Aliens saved from boxcar

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Border Patrol official says tragedy was averted when agents discovered 22 Mexican men locked inside a boxcar in a downtown freight yard.

The men, all alive and well, were discovered in the car about one or two hours after they were locked in Sunday evening, Border Patrol deputy chief Gustavo de la Vina said Monday. He said they seemed relieved to be found.

"I think that once that door shut, there were a lot of fears," he said. "I think the memory of what happened last year was still alive in a lot of these aliens."

Last summer, 18 Mexican men suffocated inside a locked boxcar that had been parked on a railroad siding for several hours in the desert sun at Sierra Blanca. The men had boarded the boxcar at the freight yard in downtown El Paso, 90 miles west of Sierra Blanca.

Sunday's high temperature in El Paso was 100 degrees, and the thermometer reached at least 97 on Monday.

The 22 undocumented aliens "were glad to be out of there," de la Vina said of the boxcar. "We feel like we averted a tragedy."

Before opening the boxcar about 7:30 p.m., Border Patrol agents arrested a man suspected of smuggling the men from central Mexico to Juarez, then across the Rio Grande to El Paso, de la Vina said.

Some of the men released from the boxcar identified the smuggling suspect as Macario Gonzalez Martinez, 26, of Torreon in the Mexican state of Coahuila, de la Vina said, adding that Gonzalez was charged with aiding and abetting to transport illegal aliens.

Gonzalez, who was arrested while loitering in the train yard, charged his customers about $100 to $200 each for the trip from various towns in central Mexico, de la Vina said.

The boxcar's occupants were in good shape because they had been in the car for less than two hours, de la Vina said, adding: "I don't believe it (the boxcar) was airtight, but with the temperature, it wouldn't have taken much time for dehydration to set in."

About 25 Border Patrol agents had been conducting surveillance in the area and watched Gonzalez bring the men to the yard in groups of two or three. De la Vina said the agency catches 50 to 70 undocumented aliens on each daily patrol of the large Southern Pacific freight yard every day.

"We're catching as many as we can and we feel comfortable we stop the majority of them," he said.

Most aliens are found wandering in the freight yard or in unlocked cars, he said.

De la Vina said the arrest of Martinez could lead to the breakups of other smuggling rings in central Mexico. To protect the investigation, he declined to say which states Sunday's aliens were from, or which states other smuggling rings could be based in.

The 22 men were laborers bound for Colorado, North Carolina and Georgia.

County cuts down on range

By ANDREA LAMB
Staff Writer

The Deaf Smith County Commissioners decided on Monday to change the locks to the county's shooting range to reduce the county's liability.

The shooting range's rules, which Sheriff Joe Brown wrote, specifically stated that only three people were to hold keys — Brown and sheriff's Deputy Reserves Mark Hardt and A.G. "Red" May.

"There have been quite a few people shooting out there that haven't pertained to the county," said May. "I know Vernon Hope (investigator for the district attorney's office) has had his people out there shooting at night."

Hope, who is currently instructing a law enforcement certification class, stated that he did use the range with his class but does not have a key.

"I've been out there once. On other occasions, I haven't been able to get in unless Red opened it up for me," said Hope.

David Clyde, an assistant district attorney, also said he used the range once with his Sea Bees (naval reserves).

"I'm a world-class shooter, and Joe Brown let me in as a range officer for the Sea Bees because of my qualifications," Clyde said. "I've never had a key. But it defeats its purpose to keep the range locked up all the time because people need to practice their shooting to get certified as law enforcement officers."

Marie Griffin, a representative with the county's insurance agency, The La Plata Agency, said the insurance policy for the shooting range was based upon Brown's rules and "it is required you maintain some proficiency in regard to the shooting range."

The policy only covers those not employed by the sheriff's office or the sheriff's reserve deputies.

"It's not so much a question of liability," said County Judge Tom Simons, "it's who runs the thing. It concerns me there are not three keys out there anymore and I'd like to change those locks to make sure no one but these three people have keys."

Simons will talk with Brown about changing the locks and enforcing the rules.

The commissioners also discussed extending the employment for the part-time help in the juvenile probation office.

