United Way Leaders

Lajeane Henry, right, was elected the 1988 president of the United Way of Deaf Smith County during a Tuesday board meeting. She presented a plaque of appreciation to last year's president, Howard Birdwell.

The United Way has reached its goal the past two years. New directors were elected Tuesday and Jack Mars was named vice president of the UW board.

Henry to head UW

Lajeane Henry was named president of the United Way of Deaf Smith County for 1988 during a board meeting Tuesday at the Caison House Restaurant.

Other officers elected were Jack Mars, vice president; Tony Calkins, treasurer; and Larry Alley, assistant treasurer. New directors elected to the board are Margaret Bell, Idie Geran, Rose Medrano, Cruz Ramirez and Mars.

Mrs. Henry, owner of The Pants Cage, presented a plaque of appreciation to Howard Birdwell, last year's president. Before handing over the president's gavel, Birdwell praised the 1987 campaign co-chairmen—Margaret Bell and Buddy Peeler—and presented them with plaques of appreciation. Mrs. Henry said the '88 campaign chairmen would be named in the near future.

The board also named Billie Hopson as chairman of the budget and admissions committee for the new year. Holdover board members include Birdwell, Calkins, Alley, Lloyd Ames, Boyd Foster, Carol Sue LeGate, Josie Rivera, Ken Roberts, Don Davis and Henry.

Wayne Amstutz, executive director, presented a financial statement for the year ending Dec. 31, 1987. Contributions and pledges for the past year totalled $112,386, or 98.6 percent of the budgeted total. The UW campaign surpassed its '88 goal of $120,000 with pledges totalling more than $132,000.

Picante pique patched

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The nation's top two picante sauce makers have canned their yearlong battle over designer bottles and labels, officials said.

The makers of Pace and Old El Paso picante sauces agreed in an out-of-court settlement Monday to end their 15-month stalemate.

A civil trial had been scheduled for April in federal court in San Antonio.

"No money changed hands, but we're very happy that they agreed to put an end to the confusion that the Pet package was causing to our customers," said Rod Sands, Pace vice president of sales and marketing.

Pace and Old El Paso share about 26 percent each of the $200 million-a-year Mexican hot sauce market.

Pace, based in San Antonio, had filed a lawsuit in federal court in October 1986, claiming that Old El Paso had copied its bottle design and label and placed the products in grocery stores in Texas, Denver and Atlanta.

Pace sought a preliminary injunction against Pet Inc., the makers of Old El Paso, and wanted Pet to dump the product and forfeit all profits from the sale of the new packages.

Pet, based in St. Louis, Mo., will phase in gradually its new bottle designs and labels in the three markets in which Pace said it lost business because of Old El Paso's new package.

Pet spokesman Les Landes said no Old El Paso products would be taken off the shelves.

"Nobody won. Nobody lost," Landes said. "We just decided that it was time for us to come to a mutual agreement and we were able to do so."

In December 1986, U.S. Magistrate Jamie Boyd recommended that a preliminary injunction not be imposed against Pet.

In April 1987, U.S. District Judge H.F. "Hippo" Garcia denied the preliminary injunction, saying that Pace had not proved that they had suffered financially because of the new product.

Pace attorneys then took their case to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is preparing to revise its rules governing farm workers' exposure to pesticides, but its draft proposal is already under fire from labor groups.

A major grower organization said it is pleased EPA has backed off from inflexible, overly specific "feet and inches and degrees" requirements. Farm worker organizations say the regulations need just those specifics.

"It's weak in almost every area," though "anything would be some improvement," said Shelly Davis, a lawyer with the Migrant Legal Assistance Project.

American Farm Bureau Federation pesticide specialist Mark Maslyn said, "We've been somewhat successful" in persuading EPA to avoid using "specific numbers and feet and so forth."

Louis True, director of program management and support for EPA's pesticides office, said the agency agonized in "trying to make this not overly intrusive on small farming operations."

Hereford TEAMS test scores decline

By JOHN BROOKS
Manning Editor

Like students throughout Texas, Hereford juniors scored lower this year on their TEAMS exit-level mathematics test this year compared to juniors in 1985 and 1986, the Hereford school board learned Tuesday night.

Hereford ISD Curriculum director Alice Lockmiller released the results of the TEAMS tests in math and language arts that were taken in October, showing 26 percent of the juniors failed the language arts section of the test, while 42 percent failed the math section. Students must pass both sections of the test before being awarded a diploma. Juniors who did not pass one or both sections will have three more opportunities to take the test, and will also receive special tutoring or be placed in a special class, at the expense of an elective course, to teach them the skills that were shown lacking by the TEAMS tests.

The standards were higher this year than they have been in the past. This fall, juniors had to correctly answer 50 of the 72 questions in both math and language arts to pass the test. In 1985, students needed to correctly answer only 36 math and 45 language arts questions to pass. In 1986, students had to correctly answer 50 English questions but only 39 math questions.

The "mastery" level, or the students passing the test, was down sharply this year. Mastery is determined by students answering three of four questions in the 18 sections of each examination. 58 percent of the students mastered the math test, compared to 82 percent in 1985 and 86 percent in 1986. Those figures from prior years, however, must be weighed against the fact that fewer questions had to be correctly answered in prior years, especially in math.

In math, local students scored lowest in fractions-mixed numbers, measurement units, and geometric properties, while scoring highest in decimals, charts and graphs, and exponential-standard notation.

In language arts, students scored lowest in punctuation, main idea, proofreading and correct English usage. Students scored highest in specific details, sentence combining, reference source usage and reference source identification.

In percentile rank, a figure used by the State Board of Education to determine where Texas students rank compared to student across the nation, Hereford students were in the middle, with a 50 percentile rank, in mathematics, but were far below the average in reading (32) and writing (41), using the SBOE-supplied figures.

