Two years' work leads to painting

By ANDREA LAMB
Staff Writer

After two years of bureaucratic shuffling and tedious reviews of sketches, Jena Rawley-Whitaker's watercolor portrait of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee chairman will grace the Capitol's walls.

The life-size painting of Kika de la Garza, which took a month to paint, will hang in the Agriculture Committee Room in Washington, D.C., after the September unveiling which Rawley-Whitaker and her husband, Jerry, will attend.

"I'm just really nervous about the whole thing," said Whitaker. "Well, maybe I'm more excited than nervous since the chairman hasn't seen the portrait yet."

The painting, according to Whitaker, will be the only watercolor hanging in the committee room. de la Garza requested the watercolor, steering from the stodgy look of oil paintings.

"The chief of staff's duty was to find a portrait painter who could best portray the chairman and he wanted a Texas artist since de la Garza was from here. So they scoured the entire Southwest and decided a watercolor would do best since all the other oil paintings were of men in black business suits, white shirts and red ties and holding books," said Whitaker.

De la Garza heard about Whitaker through her agent in San Angelo and after scanning her work, de la Garza said he wanted Whitaker for the job.

The artist's first task was to photograph de la Garza, and the two were to meet at a sheep raisers meeting in San Angelo for the shooting.

Whitaker said she dressed in jeans and boots to help de la Garza feel at ease during the photography session because de la Garza would himself be dressed in western garb.

"When I got there, he was all dressed in a business suit, and I had no idea this was going to happen, but they took me to a formal luncheon where ladies were dressed in linen chemises and everything was so formal and here I was in jeans," Whitaker said with a guffaw.

To the woman's surprise, the chairman was a short man (5 feet) and "rather portly."

On the first few sketches and scaled-down paintings, Whitaker painted de la Garza weighing considerably less than he does, and even though de la Garza liked them, his

Dinner will help Manor pay costs

Saving money for one's golden years may be the American way, but no matter how much you save, those hard-earned dollars may fall short of ensuring adequate care.

The problem of having enough money has increased with the increase in the age of the population.

"The life expectancy of many senior citizens has increased by an average of eight years due to better nutrition, less loneliness, and improved health care," said Joyce Lyons, administrator of King's Manor Methodist Home Inc. "As a result, many of our residents have outlived their retirement monies."

26 percent of the Manor's residents receive some financial assistance because they are unable to pay the full cost of the retirement center's care. In 1987, this supplement amounted to $110,187, and the cost is likely to go up.

"National statistics show that by the year 2000, 32 million Americans will be age 65 years and older, which is a 12.2 percent increase over today's aging population. In 2030, that percentage will increase by 18.3 percent or 55 million Americans; the fastest growing age group is the 65 years and older bracket," noted Lyons in her June address to the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the Methodist Church.

"In today's depressed economy, we are giving approximately $40,000 of free care annually to residents who cannot afford to pay their full care cost and who are not eligible for government funding. Because of the numerous recent cutbacks in government programs, we are sustaining approximately $70,000 annually in lost revenue denied us by the state of Texas for cost of service given to Medicaid residents. All indications point to even more restrictions on future government funding," she continued.

King's Manor faces difficulty as it continues its policy stipulating that paying residents must never be charged any extra to help offset costs for those unable to pay the full price. To pay the remaining costs, King's Manor is dependent on fundraising efforts by its Founders Association, monies collected by the Methodist Church, and private donations.

An autumn dinner and a summer barbecue are the main fundraisers sponsored by the Founders Association. Created in 1966, membership in the group is available via a $25 fee that pays for the fall dinner and allows the purchaser to vote on the board of directors.

Planning this year's barbecue, set for July 9 from 5-9 p.m., is a board of directors led by Bob Sims. "(Sims) has given the Founders Association a new spark as chairman," said Lyons. "He will provide the beef for the barbecue just as so many other individuals will give of their time and efforts to make this fundraiser a success."

Others serving on the board include Jim Arney, vice-president; B.F. Cain, secretary; and Joan Bookout, Grant Hanna, Edward Allison, Wayne Amstutz, Jeff Brown, Mark Hicks, Wanda Hoover, Della Hutchins, Roberta Caviness, Charles Duvall, and Jim Halliburton of Vega.

Assisting the Founders Association in their on-campus fundraising activities and mass mailings soliciting funds is the King's Manor Auxiliary. Both groups, along with Manor personnel, operate under the auspices of the Manor's board of trustees.

The efforts of the volunteers goes toward helping the 26 percent of residents unable to pay their full bill. Monies raised from such fundraisers are available to anyone at the Manor enrolled in any level of care, and efforts are used to protect the anonymity who are unable to pay the full cost.

"To avoid discrimination, we keep the identities of residents unable to pay confidential from the staff and other residents. Monthly statements in sealed envelopes are distributed — we feel that such measures are important in preserving the dignity of the individual," noted Lyons, who has been administrator since December 1974 after beginning as a secretary at the facility in 1971.

Ready for barbecue

Weeks of planning for the annual barbecue by the Founders Association of King's Manor will lead to the annual event set for 5-9 p.m. June 9. Joan Bookout, seated, serves on the Association's board of directors while Oneita Davidson, wife of the founder, the late Rev. Don Davidson, looks on.

'High falutin' at CHOF

(Editor's note: Associated Press Writer Wendy Lane, who is stationed in Lubbock, recently visited Hereford and was urged to do a story on the Cowgirl Hall of Fame by the Brand. Here is the result — jfb)

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — Rhinestone rodeo duds, silver trophies and tooled saddles adorn the corridors of the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center here, where trick riders, Western artists and frontier authors are enshrined for posterity.

LANE

The museum, founded in 1974, is an eclectic testament to the Western past, with a feminine — and sometimes feminist — touch.

Monogrammed chaps from a rodeo glamor girl are displayed next to a Western landscape painting done in vivid colors. A cowgirl's six-shooters strike a contrast with a pioneer author's sensitive portrayal of settlers' travails.

"The common thread, of course, is that they're Western women," said Margaret Formby, the founder of the Hall of Fame. "Through their lifetimes they have continued living a significant Western lifestyle."

The hall grew out of annual Hereford's all-girl rodeo and the need for a tourist draw for this Panhandle town of about 15,000, where one whiff of the air tells you you're in cattle country.

"I've always been interested in history," said Mrs. Formby, who found the museum its first home in the basement of the Deaf Smith County Library. "It just seemed like something needed to be done" to commemorate the achievements of rodeo cowgirls, she said.

Still struggling for recognition in the West, the museum may get a shot at fame on the Eastern seaboard through a licensing agreement with a New York City restaurateur.

Sherry Delamarter, who owns three offbeat theme restaurants, said she plans to open a Texas-style barbecue eatery using the Cowgirl Hall of Fame name in the fall.

The museum's collection is now housed in an old ranchhouse with low-slung architecture and open spaces typical of the West.

Soon after its opening, the facility's scope was expanded to include women who played key roles in settling the West through art, literature and a zest for life.

The museum honors the "strength, spirit, stamina and courage of the Western woman," whom Mrs. Formby says has "all but been forgotten."

The Western Heritage honorees go as far back in time as Sacajawea, the Indian woman who accompanied the explorer duo of Lewis and Clark across the Western frontier to the Pacific Ocean in 1805. Such well-known authors as Laura Ingalls Wilder and Willa Cather also are enshrined.

Contemporary members of the Hall include Enid Justin, founder of the Nocona Boot Co., and Patsy Montana, who became the first woman ever to sell a million copies of a country record with her 1936 yodeling hit, "I Want To Be a Cowboy's Sweetheart."

FORMBY

Some of the Hall's more famous cowgirl honorees include sharpshooter Annie Oakley and Lucille Mulhall, one of the first female performers in the Wild West shows of the early 1900s.

Most of the honorees and their families have loaned or donated trophies, saddles, awards, photographs, scrapbooks and other keepsakes to the museum.

PRIMARY PRATTFALLS

For comedy, drama, thrills and chills, it's hard to beat Presidential politics

EDITOR'S NOTE — Both parties are about set on their presidential nominees. With the season of preliminary winnowing nearly over, it's worth recapturing its gaudier moments and amazing contretemps. The primary campaigns may not have produced startling breakthroughs to new political ground but, as the following report shows, they rank high in the long tradition of politics as entertainment.

By SAUL PETT AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once there were 14 candidates for president. Now there are three.

Has the wheat been separated from the chaff? Has it been survival of the fittest or survival of the hardest, richest, cleverest, slickest?

Best or not, this is what's left after the strangest primary season in memory, a mad marathon in which history was shaped by philandering and plagiarism, pratfalls and yawns.

Now, finally, the pack has dwindled down to a tidy few after 66 primaries and 42 precinct caucuses across the land and in all the island territories and clusters of expatriates abroad. About 30 million people have voted, at least $170 million has been spent, 42 debates have been debated, emptyfour hundred speeches have floated up to the poor ozone in clouds of charge and countercharge on the order of "so's your old man." The last pockets of insomniac resistance have fallen.

It is a campaign that has gone from the Marx Brothers to "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," a movie about white liberals who suddenly learn their daughter is dating a black man. In February, people were asking what does Jesse Jackson really want, a cabinet job? In March, they were beginning to wonder whom President Jackson would put in his cabinet. By June, they were asking what Mr. Jackson would settle for outside the Oval Office.

Candidates moved ahead, candidates fell behind, definitions twisted, rationalizations multiplied. The media decreed that a man loses if he does not win by enough.

Even winning big could be suspect. Michael Dukakis won big in Wisconsin. But Hark! An exit poll then showed that fewer of his supporters voted for him "with enthusiasm" than did the voters for Jackson and Albert Gore. Meaningful? Ominous?

There was something for everybody. If you ran second, it was because the winner outspent you. If you ran third, it was because he distorted your record. If you ran fourth, you emphasized that you trounced the man who ran fifth. If you ran fifth, you exulted in the fact that you did better than last week. If you ran last, you dug down deep and claimed you were doing better than expected. Sooner or later they all beat "expected."

The election of 1988 already owns a unique place in history on several counts, we are told by Paul F. Boller, Jr., author of "Presidential Campaigns."

No black candidate became a major factor in a presidential election before. No man was a candidate twice in the same campaign. No previous race had two preachers running. No candidate ever quit the race before because of infidelity or plagiarism. Though presidential candidates from Tom Jefferson to John Kennedy have been whispered about before, none lost an election because of bedroom sport.

But fate failed Gary Hart even in the tiny detail. For example, the boat he and the young model shared in the Caribbean. It was named Monkey Business.

Hart was clearly the front-running Democrat until he quit. Then speculation and attention fastened on three non-candidates, Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, Senators Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Sam Nunn of Georgia. The actual candidates had trouble getting their names in the papers until someone raised the shades on Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware. There, suddenly, was a candidate for president of the United States giving voice to words, images and reflections that belonged to the head of the British Labor Party.

Caught, Biden confessed his "mistakes" and withdrew. The urge to confess, it seemed, was in the air.

Dukakis' campaign manager confessed that he was the one who blew the whistle on Biden, which he figured was, after all, his job. Dukakis confessed how sorry he was and his campaign manager resigned in the spreading mea culpa. Hart confessed to infidelity.

Pat Robertson, campaigning on a call for pre-marital restraint, was caught with his marriage license showing, and confessed that, yes, it was dated only 10 weeks before his son's birth certificate.

