Holiday celebration set Sunday evening

Entertainment, free watermelon, food booths, fireworks display on program

What could be more American than watermelon, singers on the back of a flatbed and an old-fashioned fireworks display?

Well all these things will be on tap today as Hereford celebrates the United States' 217th birthday today at Veterans Park.

This year's Fourth of July Celebration, sponsored by Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, will get underway at 7 p.m.

Master of ceremonies County Judge Tom Simons will introduce the singers, who are local residents who have volunteered to share their musical talents with the community.

Local and area residents are invited to bring picnic lunches to the park and enjoy the evening, climaxed by a giant fireworks display beginning about 9:30 to 9:45 p.m.

Or, if you prefer, several non-profit groups will be on hand, selling a variety of food items, including Mexican delicacies, soft drinks and snacks.

In addition to the musical entertainment, free watermelon will be provided to everyone in attendance. Anipro Corporation of Hereford is providing the watermelons. Wes Klett, chairman of the July 4th Celebration committee, is chief executive officer of Anipro.

Entrance to the celebration in Veterans Park will be only at the north end of Veterans Park Road. This entry is located on New York Street, near the American Legion building. Victory Drive, also called Rabbit Road, will be blocked off Sunday near the south entrance of Veterans Park.

The City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County are helping fund the celebration, while about half of the expenses will come from private donations. The chamber urges interested citizens to mail their donations to: July 4th Celebration, Box 192, Hereford.

The following is a schedule of performers and non-profit groups and their wares. The schedule is subject to change without notice and performers and non-profit organizations participating may change before the program begins.

'Little Gus' returns to Texas after 50-year stay in Greece

Dallis here with daughter, Yiota Malouf

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

For more than 50 years, Gus Dallis guarded his American citizenship with the idea that some day he would return to the United States from Greece.

Three weeks ago he did.

Now, he's at the Hereford home of his daughter and her family, Yiota and George Malouf, and marveling each day at changes that have occurred since he left West Texas in 1937.

Dallis first came to the United States in 1920, at the age of 13, arriving at Ellis Island in New York with no English and little understanding of what was about to happen to him.

"They were about to send him back to Greece because he didn't have any papers telling who would be responsible for him," his daughter said.

An uncle in Temple who had agreed to sponsor him finally was contacted and confirmed the arrangement in the nick of time.

Dallis traveled by train to Texas and lived in Temple, moved to Georgetown with his uncle, Gus Kallas, then to Lubbock.

Since he and his uncle shared the same given name, friends dubbed him "Little Gus" and his uncle "Big Gus."

He learned English in school, studied for and received his U.S. citizenship in 1925 and was graduated from Lubbock High School in 1928.

His uncle was determined that the nephew make the most of his educational opportunities and Dallis enrolled in Texas Technological College.

"I had gone to college two or three years when I went to my uncle and told him I didn't need all that for the cafe business," Dallis recalled.

Big Gus disagreed. The nephew returned to his classes and received his degree in 1932.

"Tech didn't have but 800 students and there were only 18,000 people in Lubbock," Dallis said.

In that environment, Dallis got to know quite well some men who in later years would have some impact on their hometowns, the state and the nation.

Some of the names should be familiar to this day. George Mahon, longtime U.S. Congressman from Lubbock. Preston Smith, former governor of Texas. Charles Guy, Lubbock newspaper publisher. Malouf Abraham, Canadian businessman and philanthropist. Bill Collins, Lubbock retail business leader.

Several of the men have died in the years since Dallis returned to Greece but the remaining members of the group will get together this summer to welcome Little Gus back to Texas.

A year after his graduation from Texas Tech, Dallis went to Greece for a visit but stayed only a year. He was in Lubbock again from 1934 until 1937, working in the restaurant business with his uncle.

"We had the Tech Cafe, then had a coffee shop in the old Lubbock Hotel," he said.

When he returned to Greece in 1937, he married and had full intentions of coming back to the U.S., and Texas.

Clinton announces suspension of U.S. nuclear weapons testing

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton today announced a suspension of nuclear weapons testing and called on the world's other nuclear powers to do the same.

In remarks taped for his weekly radio address, Clinton said the United States would not test its nuclear warheads at least until Oct. 1, 1994 - as long as other nuclear powers don't either.

"If these nations join us in observing this moratorium, we will be in the strongest possible position to negotiate a comprehensive test ban and to discourage other nations from developing their own nuclear arsenals," Clinton said.

Clinton noted that during his election campaign he pledged a "wholehearted commitment" to achieving a ban on nuclear testing worldwide.

He stopped short of saying he would now seek such a ban, although Russian President Boris Yeltsin said Thursday that he had spoken with Clinton by phone and that the president had promised to work with Russia for a Comprehensive Test Ban treaty.

The issue is expected to come up in Clinton's talks with Yeltsin at next week's economic summit in Tokyo.

An administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Clinton was prepared to send envoys to Britain, France, China and Russia to start discussions about negotiations on a test-ban treaty. All five nuclear powers have been observing a testing moratorium since last year.

"If, however, this moratorium is broken by another nation," Clinton warned, "I will direct the Department of Energy to prepare to conduct additional tests" and seek approval from Congress.

Clinton directed the Energy Department to maintain its capability to conduct nuclear tests, saying that at the same time his administration would find ways to ensure the safety of the nuclear arsenal without actual nuclear detonations once a test ban goes into effect.

That would entail computer simulations and explosions of non-nuclear materials, experts say.

Clinton noted that when Congress imposed a nine-month moratorium on testing last October, it also allowed for 15 nuclear tests to be conducted until a comprehensive ban was achieved.

Clinton said the administration had originally considered conducting more tests until 1996. But "after a thorough review, my administration has determined that the nuclear weapons in the United States arsenal are safe and reliable."

He also said that renewed testing now, after a nine-month suspension, would undercut U.S. efforts to stop the spread of nuclear weapons and would prompt other nuclear powers to resume testing, too.

The president will decide next year whether to extend the moratorium further, depending on the willingness of the world's other four nuclear powers to progress toward a test-ban treaty, according to a Pentagon memo obtained Friday.

Clinton's decision comes after months of fiery debates within the administration among advocates and opponents of testing. Growing opposition to testing from Congress finally tipped the balance.

Testing foes argued that renewed testing would make it hard for the United States to achieve its goal of renewing the worldwide Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, which comes up for review by its 157 signatories in January 1995.

Sen. Bivins here Tuesday to host town hall meeting

With the 73rd Legislative Session now over and no special sessions called, State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, has announced that he will hold a special Senate District 31 town hall meeting here this week.

Bivins will meet with constituents at 4 p.m. Tuesday, July 6, in the east banquet room of the Hereford Community Center.

"The 73rd Legislative Session was the most productive I've seen since being in office. We in the Crown of Texas fared better than we have in years, with legislation and appropriations. At the same time, Texas lived within its means, not passing a tax bill for the first time in four biennia," Bivins said.

As a member of the Senate Finance and Senate Education committees, Bivins worked throughout the session on public education finance and cutting state spending. He was appointed to the Conference Committee on the Appropriations Bill.

"We were able to bring a lot of those state dollars to the Panhandle with funding for our higher education institutions and even a pharmacy school in conjunction with Texas Tech (University). I'm excited to point out to constituents how lucky we are to have West Texans holding key positions in the legislature, and a Panhandle delegation that works together as a team," Bivins said.

During the term, Bivins was instrumental in passing legislation to reform trucking regulations in Texas, reform products liability laws, implement Caller ID and revise the state's Penal Code.

TAAS tests to be given

The summer administration of the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test will be conducted this month for high school students. The writing portion will be given on July 13, the reading part on July 14 and the math section on July 15. Students who were in the 10th, 11th or 12th grade this past spring are eligible to take any section of the exit level test not yet mastered. Call the high school, 363-7620, for more information.

Poor school districts file appeal with supreme court

AUSTIN (AP) - Property-poor school districts sought to change the new education finance law before school opens by appealing to the Texas Supreme Court Friday for help. Attorneys for poor districts seek to overrule State District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin, who denied them a June hearing on the new law. The measure, which is to go into effect this fall, gives the state's richest school districts several options for sharing some wealth with poorer ones.

The attorneys say the new law has as many problems as the current law, which has been ruled unconstitutional. They are seeking a court hearing to express their opposition and require a new way of distributing state education aid.

"If this plan goes into effect, hundreds of schools are going to have to slice their budgets while the richer schools do just fine," said Buck Wood, who is representing 87 poor districts. "Some school districts are losing 5, 6 and 10 percent of their entire budget."

DALLIS---

He and his wife started their family end then the terror that was World War II settled over Greece.

"When the Nazis came into Greece, I had to stay out of their way, because I was an American citizen," said Dallis. The German occupation "destroyed everything," he added.

Dallis and his family lived in a village in the Peloponnese and fled into the mountains of the peninsula to escape the occupation forces.

Even as the war ended, another threat arose, this in the form of Communist guerrillas who attempted to gain control of Greece.

Dallis acknowledged that the United States foreign policy of the day probably was responsible for keeping Greece out of the hands of the Communists.

After the war, Dallis worked with United Nations relief and later with the American mission in Greece. His fluency in English and Greek were invaluable to relief workers as well as citizens of the area.

"He became the translator for the entire area," said Yiota Malouf.

The daughter followed in his footsteps when it came time to get her college education -- she came to Lubbock to enroll at Texas Tech and almost immediately met some people who had known her father.

She recalls vividly a conversation with a man who told her he had a good friend at Tech who was from Greece. "We called him Little Gus," the man said.

Both she and the new acquaintance had a good laugh when she told him Little Gus was her father.

She met George Malouf at Tech and they were married. They tried on more than one occasion to persuade her parents to come to the U.S.

"My mother was in poor health, though, so they never could come, even to visit," she explained. Last year, Mrs. Dallis died. Gently, the Maloufs again campaigned for Dallis to move back to Texas.

"In May, we talked to him and he said, 'I think I'm ready' so I went to Greece immediately," said Mrs. Malouf.

George Malouf said he could hardly believe his ears when his wife called from Greece to tell him when she and Dallis would fly to New York. "We've waited so long for this," said Malouf.

The Maloufs have made one brief trip to Lubbock for Dallis to see his former hometown. They attended the consecration of St. Andrew's Greek Orthodox Church where John Kallas, the son of Gus Kallas, is president of the congregation.

Over the July 4th holiday, they planned to re-visit with a son and his family. Another daughter still lives in Greece.

Little Gus Dallis is re-adjusting to American life, enjoying the news programs on television and working on a special project, a book of proverbs which he says will be in both Greek and English.

Citizenship by protecting his U.S. citizenship by not voting in Greece, Dallis took care to maintain his English language skills. His oral language is excellent and, his son-in-law said, he could easily teach the language.

"He'll correct all of us," George Malouf laughed.

Somalis ambush UN troops, kill 3

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) - Somali militiamen, repeating tactics they used a month ago with deadly efficiency, ambushed U.N. troops Friday, killing at least three Italian soldiers and wounding 21.

Hospital officials said at least five Somalis were killed and 42 wounded as the U.N. forces counterattacked with tanks and U.S. and Italian helicopter gunships. Four Somali policemen aiding the U.N. soldiers were also wounded, a military spokesman said.

The attack, the bloodiest against U.N. forces since warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid's militia killed 24 Pakistani U.N. troops on June 5, shows that a potential quagmire lies in store for U.N. peacekeepers here.

Despite a U.N. assault on Aidid's headquarters on June 17, his supporters have staged nearly daily attacks on U.N. troops, showing an ability to catch the better-armed forces by surprise and drive them from militia areas.

Friday's six-hour firefight took place in an area that contained the city's main gun market and some refugee camps and homes.

It began after Italian troops finished searching a compound that was suspected of being an illegal weapons cache. After leaving the compound about 8 a.m., they were blocked by several makeshift barricades where Somalis began hurling rocks.

"The rocks turned into small-arms fire, and that turned into machine-gun and rocket-propelled grenades," said the U.N. military spokesman, Maj. David Stockwell.

It appeared to be a well-planned ambush by Aidid's supporters, which mirrored the June 5 attack that began when gunmen ambushed U.N. troops as they were leaving an area after a weapons search.

Snipers perched in nearby buildings kept U.N. troops pinned down Friday. Italian tanks mounted with 90 mm cannons provided ground cover for troops trying to retrieve their dead and wounded.

At one point, two wounded Italians were laid atop a tank and rushed to a military hospital.

Residents of refugee camps caught in the cross-fire gathered their meager belongings and fled as Italian helicopter gunships hovered overhead. Angry Somalis threw rocks at some foreigners' vehicles and forced them away from the area.

American Cobra helicopter gunships were called in about noon and fired 20 mm cannons at crowds of gunmen. The body of one Somali civilian lay on the street, along with several wounded Somalis.

Stockwell said the ambush was a desperate move by a losing force.

The U.N. envoy, retired Adm. Jonathan Howe, had said he hoped the June 17 reprisal raid against Aidid - launched because of the ambushes against Pakistani troops - would deter further attacks by his followers.

Howe also has said he wants to resume long-hampered humanitarian work and avoid having too much U.N. manpower focused on capturing Aidid, who is wanted for the June 5 attacks.

Thirty-four U.N. soldiers have died since June 5, twice the total number killed in combat in the five months before the United States handed control of the operation to the United Nations.

Aid package pledged to ease base closings

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton is promising $5 billion to help communities cope with the economic aftershocks of military base closings, including $1 million or more for each town losing a major installation.

The aim is to "open a new and brighter future for the affected workers and their communities," Clinton said, but he added, "I cannot promise that every job will be saved." He said it would be "a great test for our nation" to stand by the communities that have hosted American military bases for decades.

The president unveiled the community assistance program Friday as he approved an independent commission's recommendation that the Pentagon close 129 bases and realign 46 others.

Clinton called the five-year plan "the least we can do for the communities and the people who supported our troops." All of the money would come from previously announced "defense conversion" initiatives or from other areas of the administration's budget request.

The base closings, part of the U.S. effort to reduce military spending in the post-Cold War era, will become final unless vetoed by Congress within 45 working days.

Clinton said the defense cutbacks "will inevitably be traumatic for the host community" despite an aggressive effort to help towns cope.

The assistance program will stress a rapid turnaround of shutdown bases into job-creating ventures, swift cleanup of base environmental problems and assistance tailored to the special needs of each community.

"We want to design programs for each base," said Defense Secretary Les Aspin.

Feds take terrorist sheik into custody

NEW YORK (AP) - Amid fears of violence by his radical Muslim followers, authorities issued an alert to Americans traveling abroad as U.S. immigration officials took Sheik Omar Abel-Rahman into custody.

The blind Egyptian cleric, some of whose followers are accused in the World Trade Center bombing and a foiled plot to bomb buildings and tunnels in Manhattan, surrendered Friday after a 20-hour standoff.

In Egypt, Abel-Rahman's followers had threatened to initiate a bombing campaign if the spiritual leader was taken into custody.

In Washington, the State Department issued a warning of possible adverse reaction in the Islamic world to the sheik's detention, said spokesman Mike McCurry.

Walking through a gauntlet of followers chanting "God is Great!" Abdel-Rahman left a Brooklyn mosque on Friday evening and turned himself over to federal authorities.

As Abdel-Rahman surrendered, a group of Hasidic Jews standing behind police barricades shouted "Go to Hell!" and "Drop dead!" The blind cleric, surrounded by aides, walked slowly across the street and into an immigration service command post.

Escorted by a law enforcement caravan, the sheik arrived about 9:30 p.m. at a federal prison in Otisville, N.Y., about 75 miles northwest of New York City, said a spokesman for the facility, Rex Sprout.

Earlier Friday, the sheik gave a "kind of goodbye speech" to several hundred supporters in which he counseled against violence and proclaimed his innocence, according to a Saudi journalist who observed the half-hour sermon at the Abu Bakr mosque.

The journalist, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the sheik told the congregants, some of whom were sobbing: "I might not stand in front of you again."

"We are not conspiring against America, even though we disagree with American policy," the sheik was quoted as saying. He also urged the Muslims not to clash with the crowd of journalists, police and onlookers outside the mosque, in Brooklyn's ethnically diverse Midwood section.

