Electric power disrupted due to strong wind

Some Hereford residents may have gotten an unpleasant surprise when they woke up this morning and realized they were as much as two hours behind.

That is because Wednesday night's strong winds knocked out power in part or all to portions of Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

Bob Avery, a substation foreman with Southwestern Public Service Co., said the problem started about 1:30 a.m.

"We lost a jumper on one of our 69,000 volt lines that was feeding the substation," said Avery.

Power in North and Northeast Hereford diminished around 1:30 a.m., he said. At about 2 a.m., workers shut down power to convert the city over to a secondary source and restore service.

That blackout was for about 10 minutes, then the city was restored. However, Avery said, Deaf Smith

Electric Co-Op customers affected by the brownout and blackout did not receive power again until the original problem had been solved and the power returned to the original source.

That, he said, was at about 3:40 a.m.

As of this morning, Avery said, the problems had been fixed and the city and county were back to normal.

Gene George of the electric co-op said in addition to the brown- and blackout, his company sustained wind damage near Nazareth.

George said the company lost three power poles about half a mile west of Nazareth, which knocked out power to about 470 customers.

However, power was routed around the damaged area and electric service was restored within about an hour, he said.

Crews are replacing the damaged poles today.

Wind damage

This elm tree at the home of Steve and Nan Coneway on Rio Vista Drive, was a victim of strong winds that blew through the Hereford area Wednesday night. No rains fell in the city, but both Southwestern Public Service Co. and Deaf Smith Electric Co-Op reported power outages as a result of the winds. This tree was pulled from the ground and deposited in the front yard.

World leaders continue Tokyo meet

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) - Leaders of the world's major industrial nations today warned against dismembering Bosnia but backed away from a threat to use force. They also moved to endorse a U.S.-backed plan to help privatize the struggling Russian economy.

Japan, host of the annual seven-nation economic summit, staged a spectacular display of traditional pageantry with a lavish court dinner for summit participants at the moat-ringed Imperial Palace.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin joined the festive gathering as he prepared to press his appeal for more Western aid.

A political declaration issued at the midpoint of the three-day summit opposed efforts by Bosnian Serbs and Croats to partition the former Yugoslav republic. It vowed to apply economic pressure in an effort to end the war that has left tens of thousands dead.

The statement was slightly tougher than had been suggested by the group's foreign ministers and raised the prospect of "stronger measures." But it stopped short of the specific threat of military force contained in last year's communique.

White House counselor David Gergen said the communique was crafted to avoid raising unrealistic expectations about Western actions in Bosnia.

After issuing their political declaration, leaders of the United States, Japan, Britain, Germany, France, Italy and Canada returned to their chief order of business - reviving the sagging global economy. They were expected to issue their economic communique - the summit's centerpiece - on Friday.

Also Friday, leaders were expected to endorse a $3 billion privatization package for Russia, the Clinton administration announced today.

That amount was scaled down from the $4 billion originally sought by the administration, but Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen portrayed the commitments as a victory.

The United States will put up $250 million of the $3 billion total. Half of the total would come from international lending agencies such as the World Bank.

The announcement of the privatization package came hours after Yeltsin arrived in Tokyo. Yeltsin was holding talks with individual leaders about the overall $28.4 billion aid package they have pledged for this year.

Japan, which has a lingering territorial dispute with Russia over northern islands seized after World War II, has generally been cool to aid for Yeltsin's government.

The Russian leader sought to mend relations as soon as he landed, apologizing for abruptly canceling two previously planned visits to Tokyo.

"Relations with Japan are one of the most important priorities of Russian foreign policy," he said.

Japanese officials said later that Yeltsin had proposed an official visit to Japan sometime in September or October.

Later, the courtesy was returned as Yeltsin was given a seat next to Empress Michiko and Mrs. Yeltsin was seated next to the crown prince at a reception before the palace banquet.

Crown Prince Naruhito and his new bride, American-educated Princess Masako, greeted the leaders and their wives.

U.S.-Mexico program brings woman here

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A visitor this week in Deaf Smith County is learning a great deal about life in the United States, even to holding down the fort at the home of a host family while the mother went to the hospital to give birth.

Lety Campos of Saltillo, Coahuila, Mexico, is an adult participant in an exchange of youth between the University of Coahuila and Texas A&M University.