Across the political landscape, Judge Douglas Ginsburg tripped on his way to the Supreme Court when he confessed he had once smoked marijuana. So did I, said Gore. Me, too, said Bruce Babbitt. I have sinned, wept Jimmy Swagart, who wasn't even a candidate.

It would be difficult to choose between the campaign's most dramatic moments. For example:

High noon in the Senate of the United States.

Eyes cold with anger, the minority leader strode around the well of the chamber to the presiding officer's desk, where sat the vice president of the United States.

"What kind of candidate would put out a statement attacking another candidate and his wife without reading it?" Robert Dole snapped.

"Your people called me a 'cornered lap dog,'" said George Bush.

"I didn't call you a lap dog," said Robert Dole.

High noon on the Evening News.

Dan Rather wanted to talk about Iran-Contra. George Bush wanted to talk about education and the deficit. Rather said he wanted to set the record straight. Bush said Rather had impugned his integrity. Rather said he didn't want to be argumentative, but Bush said it was unfair to judge his whole record by Iran and (as if bringing up a family scandal), "how would you like it if I judged your career by those seven minutes when you walked off the set?" Rather said it was more important to discuss Bush's qualifications for president than (as if delicately paraphrasing a profanity) "what you just referred to."

The temperature rose, the pace quickened and soon both were talking at once and mercifully, neither could be heard.

In their traveling debates, the candidates pelted each other, relentlessly, with marshmallows while audiences coast to coast wondered if the cavalry would never come. Democrat or Republican, the usual pattern was that the pack would chase the front-runner since he had the most votes and some might drop loose. Issues were as hard to find as passion.

Almost invariably, nobody picked on Jackson or the reincarnated Hart because one man's votes were unbudgeable and the other's non-existent. Jackson, once the voice of protest in the land, took on the role of establishment harmonizer and gently chided the others when they lost their heads and became adversarial.

Jackson, of course, couldn't do anything about Dole. On national TV one night, Dole accused Bush of "lying" about his record, and across the land political behaviorists asked and said wasn't that shocking?

In the politesse of the 1988 primary campaign, candidates grappled more with their image than with each other. Media consultants and other unfrocked shrinks along the way agreed that Dole, for example, had to fight a mean streak; Bush, a wimp streak.

Other perceived streaks to be resisted were Dukakis, mechanistic; Alexander Haig, militaristic; Pierre Samuel du Pont IV, rich; Simon, dull; Robertson, "funny facts."

They tried various disguises. Dole smiled more. Bush thrashed Rather. Dukakis danced to bouzouki music. Simon flipped pancakes. Haig coozied a baby pig. Du Pont said, call me Pete.

Hart and Biden brought the Democrats odd headlines. Pat Robertson took care of the Republicans.

In his autobiography, Robertson wrote that God had told him a minister should not run for public office. Then he announced he might run for president. Then his book was re-issued, with God's injunction excised. Then he announced that God was now telling him to run. No other candidate claimed that endorsement.

MANOR

A corporate entity all to itself, King's Manor is sponsored by the Northwest Conference of the Methodist Church, which budgets $55,000 annually to the multi-building complex for residents unable to pay. "But just because they budget this amount doesn't mean we will get that much money," stressed Lyons.

Lyons further noted that the Manor hopes to someday have an endowment fund which would alleviate some of the financial burden, but such a reality may be years away.

With continued support of its fund-raising efforts, King's Manor should continue to be an exemplary retirement center. "People who live here see the Manor as a norm. They don't recognize what a truly great facility it is — it is one of the top centers in the nation," said

Lyons. The non-profit, charitable organization sits on a 19-acre campus in Hereford, equipped to serve a full capacity of 150 residents and 50 children in a special child care center.

The complex consists of 71 nursing care beds, 33 Manor apartments, 23 cottages and home units, and three duplexes. The arrangement provides several levels of adult care: independent living, assisted living, adult day care, respite care, and nursing care. "I think this format is what makes King's Manor so unique," said Lyons. "We make sure that different lifestyles and needs are met."

While the cost of care in many similar facilities depends upon the amount of nursing care needed by a resident, such is not the case at Kings Manor. "Our costs are based on room size and are set by the board of directors," said Lyons. "Our nursing care offers accommodations ranging from a small four bed ward up to a large private room. There is also a great diversity in size of our apartments, cottages and homes."

As for health care, the facility boasts a patient-staff ratio of 2:1, far exceeding legal requirements. "We believe that we do not work to please the state of Texas; rather, we use standards that go beyond state requirements," she said. Two annual surprise inspections by state and federal officials have garnered a superior rating for King's Manor throughout Lyons' tenure as administrator.

While Hereford residents may enjoy Saturday's Founders Day barbecue and all the trimmings, so will King's Manor residents. Complimentary tickets will entitle each resident to a nutritious meal while being entertained by the Easter Opry Gospel of Hereford. And while they visit with local citizens, they can rest assured that they will have no financial worries as long as Kings Manor is supported by caring individuals.

CHOF

sional Rodeo Cowgirl Association World Champion is on display, along with a green silk monogram blouse worn by the cowgirl.

A large sterling silver trophy from the Denver Post Relay race is a donation from the family of Ruth Ester Parton, one of this year's honorees. The cup went to the winner of a two-day horse relay race in Cheyenne.

Assembling the collection is hard work, said Mrs. Formby. Sometimes other museums housing belongings of such well-known Western women as Annie Oakley and Ms. Cather aren't willing to lend their things to the Hall.

But honorees' families are more cooperative and lend clothes, spurs, trophies, art and writings, some of which is later donated permanently.

"We always manage to get a few things," said Mrs. Formby.

The old cowgirls get together once a year for two days of high falutin' fund-raising known as the Rhinestone Roundup. The Western gala, held last weekend, is the museum's primary source of funds and a big social event in Hereford, with about 300 people attending.

The event also honors the current year's inductees. Mildred Douglas Chrisman of Lawton, Okla., a rodeo cowgirl who later played in Western movies, and Ms. Parton of Toppish, Wash., were this year's cowgirl honorees. Both women are deceased.

Stella Cox Hughes of Clifton Ariz., a Western writer; Mari Sandoz of Sheridan County, Neb., a Western novelist and short story writer; Elizabeth Boyle Smith of Crosbyton, a Scottish immigrant who settled in West Texas; Marie Cordner Tyler of Bismarck, N.D., a leader in the cattle industry; and Hope Carol Varner of Lake Ozark, Mo., a source of Old West lore and music, were this year's Western Heritage inductees.

The members of the Hall's board of directors spend about two years researching and documenting the achievements of each prospective inductee, after having received a nomination from someone.

"We want to be in touch with her family, with her if she's living, we want to get more pictures and document things," Mrs. Formby said. "We take it very seriously."

PAINTING

assistants thought the painting should portray him more accurately. So Whitaker added a couple of pounds to the canvas.

In the painting, de la Garza is shown in jeans, a western shirt and cowboy boots, leaning on a fence with Santa Gertrudis cattle grazing in the background.

"I had to take the pictures of him in his dress suit because he forgot to bring his western clothes," Whitaker stated. "I used those photos mainly to get his face and other features right, but I had to get my husband, Jerry, out there in his western clothes and shoot pictures of him so I could look at some western clothes to paint by. The belt buckle is even from another picture I found."

The Santa Gertrudis cattle in the background also were not in the original picture. The breed originated with the de la Garza family on the King Ranch, so he requested that Whitaker paint a few in the portrait.

"He sent me a video on the cattle and I did some other research on them myself so I could know how to paint them. Painting the cattle and the grass were the two harder things about this piece."

An equally difficult task Whitaker ran up against was finding heavy paper that wouldn't buckle. The paper, nearly four times heavier than her usual canvas, had to be hand made in France and shipped to the United States, and maneuvering the large paper seemed a Herculean task.

"With watercolor, you can't prop the canvas on an easel because the paint will run, so I had to lay it flat on the biggest table I could find and I had to set it in the middle of my studio because I had to work myself around it," Whitaker said.

Framing the thing wasn't easy either. Carmen Flood, owner of Finishing Touches at 501 E. Park Ave., had to have the wooden frame shipped in a mattress box and, once it arrived, the mat had to be cut by hand.

"I really think he'll like the painting because it's so complimentary," Whitaker said. "He's got muscular arms and manly hands and he's dressed in the Texas attire because that's where he's from and that's where he spends a lot of his time. Jeans and boots are much more masculine and authoritative than a black business suit."

Tohm acquires rank of Eagle Scout

JOHN ANTHONY TOHM

John Anthony Tohm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Tohm, received his Eagle Scout rank at a Court of Honor on June 27 at the First United Methodist Church fellowship hall. The Eagle Scout Award is the highest rank in scouting.

Bear Denton, scout master, served as master of ceremonies at the Court of Honor. The Color Guard was composed of Shaun Moore, John Simnacher, and Toby Brito. Wes Eades led the pledge and Rev. Lanny Wheeler gave the invocation. Michael Foster presented a slide show of the candidate's history in the troop and Rev. Wheeler spoke of the candidate's service project. Roger Eades reported on the Eagle Board of Review.

Denton presented the award to Tohm's parents and sister, JoAnn, and Mrs. Tohm pinned the Eagle Medal on her son's pocket. Rev. Wheeler gave the closing prayer at the end of the ceremony.

Tohm started Cub Scouts when he was eight years old and has been active in boy Scouts Troop 52 since 1980. To be eligible for the Eagle rank, a scout must earn 21 merit badges, be active in scouts for a certain period of time, hold leadership positions within his troop, and then plan and execute an Eagle Service project that is approved by his leaders.

Tohm's Eagle Service project was to build two exercise stairs for the senior citizens at Kings Manor. Some positions he has held in the troop include being librarian, patrol leader and Leadership Corps. He is presently assistant scout master and a member of Order of the Arrow, in which he is treasurer of the chapter. He has received several outstanding camping awards and has attended summer camp at Camp Don Harrington for several years. He has participated in Troop 52 trips to Philmont Scout Ranch in New Mexico, canoeing on the Guadalupe River, and backpacked on the Continental Divide in Colorado.

Tohm has also received many honors in school. He has been elected to student council since he was in the seventh grade each year up to the present. As a sophomore, he participated in football and track, was a member of Key Club and was named sophomore TWIRP King. As a junior, Tohm was treasurer of FHA, Key Club, and named Outstanding Player of the Week in football by the Booster Club. He was also a junior server.

He will be a senior at Hereford High School next year and plans to join the Marines after graduation.

LOWFAT DIETS PROBABLY NOT BEST FOR CHILDREN AND TEENS

The major national health organizations are trying to convince Americans to reduce their risk of heart disease by cutting the fat in their diets to no more than 30% of daily calories.

Is this good advice for children and teenagers? Probably not. Most children and adolescents now get 30 to 40% of their calories from fat and medical authorities believe it should stay in that range.

The American Academy of Pediatrics is concerned that a lower fat diet may have detrimental effects on the growth and maturation of healthy children. Fat is a concentrated source of energy needed for normal growth.

In addition, the benefits of low fat diets for children have not been established. Most research studies have been conducted on an adult population and the results may not apply to children.