Focus on Your City

BY BOB JOSSEKAND
Mayor of Hereford

In our last "Focus on Your City," we dealt with why we must do something different about solid waste. This time, we would like to explore the options available and why your City Commission has chosen the option it will use.

First of all, the City has engaged two different solid waste engineering firms at different times to take a look as the problem. From both of these firms has come the same conclusion regarding our final solution.

We are producing anywhere from 25 to 40 tons of solid waste per day based upon a 30-day month, even though we only collect 5 1/2 days per week. The amount varies from season to season depending upon such things as grass clippings, tree limbs, building activity, etc.

The first option, and obviously the cheapest, was to continue to use our existing landfill at a present cost of approximately $51.44 per ton. Since we have no more acreage to develop at our present location, however, it would be impossible to continue to use the facility much more than the two to three years estimated additional life after the EPA Subtitle D regulations become effective.

If we choose to establish a new local landfill after complying with all of the new requirements such as liners, monitoring wells and moisture collecting systems, it has been estimated that our landfill costs would increase to $72.60 per ton. It might make sense to use the existing landfill for the next few years if we could; however, to use it after Oct. 8, 1993, would require that we install those same liners, wells and collecting systems, and that wouldn't make much sense.

The next method would be to haul solid waste that your Commission studied was to build and operate an incinerator. That is, by far, the most sensible way to handle waste in West Texas; but not now, thanks to EPA. Engineers' estimates to construct an incinerator to meet current EPA regs would be $3.4 million. Thereafter, if we were to burn only municipal waste, the estimated cost per ton is $65.14. If we could burn medical waste, the cost per ton comes down rapidly, and this might be something we could consider in the future.

The final option, and the one your Commission has voted to go with, is to haul to a high-volume, approved landfill. We are looking to have the option to haul to either of two landfills which are fairly close--the BF&I landfill at Canyon or the Amarillo landfill. Both have met necessary regulations and would be risk-free for our use.

Engineers have estimated our cost at $62.64 per ton to haul to the Canyon landfill, using our present equipment with some upgrading. In the future we can probably up-grade our equipment further by using different type trucks to reduce the number of trips per week.

I suppose the best thing about the option is that we have not locked ourselves into any permanent position should the rules of the game change. If the landfills get way out of line in their charges, we can always obtain land here and go back to our own landfill. Perhaps in a few years, common sense will again prevail and we can consider the incineration of our solid waste.

Just to put a bottom line on this column: (1) If we haul our waste to Canyon, the cost is estimated at $62.64 per ton using our present equipment; (2) To incinerate, a cost of $65.14 per ton and (3) To build a new landfill near Hereford, the cost is $72.80 per ton. These are estimates only, but we have to assume that they are fairly close.

In future columns, we will explore what things we, the people of Hereford and Deaf Smith County, can do regarding costs of solid waste disposal.

The Chamber and You

BY MIKE CARR
Executive Vice President

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce hopes that everyone has a very safe and enjoyable 4th of July holiday. If you are going to be in Hereford for the Fourth, we would invite you to make plans to attend this year's celebration at Veterans Park on Sunday evening.

This year's activities will kick off a little later, so the celebration will not conflict with church plans. Entertainment will begin at 7 p.m. and a formal program starts at 8 p.m. The big fireworks display, which will be synchronized with patriotic music, will start at approximately 9:45 p.m.

Of course, the annual free watermelon feed will be available to all in attendance throughout the evening. Special thanks to Anipiro of Hereford for sponsoring the watermelon and to County Commissioner Troy Moore for being in charge of the serving and slicing of the melons.

The entire evening promises to be very enjoyable, so bring a picnic basket, blanket and folding chair and join in the Chamber's grand July 4th Celebration!

Donations in any amount to support this endeavor may be mailed to: July 4th Celebration, Box 192, Hereford, TX. 79045.

Mark your calendar for July 6 at 4 p.m. and plan to attend a public meeting with Sen. Teel Bivins. The meeting will be held at the Hereford Community Center's east banquet room and should last approximately one hour. We hope many residents will be there to discuss legislation that will affect our area.

The 1993 Town & Country Jubilee is set for July 25 through Aug. 1 with lots of exciting events and activities scheduled. The biggest day, of course, will be Saturday, July 31, with the Jubilee 10K Run, Jubilee Parade, Jubilee Junction and the Arts and Crafts Bazaar. There will also be lots of class reunions, so hereford will really be busy during this week.

Applications for booths at Jubilee Junction are available at the Chamber, so make plans and sign up as soon as possible. We also want to urge local businesses and organizations to enter this year's Jubilee Parade, which is sponsored by the Whiteface Kiwanis Club. Jerry Koenig will be the chairman. Parade applications are also available at the Chamber office.

This year's theme is "Hereford Means Business," so let's all join together as we move forward in helping to make things happen!

Have a happy, safe, enjoyable July 4th!

NAFTA talks planned next week in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) - U.S., Canadian and Mexican officials will meet here next week to conclude agreements on jobs and the environment, the last obstacles to turning North America into a huge free trade zone, a Mexican official said.

The high-level talks are to resume despite a U.S. judge's order threatening to delay the treaty on the grounds that before Congress approves it, U.S. laws require a study on the treaty's environmental effect.

Commerce Secretary Jaime Serra Puche on Friday announced the fifth round of talks on the North American Free Trade Agreement would be July 8-10.

He said important progress had been made on the side accords to protect American jobs and the environment that the Clinton administration has demanded as requisite to approving NAFTA. Next week's meeting will be to resolve the remaining differences.

Some American labor leaders fear the treaty will result in U.S. companies moving en masse to Mexico, where wages are much lower.

The three countries hope to secure the free trade zone by Jan. 1, 1994.

The pact would unite 360 million people from the Yukon to the Yucatan into one market. Unlike the 12-nation European Community's union treaty, NAFTA does not involve creating a single currency or political entity.

On Thursday, the U.S. Justice Department announced it would appeal a court decision that could delay the proposed trade pact.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

How many kids do you know? Most of us use the word "kids" to refer to any young person who is special to us. The term is used, usually, as a term of affection.

Hal Urban, author of 20 Things I Want My Kids To Know, wrote his book with reference to "kids" of all ages. He stated that he wrote it with four basic reasons in mind: Because he loves kids and doesn't think they have it so easy; because they don't teach "How life works" and "what is essential" in school; because young people need help in discovering how good they can be; and because old-fashioned truth never goes out of style, even with a new generation.

This book is recommended reading for all parents, teachers, grandparents and would even be a good gift to any youth, or kids, that are special to you. Actually, much of what Urban has to say is included in what many teachers strive to teach.

A few of the 20 Things...include Success Is More Than Making Money; Life is Hard...and Not Always Fair; Life is Also Fun and Incredibly Funny; It's O.K. To Fail--Everyone Else Has to Essential #1 Is Being a Good Person. Do include this book in your summer reading list!!!

Best wishes for a speedy recovery to Bob Horton, HJH American history teacher who has had to spend too much of his summer break in the hospital.

Paint up, clean up and fix up work continues on the campus at HJH. Several of our teachers are employed in this work to ready our building for the new year. A pleasant learning area is beneficial to students and teachers being able to do their best.

More "hands on" learning is planned for students. We want our students to do more than simply know the lessons we teach. To know them is one thing, to apply them is another. An ancient Chinese proverb tells us:

I hear...and I forget
I see...and I remember
I do...and I understand

Bootleg resident Hammock attends youth leadership meeting in nation's capitol

GRADY, N.M. -- For Bootleg resident Jennifer Hammock, leaving home for the first time by herself was a big trip -- all the way to the nation's capitol.

Miss Hammock, a senior at Grady

High School and daughter of Bobby and Kathy Hammock of Bootleg, recently traveled to Washington D.C. to participate in the National Young Leaders Conference.

She was one of 350 high school students selected to participate in the annual affair.

During the June 15-20 conference, Hammock and other participants met with key leaders and newsmakers from all three branches of the federal government, the media and the diplomatic corps.

She also participated in a variety of programs designed to teach leadership skills.

Among those was the "If I Were President" role-playing simulation, in which students played the president and cabinet members who must respond to an international crisis.

"Mock Congress on National Service" required participants to act out the roles of U.S. representatives working on a proposed youth service bill.

The students were divided into two leadership groups and caucuses.

Speakers for and against the bill were selected by the caucuses, then amendments and finally the actual bill were voted on the "representatives."

Miss Hammock portrayed a floor manager in the mock House.

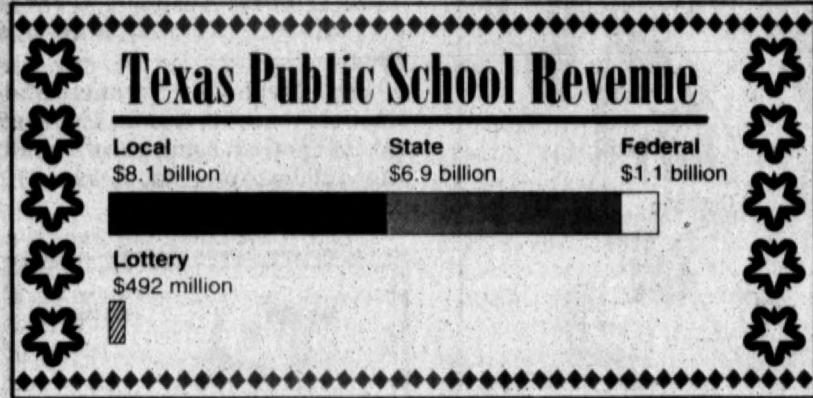

Finally, the students also heard several special speakers, including Attorney General Janet Reno and Helen Thomas of United Press International, who spoke during the National Press Club breakfast.

Miss Hammock is a graduate of Walcott School. At Grady she is a cheerleader, a member of the National Honor Society and works on the annual staff.

She is one of seven members of the senior class for 1993-94.

The Lottery's contribution

Most money raised for Texas' schools comes from local sources, with state and federal support providing the rest -- a total of an estimated $16.1 billion for the 1992-93 school year. In comparison, revenue from the Texas Lottery was estimated to be $492 million for the same period.

Clinton ratings jump, poll says

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton's approval rating is 46 percent, up from 39 percent a week ago, according to a poll released Friday.

However, 47 percent of those surveyed disapprove of Clinton's overall handling of the presidency, according to a USA Today-CNN-Gallup poll.

The poll also found that 56 percent of respondents approved of Clinton's handling of foreign policy, compared with 44 percent in late May.

The survey came just days after Clinton ordered the bombing of Iraqi intelligence headquarters in retaliation for an alleged assassination plot against former President Bush.

Among other findings in the poll: Clinton's approval rating on defense rose from 49 percent in April to 55 percent in the latest survey. Only 35 percent of respondents approve of Clinton's handling of the economy, while 59 percent disapprove.

44 percent support the president's economic plan; 49 percent oppose it.

The nationwide survey of 1,008 adults taken Tuesday had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

Hereford will be having a grand celebration Sunday for the Fourth of July. Hats off to the Chamber of Commerce, its general chairman Wes Klett, co-committee leaders Diane Beavers and Janie Nino, and all who helped plan and put together the program.

The City and County are helping fund the celebration, and the chamber is seeking private donations to pay for about half of the expenses. If you'd like to show support for continuation of the celebration, send a donation to the July 4th Celebration, Box 192.

With our most patriotic observance, July 4, today, here's a little quiz on the American flag that we read in another newspaper. See how well you can do:

1. On what day of the year does the United States of America observe National Flag Day?
2. In what year was the "Stars and Stripes" created?
3. What flag was first to popularize the use of the star as a flag emblem?
4. In what year did the U.S. Congress adopt the Pledge of Allegiance?
5. When was the phrase "Under God" added to the Pledge?
6. Is there a national flag code prescribing the correct manner of displaying and respecting the flag of the United States of America? It is a federal law?
7. Can the U.S. flag be used in a registered trademark?

8. Who can change the design of the Stars and Stripes?
9. What should be done to soiled or worn flags?

Answers: 1. June 14. 2. 1777. 3. American flag. 4. 1942. 5. 1954. 6. Yes; Yes. 7. No. 8. Congress and/or the President (last changed in 1960). 9. Respectfully destroyed by shredding or burning.

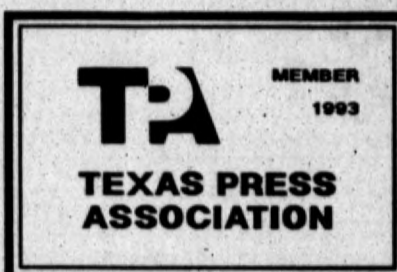

o0o
Here's some more Questions and Answers about flag protocol:

- Q. Can the flag be flown after dark?
A. Customarily the flag is displayed from sunrise to sunset. But if properly illuminated, the flag can be displayed 24 hours a day.
- Q. Should the flag be displayed in bad weather?
A. Only if it is made of all-weather material to prevent it from being ripped or torn.
- Q. Where should the flag be displayed in front of buildings, on speaker's platforms, churches, auditoriums, parades?
A. On the speaker's right or to the right of any other flags or banners.
- Q. Who must authorize the flag to be flown at half staff?
A. There is no prohibition to keep local officials or private citizens from flying the flag at half staff on appropriate occasions at their own opinion. The only time the code prescribes that the flag should be flown at half staff is on Memorial Day until noon.
- Q. If the flag touches the ground, or becomes soiled, must it be destroyed?
A. The intent of the code is to prevent the flag from becoming soiled. If otherwise in good condition, it may be cleaned.

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

Happy Independence Day! Although it did not become official until after a bloody war with England, the United States of America was born on July 4, 1776.

I often wonder if the Founding Fathers expected their Republic to last this long. After all, with this birthday, the nation is now 217 years old. Amazingly enough, the French Revolution took place about the same time, but that government only lasted a short time before it was overthrown in yet another revolution.

Ever wonder why our Revolution succeeded and this Republic has endured more than two centuries? I think a good part of the reason has to be that we have a lot of space out here.

Think about it. Europe was populated and divided into nations centuries before Christopher Columbus, Erik the Red or whoever "discovered" North America.

When the French had their revolution, everyone was made about something and took it out on the upper class.

When the American colonists had their revolution, they not only had some legitimate gripes (state-imposed religion, taxation without representation, oppressive government, etc.), they also had plenty of space to spread out.

That way, when tensions started rising, someone could just pack up and go off to explore the Wild, Wild West. You couldn't do that in Europe, because everyone had already explored everything. So, nowadays, everyone has explored just about all there is left to explore in America and we are now cramming into large cities, large apartment buildings, large offices and large mass transit systems.

Then, when someone gets tense, they kill someone or demonstrate against the government instead of running off to explore something. Maybe that is one thing we could do to calm things down around here. First, loosen up the government. Take away about 75 percent of its power and revoke many of its idiotic laws and rulings.

Then, get rid of about 75 percent of the population. I don't mean kill them, just ship them off to Russia, South America, the Far East, or some other places that are pining away to learn about Americans.

Finally, put all the rest of us (because I, for one, DO NOT intend to leave!) in a small area and encourage those with tensions to go explore.

That's just food for thought as you sit around chowing down on hamburgers, hot dogs, watermelon and other "heart healthy" concoctions, just waiting for the fireworks display.

Well, on to another subject. Seems another voice has been added to those calling for homosexuals to be recognized as a legitimate minority race, rather than a sexual deviation.

I read the other day that Coretta

Scott King, widow of Martin Luther King Jr., has spoken up.

In an address this past week at her husband's grave, Mrs. King said the ban on gays in the military is similar to the one that once kept blacks segregated in the armed forces.

Now I honor Mrs. King's right to speak openly in public, but I don't happen to agree with her.

I don't see how you can compare the African-American race to the homosexual community.

For one thing, there is plenty of biological, physiological and whatever evidence that African-Americans are born that way. I mean, everyone has seen little black babies. They are not taken into a room at birth and injected with something to make them black.

On the other hand, there is no evidence that homosexuality is an inherent trait. In fact, after having heard ex-gays speak, I can see that it is a lifestyle choice.

I just hope that Mrs. King is disappointed and the ban on gays stays in place and homosexuals are seen for what they are -- sexual deviants -- not a minority race.

Well, now that I have all that off my chest, I need to remind you about another important event in the history of our nation that is coming up soon.

