Wunderlich says site has 50% selection chance

By DEBE GRAVES Staff Writer

Deaf Smith County has a 50 percent chance of being the site selected for characterization for a nuclear waste repository should the Johnston-McClure Bill pass in Congress, according to Bob Wunderlich, deputy manager of the Department of Energy's salt project.

"According to the criteria, our chances of being selected, should they determine to go to a three-to-one process, are 50 percent that we would go ahead with this site," he told a small group of citizens at an early morning briefing today.

The bill, which passed the Senate two weeks ago, calls for sequential characterization of three sites chosen in the search for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository. The sites-in Deaf Smith County, Hanford, Wa., and Nevadaare all currently being studied; however the bill would instruct DOE to select one of the sites and put the other two on hold until the first site is accepted or rejected.

Wunderlich made no predictions on the chances of the Johnston-McClure Bill, or any other bill, passing through Congress. "The direction of legislation depends on who you talk to and what day of the week you talk to them," he said.

However, he added that the fiscal 1988 field activity plan for the salt project will provide information needed to determine the suitability of the Texas site.

Health problems are a heavy ourden for a Hereford father, kis wife and their 17-year-old daughter as they contemplate the 1987 Christmas season.

100 attend AIDS meet here

Over 100 Hereford-area residents learned some of the sad facts of AIDS Tuesday night at a town hall meeting on the deadly disease at the Hereford Community Center.

David Hoehns of the Texas Department of Health fielded dozens of questions, gave a slide-show lecture and presented a video that included interviews with AIDS patients.

"Maybe even worse than the AIDS epidemic is the Afraids epidemic." Hoehns said. "The only way I can mation and answer your questions."

Some of the afraids questions came up after the video and slides as some people expressed fears for their-and their children's-lives.

"We're not going to stop this until we quarantine these people with AIDS," said W. O'Daniel Kelly of Hereford. He likened AIDS to diphtheria in the 1940s and 1950s, help you with that is to give you infor- before vaccines were developed to curb the often-deadly disease.

> Hoehns painstakingly pointed out that, unlike diseases such as diphtheria which were easily communicable, AIDS is contagious unless someone is infected through sex, blood or birth.

> Kelly also said there needed to be less confidentiality in the testing and reporting.

"If you go to a doctor with symptoms, you have to give the doctor permission to test," Hoehns said. "A blood test is an invasive procedure, and you have to give your consent."

Hoehns suggested that no one be tested for AIDS antibodies unless they had gone through counseling.

"In counseling, we need to see what the patients worries are, explain what the consequences of a positive test would be, get the test done, then give the results and posttest counseling.

"I'm opposed to mandatory counseling because we could have someone in a high-risk group (a homorsexual or bisexual male, or an intravenous drug abuser) come iin and get a negative test. That could give them an affirmation that what they are doing is right, and they would continue to be at risk."

Hoehns said that AIDS is not traceable to some sort of promiscuiity on the part of a man-"It's as untrue as catching syphillis from a door knob. You are not going to get it only from promiscuous people or from junkies. You just need to cut down on any risk that you might have."

Hoehns also rebutted the notion that AIDS is a disease confined mostly to Anglo males, pointing to a disturbing increase in AIDS cases in Black and Hispanic children.

Hanes qualified the data by saying Hispanic meant anyone with a Spanish surname, and said the children, under 13, were usually infected before birth because the mother was infected. In most cases, though the research is limited, most of that comes from drug abuse by the mother, or father, or both.

Blacks or Hispanics," Hoehns said, "but there children, according to the data, are high risk-higher than they should be."

Hoehns hit again at the Afraids, using two examples to show how AIDS patients unnecessarily die an undignified death.

"The first AIDS sufferer I knew was a co-worker of mine in Abilene who had a hysterectomy," Hoehns said. "She had the surgery, and the blood came from Dallas. It was contaminated and she contracted the HIV virus.

"She was embarrassed by it, but that wasn't the worst part. Her pastor wouldn't visit her. He said later that he didn't want to risk his health, or the health of his two small

AIDS has no quick cure

Managing Editor

A vaccine for smallpox was developed two centuries ago, by scientists using now-crude instruments. Smallpox, once the scourge of the world, is non-extant.

