself in a new NBC movie about her battle with cancer, says it was hard to find a producer who would tell it like it was.

"The Ann Jillian Story," which will be televised Monday, tells of her courtship by a Chicago police sergeant named Andy Murcia, their love and marriage and the cancer that forced the removal of both of her breasts.

The cancer couldn't keep her down. Eleven days after her double mastectomy, she was back on a movie sound stage finishing a musical version of "Alice in Wonderland."

"For a time I thought we would never get the movie made," says Jillian. "I'm happy to say it's done and it's very close to the way we wanted it done. We kept our integrity."

She and her husband, who recently gave up his duties as her manager, went through three producers and numerous rewrites of the script before finding a production team willing to tell the story as it really happened.

They had to constantly fight attempts by the producers to inject conflict between Jillian and her husband into the story. She refused to have her husband painted as a bad guy who turned away from his wife at a time when she needed him the most.

"The truth is he was with me every step of the way, loving me, supporting me and helping me get through the crisis," she says.

Tony Lo Bianco plays Murcia and Viveca Lindfors portrays Jillian's mother. (Jillian's parents, Joseph and Margaret Nauseda, fled from Lithuania, and at one point barely escaped Soviet machine gun fire.)

Corey Allen directed from a screenplay by Audrey Davis Levin, and the two producers whose view of the story matched Jillian's were Andrea Baynes and Peter Thompson.

The movie was filmed in Toronto, which stood in for Chicago, New York and California. Once, they shed their parkas and did a beach scene.

"We had a great time," Jillian says. "How often do you get to go back over your life and the good times and the joy? People aren't going to tune in and get bummed out for two hours. Our purpose is to restore hope and to entertain, then to inform and inspire."

"This isn't an 'illness of the month' film," she says. "You'll never see four musical production numbers in an 'illness of the month' film. I sing 'Until the Real Thing Comes Along,' one of the songs I sang in Chicago when I met Andy."

Old houses are new thing

If only Eileen Gray were working today, the sad and unfulfilled life of this design genius might be so different.

What apartment dweller today, cramped for space, could resist the reversible-top dining table she designed in the 1930s, that easily converts to a low occasional table?

Tables on wheels, a chair that folds and can also be used as a step ladder, portable closets, cabinets with pivoting drawers for easy access, lighting fixtures that minimize glare and are angled to direct light where it is needed and houses with extra storage in the ceiling are all desirable innovations for today's living that Gray thought up in the 1920s and '30s.

Yet, when she offered these ideas to the world, they were largely ignored and her contributions have remained in obscurity.

This despite the fact that many of her design ideas predate similar ones.

In "Eileen Gray: Architect-Designer" (Abrams), biographer Peter Adam points out that Gray suffered from severe self-doubt which crippled her ability to bring projects to a successful conclusion.

The writer, who befriended Gray during the last two decades of her life, added that although she died in semi-obscurity in 1976 at age 98, her name has finally begun to come to prominence. She is known for her Art Deco lacquer furniture made in the teens and 1920s and her later inventive modern furniture designs.

According to Adam, besides the content of her ideas, Gray is fascinating today because her work bridged two worlds: the luxury and richness of the past in the lacquer furniture and accessories, and the concerns of the present with function, multiple use and mass production in her later furniture.

She taught herself to be an architect in middle age, egged on by her friend, the architecture critic and writer, Jean Badovici. She created only a few houses, the most famous in collaboration with Badovici. Yet her ideas on architecture (many of them unused) remain to be considered and perhaps employed by others.

As a designer, Gray's importance is likely to be primarily as an originator of new ideas, since only a few examples of her work were actually produced.

Adam said he had written the book to set the record straight about Gray's accomplishments and ideas.

After some renown in the 1920s and 1930s, she was forgotten and lived as almost a recluse until receiving limited recognition at the end of her life. Probably, he said, she would not even have approved of his book, since she was painfully shy.

Yet, he added, Gray was treated badly, often denied credit for her work and patronized as an amateur.

