Reagan missed on deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's fiscal 1989 budget would leave a federal deficit of $165 billion, $35 billion higher than the White House says, the Congressional Budget Office reported today.

Most of the difference results from the administration's more optimistic view of the economy, said James Blum, acting director of the non-partisan agency, in testimony prepared for delivery before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"CBO foresees less rapid real growth, higher inflation and higher interest rates," said Blum, who defended his agency's prognosis as in line with private forecasts.

The congressional agency also sees federal programs, including entitlement programs, as costing more than the administration predicts in its $1.1 trillion plan, he said.

"The administration's budget would cut the projected deficits only modestly," said Blum. Fiscal 1989 red ink would be $12 billion higher, or $177 billion, if the president's proposals or other deficit reduction were not enacted, he said.

The House and Senate budget committees will soon begin drafting their versions of the government's spending program. However, they are not expected to do more deficit cutting this year than the president proposed, since his plan was crafted under the guidelines of a budget agreement he reached last fall with congressional leaders.

The CBO estimates that the economy will grow 1.8 percent in calendar 1988 and 2.6 percent in 1989, compared with White House growth predictions of 2.4 percent and 3.5 percent. The CBO also sees consumer prices rising more quickly, with higher interest rates and higher unemployment.

Lower growth cuts into tax revenue projections, while higher interest rates force the government to pay more to finance its programs.

The Gramm-Rudman law calls for slashing the deficit to $136 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 as an interim step toward a balanced budget by fiscal 1993. It also mandates automatic, broad-based spending cuts if Congress and the president don't approve legislation to come within $10 billion of the target.

The CBO's projections show those targets being missed by a large margin. But the congressional agency's figures carry little legal weight, since official Gramm-Rudman estimates are done by the White House alone. A revised version of Gramm-Rudman approved last year left the CBO in only an advisory capacity.

The CBO's latest revised projections show deficits higher than the administration estimates from this year straight through fiscal 1993. The White House predicts only $23 billion in red ink remaining by then, while CBO estimates an annual deficit still in excess of $100 billion.

Devers is top citizen

Bill Devers, a man who has dedicated his life to those less fortunate, received the Hereford Lions Club Citizen of the Year Award at the annual Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Banquet Thursday night at the Bull Barn.

Bordered by the sign "Visions '88: The me I see is the me I'll be," Lions Club vice president Jeryl Baker described Devers as the type of person everyone should want to be.

"He is and has been dedicated to making Hereford a better place to live as well as making people, everywhere aware of this small agricultural town in the panhandle of Texas," said Baker.

Devers started his crusade to help others in 1984 by joining with Operation Good Shepherd, a ministry which offers clothes, food and counseling to the needy.

"Almost all of the counseling and many of the clothes end up being free because the people who are really in need cannot afford anything," Devers said in a previous Hereford Brand article.

In his teaching ministry at the county jail, Devers (a Disciples of Christ minister) initiated Alcoholics Anonymous meetings for the inmates and wrote a seminar titled "Three Steps to the Bottom Line" which helps inmates re-direct their lives.

His most recent endeavor is providing a farm for the homeless.

Devers' love for others is complemented by his love of music.

Earning a music degree from West Texas State University in 1966, Devers participated in the outdoor musical "TEXAS," and sang in barbershop quartets.

Devers also taught choir for 14 years in Hereford schools and helped found the Chamber Singers.

Devers serves on the County Child Welfare Board, the regional and state advisory committees of the Department of Human Services, and he is a participant in the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program.

"He has offered counseling, transportation and physical labor for many. His services cut across all social and racial boundaries, laying prejudice aside," said Baker.

Devers is married to Elva Devers and has three children — Diana, Monica and Scott.

After receiving the award, Devers said, "I've lived here since 1966, and as I told a lady in Abilene, I expect to be buried here."

This attitude, coupled with boasts about Hereford and the chamber's plans for the city, composed the banquet theme.

Incoming chamber president Larry Malamen mentioned some plans for Hereford's future including a possible tourist stop where Deaf Smith County products can be displayed.

He also said a Hereford Learning Center where residents may learn both vocational skills and academics could be drawing card for new industry.

Dukakis says Tuesday may get 'dicey'

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis says the last few days to Super Tuesday may get "a little dicey" because of desperation tactics by Democratic rival Richard Gephardt.

The Massachusetts governor was to court Democrats here in West Texas today before heading for Denver, Cheyenne and Seattle.

He concentrated much of his fire throughout a two-day, 1,200-mile swing through Texas on Gephardt, the Missouri congressman who has runs ads accusing Dukakis of favoring tax increases and knowing nothing about agriculture.

Dukakis has responded in kind with ads suggesting Gephardt has voted to protect the interests of big banks and corporations from which he has collected political action committee money.

After a meeting with community organizers at a church hall in Houston Thursday night, Dukakis told reporters, "I think the next three, four days may be somewhat difficult, only because things may start getting a little dicey between now and Tuesday. ... I think some people are getting desperate."

Asked if he meant Gephardt, Dukakis said, "The record is clear. He's running negative ads right now."

"The folks that attack are usually those that are behind," he said.

To Gephardt's charge that Dukakis has accepted campaign money from businesses that have major dealings with the state of Massachusetts, the governor replied, "I don't know what he's talking about. I have over 65,000 individual contributors to my campaign."

Dukakis, who refuses to accept money from PACs, said he has never taken contributions from state lobbyists, or more than $100 from a state employee.

"What is clear is that the PAC system is a very bad system. It's time it ended," said Dukakis, who blamed Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, a Republican presidential hopeful, and his GOP colleagues for filibustering a bill to curb PACs.

"If I'm president of the United States, the first bill I will send to the Congress is the Boren-Byrd bill," he vowed.

Texas offers the biggest prize, 183 delegates, and Dukakis was headed back to San Antonio Saturday night after stops in Spokane and Little Rock, Ark.

Dukakis also won the backing of the 95,000-member Texas State Teachers Association, which withdrew its earlier endorsement of Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, who is sitting out the South's primaries.