Polio, which crippled nations, has almost been eradicated, thanks to Dr. Jonas Salk and Dr. Louis Sabin. There are vaccines for influenza, diphtheria, lockjaw, whooping cough, measles, mumps-a wide array of human afflictions can be controlled with a simple shot at the local doctor's office or health

AIDS will not be controlled so easily.

AIDS-Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome-will strike down Victim No. 45,000 in the United States late this year. Literally millions of Americans could be walking around with the virus, either undiagnosed or with a dormant virus waiting deep inside the body.

Scientists are unsure how widespread the AIDS virus may be in the U.S. They are unsure of many things about AIDS. That's why they are so frustrated—too many unanswered questions, too many possibilities, and nothing close to a cure is lurking under the

Dr. John Bartlett, chief of Infectious Diseases at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, is one of those frustrated doctors.

"I chose this field because you cure patients," Bartlett said. "It's fun to take care of patients with an infection. You look into the microscope, see the enemy, and there's usually a drug to stamp it. out. So you kill it. You can tell the patient he's going to be cured.

"AIDS is no fun. AIDS patients are never well, and every one of them is going to die. Every patient I see I have to give a lecture to about what his long-range plans will be, how to have a living will, what's going to have financially. I have to tell every one of them they are going to die. That's not easy."

Research is literally going on around the clock, at research centers like Johns Hopkins and Genetech in San Francisco, colleges, pharmaceutical companies, and they have some idea of what the AIDS virus is, what it looks like, what it does, but there are still uncertainties, and they have no idea of how to kill it, how to cure it.

The problems are many:

U·S· seeks Soviet timetable

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mikhail Gorbachev says he wants to pull his troops out of Afghanistan, but the United States wants more than a promise. It is looking for a specific timetable, preferrably when the Soviet leader calls on President Reagan next week.

The dispute over Afghanistan one of the biggest barriers to better U.S.-Soviet relations - has been the subject of more presummit maneuvering than any issue except arms control.

Gorbachev said this week the whole Afghanistan problem could be settled "quickly" if the United States and the Soviets could work out an agreement.

Najibullah, the Soviet-backed president of Afghanistan, actually suggested a timetable - 12 months for the withdrawal of the estimated 115,000 Soviet forces in the country.

At the core of their statements was a willingness to withdraw the troops as long as the United States agreed to stop providing assistance to Afghan resistance forces that have used Western weapons to grind down the Soviet and Afghan Army troops.

Najibullah also said the 12-month timetable could be reduced if the rebels would agree to a cease-fire, an offer not likely to be taken up by resistance forces that have been fighting since Soviet troops entered the country in December 1979.

The United States responded to the Soviet and Afghan proposals with a simple message: set a date for withdrawal.

"Pack up, pull out and go home," Reagan said Monday in a speech to conservative supporters. "It's time they set a date certain for the complete withdrawal of all troops from Afghanistan."

Both sides have come a long way since the November 1985 summit in Geneva when Reagan first met Gorbachev and made his first personal appeal for a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan.

The Afghan struggle became a Soviet Army forces intervened on behalf of Moscow-backed politicians in Kabul.

Since then, resistance forces aided by the United States, Pakistan and China have been battling the Soviet

Progress reported in ending siege

ATLANTA (AP) - Cuban inmates freed one of their 90 hostages in a good-will gesture, and a lawyer who helped win the man's release said to-day he was trying to clarify for the rebellious prisoners an emerging agreement to end the siege.

"I think a lot of points have been settled. I think there are still a couple of hard points," Gary Leshaw of the Atlanta Legal Aid Society said at an early morning news conference outside the U.S. Penitentiary where the standoff dragged into a 10th day.

"We hope to get all the answers we need to answer their questions. Hopefully, we're close to the end of it," said Leshaw, who described his role in the negotiations as explaining legal matters to the inmates.

