That's the ticket

Dukakis-Bentsen becomes official tonight

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Dukakis, whose methodical marathon turned into his own Massachusetts miracle, accepts the presidential nomination tonight at a unified Democratic Party that senses victory in the air.

Dukakis, harvesting what he had reaped in the primaries, clinched his party's nod Wednesday night at a convention celebration where he was hailed by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton as possessing "the vision America needs at this moment in our journey."

Now, just 10 days after a blowup over Dukakis' selection of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas as Dukakis' running mate, the convention's next order of business is Bentsen's formal nomination and acceptance tonight, giving the Democrats a ticket considerably less liberal than has become customary.

The frictions touched off by the choice of Bentsen, and by Dukakis' failure to notify Jackson first, once threatened to raise a Jackson challenge for second place, a job he said he wanted.

But in the determined spirit of harmony that guided this convention, that seemed forgotten.

With no suspense about the outcome, the delegate tally Wednesday night reached 2,876.25 for Dukakis to 1,218.5 for Jesse Jackson before Jackson released his delegates to make the nomination unanimous.

So tonight belongs to Dukakis to deliver an acceptance speech setting the theme for his campaign to break an eight-year GOP lock on the White House and defeat Vice President

George Bush, the sure nominee of the Republican Party.

In the long battle of primary elections, Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, outlasted six other opponents and won 22 of 36 states. He promised to extend nationally the "Massachusetts miracle" of economic prosperity that has blessed his home state.

Dukakis showed little emotion when the nomination finally became his during a late-night convention roll call Wednesday.

"We want Mike," thousands of delegates roared. They waved a sea of signs. They would have danced if there had been room in the narrow aisles.

"It's all a little bit like a play. I feel terrific," Dukakis said, watching on television at a nearby hotel's penthouse with his wife, Kitty, and family.

He smiled and raised his fist in victory as California delegates gave him the winning margin.

When campaign aide Joe Warren addressed him as, "Mr. President," Dukakis responded, "Careful, Joe — you don't want to put the evil eye on me."

Dukakis and Bentsen came to this convention city with a modest lead in the polls over Bush, who calls himself the underdog. With the intense publicity of this week, the Democrats look for a boost in the ratings, if only temporarily.

Democrats believe Bush, unlike President Reagan, is vulnerable, given the voters' concern over the Iran-Contra scandal and illegal drug trafficking and what the polls say is a broad uneasiness over the nation's economic prospects.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who doggedly resisted overtures to enter the race, said Dukakis-Bentsen "is a winning combination if I ever saw one."

Dukakis' aides said his speech tonight would be "an effort to distill the essence" of his candidacy.

"For much of the public that will be watching this speech, it will be the first serious look at who Michael Dukakis is and where he wants to take this country," said Christopher Edley, the campaign's issues director.

Dukakis' cousin, Academy Award-winning actress Olympia Dukakis, will introduce the nominee.

Dukakis was formally nominated by fellow Gov. Clinton, whose 35-minute speech ran way beyond the 15 minutes allotted. One of his biggest ovations came when he said, "In closing . . ."

Clinton described Dukakis as old-fashioned, "the kind of man who plays it straight, keeps his word and pays his bills."

In a cause weighted with symbolism, Jackson was put in nomination by union chief William Winpisinger, who described him as one "who has ignited the passionate fires of justice in our souls."

"Not since Hubert H. Humphrey has a presidential candidate elevated the aspirations of workers and championed their quest for worker rights to such heights in the mainstream political dialogue," said Winpisinger, head of the International Association of Machinists.

For the second straight night, the convention center was closed because of overcrowding. A number of delegates were caught outside, including Ann Richards, the Texas state treasurer who delivered the convention's keynote speech Monday night.

Greenawalt outlines HLC

Hereford school superintendent Charles Greenawalt told the Hereford Lions Club that the Hereford Learning Center has already established five classes to be offered this fall, and is making final arrangements with Amarillo College and West Texas State University for other classes in September.

"We are in the process of working with Texas State Technical Institute to implement five skill courses this fall," Greenawalt told the club Wednesday. "We will meet with AC this Friday to finalize their fall classes."

TSTI's fall offerings will include construction technology, truck driving, welding, auto body repair, and auto mechanics.

AC will provide instruction in a variety of college-level courses as well as specialized adult learning classes. Unlike its former nighttime-only schedule, AC will offer at least a few classes during the day. Both TSTI and AC will utilize the former Stanton Junior High. Much of that building will be vacant in the fall with the consolidation of Stanton with LaPlata Junior High to form Hereford Junior High on the LaPlata campus.

Greenawalt retraced the formation of the Hereford Learning Center. "When the Department of Energy was here, and the Waste Deposit Impact Committee and the Economic Development Strategy Council, they identified a lack of a system to update job training skills," Greenawalt explained.

"The Hereford Industrial Foundation then became involved, and they along with the Texas Employment Commission and several state and local agencies came up with the original plan.

"They formed a board in October which currently has nine people (Greenawalt is the board's chairman) that identified 10 areas in which there is an immediate need for further education or re-education.

"We decided to expand the program beyond job training skills to become a total community education concept. A person's education never really stops — there is always an area to improve in. We also believe that the schools belong to the community, and the community should have the opportunity to use the schools.

"The Hereford school district is excited about this program. It is limited only by the imagination, by the needs expressed to us by the community. It will grow as the community wants it to grow. It will build up slowly, but it will grow as people see a need for the program."

North target of Libyan plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver L. North was the target of a potential assassination plot that involved one of eight men charged with illegal pro-Libyan activities in the United States, an administration source says.

The man, Mousa Hawamda, is a

naturalized American who was identified Wednesday at an arraignment hearing for six of those arrested in the alleged scheme, which prosecutors said involved diversion of Libyan funds to support anti-American activities.

Hawamda was described as a Libyan intelligence operative who operates under the guise of a Washington travel agency owner.

U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson said that based on information received by the FBI, Hawamda "was involved in a potential plot to assassinate a high government official of the United States." Hudson did not identify the official or give any other details.

But another official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the target was North, a former National Security Council aide and a major player in the Iran-Contra arms and money scandal.

North, who was fired from his NSC post in November 1986 over allegations that he illegally funneled money to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, masterminded counterterrorism operations against Libya, including the April 1986 aerial bombing of Tripoli.

During the congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra affair, North said threats against his life had prompted him to install a security fence around his home.

The eight who were arrested Wednesday by the FBI were brought before judges and ordered held without bail pending detention hearings later this week. Six of the men appeared with their hands and feet bound by chains before a U.S. magistrate in nearby Alexandria, Va.; another one was being held in Detroit; and the eighth was picked up in Denver.

Hudson said defendant Saleh Mohamed Guima Al-Rajhi, 32, had given the Libyan government a list of U.S. officials who may have been involved in the 1986 U.S. bombing of Libya. The prosecutor said this was done for the purpose of retaliation by Libya.

"This is a rare case, a sensitive case involving national security," Hudson told the magistrate. He said the prosecution had obtained much of the information leading to the arrests from informants whose lives were in danger.

"Our intention is to try and protect them as long as possible," Hudson said.

Six of the eight arrested were described as members of the People's Committee for Libyan Students, based in McLean, Va. The other two were the owner of the Manara Travel Agency and an agent for the company, according to the FBI.

All were charged with violating a license allowing the student organization to provide financial support for Libyan students in the United States and Canada.

The prosecution alleged that the organization diverted funds to pay for some 200 Americans, among them Black Muslims and Indians, to travel to Libya for anti-American demonstrations.

The violations carry a possible penalty of five years imprisonment and up to a $250,000 fine.

The other defendants are: the student committee's chairman, Milad Shibani, 34; former chairman Salem Omar Zubeidy, 39, a graduate student at the University of Michigan; Mahdi Mohammad Abousetta, 35; Ramadan Taher Belgasem, 33; Adel Ali Sennosi, 30; and Manhal Ben Mohamed, 23, a travel agent working for Hawamda.

All the organization members told the magistrate they were registered as full-time students.

Clements sees rapid recovery

AUSTIN (AP) — Recuperating from a mild stroke that briefly impaired his vision and speech, Gov. Bill Clements says he feels fine and wants to return to work soon.

"I don't think it will have any impact whatsoever on my activities," Clements said when asked if he would cut down on his workload, political campaigning or tennis games. "I feel great. I feel real good."