Dukakis charged Gephardt's retaliatory trade legislation could provoke a global trade war and harm U.S.-Mexican relations.

Before largely Hispanic audiences at airport rallies in the border towns of Harlingen and Laredo, Dukakis related how Gephardt asked him in a recent debate if he was running for "president of Mexico."

"I said, 'Dick, if I'm president of the United States, I'm going to pay attention to our relationship with Mexico and I'm going to make sure that our proposals do not wreck the economy of Mexico,'" Dukakis said to cheers.

"We're going to work with our neighbors in Mexico as partners to create opportunity on both sides of the border."

In both Harlingen and Laredo, the multilingual Dukakis, who grew up speaking Greek and English — spoke at length in Spanish as well as English.

In Houston, Dukakis stood with his wife, Kitty, before a two-story Lone Star flag draped against the glass elevators in the atrium of the Hyatt-Regency Hotel. He told 600 supporters, "I don't have to tell you how important 'Super Martes' is."

He ended his appeals with the word, "Poco a poco, paso a paso, mano en mano, juntos, vamos a ganar," or, as he translated, "Little by little, step by step, hand in hand, together, we shall succeed."

Amnesty applications up

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The number of people applying for immigration amnesty here has risen steadily since the end of the holidays, but numbers still are far below last year's estimates, an official says.

The El Paso Legalization Center had 24,819 amnesty applicants as of Feb. 23, said Pedro A. Reyes, the center's deputy chief. Last year, officials predicted that as many as 50,000 people would apply for amnesty in El Paso.

Reyes said he expects the numbers to keep increasing before the May 4 deadline.

"Maybe we won't get 300 per day, but we do expect a strong, steady flow," he said. "We will be kept busy, that's for sure."

The amnesty program allows aliens who have lived illegally in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, to apply for temporary residency. After 18 months, they can apply for permanent residency, and they eventually can apply for citizenship. One reason people might not be applying in the numbers expected is that they might believe their border crossing cards, or "micas," can keep them from being deported.

Mexican citizens who can prove they have jobs in Mexico can obtain the border crossing cards, which allow them to visit the United States for up to 72 hours to visit or shop.

The Legalization Center is open Monday through Saturday, meaning amnesty applicants have 54 working days to apply before the deadline.

Police moonlighting to pay bills

DALLAS (AP) — Police officials are taking steps to increase the safety of Dallas officers who work off-duty security jobs, but the moves may hurt officers financially.

The closer study of the outside jobs held by as many as 2,000 of Dallas' 2,400 officers follows the death of officer Gary McCarthy, who was shot to death during a robbery at a grocery store where he worked as a part-time guard.

"What will occur is at the time they make application to perform that police function, their division commander does have the authority to order them to utilize more officers, to work in uniform or can deny the application entirely," said Deputy Police Chief Roy Jawkins.

Police already patrol in pairs when on duty. Police Chief Billy Prince ordered the two-officer patrols after the downtown shooting death in January of officer John Chase, who was patrolling alone.

Some officers say their off-duty work is more dangerous than the work they do for a city with one of the nation's highest crime rates. And experts worry that the extra hours may be causing more stress, fatigue and risk.

But many say they must work the extra jobs to survive.

Another off-duty officer, James A. Joe, was killed in January while investigating a burglary at the apartment complex where he lived and worked as a security guard.

Most police officers say low salaries have driven them to second and third jobs to supplement their families' incomes and to cover living expenses. The starting salary for Dallas officers is $22,644 and the maximum salary is $28,704.

With about four out of five officers holding outside jobs, the figures translate into a payroll of nearly $6 million with officers working an average five hours a week.

Problems at home await Reagan after peace talks with NATO authorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan won high praise as a super-power peacemaker during his parley with NATO leaders, but he faces a knotty array of problems on the home front.

A basket of touchy issues demands attention, ranging from Secretary of State George P. Shultz's Middle East drawn-out peace mission to administration efforts to pressure Panama's strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, to step down.

And in Congress, Reagan administration officials insist the president intends to press ahead with his campaign to aid the Contras following the defeat of the House Democrats' humanitarian aid proposal.

At the White House today, however, Reagan was assured of a romantic homecoming as first lady Nancy Reagan planned to decorate the residence with greeting cards to commemorate the couple's 36th wedding anniversary.

Reagan is skipping his regular trip to Camp David and will have a quiet anniversary dinner and relaxing weekend with Mrs. Reagan, said her spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin.

"He'll be zonked," Mrs. Crispin said. "They'll just have some quiet time together." The president had spoken throughout the summit with a hoarse voice and coughed repeatedly due to allergies.

"He hasn't felt very well," Reagan's chief of staff Howard Baker told reporters as Air Force One jetted home.

The president gets a daily briefing on Shultz's negotiations in the Middle East. The secretary returns Saturday.

Reagan dispatched Shultz on a second round of talks aimed at breathing new life into the peace process and curbing violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Baker said there were "no new surprises, but the president felt it was worthwhile to continue those efforts."

But a senior administration official traveling with Reagan refused to confirm or deny that the secretary is carrying a personal message to Mideast leaders. "What the secretary is trying to do is get them all in the same stadium and see if we can get a game going," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Reagan returns to find himself in direct conflict with Congress on two long-simmering issues — aid to the Contra rebels and the Civil Rights Restoration Act.

Baker, speaking before the House action on Contra aid, said that if the elements contained in a GOP Contra aid package fail to get through the House, Reagan would press his case in the Senate.

In a statement issued after the House action — in which it defeated the Democrats' plan and never considered the Republican version — the president called on Congress "to act urgently to develop an aid package which is effectively deliverable and of sufficient quantity to sustain the Nicaraguan freedom fighters."

Reagan is expected to veto the civil rights act next week, Baker said.

The landmark civil rights bill would reverse a 1984 Supreme Court decision that narrows the scope of four major civil rights laws meant to prevent taxpayer financing of discrimination. It is opposed by the administration as too broad.