He would not discuss specifics as to what kind of agreement might be reached, or what remained to be defined or settled. But he said negotiations were further along than at any point so far.

The 1,108 Cuban detainees still in the prison have been holding hostages since rioting Nov. 23 to protest a U.S.-Cuban agreement that could lead to their deportation as excludable aliens. One inmate was killed and three buildings burned.

Tuesday night's release of senior corrections officer Abdul-Saboor Rushdan, 36, followed an appeal by Leshaw and some inmate wives on a radio talk show popular among the prisoners. The Cubans were asked to free a hostage to bolster Leshaw's credibility and as a birthday present dinator of Atlanta's Coalition to Support Cuban Detainees.

He added that the site was selected based on data from holes drilled over the Panhandle area which led to beliefs that the site has uniform underground geography. "Tests will confirm or disprove those extrapolations," he said. "If the tests confirm them, we will move ahead." If the tests prove the geography is not uniform "it will probably create a great number of changes in our pro-

Field activity, planned for the next 10 months, will address uniformity, dissolution, strength of the underground formations to support construction of a shaft, indications of need for design change, and seismic activity.

Uniformity will be addressed through the findings of a stratigraphic borehole and hydrologic studies. "We will drill one of four planned stratigraphic boreholes to check actual findings against the predictions made on the basis of regional information," he said. The borehole will also allow a core sample to be tested for strength of salt formations for underground structure consturction.

Assumptions of uniformity of the area will be confirmed or disproved through the results of one or more shallow hydrologic holes which Wunderlich said will be drilled on the nine-square-mile site during '88, according to Wunderlich.

He said that signs of deep dissolution within the formation would be "one of the disqualifiers of the site". To determine the presence, if any, of dissolution. Wunderlich said upcoming field activity includes work in and around one of the playa lakes in the area. "A playa is the obvious place to look for dissolution," he said. "If it is not there it probably isn't anywhere."

In all, Wunderlich said the '88 field program will provide "a very good data base to contribute if Congress demands a decision on one site to characterize." He added that the 1988 plan provides early answers to some key issues about the suitability of the Deaf Smith County site.

"Right now our program is moving in the direction of getting these things done," he said. "Jeff Neff (DOE Salt Project director) closed on a house in Canyon this week and we are still hiring employees for the project as an expression of our confidence in the program."

A total of 308 project personnel are on board in Texas now. Forty-four, of the 80 who reside in Hereford, are transferees. Amarillo has 157 project personnel in residence. Of those, 120 are transferees. Canyon claims 53 project residents with 43 transferees. Sixteen project employees remain undecided about selection of residence and two reside in Vega.

Amarillo schools have enrolled 65 children of transferees. Canyon schools claim 33 and Hereford Independent School District gained 21.

Total employment for the project stands at 87 percent of the expected number and $5.8 million has been expended on the project since February.

Bids on two large copiers are being reviewed as is a contract to use the Barrick furniture building as administrative offices for Battelle, a major DOE project contractor, according to Wunderlich.

He said that his office has received a number of comments on the Land Acquistion report and that the deadline for commenting is Sunday. 'We have received comments from WDIC, and the State Attorney General's office, among others," he

The Consultative Draft of the program is scheduled to be reviewed at DOE headquarters, in Washington, D.C., beginning Dec. 14. The CDs of all three sites are scheduled for simultaneous release for public comment on Jan. 8.

About two hours later, Rushdan walked out and was taken to a hospital for a checkup and to be reunited with his family.

The release came a few hours after four representatives of the Cubans met with government negotiators and reached substantial agreement on a number of unspecified issues, a Justice Department spokesman said.

The spokesman, Patrick Korten, said the meeting was "considerably more encouraging than others we have had in the last few days."

Korten would not be specific on the points of agreement, but said the influence wielded by about 100 radicals, who blocked an earlier mass hostage release, seemed to

Two more Hunts file Chapter 11

DALLAS (AP) - The Hunt brothers moved to improve their chance of reorganizing more than $714 million in debts by putting the personal trusts of Lamar and Nelson Bunker Hunt under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Code.