Deaf Smith County Extension Agent for 4-H, Jay Johnson, is a group leader for the Texas delegation in the exchange.

Mrs. Campos came here from Brownwood where the youth and adults in the program met for a day and a half of orientation. She is staying with residents while in the county.

A guest in the Summerfield home of Jack and Maggie Howley on July 4th, Mrs. Campos found she could make herself very useful to the family.

"Maggie went to the hospital to have a baby and I stayed with the other kids," she said, with a laugh.

Her other hosts during her stay here are Stan and Cyndi Isaacson, Beverly Harder and Jim and Brenda Campbell.

Mrs. Campos works in the extension department of the University of Coahuila and has become very interested in the 4-H program.

"I started translating programs and they told me I would work with 4-H," she said. "I asked 'What is 4-H?' but I got interested while translating." The exchange in which Mrs. Campos and Johnson are involved is sponsored by the Kellogg Foundation. Universities in states in the U.S. and Mexico are paired for exchanges.

Seventeen youth from Saltillo and 17 from Texas are taking part this year. The youth from Mexico are staying in homes of Texas partner-families now. Next week, they all go to Mexico where the Saltillo youth will host the Americans.

"The purposes are to understand other cultures, to change stereotypes and to improve self-esteem," said Mrs. Campos.

While in Hereford and Deaf Smith County, Mrs. Campos is taking every opportunity to see the 4-H program in action.

For example, Wednesday she took part in a program given by Extension Agent Beverly Harder, learning to make "bread in a bag."

Her goal is to involve more youth and adults in 4-H in Saltillo, a city of approximately 500,000. The city is the capital of the state of Coahuila and is located southwest of Monterrey, a city of about 1.5 million.

"I want to see how the 4-H program works," she emphasized. While in Hereford, Johnson and the extension office are helping her learn about the youth program as it functions in the county.

Called the "Hermanandono's Exchange," the program that brought Mrs. Campos to Deaf Smith County is aimed at youth in the 15 to 19-year-old age group.

Coast Guard eyes alleged shooting

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

The U.S. Coast Guard is investigating an allegation that a Mexican navy patrol boat fired across the bow of American shrimp trawlers fishing legally north of the U.S.-Mexico maritime border.

A Mexican navy official said the incident early Wednesday occurred in Mexican waters and denied that shots were fired.

Wilma Anderson, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association, accused the Mexican navy boat of trying to seize three South Texas-based shrimp trawlers.

But Comandante Rafael Ingoyen at the Naval Sector in Matamoros, Mexico, said the Mexican boat was conducting a routine inspection for unlicensed fishing and trafficking of drugs or weapons.

The Coast Guard reported that one of its cutters arrived in the sector about 1.5 miles east of Port Isabel, in deep south Texas, and informed the Mexican gunship it was about 10 nautical miles north of the maritime line.

The Mexican boat acknowledged the position and headed south to Mexican territory, the Coast Guard said in a statement.

According to Ms. Anderson, the trouble began at 4 a.m. CDT Wednesday when a Mexican boat approached four shrimp vessels.

One shrimp vessel escaped, but crews of the other three claimed that the Mexicans fired shots across their bows to force them to stop, she said.

The Coast Guard said it was investigating allegations by the crew of "Carolina Lady" that the Mexican navy fired warning shots. Its report will be sent to the U.S. State Department.

Ms. Anderson asserted that the American crews were held at gunpoint and ordered to a Mexican port.

Anderson said no shots were fired, and the incident happened about 11 miles south of the line stretching east from the coast of Texas.

Such procedures are routine inspections, Ingoyen said. "This incident happened in Mexican waters," he said.

Ms. Anderson alleged that the Mexican navy tried to seize the most expensive-looking American trawlers.

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says good listeners are not only popular everywhere but after awhile, they know something.

Overheard at the coffee shop: "Now that I'm retired, I'm still kicking...but I'm not raising much dust."

Someone recently gave us a copy of an editorial written by editor Jim Reynolds in The Tulia Herald recently. Although it refers to events in Tulia, the thought-provoking column could just as easily be written about Hereford and most rural communities throughout the region: "Shop Tulia while it's still here."

That was the message an individual requested to be placed in a paid advertisement in The Tulia Herald recently. This is a message to be heeded, but it likely will not be taken to heart by a number of individuals.