In other business Tuesday night, the board gave permission to the Elks Lodge to use a school gymnasium for their upcoming "Hoop Shoot" competition, but a conflict on one of the dates won't allow use of the newly-renovated LaPlata gym; appointed John Dominguez to the County Juvenile Board; and reviewed a rough draft of the school district's Annual Performance Report.

Gore gets Texas backers

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, one of 63 Democrats to endorse presidential hopeful Al Gore, says he believes the Tennessee senator could reclaim voters lost to Republicans in recent elections.

"Sen. Gore can, while holding the mainstream of the Democratic Party organization in this state, appeal to those and will bring back those who have been lost in elections in the past," Briscoe said.

"That, in my opinion, will make the difference here and make it possible for him as the Democratic nominee to carry this state," said Briscoe, governor from 1973 to 1978.

Gore predicted that he would win more Texas delegates to the Democratic National Convention in the March 8 primary and be one of the top two finishers in the "Super Tuesday" Southern regional primary. Texas will send 198 delegates to the convention, the third-largest delegation.

Downplaying the importance of the first-in-the-nation Iowa precinct caucuses, Gore said that contest has lost significance when compared with the multi-state Super Tuesday primary.

"This (Super Tuesday) contest has revolutionized the process to an extent that many have not yet realized," he said. "There's a tendency on the part of many other campaigns to fight the last war and bet all their chips on Iowa and just assume that 3 percent of the people in one state that has gone Republican for the last 24 years will have the sole voice in determining who the Democratic nominee is."

The comments came during a news conference Tuesday in which Gore and Briscoe were joined by Dallas financier Jess Hay and other Democratic civic and business leaders who endorsed Gore.

Democrats must recapture support among middle-class voters if they hope to win the White House this year, Hay said.

"The Democratic Party has lost four of the last five presidential elections," he said. "It has done so in part because its candidates in those elections failed to relate their policies and programs effectively to the mainstream of American society."

"We have evaluated the seven people now seeking the Democratic nomination. ... It is our considered judgment that Sen. Al Gore is the one whose policies are most reflective of these broadly stated objectives," Hay said.

Among others endorsing Gore were former Attorney General John Ben Sheppard, former Railroad Commission members Buddy Temple and Jon Newton, former state Sen. Peyton McKnight and former U.S. ambassador Edward Clark.

Gore already has won endorsements from Texas Democratic Party chief Bob Slagle; Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth; and more than a score of Democratic state representatives.

In other political news: — Texas Republicans began phoning voters whose names appeared on the nominating petitions for all six GOP presidential candidates after party officials decided to include all six on the March 8 primary ballot.

But if a candidate failed to submit the valid signatures of 5,000 qualified voters, he won't receive votes in the primary, said John Weaver, GOP executive director.

Questions have been raised about some signatures submitted by four GOP candidates: New York Rep. Jack Kemp, Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, Alexander Haig and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont.

— Aides to Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis said the campaign would open a Bexar County campaign office in San Antonio on Wednesday and offices in McAllen and Dallas next week.

— Lon Williams, an attorney who is seeking the Republican Party nomination to oppose U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, said at a news conference at the Dallas County Courthouse, that he would address urban problems such as drugs, crime, education, unemployment and health, during his campaign.

EPA revisions drawing fire

Pesticide danger is an issue where emotions run strongly, facts are few and agreement difficult.

Caesar Chavez, president of the United Farmworkers Union, frequently cites an estimate that more than 300,000 poisonings occur each year. Grower groups scoff at the figure. EPA did not discuss that estimate, but said many incidents go unreported.

Among other things, the new regulation would:

—Extend coverage to 300,000 workers in nurseries and greenhouses and an undetermined number in commercial forestry, and to labor contractors.

—Require blood monitoring among the most exposed professional applicators to check an enzyme attacked by the most toxic pesticides, cholinesterase. The enzyme is necessary for proper functioning of the nervous system. Blood monitoring would not be required for other applicators — three-quarters of the total, though perhaps exposed only a few weeks of the year. —Require training of all applicators, not just those handling the so-called "restricted use" chemicals.

—Impose new notice requirements. Warning placards for closed fields will have to show an upraised hand and stern face. The agency rejected use of the skull-and-crossbones symbol after growers objected, according to Ralph Lightstone of California Rural Legal Assistance.

—Require a re-entry interval of 48 hours for the most toxic pesticides, unless the specific product regulation requires longer, and a 24-hour interval for the next most toxic. Labor groups wanted longer intervals, but EPA said "a significant disruption of agricultural production" would result from a 72-hour restriction.

"They have not taken into account any of the data on chronic illness like cancer and birth defects," said Ms. Davis. But True said, "We just don't have the data" to justify the longer interval.

Candidates required to get 5,000 approved signatures

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican presidential candidates whose petitions do not include 5,000 signatures confirmed by the party will be left on the ballot, but treated as if dead or withdrawn from the race, officials say.

The confirmation process began Tuesday night after recent published reports of phony signatures on ballots submitted by Republican presidential candidates Sen. Robert Dole, Pete du Pont, Jack Kemp and Alexander Haig.

Meanwhile, published reports today said a partner in Houston-based Southern Political Consultants apparently collected questionable signatures for du Pont and a Dole campaign official in Texas had ties to another company involved in collecting the signatures.

GOP Chairman George Strake said a statistical spot check would be made on petitions submitted by candidates Vice President George Bush and Pat Robertson, although there have been no allegations of forgery on their petitions.

"It is my sincere hope that our telephone verification will indeed verify all six candidates are qualified to be on the ballot and earn delegates in Texas," Strake said.