No, it's not Labor Day (that's in September); it's not Memorial Day (that's in May); and it's not President's Day (that's in February). In fact, there are very few calendars around that have this occasion marked on them.

It is the birthday of your favorite Hereford Brand managing editor. Now, why am I hectoring my own horn about my birthday?

Well, because if I don't, nobody else will. And besides, I need to tell you what to get me on Thursday. If you get me a car, make sure it's American made, has four doors (or more), has a place for two car seats in the back and gets good gas mileage.

If the car has lots of doors, like a limo, then you need to throw in a driver. Of course, you also need to kick in his salary.

While a car would be nice, I could also use a new boat. (what am I saying, I can't even swim, so why would I need a boat? Besides, I've never had an old boat!)

Anyway, if you just HAVE to get me a boat, I guess I'll take it, especially if it's a cruise ship.

Of course, cash is also nice. I'd be perfectly willing to take my birthday present in bills (preferably those with President Madison on them), or in Treasury Notes featuring pictures of presidents Teddy Roosevelt, Madison or McKinley. In a stretch, I'd take a Woodrow Wilson savings bond.

But if you're going to give me cash, please let me know ahead of time, so I can establish a Swiss Bank Account. Well, I hope you can tell I'm kidding (at least about the boat!).

Well, that's all for this week. Have a good week and, remember, let's be careful out there.

Joys of liberty

BY PHIL GRAMM
United State Senator

It was July 4, 1776 when America's founding fathers gathered in Philadelphia to pledge "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor" in order to secure liberty for themselves and posterity. The signing of the American Declaration of Independence was a pivotal moment in history for anyone who has ever yearned to live free from tyranny, oppression and the rule of dictators.

On Sunday, Americans will celebrate, with significant fanfare, the 217th anniversary of this bold and courageous action made by these patriots who initiated the American experiment. It was an effort which not only gave birth to what has become the most powerful, prosperous, and benevolent nation the world has even known, but also redefined the very concept of freedom.

America is not an empire of conquest and possession. It is, has been, and will always be a nation of vision and ideas. The ideas of economic and political freedom, born in ancient Greece and Rome, refined and perfected in England, took a deeper root in America than anywhere else on earth and thus the American free enterprise system was born. This concept has proven beyond doubt that in a free society people are better able to utilize their God-given talents to advance themselves, their family and the community.

America is not a great and powerful country because the most brilliant and talented people in the world came to live here. America is a great and powerful country because it is here that ordinary people like you and me have had more opportunity and more freedom than any other people who have ever lived on the face of the earth. It is with this opportunity and with this freedom, that ordinary people like us have been able to accomplish extraordinary things.

We need not be historians to understand that Americans owe a huge debt to the courage of past generations for freedom was purchased and has been preserved at an enormous cost. One cannot celebrate the joys of liberty without pausing to commemorate the gallantry of those who laid upon the altar of sacrifice their life on behalf of liberty's cause. I humbly join you in thanking God for the special blessing of liberty. May we be exceptionally good stewards of this privilege.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The 1812 Overture plays. Flags wave. Fireworks light up the sky. These are just some of the festivities that highlight the Fourth of July.

Other events, such as parties and barbecues, often involve alcohol consumption. The National Safety Council reminds all Americans to celebrate safely this Independence Day and avoid driving while intoxicated.

It's no secret that fighting drunk driving is an uphill battle. Public service campaigns, media attention and law enforcement have been used to combat it.

But many Americans fail to get the message. They remain unaware that alcohol is a depressant drug which slows reaction time, reduces coordination and impairs vision. They remain unconvinced that calling a cab or arranging for a designated driver are options that could prevent an accident. They don't care that 50 percent of all motor vehicle accidents involve alcohol use.

This letter is not written for those people. It is meant for their potential victims.

Know how to spot a drunk driver.

Signs include: driving at excessive or very slow speeds; stopping without apparent cause; swerving or straddling the center lines; turning abruptly; not responding to traffic signals; or, driving at night with the headlights out.

If you see any of these warning signs, react quickly. Maintain a safe following distance. Do not try to pass. If the drier is behind you, turn right at the nearest intersection and let that vehicle pass. If you can, report the location and description of the vehicle, including the license plate number, to your local police station or sheriff's office. In most cases, you will not have to identify yourself.

Remember this holiday weekend, you can be responsible for your actions, but you cannot control "the other guy." Know how to spot a drunk driver so you can protect yourself and the people you love.

Editorials from around the state

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

June 28

The Houston Post on the military base closings:

Base closings are necessary at this time when the Cold War is over and money is hard to come by. Almost everyone agrees with that. What's more, the Department of Defense was not created - and is not financed - to be a jobs program. But it is one thing to cavalierly say, "Cut the defense budget" and quite another to devastate an entire community.

For we must remember that most of these cuts do not affect military personnel so much as their civilian counterparts. The Naval Shipyard at Mare Island, Vallejo, Calif., which will be closed, employs 6,369 civilians and only 181 military personnel. The doomed Naval Shipyard at Charleston, S.C. has 5,771 civilians and 58 military personnel.

June 28

The (McAllen) Monitor, on taxes and the federal deficit:

As the U.S. Congress churns through the seemingly endless hours of debate over the federal budget, millions of Americans across the land are trying to figure out how they'll pay the new taxes ...

Seated off on Capital Hill, isolated from the people they claim to serve, representatives and senators only can see one thing: More cash will be taken from the productive private sector of the economy to be wasted on the anti-productive special interests that pay for campaigns ...

And some Republicans apparently have not even learned the lesson of (former President) Bush's defeat. In 1993, they are trying to work out a deal with the same Democratic congressional leadership that passed the Bush tax increases in 1990. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole and other "moderate" Republicans have signed on to some of the Clinton tax increases.

No, no, no, Sen. Dole. Taxes are the problem, not the solution. Tax increases are economic and political suicide.

Wasting more taxpayers' money can never cut government waste and deficits. Only by restraining government - cutting taxes and waste - will government be returned to fiscal solvency and the U.S. economy be unshackled to grow again.

June 27

The Marshall News Messenger on the House's super collider decision: Frankly, the public should get some pleasure out of watching the Texas congressional delegation turn slowly in the wind over Thursday's U.S. House vote over the Superconducting Super Collider.

This is an issue which, after all, puts Republican Senators Kay Bailey Hutchison and Phil Gramm, Democratic U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman, and President Bill Clinton all on the same side of the fence - how often is this likely to happen during the next three and a half years?

Their problem is what's on the other side of the fence, in this case, the 280 House members who decided that the taxpayers of this nation can do well enough without the Waxahachie atom smasher. If the Senate agrees, work on the project will end.

Last year, the Senate narrowly voted to keep the SSC alive, and a House-Senate compromise delivered $103 million for continued construction.

Any sincere effort to cut federal spending means that a lot of us are going to have to make do without projects and government handouts we'd like to have. We'd like to have a machine that will examine the collision of subatomic particles, increasing scientific understanding of the forces in the universe, we're just not sure we want to spend $640 million on it next year, in addition to the $2 billion it has already received from taxpayers in the U.S. and Texas. ...

Odessa American on global warming:

Doing his best Chicken Little, our hyperecological vice president recently took his direst warnings about the earth's atmosphere to the United Nations. In addressing the world's representatives, Al Gore didn't exactly say the sky was falling, of course. He just seems to believe it's closing in on us.

Something he and others call "greenhouse gases" - produced by assorted emissions from automobiles, power plants and other misdeeds of mankind - are said to be trapping heat in the atmosphere and gradually raising global temperatures. The net result, some say, will be a series of calamities worldwide like melting polar ice, rising water levels, flooded coastlines, undetermined agriculture and so forth.

To forestall this cataclysm worthy of a Cecil B. De Mille movie, Gore and the rest of the Clinton camp propose severe straps on industry to reduce emissions. Carbon dioxide and other supposed greenhouse gases are to be cut 13 percent, to 1990 levels, by the year 2000.

The cost to assorted industries, possibly in the form of penalizing taxes, mandated changes in technology and conversions to so-called "alternative" energy sources like solar power, is untold and likely to be backbreaking. Of course, all consumers would end up paying. Only, there's no reason to.

It turns out that scientists far and wide have uncovered virtually no substantive evidence of global warming. It is merely a theory, likely on its way to becoming a myth. While Gore and company heed the histrionics of the environmental lobby, atmospheric scientists (who were studying warming before warming was, well, cool) know better.

Spanish lessons help police avoid tragedy

By KRISTI NELSON

DALLAS Morning News
DALLAS (AP) - Sgt. Ruben Padilla tells a story to help explain why the Los Angeles Police Department started giving its officers Spanish lessons 15 years ago:

Two officers trying to stop a Hispanic man on the street noticed something shiny in his waistband. Twice they said in English, "Stop, don't move," but the man just walked toward them. They drew their guns and saw the man reach for the shiny object.

At the last minute, one officer demanded he drop the gun: "Dejalo!" The man immediately complied.

What fell to the ground was not a gun - it was a can of beer. And what the officers had on their hands was not a threat but a man who hadn't understood a word they'd said.

"That was a situation where a life was probably saved," said Padilla, the LAPD's Spanish training instructor.

Such life-and-death encounters are occurring around the country as more and more immigrants, particularly from Mexico and Central America, make their way to the United States. Police departments increasingly find themselves struggling to communicate with the people they're trying to serve, protect or arrest.

"There are all kinds of problems associated with that, including shootings," said Hubert Williams, president of the Police Foundation, a national organization that researches law-enforcement issues.

When dealing with immigrants, "we should know about their culture," Williams said. "We should be able to communicate with them like we do other people."

Two recent incidents in Dallas underscore the critical nature of the language barrier.

One has drawn extensive publicity: the killing of Juan Rodriguez by a plainclothes officer driving an unmarked car. Relatives say that Rodriguez spoke virtually no English and probably thought that he was being robbed when the officer identified himself and confronted him in an alley.

Police say the Mexican man was drunk and reaching for a gun in his waistband when officer David Denham shot him three times, including twice in the back. Dallas police are conducting an internal investigation, although they say there is no evidence that the officer violated departmental procedures.

The other case, which passed with little notice, also involved a killing. But instead of trying to apprehend a Spanish speaker, officers were trying to help one - and apparently couldn't.

A Salvadoran woman called police because her sister was being threatened with a gun. By the time officers arrived, Reina Velasquez had been fatally shot - and police could not understand the sister's hysterical Spanish. They had to call for a backup who could; meanwhile, "the suspect was in the process of fleeing" and remains at large, Sgt. Jim Chandler said.

After the Rodriguez killing, which the FBI is investigating, Hispanic leaders charged that not enough basic Spanish is taught to Dallas police officers. Future problems could be avoided if the department steps up training, the leaders said.

"I think it would make a big difference," said Detective Gil Cerda, president of the Latino Peace Officers Association. "I think because of this tragedy, the police department can see some kind of importance in what we're trying to tell them."

"There are literally thousands of Hispanics out there that don't speak English," he said.

Dallas is about 21 percent Hispanic, according to the 1990 U.S. Census. Nearly 70,000 of those residents speak English poorly, if at all; nearly 23,000 households have no one able to speak the language well.

The Dallas department picked up Los Angeles' training example in 1990 and requires significantly less instruction. Even so, it's doing more than other cities with large Spanish-speaking populations, officials say.

Fort Worth, for example, doesn't offer Spanish classes - only instruction in a few basic commands. Houston and San Diego have regular sessions, but only for volunteers. Even Chicago - the third-largest city in the nation, one with an estimated 550,000 Hispanics - doesn't mandate basic Spanish instruction.

Los Angeles requires 108 hours of Spanish during the seven months of academy training. It's also required as part of continuing education, Padilla said.

Dallas, by contrast, gives rookies 44 hours of Spanish and no follow-up instruction.

In Los Angeles, "I would tell you that most officers would be able to give basic commands," Padilla said. "It's a way of life here. We have about 41 percent Hispanics here."

He said Spanish is imperative in potentially dangerous situations. All officers, he said, should know at least basic commands, such as "hands up," "stop" and "drop it."

"We don't have the luxury of waiting five minutes or one minute" for a backup officer who speaks Spanish, the sergeant said. "You can get killed in one second."

Capt. Harry Bingham, watch commander of the Chicago Police Department's training division, paints the situation less drastically. He recalled a few problems involving police and people speaking foreign languages but said they all had been resolved uneventfully.

A backup officer is available "in most of these incidents that occur," he said.

Officer David Magnusson, spokesman for the Miami Police Department, said he knows a few commands in Spanish but still calls for backup when he encounters non-English speakers. In critical situations, those words may not come to mind.

"In a stressful situation, most people are going to resort to their native language," Magnusson said.

That may be what happened to officer Denham in Dallas. He joined the force after Spanish training was instituted, officials said, but spoke only English when he tried to apprehend Rodriguez.

"I don't know if he knew enough to where he could have communicated with the man," said Chandler, a police department spokesman.

Dallas' incoming police chief, Ben Click, has signaled concern about continuing education, although he hasn't criticized police handling of the shooting.

Spanish "is like a lot of second languages - it needs to be brushed up on on a regular basis," he has said.

Basic skills can help in less serious situations, Padilla said. An officer who can understand or deliver simple phrases can build a more effective relationship with a community of Spanish speakers.

Officer Marcie Geisler, a recent graduate of the Dallas academy, said she has had many opportunities to use commands she picked up during training. The instances have all been routine, she said, primarily during traffic stops, when making arrests or gathering vital statistics.

Her Spanish instruction consisted of vocabulary lessons and mock situations.

"I think it was pretty good training," she said. "I can get the gist of what's going on."

Although she said she couldn't hold a lengthy conversation, she believes that what she learned in training was sufficient to do the job.

"By the time you get out of there, you've got the basic knowledge," officer Geisler said. "With their broken English and my broken Spanish, we figure out what's going on."

Dallas officer David Andree said that one of the first times he tried out the Spanish he'd learned, the people he approached - a group of men sitting in a car drinking - pretended not to understand English.

Officer Andree said the driver responded with "Que?" when he asked what his name was. But then officer Andree started to use Spanish, much to their surprise.

"They acted to learn the language all of a sudden," he said.

Some cities with majority Hispanic populations don't place heavy emphasis on Spanish training. To a degree, officers said, it's because they don't have to.

"In our curriculum, the way it stands, we do not have time for language instruction," said Lt. Dan Preston, training director at the El Paso Police Department. "On the positive side for us, I would guess that 75 percent of our officers are Spanish-speaking anyway."

Non-Spanish speaking officers are usually paired with those who can speak the language, Preston said. Such a setup can be advantageous, especially because some of the city's neighborhoods are practically 99 percent Spanish-speaking, he estimated. Overall, the city is 69 percent Hispanic.

Officer Magnusson of Miami said that 492 of the department's 1,039 officers were of Latin descent. The city is 62 percent Hispanic.

The Miami academy offers Spanish courses and many officers volunteer to take them, Magnusson said.

In Miami, Spanish-speaking officers are not always assigned to patrol in neighborhoods with predominantly Spanish populations, he said, although it is beneficial when it turns out that way.