His work offers a view of an indomitable woman who continued to work, even though her efforts were rarely, if ever, taken seriously. He also touches on the qualities of self-doubt that crippled her effectiveness.

Gray, who was trained as an artist in London and later went to art school in Paris, was in many ways a forerunner of today's all-round artist-craftsman who designs and makes decorative objects. In a career that spanned the years from about 1913 to her death in 1976, she designed and made furniture and accessories such as rugs and lamps and screens. She also was an interior designer. For part of the time, she owned and ran Jean Desert, a small Parisian custom shop for the design and production of home furnishings.

Contemporary interest in her work first surfaced in 1972 when the Royal Institute of British Architects presented an exhibition of her furniture and architectural drawings.

Then, in 1975, an exhibition by the Architectural League of New York spread her reputation to American architects and designers. Nevertheless, Adam said "when we buried her in 1976 there were only three people at the funeral."

After her death, an exhibition organized by J. Stewart Johnson, curator of design at the Museum of Modern Art, was shown at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London in 1979 and in 1980 at the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

In the 1970s, her early lacquer pieces began to bring high prices at auction and a coterie of collectors of her work was formed. In 1972, for example, a lacquer screen dating from 1913 sold at auction in Paris for $44,370, much to Gray's astonishment. It set an auction record for an Art Deco work.

Now Gray's reputation is growing. Her furniture designs are as fresh today as they were in the '20s and '30s, said Adam.

With growing knowledge of Gray's work has come some demand for her furniture. Interested individuals can purchase authorized copies of some furniture and rugs through designers and architects at Stendig Inc. of New York. In addition, copies of her best-known piece, a small round glass and chrome table that moves up and down, are sold in contemporary furniture stores around the country.

● This two-story design with Gambrel roof is reminiscent of the historic home of Robert Nicolson, Williamsburg tailor and merchant. He built his house around 1751. Our updated floor plans include a large rear family room with raised-hearth fireplace and a large front living room with fireplace. A convenience kitchen offers pass-thru to an informal eating area off the family room. The house includes a formal dining room, as well. Upstairs are four bedrooms, including a master suite.

Color choice is important

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

As a member of the interior forecast committee for the Color Association of the United States, Barbara Schirmeister helped decide more than two years ago what colors you will be painting your walls, hanging at your windows and choosing for bathroom tile this year.

The committee issues color guidelines used by manufacturers to select colors for future home furnishings products. Millions of dollars ride on these forecasts, since it can cost several million to change a color in a product line.

"It's not a matter of newness for newness' sake," Schirmeister says. "When you forecast a color, it has to be based on sound reasoning: what are the socioeconomic conditions, the political climate, the fashion trends here and abroad?"

Information comes from unlikely sources. A grape leaf she found in the Caribbean, a plastic bracelet from a dime store in Paris and a hank of yarn all have figured in her predictions.

The international color currents move quickly these days, Schirmeister says. For example, last fall she brought home to New York four pairs of purple shoes from Milan, all in different hues.

"More significant than the hues themselves was the way purple was used — as a neutral," Schirmeister says. "This was an indication to me this color family would be important. That was less than a year ago and already it is being reflected in American home furnishings.

"Watch heliotrope. I think it may be surprisingly popular, also red-violet." She says colors she finds in the fashion capitals of the world often prove to have special significance. But when you make color predictions everything goes into the pot, including colors from exotic locales such as Hong Kong. Even the influence of major museum exhibitions plays a role. "The Metropolitan Museum's show last year of the decorative objects of India, which emphasized brilliant hues, created a tremendous interest in those wonderful colors which became part of our color trends," she says.

The emergence of the yellow palette a few years ago also was informative to someone who could read the signs. To Schirmeister, it meant corporations were entering a period of strength since "yellow is the color of optimism." Today, she says "patriotism is dominant and a related romanticism and traditionalism have returned." This is being reflected in the marketplace by success for products in traditional colors. "The consumer of 1988 will be looking for elegance and luxury and colors that convey these attributes."