But if the party cannot verify 5,000 signatures each for Dole, du Pont, Kemp and Haig, they will not be eligible to earn Texas delegates to the Republican National Convention. The delegates will be allocated after the March 8 Texas primary.

The deadline for removing candidates for the ballot has passed, but state party rules for candidates who die or withdraw after the filing deadline say any votes for them go toward uncommitted delegates.

Strake said the goal is to know by Feb. 1 if any of the candidates are not qualified.

The verification process began Tuesday with calls to people whose signatures were on Robertson petitions, said to GOP spokeswoman Karen Parfitt Hughes.

"We didn't create the problem, but we have to fix it," said John Weaver, the GOP's Texas director, adding the effort will cost $20,000.

The confirmation process was initiated in response to newspaper reports that petitions for Dole and Haig carried faked signatures. The probe widened when a Houston Chronicle reporter found the signature of her deceased father on former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont's Texas petitions.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story today that four people whose names appear on the du Pont petition denied signing the document, which lists Rocky Mountain, a partner in Southern Political Consulting, as the signature collector.

Southern Political Consulting has acknowledged hiring temporary workers to collect signatures for the campaigns of Dole and Haig. Company president Kevin Burnette has denied any wrongdoing by the company, blaming the problems on "sloppy work" by the temporary workers.

Mountain said Tuesday he did collect some signatures, but he was unaware of any forgeries.

"All I can say is God knows how many thousands of petitions have been in our office over a month-long period," he said. "I don't know how the signatures got there."

Du Pont's press secretary, Fred Stern, said campaign officials had no knowledge of any irregularities and were investigating reports of alleged forged documents. He said the du Pont campaign would have at least 5,000 valid signatures.

The News said a random check of 36 people on du Pont petitions found that 35 denied signing the documents.

The Dallas Times Herald reported today that Tom Pauken of Dallas, one of Dole's five Texas co-campaign chairmen, is listed in state incorporation papers as a vice president and registered agent of U.S. Voter Data Inc., linked to Southern Political Consulting.

"The company has come to light as one involved in the petition drive as well as Southern Political Consulting," said FBI agent Byron Sage. Sage would not say whether Pauken is a target of the investigation.

"I hope the FBI will investigate all the people who are trying to get me," Pauken said Tuesday. "I am very upset there are people out there involved in a smear campaign against me."

Pauken said U.S. Voter Data was nothing more than a voter list company and blamed the campaign of Vice President George Bush and his Texas supporters for the FBI investigation.

New York Rep. Jack Kemp's petitions came into question Tuesday when The News reported that a random check of signatures on Kemp petitions indicated possible forgeries.

A Kemp campaign consultant, Richard McBride, said the faulty signatures may have been the work of one "overzealous" petition collector. Of the 11 questionable signatures, seven were obtained by the same person, The News said.

The Houston Chronicle reported that a woman who worked for the firm was listed as notarizing at least 30 pages of du Pont petitions containing questionable signatures.

Bush filed 35,000 names. Weaver said the totals of the others were Robertson, 9,000; Dole, 8,100; Kemp, 6,500; du Pont, 6,000; and Haig, 5,900.

Last week, FBI agents, operating under orders of U.S. Attorney Helen Eversberg of San Antonio, took the petitions submitted by Dole and Haig.

Weaver said Tuesday the GOP was awaiting word on whether the FBI also would take the du Pont and Kemp petitions.

Serious about swinging

Britt Hall, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Hall, reaches over a snowy spot for a swing during a recent outing at Dameron Park. The park has not been a busy place lately with cold weather and snow, but Britt stepped over the muddy parts to relieve some of his cabin fever.

State issues letter blaming mom and aunt for toddler's accident

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — The family of Jessica McClure is angry that state officials released a letter blaming the little girl's mother and aunt for the accident that trapped the toddler underground for 58 hours.

Jessica was being supervised by her mother, Reba "Cissy" McClure, when she fell down an uncapped well Oct. 14. The well was in the back yard of Jessica's aunt, Jamie Moore, whom state officials said was operating an unlicensed day-care center. The 18-month-old's right foot lodged near her head, and two toes had to be amputated after she was rescued from the 58-hour ordeal.

The Department of Human Services said Mrs. McClure and Ms. Moore did not adequately supervise Jessica.

"The (DHS) has found there is reason to believe the child's injuries and the time spent in the well are the result of negligent supervision by child-care provider Reba McClure," Carolyn Langendorf, day-care licensing regional director, wrote in the letter addressed to Ms. Moore.

The Oct. 30, 1987, letter was released Monday after it was reviewed to insure no one's privacy was violated, Ms. Langendorf said. But relatives of Cissy and Chip McClure said releasing the letter violated their privacy.

"They come out and say she (Cissy) was neglectful," Cedie Proctor, Chip McClure's older sister, told the Odessa American. "If they wanted to say that, why couldn't they just tell them? I thought this was supposed to be confidential. ... It really got to us that they said it was all Cissy's fault that Jessica spent three days in the well."

Chip's father, Harold McClure, worried that the letter's release would upset his daughter-in-law. He said he had not talked to Jessica's parents since the letter was released, "but I'm mad about it, that's all I've got to say."

Jessica's parents have an unlisted phone number and could not be reached for comment.

Ms. Langendorf wrote that state officials believe Ms. Moore should have had the well capped. It was capped with a steel plate the night Jessica was rescued.

When Jessica fell down the well, she apparently was one of nine children at the unlicensed day-care center in the Moore home, all less than 5 years old, the DHS has said.

Ms. Moore stopped operating the day-care center soon after the investigation began in October, Ms. Langendorf said. Ms. Moore told an Odessa television station Monday that the well should have been capped by previous owners and that she had not run a day-care center.