The Tuesday filings came three days before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson is expected to choose one of two competing debt reorganization plans for the trust estate of third brother William Herbert Hunt, which was placed in Chapter 11 in August 1986.

Estate officials hope the filing, which will place the trusts in the Abramson's hands, will allow him to choose the plan they proposed in Ju-

When the Hunts filed that plan, which combines the three trusts and other Hunt entities to pay off bank loans, Abramson questioned whether he could allow a plan using assets not under his control.

"The trustees of the estates decided then to place the Lamar and Nelson trusts in Chapter 11 and petition that they be placed in Judge Abramson's court," Tom Whitaker, a Hunt Energy Corp. vice president, said Tuesday.

Whitaker placed the value of the trust estates "in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

"They consist of oil and gas holdings, real estate development property, office buildings, raw land and similar-type assets," he said.

Whitaker said that because of the combined usage of the trust estates in the reorganization plan, the new filings are not expected to significantly affect the reorganization process.

He said the filings will have a salutary effect since many businesses and real estate interests are owned jointly by the trust

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You were the first to write about the dangers of pit bulls. There have been a great many news stories since your first column appeared.

The records from the Humane Society of the United States speak for themselves.

Thanks for doing the groundwork, Ann. I'm sure you saved some lives by raising the awareness level of America.-Dayle B. Cooper, Tupelo,

DEAR DAYLE: I appreciate your generosity but please don't give me more credit than I deserve. I was not alone in the crusade. Many others pitched in. Thanks for the excellent documentation.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I did a dumb thing and need to know how to get out of it.

I met "John" last spring and we hit it off real well. He is a junior in high school and I'm a sophomore. His birthday is coming up in January and I asked him what he wanted. He said, "YOU." I foolishly said, "It's a deal."

John keeps reminding me of my promise. He has made elaborate plans so we can drive to the outskirts of town and check in at a motel all day Sunday. I like him more than any guy I've ever known but I'm not ready for what he has in mind. In fact I am scared to death.

Please, Ann Landers, tell me how I can get out of this without losing the guy.-Scared in Middletown

DEAR SCARED: Pick a quiet time and tell John you've given a great deal of thought to your impetuous commitment and have decided that it would be the wrong thing for both of you. Don't be surprised if he's relieved.

How much do you know about pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, crack, speed and downers? Think you can handle them? For up-to-the-minute information on drugs, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Establishing Rituals And Traditions In Young Families

One of the ways in which a family unit becomes strong is by the cultivating of family rituals or traditions. A ritual is any repeated, shared activity that is full of meaning and satisfying for all family members. Rituals have been described as "family keepsakes that live in your heart."

In many families, rituals develop or arise with the coming of children. Rituals are important not so much for what is said or done but the results they yield, the sense of "weness" that grows out of a shared experience and the feeling of rightness

Assembly set by Jehovah's Witnesses

On Dec. 5-6, Spanish-speaking Jehovah's Witnesses will attend a circuit assembly in the Planview High School auditorium. Delegates from five area congregations will be attending the two-day assembly.

The theme of the assembly will be "The excelling value of serving Jehovah." It will stress the values of the Bible over the values of the world and the importance of making the right choice.

Also, counsel will be given on how to build up a family who serves God, and having a balanced view of our material possessions.

A public talk will be given on Sunday at 2 p.m. by D.G. Van Ike, a representative of the Watchtower Society of New York, on the theme "The values of the world or the values of the Bible...which will you choose?" All sessions are free and open to the public.

Rituals differ from family to family. Commonly, rituals are thought of only around holidays or special days. However, rituals need not be limited to these occasions. Families that have strong ties have more frequent rituals-for example, special meal on Sundays. These times are often described as "the way our family

Some people feel that today's busy life styles work against family rituals. But strong families maintain their rituals to provide the sense of continuity, understanding and love that strengthens family closeness. Set aside some time when the family is together and make a list of your rituals. Ask "what do we do that makes each of us feel good?" "What do we do that is a special memory of family?" How did the ritual start? Why is it important to the family?