A teacher in this town, which has two restaurants specializing in pizza, drove to Plainview to buy pizza for a school function. The following week, students who participated in this function paid visits to both local pizza places...seeking donations!

The city manager asked to be placed on the agenda at the next school trustee meeting to make his point on the subject. That board adopted an informal policy that school-related groups are not compelled to trade in their home town, but they shall not seek contributions from firms they do not patronize!

While examining the policy, the school board learned that the junior class was sending someone to Lubbock twice weekly to purchase items from a large discount store for the class-operated concession stand. In the meantime, they were soliciting donations from the town's food stores!

A local non-profit organization in the same town was catering a meal for a major town activity. They went to Lubbock for the food, then asked the local food store manager for major discounts on last-minute odds and ends to complete and serve the meal!

That old dog has almost hunted too many times, so to speak.

Many people will drive 60 miles to save a dollar, but that practice is "killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

Termed differently, who will fund all types of local endeavors--everything from school yearbook sponsorship to providing gifts for senior citizens' events, to offering livestock show premiums, to youth baseball team sponsorship, to bowling team sponsorship, to picnic celebration financing and numerous others? The vast majority of funding for these projects comes from local businesses.

Sheer and simple, small town merchants can't stay in business and support worthwhile local activities if potential customers spend all of their dollars in Amarillo.

Three lottery players match

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
SEMINOLE, Texas (AP) - Three lucky ticketholders soon will be headed to Austin for their piece of the Texas Lottery's estimated $50 million jackpot.

Each winner will go home about $16 million richer, once they cash in tickets bearing the numbers 7-8-15-42-46-47, said lottery spokeswoman Carmen Luevanos. The winning tickets were sold in South Texas, Central Texas and the Dallas area, she said.

"The last few weeks have been filled with anticipation as (the) Lotto Texas jackpot grew ...," said State Comptroller John Sharp. "Now we can look forward to meeting our trio of lucky winners."

Three hundred people who matched five of the six winning numbers were to receive $2,731 each, while 19,373 players who picked four correct numbers won $152 each, according to a prepared statement from Sharp's office.

Further details, including the exact total the three top winners will share, were to be released later today, Ms. Luevanos said. The pot returns to $3 million for Saturday's drawing. The single-day sales record of $24 million was set May 1 when the jackpot reached a record $48.6 million. That pool was split by 14 winners.

At the Hester Stateline Oil Co. in Seminole, just four miles east of Hobbs, N.M., lottery players had jammed the parking lot and jostled for counter space inside.

"They say you can't win unless you do it," said Hobbs homemaker Janet McAtce. "Everybody I know comes over here."

The tiny convenience store in Seminole has sold $1.9 million in Lotto and scratch-and-win tickets since the Texas Lottery began last year. Officials say a Town & Country store in McAllen was Texas' No. 2 lottery retailer with $1.5 million sales.

The Seminole store is nothing fancy - a few dusty gas pumps out front, shelves crammed with air freshener and Campbell's soup. But here, less than a quarter-mile from the state line, customers come in from the hot sandy wind to dream their vision of wealth.

Texas schools ask for statewide group to lure Pantex work

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Top officials from three Texas universities are proposing a statewide research group to help lure more Energy Department work to the Pantex Plant. Pantex, about 17 miles northeast of Amarillo, is the nation's primary assembly and disassembly plant for nuclear weapons.

The plant, operated by contractor Mason & Hanger Silas-Mason Co., is under consideration for possible expansion or elimination under an Energy Department plan to downsize and modernize the complex.

In a letter to Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary earlier this year, three university officials said they hope to create a statewide research consortium to research peaceful applications of weapons technology.

University of Texas System chancellor William H. Cunningham, Texas A&M University System Chancellor Herbert H. Richardson and Texas Tech University President Robert Lawless all signed the letter.

The letter notes that DOE is examining the possibility of consolidating research and weapons production facilities at one site. It urges Ms. O'Leary to consider selecting Pantex.

"The consortium we envision would coalesce the efforts of 24 campuses across the state of Texas and would combine nationally recognized programs in areas which could assist the DOE in both civilian and military research applications," the letter said.

Wales Madden Jr., co-chairman of Panhandle 2000, an Amarillo organization working to bring more jobs to the Pantex plant, said the group initiated the effort, but declined to elaborate on the proposal.

Energy Department officials in Washington, D.C. could not be reached for comment.