The doctor "was very emphatic that he could resume a normal routine, which I think is good news," added first lady Rita Clements.

The 71-year-old governor, interviewed briefly in his hospital room on Wednesday, described the stroke he suffered Monday night and joked that the Democratic National Convention may have caused his illness.

Clements admitted himself to Seton Medical Center on Tuesday evening. He said doctors told him it appeared that a small blood clot had formed and passed into the lower left quarter of his brain, causing problems in his right eye and with his speech.

"It impacted the vision in my right eye. It also impacted my speech. That, then, was gone the next (Tuesday) morning," he said.

"I've never had anything like this before. Apparently, a lot of people have this sort of thing and never recognize or sense that there's anything of a serious nature about it."

Clements said problems developed while he was reading the biography of a West Texas pioneer after having watched the opening session of the Democratic convention on television. "That Democratic convention may have made this happen. I don't know," the Republican governor chuckled.

Physicians who were treating the governor weren't talking to news reporters Wednesday, preferring to wait until results of all tests were known before discussing the case, said hospital spokeswoman M.A. Bengtson.

However, Ms. Bengtson said the governor underwent a CAT scan Tuesday night and was given cardiovascular and neurological tests Wednesday.

"It was a very small, very tiny clot that passed through the heart and into the back quadrant of the brain. And it just dissolved," she said. "That was what was causing the visual impairment, and as the clot went away . . . it just took about a 24-hour period. As that clot was beginning to dissolve, the symptoms began to dissipate."

Clements said the only medicine he was taking was aspirin, which doctors say acts as an anti-coagulant. Ms. Bengtson said Clements' blood pressure and temperature were being monitored every two hours.

Clements was listed in good condition late Wednesday, said hospital spokeswoman Cheryl McEntire.

Clements received numerous flower arrangements, two of his favorite flavors of ice cream and a telegram from President Reagan among greetings from well-wishers, said George Bayoud, the governor's chief of staff.

Bayoud read the Reagan telegram: "Nancy and I were sorry to learn you have been spending some time in the hospital. But we were heartened by reports that you are well on the mend. We're keeping you in our thoughts and prayers. President's orders: Get well soon."

Bayoud said the governor had taken care of some state business from his hospital room Wednesday. The two discussed the possible appointment of a public utility commissioner, a judge and jail overcrowding problems, Bayoud said.

Dressed in blue hospital pajamas and a multi-colored robe, Clements sat on a sofa with his wife and talked with a few reporters for about 10 minutes.

"The results are excellent, and I feel very fortunate that it was just a temporary situation," the governor said.

He said the doctors hadn't yet told him what might have caused the stroke.

Press secretary Reggie Bashur said Clements still hoped to be able to attend a prison groundbreaking ceremony scheduled for Friday in Amarillo.

Babbling Brooks

I read in the Wall Street Journal that the folks who bring you all of those marvelous television commercials are bringing back some of our old favorites.

For instance, there will be Captain Raid, kids who like Armour hot dogs, Captain Midnight pushing (yuk!) Ovaltine, Nobody doesn't like Sara Lee, and people who are glad they use Dial.

It won't be the same old commercials, though. Captain Raid will be updated to look like Arnold Schwarzenegger spraying a roach because Maria Shriver can't sweep the kitchen. Course, women who look like Mrs. Schwarzenegger shouldn't even know where the broom is located.

Instead of a bunch of kids singing that silly but simple hot dog sing-along, the ad folks in Nu Yoak Sitty are going to give it a "Bruce Springsteen" sound. I would s'pose they're going to be roasting their weenies to the sound of the song "I'm On Fire."

Instead of people just falling into a pool to take the Nestea plunge, they're going to use special effects. The ideas include a pretty little lady, who has been sprayed with water to look like she has been exercising, falling backward onto her exercise mat. As soon as she hits the pad, it turns into a swimming pool.

I guess we will see.

The old commercials made new will be about the only new creations with which we will be blessed on the television, because the writers will be on strike until Doomsday. NBC is grateful for this, because they will have the Summer Olympics, baseball, and other little goodies. They are also reviving some old shows that were cancelled because we didn't like them but for which they still have scripts hanging around.

There are also reruns, of course, and programs which are sold only through syndication that could pop up on your three-letter network during prime time. And what's wrong with a few more "specials"?

There are all kinds of specials hanging around out there:

"Let's Find Something Humorous About Mike Dukakis." It could be a sequel of "Mission: Impossible."

"Humorous Sleeping Habits."

"Jeopardy: The Categories We Don't Use." David Letterman had a good one on this: "Things Found Wadded Up in Napkins."

But what I can hardly wait for is the debate season, when Mike and George square off. Yawwwwww!

Wake me up when it's over.

bb
I have figured out why all of these surveys say they are "based on a poll of 1,234 persons."

It is because the other 230 million Americans hang up on them.

After years of research, the pollsters, insurance and siding salesmen, and all of the other folks who call you to sell you something have discovered that these 1,234 people will talk to you about anything. Everyone else hangs up on them.

These folks don't mind getting a phone call from Poughkeepsie within 30 seconds of the time they just sat down at the supper table.

"Is this Mr. Freddie Fingernose?"

"Yowsir. Is this Billy from Whatcherthinkin'?"

"No, Mr. Fingernose, I'm Ernie. Billy's had to have reconstructive ear surgery after someone fired a gun into the phone last Saturday afternoon. He woke up a guy who was taking a nap."

"That's too bad. I always liked talking to Billy. He had a certain flair when it came to reading those canned questions. But I guess he kinda looks like that there Frenchy painter — whatshisname, Van Goff?"

"It's Van Go, Mr. Fingernose."

"Oh, and please call me Freddie, Mr. Fingernose is too formal."

"OK, Freddie. Let's get it going. Now tell me, are you planning to vote this November?"

"Wait. Who's payin' fer this here poll?"

"Apathy International."

"What's apathy?"

"It means you don't care."

"In that case, no, I'm not voting."

"And may I ask why you're not voting?"

"I don't know? What's a good answer?"

"How about, 'It won't make any difference?'"

"Sounds good, Ernie."

"Now, if you were voting, who would you vote for?"

"I don't know, whaddaya think."

"Let's see... How about, 'I haven't taken the time to study the candidates?'"

"Yeh, Ernie, put that down."

"Now for our final question. What do you think is the reason people are apathetic?"

"It's because they let other people make up their minds for them, Ernie. No original thinking."

Food: Sulfites could be deadly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer health group is criticizing the Food and Drug Administration for proposing to allow continued use of sulfites, which the group says can make food deadly to more than a million Americans.

An unpublished memo from FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young rejects proposals to outlaw the preservative chemicals in foods not now covered by a limited ban and to require labeling of sulfite-containing foods served in restaurants.

The memo to Health and Human Services Director Otis Bowen, obtained by The Associated Press on Wednesday, proposes to keep sulfites in the category "GRAS," or "generally recognized as safe." A ban on their use on fresh fruits and vegetables would remain in effect and a further ban applying to previously exempted fresh potatoes is expected by the end of the year.

The partial ban went into effect in 1986 primarily to prevent the use of sulfites in salad bars, where it was used to keep lettuce crisp and to make other vegetables and fruit look fresher.

Young's memo said that a 1987 sulfite labeling requirement for some packaged foods would be extended to additional items, but they would not include dehydrated or frozen potatoes, which would remain exempt.

The chemicals, which have been used in foods for decades and more recently in some drugs to protect their potency, are considered harmless to most people.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, or CSPI, said Wednesday that the FDA's position endangers up to a million asthmatics and others who have severe reactions to sulfites, including the possibility of death within hours after ingesting food containing the chemicals.

The center, a privately funded consumer health group, says sulfites have caused comas, brain damage and at least five deaths.

Mitch Zeller, staff attorney for the consumer group, predicted that the FDA's position would be approved by the Department of Health and Human Services, saying it "does so little and bends over backwards to placate the food industry."

The memo asks for action on the proposed regulations by July 30.

Young's memo, which FDA spokesman Chris Lecos said was not meant to be made public until the proposed regulations are approved, acknowledges that many new uses have been found for sulfites and that "a significant number of individuals" have experienced "severe allergic-type responses."

Other FDA officials have estimated that sulfites are dangerous to about 10 percent of the 10 million people in the United States with asthma and to a small number of non-asthmatics, according to Lecos.