Success at the cash register is what keeps color forecasters like Schirmeister in business. Their color advice has helped reclaim lackluster performance in sales.

For example, when Ceramica San Lorenzo, a large tile company in Argentina, first introduced its tiles in the American market, there was little interest. After the company recolored its line to blend with bath fixtures popular in the United States, sales picked up, a company representative says.

Sales aside, Schirmeister says: "We know color has a profound influence on physical and emotional well-being, even though we do not know precisely what the effects are. Exposure to every hue in the spectrum is essential for mental health. If you have a deprivation of any of the spectrum, it can cause serious psychological harm."

The requirement for variety is one reason monochromatic color schemes are not comfortable over the long-term.

"An all-white environment is physically and mentally damaging, if one were locked up in it and couldn't look out," Schirmeister says

Statements

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Bank customers who'd rather not wait until the end of the month for their account statements now have another alternative — a visit to their local automated teller machines (ATM). The newest ATM's from NCR Corp. have added more services to their repertoire. In addition to providing 24-hour access to funds, these machines can now print out up-to-date account statements at any time as well as respond to inquiries about bank services, including loans, savings, account transfers and mutual fund investing.

strong probability that it will come out all right.

Q — Our coffee table has a lacquered finish. Recently, I noticed some very fine scratches on the table top. They are so fine they can only be seen in a certain light. I have no idea how they got there. Is there any way to remove them or must the entire table top be refinished?

A — Tiny scratches in a lacquer finish often can be removed with lacquer thinner. Use a tiny brush or a cotton swab. Dip it lightly in lacquer thinner and slide it over the scratches. Use a slight rubbing motion, don't dab it up and down. Most of the time the thinner will dissolve the lacquer slightly so it flows together again, hiding the scratches.

Q — I have been told scratches can be rubbed out of a varnish finish with lacquer thinner. Is this true?

A — No. Lacquer thinner may act as a remover on varnish. Try rubbing with turpentine or mineral spirits, but it doesn't always work and you may have to retouch the areas or apply a completely new finish.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A low-iron glass that transmits up to 90 percent of total solar energy.

Manufacturer's claim — That this glass lets in 16 percent more sunlight than ordinary glass...that it collects at least 25 percent more BTU's from the sun...that it makes all windows, skylights, residential solar greenhouses and south wall windows and glazings more energy-efficient...that it has a clearer and less green-colored appearance at the edges than conventional glass...that it substantially increases the net energy gain of double and triple pane windows...and that it is the only low-iron, clear glass produced in the United States.

THE PRODUCT — A self-adhesive plastic shelf-drawer liner.

Manufacturer's claim — That this item is wear-resistant, scrubable and extremely durable...that it can be repositioned as necessary...that the self-adhesive eliminates messy backing paper...that it is available in 20 solid colors and modern patterns as well as wood grain finishes...that it can be used to line drawers, cover window sills, dress up cabinet doors and brighten a host of other household areas...and that it is available in 12-inch by 10-foot and 20-inch by 5-foot rolls.

THE PRODUCT — A cordless motor tool.

Manufacturer's claim — That, with no confining cord, the tool is even more useful than ever for repair projects...that there is no sacrifice in its high speed...that it can use all the accessories and attachments available for the 120 volt corded motor tool...that operating speeds are 15,000 and 20,000 RPM...that there is an indicator to show when the tool is charging...that it can be obtained in tool-only or kit forms...and that a keyless chuck is included with it.

THE PRODUCT — A simple way to "mask" windows when painting.

Manufacturer's claim — That this method calls for the application of a light film of a glass mask to the glass around the entire edge of the window...that the mask is allowed to dry for 5 to 10 minutes...that the window trim is then painted...that, after the paint has dried, the excess paint is removed with a paint scraper that comes with the kit...and that a single portion of the liquid masker is enough to mask 20 average-sized windows.

THE PRODUCT — A new system for cutting hot water heating costs.