Convicted child killer re-located

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP) - Maybe residents in this North Texas town will be the next to protest their newest neighbor: freed child killer Raul Meza.

Meza was moved Wednesday from his mother's home in San Antonio to a privately owned halfway house in this North Texas town, a television station has reported.

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice refused to say where Meza was taken, but Dallas television station WFAA reported that Meza was at Concepts Inc. in Mineral Wells.

Barry Gill, a safety coordinator at the facility, told The Associated Press he could not confirm the report. Messages left for facility director Jim Eddington at his office and home in Mineral Wells were not immediately returned.

Each time Meza has been sent to a city, residents have lashed out against having him as a neighbor. He's been shuffled from El Paso to Uvalde to Wichita Falls and, finally, San Antonio before Wednesday.

People were outraged that Meza, who served 11 years for the rape-slaying of an 8-year-old Austin girl, could be freed.

They may have more ammunition in their fight against his release based on the state's handling of "good time" for Meza that knocked years off his sentence.

The Dallas Morning News reported in its Thursday editions that Meza was freed because he had accumulated the maximum amount of good time despite having that reward revoked three times for bad behavior.

But following each punishment, his good time was restored, officials told the newspaper. Meza eventually had 22 years and nine months knocked off his term and actually served only 11 years and six months.

During his prison term for murder, Meza repeatedly bucked prison rules, incurring four serious infractions, including possessing a homemade knife. But the disciplinary actions against him were always short-lived, prison records show.

girls doubles and mixed doubles: 18-under and 14-under.

Juniors in the 12 and 14 age groups will play Aug. 5-6. Juniors in the 16 and 18 age groups will play Aug. 6-7. Adults will play Aug. 7-8.

Entries are limited to three events in two divisions. Juniors may also play in the "A" adult divisions.

The entry fees for singles events are $7 for YMCA members and $9 for non-members. Those fees are doubled for doubles events.

Instruction will be concentrated on individual skills in the morning (9 a.m.-noon), and team competition will be featured in the afternoon (1-4 p.m.). Instruction will come from high school and junior high coaches and from ex-HHS players.

Campers should bring a sack lunch each day. If they leave for lunch, only a parent may pick them up.

Starters set for MLB All-Star Game

By RONALD BLUM

AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Change is the name of the game when it comes to the 1993 All-Stars.

Ozzie Smith's out and Barry Larkin's in. It's so long to Benito Santiago and hello to Darren Daulton.

Half of the 16 players elected by fans to Tuesday's game at Baltimore will be first-time starters, and some of them were surprised they finished first in the fan voting announced Wednesday.

"It's a scary thought that the fans want to see me play," Philadelphia first baseman John Kruk said. "What is society coming to these days?"

Society, it seems, is tired of the old faces and wants new names. And since fans vote for the starters, they get what they want.

"Going into the year, I wouldn't have guessed I'd be voted in over guys like (Mark) McGwire, (Cecil) Fielder and (Frank) Thomas," said Toronto's John Olerud, the AL starter at first base. "It means a lot to me to be with such an elite group."

Florida third baseman Gary Sheffield not only became a first-time starter, he became the first player elected from an expansion team. The penny-pinching Padres traded him from San Diego to the Marlins on June 24.

There are five first-time starters in the NL: Kruk, Sheffield, Philadelphia's Daulton at catcher, Cincinnati's Larkin at shortstop and Atlanta outfielder David Justice. The first-time starters in the AL are Olerud, Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez and Blue Jays outfielder Joe Carter.

There also are some old names, but even they're sort of new. San Francisco Giants outfielder Barry Bonds was first on the voting list at 3,074,603, the most votes a player received since Davey Lopes of the Los Angeles Dodgers got 3,862,403 in 1980. Bonds got his first All-Star start last year, when he was with Pittsburgh.

Ken Griffey Jr., who last year made his family the first father-son combo to hit All-Star homers, topped AL players with 2,696,918 votes. Griffey, just 23, will start for the fourth straight season. He also was the top AL vote-getter in 1991.

"I'm excited," he said. "I was hoping Dave Winfield was voted in so I could steal his jersey."

Winfield might make it, yet. The rest of the teams will be announced today. Toronto, which leads the AL East, had the most starters with three: Olerud, Carter and second baseman Roberto Alomar and outfielder Joe Carter. Philadelphia, which leads the NL East, had the most starters with two and might get a third if Lenny Dykstra replaces injured Pittsburgh outfielder Andy Van Slyke.