Course given on vineyard management

LUBBOCK — Major requirements in vineyard management on the Texas High Plains will be reviewed and demonstrated during a short-course here Saturday. It will be held at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center on FM 1294 just east of I-27 at the Shallowater exit.

The training will be conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The workshop is in cooperation with the Texas Grape Growers Assn., Region I.

Varieties, rootstocks and harvests for the High Plains will be covered by Dr. William Lipe, professor of viticulture with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Lubbock. Unit size and pruning for quality will be explained by Dr. George Ray McEachern, Extension horticulturist, College Station.

Dr. Larry Stein, Extension horticulturist, Stephenville, will cover vineyard planning and irrigation. Dr. John Lipe, Extension horticulturist, San Angelo, will explain weed management and economics.

Vineyard nutrition will be the topic of Dr. Michael Hickey, Extension Soil chemist; insect management will be presented by Dr. James Leser, Extension entomologist, and disease management will be covered by Dr. Harold Kaufman, Extension plant pathologist, all of Lubbock.

The registration fee for an individual or family is $15.

Additional information is available from Brent Wiseman, TGGG Region I director, P.O. Box 327, Sudan, 79371, or from county Extension offices on the South Plains.

Candidates cease fire

GOP officials in two important presidential campaign states are beset with delegate-selection problems, while the party's front-runners, George Bush and Bob Dole, say they want to bury the political hatchet.

On the Democratic side, Sen. Paul Simon said Tuesday he would consider raising Social Security taxes to finance long-term health care.

Bush supporters in Michigan were crowing about another legal victory Tuesday in a party-rules battle with a coalition of Pat Robertson and Jack Kemp backers. But the Robertson campaign vowed to continue the court fight, threatening to cloud the status of the Michigan delegates to the GOP convention.

In Texas, GOP workers began the time-consuming and costly process of calling thousands of people who signed presidential ballot petitions that apparently include forged names.

This is the eve of county caucuses in Michigan, when Republicans pick delegates to the state convention two weeks from now. There, in turn, 77 national delegates will be parceled out. Texas holds its primary on Super Tuesday, March 8.

Meanwhile, Bush and Dole, whose running feud was drawing criticism from fellow Republicans and ridicule from the Democratic camp, said they would hold their fire — for now.

"I think it's kind of escalated, the personalities going after one another," the vice president said in Exeter, N.H.

"I want to revert back to the old George Bush," he said, adding jokingly. "It's less interesting."

Dole, in Somersworth, N.H., indicated he would stop bringing up the Iran-Contra affair. The subject has been dogging Bush, who met Monday with representatives of Iran-Contra independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh and answered questions under oath.

Bush refused Tuesday to discuss the session with investigators, saying only that "it went pretty well." The vice president has stressed that he is only a witness in the criminal investigation, and not a target.

Dole, however, was not inclined to press the point.

"I don't think Iran-Contra is a real issue anymore," the Kansas senator said. "It's kind of died on the vine."

Dole warned Bush, however, to back off on his demand that the other contenders promptly release their tax records.

"I'm not going to follow his timetable," Dole said.

Meanwhile, two Democrats — Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis — talked up their chances in the Iowa precinct caucuses, less than a month away.

Dukakis was asked about reports quoting him as indicating he did not expect to win in Iowa, where most polls have put him behind Gary Hart and Simon.

"I never said that," Dukakis told reporters in Boston. "I'm running as hard as I can in the state of Iowa." Asked if he could win, he said: "It's wide open."

Gephardt predicted Tuesday in New York he will make a "very strong showing" in the Feb. 8 caucuses.

Flight deaths high in '87

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three major airline crashes including one that claimed 156 lives gave 1987 one of the highest death tolls during the past decade from commercial U.S. aviation accidents, according to figures from the National Transportation Safety Board.

The safety board said more deaths occurred in commercial airline crashes last year than in seven of the previous nine years. The commuter airlines also posted their worst safety record since 1979.

The major airlines flying large jet aircraft had 31 accidents during the year including four involving fatalities. The crashes resulted in 231 deaths, the highest number since 1982.

Commuter lines had 35 accidents, 10 involving fatalities. Fifty-eight people died, the most in commuter crashes since 66 were killed in 1979.

The figure of 31 airliner accidents was the highest number since 1974 when there were 42, according to the safety board. The agency counts an accident whenever there is significant injury or damage.

The 231 deaths were eclipsed over the past decade only in 1979 when 351 people were killed in aviation crashes involving major U.S. airlines, and in 1982 when 233 people were killed.

Airline industry officials suggest, however, that the total accident and fatality figures are misleading when trying to make comparisons because they do not take into account changes in traffic volume. Furthermore, a single accident involving a large aircraft could cause the total figures to soar.

Industry spokesmen said a better indicator is the rate of fatal accidents per 100,000 departures. It climbed in 1987 compared to the previous year, but still was lower than normal.

"Taken over the long term (1987) was one of the better years for airline safety," maintained Bill Jackman, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the major air carriers.

The rate of accidents involving fatalities — 0.43 per 100,000 departures — was lower in 1987 than the rate in seven of the previous nine years, according to the NTSB.

The airline association pointed to accident rate figures going back even further.

"There were only six other years since the beginning of safety regulations in 1926 that had a lower rate," said William F. Bolger, the industry group's president.

Cloud to lead special praise service Sunday

"Love Casts Out Fear" is the theme of this year's observance of the Week of Prayer For Christian Unity which will officially begin Sunday.