The Academy also questions whether a low-fat diet can meet the calorie needs of teenagers during the adolescent growth spurt. Reducing fat intake in teenagers also means decreasing the amount of protein they get from meat, eggs, and dairy products. Yet these foods are needed for normal growth.

When a child or adolescent is diagnosed as being at-risk for heart disease because of family history or a high blood cholesterol level, the benefits of a low fat diet aren't disputed.

But a low fat diet isn't a necessity, and could be harmful if applied to all healthy children.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Kids' cooking school set

Americans have become risk conscious and unfortunately seem to be either "less concerned about risks or more willing to take chances." In short, there seems to be an increasing emphasis on gambling.

We all too often laugh at danger in our everyday lives. We exceed the prescribed speed limit, we smoke, we put off all sorts of preventive maintenance around the home because we're willing to risk accident, illness and costly repairs.

The biggest gamble is in the health area, however.

As far as I'm concerned, you're gambling with your health if you gulp pills and potions every time you have a headache.

People laugh at the fine print on a pain killer bottle. "Temporary relief" it will always say.

Is that what a person really wants? Here today, gone tomorrow...back again the next day? I would think they would want to be rid of them once and for all.

Of course, an occasional headache doesn't always stop with an occasional recurrence. There's always a chance of migraine.

You'll need only one with its zig-zag flashes, nausea, and depression to tell you that.

But you'll never find a migraine that doesn't start with

Believe me, it's a throbbing, excruciating pain.

If you have occasional headaches I urge you to do what so many migraine sufferers do. They seek specialized care from a Doctor of Chiropractic.

Life doesn't have to be a slow run down hill to pain killers. If you're a headache sufferer you owe it to yourself to find out if a Chiropractor can help.

In my view, the "odds are" that he can...and will!

Bold strokes

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the trouble with being an optimist is that people think you don't know what's going on.

o0o
"It's a million-dollar rainfall!!" the county agent used to report when we had moisture like has fallen the past week. In these days, however, when a boxing match brings in $60 million and baseball players earn millions, surely this rainfall would be worth $2 to $5 million.

o0o
You've seen and heard about kids setting up lemonade stands in the summertime, but we heard a story last week that gave a new twist to the "little-merchant" business. A lady tells us she went to a garage sale and two youngsters had set up a stand to sell mosquito protection. They were doing a good business spraying the customers with a mosquito repellent!

o0o
On July 4th, consider that loyalty is the inheritance tax we should be willing to pay on our American heritage.

Speaking of July 4th, here's an appropriate story about John Hancock that we found in "The Scrap Book":

It was on July 4, 1776, when John Hancock, president of the Continental Congress, put his quill pen to the wide bottom margin of the Declaration of Independence. With bold strokes and flourishes he signed his name. It was in handwriting four or five times as large as the script of the document.

Probably as he signed it he was thinking of the shooting war which was already going on, in which the colonials were fighting the British for the cause of individual liberties. The document before him represented a new turn in the struggle; theretofore separation from England had not been the main issue of the struggle. But separation seemed inevitable, and so here was its declaration.

And it is said that Hancock looked at his sprawling signature and remarked, "There, I guess King George will be able to read that."

No timidity there. With full awareness of the consequences, John Hancock and his fellow American revolutionaries stated their intentions and braced themselves for what was to follow.

It might do us some good occasionally, when we believe in something but find ourselves apologetic and defensive about it, to think of the way John Hancock signed that declaration. If a thing is worthy of our support, we ought to endorse it with bold strokes. What we think is evil, we should meet face to face; what we think is good, we should accompany shoulder to shoulder.

The beginnings of all great things are made in bold strokes, whether they be paintings, explorations, philosophies or societies.

Old Glory flies high over Capitol

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The symbols and traditions we use to celebrate the Fourth of July are many. Fireworks, picnics and family gatherings are only a few of the symbols associated with Independence Day. Perhaps the most recognized symbol that comes to mind as we celebrate America's Independence is the American flag whipping in the wind.

That was the belief of one member of Congress more than half a century ago, as he watched a work crew replace a flag that had been flying above the U.S. Capitol. As the workmen lowered the tattered old flag, the Congressman asked for it so he could give it to one of his constituents. Thus was born a Washington tradition which, to this day, continues to be one of the most popular programs on Capitol Hill.

Since that day in the 1930s, more than one million flags have been flown over the Capitol Building for the purpose of being sent to Americans so they can display a historical flag above their homes. These Stars and stripes have flown everywhere from statehouses to farmhouses, as well as leading parades down large and small Main streets from coast to coast.

Each morning, atop the Capitol building just below the dome, crews form the Captiol's labor pool gather at special flagpoles with dozens of United States flags. The crews attach flags to the ropes and snap them up the flagpole, where they wave before the Capitol, and then five or six hearty tugs on the rope bring them back to the ground. The crews fold the flags and return them to their boxes to be sent to constituents all over the nation. The flag might have fluttered in the breeze over the Capitol only for a few moments, but still is a part of American history that anyone would be proud to display at home.

The flags, which are available at cost, come with a special certificate noting it has been flown over the Capitol and can be prepared to include any special event, such as a birthday or anniversary.

The sight of Old Glory flying over the Capitol is a sight that symbolizes the freedom we experience as Americans. And that is the reason why thousands of Americans request these special flags.

If you are interested in obtaining one of these flags, please write me for further information and a price list.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek reports on perfumes or scandals or possibly both this week.

o0o
Dear editor:
I opened a magazine the other day and smelled perfume. I couldn't figure it out.

Then later on I read in a newspaper that perfume companies are putting a special preparation on their ads that gives off the odor of their brand of perfume. The perfume I smelled however in that magazine smelled like a blend of perfume and printer's ink.

Furthermore, other businesses are taking up the fad. I don't know how they swing it, but Rolls-Royce has an ad that gives off the leathery smell of a Rolls interior. It says calls to the company increased fourfold after the ad appeared. Human nature is hard to figure out. Or perhaps prospective Rolls-Royce buyers have keener noses and bigger bank accounts.

The fad continues to spread. A dog food company has a newspaper ad that gives you a whiff of its brand of dog food. I don't know if this encourages a reader to buy dog food or if it encourages a dog to chew up the newspaper.

This new type of scented journalism has lots of possibilities and gives big city newspapers a chance to demonstrate their celebrated nose for news.

For example, when a new scandal breaks in Washington, like the present one involving the Defense Department and Defense contractors involving billions of taxpayers' dollars, editors in reporting it could use a special ink which, when you open your paper, gives off an odor that smells to High Heaven.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

THE MEMORIAL

Everyone should see the Vietnam memorial in Washington, D.C. The best thing they did in designing this memorial was to hire a woman to do the designing. A man would have built a phallus symbol or put some general on a horse to become another outhouse for the pigeons.

The memorial is a female monument. It is cut into the earth. It seems to be receiving. It is a curved wall of black marble cut into the side of a hill. On the wall are the names of every person killed in the war. The names are in chronological order according to when they fell. That, in itself, is unusual. It represents the importance of each individual. They are important enough to be placed in correct order.

I walked along the wall one day. I do not know a single person named on the wall but I was caught up in the spirit of the place. Since the names are in chronological order there are guides available to help folks find the names. As I walked along I came upon a guide with a problem. A Vietnam veteran had him by the elbow and would not let go. He was telling the guide about his experiences in the war. As I walked by he was telling how they defoliated the trees.

I missed the meaning of the event. All I could think of was how that guide must have felt. I have often been caught by someone who wants to talk when I am supposed to be doing something else. I walked all the way out of the park before it hit me. I should have relieved that guide. The veteran did not care who he talked to he just needed to tell his story and he needed to tell it right there.

If I lived in Washington I hope I would have the sensitivity to spend as much time as possible at the wall. I would hope to make myself available to as many veterans as possible so they could tell their story at the wall. They would find healing as they told their stories.

Their stories are long overdue. They returned from a war no one understood, to a people who did not let them know how much they meant. On this July the fourth weekend let us stop and say to these people, "We are late, but we pause to honor each of you and the memory of those on the wall. Well done."

Bring in special counsel

The more the public learns about House Speaker Jim Wright's sleazy financial dealings, the clearer becomes the need for an independent investigation by a special counsel....

The latest revelations concern the marketing of the Texas Democrat's book, "Reflections of a Public Man." It seems that the book was sold in mass quantities to lobbyists and political cronies in such a way as to circumvent House of Representatives rules against excessive outside income.

Wright's book deal was already notorious for his inflated royalties of 55 percent — far more than publishers normally pay even for best-sellers....

Then, as if all of this were not more than enough, we now find out that some people ... have bought thousands of dollars worth of the book at one time — apparently for the specific purpose of enriching its author....

A $2,000 order came from an insurance company as a substitute for a speech honorarium.

House rules place ceilings on honorariums....

But in its first bill of particulars in the Wright case, the House Ethics Committee failed to mention this issue as worth examining. Its glaring omission confirms that the appointment of an independent counsel is overdue.

A chance for Clements

Texas Supreme Court Justice James Wallace this week became the third justice in less than a year to announce he's resigning. That presents Gov. Bill Clements with an opportunity to win himself favorable notice in the history books. Clements can, if he will, provide the state with a test of merit selection of judges by convening a commission of legal and lay people to recommend to him a short list of qualified candidates, from which he can make the final selection. The governor could still name a Republican, but the partisan angle — inappropriate for judges — would be muted, and the public could be better assured that the new justice is up to the job, and not just a way to pay off a political debt.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times, June 26

More IRS errors

A congressional investigation into how effectively the Internal Revenue Service goes after businesses which dodge taxes turned up unexpected results. Investigators found the IRS has accused hundreds of thousands of businesses that dutifully paid their taxes of not filing returns.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, found the IRS has failed to keep its computer files up to date and has more than one taxpayer number for huge numbers of business firms. When no tax return can be found for an erroneous number, the IRS assumes the business has failed to file a return.

The result has been a flood of warnings that never should have been issued, wasted investigations by IRS personnel and additional expense and paper work for firms that have been falsely accused.

The GAO found that IRS investigations of business taxpayers produced an additional $5.9 billion in revenue for 1986, which appears to be a major accomplishment. But investigators also found that 73 percent of the investigations conducted by the IRS were not warranted and produced no additional taxes.

The GAO investigation leads credence to the viewpoint that the IRS keeps sloppy records, makes too many errors and falsely accuses too many honest taxpayers. That is a risky image for a system of voluntary taxation that up to now has been the world's largest and most successful.

Raising a flabby generation

Americans have never been more intense about health and physical fitness than now. Coaching is top-flight; nutrition and exercise have created a generation of super-athletes; organized sports start as young as age 5. So Americans are in great shape, right?

Wrong.
And the fitness problem is apparently as deep in one direction as the excellence is in another. For every child rising at 5 a.m. to swim or run laps, there are two or three eating junk food and spending hours in front of a TV.

William Squires, an associate professor of physical education at Texas Lutheran College in Seguin, puts some blame on schools because too much emphasis is placed on athletic prowess, not enough on general fitness.

But blame parents, too, he added. They check their children's homework. They should also pay attention to what their kids eat, what they do for recreation and what kind of shape they are in.

A mind is a terrible thing to waste. So is good health.

Look out, Postal Service!

Does the U.S. Postal Service realize what it has done?

The post office has hired H. Ross Perot to review its operations. The post office may never be the same again.

Perot became interested in the Texas educational system and drastic changes resulted.