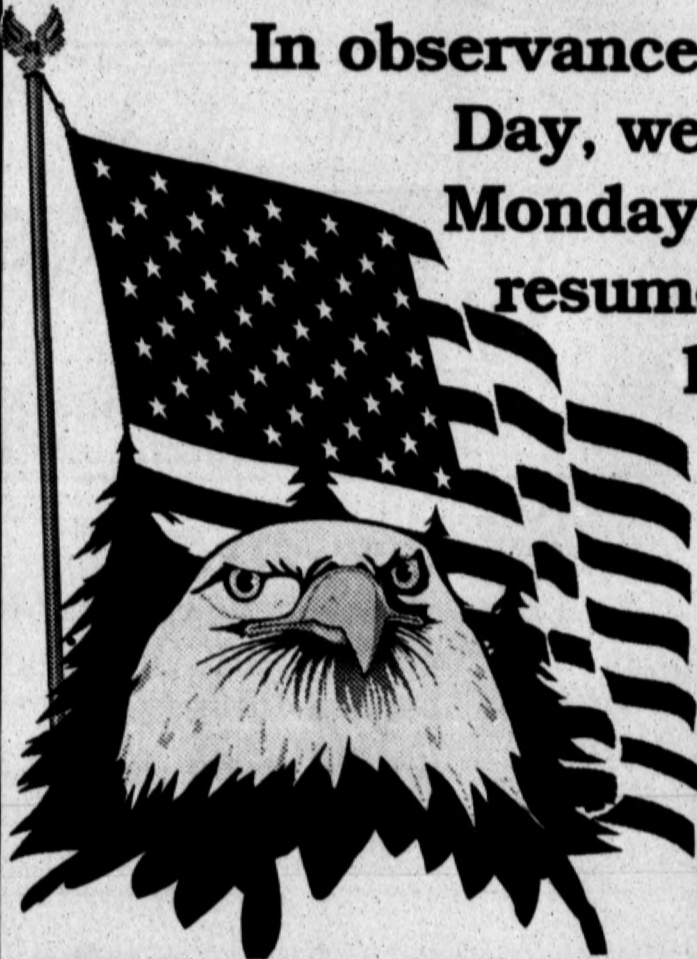

Even when an officer speaks only English, Spanish speakers should get the message, the officer said.

The threatening stance of someone pointing a gun "is a universal language," he said, adding that there is no excuse not to comprehend the seriousness of such a situation. "They know by the tone of voice and seeing police there."

It wasn't so clear in Dallas, a witness to the Rodriguez killing has suggested.

"I never once knew that this man was a policeman," Juan Luis Ortiz told The Dallas Morning News after the shooting.

The difference is there are certain amenities included in the offering, while others are moving with you and the rest are open to negotiation. Obviously you are leaving the kitchen cabinets, but what about the stove, refrigerator and laundry appliances? Research on onions will be showcased in tour at Lubbock

Onion-growers, whether commercial or gardening, will have an opportunity to learn more about their vegetable during an Onion Variety Trial Research and Demonstration Tour to be held Tuesday near Lubbock.

Besides growers, seed company representatives, research specialists from Texas A&M and Texas Tech and faculty of the two universities are expected to attend.

The tour will begin at 9 a.m. at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center on FM 1294, east of I-27 at the Shallowater exit. The tour will move to the farm of Steve and Patti Jones at 10:30 a.m.

During the tour, participants will be able to evaluate both transplant and direct seed onions.

Tour hosts are Roland Roberts, professor and extension vegetable specialist; David Bender, associate professor, both of Texas A&M, and Stanley Young, Lubbock County extension agent.

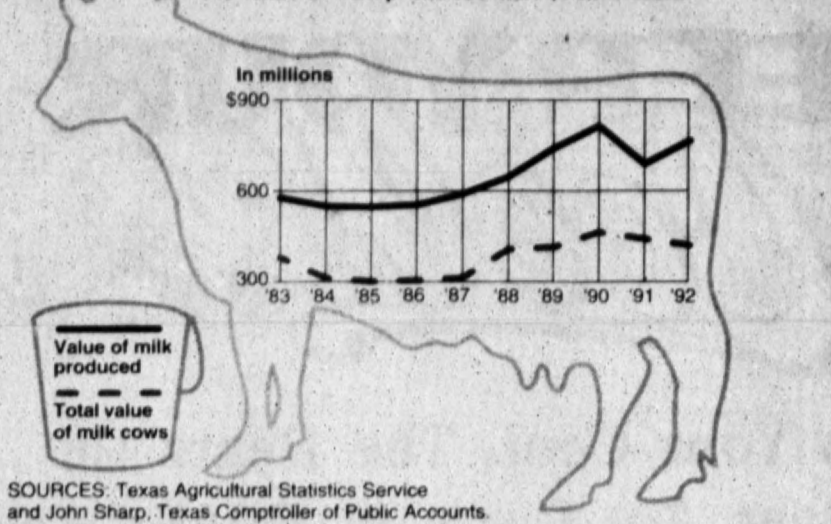

Varieties include 12 short-day onion transplants, 22 intermediate onion transplants and 17-long-day direct seeded onions. Four replicates of each variety were planted. The tops of over 30 percent of the onions are down after a recent rainstorm.

"Our onion variety plots are growing well," said Dr. Roberts.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Texas dairy production

Milk is the state's third most valuable commodity in terms of annual agricultural cash receipts, after cattle and cotton. In 1992, the value of milk produced was $766 million.

Pesticides need federal approach

Academy of Science report raises issues

The chairman of the American Corn Growers Association, Carl L. King of Dimmitt, has called for a federal approach to issues raised in a report from the National Academy of Sciences on the use of pesticides in farming.

King said that chemicals have made a contribution to farming and, "For the majority of farmers, chemicals have had a definite and beneficial role to play in helping guarantee a safe, adequate and nutritious food supply."

The corn producer noted that farmers traditionally have been leaders in protection of the environment and called for a public sensitivity to the challenges farmers face in the use of chemicals.

"We must rely in large part on the guidelines that we have to go by and assume that labels reflect what the Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Agriculture have found to be safe," King added.

"At the same time, we recognize that it is important to determine optimum inputs of all materials. This will help protect the environment while ensuring the greatest return to the farmer.

"Because of that, we call for a federal approach to complement programs such as we are doing with our innovative Bottom Line Corn Growing Contest, to help determine those optimum inputs."

King added that entrants from throughout the United States have responded to the contest.

"This is an indication that farmers are willing to take the leadership to solve problems associated with excessive use of chemicals," he said.

King noted that if a federal effort were put forth to improve prices, change certain policies of the government such as restrictions on crop rotations, and to ensure a fair market for farmers, the need to use labor-saving chemicals would be reduced.

The ACGA chairman also warned that the environmental problems associated with the North American Free Trade Agreement would make the issues raised in the Academy report pale by comparison. He said that a federal judge apparently agreed when he temporarily sidetracked the treaty because of environmental concerns.

The organization King heads has 10,000 members in 25 states.

Combest questions result of funding bill

WASHINGTON--U.S. Rep. Larry Combest (R-Texas) expressed strong concern this week over passage of a funding bill that could put federal crop insurance out of reach for many farmers.

Combest, as a ranking member of the House Agriculture subcommittee on credit and rural development, opposed the unforeseen effects these proposed revisions.

"This legislation raises questions about the affordability of federal crop insurance coverage for those farmers in counties who have had large Multi-Peril Crop Insurance claims 70 percent of the time since 1980," said Combest. "My concern is that new farmers with a short history and one big loss would have to pay outrageous premiums to be insured."

Combest added that "we know all too well in West Texas how easy it is to have just one bad year. Our thunderstorms bring welcome rains, but often include destructive hail and floods."

The congressman said the Agriculture Committee has asserted itself against attempted changes made by the Appropriations Committee to agriculture programs. Generally speaking, House procedure prohibits the Appropriations Committee from making changes to programs approved by the full Congress, said Combest.

7th, 9th-graders need physicals

Hereford athletes who are entering the seventh or ninth grades need to get physical examinations before they can participate in a school sport, HHS athletic trainer "Doc" Morrow said.

Seventh- and ninth-grade football players will start practice in mid-August, but all athletes who need physicals should start getting their doctor's appointments now.

Courier, Sampras to play all-American final

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - One men's finalist nearly skipped Wimbledon with a bad shoulder. The other nearly got booted out.

Nevertheless, Pete Sampras and Jim Courier outlasted everyone else, setting up an all-American final Sunday on the Fourth of July. Also at stake will be the No. 1 ranking, which Courier can reclaim with a victory.

Steffi Graf was to face Jana Novotna Saturday in the women's final. Graf was aiming for her fifth title, while Novotna was playing in her first Wimbledon final.

Although they are the world's top-ranked players, neither Sampras nor Courier was expected to get this far. The top-seeded Sampras was suffering from an inflamed tendon in his right shoulder and considered withdrawing on the eve of the tournament.

"The Wednesday and Thursday before this event started I really had my doubts about playing here, but I kind of sucked it up and got four or five hours of treatment to give myself the best chance to play here," Sampras said after his 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 6-4 semifinal win Friday over Boris Becker.

"The shoulder acted up at times in earlier matches, but Sampras showed no effects of the injury against Becker. He hit 12 aces and served at an average speed of 113 mph.

"I didn't feel any pain out there today," Sampras said. "I know now I'm going to be fine for Sunday. As things turned out, it's been feeling pretty strong for the most part."

Courier, the No. 3 seed who beat

Stefan Edberg 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 in the semifinals, was fortunate to be playing the second week.

During his third-round match last Saturday against Jason Stoltenberg, chair umpire Jeremy Shales was ready to default Courier for what he considered abusive language. Only the intervention of tournament referee Alan Mills kept Courier from being kicked out.

"The umpire thought I said something directed at him, which I didn't, and he reacted to default me, which was to say the least, I think, an overreaction," Courier said.

"Luckily Alan came out on the court and straightened things out."

Now, for the first time since John McEnroe beat Jimmy Connors for the title in 1984, two Americans will play in the final.

"I've been watching Wimbledon finals for as long as I can remember," Courier said, "so it's particularly special for me to think that I'm there and I'll be playing another Yank on the Fourth of July. I certainly never expected to do it."

Sampras won the U.S. Open in 1990, while Courier has won the French Open and Australian Open twice each. Both men said they would treasure a Wimbledon title.

Commissioner's decision forces 'Skins' Marshall to become Oiler

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers have another All-Pro on their team and the Washington Redskins aren't even getting a No. 1 draft pick in return.

NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue ruled Friday that Wilber Marshall has a valid contract with the Oilers, ending a three-month dispute over the All-Pro linebacker who spent the last five seasons with the Redskins.

Marshall had been designated a franchise player by Washington under terms of the new collective bargaining agreement between the NFL and its players. But when the Redskins could not sign him, they released Marshall from the franchise status, permitting him to talk with other teams. If he signed, a trade would be arranged.

Marshall was on the verge of a contract with Houston worth a reported $2.9 million when Oilers owner Bud Adams changed his mind and called off the deal. Tagliabue ruled, however, that the player and the Oilers had reached a binding agreement on June 2.

At the same time, however, Tagliabue said the Oilers had properly called off trade talks with the Redskins when Adams decided to pull out of the deal.

The commissioner said Redskins general manager Charley Casserly improperly interfered with Houston's efforts to halt negotiations with Marshall by offering him a substantial sum of cash - reportedly $150,000 - to accept the Oilers' offer.

Because of that interference, Tagliabue reduced the terms of the draft choice compensation due the Redskins for Marshall, awarding Washington the Oilers' third-round draft choice in 1994 and fifth-round pick in 1995 instead of a No. 1 and No. 5 in 1994.

"When an owner of an NFL club (Houston) properly directs his staff to end trade talks and contract negotiations with a player, an official of a second club cannot with impunity force the negotiations to an opposite conclusion, as Mr. Casserly did here by agreeing to make a substantial payment to a player to sign with another club," Tagliabue said in a statement.

Phillies, Padres complete doubleheader at 4:40 a.m.

By The Associated Press

The fans at Philadelphia and Cincinnati certainly got their money's worth.

By the time the Phillies and San Diego Padres completed their doubleheader at Veterans Stadium on Saturday morning, it was 4:40 a.m. EDT.

The first game was delayed nearly six hours by rain and didn't end until 1:03 a.m. with the Padres winning 5-2. Philadelphia gained a split by taking the second game 6-5 in 10 innings before a few faithful fans.

The opener was held up a total of 5 hours and 54 minutes by three delays.

In the second game, Mitch Williams (2-3) singled off Trevor

Hoffman (2-3) to drive in Pete Incaviglia with the winning run.

Elsewhere in the NL it was San Francisco 3, New York 1 in five innings; Chicago 11, Colorado 8; Florida 4, Atlanta 2; Houston 7, Cardinals 1; and Los Angeles 4, Montreal 3.

Astros 7, Cardinals 1.

Scott Servais hit a three-run homer to highlight a five-run fifth off Joe Magrane (7-7), helping Houston cool off St. Louis at the Astrodome. It was only the Cardinals' second loss in their last nine games.

Mark Portugal (6-3) was the winner, giving up one run and eight hits while striking out eight in seven innings.

Twins squeak by Brewers

By The Associated Press

Brian Harper said Mike Fetters just made a bad pitch.

"They walked Dave (Winfield) to set up the double play," Harper said after lining the next pitch inside third base to score Kirby Puckett and give the Minnesota Twins an 11-10 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday.

Harper, Winfield and Kent Hrbek all hit home runs for the Twins.

Elsewhere on a high-scoring night in the AL, it was Detroit 6, Texas 4 in 10 innings; Chicago 12, Baltimore 1; Kansas City 3, Toronto 2; Oakland 4, New York 3; Cleveland 10, California 8; and Boston 9, Seattle 8.

Tigers 6, Rangers 4

Mickey Teuleton's two-run homer in the 10th inning snapped a 4-all tie and Detroit's 10-game losing streak.

The Tigers' skid is the longest in the majors this season.

Sparky Anderson tied Walter Alston for fifth place with his 2,040th career victory as a manager. Joe McCarthy is fourth with 2,126 wins.

Cecil Fielder pulled the Tigers even in the eighth with a two-run, 484-foot home run onto the left field roof of Tiger Stadium, capping a four-run rally.

Health news reported

A 30-year-old treatment for slipped discs, a condition doctors call herniated lumbar intervertebral disc, is receiving new attention from physicians and people with leg pain caused by a herniated or slipped disc.

The treatment, called chemonucleolysis, involves injecting a natural enzyme called chymopapain in to the center of the herniated disc. The enzyme, which comes from the latex of the papaya plant, breaks down and partially liquifies the jelly-like material in the inner part of the disc. The disc's ability to absorb water is greatly reduced and pressure on the nerve root that is causing the pain is reduced.

A number of studies have been done on this treatment and their results show it's as effective as and safer than surgery over the short and long term. In a one-year follow up study published in the international medical journal "Spine," patients who received the chemonucleolysis treatment had an overall success rate of 66 percent while those who had a procedure called automated percutaneous lumbar discectomy had a success rate of only 37 percent.

Chemonucleolysis treatment of sciatica has also been shown to be cost effective in the short term and most importantly in the long term as it does not contribute to "failed back surgery syndrome."

A toll-free number has been set up by the International Intradiscal Therapy Society for patients and physicians who want to learn more about chemonucleolysis and about who are the most likely candidates for this treatment. For additional information, call 1-800-426-4868.

MRS. CODY DAVIS
...nee Anne Means

Couple married during candlelight ceremony

Anne Marie Means of Plano and Cody Lane Davis of Irving were married Saturday afternoon in Central Christian Church at Richardson. Dr. Bruce Smith of Plano officiated at the marriage.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Means of Plano and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Davis of 13 Yucca Hills.

The church was decorated with two large baskets holding multi-colored stargazers and assorted fresh flowers, two candelabra and greenery. The unity candle was placed on a table covered with a floor-length white tulle cloth and each pew was marked by a bow.

The scripture reading was given by Steve Dzierba of Amarillo, the groom's brother-in-law.

Pattie Wilson of Carrollton was honor attendant and Blake Confer of Fort Morgan, Colo. was best man.

Serving as bridesmaids were Amy Hatchell, Plano; Alesia Hill and Tonya Mobley, both of Lubbock; and Tracey Henry, Dallas.

Groomsmen included Todd Shire, Warracres, Okla.; Chris Johnson and Lane West, both of Lubbock; and Jeff Aldridge, Michigan.

Lighting candles and escorting guests were the bride's brothers, Ralph Means of Fayette, Ala. and Charlie Means of Plano.

The groom's sister, Mrs. Steve Dzierba of Amarillo, accompanied by Sharon Carroll playing the organ, sang "Only God Could Love You More," "Perfect Union" and "Wedding Song." "Trumpet Voluntary" was played during the processional.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in an elegant white satin gown fashioned with a shawl neckline, fitted bodice and a floor-length full skirt which swept into a train adorned with cut-out lace. The entire gown was encrusted with miniature beads and pearls and delicate lace.

The mid-back length bridal veil of sheer illusion formed a pouf at the back of a headband created by pearls and sequins. She carried an arrangement of multi-colored stargazers, lilies, roses and accents of greenery.