Returning starters in the NL include Chicago second baseman Ryne Sandberg, elected for the eighth straight time and the ninth time in 10 years, Bonds and Van Slyke, elected for the second straight time. Larkin stopped the 10-year starting streak of St. Louis shortstop Smith.

Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. heads AL returnees. He will start for the 10th consecutive season.

Wade Boggs of the New York Yankees was elected at third base for the seventh consecutive year, and will start for the eighth straight time overall (he replaced Kansas City's George Brett in 1986).

Cowboys release Saxon

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys released veteran punter Mike Saxon in favor of a pair of free agents who couldn't make National Football League rosters last season. Free agents Steve Domingos and John Jett will compete for the position when training camp opens in Austin on July 15. Domingos, 6-3, 200 pounds, was cut by the Los Angeles Rams in their training camp in 1992. He played at San Francisco State and spent the 1991 season with the semipro Fresno Bandits. Domingos had a 45.6 gross-punt average with the Bandits. Jett is a 6-0, 184-pounder from East Carolina who was released from the Minnesota Vikings' training camp last year. This year's training camp will be the first camp with competition at the position since 1989. The club did not bring in anyone to challenge Saxon since then.

"Mike did a good job for us through the years," head coach Jimmy Johnson said in a statement. "We simply have decided to move in a different direction with the punting position on this team." Saxon, originally an 11th-round draft pick of the Detroit Lions in 1985, spent all eight of his NFL seasons with the Cowboys. He has a career average of 41.5 yards per punt and 68 career punts downed inside the 20 yard line.

Minor League champs

Dickerson joins Falcons

ATLANTA (AP) - Can Eric Dickerson find happiness with his fourth NFL team? The Atlanta Falcons certainly hope so. The NFL's No. 2 career rusher has produced everywhere he's been, but he's also been unhappy everywhere he's been. That leaves his new team, the Falcons, wondering if someone in their cast of characters - Deion Sanders, Jerry Glanville, maybe even Hammer - can make him smile. After waiting a week for Al Davis' approval, the Falcons on Wednesday completed a trade with the Los Angeles Raiders for Dickerson, who turns 33 less than a week after the 1993 season starts.

for the Colts. Indianapolis unloaded him in a 1992 draft-day trade with the Raiders. The Colts wanted a high draft pick, but could do no better than a fourth-rounder. Dickerson was unhappy in a limited role with the Raiders last year. He rushed for 729 yards and became expendable when Los Angeles acquired Gaston Green from Denver. The Falcons think Dickerson has enough left in his legs to help last season's worst rushing offense. So does Dickerson. "I don't feel 32, and when people see me on the field, they won't believe I am," Dickerson said. "I know what the calendar says, but I think under the right conditions, I could still gain 1,000 yards or more. "If they're looking for a horse there, I'm ready to have them ride me."

In return, the Raiders get a conditional sixth-round choice in the 1994 draft. The draft pick reportedly becomes a fifth-rounder if Dickerson rushes for at least 1,000 yards. Dickerson and the Falcons agreed last week on a contract reportedly worth $1.3 million and loaded with incentives.

"After my visit to Atlanta (in mid-June), my focus has been on getting a deal with the Falcons," Dickerson told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution on Wednesday. "This whole change to Atlanta and an offense I like ... it's had me feeling like a young colt again."

Dickerson played five seasons with the Los Angeles Rams and five with the Indianapolis Colts before playing for the Raiders last year. His best season was 1984 with the Rams, when he rushed for 2,105 yards.

But Dickerson is nearing the end of a career notable as much for controversy as for accomplishment.

His 13,168 yards are second only to Walter Payton's 16,726. He reached 10,000 yards in only 91 games, faster than any other player in history, and has rushed for 1,000 yards seven times, played in six Pro Bowls and won four NFL rushing titles.

But there is a down side. In Indianapolis, Dickerson was reunited with Ron Meyer, his former coach at Southern Methodist. The honeymoon didn't last long.

In his first year there in 1987, Dickerson led the Colts to their only playoff appearance of the decade. He ran for 1,659 yards in 1988 and 1,311 yards in 1989.

