Voters pack polls throughout South for Super Tuesday

From staff and wire reports

Polls opened at 7 a.m. today in Hereford, throughout Texas, and in 15 other states for the "Super Tuesday" primary.

Drawing most of the attention locally is the Deaf Smith County Commissioner Precinct 1 race, with incumbent Bill Brady challenged by Lupe Chavez, Gloria Hubner and John Stribling Jr. The winner, decided today or possibly in an April 12 runoff, will face GOP challenger Kim Blackwell in November's general election.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Troy Don Moore is unchallenged in the Democratic primary and has no GOP opponent.

Also unopposed in the Democratic primary are Sheriff Joe Brown and Tax Assessor-Collector Nell Miller. Brown will face GOP candidate Ted Langgood in the general election. Miller has no GOP opponent.

Three persons—Nancy Garms, Mel Phillips and Bryan Poff—are on the Democratic ballot to challenge a Republican candidate—either Teel Bivins or Ron Slover—in November. The Demo race could also end up in a runoff between the top two contenders next month.

The ballot also includes various statewide elections for court justices and Texas Railroad Commission seats.

The GOP ballot features a four-way race for the U.S. Senate nomination opposite three-term incumbent Lloyd Bentsen, who has taken opposition from Joe Sullivan, Beau Boulter, Wes Gilbreath, Milton Fox and Ned Snead will fight for the Republican nomination. Boulter, a two-term U.S. Representative from Amarillo, has been promised a $1 million contribution from the National Republican Committee to help his warchest if he is the party's choice.

Drawing most of the attention are the races at the top of the ballot—the presidential aspirants.

Voters today found six names and "Uncommitted" on the GOP ballot, including official non-contenders Pete Du Pont and Alexander Haig who have withdrawn from the race. There are 11 choices on the Democratic ticket, including dropout Bruce Babbitt.

According to Houston Post-Dallas Times Herald and Houston Chronicle-Dallas Morning News polls published Sunday, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis leads the Democrats and Vice President George Bush heads the Republican slate.

In the Chronicle-Morning News poll, Bush has slipped somewhat but still received the support of 55

Absentee figures

County Clerk David Ruland reported that 537 persons—352 in the Democratic primary and 185 in the Republican primary—voted absentee for today's election. It's the largest GOP absentee total ever in Deaf Smith County. The largest absentee turnout was in in 1984 primary, with 731 absentee votes cast. In that election, there were three sheriff candidates, six persons running for Pct. 1 commissioner, and five persons running for Pct. 3 commissioner in the Democratic primary.

Super Tuesday states

Voters in 16 states are at the polls today in the largest regional primary ever held. Caucuses are also being held today in Nevada, Idaho and Washington.

percent of those likely to vote in today's Republican primary.

The poll showed that Kansas Sen. Robert Dole was second among Republicans with 16 percent, followed by Pat Robertson with 9 percent and New York Rep. Jack Kemp with 4 percent. 16 percent of the persons surveyed who were likely to vote in the Republican primary were still undecided.

Dukakis was the choice of 30 percent of those surveyed who were likely to vote in the Democratic primary today. He was followed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson at 17 percent, Missouri Rep. Dick Gephardt at 15 percent and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore

Jr. at 11 percent.

Former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, who have run minimal campaigns for today's election, were at 4 percent and 3 percent, respectively, in the poll conducted by the University of Houston Center for Public Policy.

In the Post-Times Herald poll conducted by the Gallup organization, Dukakis was favored by 24 percent of likely Democratic voters. Jackson followed with 20 percent, followed by Gephardt with 19 percent, Gore 12 percent, Hart at 6 percent and Simon with 2 percent.

Fifteen other states—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia and Florida—will hold primaries today. Voters in Hawaii, Nevada, Idaho and Washington will hold caucuses.

A very important yet often-overlooked part of the process won't begin until after the polls close this evening—precinct conventions.

Persons voting in today's Democratic primary may attend the precinct convention beginning at 7:15 p.m. at their polling place. There, delegates will be elected to county-senate district conventions to be held March 19, where delegates will be elected for the June 17-18 state convention in Houston. 197 delegates and 61 alternates will be elected at the state convention to attend the Democratic National Convention.

At each level, delegates are chosen based on the proportion of votes received by the presidential nominees.

The local GOP convention will begin at 7 p.m. at La Plata Junior High, where all Republican ballots were to be cast today. Delegates will elect representatives to the senatorial district convention and will consider resolutions to be forwarded to the district convention.

Before the state convention, congressional district nomination committee meetings will take place, where each presidential candidate entitled to delegates will hold a meeting to select a slate of delegates to represent him at the national convention. Each candidate's slate will include two or three nominees for each delegate to which he is entitled.

At the state convention, delegates will elect national convention delegates from these congressional district slates.

City okays SPS reduction

Electricity users in Hereford may hear more change jingling in their pockets since the Hereford City Commission's approval of Southwestern Public Service Company's $14.4 million rate decrease at Monday's meeting.

Boiled down to individuals, Hereford's SPS customers (almost 99 percent of the city) can expect to pare 3.1 percent off their monthly utility rates starting March 28.

SPS offered the decrease because it was forced to, said City Manager Darwin McGill.