The public is invited to an informal praise and prayer service at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the St. Anthony's School library. The service, which will be led by Jonny Cloud, will be composed of lay leadership from churches of all races and denominations. Following the time of worship there will be a fellowship hour in the Antonian Room with child care being provided. Also, assisting Cloud will be Pat Michaels, guitarist, from the Community Church, and Dan Edwards, song leader, from New Harvest Church. Other musical groups from First Christian Church will be participating.

The Week of Prayer for Christian Unity (Jan. 17-25), will be climaxed by a worship service at 6 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 24, at the Community Church. Jeff Love, music minister at the First Church of the Nazarene, will lead the music and the message will be given by Don Kirklen, pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran Church. Chairman of the annual observance is Eloise McDougal who serves on the Commission for Christian Unity which promotes the Week of Prayer in Texas.

Others assisting with the week's observance include Jim Hickman, pastor of Dawn Baptist Church, Dorman Duggan, pastor of the Community Church, and Jon Beard, pastor of Frio Baptist Church.

Toastmasters hold meeting

Hereford Toastmasters Club held their first 1988 meeting Jan. 7 with Joe Cummings in charge of the business session while serving as general evaluator.

Cummings reviewed goals for the club set through next June, and noted that starting Jan. 14 and ending May 13 there will be a contest to determine the outstanding Hereford Toastmaster. Points will be awarded for signing up new members, obtaining awards through national programs, bringing guests outside of club speaking engagements, attendance, table topic best speaker award, best evaluator, and best prepared speech awards.

Toastmaster of the day was Milton Kowalewski, who introduced Rocky Lee. Lee spoke on "Success", a message on obtaining one's goals. Larry Leon won the blue ribbon with his talk on "That's Not Enough," which focused on voter apathy. He encouraged everyone to urge citizens to vote.

Lynn Cook was awarded the Best Table Topic Speaker of the Day ribbon.

GIVE FLOWERS NOW

By Bob Wear

Flowers are usually provided on the occasion of one's death, and we are not finding any fault with this custom. We are, however, using the expression, "Give Flowers Now" figuratively to indicate the importance of expressing our love and appreciation to people while they live. Most of us have feelings of gratitude toward somebody or for something somebody has done. Do we express this gratitude? If we fail to express our gratitude and appreciation to each other, it constitutes a great loss for all of us. It is loss for those failing to express the appreciation, and a loss for those to whom it should have been expressed.

It is not so much of being ungrateful and un-appreciative as it is our failure to express these feelings. Whether it is our lack of appreciation, or our failure to express our feelings of appreciation, the result will be about the same. "The surest way to doom yourself to an increasingly worse future is to develop an ungrateful spirit." J. Miller. Is it possible that some of us permit ourselves to be so distracted by self-seeking, self-pity, and other forms of selfishness that we limit or destroy our capacity for gratitude and appreciation? We can do better than this, and should.

The urgency for expressing our feelings of love and appreciation has been well stated in the exhortation, "Give The Flower Now." I have stood by the open casket many times and listened as survivors confessed their neglect in failing to express gratitude and love during the lifetime of the deceased. This is sad, and this failure is one of the most common tragedies in the human experience. Regret is very poor compensation for failure. "It is better to bring a cheap bouquet to a living friend this very day, than a bushel of roses, white and red, to lay on his casket when he is dead." Anon.

If there is someone to whom an expression of appreciation is due, today is probably the best time, and may be the only time, for performing this good deed. Let us do it.

"As the love of Christ dwells in men's hearts, so the revelation of God will be implanted in men. His love leads to accomplishments even when the means are not understood. God gives the understanding as man is ready to receive and use."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter about repairmen who come to the house got to me like few letters have. May I speak my piece?

I am a Navy wife. We do not own our own home. We rent. The landlord is responsible for repairs. My husband is very handy and doesn't mind fixing things, but it seems as if the day he leaves, everything falls apart. When I call the landlord about repair jobs, the man acts as if I am bothering him.

A few weeks ago the refrigerator quit cold. I had about $100 worth of meat in the freezer and was frantic that it would spoil. I called the landlord and told him it was an emergency. He sent a repairman who showed up after dark.

The first question out of the repairman's mouth was, "Is your husband home?" When I told him that my husband was in the Navy, the big ape said, "You must be lonely. How would you like to go into the bedroom?"

It just burns me up that while my husband is out there risking his life for his country, jerks like this try to get it on with his wife.

I hope you will print my letter as a favor to all the wives of servicemen. And if you have any suggestions on how to avoid these sleaze-bags I'd like to hear them.—Virginia Beach

DEAR VA.: When you are expecting a repairman make sure that you are fully dressed when he arrives. Be cordial but businesslike. If he makes any improper suggestions or behaves inappropriately, ask him to leave and notify his superiors immediately. No woman should have to put up with the garbage you described.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm sure you wonder if anybody ever follows your advice and what happens when they do. I want to tell you how one letter you printed several months ago changed my life.

My 23-year-old son was driving me crazy. I came within an inch of throwing him out of the house. I always changed my mind at the last minute because I was afraid he would get mixed up with criminal types and end up in jail or dead.

I knew he was smoking pot and drinking too much. He ran around until all hours or stayed in his room and watched TV all night. He couldn't hold a job more than two weeks and looked like a bum.

I talked to him until I was blue in the face. I pleaded, prayed, threatened, promised, groveled, yelled and wept. Nothing worked. I was desperate.

Then I read what you said to a mother who had a similar problem and decided to take the advice since I had nothing to lose.

From that day on I vowed to do a complete about-face. I quit lecturing and pleading with him to shape up. I didn't utter one disparaging word, no did I criticize him, although there was plenty I could have said.

I told him I wanted to be his friend and that he could tell me anything without being afraid that I would judge him or put him down.