But the FDA maintains the reaction is essentially allergic and does not justify an all-out ban of the chemicals in food or drugs.

The memo says "the available safety data" does not support a complete ban or an extension to foods other than those already covered, except for fresh potatoes.

Restaurant labeling would be "labor intensive and difficult to enforce," the memo says, adding that it would require regular inspection of over 500,000 eating establishments.

Lecos said the FDA had no comment on the memo. Other officials acknowledged the existence of the memo and proposed regulations but said it was not for public release. The AP obtained a copy from a source outside the agency.

Letter fruitful for Texan

ATLANTA (AP) — Donna Alexander's previous letter to politicians always brought form-letter replies. But her letter to Texas Treasurer Ann Richards got a personal response on national television.

"I felt kind of embarrassed a little bit," said Ms. Alexander, who watched the Monday night keynote speech while wrapping up a Tupperware party at her Lorena, Texas, home.

In her speech, Ms. Richards quoted at length from Ms. Alexander's letter to her about the difficulties faced by "average" families. The letter was written on a lunch break after Ms. Alexander heard that families would be the key note in the keynote speech.

"For a number of years, I've wondered if people like us are forgotten. We're not the poor and we're not the rich. We're not the very young or the aged. We're the average American family," she told Ms. Richards in the letter.

The Alexanders earn about $50,000 a year and have difficulty making ends meet for them and their three children, she said. She is an administrator at a mental retardation treatment facility. Her husband Joe is a telephone installer.

Ms. Alexander, 39, said she was inspired last year after hearing Ms. Richards speak at a meeting of mental retardation professionals. It was a speech that rekindled her interest in politics.

"It was like sitting at my coffee table talking with somebody over a cup of coffee, like she was speaking right to me. She was so dynamic, yet so warm. I knew right then I had found a new hero," Ms. Alexander said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

She gave Ms. Richards permission to quote from the letter, but only if her name would not be used.

"When the word Lorena came on, everybody was surprised. I'm not sure if I said something or if Joe or (daughter) Robin pointed at me or if I raised my hand. It was like, 'Oh, my gosh,'" Ms. Alexander said.

"I imagine I was in total shock. My knees were weak. Here was my hero talking straight at me," she said.

"It's been a long time since I had a hero," she added, calling John and Robert Kennedy her last heroes.

"I was shocked that she used so much of the letter," Ms. Alexander said.

Officer shot after pleading with gunman to spare him

HOUSTON (AP) — Police described the shooting of a vice officer who pleaded with the gunman for his life as a "cold-blooded execution."

Homicide investigators late Wednesday said they had no new leads and have made no arrests in the case.

However, they said their investigation has been aided because 30 minutes before Officer Elston Howard was shot late Tuesday night at a 24-hour bookstore, a suspect went to another nearby bookstore and robbed it. Police say that suspect had the same description as the man who shot Howard.

Howard, 26, was behind the counter with a clerk at the Mr.

Peepers adult bookstore in southwest Houston issuing a citation when the gunman walked in, police spokesman Dan Turner said Wednesday.

The gunman "noticed the officer was wearing a (Houston police) raid jacket and at that point shot the officer at least twice," Turner said.

After the gunman fired, the officer attempted to struggle with the armed suspect, police spokesman Al Baker said.

"The officer fell to the ground and as he was laying on the ground, begging the suspect not to shoot at him anymore, the suspect fired again," he said.

"It was just a straight, cold-blooded execution," homicide Sgt.

John Silva said.

"(The gunman) was in the process of conducting an aggravated robbery and the last thing he expected to see was an HPD officer," Silva said. "So, instead of bailing out, he just went ahead and shot the officer."

The gunman then robbed the clerk, telling him, "Give me the money or you're going to be next," Silva said. The man fled in a vehicle with a small amount of cash.

Silva said witnesses told police the gunman stood over Howard as the officer begged him not to shoot again, but the gunman shot anyway.

Howard was rushed to Ben Taub Hospital but was dead on arrival. Baker said the officer's partner was outside in the police vehicle following proper procedure and did not hear the gunshots.

Capt. Dennis Richards of the vice division said Howard "was very enthusiastic. There wasn't any assignment that you could give him that you knew was not going to be handled to the best of his abilities. He was a very capable officer."

Howard, who was engaged to be married in two weeks, had been with the police department for five years and is the first Houston police officer killed in the line of duty in six years.

In order to save money for his upcoming marriage, Howard had been moonlighting as a security guard at a bank.

Now You're Cooking

By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

Call it fate or call it kismet, Patricia Sarchet knows what good luck can bring since she met her husband through chance.

"I met Jeff at a mystery dance contest while we were attending Oklahoma State University. Numbers were drawn to determine dance partners; he was my partner. It was the first time I had ever seen him, but as luck would have it, we wound up getting married!" she laughed.

A native of Bluejacket, Okla., Sarchet graduated from high school there and attended Northeast Oklahoma A&M, a junior college, before acquiring a degree in elementary education from OSU. She teaches fifth grade at West Central School while husband Jeff is a veterinarian at Hereford Veterinary Clinic.

His job brought him to Hereford almost three years ago; she has resided here for two years. "We've found very nice and friendly people in Hereford and we enjoy the lower humidity." Two Himalayan cats, Josie and Prissy, complete the Sarchet household.

The Sarchets attend First United Methodist Church; she is a member of Alpha Iota Mu chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority and Texas Classroom Teachers Association. Teaching school fulltime nine months of the year leaves Sarchet little time for extracurricular activities, but sewing, counted cross stitch, planting flowers and gardening top her list of hobbies.

Cooking in the Sarchet home provides the petite, brown-eyed brunette with another creative outlet. "I am an experimental cook; I like to throw things together. Now I am really into Italian and Mexican food, but we eat all types of food."

She admits to having a penchant for bacon and tomato sandwiches made with fresh garden tomatoes. "That's one thing I miss here; the growing season for tomatoes is earlier in Oklahoma and I have to wait longer for them in this area." Sarchet also enjoys freezing and canning fresh produce.

Taught by her grandmother and mother to cook, Sarchet seldom uses recipes in their exact form. While she notes that her success rate in creating tasty dishes is high, she admits that Jeff's steaks are the best. "Jeff grills steak and barbecues pork ribs outdoors. I have never been able to make steak taste that good."

Some of Sarchet's favorite recipes follow:

SKILLET ENCHILADAS

- 1 - 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ oz. can cream of mushroom soup
- 1 - 10 oz. can enchilada sauce
- 8 flour tortillas
- 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ cups shredded cheddar cheese
- $\frac{1}{2}$ c. sliced black olives
- 1 lb. ground beef
- $\frac{1}{2}$ c. chopped onion

Cook ground beef and onion in skillet until brown. While meat is cooking, place $\frac{1}{4}$ c. cheese on each tortilla; sprinkle with olives. Roll up jelly-roll style.

Drain off fat from ground beef. Add soup and enchilada sauce to the ground beef. Arrange tortillas seam side down, in meat mixture in the skillet. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cover and cook about 10-15 minutes or until heated through.

Sprinkle with reserved cheese; cover and cook about one minute longer or until cheese melts.

SQUASH AND CHEESE CASSEROLE

- 4 medium-size yellow squash
 - 2 slices bacon
 - $\frac{1}{2}$ small onion, chopped
 - 1 egg, beaten
 - $\frac{1}{2}$ c. shredded cheddar cheese
 - salt and pepper to taste
 - 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- Cook squash until tender in a small amount of boiling salted water; drain well and mash. Cook bacon until crisp; drain well and crumble, reserving drippings.
- Combine all ingredients, stirring well. Spoon into a lightly-greased 1 quart casserole dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-30 minutes.

MEXICAN CORN CASSEROLE

- $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 tsp. chili powder
- $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. onion salt
- 1 - 8 oz. can tomato sauce
- $\frac{1}{4}$ c. taco sauce, such as picante sauce
- 2 - 17 oz. cans whole kernel corn, drained
- $\frac{1}{2}$ c. sliced black olives

$\frac{1}{4}$ c. crushed tortilla chips
Combine all ingredients and turn into baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

Stir ingredients and top with:
 $\frac{1}{4}$ c. crushed tortilla chips
 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. shredded cheddar cheese
Bake about 5 minutes longer or until cheese is melted.