A hamstring injury slowed him before the 1990 season, and he left training camp to rehabilitate on his own before playing in eight of the final 11 games, gaining 677 yards.

In 1991, with the Colts in the midst of a 1-15 season, Dickerson left the team after an argument with interim coach Rick Venturi. Dickerson was suspended and missed five games.

During his last days with Colts, Dickerson would not talk to the media, or even his teammates while the media were present. He announced after the last game he would retire rather than play another game

Bud Wilkinson's football teams at Oklahoma won 145 games, lost 29, and tied four.

Phillies outlast Dodgers in another marathon

By The Associated Press
The Philadelphia Phillies - an overnight success story in more ways than one.

Not only have the Phils gone from last place last year to first place this year, they've developed a bit of a habit of winning baseball games in the middle of the overnight shift.

The latest chapter in their late-night exploits came Wednesday night when they beat the Dodgers 7-6 in 20 innings in a game that lasted six hours and 10 minutes and ended at 1:47 a.m. EDT.

"Someone thinks we make too much money. They're trying to make us earn it," John Kruk quipped.

In other games, it was San Diego 2, New York 0; Cincinnati 4, Chicago 3; Montreal 3, San Francisco 0; St. Louis 3, Atlanta 1; Pittsburgh 5, Houston 2 and Colorado 6, Florida 5.

The Dodgers had scored a run in the top of the 20th to go ahead 6-5, but in the bottom of the inning, Jim Eisenreich and Mickey Morandini singled and Kevin Stocker was safe on a sacrifice bunt fielder's choice to load the bases with nobody out.

Rod Nichols replaced loser Rick Tricek (0-2) and retired Kim Batiste on a foul behind first base. But Len Dykstra, who earlier had a home run, hit a liner that bounced over the fence and into the left field bullpen to score Eisenreich and Morandini.

Dykstra went 3-for-9, raising his average to .297, and his homer was his 10th of the year - four more than he hit all last year.

Padres 2, Mets 0

Anthony Young can't win even when he pitches brilliantly for 7 2-3 innings.

Young allowed a two-out bloop single to Kevin Higgins in the eighth, then gave up a home run to Archi Cianfrocco to drop to 0-12 on the year in his 26th straight loss.

Andy Benes (9-6) pitched one-hit ball over eight-plus innings, walking four and striking out eight. Gene Harris got the final three outs for his 15th save.

Expos 3, Giants 0

It was quite a big-league debut for Expos left-hander Kirk Rueter. The 22-year-old allowed only two hits over 8 1-3 innings and Larry Walker and Moises Alou homered as Montreal cooled off San Francisco.

Rueter struck out five and walked three to beat Giants rookie Greg Brummett (1-2).

Rueter's rise to the majors was swift. He began the year with Double-A Harrisburg, where he went 5-0 with a 1.36 ERA to lead the Eastern League. He was then promoted to Triple-A Ottawa in early June, going 4-2 with a 2.70 ERA, before being called up on Monday.
Reds 4, Cubs 3

Kevin Mitchell had two homers - his 14th and 15th - and three RBIs for Cincinnati at Wrigley Field. Mitchell has hit safely in 26 of his last 27 games with nine home runs and 21 RBIs in that span.

Tim Lincecum (5-9) pitched 7 2-3 innings and Rob Dibble got the final three outs for his 11th save. Greg Hibbard (7-5) took the loss.

Pirates 5, Astros 2

Orlando Merced drove in three runs with a double and a single, and visiting Pittsburgh handed Houston its third straight loss.

Paul Wagner (4-5) won in relief of Tim Wakefield, who hit a 420-foot homer for one of Pittsburgh's runs. Stan Belinda got his 16th save.

Houston's Mark Portugal (6-4) went 3 1-3 innings, allowing 10 hits. Rockies 6; Marlins 5

Chris Jones hit a two-out single off reliever Bryan Harvey in the bottom of the ninth inning at Mile High Stadium.

Harvey (1-2) yielded a one-out single to Eric Young, who stole second and went to third on a grounder. Jones hit a grounder, but shortstop Walt Weiss couldn't make an accurate throw.

Steve Reed (5-2) pitched the last two innings for the Rockies.

Yankees, Jays seemingly don't want lead in AL East

By The Associated Press

The New York Yankees are tempting fate, just darning Toronto to run away with the American League East.