"SPS was making a greater amount of income than it was reasonably allowed to make," said McGill. "They had been receiving fuel adjustment kickbacks and this had increased its income quite a bit.

SPS had to give a rate decrease to its whole system."

Darwin said mayors from three Panhandle cities plus the Friona city manager and the Amarillo city attorney studied SPS's original $9.9 million rate decrease in October and wanted the figure raised to $17.1 million.

Then the group and SPS compromised on the $14.4 million figure which SPS submitted Feb. 22 to its customer cities for approval.

Hereford citizens will not only pocket change from the rate decrease, but they will probably not have to pay an increased tax rate for the next fiscal year, according to the preliminary city budget.

The 42-cent tax rate Hereford has lived with for more than 10 years will remain the same because of what

Surveyor

Dr. Steve Murdock of Texas A&M University explained the upcoming random survey of county residents to the Economic Development Steering Committee during a Monday meeting in Hereford.

Murdock outlines survey process

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Dr. Steve Murdock of Texas A&M University told members of the Economic Development Steering Council Monday about the process he will use in the next four weeks to interview over 200 county residents to find out what Deaf Smith County thinks of itself and how it would like to see its future shaped.

The EDSC, which includes the six-member Waste Deposit Impact Committee and nine members added last week to guide a Strategic Plan for Economic Development, learned in a meeting at the Deaf Smith County Library that A&M students will be conducting telephone surveys, probably beginning next week, to "find specific items and specific concerns," Murdock said.

Murdock's study is designed to cover the impact of the Department of Energy's pull-out of the Salt Repository Project that was to determine whether salt formations underlying the area might be suitable for long-term storage of high-level nuclear waste. Congress, in December, pulled the plug on the project, ordering DOE to concentrate its efforts in Nevada.

"We want to try to assess what is happening, who it's happening to," Murdock explained. "We want to find out what the impacts are and who is being impacted."

The study will also concentrate on surveying residents, chosen at random through computer-generated listings, to find out things about quality of life and how they feel about economic development.

"It is important because if you want to know how the citizens feel, you need to do some type of random survey," Murdock said. "Only through a random survey can you generalize the community as a whole."

The survey, among other things, will:

—Look at the area, determine strengths and weaknesses for economic development and what types of new businesses and industries would be welcome in the county;

—Determine some goals for the community, see what problems need to be addressed, and what strategies should be enhanced;

—Find out how we should get the future—do we want economic development at all costs, and if so,

Sheriff's office reports seven arrests

Three men, two 19-year-olds and a 20-year-old, plus two juveniles were arrested Saturday night on charges of evading arrest; a man was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated; and a woman, 24, was arrested on charges of issuance of bad checks in Randall County and giving a false identification to Deaf Smith County officers.

Other incidents include the theft of a killed 700-pound cow taken from a pasture off of North Progressive Road; tools were stolen from a pickup parked at K-Bob's Steak House Saturday; a runaway juvenile was reported Saturday but he later returned;

Family violence was reported Saturday and a fence charger worth $300 was stolen from a lot by Westway.

Police report sexual abuse

A 12-year-old girl who says she was raped four times by the same man in 1987 had a baby girl at Deaf Smith County General Hospital Feb. 25, said police reports.

The girl (name withheld) identified the assailant as Rayes Rivera, 20, and police have issued a warrant for his arrest, charging him with sexual abuse of a child.

According to the girl, she and her family lived with Rivera's family during May and June of 1987.

Rayes would often tell his parents that he and the girl were going to the store, but he instead would drive to Veterans Park and sexually abuse her.

Today's "Super Tuesday" primary election should be interesting, to say the least. While the absentee vote total here does not indicate a large turnout, the presidential primaries should draw some voters to the polls.

It will be interesting to see how county residents cast their ballots for the presidential candidates. While polls show Michael Dukakis may carry Texas on the Democratic ticket, the rural areas could well go with Gephardt or Gore. Bush is a heavy favorite on the Republican ballot, but Pat Robertson may surprise with his strong support in the state. Robertson seems to have strong support in Deaf Smith County.

Babbling Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

"Was the biggest racing day of the season at the two big tracks in town, and everyone was looking at their Racing Form, trying to figure out who the winners and front-runners would be. It was no day to pick a loser, but no one could pick a winner out of a field of nags in the big race of the day.

"I don't know, Cholly," said Barney the Nose. "I can't find a good 'un outta dis whole field at either track."

"Know whatcha mean, Barney," said Cholly. "when we had jus' da one track, it was a heckuva lot easier, wudn't it?"

Cholly and Barney sat around reminiscing about the old days, when there was just one track to concentrate on. You got to know the front-runners, the up-and-coming, and the has-been nags that were out there for one more race.

"Whatever happened to that one horse, Cholly, that jus' kep' running and kep' running?" The Nose asked. "Whut wuz his name, Stassen or sumpin'."

"Yeh, them wuz the days," Cholly remembered. "Just had that one field, and you could take your time and make your choice and know you wuz pickin' a winner every time. Ain't like that no more, is it?"

"Well," said the Nose, "let's look 'em over one more time."

So Barney and Cholly got out their Racing Form and all their handicapping notes they kept meticulously well (even though checkbook balancing was beyond their grasp) and looked over the candidates in the big race one last time before placing their bets.

"Let's us look over them four horses over at Right Track," Barney said.