Perot attacks tasks like a buzzsaw. He cuts problems down to size, changes their shape and trims them to fit. The federal government isn't used to that sort of revolutionary thinking.

REV. AND MRS. RODNEY A. COLEMAN

Local residents' son to reside in Colombia

The Rev. and Mrs. Rodney A. Coleman were among 35 people recently named missionaries by the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board at the Southern Baptist Convention in San Antonio. Coleman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Coleman Jr. of Hereford.

The couple will live in Colombia where he will be starting and developing churches and they will be involved in a variety of outreach ministries. He is currently the pastor-church planter of Victory Baptist Church in Norwalk, Ohio.

Born and reared in Hereford, Coleman considers Tate Springs Baptist Church in Arlington his home church. Avenue Baptist Church of Hereford and the University Height Baptist Church in Huntsville were also instrumental in his Christian growth.

He received the bachelor of science degree from Sam Houston State University, Huntsville and the master of divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth.

He has been pastor/church planter of Lakes Fellowship, Wixom, Mich., and a Southern Baptist Home Mission Board summer missionary in Georgia, Wisconsin, Hawaii, Canada and Wyoming.

Born in Clifton, Texas, Mrs. Coleman, the former Sharon Light, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Light of China Spring, Texas. While growing up she also lived in China Spring and Waco. She considers China Spring her hometown and Tate Springs Baptist Church her home church. First Baptist Church, China Springs, also was instrumental in her Christian growth.

She received the bachelor of science degree from Baylor University, Waco.

She has been a teacher in Walled Lake, Mich., and Arlington, and a summer missionary in Rio Grande Valley, sponsored by the Baptist General Convention of Texas River Ministry. She is a substitute teacher in the Norwalk Independent School System.

The Colemans have two children: Brooke Nicole, born in 1981; and Heather Dawn, 1983. The family will go to Rockville, Va., in August for a seven-week orientation before leaving for the field.

With 14.7 million members, Southern Baptists are the largest Protestant denomination in America. Their missionary-sending agency, the Foreign Mission Board, is the largest Protestant career foreign missionary force based in the United States. With 3,800 missionaries in 113 countries, they have a goal to locate 5,600 missionaries and 20,000 short-term volunteer missionaries in 125 countries by the year 2000. This is the denomination's part in seeing all the world has a chance to hear the story of Jesus Christ.

WE ARE ANOTHER YEAR OLDER?

A nationwide birthday party will take place Monday — our annual celebration of Independence; a day honored with traditional picnics, fireworks, and the red, white and blue.

With all of the symbolic activities that surround the Fourth of July, this is really a celebration of freedom. And in a nation so enormous and diverse, freedom is the one common bond that brings all Americans together as one. Together, on the Fourth of July, we honor the wisdom and courage of those who came before us and in some way commit ourselves to passing on these rights to those who come after.

On Independence Day, we at the First National wish everyone a safe and happy holiday. And however you choose to spend the day, remember it is that right of choice that we celebrate. Happy Fourth of July from the First National Bank.

YOUR EYES

HEALTHY EYES

Healthy eyes are disease-free. But disease-free eyes do not always see clearly. In fact, most eye problems that cause us to have reduced or blurred vision are unrelated to disease. These problems are related to the ever-changing structure of the eye itself.

Nearsightedness and astigmatism — in varying degrees — remain the main causes of less-than-perfect vision. These conditions (not diseases) are caused by structural abnormalities of the eyes which may be intensified by misuse or the environment. Generally, they are correctable by glasses or contact lenses.

Diseased eyes on the other hand, can lead to blindness. That is why regular eye examinations are important to detect the beginning of glaucoma, diabetic retinopathy, macular degeneration, or any other diseases — and eye problems — that are best treated early.

A&M favored again in SWC football

By The Associated Press
The Texas Aggies, despite a rugged schedule, are favored to win their fourth straight Southwest Conference football championship, according to the annual Texas Football Magazine poll of sports writers.

Texas A&M plays Nebraska, Louisiana State, Alabama and Oklahoma State before starting SWC play but 16 of the 33 writers voting in the 29th annual poll say the Aggies will again be in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day.

The Texas Longhorns, anticipating an outstanding senior season from running back Eric Metcalf, received 13 first place votes. Baylor got two votes and Arkansas and Texas Tech got one each.

The Aggies compiled 114 points on a point system giving four points for first place down to one point for fourth place.

The Longhorns had 102 points followed by Arkansas, 54½; Baylor, 21; Texas Christian, 19; Texas Tech, 13; Houston 7½ and Rice 0.

The Aggies' defense drew the attention of the voters. Brad Townsend of the San Antonio Light, chose the Aggies because "The Aggies have more momentum, more depth, and most importantly, a better defense than anybody else."

The Longhorn's hopes hinge on Metcalf, the multi-talented running back, who was chosen the pre-season offensive player of the year by the writers.

Kirk Bohls of the Austin American-Statesman, chose the Longhorns and Metcalf to win it all. "Eric Metcalf has the longest coattails this side of Fred Astaire," Bohls said.

The Longhorns and Aggies also dominated the preseason All-SWC team selected by the magazine.

The Aggies had seven players on the team, led by linebacker John Roper, and Metcalf was one of four Texas players selected.

Joining Metcalf in the backfield are quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver, Texas Tech and running backs Darren Lewis of Texas A&M and James Rouse of Arkansas.

The wide receivers are Wayne Walker, Texas Tech and Jason Phillips, Houston.

On the offensive line are tackles Matt McCall, Texas A&M and Ed Cunningham, Texas; guards Jerry Fontenot, Texas A&M and center Courtney Hall, Rice.

Scott Slater of A&M is the kicking specialist and Houston's James Dixon is the kick return specialist.

On the defensive unit are: linemen Wayne Martin, Arkansas; Steve Llewellyn, Texas and Tracy Simien, TCU; linebackers, Roper, teammate Aaron Wallace, Britt Hager, Texas and James Francis, Baylor.

Also, cornerbacks, Alex Morris, Texas A&M and Johnny Jackson, Houston; safeties, Robert Blackmon, Baylor and Falanda Newton, TCU.

TCU's Chris Becker is the punter and Tyrone Thurman of Texas Tech is the punt return specialist.

Roper was selected as the league's defensive player of the year and teammate Lewis is the sophomore of the year. Baylor center Bobby Sign is the newcomer of the year.

For the fourth consecutive year, the writers picked Oklahoma to win the national championship.

Men's church softball champions

First Christian wins men's church softball league title

First Christian won both the regular season championship and the tournament title in the Hereford Churches Athletic men's softball league this summer.

First Christian had an 8-1 record in regular season games, one game ahead of Frio Baptist and two games ahead of both the First Baptist Freaks and Knights of Columbus.

In the tournament, Church of the Nazarene finished second, and Westway Baptist placed third.

Palo Duro Baptist was presented with the league's sportsmanship award.

The final standings for the regular season were:
First Christian 8-1
Frio Baptist 7-2

Playing for Detroit in 1938, Hank Greenberg hit 39 home runs at home, a record. He hit 58 that season.

Rubber-covered footballs were not introduced to the college game until the 1956 season.

- First Baptist Freaks 6-3
- Knights of Columbus 6-3
- Church of the Nazarene 5-4
- Community Church 5-4
- Palo Duro Baptist 4-5
- Westway Baptist 3-6
- First Baptist 1-8
- Immanuel Lutheran 0-0

Looking back on the 1987-88 season of the National Basketball Association, here's what seems to stand out about that professional league:

1. The Detroit Pistons play roughhouse basketball because the NBA referees do not call the games according to the rules - or the Pistons intentionally violate the rules because they realize they can get away with all their pushing and shoving.

Piston players such as Bill Laimbeer and Dennis Rodman would have had six fouls called on them in the first half of many playoff games - or even in the first quarter - if the officials had called the game properly.

If the games are refereed correctly, Laimbeer, Rodman and their teammates would have to learn to play true basketball. The question must be in the minds of a lot of basketball fans, regarding the Pistons and other teams or players who play roughhouse basketball, will the Commissioner David Stern do anything about this?

2. I learned that Mike Fratello, head coach of the Atlanta Hawks, is a protected coach. Opinions have been expressed often about certain players being "protected players." These players are said to be protected by the referees, so that they do not foul out of games.

Fratello can walk onto the playing floor, argue with the officials, and have no technical fouls called on him. He was doing that frequently during the series against the Boston Celtics.

But K.C. Jones, then the Celtics head coach, was ejected from a game for arguing a call from the bench - and he did not go onto the playing floor at all.

We really do not know what either coach was saying on those occasions, but it seems very inconsistent to not call any technical fouls on a coach who storms out onto the court, and in the same game eject the coach who did not go onto the court.

3. We who watch the NBA games on TV and not in person often hear some strange opinions rattled out by broadcasters. One of the strangest this year in the playoffs was, "The referees shouldn't foul out a player like .... - especially in a playoff game. It's not good for the league to have the referees do that."

Again, I return to the idea that the referees should call fouls according to the rules of the game. A "superstar" player should not be allowed to violate the rules of the game, such as fouling or traveling.

If a superstar player gets called for a dozen traveling violations in a game - violations which he did commit according to the rules - it is fair and right and it should be called that way. The result is that the superstar player has a weakness, and traveling should be called on him just as it should be called on a rookie - whenever a rule is violated.

4. I watched the seventh game of the NBA finals on TV with my brother-in-law. We both noticed with about two seconds left, when Detroit, behind 108-105, attempted a length-of-the-court pass, that the whistle blew for what we thought was a foul on a Los Angeles player.

But the clock kept going and ran out. At the time we thought there was a foul, already there were L.A. fans coming onto the court. My brother-in-law and I decided this is what should have been done: two free throws for the Detroit player who was fouled, plus a technical against L.A. for the fans going onto the playing floor before the buzzer sounded.

We concluded that an overtime game should have been a real possibility. However, Detroit did not get an opportunity to shoot those three free throws - another example of some mistakes in officiating.

(Before anybody accuses me of being for one or the other team in the NBA finals, let me clear up the matter by saying that the teams from each conference that I was pulling for did not make it to the championship series!)

5. One thing I still have not seen called in an NBA game is a technical foul in this specific situation: A player on team A is fouled, and as he continues his drive toward the basket (allowed by the continuation rule), he is fouled by another player.

I understand a technical foul is supposed to be called on the player who fouls after the whistle has blown, but I have not seen that call made on such plays which happen frequently in the NBA games.

Headed to national tourney

Six youth prepare for tae kwon do nationals

Six Hereford youth are preparing for competition this week in the tae kwon do national tournament at Tampa, Fla.

Ralph Claudio, Victor Diaz, Brian Torres, Wade McPherson, Marie Crox and Danny Eberly are those national qualifiers. The tournament will be held at the Sun Dome in Tampa Thursday through Saturday.

Claudio, a black belt, qualified for nationals by placing second in sparring in a Junior Olympic tournament in Tulsa, Okla., last year.

The others qualified with their placings at the Texas State Junior Tae Kwon Do Championship at Brookhaven College in Dallas on May 14.

Diaz, a black belt, placed second in both sparring and forms. Torres, a black belt, was second in sparring.

McPherson, a black belt, placed second in sparring. Crox, also a black belt, placed third in sparring, and Eberly, a green belt, was first in sparring and third in forms.