TEN DOLLAR COBBLER

- $\frac{3}{4}$ stick margarine
- 1 c. flour
- 1 c. sugar
- 1 Tbsp. baking powder
- 1 c. milk

1 lb. can or 1 qt. frozen peaches or pineapple (frozen blackberries may be substituted)

Melt butter in glass baking dish; set aside. Combine all other ingredients except fruit. Pour batter over butter; heat fruit and pour over batter.

Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes.

BROWNIE PUDDING

- 1 c. sifted flour
- $\frac{3}{4}$ c. sugar
- 2 Tbsp. cocoa
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. salt
- $\frac{1}{2}$ c. milk
- 2 Tbsp. salad oil
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- $\frac{3}{4}$ c. chopped pecans

Mix all ingredients together and pour into glass baking dish. Set aside.

Combine and sprinkle over batter:
 $\frac{3}{4}$ c. brown sugar
 $\frac{1}{4}$ c. cocoa

Then pour 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ c. hot water over entire mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

NOTE: When cooked, this unusual dish forms a brownie-like top that floats on chocolate syrup. It is best when taken out of oven, cooled slightly, then served topped with vanilla ice cream.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q. My jelly roll pan pops up on one side whether I use it for cookies, bars or jelly rolls. What will prevent this?
N.J.B., Ephrata, PA

A. Nothing. The only solution is to replace with heavier quality pans. Many cookie sheets and jelly roll pans are made of lightweight materials that warp in the oven. Once a pan is warped, nothing can be done to straighten it.

Q. What makes an uneven sugar layer on the top crust of a cake? J.V. Cleveland, Ohio

A. The crackled appearance may happen when there's too much sugar and too little liquid in the liquid-sugar-flour ratio of recipe. Excess sugar rises creating sugary crust.

Astros reign over Raines, Expos, 3-2

MONTREAL (AP) — Tim Raines realizes the momentum the Montreal Expos carried into the all-star break has fizzled since play resumed.

"It wasn't the best time for us to stop playing," Raines said after the Expos lost 3-2 to the Houston Astros on Wednesday night for their fourth straight defeat. "When you're on a roll you want to keep on playing and keep things going. "Otherwise, you can cool off real fast."

The Expos, who carried a seven-game winning streak into the break, have cooled off swiftly, dropping five of seven so far in the second half. Even more ominous for the club than the 1½ games they have lost in the standings to the division-leading New York Mets is the way they have been losing.

"We're just not hitting and producing like we're supposed to," said Hubie Brooks, whose 12th homer in the fourth inning accounted for one of the Montreal runs. "We're starting to get disgusted with ourselves."

The Expos have scored only 25 runs in their last seven games, six of them in one outing.

"It's frustrating for us, but you can't do much about it," said John Dopson, Wednesday night's loser. "The only thing you can do is go out and pitch your game."

Dopson, 26, who has been effective in most of his 13 previous starts, didn't really pitch well against the Astros.

He gave up only five hits in 5 1-3 innings, but three were for extra bases, including homers to Rafael Ramirez and Terry Puhl.

"He didn't have good control tonight, he was very so-so," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said.

While Dopson struggled, Houston's Jim Deshaies was effective in front of 17,476 fans that included three busloads of people from his hometown in nearby Massena, N.Y.

"It's nice to get a little revenge against these guys," said Deshaies, whose club was swept at home by Montreal two weeks ago.

Deshaies, 7-6, pitched six innings of six-hit ball before being relieved, first by Juan Agosto and then by Larry Andersen, who worked 2 1-3 hitless innings for his fourth save.

"Jimmy really made the pitches when he had to," said Andersen, who allowed only one walk. "But it's funny, I seem to pitch well when I come into his games."

"Maybe its because we're friends and I want us to stay that way."

The Astros staked Deshaies to a lead when Rafael Ramirez hit his third homer in the second inning. Terry Puhl hit his second homer in the fourth to double the lead, before Brooks homered to cut the margin to 2-1.

Houston added one more when Glenn Davis doubled home Bill Doran in the sixth, but Montreal got that back in the bottom of the inning when Tim Wallach hit a sacrifice fly to drive in Andres Galarraga.

The Expos had an excellent opportunity to get the tying run when pinch-hitter Otis Nixon led off the seventh with a double.

Tracy Jones sacrificed him to third, but Agosto got Raines to ground out sharply to a drawn-in infield before Anderson retired Galarraga on a fly ball.

"We haven't got the timely hitting lately and that's been our problem," Rodgers said. "A big hit here or even a fly ball when we needed it, and it might have been a different story."

"Right now a lot of the guys who should be hitting, like Raines and Galarraga, aren't swinging the bat well. If we get those guys and some of the other coming around, we'll be all right."

Highsmith seeks appreciation from Oilers

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Houston Oiler fullback Alonzo Highsmith says fans who look only at statistics won't see the true measure of his value to the team.

"My goals are to try to knock people down and unless you really know football, you wouldn't know what you're watching," Highsmith said. "You read that Highsmith rushed 72 yards and caught three passes for 40 yards. Then you read over here that Eric Dickerson carried the ball 25 times for 170 yards.

"Really, to appreciate my style, you have to know the game."

Highsmith likes to watch Clint Eastwood movies and he bring a

"Dirty Harry" mentality to the football field. "I just like to get dirty that's all," said the man who went into the off-season vowing to come back this season as 'hell on two legs."

Despite an off-season that included knee surgery and a twisted ankle, Highsmith says he'll fulfill his vow this season.

"I'm still pumped and I don't back down from anything I said, I'll be ready from get-go," Highsmith said in true "Dirty Harry" style.

Highsmith, the Oilers' No. 1 draft pick in 1987, never reached full speed last season.

Hampered by a lengthy contract holdout, the NFL players' strike and a knee injury, Highsmith made his vow following the Oilers' 34-10 loss to Denver in the second round of the playoffs.

But even at full speed this season, Highsmith doesn't anticipate challenging the NFL rushing leaders.

"When I said 'hell on two legs' I didn't mean running 200 yards a game, I meant blocking and catching too," Highsmith said.

"My forte is not worrying about getting 100 yards a game. I'm going to get noticed on the field whether I block somebody or catch the ball and make something happen."

Highsmith wasn't activated until Nov. 8 last season and didn't start his first game until Dec. 13 against New Orleans.

He expects much more of himself this season and much more from the Oilers, who reached the playoffs last season for the first time since 1980.

"I expect to make a big contribution to the team whether it's running, catching or blocking," Highsmith said. "I don't consider myself an Eric Dickerson type back or Bo Jackson."

"I can do all three things equally well. I want to run, catch and block, that's what I expect of myself."

Highsmith rushed 61 yards on 9 carries in the Oilers' playoff-clinching 21-17 victory over Cincinnati and gained a season high 74 yards in a 23-20 playoff victory over Seattle.

Oiler rookies and free agents held two workouts Wednesday on the Southwest Texas State University campus with veterans due to begin workouts today.

Kicker Tony Zendejas and center Jay Pennison signed their 1988 contract Wednesday, leaving three other starters unsigned.

Zendejas has converted 89 of 94 field goals in three seasons with the Oilers, including a 42-yarder in overtime to give the Oilers a playoff victory over Seattle last season.

Still unsigned were cornerbacks Steve Brown and Patrick Allen and nose tackle Doug Smith.

The team's top three draft choices also remained unsigned, first round pick Lorenzo White of Michigan State, second rounder Quintin Jones of Pittsburgh and third round choice Greg Montgomery of Michigan State.

Olds Scramble is August 21

The second annual Oldsmobile Scramble is scheduled at Pitman Municipal Golf Course Aug. 21, with the winners advancing to the sectional tourney in Odessa on Sept. 12. Free towels and tees will be presented to each player by Stevens Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, local sponsor. A new Oldsmobile is offered as a prize for the first hole-in-one on No. 3.

Entry fee is $20 plus green fee and cart, and Mike Horton, Pitman golf pro, is tourney director.

Players form their own team for the scramble, and each golfer must have established a handicap approved and verified by a PGA professional. Teams consist of four amateur players whose combined total handicap is a minimum of 43. Only one member of the team may have a handicap of 9 or less, but all four players may have a handicap higher than 9. Teams may be composed of men or women.

The local tournament will determine those teams that have qualified for sectional competition. At least 28 players must participate in the local event in order to send a team to the sectional. With at least 52 teams entered, two teams may advance. A Hereford professional will join each team that advanced to the sectional.