The bridal attendants wore fuchsia linen sheaths fashioned with jewel necklines. They carried bouquets of calla lilies and stargazers.

Chris Ramsey of Amarillo invited guests to register at the reception held in the Richardson Civic Center.

The bride's cake was served by Nancy Miller and the groom's cake was served by Glenda Talant. Jo Ann Terrell poured punch and coffee. Others assisting were Martha Weston, Brenda Mark, Jessica Mark and Heather Kirkwood.

The bride's cake was created by four tiers of different flavorings: French vanilla with raspberry filling, buttercream with fudge filling, fudge marble with fudge filling, and milk chocolate. It was decorated with fresh flowers and draped seed pearls.

To complete the reception decorations were floater bowls with gerber daisies.

The couple will make their home in Irving following a wedding trip to Montego Bay, Jamaica.

The bride is a 1987 graduate of Plano Senior High School and graduated from Texas Tech University in 1991 with a degree in merchandising and minor in marketing. She is employed as an area sales manager at Dillard's in Arlington.

The groom is a 1987 graduate of Hereford High School and graduated from Texas Tech University in 1992 with a degree in marketing.

Special wedding guests included the bride's grandmothers, Mrs. Meribel Cockerill of Wichita, Kan. and Mrs. Mary Means of Saltillo, Ms.; and the groom's grandmother, Mrs. Sammie Lucas of Amarillo.

Following the formal reception, Mr. and Mrs. Means hosted a picnic for out-of-town friends and relatives.

Between The Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Happy Holiday!! The library will be closed July 3rd to the 5th to celebrate the 4th of July. I hope all of you have a great time and enjoy the fire work displays. I also hope that you all have a safe holiday. Playing with fire can be very dangerous, so be sure to have a bucket of water handy or a fire extinguisher in case of an emergency.

If you did not have time to come by the library before the holidays, on Tuesday there will be a few new titles ready. Tell Me No Secrets by Joy Fielding, the author of See Jane Run, is a book you do not want to miss reading. Jess Kostner is the young, non-nonsense district attorney who can hold her own against Chicago's toughest. She has survived a wrenching divorce, and must now contend with an ex-husband that has a disconcerting way of popping up in the most unexpected places. Jess's mother has also disappeared in a most bizarre way and Jess still has trouble with an occasional panic attack. On top of it all there is a married colleague who continually makes aggressive passes towards her; a brother-in-law who has a strange, creepy hold over her sister; a handsome stranger that has just entered her life; and then there is Rick Ferguson, the thuggish rapist. Jess is convinced that Rick brutally attacked Connie De Vuono, but the evidence is shaky. Connie is convinced that Rick will find a way to kill her if she testifies against him. Then Connie disappears and Jess has a nagging feeling that the malevolent eyes of a stalker are upon her. Maybe it is just nerves, and Jess Always gets jittery right before a big trial. Is there anyone she can trust?

For those of you who liked Green City in the Sun and The Dreaming by Barbara Wood, you will really enjoy her new book entitled Virgins of Paradise available this week. The story takes the reader back in time to the aristocratic Egyptian family in postwar Cairo. A time where women still wear the veil and live in harems.

Under the watchful of their grandmothers and the other prominent women in the Rasheed family, Camelia and Jasmine begin to mature into lovely young women. Cairo is changing and Camelia and Jasmine take advantage of the opportunity to break away from tradition and embark on a new and often turbulent life. Jasmine journeys to America to become a doctor after being cast out of the family. Camelia becomes one of the foremost dancers in the Middle East. Camelia and Jasmine must find a new identity as they merge into the modern era, while they fight the magic, mythology and superstition of an ancient nation.

Robin And The King by Parker Godwin takes the story of Robinhood on into his later life and exploits as defender of the English people. Robin becomes a friend to Rossel, the King's son, but, must continually be on guard for the dangerous enmity of Ranulf of Bayeux. William of Normandy, who had conquered the Anglo-Saxon people year's before, is on the throne and Robin finds himself committed to freeing his fellow countrymen from the absolute rule of any king. But that crusade must come second when an enemy from France threatens to destroy William's entire kingdom by putting England's way of life to an end. This foreign threat sets in motion a fierce conflict that is fought by all loyal Englishmen. Even Marian finds herself defending their home, emerging as a powerful ally united with Robin in an effort to save their people.

Patricia D. Cornwell's Cruel and Unusual is another baffling case for Dr. Kay Scarpetta. Convicted murderer Ronnie Joe Waddell is executed by electrocution at 11:05 p.m. in the Commonwealth of Virginia. As Virginia's chief medical examiner, Dr. Kay Scarpetta Watches the clock waiting to perform the autopsy on the executed murderer. On that same December night, three hours after the execution 13 year old Eddie Heath's grotesquely wounded body is found propped against a dumpster. Richmond Police lieutenant Pete Marino and Dr.

Scarpetta are shocked to find the boy's body arranged in the same position in which Waddell used for his victim. The clues: old blood stain, fragments of feather and fingerprints found at the scene point to Waddell, the one who could not have committed the murder. Scarpetta's reputation may be destroyed unless she can produce the proof that will clear her name. Coming to Kay's aid is: 17 year old computer whiz Lucy, Kay's niece; loyal friend Lieutenant Marino and FBI agent Benton Wesley. Even with their help Scarpetta must muster all her forensic experience and investigative skill to uncover the shocking truth.

Other titles of interest are: Bless This Child by Cathy Cash Spellman, enters the world of a satanic cult and a grandmothers fight to save her granddaughter from that world. The Lance and the Shield by Robert M. Utley is the biography of Slitting Bull.

Rodale Book of Composting is the easy how-to methods for every gardener. Shop Savvy by Roy Mounghan gives tips, techniques and jigs for woodworkers and metalworkers.

DETROIT (AP) - A book written and autographed by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has been returned to civil rights pioneer Rosa Parks.

Parks discovered her copy of "Strength to Love" was missing in July 1992, when Atlanta businessmen Perry Spell and William Brock asked her for $2,500 to return it.

Spell said he found the book in Atlanta office building. He gave it back to Parks on Wednesday.

The book, written in 1963, contains a handwritten inscription, "To Rosa Parks for all that you have done for your fellow Negroes and for all America, Martin Luther King Jr."

Parks' refusal in 1955 to give up her bus seat to a white man sparked the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott, a pivotal event in the civil rights movement.

The Ladies of 4818 Veterans of Foreign Wars is having a Membership Drive Salad Supper on July 12, 1993 at 7 p.m. at V.F.W. Hall.

Babysitting subject of program

"Singing the Babysitter Blues" was the program presented by Bryan and Amber Vasck when members of the 4 Corners Home Extension Club met recently in the fellowship hall of St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

The presentation pointed out some of the important information parents need to share with babysitters. Parents are also stressed to pay babysitters in cash.

Carla Vasck provided refreshments to Emily Knight, Rhonda Urbanczyk, Denise Marnell, Joyce Schlabs, Jaime Brorman and Brenda Paschel.

Encourage kids to be curious

The hustle and bustle of our neighborhood is predictable from day to day.

Kids play ball at the park, lawn movers hum and drone and commuters come and go. Then came Wild Rumpus.

"What is the rumpus?" neighbors asked each other as squeals of excitement came from their kids returning from the new neighborhood bookstore.

Once inside we discovered why. At this bookstore, playfulness magically takes over. A rat family lives contentedly under see-through Plexiglass flooring in the spooky-book section. And lurking between the shelves, there's Harrison, a multi-legged Chilean rose-haired tarantula. Two Australian cockatiels and even a boar's head grace the front window!

Here are some ways you can create a little ruckus in your home while you promote a love of reading these summer months.

-First, pick a theme together. Are your kids intrigued with life under the sea? Make July and August marine life months.

-Visit your neighborhood library and pick out fiction and non-fiction related to the general topic of these and underwater life. Read the books with your kids and pick one species/creature that may pique their interest.

-Take a closer look at the species/creature's habitat. Draw a map or picture illustrating where it lives. Ask your kids "why" and "why not" questions. For example, if your children are focusing on whales, a "why" question could be, "Why do you find whales in certain places?" (food supply, water temperature, the impact of humans). A "why not" question could be, "Why aren't there whales in our local lakes and rivers?"

-Supplement your family's growing knowledge of the subject week by week with hands-on activities such as trips to the zoo, aquariums and the sea. Older kids may enjoy keeping observation notes.

Look in the newspaper and magazines on the topic, or rent videos, too. For a grand finale, stage your own play accompanied by an audio cassette of Raffi's "Baby Beluga."

Cervical cancer can be detected earlier

While women demonstrated themselves persistent and very capable players in politics this past year, what about breakthroughs in women's health care issues?

Cervical cancer, one of these concerns, has been largely undressed yet still remains one of the leading and most common types of cancers among women.

For 50 years, the Pap smear, named after the doctor who originated it, has been the primary, most reliable routine screening procedure that takes place during a pelvic examination to detect cancerous and pre-cancerous cells on the cervix.

Although the Pap smear has saved thousands of lives, it has been shown to fail to detect up to 50 percent of precancerous abnormalities. This demand has been met by a new, simple and painless procedure. Pap Plus Speculscopy, that may represent a breakthrough in gynecological medicine because it increases your physician's ability to detect such abnormalities.

The name, Pap Plus Speculscopy, is derived from the breakthrough procedure, Speculscopy, and is performed in conjunction with the Pap smear. Speculscopy is visual examination that uses a nontoxic chemical light device, called a Speculite, which adheres to the speculum and emits a unique blue-white light. Your physician will then be able to visually detect abnormal tissue because it appears whitened under the light emitted by the speculite.

During the clinical trials a significant number of precancerous lesions wouldn't have otherwise been identified had it not been for the performance of the new procedure, according to Paul Wertlake, M.D., principal investigator of the study and medical director of UNILAB Inc., which sponsored the clinical trials in which more than 200 medical practitioners and 7,000 women participated to evaluate the procedure's effectiveness.

"Our initial conclusions show that combining the Pap smear with Speculscopy creates a two-step system...that identifies more than twice the number of cervical abnormalities than does the Pap smear alone," Wertlake says.

A physician can relay the visual results of the Speculscopy immediately following the procedure. "With speculscopy, the clinician has the opportunity to discuss the results and appropriate follow-up with the patient while she is still in the office," he says.

It also results in substantial cost savings for the patient; patients who test negative on both the pap smear and the Speculscopy exam may be able to have these tests less frequently.

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) - Twenty-three years after stepping on a mine in Vietnam, Robert H. Stewart learned the man who saved him was no ordinary hero - it was H. Norman Schwarzkopf.

Stewart was told by CBS reporters that Schwarzkopf, now a retired general, attended to Stewart's wounds in 1969. Stewart appeared on Wednesday night's CBS special, "Schwarzkopf in Vietnam; A Soldier Returns."

"Mines were going off everywhere," Stewart said, recalling the day his platoon was bringing medical supplies to a mortar unit that had wandered into a mine field.

Schwarzkopf was hit in the face and chest when one exploded.

Keep romance going strong

A romantic evening at home is a perfect way to celebrate a birthday, anniversary or job promotion.

In fact, you may want to consider these pointers to turn any evening into a special occasion:

-Treat yourself to a new outfit--or create a new look that your "significant other" has never seen before.

-If you're making dinner, try to prepare most of it ahead of time so you can spend the evening together.

-Dim the lights and put on some "mood music."

-Chill a bottle of champagne for a romantic toast.

-Use lots of candles to give the room a warm, rosey glow.

-Don't eat too much--a full stomach can cause after-dinner yawns.

-Go for a walk outside after dinner. then go back inside and cuddle up.

WASHINGTON (AP) - That was Rep. Robert Torricelli of New Jersey squiring a chic Bianca Jagger to the Democrats' annual fund-raising dinner.

But his office isn't making much of Monday night's date.

Spokesman Rob Henken said Wednesday that he tries to stay out of his boss' personal life.

The 41-year-old Englewood, N.J., congressman is chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee with jurisdiction over Central American affairs. He has been acquainted with Jagger, a Nicaraguan native, since she stopped by his office to discuss saving her country's rain forests.

David and Heather Manchee of Plainview announce the birth of a daughter, Ashley Camille, born June 18 in Plainview. She weighed 8 lbs. 6 oz.

NEW YORK (AP) - Rod Stewart will kick off his North American tour, called "Unplugged ... and Much More," on July 28 in Seattle.

From there, Stewart will lead a 12-piece band, an 18-piece orchestra and singers through nine states, Canada and Europe before heading back to the United States for shows in major cities, his spokesman Paul Freundlich said Wednesday.

Stewart's latest album, "Unplugged ... and Seated," has sold more than 1.3 million copies in the United States.

Knowledge is power in war against allergies

Sneezing, runny nose, nasal and sinus congestion and itchy, watery eyes. If you suffer from these allergy symptoms, you're not alone. There are more than 40 million Americans to keep you company in your misery. Like you, they suffer from upper respiratory allergies, often known as "hay fever" and usually caused by pollen, molds, the environment, pet dander, dust and other culprits.

The good news is, these allergies can be controlled. Do you know how? Take this "Allergy IQ" Quiz to find out.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Pollen counts are highest in the morning, making it the worst time to go outside if you suffer from allergies. TRUE. Try to schedule outside activities for the afternoon.
2. Allergy sufferers should keep home, car and office windows open to aid air circulation. FALSE. Keep windows closed and try to use air conditioning whenever possible. Air filters can cut pollen counts by greater than 90 percent. Have all air conditioners serviced regularly to assure good filtration.
3. One of the most common causes of allergies within the home is a microscopic insect that lives in carpets, bedding and upholstery. TRUE. The typical home contains millions of dust mites, which feed off flakes of dead skin and food debris. To keep dust mites off mattress, box springs and pillows, zip them in allergen-proof plastic encasements.
4. To help keep the air in your home free of dust and pollen, you should vacuum upholstered furniture frequently. TRUE. Also, to minimize allergens within the home, dust with a damp rather than a dry cloth, wash bedding and blankets regularly on the "hot" cycle and rent a high efficiency particulate air (HEPA) filter, available from medical supply stores.

ATLANTA (AP) - Coretta Scott King says the policy banning homosexuals from the military is similar to the one that once kept blacks segregated in the armed forces.

Mrs. King said Wednesday she is "counting on the president to honor his pledge" to lift the ban.

"The arguments that have been raised in favor of the ban are the same arguments that were so often raised against racial integration," Mrs. King said in a news conference at her husband's grave site.

"I don't believe you can stand up for freedom for one group of people and deny it to others," she said.

5. There is no difference between an antihistamine and a decongestant. FALSE. Antihistamines help fight your body's reaction to allergens. They prevent the action of histamine released in certain sites, such as the blood vessels in your nose. Therefore, antihistamines provide relief for a runny nose and itchy, watery eyes. The newest antihistamine available over-the-counter is Tavist-1 Tablets, containing a unique 12-hour ingredient formerly available only by prescription.

Decongestants help you breathe more freely by opening up the nasal airways to lessen nasal congestion. In doing this, they clear the openings to the sinus passages, allowing the sinuses to drain, thus relieving painful congestion. Some people find relief with an antihistamine-decongestant combination. Tavist-D Tablets, also newly available without a prescription, combine the antihistamine of Tavist-1 with a potent decongestant.

6. It's impossible to tell the difference between allergy symptoms and colds. FALSE. Although allergies and colds share some traits, allergies are not accompanied by a fever. Colds seldom involve itching—a trademark symptom of allergies. Allergy symptoms usually last longer and are steady in intensity; colds are generally short-lived and often vary in intensity from hour to hour. Also, mucous secretions from a cold tend to get thick and cloudy as the illness progresses, while allergy secretions remain clear and thin.

7. Molds can cause allergies. TRUE. To kill molds around sinks and bathtubs, wash them with bleach and repair plumbing leaks.

8. Pet allergies are caused by the animal's hair or fur. FALSE. The true villain is pet dander, which are minute scales that cling to fur, hair and feathers. If you can't part with your pet, bathe it once a week and keep it out of the bedroom at all times.

9. Allergies often run in families. TRUE. But onset of symptoms can develop at any age.

10. Washing your hair before bedtime can help you minimize allergy symptoms while you sleep. TRUE. Pollen clinging to hair after a day outdoors can rub off on your pillow, triggering allergy symptoms as you sleep.