So they looked at their notes and the Racing Form for the four-horse field at Right-George's Wimp, Quarterback Jack, Preacher Pat and Pineapple Dole.

"Too bad you can't bet on horses to lose," Cholly said. "I'd get me a trifecta on everybody but George's Wimp. But I'll be gol-durned if I'll bet on that horse to win. He burned me in '64, burned me in '74, and burned me in '80. I bet on him all three times and he died in the stretch."

So they hemmed and hawed and decided to just skip it.

So they pulled out their notes and forms on the field over at the Left Track—a six-horse field after Babbitt's Rabbit scratched."

The field had a couple of long-shots that were easy for Cholly and The Nose to dismiss.

"Hart's Folly is all washed up," Cholly said. "I don't think he's got anything on his mind 'cept gettin' through wid dis race and gettin' to da stud farm."

"And Bow Tie's Taxer is jes' limpin' around. I don't know why he's even out dere."

"Looky here," Cholly said. "Bloodin' Gore's been savin' up for this race, but he ain't gotta track record."

"Liberal Mike's won some small-time races, but he never been up agin' a sityashun like unto this."

"Jumpin' Jack Jesse's trainer talks a good race, but he ain't never been there. It's all talk, talk, talk."

"An' looky at Tuff Tradin' Dick. He's from Missouri. He ain't showed me nuthin'. Nuthin'!"

"Know what Cholly?" asked The Nose. "I think we oughtta jes' skip placin' a bet on any of dese horses and jes' go grab a beer and watch."

"You can't lose if you don't bet, Cholly. Remember dat. If you cain't find a winner, don't go backin' into a losin' situation. It jes' kills ya. You can't be a winner, but ya ain't gonna lose if ya don't place no bet."

Castillo, Streun bound for state Citizen Bee

Adrian Castillo and John Mark Streun, both Hereford High School seniors, qualified for the state Citizen Bee after placing second and third in the North Texas Citizen Bee held Saturday at West Texas State University.

Castillo won a $350 scholarship and Streun won a $250 scholarship for their efforts.

The Citizen Bee's purpose is to foster greater understanding of American heritage. Students addressed questions concerning government, history, economics, geography and current affairs.

Also competing from Hereford were sophomores Amanda Hernandez and Vaavia Rudd. The students' local sponsor was HHS teacher N.D. Kelso.

Castillo and Streun will compete at the state Citizen Bee on April 30 in Austin, where they will compete for more cash scholarships awarded by Southwestern Bell. Winners in Austin will compete in the national Citizen Bee in June.

The local students competed against students from Amarillo, Canadian, Caprock, Clarendon, Dumas, Mobeetie, Palo Duro, Tascosa, West Texas and White Deer high schools.

McGill referred to as "living within our means."

"We have just operated pretty conservatively and prepared the budget within our capabilities. We've also had to cut back on some equipment requests and we deleted a position at the Parks Department. It's not much on its own, but it adds up to a significant amount," said McGill.

One of the more significant increases in the budget will be a 3 percent salary hike for all employees to adjust for cost-of-living expenses, said McGill. The salaries will increase by more than $45,000 for the next fiscal year.

Commissioner Emory Brownlow said he thought the pay raises were unfairly distributed.

"Bonnie (city secretary Duke) has been working here for 20 years, and Marvin Gaddy (building inspector) has worked here only two months," said Brownlow. "And they're getting the same pay raise. I think the raises should be based somehow on the amount of time you've worked with the city."

McGill stated that pay raises are based strictly on the cost of living, but he did say he would check on constructing a method of merit pay.

Despite the lack of merit pay, Mayor Wes Fisher said, "We're getting along a lot better than most cities as far as personnel goes because our turnover rate is so low."

The commission is expected to adopt the budget at its March 21 meeting.

In other business, the commission voted to award a bid for a truck-dump body to Whiteface Ford which bid $36,882, and it also awarded a bid for a truck-packer body to Stevens Chevrolet which bid $54,020.91.

The truck-packer body will be used in the Health Department, and the truck-dump body will go to the Street Department.

In an effort to receive better bids, the commission authorized McGill to submit bid proposals for the next fiscal year's annual sealcoat program.

"We have provided $123,000 in our proposed budget for the program, plus we intend to improve a portion of McKinley Street and Third Street," said McGill.

This year's sealcoat was applied in July, said McGill.

The city commission elected to rezone a single family district, 50-foot lot at 808 S. Schley Ave. to a mobile home district as requested by Rick Lyons.

The Planning and Zoning Commission originally heard the request Feb. 23 and recommended it to the city commission.

In other action, the commission voted to:

—allow the Hereford Gun Club to place a structure at a site it has leased on the east side of the airport

—authorize the city attorney to draft an agreement authorizing the Deaf Smith county clerk to have absentee voting for the city officers election May 7.

SEWING IN FASHION FOR BRIDAL FASHIONS

NEW YORK (AP) — With traditional-style weddings and opulent fashions back in vogue, 40 percent of the bridal finery will be sewn at home or by dressmakers, using purchased fabrics, laces, trims and notions, reports the Sewing Fashion Council.

Since 1984, it notes, the number of bridal fashion patterns has increased 100 percent.

primaries to select the candidates to represent each party in the general election in November, voters must decide whether they want to vote in the Democratic or the Republican primary.