Handicaps established at least 10 days prior to the local tourney will be used for the entire Oldsmobile Scramble, including sectional and national. The National Finals will be held at Walt Disney World, Lake Buena Vista, Fla., Oct. 21-24, and will be a 72-hole event with a PGA Tour professional joining the team for the final round.

Higgs high on chances with Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The coiled springs in Mark Higgs' muscular limbs may give the 5-foot-7, 188-pound rookie from Kentucky a place on the Dallas Cowboys' final roster as the running back who takes Tony Dorsett's spot.

Higgs has a vertical leap of 43 inches, highest in the club's history according to Gil Brandt, player personnel director.

The sixth round draft pick has been able to dunk a basketball since he was in the seventh grade.

"I've always had tremendous spring in my legs and it just freaks people out," said Higgs, who scored 10 touchdowns for the Wildcats last year, some of them kangaroo leaped over the defensive line. Higgs rushed for a school record 1,278 yards his senior season.

Higgs didn't take the Spud Webb route to the NBA because of what happened to him on a recreation league team in Owensboro, Ky.

He was beaten out for a guard position by Rex Chapman, who recently was drafted in the first round by the Charlotte Hornets.

"Rex beat me out fair and square," Higgs said. "He was a better all-around player than I was. I learned right then I had better stick to football."

Higgs got to Kentucky on a football scholarship by rushing for over 6,000 yards in his high school career.

"I rushed for 2,800 yards in my senior year, an all-time Kentucky record," Higgs said. "When I got to Kentucky for college there was Rex."

In the offseason, Higgs would amuse Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton by slam-dunking the ball with feeds from Chapman.

"Eddie got a big kick out of it," Higgs said.

Higgs said he got more thrill from scoring on long runs or diving over linebackers than dunking.

"When you fly over the top you can hear the crowd go crazy," he said. "I liked basketball but everybody wanted to compare me to my brother and I didn't want any of that business."

Higgs' brother, Kenny, played three years in the NBA for the Cleveland Cavaliers and the Denver Nuggets. He led Denver with 408 assists in 1981.

"I think I could have been another Spud but I like football better and I think I can really play," he said. "There's no kick like scoring touchdowns. It beats dunks."

Higgs said his size is an attribute not a hindrance.

"When I'm behind those big 300-pounders it's like finding a rabbit behind elephants," he said. "The defensive players have a hard time seeing me and they never really get a good shot at me. That's how I've survived this long. Nobody ever hits me solid."

Higgs' running style has been likened to that of the New York Giants' Joe Morris.

"I think I could be better than Joe," Higgs said. "I think I can cut-back better than he can."

Don't invite Higgs and Morris to the same Dairy Queen.

"It was a big turnover for me when I met Joe in a mall," Higgs said. "I tried to talk to him and he just turned away without saying a word."

Higgs said it hit him like a bullet when he was told he had been drafted by the Cowboys: "I thought 'what do they want me for?' They've got two of the greatest running backs in professional football history."

"I really didn't think I had a chance then the last thing I know I'm going to his (Dorsett's) going-away party in June," Higgs said. "Tony was my idol and I told him I would be honored if I won his spot. Tony was really nice to me."

Higgs, who carried 457 times in his career at Kentucky to show his durability, has a big backer in Coach Tom Landry, the sole person you need to impress at training camp.

"Higgs is an unusual guy," Landry said. "He is built unusual but he has tremendous explosion and great legs. The defense has a hard time finding him. He's very interesting."

Morgan's dream comes true

BOSTON (AP) — For 16 years, Joe Morgan managed in the minor leagues, dreaming of a promotion to the majors.

It was a pipedream. No clubs called. About the only fan mail he received was misdirected, intended for second baseman Joe Morgan of the Cincinnati Reds.

Now, approaching 58 and in his 37th year of pro baseball, Morgan has achieved a goal he gave up on a half-dozen years ago.

A native of nearby Walpole and a former Boston College star, Morgan was named Wednesday as manager of the Boston Red Sox for the remainder of the 1988 season.

A coach with the Red Sox for 3½ years, Morgan was promoted to interim manager when John McNamara was fired last Thursday. Then, Morgan was rewarded for reversing the team's fortunes around in just a few days.

"We have dropped the qualification interim from Joe Morgan's position as manager of the Red Sox," General Manager Lou Gorman told a news conference. "We have taken the monkey off his back."

No terms were announced, but Morgan quipped that "this might make some extra things come through for the Morgans, if you know what I mean."

In Morgan's brief tenure as interim manager, the Red Sox came back from a 4-8 road swing and the All-Star break with seven consecutive victories. The surge carried them from nine games behind to within five games of Detroit and four of the New York Yankees in the American League East.

Then Boston made Morgan a winner in his debut as permanent manager — at least until the end of the season — by beating Minnesota 9-7 Wednesday night, going 7-0 after the All-Star break for the first time since the midsummer classic began in 1933.

"You know, I managed Triple-A baseball for 12 years and I never once got a call from any (major league) club," he said. "This was kind of shocking to me because I knew I could manage and I knew I did a good job in the minor leagues."

"I thought somewhere along the line that if I wasn't needed in Fenway Park (Boston) some other club would give me a shot. But it never happened. I don't know why, but it doesn't matter now."

WINS BIG CUP
NASHVILLE (AP) — Mary Meagher was awarded the Broderick Cup at the Collegiate Athletic Woman of the Year dinner here recently.

It was symbolic of her being named the nation's outstanding collegiate woman athlete for 1987. Meagher holds world records in both the 100-meter and 200-meter butterfly swim.

SporTalking

Dear Gary:

I read with varying amounts of laughter, disbelief and despair your column about officials.

First, I, or any other official, would love to have you be an official in any sport. We would enjoy having you join a select group of people who, in any sport at any level, are grossly underpaid for the work that they do.

You see, what you see on the field is not the only work an official must do to simply be good, let alone great. Any good official in any sport must spend thousands of hours over a career and hundreds of hours each year studying rule books, rule interpretations, films and videos, and other resources.

A person could have that rulebook memorized, but if that person does not know what rule to apply in a given situation, or does not know a specific interpretation to apply in a situation, then the study is for naught. That is why I and most other officials in Hereford and throughout the United States attend at least one clinic every year to help us know what we are doing out there on the field or on the court.

Would you prefer officials who decide, "Gee, I don't know, let's pull out the rule book and see" on every situation because they are too meek to make an immediate, correct decision because somebody might be afraid that he knows what he is doing? I would daresay that this would cause us to be playing T-ball games until midnight and football games until two in the morning.

A good official always knows you have to make adjustments in certain situations. You were attending a Junior Babe Ruth 13-15 District Tournament game recently between Hereford and Plainview where we had a "fake tag." A hereford player acted as if the throw was coming to him, and the Plainview player slid into second base because he thought the ball was coming. The Hereford player went through with the play, sweeping his glove down.

The Plainview player was so shaken by his hard slide he was unable to play in the next game, by the way.

That's the reason for the rule against fake tags in age-group baseball. It's even against the rules in high school and college ball. The rulebook says there is a specific remedy for that situation, if you would care to read it. It doesn't say the player may or can or will be ejected from the game. It says the player shall be ejected from the game.

That presented us with another problem. Hereford had no eligible substitutes, and if the offending player were ejected the game would be over, a 7-0 forfeit.

As the home plate umpire in that game, it was my responsibility to find out exactly what the situation was on the fake tag. If you would care to sit down and read a rule book some time, you would also know that the last thing anyone officiating a game in any sport wants to do is forfeit a game.

We didn't want to eject the player, causing a forfeit, but there had to be some type of penalty applied. If anyone would care to look in the scorebook, they would learn the play was ruled interference. In that situation, the player is awarded a base. When the player moved to third, the player there scored.

That was a much better remedy than ending the game, depriving Hereford of a chance to complete the game (I would have done the same had the situation been reversed).

That came from years of study. I knew what to do in an instant. As I was told many years ago, "If you were thinking about it, you wouldn't be out there in the first place." With enough study, you learn the instinctive thing to do.

I've never had anyone ask me whether I've called safe or out, ball or strike, fair or foul. I have had it drilled into me from my earliest days as an umpire some 18 seasons ago by former major league umpire George Howell, from dozens of clinics given by professionals, from professional instruction in college courses, that you should be firm and direct in your calls. They won't always be right — heck, you're wrong in one team's eyes on every call you make.