Colleen Duffy, juvenile probation officer, requested that $9,011 be taken from state funds to support the part-time employee through September 1989.

"We're busting at the seams in juvenile probation," stated Duffy. "Lou Serrano (part-time help) is doing just an excellent job in curtailing juvenile probation cases."

Duffy suggested taking the $9,011 out of the delinquent housing fund because the office currently has only one child in long-term residential housing.

"We're going to get to the point where the state is going to say we need more workers anyway. Just last month we had 20 referrals and our average is usually nine," Duffy said.

Commissioner Troy Don Moore suggested that the commission compare the juvenile probation office's budget for this year to last year's budget before taking any action.

The commission also voted to: —Approve the Economic Development Council's interlocal cooperation agreement with the number of board members being changed from seven to nine in order to incorporate a broader community spectrum; —Purchase a $900 personal computer from the Governor's Nuclear Waste Program's Office for the county treasurer's office. Moore stated that this type of computer usually costs approximately $5,000.

Dual race puts Demo funds on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some $46 million in public money to finance Michael Dukakis' Democratic presidential campaign is being held up temporarily by a tangle over running mate Lloyd Bentsen's dual campaigns for vice president and the Senate.

The National Republican Senatorial Committee filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission alleging that any money Bentsen spends on his Senate re-election bid in Texas will directly benefit the party's presidential ticket and give it an unfair advantage over the Republicans.

The FEC was considering the matter today. Commission spokeswoman Sharon Snyder said the commission has 10 days to decide how to handle the unprecedented issue.

The Dukakis campaign filed its request for the money late Friday, and the existence of the GOP complaint will add to the time it takes to release the federal campaign funds, she said.

Jann Olsten, executive director of the GOP Senate committee, said at a news conference Monday that Bentsen is poised to spend more than $4 million on his Senate re-election campaign at the same time he is running for vice president. An unusual Texas law permits Bentsen to seek both offices simultaneously.

SEN. LLOYD BENTSEN

"There is no denying that one (race) is going to impact the other," Olsten said. "A dollar spent by Senator Bentsen in Texas, whether for the Senate or the vice presidential campaign, is going to directly and immediately benefit both... It just isn't fair."

The 1976 law that created public financing for presidential campaigns stipulates that candidates who receive the federal money cannot accept private funds for their campaigns. The $46 million each for the Democratic and Republican tickets comes from a $1 check-off on individual income tax returns.

The NRSC, in a complaint filed Friday with the FEC, asked that the government withhold the federal campaign funds until it either bars the spending of Bentsen's Senate campaign chest or determines to count any Senate campaign spending against the $46 million limit.

Bentsen's Senate opponent, Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Texas, said at a Houston news conference that Bentsen intends to circumvent the law and should either bow out of the Senate race or not spend money raised for the Senate race.

"Nobody expects him to do either," Boulter said. "He wants it both ways."

Bentsen spokesman Jack DeVore said Bentsen's legal advisers had researched the issue and believed there was no problem with conducting and financing both campaigns, and said the GOP was trying to win a free ride for Boulter.

"They know the Bentsen Senate campaign would help the national ticket whether Sen. Bentsen was part of the ticket or not," DeVore said. "What they're really saying is they're scared silly."

FEC spokeswoman Snyder noted that the only other case involving a similar, but not parallel situation, was in 1976 when Bentsen ran for president and for the Senate.

The commission at that time was asked to rule on whether he could spend the legal limit for both his Senate and presidential primary race. The decision was that he could not because he would gain a "significant publicity advantage" over his rivals by spending more money overall throughout Texas.

But that ruling is not a good precedent for this case because there are no limits on Senate campaign spending any more and the issues are different, said Snyder.

"It was a different legal situation," she said.

The current case is more likely to revolve around how various campaign expenses are paid for — such things as whether Senate campaign photos of Bentsen with Dukakis could be paid out of his Senate fund or would be considered presidential expenditures.

Another potential gray area might involve which campaign would pay for signs stating "Vote Bentsen" without any further indication of what office was being referenced.

Olsten said if the FEC should rule against the Republican complaint it was likely that the party would seek a federal court injunction to halt the flow of federal campaign money.