Manufacturer's claim — That the hot water heater uses only one-fifth the energy required by ordinary boilers...that a heat exchanger dissipates heat quickly, turning cold water into hot almost instantly...that it permits the washing machine, dishwasher and shower to be used all at the same time...and that the system can be installed any place

North, hearings top stories for 1987

The Iran-Contra hearings, which shook an administration and — briefly — made Oliver North a household name, ranked as the top news story of 1987 in a year-end poll of Associated Press member newspaper editors and broadcasters.

The year brought news as diverse as a summit conference, terrible airplane crashes, troubles in the Persian Gulf, scandals in politics and TV evangelism, two futile efforts to fill a Supreme Court vacancy, a stock market crash and the rescue of a little girl from an abandoned well.

The stock market crash came in a close second to the Iran-Contra hearings in the voting on the year's top 10 stories.

Ballots were returned by 464 Associated Press newspaper editors and broadcasters who ranked the year's headline events from one through 10. A first-place vote counted 10 points, a 10th-place vote one point.

The Iran-Contra hearings received 3,573 points; the stock market crash 3,500.

The hearings ended with Lt. Col. North a momentary hero, and the man who may have masterminded the operation, CIA Director William Casey, dead.

The sessions took most of the summer and received testimony from 500 witnesses, among them Adm. John Poindexter, the former national security adviser, and Secretary of State George Shultz, who complained that North and Poindexter had deliberately kept him in the dark.

North, who was fired from the National Security Council for his role, admitted he had lied to Congress and shredded documents. He lectured the members of Congress on the morality of his actions. His former secretary, Fawn Hall, told the committees that there were times when one must "go above the written law," but then retracted the statement.

In their final report on the affair, two congressional committees concluded that Reagan had failed in his constitutional duty to faithfully execute the law. The president let it be known he felt personally wounded by the criticism of his leadership.

At year's end, grand juries were still investigating, and criminal indictments were possible.

The $500 billion market collapse of Black Monday, Oct. 19, the worst market panic of modern times, seemed to catch even Wall Street experts by surprise. In retrospect, analysts noted the bull market had been slipping since it peaked in late August. Stocks prices, in fact, began falling sharply in the week preceding the crash when the government reported the nation's trade deficit had worsened, triggering worries about inflation and the dollar.

The nation was stunned, however, when Black Monday's 508-point crash eclipsed the crash of 1929, which ushered in the Great Depression. In the month of October the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 602.75 points and slid 159.98 more in November. By late December the Dow had recovered more than 200 points from its October low, but still was 500 under the year's high. The consensus of economists, however, was that no major recession was in sight.

The third story on the top-10 list, with 2,929 points, was the three-day summit meeting of Reagan and Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in December.

The leaders of the two superpowers signed a treaty to ban medium-range nuclear missiles and proclaimed it a historic turning point. The two shared trumpet fanfares, artillery salutes and champagne toasts, and wound up calling each other "Ron" and "Mikhail." Most liberals praised the treaty; many of the president's fellow conservatives denounced it.

Fourth, with 1,870 points, was the phase in Persian Gulf violence that began with the reflagging of Kuwaiti oil tankers so they could travel under U.S. Navy escort.

Fifth, with 1,855 points, was the drawn-out and acrimonious effort by President Reagan to appoint a replacement for retiring Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell.

Sixth, with 1794 points, was the story that broke in March with the disclosure that TV evangelist Jim Bakker engaged in a motel room tryst back in 1980 with a church secretary, Jessica Hahn, then 21, and allegedly paid her to keep the affair quiet.

In seventh place, 1,706 points, were two political debacles. Ex-Sen. Gary Hart and another candidate, Sen. Joseph Biden, withdrew from the race for the Democratic nomination. In December, Hart re-entered the race.

Eighth, 1,255 points, was the spread of the AIDS virus.

Ninth, 1,185 points, were airplane crashes in Detroit, killing 156 people, and Denver, killing 28 of the 82 on board, both on takeoff.