At least one reader called to chastise us for not including Pat Robertson's picture in Sunday's paper. We carried an Associated Press report of the presidential candidates' stand on the issues and printed several of the candidates' photos. As it happens, these were the only photos we had in our files—except for photos in campaign brochures which could not be reprinted.

With only one precinct in Deaf Smith County having a contested local race, the presidential primaries should help attract more voters here today. Local voters are also interested in the state senate race in both party primaries.

All of these races have drawn media attention and enough exposure has been given to the candidates that voters should be able to make up their minds on how to vote. As usual, not enough is known about some other candidates and their offices. This is especially true about the court races in Texas.

For a number of years, I've had a few readers who encourage me to make recommendations on the court races, simply because they want something to go on besides a name and they know I put a little study and research into the matter. I was out of town last week, due to the illness of my mother, and didn't list my choices. It's a little late but, for what it's worth, here's my recommendations for Supreme Court candidates:

Chief Justice—John E. Humphries, with two decades of legal experience, is our choice in the Democratic primary over Ted Z. Robertson. The latter is an associate justice who seeks the chief justice post but was one of the judges who apparently took large campaign contributions that were controversial. Tom Phillips is unopposed in the Republican primary.

Justice, Place 1—Paul Murphy is a respected Houston appeals justice and merits the Republican nomination. Lloyd Doggett, former state senator, is too liberal for us but is a better choice in the Demo primary than Marsha Anthony.

Justice, Place 2—Carol R. Haber-man, an experienced trial court judge, deserves the Demo nomination over Bill Kilgarlin, another candidate involved in the campaign-payment controversy. Republicans have good choices in Nathan Hecht and D. Camile Dunn. We favor Hecht.

Justice, Place 3—Raul Gonzalez has been an outstanding judge and deserves being reelected by the Democrats. Charles Ben Howell is unopposed on the Republican ballot.

Court of Criminal Appeals—Ron Chapman of Dallas is our pick on the Demo ticket. He is more qualified than Mike McCormick. David Berchelmann is unopposed on the GOP ballot.

Murdock said the survey will be about 20 minutes long, and may be conducted in Spanish if a respondent desires.

"It's important for you to tell people in the community how important this survey is to your success," Murdock emphasized.

Lifestyles

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a divorced, professional woman (mid-30s) who recently broke up with a man I had been seeing for three years. I don't wish to make excuses for myself, but I was extremely vulnerable and accepted a dinner invitation from a nice-looking man I met in a cocktail lounge.

We hit it off beautifully. I found him to be intelligent, well-mannered, considerate and exciting. He said he had just taken a position with a big corporation and was living with his cousin until he could find a suitable apartment.

On our fourth date, when he said he was in love with me, I just melted. We were dining and dancing and drinking quite a lot of wine. He ended up at my place for the night.

The following morning (Saturday) he had to leave very early to catch a plane so I just stayed in bed. A few minutes after he left I noticed something shiny on the floor. It was his wedding ring. There was an engraved date which told me he was married in 1973.

I am devastated and need to know what to do. Shall I mail the ring to him, go to his office and throw it in his face or have it melted down and made into a jackass to remind myself of what a fool I was?—Humiliated in Sacramento

DEAR SAC: None of the above. Make a cocktail date with the louse, hand him the ring with no comment, then go home—alone.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Now it's my turn to help you help others. Please print the next sentence in capital letters: NEVER LEND MONEY TO RELATIVES.

My husband's sister (I'll call her Mabel) telephoned and said that she and her husband needed money to make repairs on their home. They had to have $6,000 at once. "I'll send a check every month," she promised. "Henry (her husband) is too proud to ask."

We agreed to help but did not talk to Henry. Big mistake. Since we didn't have the money we took out a loan.

Thirty days later a modest check arrived with a note from Mabel promising to "send more next month." Sixty days passed and another check came. It was half the size of the first one.