Once the family is aware of the importance of rituals, it is easier to begin a new one or even consciously improve or continue an existing one.

Observing rituals can provide wonderful opportunities to build a rich family heritage.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

A stew luncheon will also be held during the event. Proceeds will be used to benefit various charities and a scholarship for a Hereford High School student.

Abundant Life

THINGS THAT COUNT By Bob Wear

Here we are with a life to live, and according to much of what we read and hear, the prospects for meaningful living are not the best. Obviously, many folk are discouraged and downhearted; and there are some reasons for such feelings. There is enough strife, uncertainty and misery to cause us to feel overburdened and overwhelmed; but there are also many worthwhile things, things that count, things which can be used to help us make some sense out of the living experience. There are some things that count, things that are worthwhile and meaningful. We do not believe that all of these have been destroyed or lost. Some people, however, seem to think that all is lost. "There is no hope, why fool ourselves? We're done for! We're licked! We're through. Let's resign ourselves to absolute despondency. It's the only sincere attitude, and the only one that can be of any help."-Klaus Mann. He doesn't say how this hopeless and helpless attitude can help. Of course, there are problems and difficulties, but we cannot afford to give up. What counts? To some extent, these are determined by the individual, by one's own particular likes and dislikes; by one's basic needs and desires. All of these will be determined by such considerations as vocation, family needs and general life service. There is also an important area of human experince and responsibility which is composed of very definite standards by which decisions and actions can be controlled to serve the best purposes. These standards are very clearly and firmestablished, and are available to all who desire something stable and dependable.

Some have tought that such things as wealth, power, and fame were the things that count the most; but they have been disappointed. Some of these learned too late that the things that really count are such things as family, friends, health and spiritual values. Most of us probably have some difficulty establishing a value system, but whatever we do; we must not give up. There is too much

Fans boo Sampson, but Rockets win

HOUSTON (AP) - Ralph Sampson says he doesn't see any end to the booing by fans who don't think he does enough for the Houston Rockets.

But Sampson had an answer for the "boo birds" Tuesday night when he scored 18 points, including the goahead basket with 36 seconds remaining, in the second half to lead the Rockets to a 106-101 NBA victory over the Denver Nuggets.

Rockets fans booed him soundly in the first half when he ended up with only two points and the Rockets trailed, 55-52.

"The fans have been on me all my life, and I'm sure they will be on me from now until whenever." Sampson said. "A lot of people still don't think I do enough. I'm sure they think I should do more because I'm 7-4."

"I can do a lot of other things, like grab the lob and run the court that don't get looked at," Sampson added. "We started off slowly but I felt we Lafavette Lever contributed a triple

Landry wants healthy quarterbacks on team

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Coach Tom Landry says quarterback Danny White, beset by injuries that have diminished his playing time and performance the last two seasons, won't return to the Dallas Cowboys in 1988 unless he's healthy.

White's erratic performances with a damaged right wrist have taxed even Landry's legendary patience. He says he does not want an injured quarterback on the roster.

'His whole future rests on that, and I think he recognizes it," Landry said Tuesday. "He throws well 95 percent of the time, but the other 5 percent kills us."

White, in his 12th season with the Cowboys, says he hopes to play two or three more years, and added that he is considering surgery on his

"I don't think he (White) will come back unless he is 100 percent healthy," Landry said. "If he is, then he will battle for the starting job."

White, who lost a ligament when his wrist was broken last season, threw four touchdown passes against Minnesota on Thanksgiving Day but suffered two critical interceptions the Vikings parlayed into a 44-38 overtime victory.

"Danny has a blockage in his wrist and doesn't know whether the ball will go up or down when he throws it," Landry said. "We have to protect ourself. We will not go into next season fully behind Danny unless he

Landry said he wasn't ordering White to undergo surgery but added

"something has to happen. The wrist has to improve itself either through rest or an operation."

The coach said he was determined to bring the Cowboys back on top of the NFL. "I've committed myself for three years," Landry said. "We'll be much improved next year."

He said White had done as good a job as anyone could have following in Hall-of-Famer Roger Staubach's footsteps.