The Blue Jays, however, don't seem to want to settle things just yet.

The Yankees have lost five of six games on a dreadful West Coast trip and still have four to play against the California Angels, yet they're still only two games behind the front-running Blue Jays.

A six-of-seven losing skid by the defending World Series champs has enabled the Yankees to stay the same distance from first place as they were eight days ago when they had won four straight.

A 6-5 loss Wednesday to the Seattle Mariners was the Yankees' fourth one-run defeat since they hit the road.

"We've come to expect adversity, that adversity is always going to be there," manager Buck Showalter said. "We didn't play particularly well."

Ken Griffey Jr. and ex-Yankees Tim Lincecum and Jay Buhner did the most damage Wednesday.

Lincecum (7-3) got the victory, allowing three runs on seven hits in six innings, and Buhner hit a two-run double in the fifth inning to help the Mariners go ahead to stay.

Griffey, the top vote-getter among AL players in All-Star balloting, hit his 22nd home run in the fourth for Seattle's first hit.

Bob Wickman's (8-3) luck has changed with along his team's. After winning his first eight decisions, he hasn't won since June 20. In five innings Wednesday, Wickman gave up five runs on four hits and five walks.

"It's hard to say what went wrong," he said. "You can't let it bother you. You just do your best the next time out."

In other games, Chicago beat Toronto 5-2, California beat Boston 7-6, Detroit beat Minnesota 8-4, Milwaukee beat Texas 7-6, Oakland beat Cleveland 3-0, and Baltimore beat Kansas City 8-3.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 2
Chicago's Alex Fernandez (10-4) scattered seven hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Tim Lincecum had three hits and scored two runs for the visiting White Sox, who had 16 hits. Lance Johnson's two-run double in the fifth, one of his three hits, helped give Chicago a one-game lead over Kansas City in the West.

Juan Guzman (7-2) gave up five runs and 12 hits in 5 1-3 innings.
Angels 7, Red Sox 6

Jeff Russell's consecutive save streak, spanning 21 chances back to last August, was snapped on Monday. On Wednesday at Anaheim, he showed he still hasn't recovered.

Tim Lincecum's RBI single capped a three-run ninth inning against Russell, who blew his second save in three games. Russell did not retire any of the five batters he faced in falling to 0-2.

Hot summer sun wilts most living things, but salmonella risk is high WASHINGTON (AP) - Most living things seem to wilt under the hot summer sun. But there's one thing that thrives - salmonella.

And in the midst of a broiling week, Agriculture Department officials issued a warning to be on guard against this unwelcome food spoiler.

"The warm and humid weather of summer increases the risk of a salmonella enteritidis outbreak at every point along the food chain from egg producer to human consumer," said Billy G. Johnson, deputy administrator of veterinary services in USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

He said warm summer weather nearly doubles the risk of salmonella outbreaks.

During the past three years, Johnson said, an average of 45 percent of all salmonella enteritidis outbreaks occurred between June 1 and Aug. 31. July alone accounted for an average of 21 percent of the outbreaks.

Of 191 outbreaks reported to the Agriculture Department in 1990, 1991 and 1992, he said, 85 occurred during the summer.

"Salmonella enteritidis" bacteria appear to thrive in the summertime, making it even more important that everyone take precautions when producing, shipping, handling and servicing food to reduce the opportunities for contamination," Johnson said.

Meat, poultry, eggs and milk are especially susceptible. Fresh eggs probably caused 31 percent of all salmonella enteritidis outbreaks reported to USDA from 1990 to 1992, he said.

Poultry producers and transporters should be especially stringent about sanitation and refrigeration in the summer, Johnson said.

"Food handlers and consumers are also responsible for making sure fresh eggs and food made with eggs are refrigerated and handled properly during warm weather," he added.

Here are some food-handling tips to reduce the risk of food-borne illness:

-Buy only eggs that are refrigerated, clean and unbroken. Refrigerate eggs as soon as possible after purchase.

-Use pasteurized eggs in recipes calling for raw eggs. Always use pasteurized eggs when preparing food for large groups of people.

-Be sure all utensils and dishes used to prepare food are clean.

-Keep hot food at 140 degrees Fahrenheit or higher and cold foods at 40 degrees or cooler. Don't leave food indoors at room temperature or outside for more than two hours.