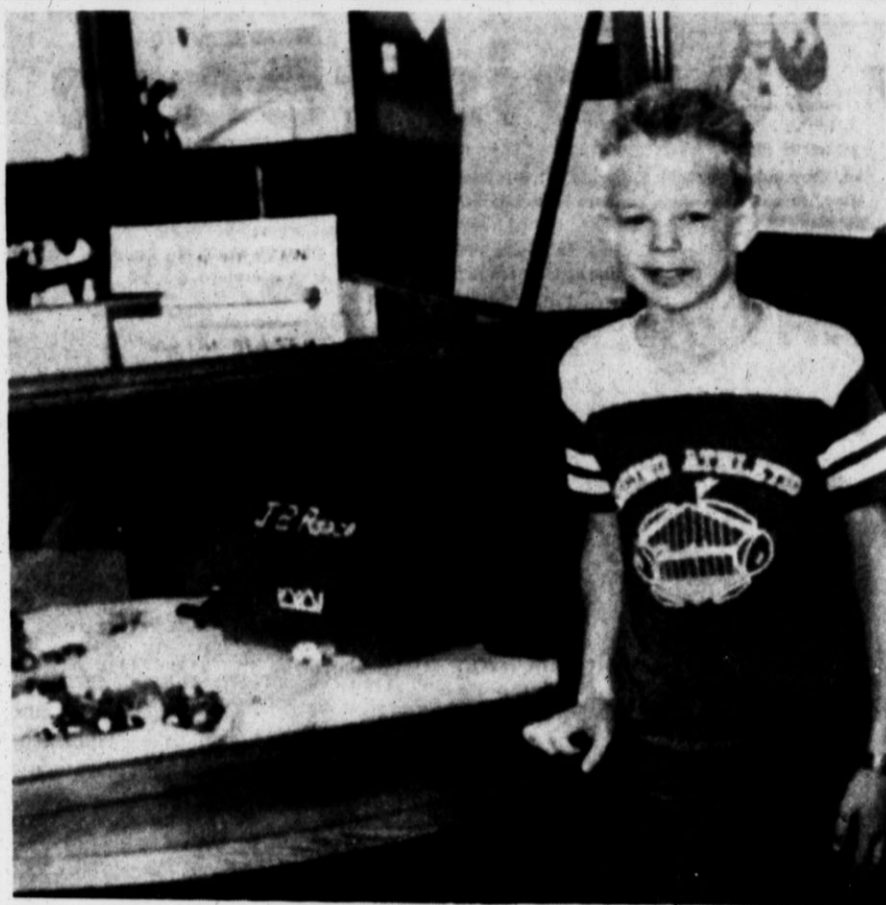

Three months later when no check showed up, I called her. She cried on the phone and I felt guilty. Then the truth came out. Henry knew nothing of the loan. She had overspent and was afraid to tell him that her savings account was gone and she had to borrow $6,000. She swore she would send payments regularly if we promised not to tell Henry. We promised.

Three months passed. No check. I phoned Mabel and we got into a heated argument. The following evening her parents called to plead her case. The next night her brother called and yelled, "Lay off Mabel. I'll send the money." A year later the money was paid back.

Since that time my husband's parents have not visited us, nor have they called. We have not heard from Mabel or Henry or her brother. The whole family thinks we are awful. This is our thanks for trying to help. As I was saying, NEVER LEND MONEY TO RELATIVES.—Yakima, Wash.

DEAR YAK: Generally speaking, your policy is a good one, but thank the good Lord all relatives aren't like yours.

What are the signs of alcoholism? How can you tell if someone you love is an alcoholic? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal with It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Banner Sets Meet Record

Stephen Banner, a member of the Stanton ninth grade boys' track team, reaches the finish line in a Hereford meet record time for the 400-meter dash. Banner won the race in 54.72 seconds on Saturday and also ran on a winning 1,600-meter relay team with Oscar Pedqueda, Shea Brannon, and Jesus Gonzales. (Brand photo by Gary Christensen)

Until 1945, a forward pass in college football could not be thrown closer than five yards behind the line of scrimmage.

A 1915 college football rule had it that if a substitute sent into the game spoke before one play was run, his team drew a 15-yard penalty.

In 1890, a college football rule stipulated that an injured player taken out of the game could not return.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

AUSTIN — Once again a segment of the Texas government finds itself under a court ruling that orders it to reform. This time, it's our system of financing public education, and the ultimate resolution of this battle could alter forever the basic structure of this state's education system.

At issue is the state's dual financing for education, in which the state and local school districts share the cost of educating students. Some believe the system hurts the state's poor. They filed suit, and a state district court in the spring of 1987 concluded there were basic flaws in the dual financing system.

A select committee currently is working to find an alternative revenue system that the Legislature can implement when it reconvenes next January. The committee is caught between the court order for reform and a desire to maintain a degree of local control over school financing.

GROUP ASSISTS NEEDY KIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York City hotel has opened its doors to K.I.D.S. (Kids in Distressed Situations), a non-profit charitable organization established to collect and distribute new clothing, toys and other items for children around the world.

Banquet facilities, meeting rooms and other services are being donated by the New York Marriott Marquis to provide the group with a home for planning sessions, directors' conferences and executive seminars, said Fred Brown, president of K.I.D.S.

To better understand the dilemma, one needs to look more closely at how our finance system works.

School districts in this state generally are funded from two sources — state revenue and local taxes, which are assessed and collected by the individual school boards.

State funding is based on a formula system. Each school district receives a basic allotment from the state based on its average daily attendance (ADA). In addition to that allotment, districts receive extra money for a variety of programs such as vocational education, compensatory education, etc.

The formula system is used to guarantee state money is distributed impartially and to prevent powerful lawmakers from targeting schools in their home districts for special favors.

Local money is a different matter. School districts round out their budgets with money raised through local property taxes. The local money can be used for any educational purpose, but it often goes to construction and maintenance of school facilities.

And, it is the local money that has caused the most controversy in recent years. Property taxes, you see, are not created equal. Some school districts have within their boundaries property that is extremely valuable. Such districts can charge a low tax rate and generate huge sums of money to supplement their budgets.

Other districts are not so lucky. They contain property that is not valuable and have poor residents who can afford to pay little tax. These districts can't raise their tax rates to a level that would bring the same amount of money as the large districts do, so the poorer districts make do with less.

The people suing the state's education system contend an alternative must be found to the current system. They say all Texas children must be guaranteed an equal level of education. Clearly, the Texas court system — for now — agrees with these plaintiffs.