Bentsen's latest Senate campaign report shows he has $3.9 million in cash on hand for his Senate race.

SEX OR SPORTS

A recent survey asked men to choose between sex or their favorite athletic activity. The results were an education, to say the least.

Would you believe that sex came in second with golfers? More golfers said that they would gladly forgo the pleasures of the flesh for the joy of their favorite sport. What's more, the golfers were most adamant in defending their choice.

One golfer's view: "Five hours on 150 acres of perfectly manicured turf, breathing fresh air, experiencing the excitement of pars and birdies with my best friends. Compare that to five minutes of sub-par lovemaking with 150 pounds of a not-so-well-groomed woman, who constantly complains about my income and lack of understanding. While playing golf, your partners give you praise and encouragement, even when you are not performing well. I don't remember this ever happening in the bedroom."

DEAR AVID: Whoever composed that little wife-bashing essay must be several strokes under par. If his golf game was as unsatisfactory as his marriage appears to be, I'm sure he would get some guidance from a pro. I recommend that he give his marriage at least equal treatment.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is in response to "J.A. in Ky." who blamed his maladjustment as an adult on the abuse he received as a child.

I am a 74-year-old female. My father beat me with baling wire, palm fronds, rawhide, lasso ropes, his belt, and whatever else he could get a hold of. As soon as I was handed my grammar school diploma I left home and never went back. I was 14.

What I endured in order to get a high school diploma would make a three-hour movie. By the time I was 42, I had earned three college degrees. I believe my principal motivation was to disprove my father's admonition: "You'll wind up in the gutter some day." My hatred was so strong that I vowed to prove him wrong.

In addition to graduating magna cum laude, I have written 10 books since I retired from teaching. I do volunteer work when I'm not writing.

While in college, I learned why my father was so brutal. He had killed a man when I was 6 years old and was not punished. When his psyche could not tolerate the guilt, he beat me as an outlet for his anxiety and self-loathing.

I refused to feel unworthy because I was doing the best I could. During the Depression the banks closed and I lost my meager savings, so I graduated in a dress that was three years old and the wrong color.

I guess I should be grateful for the miserable treatment I received at the hands of that cruel man. It made me—A Survivor in San Diego Hereford's rally fell short, and Amarillo American won 16-13.

Pitcher Rodriguez had seven strikeouts in the first four innings.

Thursday's game saw Hereford hold a 5-3 lead over Muleshoe after one inning. Two errors, a walk, and a pair of RBI doubles resulted in Hereford's five runs. Rodriguez and Perez hit the doubles.

Hereford, which led 5-4 after two innings, moved out to a 10-5 lead in the third inning. A double by Rankin and an RBI single by Rodriguez began the big inning.

A walk, an error, a single by Tanner Murphey, and another Muleshoe

Lights come on at Wrigley Field

By PHYLIS MENSING
AP Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The lights came on at Wrigley Field to the sound of cheering and singing — and with a few lumps in the throat — as the 74-year-old ballpark prepared to say good-bye to its daytime-only baseball tradition.

In a test run for players and fans, the Chicago Cubs held their first batting practice under the lights Monday night. The venerable ballpark began to glow at dusk as a crowd of about 3,000 — each of whom paid $100 a ticket — sang the national anthem.

"I think it's just great," said Ken Reed, a fan who has been coming to Wrigley Field since he was about 8. "You can't continue to play just day baseball year after year."

But the shadows didn't quite disappear. The players found a few adjustments were needed before the Cubs play their first night game, Aug. 8 against the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I was told by my players that there is a particular problem in the left field corner," Manager Don Zimmer said. "Apparently the lights cover the left field fence. Some of the players complained that the ball going down the lines sometimes could not be picked up right away."

"None of my players outright complained. Each one had a little different story, depending on whether it was in left field or outfield," Zimmer added. "But we all know it will take time to get used to it."

Third baseman Vance Law said he had problems seeing the ball.

"I only saw half the ball," he said. "In my opinion, they're going to have to do something."

Outfielder Andre Dawson didn't seem to have trouble seeing balls when he had a bat in his hand. He hit seven of them out of the park to win the home-run contest with partner Ernie Banks before the Cubs' workout began. Dawson and Banks beat Ryne Sandberg and Billy Williams 7-1.