He began to confide in me within a few days and his hostility disappeared. He has gotten a haircut, cleaned himself up and is seriously looking for a job. I am now confident that he will be a productive, useful human being. A few months ago I would have thought this was impossible. So thank you, Ann Landers, for the miracle.—A Grateful Mom in N.Y.

DEAR MOM: What an upper! How good of you to let me know. Again you have proven that children will live up (or down) to our expectations. Children who are repeatedly told that they are no good are doomed to fulfill the prophecy.

How much do you know about pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, crack, speed and downers? Think you can handle them? For up-to-the-minute information on drugs, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send $2.50 plus a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Winner all three times he has faced Browns

Elway has had mastery over Cleveland

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway has beaten the Cleveland Browns all three times he's faced them, and now he's better than ever, Browns' Coach Marty Schottenheimer says.

this way and then throwing it that way, which is something he never did before," said Schottenheimer, whose team held the first of four workouts Tuesday at the University of New Mexico in preparation for Sunday's AFC championship game at Denver. "Frankly, he's playing better than he's ever played."

The Browns' biggest fear of the Broncos' quarterback, however, remains his ability to scramble out of trouble once his pass protection breaks down.

"Everybody in this league has tried to contain him in some way," Schottenheimer said. "When you get involved in defending any unusual talent like John is, like Eric Dickerson is, you have to find ways to control or contain him as best you can. In doing so, you're going to give up something.

"Yeah, there's a way you can keep him in there, but in doing that you're going to make yourself vulnerable to something else."

One thing Schottenheimer doesn't want is to have his defensive backs dropping off receivers to help out once Elway starts to scramble.

"When he's running around back there, trying to buy time, you have to stay with your man," the coach said.

That's sometimes easier said than done, according to cornerback Hanford Dixon, who gave up a critical pass completion when he thought Elway had committed himself to running during Denver's drive for the winning field goal in overtime of last year's AFC championship.

"It was just a bad judgment on my part," Dixon said. "I thought he was over the line of scrimmage."

A big part of the problem is Elway's speed, which Schottenheimer said is popularly quoted at an unimpressive 4.7 seconds in the 40-yard dash.

"He may be 4.7, but when he's trying to run away from somebody, he runs faster than that, because I don't see many people catching him," Schottenheimer said.

The Browns' familiarity with Elway goes back well beyond last year's conference title game, in which he guided the Broncos to a 23-20 overtime victory after they trailed 20-13 with less than a minute to play.

Cleveland's first experience with Elway came in 1963, when Elway was perceived by many to be just another overpriced rookie.

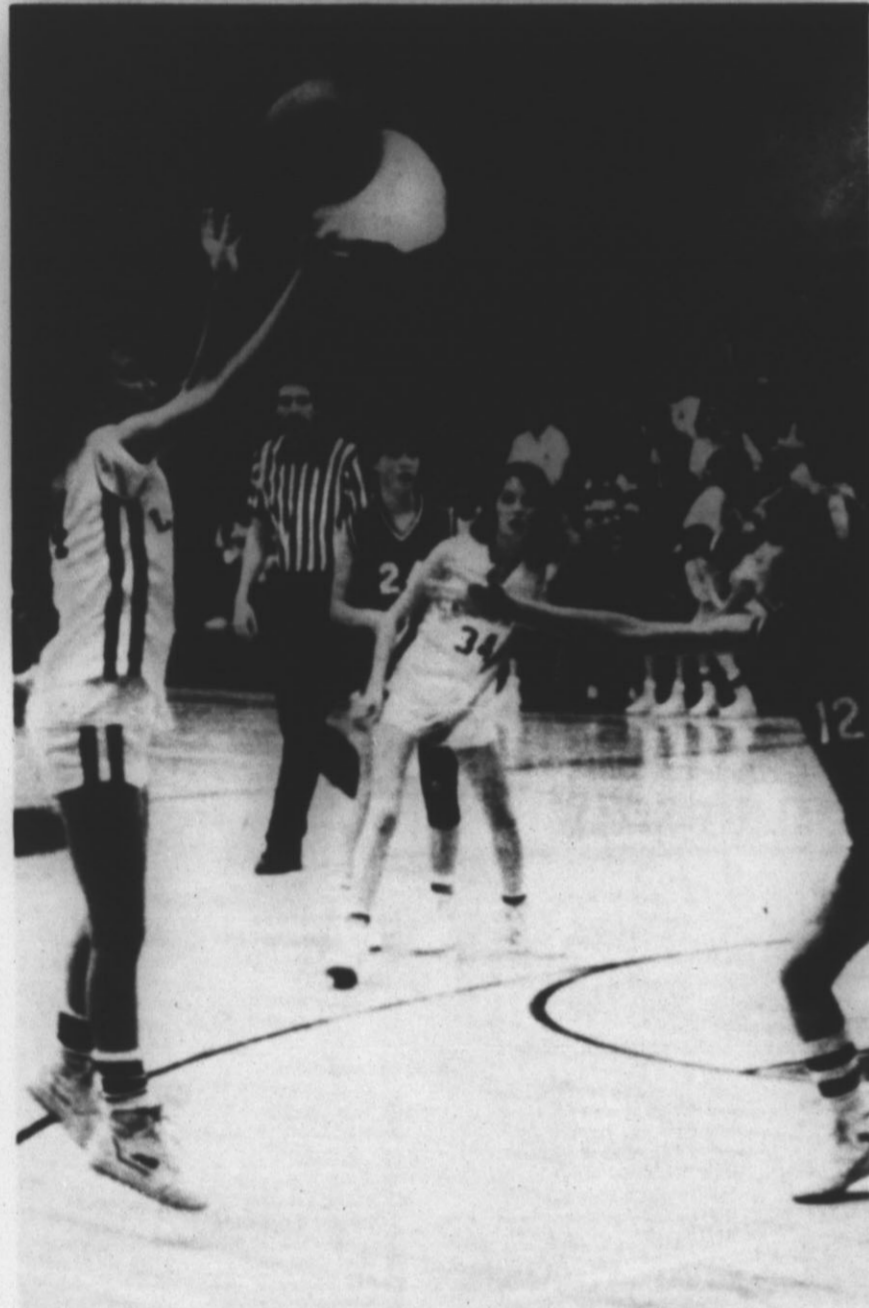

Elway was not sacked once as he passed for 284 yards and two touchdowns to beat the Browns 27-6.