"He plays his heart out," Landry said of White.

Steve Pelluer is the heir apparent, but after going all the way in a 20-14 loss to Miami, he didn't play a down against the Vikings.

Landry said both quarterbacks would play, but refused to name a starter for Sunday's game in Texas Stadium against the 2-9 Atlanta Falcons.

Landry said even if he started Pelluer against the Falcons, who lead the NFL in points allowed, he could still bring White on as a reliever.

The Cowboys, who are 5-6 in the NFC East, are 10-point favorites over the Falcons.

PIK's Ask Dr. Lamb

Aging BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: It is so sad to watch my parents getting old. There are so many things they can't do any more. Dad has lost a lot of his strength. My mother's memory is failing. They have the usual problems of arthritis, decreasing hearing and vision.

What can one do to prevent aging? You hear of people who have lived well past 100. Why do some people live so long when others get old before they are 70? What are some of the clues that you will live a long

DEAR READER: Don't confuse aging with disease. Many problems attributed to aging are really disease. The distinction is important, because, if a disability is attributed to inevitable aging," it is not likely to get the effort needed to prevent it or cure it. I'm sure Alzheimer's disease was in that category, as most people considered the mental changes to be the result of aging. In fact, when it occurred early in life it was called "premature senility."

There are really two main features of aging. One is genetic. We are born with a genetic script that determines our potential life span. Many scientists believe that that may be even 115 years. But if you get run over with a truck, you will never reach 115. If you have a fatal heart attack at age 55, you won't either. Most people do die of disease, not old age.

The second aspect of aging is that it makes a person more susceptible to disease. Notice that most people who die of cancer, heart attacks and strokes are over 60. In a way, aging is like AIDS in that it causes a person to be susceptible to the whole spectrum of diseases.

One of the important ways to reach your full potential life span is to prevent or control the diseases you are most likely to get as you grow older. That includes examinations for cancer and risk factors for heart attacks and strokes and much more. Those who have long-living parents physical shape, can slow down when and follow a healthy lifestyle have the est chance to live a long life.

You can increase your chances of living longer and enjoying it more. It is wise to start following a program to do this early in life. I have discussed what you can do and where we are on understanding aging in THE HEALTH LETTER 30.12 The Age Operation I LETTER 30-12, The Age Question. I am sending you a free copy. Others who want this issue can send $1 and a DEAR DR. LAMB: I have arthritis in long, self-addressed envelope with 39 my right hip. I'm trying hard to cope cents postage to THE HEALTH with it. My doctor has me on Indocin, LETTER, Dept 30-12, P.O. Box 19622, 50 mg three times a day with meals. Irvine, CA 92713.

walk on the level. And it requires less energy to walk downhill than on the flat. You also work some muscles

In a sense, walking up and down hills is a lot like going up and down and down hills requires more energy counteracting each other. But aspirin than walking on the flat.

Individuals with heart problems, or those who are not in adequate they walk uphill. That avoids overworking the heart. Use your heart rate as a guide and don't allow your work level to be so great, walking uphill, that your heart is overworked. Select a target heart rate for both walking on the flat and up hills.

"coronary hill."

I'm wondering if I could take two DEAR DR. LAMB: I have always aspirin just before going to bed. Do wondered whether a person walking these two medicines counteract? I'm

DEAR READER: Indocin is a very good medicine for the relief of pain DEAR READER: It requires a lot and is commonly used to treat more energy to walk uphill than to arthritis. Like many other such medicines it can be irritating to the stomach. Usually you will get the maximum benefits from 150 to 200 harder with either up or down mg a day, so taking more will walking than you do walking on the probably not help a great deal and may increase the chances that you will develop digestive complaints.

Aspirin and Indocin have many stairs. The result is that walking up actions in common, rather than is also irritating to the stomach. For that reason you would probably do better to take Tylenol as an additional medicine to control your pain. It is not irritating to the stomach. Adding it to medical routines that use Indocin, or other similar pain-relieving medications, often decreases the amount of Indocin you require and provides better pain

There are other measures you can also use to decrease the pain of arthritis. Much of the pain is related to muscle spasm. The spasm occurs because of irritation from the arthritis. Relieving the spasm helps. That is done with proper stretching. Heat, as from soaking in a tub until you are nice and warm, enables proper stretching and may help relieve pain. Stretch before going to bed and on arising and see if it helps you. Measures to decrease the work the joint must do also help.