(Two other disasters, the crash of a Pacific Southwest Airlines plane in California, in which 43 people died, and the sinking of a Philippine passenger ship, with some 1,500 lives lost, occurred after the top-10 ballot was distributed.)

In 10th place, with 874 points, was the story that captured the heart of the nation in October — the rescue of 19-month-old Jessica McClure from an abandoned well in Midland, Tex.

The editors' and broadcasters' ballots were returned in mid-December and so did not include any subsequent news events. These are the second group of 10, with points in parentheses:

11. Peace process involving Nicaragua (543).
12. Pope John Paul II's visit to America (527).
13. The bicentennial celebration of the U.S. Constitution (463).
14. Changes within the communist giants: glasnost in Russia; westernization moves in China (431).
15. Revolt of Cuban inmates at detention centers in Atlanta and Oakdale, La. (409).
16. Surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead loses in Baby M case in New Jersey (203).
17. The earthquake in Los Angeles (188).
18. Shootings by frustrated motorists on California freeways that left five dead (146).
19. New immigration law goes into effect with its amnesty provision (140).
20. The National Football League players' strike (125).

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

This week there is a little of everything for varied reading interest. Voyager by Jeana Yeager and Dick Rutan is one such book.

Dick Rutan grew up racing motorcycles and learning to fly at 15 years of age. He became a fighter jock flying 105 missions over North Vietnam. Jeana Yeager was isolated, shy, centering her early life around horses. She also prepared for the day she would be the first woman in space, a project ultimately abandoned.

Jeana and Dick met each other at an airshow in California. The "wild idea" of a revolutionary aeronautic exploit began to develop, and through grueling efforts, setbacks, successes and struggles they fulfilled their great adventure. On Dec. 23, 48 hours ahead of schedule, Jeana Yeager and Dick Rutan completed the first cycle the globe nonstop flight without refueling.

The plane weighed less than an automobile and carried 1,200 gallons of fuel. This nine-day trip was spent in a 3½ ft. wide by 7 ft. long, unpressurized cockpit. This fantastic story of a classic American against all-odds and achievement is one you won't want to miss.

William F. Buckley, Jr. has a new novel entitled Mongoose R.I.P. It is 1963, Fidel Castro humiliated during the missile crisis, is seeking revenge. President Kennedy and brother Robert have their own plan for dealing with Castro, code named Operation Mongoose. Blackford Oakes, CIA ace agent becomes the point man in the Mongoose plan.

Spymaster Rufus, Anthony Trust, sexy Sally Partridge and "Wild Bill" Hicock, CIA special Operations Bureau are others on the list of characters. As the plot thickens Oakes becomes entangled in a love affair with smart sexy Sally. Oakes also learns of a counterplan that calls for the death of himself and in the end he must decide the fate of millions against one life worth millions. This story of gravity and humor, history and fancy, will be one of great enjoyment.

For the many V.C. Andrews fans Gardens of Shadows is now available. Garden of Shadows begins the story of Malcolm and Olivia Foxworth. Malcolm, young, dashing, and filled with ambition meets Olivia Winfield, a tall stern woman resigned to being an old maid. Suddenly Olivia has a new chance at a happy, fulfilled life.

But shortly after arriving at Foxworth Hall, Malcolm's dark side begins to emerge. Soon Malcolm's father returns, accompanied by a child bride. Malcolm becomes obsessed with the vibrant, pretty, young bride. Four children are born, three boys and one beautiful girl. One child holds the key to the secret that reveals why Malcolm becomes evil.

Bud Shrake, a talented writer from Austin, has written another fast-moving novel entitled Night Never Falls. Main character Harry Sparrow is an American journalist based in London during the 1950's. Harry's three goals in life are: to get the story, to get into a good game of golf, and to get the Pulitzer. Sparrow is brave, attractive and dangerous to men of the wrong sort.

The only war is out of town so Sparrow arranges to be flown into the last battle of the French in Vietnam. On the plane Harry meets the intriguing French Red Cross nurse, and the dangerous Legionnaire with a past. This is said to be a "a novel that moves with the pace of a bullet and the grace of a first-rate writer." Come see for yourself.