Elway has beaten Cleveland twice since then. He had poor passing statistics (15 of 35 for 170 yards) but threw for two touchdowns as the Broncos beat the Browns 24-14 in 1984, and he completed 22 of 38 passes for 244 yards in last year's playoff victory.

La Plata eighth grade girls win over Levelland, 28-24

An eighth grade victory was the lone win over Levelland Thursday for La Plata Junior High School in three home girls' basketball games.

La Plata defeated Levelland in that game, 28-24. In the other games, Levelland won the ninth grade contest, 60-19, and beat La Plata in the seventh grade game, 33-11.

La Plata's season records are: seventh grade, 4-8; eighth grade, 7-2; and ninth grade, 3-4. The eighth grade girls will play in the Canyon tournament on Friday and Saturday, meeting Dumas in a first-round game at 5:15 p.m. on Friday.

Next Monday, La Plata plays host to Stanton at the Hereford High School gym, beginning at 4:30 p.m.

Shantel Cornelius scored 13 points, and Brek Binder and Jennifer Bullard each added five points, to help lead La Plata's eighth grade team to its 28-24 win over Levelland.

La Plata held a 15-10 halftime lead, and then led 22-18 going into the final period. Levelland closed to within one point, 25-24, in the final minute of play.

Leading scorers for La Plata in the other games were ninth graders J.J. Bookout, six points, and Brenna Reinauer, five points; and seventh grader Keiley Whitaker, four points.

By blowing away the odds

Vikings borrow from Twins' playbook

By TONY KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings have borrowed heavily from the playbook of the 1987 Minnesota Twins by blowing away the odds and storming to the brink of a championship.

"God, we're really on a tear," said

69-year-old John Gargaro, who has held season tickets for the Twins since 1962 and the Vikings since 1969. "I can't envision it, but the miracle has happened with the Twins so it could happen again."

Both teams were at least 75-to-1 longshots to win it all at the start of their respective seasons. And both were criticized for some lackluster play just before the playoffs.

But the Twins advanced to the World Series by soundly beating the team with the best record in baseball, and the Vikings are in Sunday's NFC title game against the Washington Redskins after outscoring the NFL's two most successful teams by a combined 80-34.

Although the Vikings are more accustomed to postseason play than the Twins, both teams ended long playoff droughts this season. The Twins had last played for the American League pennant in 1970; the Vikings haven't been in an NFC title game since the 1977 season.

"It's one of those things that I don't know will happen again," Gargaro said.

The Vikings took some heat for losing three of their last four games and backing into the playoffs, but are now being toasted by their fans after beating New Orleans 44-10 and San Francisco 36-24.

The Twins were glorified when they clinched the American League West title, but there was concern when they finished with five straight losses away from home for a 29-52 road record, worst ever for a division or pennant winner.

"Nobody took either team very seriously," said Lou D'Amico, who runs the sports book for Caesars Palace in Las Vegas. He listed the Vikings at 50-1 to win the Super Bowl — and that was after Minnesota had qualified for the playoffs.

But like the Twins, who beat Detroit in five games in the American League playoffs, the Vikings "absolutely peaked at the right time," D'Amico said.

Vikings middle linebacker Scott Studwell said the underdog role has helped.

"We seem to do a lot a lot better when there is less pressure on us," Studwell said.

"We were underdogs in every game," tight end Steve Jordan said. "We (Vikings and Twins) were both underdogs."

Gary Gaetti, the Twins' third baseman, repeatedly said during the playoffs that the Twins thrived on proving skeptics wrong. They did just that in beating the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games in the World Series.

"It just could be the year of the Twins and the Vikings," D'Amico said.

The notion sits well with Andy MacPhail, executive vice president of the Twins, and Mike Lynn, president of the Vikings.

Lynn admits he borrowed from the Twins when he introduced "Touchdown Towels," cloth squares modeled after the "Homer Hankies" that Twins fans are still buying. The newspaper that designed the baseball cloth has sold about 2 million.

There is one huge difference between the Twins and Vikings. The baseball team was unbeatable in its downtown Metrodome — "We had something very, very special. The bigger the crowd, the better we played," McPhail said — but the poor finish condemned the football team to the road for all its postseason games.

Dorsett's age is obstacle for trade for first-rounder

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Coach Tom Landry says Tony Dorsett's age will keep the Cowboys from getting a first-round draft pick for the 33-year-old running back.

But Landry said Tuesday he needs a good solid player in several positions, so perhaps Dallas can swap for somebody else.

Landry also said Dorsett's price tag could be a drawback.

Dorsett has a two-year contract at $500,000 a year and a $2.4 million annuity. Club President Tex Schramm said any club getting Dorsett would have to pick up the base salary and fund the annuity.

"It would be a gamble for another team," Landry said. "Of course, other top backs are getting what Tony is getting."

Landry told Dorsett on Monday he will try to work out a trade for the 11-year veteran who lost his starting tailback job to Herschel Walker during a 7-8 season in 1987.

"We'll test the trade market and see what is best for Tony and what is best for the team," Landry said. "We are the world's worst traders. Obviously, we won't get a first-round pick because of Tony's age. Maybe we can trade for a player. Maybe there is a player out there who can help us. We need help in a lot of positions."