You will get some understanding from Special Report 80, Help for Arthritis, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1 and a long, self-addressed envelope with 39 cents postage to THE HEALTH LETTER, Dept 80, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: A few years ago I had to have both testicles removed. One doctor said it was because the mumps went down on me. Since then I have had no desire for sex. My wife says that you can have sex even without testicles. She says I have another girlfriend. If it is at all possible at 69 years of age to do something, would you let me know how it is done?

DEAR READER: The first question that must be answered correctly is why you had your testicles removed. At your age, I wonder if you were found to have cancer of the prostate. I doubt your testicles were removed because of mumps either in childhood or in recent times. Unless you have cancer of the prostate, you could have hormone replacement testosterone — to regain normal functions.

Presidential candidates spar in D.C.

WASHINGTON Republican and Democratic presidential candidates, sparring over taxes and arms control during a two-hour debate, sharpened the battle lines of a campaign growing more contentious as the first primaries and caucuses draw near.

Each of the 12 candidates claimed victory as soon as Tuesday night's two-hour nationally televised debate ended, but there was no clear signal which of them drew the most applause in the millions of homes where it was seen.

"Nobody got bloodied," said GOP Senate leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

tonight," said Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "I think we got some important points across." NBC officials estimated that as many as 25 million people watched the debate and the candidates took advantage of that exposure to preview the hottest issues as the first primary and caucus tests loom.

The discussion was shadowed by next week's summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, with the Democratic candidates generally more supportive than Republicans of

"I think the Democrats won the arms control pact the leaders plan to sign.

> "It is nothing short of appalling that five of the six Republican candidates refuse to support the new arms control agreement," said Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn.

Vice President George Bush was the only Republican to offer unreserved backing for the treaty.

Referring to Dole's contention that he wants to read the treaty before deciding how to vote on it, Bush said, "I happen to have read the treaty. ... I've read it and I believe it's good."

No opposition was expressed by any of the six Democrats -Gephardt, Gore, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, Jesse Jackson, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona.

clear winners and losers.

Arts, the debate was divided into 30-minute segments. During the first half hour the six Democratic candidates discussed foreign policy under questioning by NBC anchor-man Tom Brokaw. The next segment featured the six Republicans on the same subject.

The final two segments were devoted to domestic issues.

The Republicans clashed most often on foreign policy, while the Democrats were more often at odds on domestic issues

The debate took place just over two months before the Iowa precinct caucuses test the appeal of candidates in both parties.

Gephardt and Gore clashed on taxes, with the Tennessee senator asking the congressman why he had voted for Reagan's tax cut bill in Gephardt said he supported the measure only after fighting unsuccessfully to win approval of Democratic alternatives and then he asked Gore whether he wanted to repeal the tax cut.

Later, the Missouri congressman said, "I don't think middle-income Americans want their taxes increased by $260 billion."

The only time the 12 candidates were on stage together was for the introductions.

But they were clearly aware of the proximity of their potential general election rivals and mixed their jabs at party rivals with partisan shots at the opposition party and its can-

An Associated Press panel of high school and collegiate debate experts gave Bush the top GOP grade at the debate and ranked Dukakis and Gore, with equal scores, atop the Democratic field.

The experts were using the same criteria used nationally in collegiate and scholastic debates, awarding points on a scale of 1 to 5 in each of six debate categories: analysis, reasoning, evidence, crossexamination, refutation and presen-

In addition to his clash with Gore, Gephardt also went after Simon who has called for a balanced budget as well as increased federal spending on domestic programs.

"Simonomics is really Reaganomics with a bow tie," said Gephardt.

That prompted Babbitt to say, 'I've just heard a lot of flimflam."