I've never gone out on a field or a court to purposely seek attention, and I would say the same of most other officials in all sports. I know of no official who has low self-esteem who has officiated more than about two games of any sort at any level. Sure there are egos involved — I would challenge you to read a psychology book after you get through with the rulebook. Sometimes there is a group ego involved. Many times a group of officials will take the field knowing they are the best crew in the game.

I go out on the field to officiate because it's a way to pay back a debt I owe to a lot of folks who helped me when I was a young ballplayer.

You see, my father died when I was seven years young any Big Brothers-Big Sisters programs in Coolidge or in Dimmitt. We just had some folks like Jack and Jimmie Howell and Ted Sheffy and Travis Hampton who took me under their wing and helped me along.

I made a vow to myself a long time ago that I would repay that debt by helping out in age-group sports for as long as I was able. I have coached a little. I have officiated a lot. It's my way of helping, because a lot of folks lack the intestinal fortitude to get out there and coach or officiate themselves. I could care less about getting paid attention by anyone, and I think I speak for all of the other officials in Hereford or anywhere else. If they pay attention to me, it's because they are not paying attention to the kids. The kids aren't getting enough attention anyway: that's one of the major causes of the problems we have in society today.

Hereford is blessed by an abundance of good officials, led by John Fuston and Walt Davis who are at the very top of the heap. That heap should be a little praise for the hard work they do, not the trash and drivel you have cast upon all officials. I would venture to say they have spent more time in continuing study in their avocation than you have in your vocation.

Sincerely yours,
John Brooks

LONDON (AP) — American pop star Michael Jackson chatted with rapt youngsters at London's Hospital for Sick Children and donated money to a fund to finance the construction of a new building to rehouse the facility.

"His visit clearly meant a lot to them and to the parents who were there," hospital spokeswoman Jenny Uprichard said Wednesday.

"There was a great shout of excitement when he arrived with his party in two large black cars. Parents and children sitting on balconies around the wards recognized him straight away," she said.

Wearing a black leather outfit, Jackson, 29, spent 70 minutes touring wards, including the hospital's plastic surgery unit.

She said Jackson made a six-figure donation to the Wishing Well fund, which she said is raising about $51 million for a new building to rehouse the hospital. She refused to say how much Jackson donated.

NEW YORK (AP) — His opponent Michael Spinks may disagree, but Mike Tyson is cuddly, says his wife, Robin Givens.

The heavyweight champion, who knocked out Spinks last month in 91 seconds, is "shy, sometimes insecure, vulnerable and naive," Givens says in an interview in the Aug. 8 issue of US magazine.

"I mean, he's a baby, he's cuddly," said the actress who married Tyson in February.

Since the surprise wedding, Givens and her mother, Ruth Roper, have been accused of causing a rift between the champion and his manager, Bill Cayton. The Cayton-Tyson dispute is now in court.

"We've been criticized in every single way for being exactly what we are, which is a family," Givens said.

Despite her upscale upbringing and Tyson's Bronx background, "we've been like the Three Musketeers and (Tyson) fit perfectly into that," she said. "Michael's never had a family, just never."

BLOEMFONTEIN, South Africa (AP) — Runner Zola Budd, who returned to South Africa two months ago after abandoning an attempt to join the British Olympic team, plans to study for a bachelor of arts degree at a local university.

Miss Budd had renounced her South African citizenship and moved to Great Britain to participate in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, where she was involved in a spectacular collision with U.S. running star Mary Decker.

Miss Budd, picketed by anti-apartheid groups, denied maintaining ties to South Africa, where her family lives. But she quit the British team and returned to South Africa after her suspension from international competition for attending a track meet in South Africa.

The South African Press Association said Wednesday that Miss Budd would study political science, ethnology, communications and sociology at the University of the Orange Free State, but would not begin classes until she recovered from bronchitis.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pee-wee Herman, the bow-tied comic whose bizarre antics on Saturday morning TV entertained a generation of youngsters, has been given a sidewalk star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Herman, whose real name is Paul Reubens, unveiled the star Wednesday with a giggle and received a rousing cheer from 400 fans on Hollywood Boulevard.

"I want to thank everybody I stepped on to get to the top, now they can walk on me," the entertainer said.

Many of the fans were small children carrying Pee-wee dolls, and there was at least one adult Pee-wee look-alike.

The dedication was timed to coincide with Friday's release of Pee-wee's movie "Big Top Pee-wee," featuring the whiny, little-kid character falling in love with a bewitching beauty on a trapeze.

It was the 1,874th star dedicated in the Walk of Fame along Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street. Paramount Pictures, sponsor of the curbside honor, paid $3,500 for the Herman star.

ON THE GRILL
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Backyard barbecues have a long history.

The word "barbecue" originally referred to the roasting of a whole hog or ox outdoors on a gridiron placed over a hickory wood fire. French hunters and trappers are believed to have introduced this cooking method to America.

More to 'TEXAS' than meets the eye

Nestled behind the theatre and sets, beneath the towering cliffs of Palo Duro Canyon, works an individual whose job often escapes notice during the summer season at "TEXAS" to all except company and crew.

To these 80 cast members, 11 technicians, eight costumers, 10 horses and a cat, Chris Laue is the man who keeps the group happy and makes sure every aspect of the musical drama is pure quality.

"TEXAS" is a tricky show to call with 125 lighting cues, 75 sound cues, 25 pyrotechnical cues and 35 set changes. Things can go wrong, not only by human error but occasionally with help from mother nature.

Raccoons stole a scene one night, Laue remembers, and another evening last summer the winds were just right to blow the 10 by 6 foot, 300 pound dugout off stage.

Then there was the time that as the lightning struck the canyon wall during the thunderstorm scene, all the finale fireworks exploded at the same moment off schedule.

Laue's day begins at 3 p.m. during the season with crew call. Patio is readied, pyro is wired, lighting is tested, scenery and props are checked, wranglers ready horses and general stage facilities are cleaned.

Then, Laue oversees the paperwork, orders supplies and rehearsals start at exactly 6 p.m. followed by physical and vocal warmups. After makeup a cast meeting is called at 8 p.m. where Laue and director Neil Hess set direction for the evening. Showtime is 8:30 p.m.

Backstage the action is beginning as the hundreds of cues are called just seconds apart. Over 150 props and 20 set pieces including a real train are used during "TEXAS".

Laue's favorite assignment comes during the performance. "I enjoy watching and evaluating what is happening on stage," he said. "It is a challenging show to call with most of it cued to music."

Laue admits that the biggest scene stealer is the canyon itself. "The location is perfect," he stated. "Without the cliff, the show would not be as effective."

"With it you can take technology and make the canyon come to life with color and different types of light. Over 400 strobes on the mountain make the finale effect."

According to Laue, there are currently 250 lighting instruments which increase early. "Nowhere else could you set off 500 feet of primacord each night and get away with it."

"The sound is so natural, it is remarkable," Laue said. "It allows us with modern technology to project coyotes and birds to near reality."

Birds awaken to the artificial sound effects to chirp in reality and continue throughout the show, Laue said.

"It is the same with the crickets," he added. "You play a track for five minutes, and they begin with the first sound cues."

Laue tells of an incident when the technicians were working after the show at 3 a.m.

"We were in the booth doing sound cues and setting levels for the coyote cues," he said. "We played them back over and over when Lynn Hart (Lighting, Technical and Special effects Designer) said, 'Okay you can stop now.'

"The technician said he HAD stopped. It was coyotes letting us know they were not happy with what was happening."

"They were close, so we found an old teratol tape and played it loudly. You could hear the scurrying of the coyotes' feet as they ran."

The sound and light is the product of professionals, Hart and D. Scott Linder (Sound Designer/Audio Consultant), and is the latest technology available.

The original visions of Pulitzer Prize winning author Paul Green were technically impossible in 1966 when the show opened. Hart and Linder now bring them to life.

Green was responsible for selecting the site for "TEXAS", and Laue believes it is acoustically perfect. "Using 11 speaker locations, sound bounces off the cliff and echoes it off the canyon wall."

"It is a natural setting," Laue added. "More theatrical elements are available here than anywhere else. Horses go up trails, and people are on rocks."

The most difficult assignment Laue faces is cast relations. "It's real important how you address people," he said. "It's very easy when you get this many performers together with so many policies that it can become a tight jungle by the end of the season."