Landry said Dorsett's age "will be a very critical thing. It eliminates so many teams because they are rebuilding. However, there are some teams that just missed the playoffs that might need help. Tony could go a couple of years. He is in remarkable shape."

Dorsett told Landry in a half-hour meeting he would like to go to Denver, San Francisco or the Los Angeles Rams.

"Tony said he doesn't want to finish his career on the bench," Landry said. "He would still get a lot of playing time with us behind Herschel but we'll try to honor his wishes."

On another matter, Landry said he has invited Danny White to quarterback school in the spring to see what kind of progress he is making with his injured right wrist.

White has said he might retire if his wrist doesn't get better.

"We want to watch Danny and see how his wrist is doing," Landry said. "We want to see if things are going to get better. It's hard to speculate on whether Danny will be with us next season."

What Does a typical Brand Reader Look Like?

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well -- white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewives, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often vocal audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

LAW ENFORCEMENT ACADEMIES PROTECTED

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements and his Criminal Justice Planning Division made a wise decision last week when they decided not to implement a new rule that would have seriously weakened law enforcement training academies around the state.
The potential problem arose about a month ago when it became known that staff at the Criminal Justice Planning Division were considering shifting to local governments the cost of operating regional law enforcement training academies. The cost currently is covered through the planning division, a branch of the governor's office responsible for coordinating certain regional law enforcement activities.
Under the plan, state contributions to the regional academies would have decreased gradually for five years. By the fifth year, the cost of the academies would have to be picked up entirely by the Council of Government in the areas where the academies operate. Their are 24 COGs in Texas, including the Amarillo-based Panhandle Regional Planning Commission (PRPC).
PRPC and law enforcement officials found the governor's office proposal disturbing for several reasons, not the least of which was that the proposal saved no money at any level of government.

Texas could gain three U.S. House seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — California would gain four seats in the House of Representatives if Congress were reapportioned based on the most recent population estimates, while Florida and Texas would add three apiece, a private study shows.

Significant losses — two seats each — would strike Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, according to new calculations by a Washington consultant.

Kim Brace, president of Election Data Services Inc., has calculated how the seats in the House would be distributed on the basis of 1987 state population estimates released Dec. 30 by the Census Bureau.

The House won't actually be reapportioned until 1991, based on the results of the 1990 national census.

But using a computer to apply the complex reapportionment formula that has been in use since 1930 to the most recent population estimates allows a look at trends since the last redistricting in 1980.

The widely documented shift of the nation's population to the Sun Belt apparently is continuing, boosting the number of residents, and thus the congressional influence, of states in those regions.

Because Congress requires that the House be limited to 435 members, a gain by one state requires a loss by another.

Texas is set to gain three seats in the current estimate, bringing its total to 30. Texas also picked up three seats in 1980. The population of the Lone Star State is currently estimated at 16.8 million, up from 14.2 million in 1980.

California, which grew from 23.7 million people in 1980 to a 1987 estimate of 27.7 million, would get an extra four seats, boosting its delegation to 49 members, according to Brace's calculation. The Golden State had added two seats in 1980.

Retirement haven Florida, which added four House members in 1980, would gain three more if the shift were made now, bringing its total to 22.

The 1987 population estimate for the Sunshine State was 12 million, up from 9.7 million in 1980 to push it past Pennsylvania as the fourth most populated state.

States which the estimates show would add one seat apiece are Arizona, Georgia and Virginia.

At the other end of the scale, the nation's second most populous state, New York, would drop two seats to 32. It grew from 17.5 million in 1980 to a current estimate of 17.8 million, but that doesn't keep pace with other states. The Empire State lost five seats in 1980.

Other states losing two seats apiece would be Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Those losing a single seat, according to the estimates, would be Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts and West Virginia.

The method used to distribute seats makes assignments based on a priority developed by multiplying populations by a formula.

The law requires that each state have at least one seat, and after that the formula varies by population and number of the seats being assigned.

Brace noted that at the end of his calculations, some close calls occurred in assigning House seats and those could change as the population shifts between now and 1990.

For example, the last of the 435 seats assigned went to Florida, with 10,395 people to spare in winning the seat. It just edged out California, which fell 23,940 people short of taking that seat away from Florida.

Virginia's addition of an 11th seat was the next to last House place assigned, with the state winning it with only 42,449 people to spare.

If the House were expanded to 436 people, California would get the next seat, and any additional seats would then go to Massachusetts, North Carolina, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Kansas and Ohio — many of the states that lost seats having fallen only slightly short on the priority listing.

Here is a state-by-state rundown of the 1987 population estimate in millions, number of seats in the House each state would be entitled to and the change in House membership since 1980. U means unchanged.

121 school districts get class waivers

AUSTIN (AP) — More than three years after passage of the state's landmark school reform bill, one of every eight school districts in Texas still does not comply with the law's class-size limits.

Figures compiled by the Texas Education Agency indicate that 121 districts received exemptions this year from the 22-student maximum imposed on all kindergarten and first- and second-grade classes in public schools.

Those districts claimed they were unable to provide enough classrooms or teachers to meet the requirement which took effect in fall 1985.

Emmett Conrad, a member of the State Board of Education from Dallas, said he is disturbed that so many school districts have been granted waivers by the state education agency.

"There is no good excuse for that many districts still being out of compliance with the requirement. I think it's tragic," he said.

"I would be interested to find out how much some of those districts spent on athletic facilities the last three years," he said.

Conrad, who served on a special panel chaired by computer magnate H. Ross Perot that drafted the school reform law of 1984, said the reduced class size was probably the most important recommendation of the Perot committee.