"I want to learn more and more about tae kwon do. I want to be the best," McPherson said.

"I went into the sport to learn self-defense. After I got into the sport, I always wanted to be a black belt," added McPherson, a 10-year-old who has participated in tae kwon do for four years.

Eberly, age 14 and in the sport for two years, said, "If you don't practice, you're not going to be worth anything in it. It's not an easy sport.

"You've got to be thinking about your opponents, how good they are and how they block. This sport helps me to keep from losing my temper about what other people say to me."

Torres, who is 10 years old and has three years experience in the sport, said tae kwon do helps him in other sports, including basketball, football, baseball and track.

"Tae kwon do helps me in basketball and football because I don't get tired very easily. It sometimes helps me from getting hurt," Torres said.

Diaz is 13 years old, and Claudio and Crox are both 10 years old. Diaz has been competing in tae kwon do for five years, Claudio for four years, and Crox for two years.

"My parents motivate me to do better. I like the sports because it is fun," Diaz said, noting that he averages 21 hours of practice per week when preparing for a tournament.

Claudio said, "Trying to be first keeps me motivated. The most exciting thing about the sport is making it to the Junior Olympics national tournament. In this sport, you can do things you didn't know you could do, if you're pushed to the limits."

Crox said, "I got into the sport to learn discipline, to defend myself. I want to be in the sport all my life. It helps me stay healthy."

Crox's father, Loopy Crox, is the coach of these six youth. He believes their chances are good to place high at the national tournament.

"The potential that they have is that they have a very good chance to be national champions. They've been working very hard. It's a good opportunity to be in national competition.

"Next year, they'll be eligible to compete in the Pan American Games. It will pave the way to the 1992 Olympics. The main thing is that they've got the talent and they're developing it real well," Coach Crox said.

"The parents are helping them in every way. This is important, because of how young they are.

"There's the satisfaction of seeing my work and having the opportunity to help them develop their talents in the martial arts. I see myself in them. My dream is to help somebody reach the Olympics and win a gold medal," he adds.

While newer faucets have cartridges and other gadgets that eliminate the need for washers, many houses still utilize faucets with washers.

These washers inevitably become worn or get chewed up one way or another, resulting in dripping that wastes water, stains sinks and tubs and is just plain annoying. To halt the drip, the washer must be replaced. It is a task which requires knowledge more than skill, which means that almost anyone can do it if he or she can follow instructions. Plumbing chores sometimes intimidate do-it-yourselfers, but this is one that can be handled without much trouble. The big warning is not to attempt this or any similar repair without first turning off the water. Once that has been done, you can take your time in acquiring the knack of changing a washer. The water usually can be shut off underneath the sink, but must be shut off at some other valve in the house if there is no shutoff at the fixture or in the case of a tub. In turning off the valve, always turn the handle clockwise.

The handle usually is held in place with a screw under the cap, which in turn is screwed on or snapped on. You can figure out quickly how to remove it. Under the handle is a packing nut, which must be loosened, turning the nut counterclockwise. That's a good thing to remember in all do-it-yourself projects. With rare exceptions, things are tightened or turned off clockwise, loosened and or opened counterclockwise.

The faucet stem will come out by lifting it or unscrewing it. In some cases, you may have to put back the handle to accomplish this. When the stem is out, you will see a washer at the bottom end of it. The washer is held in place with a screw. Usually, the washer will be in bad shape, worn or tattered. Replace it with a new washer. It's a good idea to keep some washers at home at all times, since you may want to do the repair job when the local hardware store is closed. If you buy a box of washers, screws will be included. If you purchase a single washer, be sure you get the right size screw, which is easy if you bring the old one to the store.

Here is an important precaution. If you have no washers on hand and you go to the store to buy one after the faucet has been disassembled, make sure no one turns on the water to the sink while you are gone. If that happens, you will have a very wet kitchen or bathroom when you return. Replacing the washer is simple. Be sure to reassemble everything in the opposite order to which the faucet stem was removed. Then, and only then, turn on the water.

Replacement of the washer is not necessary if the original leak was coming from under the packing nut rather than the spout of the faucet. In that event, the large washer or the packing material under the nut must be replaced. Packing material is a cordlike product that looks like thin cord. The water must also be shut off before you work on the packing nut.

In nearly all cases, the replacement of a faucet washer stops a leak coming from the spout. Once in a very great while, it won't. That means water is getting past the valve seat on which the washer rests. The valve seat then must be refaced or replaced. You can purchase a refacing tool to smooth the valve seat. It will come with instructions most of the time. If it doesn't, have the dealer show you how to use it. When a valve seat is too worn to yield to refacing, it must be taken out and replaced. Although there are valve removing tools, it sometimes is difficult to get out the valve. You'll have to decide, on the basis of your do-it-yourself track record, whether to attempt it or have it done by a plumber.

Q. — I hear a hole in a pipe can be fixed merely by inserting the point of a pencil in the opening and breaking it off. Is this true?

A. — It works — sometimes. The hole must be tiny and the area must be taped to hold the graphite in place. But this is only a temporary repair. Consider it such until you can make at least a semi-permanent repair with a rubber hose, split fit, and a clamp that will hold the hose in place. Assume this is a water pipe and not one which carries gas of any kind, in which case the work should be done professionally.

Q. — I will be doing a project in which I will have to cut quite a few bricks to make them fit. I saw a worker cut brick at a neighbor's house recently. He merely seemed to tap it with a trowel and it split the brick evenly. Is this something that can be learned by a novice?

A. — Not very easily. If you try it, the brick won't split the way you want it to, although occasionally the method will seem to work perfectly. The best bet for a beginner is to score the brick all around with a mason's chisel, place it on a solid surface and hit the scored part with a chisel and hammer. Even this will take some practice until you get the hang of it and can break the brick cleanly every time. Slicing a brick with a power saw and the proper blade is the only sure way of getting a net cut. Regardless of how you cut brick, wear goggles, since flying chips can be dangerous.

Q. — Can wood trim be painted with regular paint, the same kind as used for the adjacent walls?

A. — Yes, Don't forget, though, a gloss paint usually can be wiped off and cleaned more easily than flat paint.

Farm and Ranch

GAO report raises FmHA questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Glenn English says a congressional report on the Farmers Home Administration raises serious questions about its management and ability to serve the nation's farmers.

A report from the House Government Operations Committee concludes management of the agency, the lender of last resort to farmers, is inadequate and unable to properly oversee the operations of 1,900 county offices.

English said the FmHA's "inability to supervise its own affairs has meant that farmers have not had access to valuable programs the law intended for them."

The Oklahoma Democrat said the inadequate management uncovered during a hearing last fall by his Government Information, Justice and Agriculture subcommittee may be a sign political appointees "don't like the program and they don't think the government should have this program."

"If you look at it in a sinister way, you could draw the conclusion that they're doing their best to make sure the program does not work — you could say they were sabotaging the program," said English. "That seems to be the road they seem to be going down."

FmHA Administrator Vance Clark, appointed by President Reagan in March 1986, said: "I frankly don't know what the congressman means."

"It's a nice rhetorical flourish which is consistent with the intemperate tone of the report as well as the season of the year," Clark said. "But this level of discourse lends little in the way of credit or credibility to the report or its chief author."

In summary, the report released last week found that "in many instances, the national office does not know what is going on in the county offices and does not have any way of finding out."

"All of the problems at FmHA identified by the committee could have been alleviated or avoided altogether by competent, professional, effective management," the report said.

The committee in its report recommended that the secretary of agriculture "require FmHA to institute effective management procedures so that the department, the Congress and the public may be assured that the agency is meeting its mission."

Although the FmHA administrator and the secretary of agriculture assured the committee that they were opposed to racial discrimination, the report said the administrator "has failed to install any management system to know if discrimination has been practiced. Instead, the administrator relies on complaints of the aggrieved."

Witnesses before English's committee had previously accused the agency of racial discrimination, the report said. Other earlier testimony indicated that farmers are sometimes frightened of FmHA county supervisors, that it sometimes takes outside pressure to make FmHA county employees follow regulations and that FmHA loans sometimes are made so late that farmers are unable to do a good job producing crops.

The report said that despite strict prohibitions against selling farmland from inventory if it would depress price levels, 14 FmHA state directors sold land without conducting the analysis required by the national office.

Three state directors reported that the required analysis had been conducted, but they could produce no documentation of the activity.

Rogge happy with state outlook

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite a drought threatening some areas of the state, the overall outlook for Texas agriculture is good, says the head of the Farm Credit Bank of Texas.

"Texas agriculture is coming back and making improvements to the overall Texas economy today ... We're very optimistic for a good year," said Donald R. Rogge, who next week becomes chief executive officer of the new institution.

"Texas ought to be looking at agriculture as its prime contributor to the state product, the gross product, as it has in the past," Rogge said Thursday.

The bank will be created on Wednesday, when the Federal Land Bank of Texas and the Federal Intermediate Bank of Texas merge, as called for in the federal Agricultural Credit Act of 1987.

Rogge said this year's drought has had mixed effects across the state, but he expects Texas to make out better than many parts of the very dry Midwest.

"We have some areas that are droughty. Southwest Texas is droughty," Rogge noted, adding that some of the South Texas cotton and crops are stunted and come ranchers have been forced to sell off cattle.

"The upper and lower Panhandle regions are expecting everything from bumper crops to reduced yields from last year," he said. East Texas farmers will have a crop, although grass and hay appears short, he added, while Central Texas has received some recent rain.

Many Texas farmers and ranchers have learned to cope with such problems, he said, adding that the agricultural sector appears to be on the rebound from some very difficult recent years.

Marsha Martin, senior vice president, said the merged bank would have total assets of about $4 billion.

The new bank combined the long-term functions of the land bank, which was chartered in 1917, and the short-term functions of the intermediate credit bank.

Now is time for grub control

Cattle grubs are internal parasites and their damage is largely unseen, yet they cause greater economic losses to the U.S. beef cattle industry than any other insect pest.

While grubs are usually found on the backs of infested animals during the winter months, that's not the time for control measures since the pests have already done their damage. Feed efficiency and animal vigor are reduced in infested animals.

Grubs are the larve or worm stage of heel flies, and adult heel flies are active over most of the state from March through May.

The time to control grubs is from now through August when grubs are small and before infested animals suffer stress, weight loss and decreased feed efficiency. Considerable hide damage will occur if infested animals are slaughtered. Hide value has increased rapidly during the past year.

Heel flies cannot sting, have no functional mouth parts and cause no pain to cattle. yet, they frighten congregating in the throat after a few months, and after eight to nine months, appear in the mature grub state on the animal's back.

If a producer has a history of grubs in his cattle herd, it's best to treat each animal over three months of age with one application of an approved systemic insecticide or injectable treatment during the May through August period.

Systemic insecticides are absorbed directly through the animal's animals, making them difficult to manage.

Heel flies lay their eggs on an animal's hairs in the lower leg region, glued in position. Tiny larvae hatch in a few days, crawl down to the base of the hair and burrow into the animal's skin.

Then they begin a migratory course through the animal's body, skin, circulate throughout the body, and kill grubs while they are small.

Injectable treatments are circulated in the animal's body fluids to kill the invading pests.

These insecticides come in various forms—dips, sprays, pour-ons, injections and spot-on treatments. A listing of approved insecticides and methods for controlling cattle grubs is available at the County Extension office. Ask for Extension publication B-1306, which contains information on livestock pests.