At the two-day North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting that ended Thursday in Brussels, Reagan and the 15 other leaders finessed disagreements over nuclear policy and pledged to keep the pact's arsenal of short-range nuclear weapons up-to-date.

The NATO leaders gave "full support" for Reagan's attempts to seek a 50 percent cut in strategic nuclear weapons as he heads toward a planned Moscow summit this spring. And they praised his role in negotiating the December U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range nuclear weapons from European soil.

The alliance also backed a demand that the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact make deep cuts in the conventional weapons and armies NATO fears could be used to launch a surprise attack on Western Europe.

Bank opens after heavy loan losses

FLOWER MOUND, Texas (AP) — Heavy loan losses contributed to the failure of Flower Mound Bank which will reopen today as Security Bank, the state banking commissioner said.

About $17.2 million in 4,900 accounts as well as fully secured liabilities will be transferred to Security Bank, Flower Mound, Texas, a newly chartered subsidiary of Security Bank Shares F.M., said Bill Olcheski, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. spokesman in Washington. Depositors of the failed bank will become depositors of the assuming institution, pending court approval.

The bank closed Thursday with $17.7 million in total assets and the FDIC was named receiver. The FDIC and the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas then approved Security Bank F.M.'s application to assume the deposits.

"The (failed) bank's current management has been unable to reverse the deteriorating asset quality and mounting operational losses resulted in the ultimate insolvency of the institution," said Kenneth W. Littlefield, banking commissioner.

Security bank will purchase about $16.2 million of the failed bank assets at a discounted price of $3.8 million, Olcheski said.

Littlefield said an examination of Flower Mound's loan portfolio revealed heavy losses on the loans that seriously impacted the bank's capital.

"Loan losses stem from poor underwriting standards and liberal lending practices with regard to speculative real estate loans, unsecured lending, apparent violations of state and federal regulations, as well as disregard for bank policies," Littlefield said. "Also noted were loans to insiders which resulted in heavy loan losses."

The collapse of the bank in this community 20 miles northwest of Dallas was the 12th bank failure in Texas this year.

Flower Mound Bank was a non-agricultural institution, Olcheski said.

Thirty banks have failed nationally this year and the FDIC has conducted six assistance transactions.

Computer to eliminate deciphering doctors' script

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The age-old problem of deciphering doctors' handwriting may have been solved, thanks to the use of a computer.

According to MIS Week, a system has been devised which permits a doctor to dictate a report directly into a computer for an immediate printed copy.

The management information systems journal says this should prove a blessing for hospital administrators who historically have been forced to try to decipher the handwriting of a doctor scribbled under the hectic conditions of an emergency room. Initial reports from emergency room physicians are vitally important because they usually are the first step in a long process that can include surgery, X-rays, laboratory followup, pharmacy and police reports and sometimes protracted litigation.

The system operates on a 1,000-word vocabulary which meets emergency room needs. It takes advantage of standardization of both the form and content of emergency medical reports, providing computerized forms appropriate to the initial complaint.

Gephardt questions Dukakis on special interest support

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

Richard Gephardt was gunning for Democratic presidential rival Michael Dukakis today over special-interest campaign contributions, and Republican Pat Robertson lashed out at what he called "the real fanatics" opposed to prayer in public schools.

A poll published today gave Vice President George Bush a decisive lead over Republican opponent Bob Dole in South Carolina, whose GOP primary on Saturday rings the opening bell on Tuesday's 20-state punch-up.

The Super Tuesday contests, with a prize of 1,307 Democratic delegates and 712 Republican ones, are concentrated in the South.

In South Carolina, Bush had the support of 49 percent of likely voters to Dole's 26 percent, Robertson's 14 percent and Rep. Jack Kemp's 7 percent, the Washington Post poll indicated.

"I am confident as I look down the road at the political events ahead that if I win South Carolina big ... standing here today is the next president of the United States," Bush told a crowd in Camden, S.C. on Thursday.

Dole, who picked up the endorsement Thursday of former U.N. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, conceded he was running behind Bush in South Carolina, but pointed to bright spots that day — a caucus in Wyoming, and the election of 14 national GOP delegates in Kansas, Dole's home state.

All four Republicans were campaigning in South Carolina today.

Robertson bought half an hour of television time on stations around the state Thursday night, saying he wanted to "set the record straight" about religious issues.

The former television evangelist said he believes in the separation of church and state but added: "The real fanatics in America today are those who try to tell us ... that we should tear down the crosses and the manger scenes at Christmas time, that our children should be denied the right to pray in school and that traditional moral values are out of style."

Meanwhile, more polls today pointed to a strong Southern lead for Bush, while Dukakis and Jesse Jackson dueled for support among Democrats.

A CBS-New York Times survey gave Bush a better than 2-1 lead over Dole in 14 Southern and border states. A survey by Cable News Network and USA Today had similar findings.

In the CBS-Times poll, Jackson led Dukakis and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore in the South. The CNN-USA Today survey suggested Dukakis and Jackson were neck-in-neck in the region.

Dukakis, in Texas, attacked

Gephardt's plan for mandatory retaliation against countries whose trade practices are judged unfair.

"There's always somebody who suggests that: throw up the walls, hunker down," the Massachusetts governor said.

Gephardt, for his part, sought to turn the tables on Dukakis, who has been running ads excoriating the Missouri congressman for accepting campaign contributions from the political action committees of banks, defense contractors, utilities and other big businesses.

"I'll give back every penny of money that I've gotten from political action funds if he will return the money to all the people who have given him money who do business with or are licensed by the state of Massachusetts," Gephardt said.

Dukakis spokesman Leslie Dach said the campaign has taken no money from any corporate PACs or registered lobbyists in Massachusetts.

Gephardt told reporters at a news conference at the Baltimore-Washington airport that he would unveil today "a partial list of some of the interests that have given money to his campaign."