"It must be a very caring situation," he added. "I go out of my way to let everyone know that they will be put first. The dancers and performers must know that I respect their abilities and will not put them in danger at any time."

The best asset of the job is working with Director Hess whom Laue consults with regularly and who gives him all the responsibility needed for the job.

Laue resides off-season in Los Angeles, Calif. where he works as a Production Stage Manager for Disneyland shows.

"TEXAS" plays nightly except Sundays in Palo Duro Canyon State Park near Amarillo from mid-June through late August. The 23rd season of the musical drama will end Aug. 27.

Reservations are encouraged, and can be obtained by calling 806-655-2181 or writing "TEXAS," P.O. Box 268, Canyon, TX 79015.

Tickets are $9, $7, and $5 for adults, and $9, $3.50, and $2.50 for children. An optional barbecue by Sutphen's of Amarillo is served prior to each performance on the patio for $5 per person.

Adjusting prop

Backstage technicians ready sets for "TEXAS," the outdoor musical drama that plays in Palo Duro Canyon nightly except Sundays until late August. The 23rd season of the musical will conclude Aug. 27.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 24 years old and the letter from "Miss Jim" struck a chord with me. She said you should quit telling people to get counseling when you can't come up with a better answer.

I, too, used to think you were copping out, then I realized that my self-destructive behavior was killing me and I would never get better without professional help.

I was bulimic at the age of 17. I stayed that way for five years. Finally, I sought help by seeing a psychiatrist and going to group therapy.

Tears are in my eyes as I write this, and I am shaking. I doubt that I will ever go back to forcing myself to throw up several times a day, but the memory of what I did and why I did it is still fresh in my mind and it is very frightening.

Ann, I think your responses are very good, but there is no way that you could have come up with an answer that would have made any difference. If a person can't afford a mental health professional, he or she should try the clergy or a support group. I owe my life to counseling, and you can't get a better endorsement than that.—Schererville, Indiana

DEAR INDIANA: Thanks for the back-up. Again, for the record: Counselors don't solve problems. They get their patients to see things in a different light so they can find the solution on their own.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for that self-pitying bore who wants to commit suicide. I wish to heaven she'd go ahead and do it.

I've listened to these crybabies for 20 years. You give them advice and they ignore it. They take hour sof your time whining, complaining, blaming and telling you how they have been victimized by rotten men, demanding parents, ungrateful children, miserable bosses and a world that has treated them harshly.

I just suffered through such a session with my cousin. She bent my ear on the phone for two hours. I thought I'd go nuts. "This time," she screamed, "I have the pills in my hand and I'm really going to do it."

I talked her out of it, but you can be sure that she'll call in a few months and I'll have to spend another two hours going through the same routine.

What gives these wackos the right to do this?—Lily in New Jersey

DEAR LILY: Your lack of compassion makes me shudder.

If you want to be free of this burden, line up a competent therapist and suggest to your cousin that she get professional help. (And by the way, you sound like a bit of a crybaby yourself.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I realize that this isn't an earth-shattering problem, but am I the only one who wonders why so many men let their eyebrows go haywire?

The late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev was one of the most outrageous examples, but one sees many others with long stray hairs sticking straight out, or hanging down in front of their eyes. Why don't their barbers suggest an eyebrow trim when they give haircuts?—Bloomington, Ind.

DEAR BLOOM: Did it ever occur to you that some people might like that look? Bushy brows suggest virility and individualism. Mark Twain had wonderfully wild eyebrows. So did John L. Lewis and Judge Learned Hand. Congressman Jim Wright of Texas has them, and so do Pierre Salinger, James Whitmore and Michael Dukakis. And there ain't no flies on them.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send $3 plus a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope (45 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

BORROW NOW, PAY SOON ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Graduating from college soon?

One of the first things a new graduate should do is establish credit, a group of University of Rochester seniors were told at a seminar on post-graduate "survival."

Timothy J. Leach of Norstar Bank suggested that local department store credit was the easiest to get.

"Use it to buy things you ordinarily need and then pay the bills immediately," he said.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: Recently a friend told me that water softeners add a lot of salt to water. Is this true? I am on a salt-free diet and this information is really important to me. — Diane Klein, Austin, Texas

You can always ask your doctor for safe guidelines. However, here's some general information. The easiest way is to call your local water company for information on salt content. If your water comes from a well, you can have it tested by a private laboratory or your local health department.

Home water softeners can add to the sodium content of regular tap water, sometimes as much as 100 milligrams per quart. If you use a water softener, connect it to the hot-water lines only and be sure to use cold water for all drinking and cooking water.

I'm sure your water company will be more than happy to answer any further questions you might have. — Heloise

SEND A GREAT HINT TO: Heloise P.O. Box 795000 San Antonio, Texas 78279

TYPEWRITER TIP Dear Heloise: I make a lot of mistakes when I type and need my typewriter correction fluid close by.

I folded an index card to make a small pocket and taped it on the right side of my typewriter. I can slip the fluid in and out without even looking up.

It saves lots of time that I used to spend looking for it among the papers. — Polly Willerson, Ephraim, Utah

CHILDREN'S PUZZLES Dear Heloise: My 3-year-old has recently developed an interest in puzzles (the tray type). After going through this craze with my older children and always finding mixed puzzle pieces strewn about, I have developed a new system for him.

I put his name and a number on the back of each puzzle piece for that particular tray.

Since he now has accumulated seven puzzles and quite often is playing with all of them at the same time, this system helps me when it's time to pick up in a hurry. It helps him learn his numbers and name, and when he takes his puzzles to the day nursery he always brings them home. They're never mistaken for the nursery's own puzzles. — Phyllis Michon, Chalmette, La.

STAMP DISPENSER Dear Heloise: I have found a way to make my own postage-stamp dispenser.

All you need is a plastic 35-millimeter film canister. Use a knife to carefully slit the side of the canister and place the roll of stamps in it. Pull the first stamp through the slit and it works perfectly! — David N. Reed, Lafayette, Ind.

MINI CUTTING BOARD Dear Heloise: I enjoy your hints and now I have one to pass on that I learned from my mother.

Don't throw away the piece of plastic that sliced bacon is on. It is heavy and is wonderful for cutting things on such as onions, veggies and many other things.

It keeps cutting boards from taking on odors. — Joanne Myrvik, Minnetonka, Minn.

DRINK MIXES Dear Heloise: I make drink mixes such as Swiss mocha, Bavarian mint, orange cappuccino and cocoa mix. I take the mix that suits the person, put it in a plastic bag and place the bag inside a colorful coffee mug.

This sure makes a welcome gift! — Claire L. Kowalczyk, Claremont, N.H.

DEAR READERS: Did you know that nine out of 10 household burglaries are preventable?

Knowing about a burglar's three worst enemies — light, time and noise — can help you protect your home from crime. A burglar won't find your home an easy mark if he's forced to work in the light, if he has to take a lot of time breaking in and if he can't work quietly.

We all know how important home safety is. No one wants to return home to find a burglarized house, especially if the burglar is still there.

If you should confront a burglar, run away if possible and call the police, or lock yourself in a room if you can't escape, cooperate and stay as calm as possible should you find yourself face-to-face.

The Insurance Information Institute has compiled a very good free pamphlet on home-security basics. To receive one, simply dial 1-800-221-4954; they will be happy to send you a copy. It sure is worth your time to dial. — Heloise EYEGLASS CASE Dear Heloise: I recently lost my eyeglasses along with the case they were in. I had placed a small address sticker with my name in the case and the next day a store called to say that they had recovered them.

With glasses so expensive these days, I thought this tip would be helpful! — Linda, Aurora, Colo.

For safety's sake, you might want to put your office address or work phone number down. Most people are honest, but why take a chance? — Heloise BLEACHING Dear Heloise: When do I use oxygen bleach or chlorine bleach? I don't understand the difference. I am anxious for your reply. Thanking you in advance. — Janice Veltra, Placentia, Calif.

Different bleaches can be confusing, so I will try to shed some light on the subject for you and our other readers.

First, and most important, read both the garment care labels and package directions thoroughly. When you are bleaching an item, bleach the entire article, not just the stain. This way if there is a color change it will be the same for the entire piece of clothing. If you have a two-piece item, both pieces should be bleached.

Oxygen bleaches are usually in dry, powdered form, like all-fabric bleach, and are in some detergents that contain bleach (read labels carefully). These are safe to use on most materials, and if used properly, for most colors. Oxygen bleach is milder than chlorine bleach and really works best in hot water.