For more information on managing your allergies, call 1-800-828-4783 for a free Allergy Management Kit provided by the makers of Tavist-1 and Tavist-D. The kit contains a guide to controlling symptoms, educational information, a resource directory, valuable coupons and more.

Early immunization can save kids' lives

Contagious childhood diseases can be crippling, even deadly. Yet, according to studies by the Centers for Disease Control, in some urban neighborhoods less than half the children under two years old are fully immunized for polio, diphtheria, measles, mumps and several other vaccine-preventable diseases.

Infant immunization is so important that some public health agencies offer free shots. But, even when these vital vaccines are provided at no cost, many parents still don't take advantage of this service. Some may lack convenient transportation, and many don't want to take time off from work.

But, most of all, experts say, more public education is needed.

"Many parents don't realize how important proper immunization is for small children," says William L. Lieber, president of Kiwanis International. "And most parents simply don't know what shots their children need, and when."

To help solve this problem, Kiwanis clubs have launched a major, multimedia public education program. The Kiwanis campaign is built around the slogan, "All Their Shots, While They're Tots," to emphasize the point that children should be fully immunized by age two.

The Kiwanis campaign includes billboards and posters, radio and television spot announcements, and public service ads in magazines and newspapers. In addition, payroll inserts and postage meter imprints can be provided to businesses, and a 14-minute videotape is available for viewing in physician and clinic waiting rooms.

Children should be immunized for nine vaccine-preventable diseases before age two. At birth and one month, children should be immunized for hepatitis B. At two months and four months, immunizations are needed for diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (DTP), polio, and haemophilus influenzae.

At six months boosters for DTP, hepatitis B, and haemophilus influenzae are needed. Finally, at 15 months children should be immunized for measles, mumps and rubella (MMR), and get boosters for DTP, polio and haemophilus influenzae.

Kiwanis is one of the world's leading service clubs. Kiwanis clubs are dedicated to fellowship and community improvement through voluntary service projects. There are almost 9,000 Kiwanis clubs with 330,000 members in 80 nations.

The immunization campaign is just one part of a major Kiwanis service program called "Young Children: Priority One." The program encourages local Kiwanis clubs to create projects to meet the needs of children from prenatal development to age five.

Talk to your children before taking trips

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - How many times on a long car trip do parents hear these words: "Are we there yet?" Probably more times than they care to count!

Young children have little concept of time and space, says Wanda Draper, a child development specialist at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center. So parents should respond in terms that children can understand.

"We'll be there when we stop and sleep two more times," is a good response, Draper said. Or parents can say, "after some snacks and some play, it won't be too long until we reach our destination."

Older children, ages 7 to 13, can be asked to chart out how long it will take to get to the next major town. "This way, you are allowing them to use their minds, which tends to quiet down their bodies, which are very confined by the car," she said.

Draper said counting passing

Her field of study was physical therapy. She has accepted a position with the Occupational Medicine Center of High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

She and her husband, Heath Bell, also a graduate of HHS, are making their home in Canyon. She earned her bachelor's degree from West Texas A&M University.

trucks or restaurant billboards, playing portable electronic games, card games or simple board games can often keep children happy.

If arguments break out among siblings, she offers the following suggestions:

- Early intervention is not always a good idea. Many times parents will be accused of taking sides, which often makes matters worse. So tolerate disputes as long as you can stand it.

- When things get out of hand, pull the car off the road for a "cooling off period."

- Turn the argument into a family discussion. Children often just want attention from parents, she said, and they will respond if you involve them in this kind of discussion.

- Talking about the purpose of the vacation, which is to have relax and have fun, can often turn around a back seat dispute, especially when parents tell children they must "follow the rules of respect" and help everyone have a good time.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have a cement porch and I love to sit out there in the evenings. My problem is that the birds love it too and now there are bird droppings to deal with.

"They are so messy and yucky! What is the best way to remove them? Help!" — Georgia Morris, Houston, Texas

With the garden hose, rinse off the entire cement porch. Mix some household cleaner and hot water according to package directions and scrub the area with a stiff brush. These "yuckies" may be stubborn, so some extra-strength elbow grease may be needed. After cleaning, rinse thoroughly.

There's no sure-fire way to keep the birds off the porch, but here are a couple of ideas that may help: Place an inflatable snake on the patio floor to scare birds, or hang a couple of aluminum pie plates from the roof. — Heloise

Dear Heloise: A room can be cleared of smoke in a few minutes if you dip a towel in equal parts of vinegar and hot water.

Wring it out and wave it gently over your head as you walk about the room. — Isabelle Phelps, Boston, Ky.

This hint does work, although your family may think you are a little silly.

It seems like vinegar has a zillion uses, doesn't it? I have compiled a pamphlet just full of useful vinegar hints. To receive a copy, please send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Vinegar #1, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

Dear Heloise: When I buy a new washable rug or bedspread or a garment that has special washing instructions, I cut out the part of the label containing the instructions, write "my rug" (or whatever it is for) on it and tape the clipping to my dryer.

Then when I wash or dry the article, I don't have to wonder if this was the piece that required cold water, no dryer, etc. — Fay Wynn, Port Hueneme, Calif.

Dear Heloise: My hint is to clean your refrigerator before going to buy groceries.

This will help make room for the new items and also help inventory what you may need to put on the shopping list.

I also like to rearrange my pantry so that I know what I am in need of. With this easy hint you accomplish two deeds at once — cleaning and inventory. — Margo Lucas, Laredo, Texas

Dear Heloise: Here is a tip for the kids who are going off to college or moving away from home.

Buy a new address book — the large ones are best. Write down all your friends' and family's addresses and phone numbers, in and out of state. You may want to jot down special days, birthdays and anniversaries.

In the back of the book, glue or tape a small envelope and place one or two books of stamps and maybe some pre-stamped postcards in it. This helps to get them in a writing mood.

They can fill in all their friends' names and numbers, or if they're having a going-away party, have each guest fill it out. — Romona Morgan

TRAVEL DRAWERS

Dear Heloise: When I replace underwear which has seen better days, I save it to take on long vacations. I wear it once, discard it and use the room it took in the luggage for gifts and souvenirs. — Hinda Miller, Rochester, N.Y.

This will also work with socks and pajamas.

I know people who do this and I often wonder what the hotel maids think! — Heloise

Set a healthier table

There's good news for many Americans concerned about their diets.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture are requiring more reliable and more useful nutrition information on food packages. Almost all foods will have to carry nutrition information that will help with today's health concerns. Titled "Nutrition Facts," it will usually be found on the back or side of the package.

Many new labels will also carry "shorthand" nutrition information that will usually show up on the front of the package. For example, definitions of words such as "light" and "low fat" are now set by the government so they mean the same thing for every product on which they appear.

Most health experts agree that what we eat can raise--or lower--our risk of certain diseases. For example, a diet low in fat can help reduce the risk of getting certain kinds of cancer.

To help consumers apply these scientific findings to their own diets, claims linking a nutrient or food to the risk of a disease or health-related condition will be allowed under certain circumstances on FDA-regulated products. Seven such claims will be allowed:

1. Calcium and a lower risk of osteoporosis;
2. Fat and a greater risk of cancer;
3. Saturated fat and cholesterol and a greater risk of coronary heart disease;
4. Fiber-containing grain products, fruits and vegetables and a reduced risk of cancer;
5. Fruits, vegetables and grain products that contain fiber, particularly soluble fiber, and a reduced risk of coronary heart disease;
6. Sodium and a greater risk of high blood pressure;
7. Fruits and vegetables and reduced risk of cancer.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The newsworthiness of photos of Julia Roberts and Lyle Lovett outweigh the couple's desire for privacy, a judge ruled.

Film of the two on their wedding day was confiscated from a People magazine photographer. U.S. District Judge Sarah Evans Barker ruled Tuesday that the photographer can have the film back.

"They were people who had inserted themselves into the public light," Barker said of Lovett and Roberts, who were married Sunday in Marion, Ind.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You were right when you said it was depressing that so many family members don't get along. It is especially true around holidays such as Thanksgiving and Christmas.

It is difficult for me to understand how children and parents can toss each other away like so much garbage. My mother-in-law's two sisters do not speak to one another because of a fight that happened so long ago no one remembers what it was about. A good friend of mine doesn't speak to two members of her family because of a family loan.

I am grateful for the small family I have. My parents were Holocaust survivors whose family members died in the gas chambers. My sister and I grew up without aunts, uncles or cousins and with only one grandparent. We created a family out of our parents' immigrant friends and their children.

My parents did not have the advantage of a "normal" childhood. They spent their teen years witnessing the worst atrocities that humans can inflict on one another. When they came to the United States in 1948, no one offered them counseling to help them heal, so they made some mistakes raising my sister and me.

I hope your readers who are still bitter about their parents will consider for a moment how their parents were raised. Maybe they had difficult life experiences and did the best they could under those circumstances.

More important, what are those readers doing to heal themselves and break a generational cycle of family dysfunction? Are your readers doing the best THEY can?--Deborah in Boca Raton

DEAR DEBORAH: Thank you for a compassionate letter that could open some eyes and heal some wounds.

We are all molded by how we were treated in our early years, but it never ceases to amaze me how some people who had extremely rough handling turn out to be sweet and gentle. I know such people and admire them greatly.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I recently read your column about divorce being too easy to get. I believe that is a mistake. The real problem is that it is too easy to get married.

There are places where people can get married the same day they take their blood tests. I have heard that some states don't even require a blood test. When people are in a hurry, they go across the state line so they don't have to wait.

Why do they do this? Because they are afraid if they don't get married at once, the fish will get away. Well, I have news for them. If love is here to stay, it will be here today, tomorrow, next week, next month or even next year.

If people would take a little more time to get to know each other before they marry, there wouldn't be so many divorces. There should be a law in all states that makes it mandatory to be officially engaged for at least six months. That means couples should apply for a marriage license, and if they are still together six months later, they should be allowed to get married. This would certainly do a lot to knock down the horrendous number of divorces. I am speaking from experience, Ann. If I'd had to wait six months, I would never have married and would have avoided a very nasty divorce.--Learned The Hard Way vary by state. Some states demand a waiting period from the time a marriage license is requested until it is granted. In my opinion, this requirement should be adopted in every state in the union.

DEAR HARD WAY: The laws

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You claim that sensitive, intelligent women can make their sexual needs known to men -- and, as a last resort, joint counseling should be considered.

This may be true for some people, but you have never met my husband, "John." I've told him several hundred times that ONCE is enough, twice is uncomfortable and anything more than that is downright painful. He pays no attention.

I have said, "No! Stop, you are hurting me!" But he ignores my protestations as if I were a prostitute he had paid for.

I've attempted to involve John in my fantasies, most of which include vacation spots, romantic places and soft music, but he is completely unresponsive. He has suggested several fantasies that he thinks would be "exciting." The most recent was that I buy some cheap underwear and let him rip it off me.

I've asked John to go for counseling several times over the years, but he refuses. Are there other men like this out there, or do I have the only one?--Wondering in Michigan

DEAR MICHIGAN: What you describe comes close to marital rape. If John won't go for counseling, I suggest that you go alone. Your husband's treatment goes beyond lack of consideration -- it is brutal. No woman should put up with it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: All of a sudden, I have noticed that a new front has been opened in the war between the sexes--namely, the battle of the toilet seat.

Wives are threatening to divorce husbands for leaving the toilet seat up. Young women are ditching their fiances over this issue. Women in coed dorms are organizing class-action suits. After decades of silence, this matter suddenly has become a fierce bone of contention.

Apparently, this is considered a feminist issue--one more example of man's everlasting oppression of women. Actually, it is an anti-feminist issue. It implies that women are weak, neurotic creatures who lack the physical strength to move a toilet seat from the up position to the down position.

I don't recall when I last sat on a toilet without checking to make sure that the seat was down, but I'm certain I was never upset if I had to make the small adjustment. Why all the static?--Bethesda

DEAR BETH: It doesn't take much physical strength to put a toilet seat down. It's the lack of consideration for others that is irksome. Real class is how people behave when nobody is looking.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A dear friend of mine has a beautiful 17-year-old daughter, who I am sure has epilepsy. Her mother insists that the seizures I have witnesses are not serious--just "little spells" that she will outgrow.

When I mentioned the possibility that the girl might have epilepsy, my friend yelled, "Impossible! No one in our family has ever had it"

What can I do to help?--X in Arizona

DEAR X: Epilepsy need not run in families. It can be the result of prenatal or birth injury or an infectious disease. It has nothing to do with insanity.

Medication can control most seizures beautifully. Show this column to your friend. That girl should see a neurologist at once.

—YOUR EYES—

GLAUCOMA

Glaucoma is a sneaky disease. In its early states it rarely causes any pain or noticeable symptoms. There may be a decrease in side or peripheral vision, but most often it comes on so gradually that the patient is unaware of the changes. Yet it can and does cause blindness.

That's why it's so important to have your eyes tested regularly by your optometrist.

In glaucoma, pressure builds up within the eye because of the overproduction of certain natural fluids or, more often, because the fluids are not draining properly. This condition is not related to high blood pressure -- except that, like high blood pressure, it can be controlled to avoid damage to the eye. Early detection and prompt treatment are vital.

In a fast and painless test, your optometrist measures the pressure within the eye. The tonometer test is usually standard procedure in the regular eye examinations of those over 35.

Make it a fabulous Fourth of July!

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative wants your Independence Day celebration to be fabulous -- and safe. Here are some tips to help:

- ❶ Unplug electric grills when not in use.
- ❷ Place your grill away from dry grass, bushes, and your home. Protect the grill from the wind.
- ❸ Carefully observe all warnings on fireworks. Or better yet, go see a local fireworks show instead of doing your own -- especially if conditions are dry in your area.
- ❹ Don't use kerosene or gasoline in place of charcoal lighter fluid.
- ❺ Don't overdo on food and drink.

And, of course, have loads of fun. After all, the Fourth is one of the best birthday celebrations of the year!

Create a child's secret garden

It's not too late to start an outdoor gardening activity with your younger kids.

The key to creating interest with budding gardeners is to keep the project simple and small enough to maintain, using fast-growing seeds and plants.

Here are some ideas to get your child started on his or her own secret garden:

-Pick a small container. Find a planter box, an old wheelbarrow or even an old wagon and poke holes in the bottom. Kids will enjoy planting and tending their own kid-size mini plot.

-Plan the garden. Let your youngster be a landscape architect. Cut out a piece of white tissue paper the length and width of the planting container. Figure out where you will plant seeds and seedlings. Using a black marker, help your child write the words (or draw a picture of the flower or vegetable) on the portion of the plan where you want them to grow. Then indicate with an "X" the exact spot you want to plant the seeds and seedlings.

-Plant. Set the gardening plan over the soil in the plant container. Mist it lightly with water to hold it in place. With a pencil, poke holes in the soil through the tissue at each "X" where you wish to plant seeds and seedlings and drop in the seeds and plants. Mark each row or section with a labeled popsicle stick.

When the garden is planted, carefully remove and discard the tissue paper plan. Help your child get in the habit of watering the garden frequently. Look for budding sprouts that will appear in a week or two. Happy harvest!

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Tom Cruise made a good impression - several of them, in fact - as he sank his feet and hands into wet concrete at Mann's Chinese Theater.

Cruise on Monday became the 173rd celebrity to leave his mark outside the theater on Hollywood Boulevard.

Cruise, accompanied by wife, Nicole Kidman, posed for pictures and signed autographs for many in the crowd of hundreds.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I read your column about gout. I had a blood test recently which showed that I have arthritic gout. I have swelling and pain, especially in my right ankle. The doctor prescribed allopurinol, which I take every morning. So far, I feel no relief. I, too, would like a list of foods good for me and those I should not eat. I do not smoke and never use alcoholic beverages. Which vegetables are high in purines? We enjoy fresh asparagus. We eat a lot of beef. Is that harmful? I like good meat!

DEAR READER: There are several forms of gout. The acute painful attacks are managed somewhat differently from the chronic form of gouty arthritis. That is caused by the slow deposition of uric-acid products (sodium urate). These deposits can cause serious deformity of the joints. Allopurinol (Zyloprim) is used to prevent acute attacks, but not to treat them once they occur. It also is used to treat chronic gouty arthritis.