Cattle meet is this week

Cattlemen have to make a profit to stay in the beef business, and to make a profit, they have to provide a product that meets consumer needs. Both of those issues will receive major attention at the 1988 Beef Industry Conference at Texas A&M University on Thursday and Friday.

State and national industry leaders will be discussing current and future trends and directions of the cattle business, including production and marketing options to maximize profitability.

Discussions also will focus on the increased emphasis on lean beef, new beef products, and carcass merit and cutability. Research results will be released for the first time that examine carcass value of several breed types all the way to the retail meat case. Several speakers will address misconceptions many cattle buyers and feedlot operators have regarding different cattle breed types.

The opening session of the Beef Industry Conference begins at 9 a.m. on Thursday in Rudder Center on the A&M campus. A banquet Thursday evening will feature Martin Jorgensen, a South Dakota rancher who was named "Businessman of the Year" by the National Cattlemen's Association for 1987. He will speak on "Profiting in the Changing Cow Business."

Conference details are available at the County Extension office.

IT ONLY TAKES ONE soil nutrient deficiency to affect wheat crop yields. That means a one in sixteen chance of reduced yield, since wheat depends on 16 essential nutrient elements for growth and reproduction. A New Mexico State University extension agronomist explains that three of those elements: carbon, hydrogen and oxygen are supplied by the atmosphere. Nutrients such as nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium—called macronutrients, as well as secondary nutrients such as sulphur, magnesium and calcium are usually soil-born. Also required are micronutrients such as iron, zinc, molybdenum, manganese, copper, boron and chlorine. Although all must be present in varying degrees, the New Mexico scientist cited nitrogen as the most important of the sixteen.

A Dream Made Possible With Your Help!

KING'S MANOR FOUNDERS ASSOCIATION
P.O. Box 1999
HEREFORD, TEXAS 79045
June 3, 1988

Dear Friends:

Twenty-five years ago, an idea became reality. The prayers and hard work of many compassionate people were rewarded when a facility for older adults opened its doors on October 11, 1962. The facility consisted of one building with twenty rooms.

There were many times when it seemed as if that dream would not survive. Financial difficulties persisted, but the tough minded church and community founders kept working to breathe new life into the dream. Their dedication and persistence paid off. Today King's Manor Methodist Home is a multi-building complex situated on a beautiful 18 acre campus, offering independent retirement living, nursing care, and child care.

While most of our residents pay the full cost for the services of King's Manor, twenty-six percent receive some financial assistance. Last year this financial assistance amounted to $110,187.00. With a continuing policy that paying residents will never be charged one penny more to help offset costs for those unable to pay the full cost, King's Manor must rely on funds received from churches and our Founder's Association to make up the difference.

The need for financial assistance will increase as the residents of King's Manor live longer and have more acute health care needs. Our continued support is needed to assure the residents that their basic needs will be met as well as giving them a sense of security. One resident said, "I hope I never run out of money but if I do I know that I will be cared for in the same manner as those with a million dollars." We must do everything we can to nurture this kind of trust.

The ninth annual Founder's Association barbeque will be on Saturday, July 9, 1988. It is an excellent opportunity for each of us to share in this ministry. Serving hours will be from 5:00 P.M. to 9:00 P.M., on the campus. Entertainment will be provided by Easter Opry Gospel of Hereford. The cost will be $10.00 per person or $25.00 for a family of four.

Please order your tickets today and let's make this the best barbeque ever.

Sincerely yours,

Bob Sims

MRS. JOHN DOCKERY
...nee Rebecca Rudd

Saturday nuptials unite Rudd, Dockery

Rebecca Rudd of Dakar, Senegal became the bride of John Dockery of Washington, D.C. Saturday afternoon in First United Methodist Church of Hereford. Reverend Steve McElroy, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Homer and June Rudd of Rt. 5, Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Donald Dockery and Irene Buentello of Clarksville, Tenn. and Falls Church, Va., respectively.

Ficus trees accented with miniature white lights decorated the front of the church on each side and votive candles placed amid English ivy graced the side windows. Red bows marked the pews.

Matron of honor was Elizabeth Moynihan of Phoenix, Ariz., sister of the bride. Best man was Don Logan of McLean, Va.

Bridesmaids were Vaavia Rudd of Hereford, sister of the bride, and Melissa Knight of Falls Church, Va.

Groomsmen were David Veagan of College Station and Tony Dockery of Alexandria, Va., brother of the groom.

Ushering guests were Mike Ramirez of Falls Church, the groom's cousin, and Wesley Rudd of Hereford, the bride's brother, both of whom also served as candlelighters. Twin daughters of Hal Bennett and Betsy Bennett, Nancy and Rebecca Bennett, the bride's namesake, served as flower girls. The bride's nephew, Owen Robison, son of Jan and Colleen Robison, was ring bearer.

Music was provided by Elaine Calkins, primary organist, and Jan Walser, who accompanied violinist Dr. Virginia Kellogg, professor of violin at Texas Tech University. Such selections as Handel's "Sonata in A Major," "Ave Maria," Massenet's Meditation from the opera "Thais," and Purcell's "Trumpet Voluntary," the recessional, were presented.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white long, formal gown of imported bridal satin. Alencon lace enhanced the gown, which was fashioned with a Sabrina neckline adorned by fringed beadwork. The bodice was composed of a front yoke of sheer English net finished off with heavily-beaded Alencon lace; the yoke dipped into a low V in the back. The Basque waist formed points in front and back, where a bow marked the gown.

Elaborately beaded leg o'mutton sleeves culminated into bridal point cuffs which were bedecked with small covered buttons. The softly gathered full flowing skirt, touched off with a scalloped Alencon lace border, extended into a cathedral-length train. To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a chapel-length veil of bridal illusion attached to a beaded floral headpiece. She carried a cascading bouquet of Cymbidium orchids, white roses, baby's breath and English ivy. Earrings and an emerald ring comprised her jewelry.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length gowns of Christmas red moire taffeta. Each gown was styled with a dropped waist bodice topping a flared skirt; a bowl marked the low V-shaped back. Large ruffled sleeves further enriched the dresses. The bridal attendants carried miniscades of Cymbidium orchids and ivy.

A reception followed in the fellowship hall of the church. Sheila Barton of Dimmitt registered guests while Raquel Buentello and Donna Dockery of Falls Church, sisters of the groom, served cake. Punch was poured by Mary Slotton of Lubbock.

Potted plants and latticed screens beautified the reception area. Candelabra and a champagne fountain were featured, as were two cakes. The bride's four-tiered cake was garnished with fresh flowers while the chocolate groom's cake was decorated with the Texas A&M University seal.

The bride wore a pale yellow linen suit featuring a pleated skirt and matching yellow silk blouse as the couple embarked on a wedding trip to Jamaica. They will be at home after July 11 in Washington, D.C.

A graduate of Hereford High School, the bride received a bachelor's degree in music education with a specialization in violin from Texas Tech University. She is currently a special agent of the Bureau of Diplomatic Security, U.S. Department of State, presently assigned to the American Embassy in Dakar, Senegal.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Texas A&M University where he received a bachelor of business administration degree in marketing. He is a regional sales representative for Compugraphic Corporation in Arlington, Va.

Need for infant care up as new moms stay on the job

Last week's release of Census Bureau figures showing that 51 percent of mothers with children under a year old are now in the labor force came as no surprise in Texas.

"In 1986, the demand for infant care was cited as part of a crisis in Texas child care by the United Way of Texas Child Care Working Group," said Diane T. Welch, a home economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"In the past two years the needs have only increased, due to several factors which are sending or keeping the mothers of very young children in the labor force," she said.

"Given the economic conditions in Texas, many new mothers simply can't afford to leave their jobs."

"A significant percentage of the births are also occurring among women in their thirties who have invested heavily in a career and are reluctant to take too much time away from it," Welch said.

"After years of having two incomes, other families don't want to reduce their standard of living or may find it difficult to support their financial obligations on one income," said Welch, an Extension family life specialist at Texas A&M University.

Whatever the reasons for returning to work, new parents often face a difficult task in locating infant care. She said once they find it, quality should be a major concern.

"Minimum standards call for a loving caregiver and a clean, healthy, stimulating environment in which there are no more than five infants to one caregiver," said Welch.

"Parents should also be aware that consistency in caregiving is extremely important for infants, since it helps develop feelings of security," she said. "Research in child development indicates that infants should have no more than one primary caregiver other than the parents."

Welch said that since 35 percent of the labor force in Texas are parents with children under six, employers are becoming more involved in providing child care or child care information, referral and counseling services.

Curb painting project to begin

Beginning Saturday, July 9, the younger counterparts of Big Brothers/Big Sisters will start a fundraising effort in painting house numbers on curbs.

The fundraiser will continue through July 16 as Little Brothers and Little Sisters will join the bigger volunteers in knocking on the doors of Hereford's home owners asking if they can paint house numbers on curbs. Each participant will have a nametag identifying them with the local program.

"The board of directors, volunteers and Littles feel this can be an annual event to help raise money needed to continue the great services provided by this United Way agency," said Alva Lee Peeler, director of the program. "It can also be a project that most of the children served can participate in and feel they are able to contribute to their program."

The cost of one number on a curb will be $5 and for two curbs numbered it will be $8. To place your order and make sure you get your curb number refreshed with new paint, call 364-6171 between 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

Curb painters

Roger Eades, board president of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, and program participants Brian Halford and Michelle Emerson locate a map of Hereford that they plan to use for their upcoming curb painting project. The fundraiser will benefit the program, which is a United Way Agency. Hereford residents may have their curbs numbered from July 9-16, for minimal fee by calling 364-6171.

Betty Crocker Cooking Tips

Q. How do you prepare a clay pot for use in cooking? V.B., Centralia, WA

A. Each time you use a clay pot, soak it in water for 10 minutes. Never use soapy water on pot unless it's a glazed pot. Let cleaned pot air dry and store so that air circulates around the bottom and top to prevent mold growth.

Q. Can an extract be substituted for grated orange or lemon peel? Mrs. B.E. Casper, WY

A. Yes, although orange and lemon rind add color and texture in addition to flavor. Add about 1/4 teaspoon of extract or to suit your taste.

Do you have a question? Write Dear Betty Crocker, Box 1113, Dept. Betty, Minneapolis, MN 55440.

TIP OF THE WEEK: Store ground coffee in a tightly sealed container in the refrigerator or freezer.

Caro, Dalton exchange wedding vows Friday

Amarillo residents Tresa LaDene Caro and Timothy Dane Dalton, exchanged wedding vows Friday evening in Trinity Baptist Church of Amarillo. Officiating was the Rev. Marvin Kehl of First Baptist Church of Sentinel, Okla.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Caro of 410 E. Third and the groom is the son of Mrs. Harvey Dalton of Amarillo.

Cindy Caro of Hereford served her sister as maid of honor and Sidney Felton of Amarillo was the best man. Serving as bridesmaids were the bride's sister, Mrs. Sonie Beasley of Hereford, and Janet Howe of Canadian. Groomsmen were Mike Dalton of Amarillo, the groom's brother, and Tom Sours of Amarillo who also lit candles.