So the select committee wrestles with potential solutions. A variety of solutions have been suggested, including the creation of super, regional taxing districts that would include a better cross-section of valuable and invaluable property, pooling and redistribution of local property taxes or expansion of a 1984 state program that funnels extra state money into the poorer districts.

Many of these suggestions would be extremely detrimental to Texas' longstanding concept of a state/local partnership in education. It is something the select committee must keep in mind when reviewing these three proposals, and others, to solve the crisis.

The ultimate solution, though, must come through the legislative process. If lawmakers don't reach a solution, then the courts could wind up determining the state's new education finance system. That solution likely wouldn't be fair, and it certainly wouldn't be in the best interest of all Texas schoolchildren.

If you have a question about the problems facing our education finance system, or any other issue, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

Make wise food choices now for a healthier tomorrow

Food choices are a part of everyday life. You wake up and decide whether or not to skip breakfast... You have to take a client out to a business lunch and want to impress him or her at a new neighborhood restaurant... At your desk, you crave a quick snack to get you through the afternoon low energy blues... While watching prime-time television, you methodically munch on something crunchy, just to keep yourself awake.

Because we make so many food choices during the course of a day, it is easy to get into bad habits and forget just how important these choices can be for our future health. But The American Dietetic Association (ADA) says that the food you eat today may decide your health tomorrow. It's never too late to start making good nutrition part of your daily life.

This March, in recognition of National Nutrition Month, ADA offers suggestions to help you follow its theme: "Choose Good Nutrition For Today and Tomorrow." No longer does a healthful diet have to be thought of as a bland and boring. In fact, with so many good foods available today, choosing nutritious foods that will lead you to a more healthful and happy future can be easy. The idea that you are in control and have the power to make positive food decisions that will help you look and feel better in the future is a challenge too great to pass up!

Throughout your day, it can be simple to take small, yet healthful steps toward looking and feeling your best, by changing some of your food choices. On many mornings, it can be too easy to skip breakfast at home because you are running behind schedule. Instead, why not plan ahead the night before and pack a "breakfast to go," including fruit juice, a whole-wheat bagel, yogurt and a banana. At lunchtime, when inviting your colleagues out to a fancy lunch, you can still enjoy some of the "specialties of the house" without letting them go to your waist. Consider ordering dishes that are broiled, roasted or simmered. Avoid foods that are breaded and fried.

Most restaurants offer broiled or baked entrees and serve fresh, lightly-steamed, or raw vegetables. Remember, to keep the calories low, order salad dressing on the side so you can control how much actually ends up on the salad. Add a rye or wheat roll to fill out the meal. No need to pass up dessert. Seasonal fresh fruit and natural sorbets are regular tempting items on most luncheon menus. If you must give in to the temptation of a sweet dessert, split it with a friend.

During that afternoon snack attack, do yourself a favor when taking a trip to the vending machine or to your kitchen cupboard. Snacking smart doesn't necessarily mean going without. Stick to the unsalted nuts, plain crackers and low-fat vanilla yogurt or milk. Sip no-calorie seltzer water, 100 percent fruit juice, or a big glass of ice water with fresh lemon.

When the desire to munch hits while watching television, go for the hot-air popcorn, but go easy on the butter and salt. Carrots and celery sticks, zucchini circles and green peppers provide an alternative for crunch munching. When glued to the tube, do something with your hands such as balancing your checkbook or flipping through a magazine. Try knitting or needlepoint. Both your hands and mind will be too busy to think about food.

Saying "yes" to good nutrition is easier than you think, and making the right choices will make you look and feel better. Because today's good nutrition is so important to tomorrow's good health, registered dietitians (RD's) encourage you to "Choose Good Nutrition For Today and Tomorrow" not only during National Nutrition Month, but during every month to come. It's never too late to start!

President James Garfield was shot in 1881 by Charles Guiteau, a disappointed office-seeker, at the Washington railroad station. Garfield died two and a half months later.

PAINT CAN TRANSFORM HOUSE

CHARLOTTE, Vt. (AP) — Painting is an inexpensive and versatile home improvement that can brighten a dark hallway, lower a ceiling, make a plain room interesting or divide a house with an open floor plan into visually separate areas, notes Harrowsmith magazine.

To "drop" a ceiling, paint it a darker hue; to "lift" it, paint it white — or at least a lighter color than the walls. If a room or hallway is narrow, paint the long walls white and the ends a darker, warmer color. Warm, dark hues helps make an overly large room look snug, the magazine points out.

SORORITIES, FRATERNITIES HELPING CHARITABLE CAUSES

CHICAGO (AP) — Fraternities and sororities are increasingly raising money and spending time in their communities for national charitable causes, the National Intergovernmental Conference and the National Panhellenic Conference report.

The average Greek male collegian today is raising nearly twice as much money and devoting almost twice as much time to community service as the average fraternity man did four years ago, the Intergovernmental group estimates. The most recent figures show each member annually contributes $25 and 3.4 hours to philanthropy, which with 50 men in 5,000 chapters adds up to $6.25 million and 850,000 volunteer hours each year.

Investigate before buying

This time of year thoughts turn to planning a family vacation at the beach, mountains or lake—and finding a way to afford it.

A timeshare, or purchasing a unit in a resort area for use a specific week every year is a good solution for some families, says Bonnie L. Piernot, a consumer economics specialist.