You cannot expect an immediate result from allopurinol. In patients with gouty arthritis, the uric-acid level may not even fall initially because the urate deposits are being mobilized and keep the blood level high. At the beginning of allopurinol treatment, it is often advisable to take colchicine with it to prevent acute attacks or pain.

I am sending you Special Report 86, Gout: The Disease of Kings, which will provide the dietary information you need as well as information on the management of gout. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/86, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537.

As you will see from that report, vegetables are not high in purines, but the following contain moderate amounts of purines and should be used moderately if at all: peas (mature), lentils, mature bean seeds, cauliflower, spinach, eggplant, mushrooms and, regrettably, asparagus. But that still leaves a host of vegetables that you can use. Uric acid is made from purines.

Red meats are on the list of foods that contain a moderate amount of purines, so you should not use more than one serving of these a day.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My cousin went through a CT scan and several X-rays. He was diagnosed as having a tumor on his left kidney and he has polycystic kidney disease. Can you explain this disease to me, because I have never heard of it? What treatment is involved and is it curable? We are very concerned because his doctor isn't doing anything at present for his condition.

DEAR READER: A simple cyst of the kidney is common and does not require treatment. As many as half of the population over age 50 have such a cyst.

When there are multiple cysts, it is called polycystic kidney disease. This condition may cause back and flank pain and blood in the urine, or it may be painless. It is an inherited disease. The kidneys are enlarged from the cysts. In the adult form, treatment is really to prevent any complications that might occur, including avoiding any instrumentation that might cause a kidney infection and treating high blood pressure should it occur. Should the kidneys fail, which often never happens, then a person becomes a candidate for a renal transplant or dialysis.

Your letter is not clear whether your cousin has both a tumor of the kidney and polycystic kidney disease or just the latter. If there is a tumor, not just a cyst as well, then that is an entirely different matter.

Cut firewood in spring or early summer. This will allow it to dry properly and burn more easily next fall.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Annual ice cream social attended by lapidary club

Members of the Deaf Smith County Lapidary Club met Monday evening for their annual ice cream social held in the home of Jack and Helen Nunley.

The door prize was furnished by Lurline and Bud Cawthon and was won by Helen Nunley.

Ezell Sadler invited the members to spend time at his home in September at the lake located in Breckenridge.

Jack Nunley reported on the recent trip to Buffalo Lake Refuge.

The next meeting is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. July 26 in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library. All those interested in rocks and lapidary work are invited to attend.

Members present at the ice cream social were Messrs. and Mmes. Bud Cawthon, Floyd Coker, Ralph Packard, Dale Henson, Weldon Roberson, Ezell Sadler and Jack Nunley. Also, Bert Brown, Joe Williams, Ruth King, Cecil Lady, Thama Pearson and L.D. Combs.

Local 4-H'ers place in state competition

The Deaf Smith County Consumer Decision Contest received an eighth place ranking out of 24 teams at the recent Consumer Decision Contest held on the Texas A&M campus at State 4-H Roundup.

Jami Parker, Sarah Perrin, Amanda Sims and Shelia Teel were members of the team. The Consumer Decision Contest focuses on comparative selection of various items for given classes. The classes for this year's state contest were telephone answering machines, fishing rods, athletic shoes, health club memberships, checking accounts, watches, boom boxes and bookbags. Verbal reasons were presented to judges on class selection to comprise the total score to rank the teams.

The consumer decision team and project training will begin for all age levels beginning in December. Interested youth ages third grade or nine years old to 19 may sign up for this 4-H project in August at the 4-H Enrollment Event.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

MIAMI (AP) - Roy Black, the lawyer who won the acquittal of William Kennedy Smith on rape charges, is dating one of the jurors in the case.

Black said his relationship with Lea Haller began a year after the 1991 trial when the two "bumped into each other."

Black, 48, and Haller have been an item ever since.

"We certainly had no romantic interest during the trial," he said.

Black knew plenty about the 39-year-old owner of a cosmetics company.

ANNOUNCEMENT

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor
EARLY

ENTREPRENEURS

Actually, it was an unlikely partnership. John was a Harvard graduate, class of '55, who had disdained the world of business and was teaching school. George was a field surveyor and a cowboy-type who was known for his horsemanship and love of hunting. Jim was a grain farmer, and Ben was a tinker who worked at a printing company. Tom was a lawyer whose practice began in '67. Only Alex had any business experience. He was in charge of a small import/export company and was a sharp financial manager.

I wasn't around when these six famous entrepreneurs put the deal together, but I have enjoyed the fruits of their labor for many years. Every day, I am grateful for their perseverance, motivation and determination.

I often see the same drive, enthusiasms and spirit today. I am surprised and pleased by the independence that small business owners exhibit as they battle to succeed in the free enterprise system. It is the same spirit of independence that the pioneering partners had as they worked through the start-up phase of their venture.

A slow start

The venture itself was of debatable worth. The partners took a long time to decide to do it. It took even longer to decide how to do it. No one remembers which one of the six partners actually had the idea first. It might have been Ben. He was the oldest and had the most creative and fertile mind.

The key element of the partnership's eventual success was attention to planning and detail. They put together a good plan and revised it. Without the plan, the necessary funds would have been impossible to raise.

One of the conditions that made this partnership unique was that, after drawing up the plan, they followed it. As the venture moved into new areas, they always referred to the plan. Progress was measured against the plan, and it's still used today.

The venture made headlines in the international community when news of it spread. It still generates attention today. Scores of people have observed the venture, examined the plan and copied the elements of the partner's success.

The ultimate venture

What venture did these early entrepreneurs put together? Who were these famous partners? Their creation is known worldwide as the United States of America, the ultimate venture. The partners were six of history's finest men: John Adams, George Washington, James Madison, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton. The plan is our Constitution and Bill of Rights.

The venture was more than just a business. It laid the foundation for business operation as we know it today. The plan guarantees inalienable rights and freedoms. In fact, even element of our free enterprise system is underwritten and supported by the Constitution.

The partners were more than just entrepreneurs. They not only put their reputations and resources on the line, but also their lives. They worked, debated, traveled and struggled to give birth to what we affectionately call America.

In America, our free enterprise system allows us the freedom to choose, succeed and profit. I believe that is exactly what Adams, Washington, Madison, Franklin, Jefferson and Hamilton had in mind when they planned the ultimate venture.

As we celebrate Independence Day this year, let's take a few moments to remember our heritage, enjoy our freedom and pray for the future. Let us actively work to preserve the free enterprise system that our nation's forefathers so carefully designed. We will retain our freedom by retaining our independence. We will retain our independence by remembering the lessons taught by our early entrepreneurs.

Use ceiling fans for style, comfort

It's a breeze: Adding to the beauty and comfort of your home or apartment, that is, while saving on your utility bills, with the help of one of today's stylish ceiling fans. Consider the benefits:

-A ceiling fan in the kitchen can provide much needed circulation to dispel heat and odors. It can transform an entryway into a true breezeway, create a soothing atmosphere in the bedroom or drive insects away from an outdoor patio. -From classic wood and brass to sophisticated hi-tech models, there are more ceiling fan choices than ever before.

-Ceiling fans let you set the comfort level where it's needed most. If you spend much of the summer on the sun porch instead of the living room, rather than turning up the central air conditioner to cool rooms not even in use, you can use a ceiling fan to cut down on energy costs.

Fox's 'Front Page' braces for inevitable changes

BY JOHN CROOK

Two weeks before the projected launch of Fox Broadcasting Company's news magazine "Front Page," executive producer David Corvo already knows what his new show is going to need more than anything else: time.

"All of these (news magazine) programs need time to grow," he says by phone from his Los Angeles office. "They launch, then you have to make adjustments."

Corvo should know. He supervised the CBS news magazines "60 Minutes," "48 Hours" and "Street Stories" before joining Fox last year.

"Front Page," which aired its first edition on Saturday, June 26, will keep things fluid and experimental during its first weeks, he said.

"It's a news magazine that I think will be recognizable to viewers who enjoy that kind of program on other networks, but it will have, I hope, the Fox spin to it," Corvo explained. "One of the differences is that it will be slightly younger in its approach, in its look and in some of the story selections... most important, in its attitude."

Each hourlong program examines three main stories, he added, with "video essays" interspersed. "We will develop a regular group of these (filler items) as we grow, but in the beginning we're going to rotate a lot of ideas through and see which ones work and which ones don't."

Correspondents for the show are Ron Reagan, Andria Hall, Tony Harris, Josh Mankiewicz and Vicki Liviakis. Reagan, the best-known on the team, was host of a short-lived but well-received talk show last season that, in addition to reports for "Good Morning, America," earned him his spot on "Front Page."

"I thought he was terrific," Corvo says of Reagan's talk show. "It was a serious, issue-oriented program, and I thought he handled a lot of issues very well. These long pieces on magazine shows are interview-driven, and I know that's one thing Ron has demonstrated his skill at, in a slightly different format. That skill should be translatable to our show."

While acknowledging that Saturdays traditionally have not been a great night for news programs, Corvo is quick to add, "but it's a great night for Fox. Fox has won the night for the past couple of weeks, and it usually comes in either first or second for the night. Our lead-in, 'Cops,' is one of Fox's most successful programs, and there should be some affinity between audiences for that show and ours."

"I'm in the thick of my first assignment now," says Liviakis, who comes

Food cable channels are coming to a television near you

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The buzzwords in the cable TV industry today are as futuristic as "interactivity" and "information superhighway." They're also as traditional as shopping, food and romance.

While waxing lyrical about the dazzling potential of hundreds of channels and services like movies on demand, networks and suppliers are trusting that the tried-and-true can mesh with the new world.

Avid consumers will be glad to know that cable TV has yet to achieve its full home-shopping potential. That's according to exhibitors at the recent National Cable Television Association convention.

Today, America; tomorrow, the world: QVC Network Inc., the U.S. television shopping service, and British Sky Broadcasting, a European pay-TV service, are planning a TV shopping service for Europe come fall.

On the domestic side, the joy of shopping is also coming to - of all places - the New Inspirational Network.

The 2-year-old network reaches 7.1 million homes and bills itself as a cross-denominational effort to bring religious, family-oriented programming to television. Now, home shopping will join the mix.

Testing on the daytime shopping service may begin as early as August, says network President David Cerullo.

"It won't be a straight offering of products," Cerullo said. "There will be a weaving in of inspirational thought and talk."

The changing cable world - with its predicted 500-channel, digital compression superhighway, and with new federal regulation - makes such profitable services especially valuable, he says.

"Cable systems and networks are trying to determine who is going to survive in this changing environment, and how they can develop new revenue streams," he says.

Coming interactive TV technology, which will allow viewers to order items directly through their TV set, will give increased importance to home shopping, Cerullo says.

Industry analyst Larry Gerbrandt,

with Paul Kagen Associates Inc., says electronic retailing is widely expected to be a key source of revenue in the interactive age.

"We see a lot of the players beginning to stake claims to the new territory," Gerbrandt says. He noted that, without interactive technology, home shopping has evolved into a $2.5 billion business.

Cable TV is also nibbling on another lucrative area: food. The TV Food Network is being launched later this year, offering a menu of food news, cooking shows and cookbook reviews.

"You say food channel and people say, 'What?' But then it's, 'Gee, why didn't people think of this earlier?'" says Reese Schonfeld, president of the Food Network.

"The reason is that television is a male-dominated industry," he says. Experts predict up to 70 percent of the network's audience will be women - making it attractive to advertisers, Schonfeld says.

Programs will include "Food in a Flash," "Eating Light" and "Robin Leach: Talking Food," which will feature Leach, a chef-sidekick and celebrity guests.

"It will be Larry King with a kitchen," Schonfeld says. "If Robin brings Henry Kissinger in, and he has a potato dumplings recipe, we'll eat his recipe and talk foreign policy."

The service is being offered free to cable operators if they sign up before its November debut and offer it to viewers as part of the basic cable program package.

The Food Network will reach 2.5 million homes the first year. That figure is expected to grow to a projected 18 million to 20 million homes within three years, Schonfeld says.

Advertising eventually is expected to help the network turn a profit.

And finally, will the high-tech TV world still have room for love? A new network, Romance Classics, is betting yes.

Romance Classics will feature classic and contemporary film and TV programs with romantic themes

It is part of Rainbow Programming Holdings Inc., which also includes American Movie Classics.

Viewers can expect few fireworks from network movie schedule

The networks dig deep into their vaults for this week's slate of movies. On Sunday, July 4, CBS repeats "Mrs. Lambert Remembers Love," the story of an orphan and his grandmother who flee authorities trying to separate them. Walter Matthau and Ellen Burstyn head the cast. Over on ABC, Morgan Freeman stars as a tough inner-city principal in "Lean on Me." NBC trots out the action film "C.A.T. Squad: Python Wolf," starring Joe Cortese and Jack Youngblood.

Fox unveils its full-length adaptation of Jonathan Heap's Academy Award-nominated short film, "12:01," airing Monday, July 5. In the sci-fi thriller about an experiment gone awry, Jonathan Silverman plays a man caught in a time warp in which he repeats the same day over and over again. Helen Slater and Martin Landau co-star. Angela Lansbury and Robert Prosky star in "The Love She Sought," a tale of complicated romance airing on NBC. ABC's Monday offering is the docudrama "The Preppie Murder," starring Danny Aiello, Billy Baldwin and William Devane.

On Tuesday, July 6, CBS replays "Deliver Them From Evil: The Taking of Alta View," starring Harry Hamlin as a disturbed man holding a maternity ward hostage. The USA Network original action film "Deep Trouble," starring Robert Wagner, premieres Wednesday, July 7.

Roma Downey has the title role and 160 costume changes in the three-part biographical miniseries "A Woman Named Jackie," repeating on NBC beginning Friday, July 9.

A young man (Rick Schroder) helps his brother recover from a car accident in "Miles From Nowhere," Saturday, July 10, on CBS. James Farentino co-stars. Also on Saturday, the Eddie Murphy film "Boomerang" debuts on HBO, followed by the first part of the HBO miniseries "Laurel Avenue." Charles Dutton of Fox's "Roc" is executive producer of the drama about a family's momentous weekend.

SUNDAY

Principal Joe Clark (Morgan Freeman) confronts one of his students in his thankless quest to cleanse East Side High of incorrigibles and drug dealers in "Lean on Me," airing Sunday on ABC.

to Fox after serving this past year as weekday co-anchor and reporter for "The 10 O'Clock News" at KCOP-TV in Los Angeles. "It's an investigative piece on a scam, and it's got all the elements: sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll. It's very current and 'sexy.' I'm not trying to be coy, but this story is just so hot right now that other people are starting to sniff around and, obviously, I don't want anyone to report it before we do."

Like Corvo, she thinks the "younger demographic" of "Front Page" will help distinguish it from other news magazines.

"There will be stories of universal appeal, but we're targeting an audience from 25 to 49. All of the correspondents are in their 30s, but we tend to think of ourselves as still young," she says, laughing.

SOAP WORLD

A year of success for Linda Dano

BY CANDACE HAVENS

It has been a busy year for Linda Dano. She turned 50, had a front-burner story line as Felicia on "Another World," launched her new accessory line and question-and-answer segment on cable shopping network QVC, and stopped along the way to pick up the Emmy for Outstanding Lead Actress.

Dano is not one to rest on her laurels and accolades; actually, she is not one to rest at all. She is perpetually busy and lives by the popular motto "Just Do It."

"I think if I stopped long enough to think about everything I'm doing, I'd only worry, and then I wouldn't get anything accomplished," says Dano. "I remember when I was a kid and my mom would say, 'If you want something done, give it to someone who is busy.' If you have a million things to do you find a way, but if you only have one thing to do you drag your feet."

Dano has spent the last 11 years portraying the writer/talk show host Felicia, and she is the first to give her co-workers the credit for helping her to make the character such a success.

"You know, it's a funny thing," Dano says. "actors always get a bad rap. People say they are jealous, competitive and unfriendly, and on our set that couldn't be further from the truth. We are like a family, sometimes competitive, but also very supportive."