Karla Kehl of Sentinel vocalized "Somewhere Out There" accompanied by pianist, Paula Forrest of Canadian. The Trinity Jubilation Ringers played "Trumpet Voluntary" as the bride entered the church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a traditional floor-length candlelight gown designed with a candlelight lace bodice and a satin drop-waist skirt. The gown was further enhanced by a deep V-back with a satin bow accenting it.

In her hair, the bride wore a candlelight comb of matching flowers and beads with streamers of pearls and flowers trailing from the crown. She carried an all silk cascading arrangement of navy blue, peach and off-white roses made by her mother.

Bridal attendants wore tea-length navy blue crinkled crepe dresses fashioned with tailored bodices, drop waists, full skirts and above-the-elbow-length sleeves. Each carried a votive candle surrounded by navy, peach and off-white flowers.

The groom's sister, Vanessa Dalton of Amarillo, invited guests to register at the reception at the church.

Edwinna Truman, who served wedding cake at the bride's parents' marriage, served cake while punch and coffee were poured by Nancy Rihaly of Ohio and Bette Scroggins of Canadian. Michelle Dalton and Brenda Sours, both of Amarillo, presided at the groom's table. The cakes were made and decorated by the bride's mother.

The couple will make their home at 1513 Avondale in Amarillo.

The bride is a graduate of Eastern New Mexico University. She taught school for five years in Canadian and two years in Amarillo.

The groom graduated from West Texas State University and is currently employed as an engineer in Pampa.

Out-of-town guests included Pauline Caro of Grand Saline, Texas, Esther Ferrell of Dallas, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Green of Albuquerque, N.M., and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Townsend of Phoenix, Ariz.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I first arrived in Vietnam in July, 1968, I was a supply officer for an artillery battery. My clerk was an enlisted man. His name was Kevin Howard Dugan. He was from Blue Point, N.Y.

Kevin was extremely kind and helpful to this young, apprehensive first lieutenant. He was rather shy at first, but after a while he opened up and was one of the friendliest and nicest guys I had ever met. He was low-key, understated and extremely competent. Kevin never forgot a thing.

We were stationed at an isolated post, miles from the nearest city, and spent many long hours discussing New York, the Army, sports, and of course, talked endlessly about the meaning of life, death and war.

After 50 days I was transferred to another artillery battery in a town 17 miles away. Three weeks later Kevin was coming to pick up supplies and we planned to get together. I waited. Kevin never showed up. He was not a guy who would just fold out. I worried and thought about him a lot. I never heard from him again.

Last week as I stood in front of the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, I prayed that Kevin's name would not be there, but, of course, it was.

It is now 20 years later and I want to let Kevin's parents know that their son is remembered by this lieutenant as a kind, loving young man who went out of his way to be helpful. Everyone who worked with him respected his competence and willingness to do more than was expected.

Kevin would have made a terrific husband and father. What a shame that he never lived long enough to enhance the lives of so many people. His parents are aware of all this, of course, but I hope they will see my letter and get some pleasure out of knowing how much their son was admired and respected by all the men he served with.

Please Ann, help me convey this message to Kevin's parents through your column. Thank you.—Gil Noble, Vista, Calif.

DEAR GIL: I called the Blue Point, N.Y., long-distance operator in search of a relative of Kevin Howard Dugan. I spoke with several Dugans in that area. None was related to or knew Kevin Howard Dugan. I hope someone out there will recognize the name and alert Kevin's parents to your kind letter. If it happens, I'd love to know.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your reply to "Loving Husband in the Suburbs" (the "great" mate who cheated on his wife all through their marriage) made me mad. The guy did all he could to be a first-rate husband, including going into therapy, but you bashed him anyway.

Twenty years ago my wife, whom I also respected, admired and loved, informed me that she had had "a few affairs." I lost my cool, as what husband wouldn't. She became very upset. "After all" she told me, "women need a little variety, too." (I never cheated.)

We are still married and do our best to be good spouses and parents. But I wish she had kept her escapades to herself. I learned from experience that women have roving eyes as well as men, but they are much poorer sports about it.—Connecticut Cuckold

DEAR C.C.: You sound like a very decent fellow who deserves to be treated well. Your wife is lucky to have you and you can tell her I said so.

MRS. JOHNNIE CRAMER
...nee Mary Johnson

Former residents celebrate 50th wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. H.D. Blythe, Jr. celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a reception at Fifth Season Inn West in Amarillo Saturday, July 2.

Hosting the event were their daughters, Gale Malone of Ontario, Canada; Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Smith of Plainview; Mr. and Mrs. Dean Hudson of Arlington; and Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Sebastian of Lubbock.

H.D. Blythe Jr., married the former Claudia Flowers of Hobart, Okla. on July 24, 1938, in the parsonage of First Baptist Church, Hereford. They lived in Hereford for 25 years as Blythe was a self-employed transporter of milk from the area to distribution plants in Amarillo and Lubbock.

They later moved to Amarillo, then Lubbock and he was employed by Associated Milk Producers Inc. until 1971. Now residing in Amarillo, the couple are managers of T-Anchor Flea Market.

They have four daughters, nine grandchildren, and two great-granddaughters.

The home of Mrs. Pauline Thompson was the setting for the Saturday morning, July 2, wedding of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Johnson of Hereford and Mr. Johnnie Cramer of Meno, Okla. Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine officiated.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Opal Cramer of Meno.

A brass archway trimmed with greenery enhanced the home as the bride's daughter, Miss Jana Johnson, served as maid of honor and presented her mother into marriage. Best man was Dick Cramer of Washington, D.C., brother of the groom.

Deborah Kroll of Enid, Okla., daughter of the groom, provided organ music. Jana Johnson, the bride's daughter, sang "You Needed Me" and "Only God Could Love You More."

The bride wore a tailor-made silk jacquard crepe de chine street-length dress of aquamarine created by her mother. The maid of honor was attired in a pink embossed satin two-piece dress.

A reception following the ceremony was held in the home. Fay Kelley of Fort Worth, sister of the bride, served cake while Mrs. Bud Cramer of Dallas, the groom's sister-in-law, served punch. Guests were registered by Louise Watson of Bossier City, La.

The reception table, topped with a white lace cloth, was centered by a two-tiered wedding cake which was decorated with pink rosettes and topped with a bride and groom figurine. Pink punch was served from a crystal punch bowl.

The bride was dressed in a blue and white two-piece sport suit when the couple left for a wedding trip to Pagosa Springs, Colo. They will be at home after July 10 at Rt. 2, Hereford.

A resident of Hereford for 25 years, the bride is employed by Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department as a deputy.

A lifetime resident of Meno, Okla., the bridegroom has farming and ranching interests in Meno and Ames, Okla.

Out-of-town guests included Bob Green of Washington, D.C.; Mrs. Jackie Thompson of Amarillo; Ray Kroll of Enid, Okla.; and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Buller of Meno.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

James A. Michener's Alaska is at the top of our list this week. The book begins with the lives and struggles of humans and animals of prehistoric Alaska and then makes a leap into the 18th century.

Danish navigator Vitus Bering was appointed by Peter the Great to explore the lands that lay beyond the eastern coast of his empire in 1724. As a result the Alaskans came under the often cruel domination of the Russians. The Russian interest in Alaska lay more in the fur trade rather than colonization.

In 1867 for reasons not entirely clear, Alaska was sold to the U.S. for $7,200,000. This price was regarded by many in Congress, and the press, to be extremely high. Opinions began to change a great deal when gold was discovered.

The exciting Alaskan story comes to life with the gold rush either over forbidding Chilkoot Pass or up the Yukon to Dawson, on to Canada, and later to the Golden Beaches of Nome. The growth of the salmon industry; the discovery of oil; the construction of the Alcan Highway for the defense of the territory during World War II are all a part of this amazing story. The main emphasis deals with the historical events as they relate to the more than 100 characters, real and fictional.

Robert B. Parker's Crimson Joy is about a Boston private eye that is working to stop a serial killer that even the police are unable to catch. He is dubbed the "Red Rose Killer" because a long-stemmed red rose is left on each woman killed. Every female who must walk the streets after dark feels the threat of murder coming closer.

Soon after Spenser joins the chase the trail turns toward home, when a red rose is left for his own Susan Silverman. Hawk joins Spenser in the effort to keep Susan safe while the killer is tracked from Boston's "combat zone" to the suburbs.

Fear No Evil by Nathan Sharansky is an autobiography of Natan's remarkable story of nine years as a KGB prisoner. A computer specialist and Jew, Sharnasky became the spokesperson for the Moscow dissidents seeking to emigrate to Israel.

In 1973 Natan was denied an exit visa for the first time and the subsequent harassment by the KGB began; in 1974 Natan and his new bride of one day tried to leave for Jerusalem. Avital, his wife, was able to leave, but Natan's request was denied again. In March of 1977 Natan Sharansky was arrested on a Moscow street and thus at the age of 29 began a 16 month interrogation on a capital charge of treason. A team of KGB officers compile more than 50 volumes of "evidence" proving Sharansky to be an American Spy, a charge that is fundamentally false.

He is then tried and sentenced to 13 years in prison. How did Natan Sharansky survive? "They cannot humiliate me" he told himself, "Only I can humiliate me." This principal helped him through years of solitary confinement, freezing punishment cells, and excruciating hunger strikes. Avital worked tirelessly for her husband's release, gaining support worldwide. Fear No Evil is filled with humor and wit.

I wish you all a safe and happy holiday over the 4th and hope to see you soon. The Summer Reading Club program for July 5th is a film entitled Flight of the Navigator. All children with last names beginning with the letters A-M are scheduled to see the film at 9 a.m. in the library's Heritage Room. Children with last names beginning with the letters N-Z are scheduled to see the film at 2 p.m.

Life is not Garry Shandling's Show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the beginning, they were one, but more and more Garry Shandling the character is leading a life apart from Garry Shandling the actor.

Originally, events from Shandling's real life provided the comic fodder for "It's Garry Shandling's Show," which he calls a cross between a situation comedy and "Outer Limits."

The set was built to look like Shandling's house in the Hollywood Hills and his real-life experiences — from girlfriend trouble to a dotting mother — were exaggerated and given a comic twist.

Now, he says, "We've broken away from real life. We've had some hypothetical situations I've never been in. I draw on attitudes, but we create things and then imagine what it would be like to go through that."

"It's Garry Shandling's Show" began nearly two years ago on the Showtime pay channel. Since March 6, it's been seen on both Showtime and on Fox Broadcasting Co., at least 30 days later. The show is currently out of production because of the writers' strike.

The pickup by Fox was a coup for the struggling fourth network, which needed a prestige comedy show for its Sunday lineup. It also gives Shandling, a regular substitute host for Johnny Carson on NBC's "The Tonight Show," some additional prime-time exposure.

There is one frustrating element about the Fox pickup. "People are seeing shows from a year and a half ago," Shandling says. "Our new shows are much better. We're not making the mistakes we made in the beginning. Fox will catch up in the fall and then be only 30 days behind."

Shandling's show, acclaimed as the best comedy show by the Television Critics Association, was turned down by the networks.

Perhaps the reason was that the show defies most of the conventions of situation comedy. In fact, it's a sendup of the whole genre. It's like one of those clocks with a glass face so that you can see all the working parts. On this show, you not only see all the working parts, you see a few that don't work.

In the manner of George Burns and Jack Benny, Shandling knocks down the fourth wall and talks to the audience. It's a show within a show.