"Especially for larger families, a timeshare may be much less costly than comparable hotel or motel rooms, mostly because you can accommodate more people and eat more meals at home rather than in restaurants," she says. "No matter how attractive the deal, however, consumers should carefully investigate before buying a timeshare," cautions the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Piernot says it's most important to know what kind of timeshare you're buying. An ownership, or "interval" timeshare, gives you a simple interest in the property, providing title, deed and title insurance. You can sell your share of the property, will it or give it away.

"Right-to-use" timeshare offers no equity in the property. You're given the right to use a specific unit for a certain period of time, after which possession reverts to the developer. This type of timeshare may also be called a vacation license, lease or club membership, she explains.

"Contests and gifts have been used to induce people to visit a site where unscrupulous sellers then apply heavy pressure," the specialist says.

"Texas laws protect consumers by allowing a 3-day cooling off period, during which a buyer who did not actually visit the timeshare unit or a comparable unit can cancel a contract and get a refund," notes Piernot. "However, if you plan on buying outside Texas, check with the State Attorney General's Office in the other state, since regulations vary."

Before signing a timeshare contract, the consumer specialist suggests you figure your total costs including interest to be paid for financing and annual maintenance fees.

"In general, time shares should not be purchased as an investment, since resale is often difficult and may bring 30-40% less than the original price," she advises.

Piernot also warns consumers to avoid buying a timeshare on impulse. "Make sure it's a resort area you want to visit year after year and that you really will be getting your money's worth, by comparing the availability and cost of simply renting a vacation unit."

Ask Dr. Lamb

About Viruses

BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have two children, a boy of 9 and a girl of 7. The season of runny noses and coughs is here, which prompts me to ask some questions about viruses. Just what is a virus and how does it differ from bacteria? Why is it easy to catch a cold virus, but not easy to catch the AIDS virus? I know other viruses affect the liver but do not cause cold symptoms. Why?

What should I do when my children get a cold? Should I let them play or should I keep them at home and make them rest?

DEAR READER: A virus is a small piece of genetic material, the DNA and RNA that is found in the nuclei of cells. It may be wrapped in an envelope of protein. But a bacterium is a complete animal.

The reason some viruses can cause an infection easily and others cannot is their compatibility with your own cells. A virus cannot multiply unless it is inside a cell. If it doesn't multiply it doesn't cause symptoms and may not survive.

The first step in a virus infection involves the portal of entry. In the case of a cold, the envelope of the virus is compatible with cells in your nose, and the virus enters these cells. In the case of viral hepatitis A, the portal of entry is through the cells in the intestinal tract; therefore it infects you if it is in your food or water. But putting the hepatitis virus A in the nose will not cause an infection.

The AIDS virus has to get into the body and into the bloodstream to find lymph cells to grow in. So it is not easily or casually transmitted.

It is better to rest if you have a cold, but that does not mean you have to stay in bed. Exercise at the onset of a virus infection may compromise the body's immune mechanisms. A laboratory study showed that mice infected with the coxsackie virus (one of the respiratory illness viruses) had severe infections which even involved the heart muscle. The illness was much worse than in the mice that rested.

I'm sending you THE HEALTH LETTER 26-5. It's a Virus, for more detailed information. Others who want this issue can send $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope with 39 cents postage to THE HEALTH LETTER-26-5, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am in need of advice on the ecum. The dictionary says it is a cavity open at one end, the blind pouch in which the large intestine begins and into which the ileum opens from one side.

The pain on my right side is now constant. It feels like a knife is jabbing my side and keeps me from walking much. Is it dangerous and what can be done about it? Will I need to see a surgeon?

DEAR READER: Yes, the ecum is a blind pouch where the large intestine (colon) begins. The small intestine, the ileum, is connected to the side of this pouch. The appendix originates from the end of the ecum. And gas can accumulate in the blind pouch and cause pain.

But just because the ecum is there does not mean that it is the cause of your discomfort. Your knife-like pain may be from muscle or skeletal problems, or just gas distending the colon. It is doubtful that you have a condition that will require surgery. The first step in finding out what should be done is to find out what your problem is. Go see your doctor for a better history and an examination.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am very concerned about my husband's cough. He had what he thought was a flu-like illness that started six weeks ago. The main thing is that horrible cough. He doesn't seem to cough up anything, just sometimes a little glob of mucus as though he were clearing his throat. He doesn't seem ill but can't shake the cough.

He does smoke, but he has been smoking for many years. I think that may be the cause of his cough, but he says that if the cigarettes caused it, he would have been coughing years ago. I really think he should see a doctor. Since he really doesn't feel bad he is reluctant to do so. If you think he should, please say so and maybe he will listen to you.

DEAR READER: Whether he feels ill or not makes no difference. He must see a doctor. He may have chronic bronchitis from years of smoking. After all, the cough does have to start sometime. Or he could have something more serious, like lung cancer. I hate to mention that, but it is a complication of cigarette smoking, and the first warning may be a cough.

Actually there is a long list of things that can cause a cough besides just having a cold or acute upper respiratory infection. It requires some judgment to decide when you need to see a doctor about a cough. If it is just a common cold and lasts a few days, most people do not need to see a doctor. But if any of the following apply, SEE YOUR DOCTOR:

1. If your temperature is over 102 F (38.9 C) or if your fever persists for over three days.
2. If you have pain other than a mild headache or sore throat.
3. If you have excessive weakness or prostration.
4. If your cough lasts for over 10 days, even if you feel fine.