Dano also feels lucky to have a good support system at home. She and husband Frank Attardi have been together for 17 years and married for 11 years. "Frank is such a dear, wonderful man," says Dano lovingly. "Whenever I come home, no matter what time it is, he doesn't glare at me and ask where have I been. He puts his arms around me and says 'Hi honey, are you tired?'" Dano reciprocates the caring attitude by leaving special gifts under his pillow and arranging for candlelight dinners whenever possible.

Attardi and Dano share a passion for their early 18th-century home in Connecticut. "When we really want to relax we go antiquing," says the actress. "We love to take long drives and stop at little antique stores along the way. It is so much fun for us."

TV FOR KIDS

Fourth of July fare on Family Channel

BY SCOTT WHITE

The Family Channel salutes Independence Day by airing an episode of "Adventures of the Black Stallion" that reminds us just how far America has to go to achieve true liberty and justice for all.

On Sunday, July 4, young jockey Nicole (Marianne Filali) experiences prejudice when she is harassed at the racetrack because of her gender. The prodding continues until she is forced to fall during a race. With her spirit more bruised than her body, she is reluctant to climb back into the saddle for another race, even with the support of trainer Henry (Mickey Rooney) and friend Alec (Richard Cox).

Viewers who have not previously watched "Black Stallion" may find this a good starting point. The show is well-acted and easy to watch, and the equestrian atmosphere adds a sense of courage and dignity to stories dealing with difficult issues. The New Zealand locations and the presence of war-horse actor Rooney give the feeling of a feature film rather than a weekly series. Horse-racing fans of all ages will enjoy the insider's view of racing strategy and politics.

Also airing Sunday on Family is the Shirley Temple favorite "Stand Up and Cheer" from 1934. Leading man Warner Baxter is appointed Secretary of Amusement. He and Temple then team up to chase away the nation's Depression-era blues.

NBC hits the beach for AVP volleyball tour

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

Can't make it to the beach this summer? It may be little consolation, but NBC brings the sights and sounds of the surf and the sand into living rooms across the nation when it presents coverage of the Association of Volleyball Professionals Pro Beach Volleyball tour on Sunday, July 4.

The tour stops in Manhattan Beach, Calif., for the Killer Loop tourney. Former U.S. Olympians Chris Marlowe and Paul Sunderland handle the play-by-play and color analysis for NBC.

NBC's coverage is part of this year's expanded schedule of AVP telecasts. NBC will travel to Hermosa Beach, Calif., for the U.S. Championships on Saturday, Aug. 28, and Sunday, Aug. 29, and then it's on to Cincinnati for the Tournament of Champions on Saturday, Sept. 4.

NBC will break new ground on Saturday, July 31, from Milwaukee, Wis., when it presents the first live network coverage of a women's pro beach volleyball event.

"Everything about the AVP is growing," says Jon Miller, NBC Sports' vice president of program planning and development. "Interest among spectators, advertisers and participants is at an all-time high. Our interest in the fastest-growing sport in America is increasing, and that is reflected in NBC's commitment to the sport."

George Jones headlines TNN music special

BY JOHN CROOK

The man known as "the King of Country" headlines the "George Jones and Friends Hall of Fame Special" airing Monday, July 5, on The Nashville Network. Newcomers Tracy Lawrence and Pam Tillis are featured in the one-hour concert taped in Austin, Texas. Songs include "He Stopped Loving Her Today," which Country America magazine readers recently voted the No. 1 country song of all time.

Fox's 'Front Page' braces for inevitable changes

BY JOHN CROOK

Two weeks before the projected launch of Fox Broadcasting Company's news magazine "Front Page," executive producer David Corvo already knows what his new show is going to need more than anything else: time.

"All of these (news magazine) programs need time to grow," he says by phone from his Los Angeles office. "They launch, then you have to make adjustments."

Corvo should know. He supervised the CBS news magazines "60 Minutes," "48 Hours" and "Street Stories" before joining Fox last year.

"Front Page," which aired its first edition on Saturday, June 26, will keep things fluid and experimental during its first weeks, he said.

"It's a news magazine that I think will be recognizable to viewers who enjoy that kind of program on other networks, but it will have, I hope, the Fox spin to it," Corvo explained. "One of the differences is that it will be slightly younger in its approach, in its look and in some of the story selections ... most important, in its attitude."

Each hourlong program examines three main stories, he added, with "video essays" interspersed: "We will develop a regular group of these (filler items) as we grow, but in the beginning we're going to rotate a lot of ideas through and see which ones work and which ones don't."

Correspondents for the show are Ron Reagan, Andria Hall, Tony Harris, Josh Mankiewicz and Vicki Liviakis. Reagan, the best-known on the team, was host of a short-lived but well-received talk show last season that, in addition to reports for "Good Morning, America," earned him his spot on "Front Page."

"I thought he was terrific," Corvo says of Reagan's talk show. "It was a serious, issue-oriented program, and I thought he handled a lot of issues very well. These long pieces on magazine shows are interview-driven, and I know that's one thing Ron has demonstrated his skill at, in a slightly different format. That skill should be translatable to our show."

While acknowledging that Saturdays traditionally have not been a great night for news programs, Corvo is quick to add, "but it's a great night for Fox. Fox has won the night for the past couple of weeks, and it usually comes in either first or second for the night. Our lead-in, 'Cops,' is one of Fox's most successful programs, and there should be some affinity between audiences for that show and ours."

"I'm in the thick of my first assignment now," says Liviakis, who comes

AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - The buzzwords in the cable TV industry today are as futuristic as "interactivity" and "information superhighway." They're also as traditional as shopping, food and romance.

While waxing lyrical about the dazzling potential of hundreds of channels and services like movies on demand, networks and suppliers are trusting that the tried-and-true can mesh with the new world.

Avid consumers will be glad to know that cable TV has yet to achieve its full home-shopping potential. That's according to exhibitors at the recent National Cable Television Association convention.

Today, America; tomorrow, the world: QVC Network Inc., the U.S. television shopping service, and British Sky Broadcasting, a European pay-TV service, are planning a TV shopping service for Europe come fall.

On the domestic side, the joy of shopping is also coming to - of all places - the New Inspirational Network.

The 2-year-old network reaches 7.1 million homes and bills itself as a cross-denominational effort to bring religious, family-oriented programming to television. Now, home shopping will join the mix.

Testing on the daytime shopping service may begin as early as August, says network President David Cerullo.

"It won't be a straight offering of products," Cerullo said. "There will be a weaving in of inspirational thought and talk."

The changing cable world - with its predicted 500-channel, digital compression superhighway, and with new federal regulation - makes such profitable services especially valuable, he says.

"Cable systems and networks are trying to determine who is going to survive in this changing environment, and how they can develop new revenue streams," he says.

Coming interactive TV technology, which will allow viewers to order items directly through their TV set, will give increased importance to home shopping, Cerullo says.

Industry analyst Larry Gerbrandt,

with Paul Kagen Associates Inc., says electronic retailing is widely expected to be a key source of revenue in the interactive age.

"We see a lot of the players beginning to stake claims to the new territory," Gerbrandt says. He noted that, without interactive technology, home shopping has evolved into a $2.5 billion business.

Cable TV is also nibbling on another lucrative area: food. The TV Food Network is being launched later this year, offering a menu of food news, cooking shows and cookbook reviews.

"You say food channel and people say, 'What?' But then it's, 'Gee, why didn't people think of this earlier?'" says Reese Schonfeld, president of the Food Network.

"The reason is that television is a male-dominated industry," he says. Experts predict up to 70 percent of the network's audience will be women - making it attractive to advertisers, Schonfeld says.

Programs will include "Food in a Flash," "Eating Light" and "Robin Leach: Talking Food," which will feature Leach, a chef-sidekick and celebrity guests. "It will be Larry King with a kitchen," Schonfeld says. "If Robin brings Henry Kissinger in, and he has a potato dumplings recipe, we'll eat his recipe and talk foreign policy."

The service is being offered free to cable operators if they sign up before its November debut and offer it to viewers as part of the basic cable program package.

The Food Network will reach 2.5 million homes the first year. That figure is expected to grow to a projected 18 million to 20 million homes within three years, Schonfeld says.

Advertising eventually is expected to help the network turn a profit.

And finally, will the high-tech TV world still have room for love? A new network, Romance Classics, is betting yes.

Romance Classics will feature classic and contemporary film and TV programs with romantic themes.

It is part of Rainbow Programming Holdings Inc., which also includes American Movie Classics.

Viewers can expect few fireworks from network movie schedule

The networks dig deep into their vaults for this week's slate of movies. On Sunday, July 4, CBS repeats "Mrs. Lambert Remembers Love," the story of an orphan and his grandmother who flee authorities trying to separate them. Walter Matthau and Ellen Burstyn head the cast. Over on ABC, Morgan Freeman stars as a tough inner-city principal in "Lean on Me." NBC trots out the action film "C.A.T. Squad: Python Wolf," starring Joe Cortese and Jack Youngblood.

Fox unveils its full-length adaptation of Jonathan Heap's Academy Award-nominated short film, "12:01," airing Monday, July 5. In the sci-fi thriller about an experiment gone awry, Jonathan Silverman plays a man caught in a time warp in which he repeats the same day over and over again. Helen Slater and Martin Landau co-star. Angela Lansbury and Robert Prosky star in "The Love She Sought," a tale of complicated romance airing on NBC. ABC's Monday offering is the docudrama "The Preppie Murder," starring Danny Aiello, Billy Baldwin and William Devane.

On Tuesday, July 6, CBS replays "Deliver Them From Evil: The Taking of Alta View," starring Harry Hamlin as a disturbed man holding a maternity ward hostage. The USA Network original action film "Deep Trouble," starring Robert Wagner, premieres Wednesday, July 7.

Roma Downey has the title role and 160 costume changes in the three-part biographical miniseries "A Woman Named Jackie," repeating on NBC beginning Friday, July 9.

A young man (Rick Schroder) helps his brother recover from a car accident in "Miles From Nowhere," Saturday, July 10, on CBS. James Farentino co-stars. Also on Saturday, the Eddie Murphy film "Boomerang" debuts on HBO, followed by the first part of the HBO miniseries "Laurel Avenue." Charles Dutton of Fox's "Roc" is executive producer of the drama about a family's momentous weekend.

SUNDAY

Principal Joe Clark (Morgan Freeman) confronts one of his students in his thankless quest to cleanse East Side High of incorrigibles and drug dealers in "Lean on Me," airing Sunday on ABC.

to Fox after serving this past year as weekday co-anchor and reporter for "The 10 O'Clock News" at KCOP-TV in Los Angeles. "It's an investigative piece on a scam, and it's got all the elements: sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll. It's very current and 'sexy.' I'm not trying to be coy, but this story is just so hot right now that other people are starting to sniff around and, obviously, I don't want anyone to report it before we do."

Like Corvo, she thinks the "younger demographic" of "Front Page" will help distinguish it from other news magazines.

"There will be stories of universal appeal, but we're targeting an audience from 25 to 49. All of the correspondents are in their 30s, but we tend to think of ourselves as still young," she says, laughing.

SOAP WORLD

A year of success for Linda Dano

BY CANDACE HAVENS

It has been a busy year for Linda Dano. She turned 50, had a front-burner story line as Felicia on "Another World," launched her new accessory line and question-and-answer segment on cable shopping network QVC, and stopped along the way to pick up the Emmy for Outstanding Lead Actress.

Dano is not one to rest on her laurels and accolades; actually, she is not one to rest at all. She is perpetually busy and lives by the popular motto "Just Do It."

"I think if I stopped long enough to think about everything I'm doing, I'd only worry, and then I wouldn't get anything accomplished," says Dano. "I remember when I was a kid and my mom would say, 'If you want something done, give it to someone who is busy.' If you have a million things to do you find a way, but if you only have one thing to do you drag your feet."

Dano has spent the last 11 years portraying the writer/talk show host Felicia, and she is the first to give her co-workers the credit for helping her to make the character such a success.

"You know, it's a funny thing," Dano says, "actors always get a bad rap. People say they are jealous, competitive and unfriendly, and on our set that couldn't be further from the truth. We are like a family, sometimes competitive, but also very supportive."

Dano also feels lucky to have a good support system at home. She and husband Frank Attardi have been together for 17 years and married for 11 years. "Frank is such a dear, wonderful man," says Dano lovingly. "Whenever I come home, no matter what time it is, he doesn't glare at me and ask where have I been. He puts his arms around me and says 'Hi honey, are you tired?'" Dano reciprocates the caring attitude by leaving special gifts under his pillow and arranging for candlelight dinners whenever possible.

Attardi and Dano share a passion for their early 18th-century home in Connecticut. "When we really want to relax we go antiquing," says the actress. "We love to take long drives and stop at little antique stores along the way. It is so much fun for us."

TV FOR KIDS

Fourth of July fare on Family Channel

BY SCOTT WHITE

The Family Channel salutes Independence Day by airing an episode of "Adventures of the Black Stallion" that reminds us just how far America has to go to achieve true liberty and justice for all.

On Sunday, July 4, young jockey Nicole (Marianne Filali) experiences prejudice when she is harassed at the racetrack because of her gender. The prodding continues until she is forced to fall during a race. With her spirit more bruised than her body, she is reluctant to climb back into the saddle for another race, even with the support of trainer Henry (Mickey Rooney) and friend Alec (Richard Cox).

Viewers who have not previously watched "Black Stallion" may find this a good starting point. The show is well-acted and easy to watch, and the equestrian atmosphere adds a sense of courage and dignity to stories dealing with difficult issues. The New Zealand locations and the presence of war-horse actor Rooney give the feeling of a feature film rather than a weekly series. Horse-racing fans of all ages will enjoy the insider's view of racing strategy and politics.

Also airing Sunday on Family is the Shirley Temple favorite "Stand Up and Cheer" from 1934. Leading man Warner Baxter is appointed Secretary of Amusement. He and Temple then team up to chase away the nation's Depression-era blues.

NBC hits the beach for AVP volleyball tour

BY MICHAEL SCOGIN

Can't make it to the beach this summer? It may be little consolation, but NBC brings the sights and sounds of the surf and the sand into living rooms across the nation when it presents coverage of the Association of Volleyball Professionals Pro Beach Volleyball tour on Sunday, July 4.

The tour stops in Manhattan Beach, Calif., for the Killer Loop tourney. Former U.S. Olympians Chris Marlowe and Paul Sunderland handle the play-by-play and color analysis for NBC.

NBC's coverage is part of this year's expanded schedule of AVP telecasts. NBC will travel to Hermosa Beach, Calif., for the U.S. Championships on Saturday, Aug. 28, and Sunday, Aug. 29, and then it's on to Cincinnati for the Tournament of Champions on Saturday, Sept. 4.

NBC will break new ground on Saturday, July 31, from Milwaukee, Wis., when it presents the first live network coverage of a women's pro beach volleyball event.

"Everything about the AVP is growing," says Jon Miller, NBC Sports' vice president of program planning and development. "Interest among spectators, advertisers and participants is at an all-time high. Our interest in the fastest-growing sport in America is increasing, and that is reflected in NBC's commitment to the sport."

George Jones headlines TNN music special

BY JOHN CROOK

The man known as "the King of Country" headlines the "George Jones and Friends Hall of Fame Special" airing Monday, July 5, on The Nashville Network. Newcomers Tracy Lawrence and Pam Tillis are featured in the one-hour concert taped in Austin, Texas. Songs include "He Stopped Loving Her Today," which Country America magazine readers recently voted the No. 1 country song of all time.

Robert Wagner and Ben Cross join an otherwise all-French cast in "Deep Trouble," a muddled tale of deep-sea divers and stolen diamonds debuting Thursday, July 8, on the USA Network. Cross' over-the-top performance as a mobster has camp appeal, but viewers will have to wade through long scenes of non-English-speaking performers struggling unsuccessfully with their dialogue.

"Laurel Avenue," a two-part, dramatic miniseries bowing Saturday, July 10, on HBO, offers a powerful slice of black American life in St. Paul, Minn. Acclaimed director Carl Franklin ("One False Move") is at the wheel; the cast includes Mary Alice ("To Sleep With Anger") and Vonte Sweet ("Boyz n the Hood"). Part 2 airs the following night.

TNT's "Our Favorite Movies" on Thursday has George Steinbrenner introducing "Pride of the Yankees."