Most lie detectors banned for screenings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advocates of using lie detectors to screen job applicants and test employees' honesty have given up hope that President Reagan will veto legislation outlawing the practice.

The Senate, by a 69-27 vote, on Thursday joined the House in approving a bill effectively prohibiting about 85 percent of the some 2 million polygraph examinations now conducted each year in the United States.

Remaining now is only for the House and Senate sponsors of the ban to iron out minor differences in the two versions, submit the compromise for passage again and send it to the White House for Reagan's signature.

Throughout his first term and even into last year, Reagan had vowed to veto any legislation to restrict private employers in their growing use of lie detectors, allegedly to ferret out thieves and other wrongdoers.

Labor unions and civil liberties groups argue that the devices are used just as often to intimidate workers or weed out those with pro-union sympathies.

With increasing evidence that the tests in most circumstances are poorly administered and produce faulty results between 15 and 50 percent of the time, advocates of the ban have worn down much of the administration's opposition.

After two days of extended debate this week stalling the Senate action, opponents of the ban gave up their fight when the administration released a statement objecting only to portions of the legislation and avoiding any mention of a veto for the first time.

"The administration does not have the backbone at this time to veto this bill," complained Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind. "They have folded up shop, caving like a house of cards."

Crafted by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah — normally adversaries on labor-management issues — the Senate bill would allow some private use of polygraphs to investigate specific incidents of theft or sabotage.

But even then, the tests would have to be conducted by licensed examiners under regulations to be developed by the Labor Department, and employers would first have to file a police report or insurance claim and detail in writing the basis for suspecting the employee to be questioned.

Employees who failed the test or refused to take it under such circumstances could not be fired absent other evidence. If they were, the bill allows civil suits against offending employers, and provides for up to a $10,000 federal fine for each violation.

Kennedy and Hatch, respectively the chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate's Labor and Human Resources Committee, complained that an estimated 320,000 "honest workers" are branded as liars each year, often losing their jobs or being denied one because of the machines' inaccuracy.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Children are always getting lost when Mom is shopping. May I offer some advice?

1. Don't panic.
 2. Stay in the area where you last saw your child.
 3. Call (calmly) to your child and tell him/her to "come out now." Keep anger (or worse yet, hysteria) out of your voice. Never threaten.
 4. If the little rascal doesn't appear, look in the good hiding places. Get down to the 2-year-old level to find them. Clothing racks are special favorite. Also behind stacked boxes.
- I bet I've witnessed 30 disappearances in which the kids were playing hide-and-seek with their mothers because they were bored silly with shopping.
- I kept my kids on a leash until they were 3. People thought I was mean, nuts or abusive, but at least I knew where they were. No name, please. Sign me - Seen It in Mpls.

DEAR SEEN IT: I, too, have witnessed the frenzy of mothers who have lost a child while shopping and it's heart-rending.

Your suggestions are excellent, even the leash for those rambunctious kids who cannot be controlled any other way. I know many readers will howl about my approval, but every mother knows her child better than the onlooker.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am married to a man I love lot, but he stays out at least three nights a week until the bars close, which is 1:30 a.m. in our town.

When he comes home, he is dead drunk and cannot control his bladder. He was a child bed-wetter and now he is an adult bed-wetter.

I can't describe how disgusting it is to wake up in a wet bed. I have yelled my head off, threatened to leave, made him sleep on the couch, in the bathtub, anywhere, so that I don't have to lie in it, but nothing works.

I don't want to uproot my young son and leave his father, but I can't stand this much longer. It has been going on for three years, ever since we married.

Ann, tell me what to do with this man. I am at the end of my rope.—Mexico, Mo.

DEAR MEX: Join Al-Anon. This organization deals with every conceivable aspect of living with an alcoholic. I assure you, you will find some solutions among your colleagues. They have been through the mill and will offer viable alternatives. Look in the phone book for Al-Anon and get hopping.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As a retired teacher, I am well aware of the shamefully limited knowledge of geography in this country. But it is not just among high school students.

It is common among those who should know better. And it's not just about geography, but history as well.

I wrote an account of the World War II battle for Iwo Jima. When I sent out queries about having the piece published, one editor responded, "Thank you for submitting your article on Iwo Jima, but we cannot use it since we only publish World War II material."

Some disgracefully ignorant people are in charge of educating the public. Sad to say, the situation is self-perpetuating, because ignorant teachers (and editors) spread their ignorance.—Depressed in Santa Rosa

DEAR SANTA: After writing this column for nearly 33 years I can tell you that there are a great many more ignorant teachers than ignorant editors. As a group, I would say editors are extremely competent and well-informed.

Beauticians attend hair show

Two Hereford beauticians attended the Spring-Summer 1988 All-Texas Hair Show held in Dallas Feb. 27-29.

Phyllis Neill and Karen McPhearsen of A-1 Beauty Salon attended the weekend show which was held at the Dallas Fairmont Hotel. The primary focus of the show was on "The Contemporary Geomotion Looks."

It was noted that the Geomotion Collection incorporates texture and shape into the design of this contemporary short look for today's woman and is fashionable and flexible. Fluid dimensions of color and curl allow the hair to move into any style and situation with ease and grace, and the short cut for men allows him the same versatility.

Triangular shapes are an essential ingredient in all the GEOMotion looks. Strikingly similar cuts and styles for both men and women are the trademark of the GEOMotion "Progressives."

Houston knocks Arkansas out of SWC co-championship

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Arkansas Razorbacks basketball coach Nolan Richardson says the loss to the Houston Cougars that cost his team a chance at the Southwest Conference title was "disappointing," but says his team still has a chance to make the NCAA playoffs.

Richardson made the remarks Thursday night after Richard Hollis scored 25 points to lead the Cougars to an 82-77 victory over Arkansas.

Houston's victory gave Southern Methodist its first outright SWC title since 1967, although the Mustangs shared the title with Texas in 1972.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss and his team watched the game on television, hoping for a Houston victory.