The comedy was created by Shandling and producer Alan Zweibel and the two write most of the shows.

"Alan and I adamantly watch the direction of each episode," he says. "We write jokes between scenes. When we write a script I usually write the first draft and he rewrites it. Then he writes the draft of the next script and I rewrite it."

He says he and Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, sometimes joke about the fact that NBC turned down the show.

"I've known Brandon since I became a TV writer in 1975," he says. "I think he didn't want a show that was so risky and broke so many rules."

Shandling, who grew up in Tucson, Ariz., moved to Los Angeles in 1972 and began writing for such shows as "Sanford and Son" and "Welcome Back, Kotter." He made his first appearance as a stand-up comic at the Comedy Store in Los Angeles in 1975.

"I'd go on stage and bomb and go back to writing," he says. "I had a cycle going. Finally, I did well one night. I said it's time to make the switch. Still, I have a writer's identity. I have a strong writer's head."

His big break as a comedian came with his first time on "The Tonight Show" in 1981.

Next up is "It's Garry Shandling's Show," which he and Zweibel will write. "Creatively, it scares us both," says Shandling. "It's not going to be an extension of the television show. But it will be as offbeat."

Dysart in cliffhanger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Dysart, the judicial patriarch on NBC's "L.A. Law," finds himself in a cliffhanger romance with a younger woman because of the writers strike.

Dysart's character, Leland McKenzie, has become the object of the affections of a somewhat aggressive third-year UCLA law student.

Had not the Writers Guild of America walked out on March 7, the romantic dilemma might have been resolved before the end of the season. But the strike forced "L.A. Law" to end the season without making its final two episodes.

"You can say Leland became the cliffhanger by chance," Dysart says. "He was approached by this lovely young lady. She's a law student and the granddaughter of one of our clients."

The young woman, played by Dana Sparks of CBS' "Falcon Crest," is separated from McKenzie by more than 30 years.

"I don't know what's going to happen," Dysart says. "The writers can't do anything because of the strike. I don't know if she's coming back next season or if they'll just drop it."

Clearly, Dysart is delighted that his character is involved in a romance, even a May-December one. Although the head of the law firm of McKenzie, Brackman, Chaney and Kuzak, he has been somewhat of an enigma. His character has not yet been explored as deeply as some of the others.

Dysart, who has a hearing problem, suggested that he wear his two hearing aids in a show in which he went into court in an age discrimination case. Since then, he wears the hearing aids in court. Michael Kuzak, played by Harry Hamlin, is (See DYSART, Page 8B)

Yesso in first-ever role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Yesso, who'd never acted before, was offered a role on the TV series "Frank's Place" when he met the producer of the show while flying from New Orleans to Los Angeles to look for a coaching job.

Yesso plays Shorty, an assistant cook at the Chez Louisianne run by Tim Reid in the critically acclaimed series. The show is not on the CBS fall schedule, but the network says it definitely will return when an "advantageous time slot" can be found.

Hugh Wilson, the creator-producer of "Frank's Place," was struck by Yesso's wit, gift of gab and a New Orleans accent as thick as gumbo. He figured it would be easier to teach Yesso how to act than to teach a professional actor how to talk like a resident of New Orleans' Ninth Ward. The accent, which is not quite Cajun or Southern, is more akin to Brooklynese.

"I live here now," Yesso says. "I like this stuff. I like being a thespian."

Yesso, a mixture of Italian, French and American Indian, grew up near the Irish Channel, about two or three miles from downtown New Orleans. He graduated from Louisiana State University, where he played football at LSU and was an NCAA weightlifting champion.

He also worked as a bartender, manager of various nightclubs, a sales representative and owner of a "down-home" delicatessen. His only previous brush with the movie business came during college when he had a non-speaking role as a bodyguard in a movie about Huey P. Long.

He tells how he met Wilson on a flight to the West Coast:

"Hugh came walking down the aisle of the plane and saw my cigarette. He'd quit smoking 43 days earlier and asked for a cigarette. He sat down and we had a drink and started talking about New Orleans. Then he said he didn't know if he could work it out, but how would I like to work on TV. I thought he was joking."

"I had to send in a photo and a resume. I sent them a Polaroid snapshot. I stood on the sidewalk and waved. I looked like Tommy Tourist. Hugh kept telling CBS it was easier to teach me how to act than to teach an actor how to talk like I do. When he told me I had the job I went out and bought three books on acting. Two of them I couldn't read."

Yesso says he found his role as Shorty somewhat easy because he had grown up in a neighborhood similar to that in "Frank's Place."

"It's supposed to be hard to look natural in front of a camera," he says. "I hate to sound cocky, but it came easy to me. I guess I was lucky. I think Shorty and I are pretty interchangeable. He's a little slow, but there's something about him. The way I try to portray him is that he's a sensitive, lovable guy. A man's man that the women find appealing."

Besides acting, Yesso wrote the Christmas show last year. He has ideas for several more shows and is working on story ideas for other series. He is also under consideration for roles in several feature films.

Apparently Johnny Carson is also taken with Yesso, who was recently on "The Tonight Show" for his fourth appearance.

"The last time I was on, I had all my friends in the audience," he says. "Johnny found out about it later and said, 'Why didn't you tell me? I'd have brought them on stage.'"

Even Carson finds it hard to resist friends named Stormin' Norman, Bucket, the Dude, Dr. Vinny Boombah and his girlfriend, BooBoo II.

DYSART

the only one in the law firm who knows about the hearing aids.

The series is the first for Dysart, who has spent most of his career on the stage. On Broadway, he created the role of the coach in Jason Miller's Pulitzer Prize-winning play "That Championship Season." He has also had parts in a number of movies, including the recent hit "Wall Street."

Dysart recently returned to Boston, where his alma mater, Emerson College, awarded him an honorary doctor of laws degree. He also returned to his home in Maine to visit his ailing father and get in a few days of fly fishing for land-locked salmon and rainbow trout.

He got married last Labor Day to Kathryn Jacobi, a figurative contemporary artist. He was married twice before and has no children. His new wife, a widow, has a 19-year-old son. She is currently illustrating a new book on Charles Dickens.

Dysart gave little thought to acting as he was growing up in the Kennebec Valley in Maine. He worked on the local radio station, but when he got to Emerson his interest changed to acting. Later, he spent four years in the Air Force in Washington, handling assignments for investigators with the Office of Special Investigations. He returned to Emerson to get his master's, then headed for New York.

"Off-Broadway was just getting under way about that time," he says. "I worked at the Circle in the Square Theater at Sheridan Square."

"In the 1960s I got interested in repertory theater and was one of the founding members of the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco. Actually, we founded it in Pittsburgh, but we moved to San Francisco in 1967."

After a year in San Francisco he returned to New York to appear with George C. Scott in a revival of "The Little Foxes."

Dysart got his first movie role while in San Francisco through his friendship with Scott. The movie was

"Petulia" in 1968. He also appeared with Scott in "Hospital," "Hindenburg," "The Last Days of Gen. Patton," and Scott's television series "East Side, West Side."

He played Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in the Patton movie and in a BBC production called "Churchill and the Generals." He plays President Harry Truman in the upcoming ABC miniseries "War and Remembrance" and in July will play Truman again in the CBS movie "Day One." That film is about the making of the atomic bombs and the decision to drop them on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

VIDEO VIRTUE

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Trust is the basis of all company activities.

That's the message of a videotape being distributed to Phillips Petroleum units as part of the company's continuing ethics awareness program. The tape is intended as a springboard for employee discussions.

DRINKING HABITS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A University of Michigan study has found a father's drinking habits during the month of conception can be just as significant as a mother's in affecting the health of an infant at birth.

Health magazine says fathers who described themselves as "regular drinkers (two drinks a day) had children who were, on average, 6.4 ounces lighter than those born to occasional drinkers. The mother's drinking habits, in comparison, affected birth weight by only 2.2 ounces.

Heart disease can put you in a grave situation.

Heart disease, stroke and related disorders pose a very grave threat. In fact, they kill nearly as many Americans as all other causes combined. At the American Heart Association, we have some simple suggestions that could reduce your risk of cardiovascular disease. Don't smoke. Reduce the fat and cholesterol in your diet. And keep high blood pressure under control. To do otherwise could be a very grave mistake.

Watch Point about Marijuana

(Information provided by We Are The Caring Helpers)

Annual surveys show growing numbers of youngsters smoking marijuana more frequently and at younger ages.

Factors that contribute to increasing use are the ready availability of marijuana and its paraphernalia, open promotion and merchandising, and both peer and environmental pressures. The marijuana used today is 10-20 times stronger than that available a decade ago.

Marijuana's main psychoactive ingredient is fat-soluble, with a half-life of five days; the drug's effects are cumulative. The individual response is dose-related and ranges from mild intoxication to hallucination. Some signs of marijuana use are apparent during intoxication, but detecting subtle signs of chronic smoking requires a probing history and family interview.

Personal health risks of adolescents include:

Psychomotor performance—Studies show that marijuana at moderate to high levels of use impairs driving and related skills. Subjects showed delayed reaction time in responding to "stop" and "go" signals, slowed decision-making concerning driving judgement, and difficulty in dividing attention between following a vehicle at a safe distance and identifying potential dangers. Smokers also experienced distortion in their sense of time and movement and noted perceptual changes.

pulmonary and cardiac effects—Chronic bronchitis may threaten the marijuana smoker; the potency of some of today's marijuana surpasses that of hashish. Delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), the main psychoactive ingredient in marijuana, increases heart rate and accelerates development of angina.

endocrine and reproductive—In women, THC produced a dose-related inhibition of ovarian function with a decrease in gonadotropic hormones. In men, THC produced impaired spermatogenesis and decreased testosterone levels. psychosocial—For adolescents marijuana use has negative effects on motivation, intellectual performance, and family life. It alters emotional response and personality development, producing an amotivational syndrome of diminishing energy and initiative. The behavioral profile of chronic users is marked by goallessness, confusion, hostility toward authority, and withdrawal. Studies in man have demonstrated marijuana's interference with memory, judgment, and learning ability.

brain-EEG shows changes in humans during acute marijuana intoxication including nerve degeneration.

Recognizing the chronic marijuana smoker can be done by observing; bloodshot eyes (rarely seen because of use of eyedrops); cough; chest pain; irregular menstruation and/or amenorrhea; poor grooming, mental changes, irritability, memory lapses; personality changes; paranoid thinking, mood shifts (passivity to aggressiveness); fatigue; difficulty with speech; and changes in eating habits, Key points in the family interview include:

deteriorating school performance (possibly due to impaired intellectual function); absentmindedness, forgetting thoughts in midsentence; stereo addiction (preoccupation with sensory input); secretiveness; alienation and withdrawal; and circumstantial evidence, such as drug paraphernalia, friendships with known drug-users, unexplained losses of money in the home. Helping the chronic user might include providing current information about marijuana's effects to the patient and parents; encourage discussion and questions. Learn as much as possible about the patient's drug usage. Stress the need to keep the young user off marijuana for three months.

Give support to the family, and if necessary, arrange for referral to a drug treatment center, hospital, support group, or psychiatrist. Work with school and community groups toward prevention through educating the young.

Student support group (SOS) meets each Thursday at 7 p.m. at HHS; the parent support groups meet second Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Community Center Lounge.