I am sending you Special Report 53, Cough: What To Do About It, which you can have your husband read. It might encourage him to see his doctor and find out what the problem is. Others who want this issue can send $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope with 39 cents postage to THE HEALTH LETTER-53, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

I would not suspect it in his case (unless he has other symptoms as well), but a commonly overlooked cause for a chronic cough is congestive heart failure. It causes accumulation of fluid in the lungs, which causes the cough.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I tried for years to get my husband to stop smoking. He wouldn't, and claimed that since there was no cancer in his family it wouldn't hurt him. I knew better. Then he had a mild stroke. At first it affected his speech and right side. But he recovered well. Did he stop smoking? No. He is back at it and claims that cigarettes have nothing to do with strokes. Please comment.

DEAR READER: Cigarette smoking is a drug addiction. A lot of people are paralyzed or can't speak because they smoked. Studies from Britain, Finland and the United States all show that cigarette smokers have about four times the risk of a stroke as nonsmokers.

There was a fine study from the Honolulu Heart Program of 7,872 men followed for 12 years. It showed that, for smokers, the risk for a stroke caused by a clot was two to three times the risk for nonsmokers, and the risk of a hemorrhagic stroke was four to six times that for nonsmokers. Your husband's risk of a second stroke is greatly increased by his continued smoking. His risk of a heart attack is also increased.

Skin specialist cautions Retin-A can cause problems

Retin-A may be touted as a new anti-aging wonder drug in dermatology, but a Baylor College of Medicine skin specialist cautions that it can also cause serious problems if not used properly.

"Retin-A is a Vitamin A derivative, an acidic and irritating substance that can cause burning and pain if not used appropriately," said Dr. Ted Rosen who is also chief of dermatology at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

"Patients' faces can turn beet red and hurt so much that they need cool compresses or ice packs to gain relief," he said. "Some patients will require cortisone pills or creams to reduce inflammation. It's very drying and irritating. Some people just can't tolerate it."

Retin-A was initially approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to treat acne, but studies indicate it can reverse some skin damage caused by overexposure to sunlight.

"However, anyone expecting big changes in appearance will be very disappointed because even after prolonged use, improvements are very subtle," Rosen said.

If used judiciously, Retin-A can eliminate very fine, early wrinkles, lighten dark splotches or mottled-looking skin and give pale, pasty-looking faces a pink, rosy-cheeked appearance.

"But that's the limit. The changes are very subtle and require a minimum of three to four months of use," he said.

Retin-A is a persistent therapy.

Patients must continue using it to maintain whatever correction they have achieved. If discontinued, virtually all of the gains will reverse.

While Retin-A can eliminate some skin damage caused by too much sun, there is concern that it may also promote skin cancer because it makes people more sensitive to sunlight.

"It's ironic that the people who can benefit from Retin-A the most, those who have sun-damaged skin, may also be increasing their risk for skin cancer," Rosen said. "We caution patients who use Retin-A to always apply a sunscreen before going outdoors."

No long-term damage has been reported. But Retin-A has not been used long enough for long-term evaluations, he added.

Who can use Retin-A? Rosen said it works best on people between the ages of 25 to 45 who have early wrinkling and pigmentary changes caused by overexposure to sunlight.

Persons who are prone to, or have had, skin cancers should not use it. Those who have significant skin mottling, deep wrinkles or furrows, and persons over the age of 50 are probably not good candidates for Retin-A.

"Some patients have passed along Retin-A to friends and relatives who used it, and it just created skin problems for them or made existing problems worse," he said. "Some people will never be able to use Retin-A, no matter how carefully they follow instructions or how weak the solution is."

Rosen's advice is to keep Retin-A away from lips, nose, eyes and other sensitive skin areas and to report any discomfort immediately to the prescribing physician.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

No matter how little laundry soap I use when washing towels in the washing machine, it's too much!

I can't get it rinsed out, even after many runs through the rinse cycle. Is there something I can put in the rinse water to cut the soap? — Ann Foster, Orlando, Fla.

Try adding one cup of vinegar to the rinse water. This will help to cut the soap residue that is plaguing your towels! RECIPE CARD HOLDER

Dear Heloise: Can you take one more recycling idea?

Take an old, pretty cup and saucer and make a recipe card holder out of it. It will not only hold recipes, but will add a decorative touch to your kitchen.

To make one, glue the cup and saucer together with a quick-drying glue (be careful not to let the glue come in contact with your skin). After they are bonded, place a round piece of plastic foam in the cup. Stick in some artificial greenery, or if you crochet, make up some crocheted flowers and greenery. Place a plastic card holder that you can purchase at a florist shop in the middle of the plastic foam.

You now have a pretty recipe card holder to put in your kitchen or to give as a hostess gift with a favorite recipe attached.

Either way, I am sure you will find them decorative and a nice way to recycle that cup and saucer that you couldn't bear to throw away. — May Belle Dreibelbis, Las Vegas, Nev.

I always welcome recycling ideas, especially one as wonderful as yours. I knew there was a reason I saved that plastic card holder! — Heloise