"I thought we were in first place before tonight," Bliss said. "It really doesn't matter whether we're champions or co-champions. I know the guys are happy."

"At this point, this loss takes away from a very good season," Richardson said. "We had a chance to tie for the title and didn't take advantage. That's disappointing."

"But we're 19-7, we have a game Sunday and we hope to have three games at the conference tournament," the Arkansas coach added. "We still have the opportunity to go the NCAA tournament if things go right for us. Our goal now is to win the tournament because that's the only sure way to get into the NCAA."

"Next week may be a happier one for us," he said. "There are still some things for us to accomplish before this season is over."

Hollis got Houston off to a quick start in the first half, hitting four of five 3-point shots for 16 points at the half.

"That had to be my best shooting half ever," Hollis said. "We wanted to prove that we could come back after the Baylor game."

The Cougars lost to the Bears 88-73 in their last game.

Richardson had high praise for Hollis and the Cougars.

"Houston shot the lights out in the first half, especially Hollis," he said. "He got them on a roll. We couldn't get anything going in the first half."

Houston coach Pat Foster had a simple explanation for the victory.

"I think it was a matter of us hitting the outside shots. Our team really fought back after the loss to Baylor. I was proud of the way they came back tonight. The big key was getting the lead in the first half."

Tim Scott kept Arkansas in the game until the final seconds, hitting 11 of his 16 points in the final 3:02 of the game.

Houston led 47-36 at the half and maintained its 11-point lead at 59-48 with 13:04 left in the game.

But the Razorbacks outscored Houston 11-4 to keep the game close in the closing minutes. But Arkansas then went 3:20 without scoring a point, allowing Houston to hold on.

Houston never trailed in the game and led by as many as 12 points in the first half at 43-31 with 2:20 to go.

Arkansas cut Houston's lead to three points with 52 seconds left in the game at 73-70. But seven free throws by the Cougars iced the game.

Arkansas dropped to a 19-7 overall record and 10-5 in SWC games. Houston is 15-11 and 9-6.

Tigers beat Oklahoma 93-90 in overtime

Missouri gives Sooners more trouble

By The Associated Press
Missouri has been giving Oklahoma trouble.

Last November, Mizzou gave the Sooners fits in football before losing 17-13.

They beat them in basketball 93-90 in overtime Thursday night, after No. 4 Oklahoma rallied from a 14-point second-half deficit.

"We didn't play well in the first half and they outrebounded us and that was probably the key to the loss," Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said. "Missouri played great, probably as well as I've ever seen them play. I don't think we'll lose any na-

HHS baseball game today is cancelled

Today's high school varsity baseball game between Hereford and Palo Duro, scheduled at Amarillo, has been cancelled. Hereford schools athletic Director Don Cumpton said.

The Hereford Eight-Team Tennis Tournament began today and will continue through Saturday. All tournament matches will be played at the Hereford High School tennis courts.

At the Brand's press time today, Cumpton said two athletic events scheduled in Hereford on Saturday will still be held — a junior high school boys' track meet at Whiteface Stadium, and a junior varsity baseball doubleheader at the HHS baseball field.

The track meet is scheduled to start at 9 a.m. with the field events. The running preliminaries begin at 9:45 a.m., and the running finals start at 1:30 p.m.

The baseball doubleheader, versus Pampa, will begin at 1 p.m.

tional respect after this loss. A game like this speaks well of the Big Eight."

Oklahoma, 26-3 overall and 11-2 in the conference, needs to beat Nebraska Saturday to win the Big Eight title. It would be the first time the Sooners have won both the football and basketball championships in the same season.

"Billy has done a tremendous job," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "This is a good basketball team. It would be easy to make a lot of noise for them to be No. 1."

Derrick Chievous had 35 points and 18 rebounds for Missouri and freshman Doug Smith broke an 88-88 overtime tie with a slam dunk.

After Smith's go-ahead basket, Missouri, 18-8 and 7-6, increased the lead to 92-88 when Chievous made two free throws with 27 seconds left.

Mookie Blaylock made two free throws to pull the Sooners within two points and Lee Coward's free throw increased Missouri's lead to three. Ricky Grace's long 3-point attempt at the buzzer fell short.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 2 Purdue beat Wisconsin 84-56, No. 3 Arizona beat Washington State 79-41, Long Beach State upset No. 5 Nevada-Las Vegas 79-77, No. 11 Iowa beat Michigan State 103-87, No. 15 Brigham Young beat New Mexico 89-82 and No. 16 North Carolina State beat Maryland 74-68.

Troy Lewis scored 18 points and Purdue held Wisconsin to 16 first-half points. The Boilermakers led 28-16 at halftime and scored the first eight points of the second half to open a 20-point lead.

Wisconsin cut the lead to 40-23 before Purdue scored nine consecutive points to lead by 26 with 11:46 remaining.

No. 3 Arizona 79, Washington State 41

Anthony Cook scored 15 points as Lute Olson won his 100th game at Arizona. Olson is 291-143 in 15 seasons at Long Beach State, Iowa and Arizona. He is 100-50 in five seasons at Arizona.

Arizona led by at least 26 points throughout the second half. The Wildcats twice led by 40.

Long Beach State 79, No. 5 Nevada-Las Vegas 77

Morlon Wiley made two free throws with one second remaining as Long Beach State gave Nevada Las Vegas its third loss at home this season.

Long Beach State overcame a seven-point deficit in the second half as Wiley scored 18 of his 22 points. Rigo Moore's layup with three seconds remaining tied it at 77.

Wiley was fouled by Stacey Augmon with one second remaining and made both ends of the one-and-one.

No. 11 Iowa 103, Michigan State 87

Roy Marble scored 23 points and B.J. Armstrong added 20 for Iowa.

Iowa outscored the Spartans 18-1 from the foul line in the first half, taking a 56-42 lead. Iowa made 32 of 41 free throws in the game.

than 87-80 in the second half. No. 15 Brigham Young 89, New Mexico 82

Michael Smith scored 24 points and Jeff Chatman added 19 as Brigham Young overcame an 11-point deficit midway through the second half.