I hope 1988 is a happy and successful year for you all.

Preventable infection still causes death

Tetanus is 100 percent preventable, yet 45 Texans between 1982 and 1986 reportedly acquired this dangerous, and often times deadly, infection, says the Texas Medical Association.

Tetanus, also known as lockjaw, is caused by certain bacteria that live in the soil and enter your body through a wound. Outdoor hazards such as nails and thorns cause the type of puncture wound in which tetanus most commonly thrives. The infection causes your muscles to become stiff and to have extremely painful spasms. Often times the patient suffocates from muscle spasms in the throat and chest. About 40 percent of all tetanus cases result in death.

An immunization can protect you from the bacteria, but one immunization during childhood does not protect you for life, reminds the TMA. Infants are immunized in their first year, and everyone should have a booster shot every 10 years. According to a study by the Centers for Disease Control, more than 50 percent of people age 60 and older are not protected against tetanus.

If you do get a puncture wound or a deep ragged wound and you are not sure if you have been immunized for tetanus, clean the wound and see your doctor immediately.

Talk to your doctor about this and other immunizations you and your family may need. And be sure to keep your vaccinations up to date.

Severe leg cramps could be symptoms of arterial disease

Each year, more than 150,000 Americans suffer from severe leg cramps and the disease that causes them, peripheral arterial disease (PAD), according to the Texas Medical Association.

PAD is a type of atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries. The painful leg cramps are caused by a buildup of cholesterol in the leg's arteries that restricts blood flow to the muscle. People most at risk are men over age 65.

Patients who suffer from PAD find the simplest movement, even walking, painful. For example, a PAD sufferer may walk just a short distance before the crippling leg cramps begin. After resting briefly, walking can be continued but usually is interrupted by pain after walking the same distance.

Early diagnosis of PAD can signal a risk of heart attack or stroke. As the disease progresses, pain is more frequent, during both exercise and rest.

Some patients who suffer from severe cases of PAD can be helped by an operation in which blood flow is redirected around blocked arteries or through an artificial blood vessel. However, most patients do not need surgery because extra blood vessels form naturally in the leg. Several drugs have been tested to try to improve blood flow to the legs, but none have proven effective.

Smoking is the single worst factor in aggravating the symptoms of PAD. TMA advises PAD patients to stop smoking, keep their blood pressure under control, and maintain their ideal weight. Patients also should begin an exercise program prescribed by their physician to improve blood flow and muscle efficiency. Sufferers from PAD should have their cholesterol levels tested and eliminate cholesterol and animal fats from their diet.

TRUE ARISTOCRACY OF LIFE

"Service is the true aristocracy of life. Men must vindicate their faith by service. Great believers always have been great doers in every realm. It is not enough to have gifts, but how to apply them. We are under inexorable bonds to serve humanity. We must play neither the part of a miser nor a spendthrift, but the life of a trustee, accepting it as part of the dowry with which we are endowed by our Great Maker."

—George W. Truett, Dallas Morning News, Nov. 30, 1933.

WE HELP... WHEN HELP IS MOST NEEDED

The day a member of your family dies is the day you will need help of a special kind. Regardless of your grief there are a hundred details to face and decisions to make.

Suddenly you have many questions about such things as which funeral director to call, the cost of funeral services, which cemetery you should use. More questions about the time and place of services, flowers, pallbearers, newspaper notices, insurance. Anything more? Yes, much more.

It's the day when a funeral director from Rix can give you the answers you must have: Answers based on experience patiently repeated as many times as you need to hear them to make wise decisions. You will find that you may arrange all details at our office or in the privacy of your home.

When death comes to your family, as it does to every family, or when you know death is imminent, call us for any information you need. This creates no obligation. We will give you answers to your questions, and you may make your decisions based on facts.

We invite your call before the need arises when you can examine the facts calmly and make unemotional decisions.

Remember, we want to help you.