Chlorine liquid bleach is very strong. It is also very effective, but it has to be handled cautiously to prevent fabric or color damage. Use chlorine bleach on whites that can be bleached. Good luck. — Heloise

McCombs applies his approach to Spurs

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — B.J. "Red" McCombs rolled into town quietly in January 1958, wanting only to stay long enough to bail out a friend having problems managing a car dealership.

What McCombs thought would be a three-month stay has turned into a three-decade adventure in which he not only has built up his own car dealership and other ventures, but also has helped attract more industry to the city.

The multimillionaire's interests extend from the arts to research projects and to his fascination with Colt revolvers, cowboys and Indians,

Longhorn cattle and thoroughbred horses.

But it has been the 6-3, graying redhead's latest moves in the National Basketball Association that have catapulted him to national prominence.

Frustrated with the dismal record of the San Antonio Spurs, McCombs dipped into his portfolio in late May and purchased the NBA franchise for $47 million.

Within a week in early June, he fired coach Bob Weiss and used his charm and a record five-year, $3.5 million contract to lure previously unloved Kansas University coach Larry Brown to San Antonio.

McCombs bought the Spurs because he believes a major sports franchise is the key to a city's prosperity and feared the Spurs would move. He now senses a new excitement and reminds fans that the team is not his, but "ours."

"I don't want the people of San Antonio to think that I think that everyone has to be a sports addict," McCombs said.

"What I want to do is to try to get them to recognize that the Spurs are important in this city and whether people ever attend a game or not, it is important to the fact that they have a job, that their company grows, that when their house is for sale that there is somebody there to buy that house," McCombs said.

"A city can have the greatest cultural programs and the greatest educational programs. You can be outstanding in all sorts of ways — and those are very important — but there is nothing that brings a major league identity to a city in America as a major league sport," McCombs said.

"I think we're just now beginning to recognize the greatness the city has and I just don't want that to take a step backwards by us not being able to operate as a major league city, as a sports franchise," he said.

McCombs' actions have earned praise from close friend Mayor Henry Cisneros and other businessmen.

"Red is opportunity-driven. He always sees an opportunity where someone else sees it as a problem," said retired Brig. Gen. Robert McDermott, chairman of the board of United Services Automobile Association and one of the city's most influential businessmen.

"He is Mr. Free Enterprise," McDermott said. "He has investments around the state and the country, but he chooses to live here. If we had five Red McCombs we would outpace Dallas and Houston before the turn of the century."

McCombs is a power broker and a shrewd entrepreneur. But despite his ability to rub elbows with national politicians and businessmen, McCombs does his best to make comfortable everyone he meets.

"I hope people view me as a good person who is concerned with what's good for everyone," McCombs said. "I hope I'm not being Pollyannaish about it, but I hope I'm viewed that way."

Billy Joe McCombs was born Oct. 19, 1927, in, naturally, the Panhandle community of Spur.

His father, Willie, was a mechanic for the Ford dealership, and his mother, Gladys, took care of Billy Joe and his three younger siblings, Mildred, Eugene and Wanda.

The freckled-face kid — soon nicknamed "Red" because of his bright, wavy locks — was studious, but also did odd jobs and handled a paper route to earn money during the Depression.

When Red was in high school, the elder McCombs moved the family to Corpus Christi so he could work at the Navy shipyard.

After World War II, the younger McCombs joined the Army and served in Korea before returning to Corpus Christi to take business classes at Del Mar College.

McCombs learned early that he did not want to be an elected official, but rather a policy instigator.

"I saw that people needed to be involved because if you weren't involved and didn't earn your spurs, so to speak, you had no right to be involved in the decision-making process," McCombs said.

In 1948 while attending Del Mar, the ever-so-popular-with-the-ladies McCombs met Charlene Hamblin, a petite blonde who initially was turned off by McCombs' aggressiveness.

"Once we started dating I knew there was no question. I got hooked on him right away," she said.

The two were married in November 1950 and in the next seven years, while his wife took care of their three daughters, McCombs built up a successful Ford car dealership — even managing to sell numerous of the not-so-popular Edsels.

In January 1958, one of McCombs' friends was having trouble with the car dealership in San Antonio. Enter McCombs.

McCombs not only straightened out the business, but fell in love with the city and its potential.

He relocated his family and his business. He got involved in community activities and within eight years, he became president of the Chamber of Commerce.

When the city tried to put on its 1968 international exposition, HemisFair, McCombs and other city leaders learned a tough lesson: San Antonio lacked the respect of Fortune 500 companies who were sought to sponsor the exposition.

McCombs said he learned that a major league sport was needed in San Antonio to give it an identity.

In 1973, McCombs and a group of investors led by Angelo Drossos bought the Dallas Chaparrals of the old American Basketball Association and renamed it the San Antonio Spurs.

The Spurs had their glory days under George "The Iceman" Gervin, who put the city on the map, said McCombs, who sold his interest in the NBA team in 1982 and bought the Denver Nuggets.

Tyson stinks brewing over next fight plans

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — While American lawyers try to clear the way for a September match up between world heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson and Britain's Frank Bruno, opinion on the British side of the Atlantic was divided over whether the fight should take place at all.

The issue in the American courts is Tyson's finances. The issue in Britain is Bruno's safety.

As the No. 1-ranked contender in both the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association ratings, Bruno has been waiting for his chance since the WBC put him at the top of the pile last October.

Since then he has been by-passed by Larry Holmes, Tony Tubbs and Michael Spinks, all of whom became Tyson knockout victims as the champion stretched his record to an awesome 36-0 with 31 knockouts. Tyson took care of the previously unbeaten Spinks in only 91 seconds last month.

It is a record that speaks volumes for Tyson's punching power and provides ammunition for the anti-boxing lobby's contention that the Tyson-Bruno fight, tentatively scheduled for Wembley Stadium on Sept. 3, shouldn't take place.

Dr. Jeffrey Cundy, a spokesman on boxing for the British Medical Association, was quoted in British press reports as saying: "Tyson is quick, ferocious and accurate. Bruno should not step into the ring with him. The fight should not be allowed to take place."

"Bruno is vulnerable to being hit hard and has already had two severe knockdowns. He does not get himself out of trouble," Cundy, whose organization represents two-thirds of Britain's 97,000 doctors, was quoted as saying.

Jarvis Astaire, who hopes to stage the fight, denounced the medical opinions.

"What they say is absolute rubbish," Astaire, Wembley's co-owner, said Wednesday.

He pointed to Bruno's record of only two defeats on a 34-fight record. Both were to fighters who have been world champions, James "Bonecrusher" Smith and "Terrible Tim" Witherspoon.

"Against Bonecrusher Smith, Bruno won 9½ rounds and then ran on to a knockout punch. And he was ahead on points after nine rounds against Witherspoon before he became exhausted and got caught in the 11th," Astaire said.

"Now Bruno is two years older and more mature. At 26, he's at his peak and he's got a big, big punch, exactly what you need to beat Tyson."

Astaire revealed that American rock star Bruce Springsteen posed more of a danger to the fight.

While Tyson is engaged in a legal war with his estranged manager, Bill Cayton, arrangements for rights to the stadium are being held up. Springsteen, who already is staging a sell-out concert on the eve of the proposed fight date, is waiting to grab the Sept. 3 date as well if the boxing plans fall through, Astaire said.

DRUG TESTING

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — A widespread program of drug testing by the NCAA showed that 1.3 percent of student athletes lost their eligibility because they tested positive. The testing was done in the fall of 1987. The percentage with positive tests was slightly higher than the previous survey in the 1986-87 academic year.

In actual numbers, 20 student-athletes out of 1,589 tested last fall were found to have been using banned substances.

Of that number, seven had tests which were positive for anabolic steroids, two for diuretics and 11 for street drugs such as cocaine and marijuana.

The Los Angeles Lakers won the right to sign Magic Johnson in a coin flip with the Chicago Bulls in 1979.

"Understandably, Springsteen's people are nagging me about the situation. They know from previous experience that as soon as a second concert is announced, the tickets will be sold in half a day."

"We want the fight to go ahead but we can't ignore the prospect of another 75,000 people paying to watch Bruce Springsteen," Astaire said.

"It is something the lawyers, who are haggling over such minor, trivial matters, may not fully appreciate."