New Mexico led 65-54 with 10:46 left, but the Cougars scored eight consecutive points to close within three with 9:01 left.

The Lobos still led by three with 3:05 to go, but Brigham Young scored nine consecutive points to lead 83-77 with 47 seconds left.

No. 16 North Carolina State 74, Maryland 68

Charles Shackelford scored 21 points, including six in a 14-2 run that started the second half, as the Wolfpack overcame a 39-34 halftime deficit and took a 48-41 lead with 11:36 left.

Maryland missed its first eight shots of the second half and committed five turnovers in the opening eight minutes. North Carolina State took the lead for good at 56-55.

Our Best Friends Are Cutting Us To Pieces.

Our best friends don't always give us the best treatment. Typically, they invite us into their homes, read us like a book, take what they need from us, and put us aside to use again at their convenience.

It's a tough existence, but we don't mind. In fact, we like it. The news, editorials, and advertising coupons clipped from our pages provide our readers with knowledge, enlightenment, even an occasional 30¢ off on breakfast cereal. We're kind of flattered that people enjoy hanging onto bits and pieces of us - sometimes for years. That's something no other local advertising medium can offer.

So, although our friends keep cutting us to pieces, we'll keep showing up at their homes. Our only request: sharp scissors and a steady hand.

Major leaguers are impressed

Woman umpire praised

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If major league baseball is soon to have a female umpire, Pam Postema appears to be the leading — and only — candidate.

The 34-year-old Postema impressed all on hand on Thursday for her work behind home plate in the Atlanta Braves' 5-0 exhibition game victory over the University of Georgia.

"Yes, I think she can handle it in the major leagues," Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner said.

"She has the experience and she wouldn't embarrass them (the major leagues)," Tanner said. "I evaluated her like an umpire, not a woman umpire. You forget after one inning that she's a woman. She was very impressive."

Postema, professional baseball's only female umpire, gave a crowd of 2,313 at West Palm Beach, the entire University of Georgia squad and most Braves their first view of a female at work in a man's game.

She didn't draw any negative reviews.

"She was fine. She did great. I wasn't even thinking about it," said Atlanta rookie left-hander Derek Lilliquist, who started on the mound.

"Ladies are in everything else, why not baseball?" he said of Postema, who has been learning her trade in the minor leagues since 1977. She began her pro umpiring career in the rookie Gulf Coast League and eventually moved up to the AAA Pacific Coast League where she spent four years, 1983-86. She presently is under contract to the AAA American Association, where she worked last season.

The Phoenix, Ariz., resident worked a couple of American League spring exhibition games in 1985 and 1986 and the 1987 Hall of Fame game in Cooperstown, N.Y., between the Braves and New York Yankees.

She was not available Thursday for interviews under orders from the National League office, but will be available for interviews Saturday.

"I kind of wonder why a woman would want to be an umpire," said Atlanta right-hander Rick Mahler, who was one of nine Braves' pitchers used in the game. "But sometimes I wonder why some men want to be umpires, too."

Mahler, however, said "She was good. She wouldn't have gone as far as she has gone so far, if she wasn't."

Tanner lightened up the atmosphere quickly, smiling and asking her if she would like a kiss during the meeting at home plate as both teams exchanged lineup cards.

She smiled at Tanner, but declined.

Then it was on to the business at hand.

"She did a heck of a job," Braves' General Manager Bobby Cox said. "She hustles more than anybody I've

They are serious about U.S. national pastime

Soviets are learning to play baseball

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The United States loses to the Soviet Union in luge. They beat us in biathlon.

Big deal. Those aren't real sports anyway.

But before Americans get ready to swallow some more Olympic pride this summer, here's a comforting thought — the Soviets are learning to play baseball.

And they're serious about our national pastime.

"We know it will take a long time," Alexander Ardatov, head coach of the Soviet national team, said through an interpreter. "We do not expect to play like your professionals for awhile. Maybe 10 years."

Ten years? The Seattle Mariners have been trying for 11 and still can't do it right.

The Soviets have a method. Call it a 10-year plan. They will practice and practice and practice until they are perfect.

It is suggested to them that baseball requires great patience and some degree of cool and calm. It is a foreign thought.

"When we win, then we'll relax," Ardatov said, with emphasis.

"We do not want to wait. We want to work."

Which is why it seems strange Ardatov and his assistant, Gela Cheehradze, are spending three weeks in Florida observing spring training. Somehow, the meaning of "training" gets lost in the translation between English and Russian.

Their translator, a pleasant Soviet native named Raisa, admits the coaches are somewhat puzzled by the major leaguers. Perhaps, they wonder, the players should be doing more.

"They are very strong, but they do not use their whole energy," Cheehradze said.

Very observant. Very true.

Wherever they go, they carry a notebook to write down what they study every detail, discuss it and imitate the motions of the players. Everything is new to them and they often seem surprised.

Raisa watches, too. She sees the second baseman throw the ball into the dugout. She shrugs as if she has seen this many times before.

She has lived in this country for eight years. The first seven were in Cleveland.

The coaches have spent time with the Los Angeles Dodgers, Kansas City Royals and Detroit Tigers. Not the Reds. They met those two goodwill ambassadors of baseball, Tommy Lasorda and Sparky Anderson.

"Just ask me and Tommy over to your country for a few pointers," Anderson joked. "We'll really have you confused."

The coaches listened. They did not smile.

"We're never confused," they said.

Within two or three years, the Soviets hope to be playing baseball at the small college level. Their goal is to be competitive by 1992, when baseball becomes an official Olympic sport.

There are about 30 teams in the Soviet Union, with most of the players 18 years old and up. Kids are starting now, although many have to use tennis balls wrapped in tape and play on converted soccer fields.

No games have been shown on Soviet television, but a videotape titled "What is Baseball?" is being circulated.

Meanwhile, Ardatov and Cheehradze, both in their 30s, are studying for themselves on their first visit to the United States.