Babbitt dramatically rose from his seat and said, "It's time to stand up and say ... that we must raise taxes." Babbitt, the only candidate proposing a national sales tax to reduce the deficit, said, "There aren't a lot of profiles in courage here tonight."

Robertson uttered one of the most cutting remarks of the night. A former Democrat, he said: "In the old days of Truman and Kennedy. Democrats stood for freedom but they don't anymore. ... Now they stand for appeasement."

Babbitt stands out in debate

WASHINGTON (AP) - The longest of shots, Bruce Babbitt stood up, stood out and stood alone in the Democratic field amid the barbs and volleys of a mix-and-match presidential debate.

Then, when the cast on the Kennedy Center stage rotated, George Bush still held the role of Republican leading man for 1988.

For two hours Tuesday night, the NBC News debate flip-flopped between each party's six-pack of White House hopefuls on domestic and foreign policy.

When prime time elapsed, the Democratic race was a closer and more confused contest. But the lines in the Republican battle were still clearly drawn.

Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois' his economic plans were called "Reaganomics with a bow-tie" and "promise as you go" policies.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis repeated parts of his campaign speeches.

Jesse Jackson got off a few sharp lines, but broke no new ground.

Simon and Dukakis lead in Iowa polls, where the first caucuses will be held, while Dukakis is far ahead in New Hampshire, home of the first 1988 primary. Jackson leads in the national polls.

Babbitt made his mark most clearly, and he did on the issue that most Democrats consider political death - raising taxes.

It's time to step up to this budget deficit and to say straight what the American people know. ... It's time to acknowledge that we must raise

"And I'm going to stand up and say

And he stood, towering over the five other hopefuls who remained seated in their leather chairs.

" - it's time to face the truth about these issues, to say we can balance the budget only by cutting and means-testing expenditures and entitlements and by raising taxes," Babbitt continued. "I challenge these candidates to stand up and acknowledge the truth of that.'

No one stood. "You see, I kind of expected that. There aren't a lot of profiles in courage here tonight," he added.

Babbitt has been pushing a 5 percent national sales tax to help slash the deficit, a proposal that draws nothing but criticism from other party hopefuls. They remember 1984 nominee Walter Mondale's taxraising pledge as helping push the doomed candidacy to a landslide Babbitt's performance is all the more impressive in light of his poor showing in the first televised debate in 1987, a "Firing Line" confrontation in July broadcast by the Public Broadcasting Service. But this December night's work was seen by perhaps 25 million Americans, far more than the PBS show.

Indictment is dismissed in sting

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - Prosecutors say they will seek a second indictment against a Portuguese man jailed in connection with the sheriff's sting operation against international arms dealers.

A more specific indictment against Victor Fonseca, 47, of Lisbon, is expected to be presented when grand jurors meet Dec. 16, prosecutor Ralph Petty said Tuesday after the first indictment was quashed.

State District Judge Vann Culp threw out the indictment against Fonseca, who was charged with conspiracy to commit theft over $20,000 in an alleged scheme to buy missile parts needed by Iran.

Culp agreed with Fonseca's lawyers, Jeff Hinkley and Sandy Torres, who argued the indictment was defective because it did not describe the allegedly stolen parts or specify their owner.

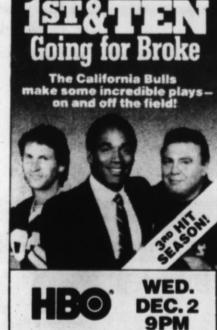

"It's important for us to have the state prove what's in the indictment," Hinkley said. "If it's too general, it's too easy for the state to prove. And a specific indictment gives us a better opportunity to know what we have to defend against."

The parts were actually barrels of sand that the Midland County Sheriff's Department had used as bait in August to catch international arms dealers.

Fonseca was told the barrels contained $2 million worth of parts for the Hawk missile system, but the subterfuge backfired when he demanded to see their contents.

Fonseca was then arrested in an airplane hangar in this West Texas city Aug. 19 after the sting that drew criticism from the FBI and U.S. Customs Service. Agents there said the county sheriff had no business probing international crimes.