Brushing may be too much of a good thing

If your toothbrush is too stiff, your brushing technique too aggressive and your toothpaste too abrasive, you may be hastening the irretrievable loss of tooth structure, while also setting yourself up for future problems like gum disease and tooth sensitivity.

According to Howard Strassler, D.M.D., an associate professor and director of operative dentistry at the University of Maryland Dental School, consumers are often overzealous in their at-home oral hygiene programs in an effort to have cleaner, healthier-looking teeth. "The most common culprits causing problems include over-brushing with hard-bristle toothbrushes and aggressively scrubbing the teeth with highly abrasive toothpastes to try to remove stain," says Strassler.

Damage may occur over long periods of time with the misuse of toothbrushes and abrasive toothpastes. Daily exposure to abrasive agents can wear away the root, causing it to be notched. In fact, you can test to see if any of your teeth are notched by taking your fingernail, placing it at the gum line and sliding it down your tooth. It is not unusual for teeth that are notched to feel sensitive to hot and cold foods.

"Whiter, brighter smiles are attainable today with toothpastes that are low in abrasion, yet high in cleaning power," says Strassler. Several whitening toothpastes have been demonstrated in a university clinical study to help brush away plaque, tartar and stain effectively with a low-abrasion formula.

Strassler offers these guidelines for avoiding excessive abrasion of the teeth:

-Use a soft brush with rounded bristles.

-Hold the toothbrush between your thumb and forefinger, not with the entire fist.

-When brushing do not "scrub" the teeth or use a horizontal, back-and-forth motion.

-Starting at the gumline, angle the brush and stroke toward the tooth, then out, to gently remove as much debris as possible.

-Be sure to brush three times a day, the America Dental Association advises.

The nation's first Social Security checks were distributed in 1937.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My brother-in-law holds the following opinion: Even though he and his wife both work full-time and are equally tired when they get home, it is HER job to do the cooking, cleaning, laundry and child care. Why? Because he earns twice as much money as she does. She has to do the work at home to "make up the difference."

Yes, he's a jerk. But this attitude is held in varying degrees by people all across America. The women's libbers of the '70s said, "We can have it all." All of what? They made stay-at-home moms objects of contempt so that now women feel pressured by their husbands and society to bring home a paycheck, while they are still expected to do the full-time job at home.

I'm proud that there are now female doctors, lawyers and senators. But the vast majority of working moms are not highly paid professionals. They are clerks, waitresses and secretaries. Their quality of life can't compare to June Cleaver's. There are too darned many divorces and lots of kids whose middle name is isolation.

Go ahead. Tell these women. "You've come a long way, baby." I bet Cornstarch, a mainstay of the U.S. food and industrial economy, is being made into golf tees that dissolve in the rain and disposable eating utensils that harmlessly decompose, reports National Geographic.

they'd spit in your eye. Thanks for letting me sound off. -Any Town, USA

DEAR ANY TOWN: It's not the fault of the women's movement that today's working women are stuck with two jobs. Blame it on the men who refuse to help.

Any wife who works outside the home has a perfect right to expect her husband to pitch in and help with the household chores. Readers, if you are married to one who doesn't, show him this column.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am employed by a large retail company. Many people don't realize that we work on a commission basis. It is so frustrating to spend a lot of time giving good customer service, only to have the customer say, "I'll decide tomorrow." At this point, I thank the customer and give him my business card, telling him to ask for me when he returns to the store.

The next day, you see that same customer, now anxious for his merchandise. He makes his purchase from whichever salesperson is standing closest, while the person who actually procured the sale is left out and doesn't get the commission. This is very frustrating.

It happened to me again yesterday. I'm trying to make a living, too. I work long hours on my feet all day to serve the public. Ann, please tell your readers to give the sale to the person who served them.--Memphis Blues

DEAR MEMPHIS: You did. And every commissioned person who reads this will bless you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband's cousin wrote and told him the wages are great in Alaska and that he should come up for a few months. So, he went, even though we have been married only a year. I am stuck taking care of his semi-invalid mother.

The problem is she wants to read every word of the letters he writes to me, and some of the things are highly personal.

I don't want to be mean, Ann, but I resent this. What should I do?--Newport News, Va.

DEAR NEWPORT: You are under no obligation to share your husband's letters with his mother. Simply say, "These letters are for my eyes only. He sends you his love." Period. Then suggest that he drop her a line.