"It is not as easy as it looks," Cheehradze said. "It takes a lot of skill."

The Soviet coaches say everyone here has been eager to help them. That's the way it should be. Glasnost, you know.

Just don't teach 'em the split-fingered fastball.

Lab researches body's tolerance for cold

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Brian Cress hops into a large pool filled with fast-moving ice water in the basement of the University of Minnesota-Duluth Medical School whenever he gets the chance.

It's not that he loves being cold, he acknowledges. It's the money he gets for being a guinea pig in the school's Hypothermia Research Laboratory, which tests protective clothing and conducts basic scientific research on the body's reaction to cold.

"It's good pay. Also it helps with improving the suits, making sure people are going to survive in the suits," said Cress, a sophomore medical student who has been a test subject for nearly two years, getting $100 every time he spends from one to six hours in the frigid water coursing through the 2,500-gallon pool.

Cress also volunteers as a subject for cold air studies, for which he gets $25 for spending time in a walk-in freezer — sometimes in just shorts and sometimes in survival suits.

"I prefer the water studies," he said. "Cold air is incredibly uncomfortable. The fan blows the cold air across my chest and it feels like I'm iced down."

The laboratory, one of the few cold weather research centers in the world, got its start about eight years ago because there was no facility in the United States for testing the effectiveness of survival gear, said Dr. Robert Pozos, who heads the medical school's physiology department and is one of the lab's directors.

Tests are still conducted on survival suits such as those worn by oil workers in the Atlantic Ocean and North Sea, U.S. Coast Guard and Navy personnel and other seamen.

However, the laboratory also is doing basic research on such diverse topics as effects of cold water exercise on patients with multiple sclerosis, how water current affects the speed with which hypothermia sets in, why young children sometimes survive underwater for long periods, how shivering affects body heat, and effects of alcohol on body functions in cold temperatures.

Most water tests are done in a new constant-current $25,000 pool donated to the laboratory this summer by Swimex Systems Inc., of Warren, R.I., but some tests are still done in Lake Superior.

"I feel more comfortable doing testing in the pool for safety reasons. On the lake, you can't have equipment to monitor heart rate, temperature," said Larry Wittmers, a laboratory co-director.

"This is much colder than Lake Superior," Cress said of the laboratory pool. "But it's not too bad.

You get your body psyched up. I have to prepare myself to do it."

Bryan Delage, a third-year medical student at the University of Minnesota Medical School in Minneapolis, recently traveled to Duluth for his ninth stint in the cold water to test a deck suit designed for workers on ocean oil rigs, ore carriers and Coast Guard vessels.

"Sometimes it's all right. Without the suit, those tests are a little more intense," Delage said as technicians attached wires to his skin to provide a constant computer readout of changes in his skin and body core temperatures and heart beat.

The experiment was being made to determine how much water current, simulated by a motorized, variable-speed paddle wheel, will increase heat loss, Pozos said.

"He'd have 30 minutes in this water (50 degrees Fahrenheit) without the suit before hypothermia would set in," Pozos said.

Delage said he'd prefer a suit with mitts. "If you get your hands wet it can be very painful," he noted as he lay shivering with his hands raised above the surface of the water.

After 28 minutes in the pool, Delage's skin temperature had dropped six degrees, but his core temperature hadn't fallen.

"He'd be in real trouble without that suit. It's doing exactly what it's designed to do," Pozos said.

Suits alone sometimes may not be enough to protect a person from hypothermia in a stressful situation, said psychologist Richard Hoffman, who also works with the laboratory. Anxiety also may play a big part in hypothermia onset, he said.

"The heart rate goes up when subjects are tested in the lake. We see anxiety probably drives temperature down," Hoffman said.

He also noted that people are very poor judges of how cold they are and said being in tremendous physical shape doesn't seem to help much in fighting off hypothermia.

Alcohol in the bloodstream also can have serious effects, even though recent research indicates drinking doesn't impair the body's cold defenses, Hoffman said.

"Alcohol did impair people's ability to think. People who were drunk and in the cold did worse than people in warm air who were drunk," he said. "I think this shows the biggest risk for people drinking who are in the cold is impaired judgment rather than drop in core temperature."

Researchers also have begun looking at the effect of cold core temperatures on memory.

"We're just starting this. One British study indicates people start to have trouble remembering at about core temperature 95 degrees Fahrenheit (normal body temperature is 98.6 degrees)," Hoffman said.

"This may be a real risk factor for divers, cross-country skiers, hikers. Are they going to have problems remembering how to get back? We know that if you take a person's core temperature down low enough they will start to get confused," he said.

Sense of smell loss called possible aftermath of flu

CINCINNATI (AP) — If you recently suffered the flu and have not recovered your sense of smell, you aren't alone, researchers say.

Some patients complain they are unable to smell things or to taste food after suffering a bout of influenza. Researchers at the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Connecticut first reported the problem and have been looking into it.

It has also come to the attention of researchers at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, where patients who come in for treatment at a center for taste and smell disorders have complained of the malady.

It can happen to people who suffer flu or upper respiratory infections, said Robert Frank, a University of Cincinnati psychophysicist. It is common for sufferers with colds or the flu to lose their sense of smell — and, as a result, their ability to taste — briefly during the time of the ailment. But, Frank said, some people do not regain their sense of smell for months, or longer.

"These people are seeing us six months after the flu has passed, and they still don't have their sense of smell," he said in an interview. "We still don't even know if it's permanent or not... We don't know for sure right now, but we think there may be people who permanently lose their sense of smell after this kind of episode."

After a period of time, some victims report sensing a persistent, strange odor. Researchers have not determined what that means, Frank said.

"There's some indication in some people we've seen that they get this persistent odor," he said. "We hope that when people report these smells, that's a start of recovery."

About 25 percent of the patients who come to the taste-smell center complaining of a loss of smell have a strain of flu that appears to be the culprit, Frank said.

He said specialists have a theory that the flu viruses may take away the victim's ability to smell by damaging the olfactory epithelium — the skin on the inside of the nose. But, he said, "We really don't know what happens."

University of Cincinnati researchers are preparing an application for a U.S. Department of Health and Human Services public health grant to study the problem. They would like funding to follow the progress of people with the loss-of-smell problem, Frank said.

The work could include taking samples of tissue from inside the noses of victims for analysis to determine whether flu viruses cause damage, he said.

Researchers hope to develop treatment methods. "As it stands right now, for a person like this, we really have little idea of what to do," Frank said.

Victims often complain that they have lost their sense of taste, because they cannot taste food. But inability to taste is commonly caused by loss of smell, Frank said. A true loss of taste is rare because three different nerves bring smell information to the brain and it is unusual for all three to malfunction, he said.

The problem can be dangerous when it prevents people from smelling warning odors such as a natural gas buildup in a house.

"One of the big problems is, you can't smell warning odors. There are a lot of older people who can't smell the gas, so they blow themselves up," Frank said.

Frank is researching the problem with David Smith, director of the university's center for taste and smell disorders. Frank and Smith are not medical doctors, but they have training in physics and biology, and specialize in evaluating human sensory systems.

"We still don't really know what the basic mechanisms are for how you taste and smell," he said. "We don't really know what makes certain chemicals important, in terms of how you smell them. In that sense, the study of taste and smell is in its infancy."

ASK DR. LAMB

Obesity BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Are you familiar with a surgical procedure called gastric segmentation, used for the treatment of obesity? If yes, what is your opinion of the procedure? Is it safe? Is it successful?

I have had gastric stapling done for obesity and it was not successful. I am 150 pounds overweight, a compulsive eater, and 55 years old. What is your advice? And please don't say to go on a sensible diet and get rid of the excess weight. You have been a physician long enough to know there is no long-range success in that advice.

DEAR READER: First, find out if you have a medical reason for being overweight that can be corrected. If not, I will indeed suggest that you follow a sensible diet and exercise program. The exercise part of losing weight is very important.

You are right in that over 90 percent of people who lose body fat regain it. The biggest reason is that they go on one of the popular weight-loss programs for a few weeks or months and then return to their previous habits that caused the obesity in the first place. If people stayed on a sensible diet and exercise program, they would not regain the weight.

As you have discovered, the stomach stapling operation was a bad operation. The operation ran a row of staples across the stomach, dividing it into an upper and lower chamber. There was a small opening between the two chambers. The intent was to make the food reservoir, the top chamber, so small that people would eat less — a way of forcing you to be on a low-calorie diet. The staples opened in as many as 80 percent of the cases. In other instances the opening between the two chambers was still too large and the procedure was a failure.

As an outgrowth of these poor results, a new procedure evolved to partition the stomach in a different manner and to reinforce the staple line with sutures. Also, another procedure completely closes the top chamber of the stomach and uses the small intestine to bypass the large lower chamber. These two procedures have been fairly successful — much better than the original stomach stapling procedure. But all of these have complications.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I never see anything about pinworms anymore. I'm sure they are still around. Will you tell us how they are spread and how to get rid of them? Is this a worm that owners can get from pets, especially dogs?

DEAR READER: People get pinworms from other people who have them. They are so common that a pediatrician once said, "Show me a child who never had pinworms and I'll show you a child who has no friends." People do not get them from their pets. Rather the eggs are laid on the anal surface and cause itching. The child gets them on his fingers and they get into the food chain. Often the whole family has pinworms, although children are much more likely to have them than adults.

They are treated with prescription medicines and the treatment should be repeated in about two weeks. It is best to treat all members of the family at the same time. Bedding, towels and clothing should all be washed, but floor and toilet scrubbing is usually not necessary.

Light helps chase blues

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Winter is a predictable time of year — a time of holidays, celebration and snowfall. For many people, it is also a time of depression.

As the days grow shorter, the moods turn blue. The "wintertime blues" are often resolved in springtime, with the return of extended daylight.

This phenomenon, known as "seasonal affective disorder," or SAD, is now recognized by the American Psychiatric Association as a psychiatric syndrome.

"SAD can last from fall until mid-spring, depending on the weather," said Dr. James Gaddy, a research psychologist at Thomas Jefferson University. "Studies show that SAD often results in substantial loss of productivity or difficulties in interpersonal relationships. In extreme cases, it can be severely incapacitating."

Seasonal affective disorder is characterized by withdrawal, social isolation, depression, a craving for carbohydrates, weight gain, a tendency to sleep longer, a loss of energy and decreased sexual drive.

Phototherapy, or exposure to bright light, has been shown to reverse the effects of SAD. At Jefferson, the majority of people treated last year have responded favorably to therapy, said Dr. Karl Dognramji, director of the Sleep Disorders Center.

The effects of SAD diminish within two days to one week of therapy. If the phototherapy is discontinued, however, the depression characteristically returns.

Cavin to be honored during Amarillo tole convention

At their annual Amarillo Convention, Tole Round-Up, the Golden Spread Chapter of the National Society of Tole & Decorative painting will be honoring Hereford artist, Helen Cavin.

In the process of moving to Amarillo, Helen was honored recently by American Airlines for logging 200,000 miles of travel.

Although her own lessons began 30 years ago with local artist and teacher, Margo Cox, it was a seminar with Joyce Howard about 10 years ago that really extended her horizons of color and design. In 1986, Helen published two painting books, followed by another in 1987, and in honor of her home chapter of painters, two more will be published in March to be presented to the public at Tole Round-Up.

Round-Up Convention will be March 4-6 at the Hilton and will include visitors from seven states. A special reception Thursday night, will honor Cavin and her contributions to American Folk Art. In all of her travels, she talks about Amarillo and our unique mini-convention. Because of this contact and promotion by the local chapter, over 200 painters will be in Amarillo that weekend, some from Washington State and California. Local artists are encouraged to attend, join the society and take classes. A large commercial area is open free of charge to the public.