"It felt a little weird at first," Dawson said. "But I got my rhythm."

Dawson makes no secret of the fact that he would rather play day games. But, he added, "I also like to be in post-season competition ... like everything else, I'll make the adjustment."

The chance to host playoff games was a big selling point for the $5-million lights, which were installed beginning in April.

"I would have feared for its future had lights not been installed," said NL President A. Bartlett Giamatti, who was among the spectators Monday night. "This park is synonymous with Chicago but, in so many ways, with baseball."

The Cubs are the last major-league team to switch on the lights since Cincinnati began night baseball 53 years ago. The lights controversy has raged in the halls of city and state government, and into the streets near Wrigley.

The Cubs have scheduled eight night games this year and 18 a year through 2002.

Drought may mean cutback in duck hunting seasons

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Government biologists are discussing a 25 percent cutback in duck hunting seasons this fall, saying drought has produced "the worst habitat conditions" biologists have ever seen.

Reduced hunting is one suggestion that advisory committees are being asked to consider before the Fish and Wildlife Service holds hearings early next month on guidelines for states to use in adopting actual hunting regulations.

Also put up for discussion, spokeswoman Megan Durham said Monday, are a three-bird bag limit — the typical recent limit has been four — and an early closing of the period when hunting is permissible, Jan. 1 instead of Jan. 20.

In other drought-related activity in Washington, President Reagan wrote key members of agriculture committees in Congress on Monday that some features of a bipartisan drought relief bill for farmers might violate principles he believes should be followed.

The president did not say specifically what troubled him, but during a tour of drought-stricken corn and soybean producing areas in southern Illinois earlier this month, Reagan voiced concern that the relief package might take on the appearance of a "Christmas tree," in which lawmakers attach favored amendments on legislation they know will pass the Congress.

The advisory committees' discussion is beginning with a prediction by the Fish and Wildlife Service that the fall duck migration will total 66 million ducks, second lowest behind only the 62 million of 1985.

All the reduction from last year's 74 million will come in the Mississippi and Central flyways. The migration on the Atlantic and Pacific flyways is expected to be unchanged.

The service has warned several times that hunting most likely would have to be restricted this fall, not only because of this year's drought but also because of drought throughout most of the 1980s in the marshy breeding areas of Canada and the northern plains states.

The early-season guidelines for blue-winged teal hunting in September call for canceling the season outright in 13 states and for major reductions elsewhere.

Last week, the service released population counts showing the breeding populations of 10 major duck species down 3.7 percent from 1987 and 17 percent below the long-term 1955-1987 average. The Northern pintail duck is at a record low of 2.58 million, 18 percent fewer than in 1987 and 54 percent below average.

"Biologists are beginning to worry that continued low water conditions in the areas waterfowl use for migration stopovers and wintering will concentrate the birds and make them more vulnerable to disease later this year," the service said in a survey of drought problems as seen by its biologists around the country.

There are fewer statistics on non-duck species, but the service reported the Platte River in Nebraska has been turned into a "river of sand," exposing the nesting piping plover and the interior least tern to threats of predators and death of aquatic food species.

Pheasant, quail and grouse may not be affected until next spring, when they'll have less cover during nesting season.

Native Texan knows how to cope with heat

Clemens leads Red Sox over Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Roger Clemens is tough enough when he pitches on the road. But when he's in his native Texas, the Boston Red Sox right-hander really feels at home.

Clemens continued his dominance over the American League Monday night, firing a three-hitter for his major league leading seventh shutout and 10th complete game as Boston stifled the Texas Rangers, 2-0.

"I like coming home," said Clemens, the Houston native and former University of Texas star. "I had some friends and relatives in the stands and it's good to have that kind of support."

The Red Sox, the hottest team in the majors, posted their 12th consecutive victory as Clemens, 14-5, struck out 14 to pad his major league leading total to 219.

"I just didn't want to be the one to kill the streak," said Clemens.

Clemens also benefitted from his

Texas background in his ability to cope with temperatures that reached 100 degrees during the game.

"I like pitching in this weather," he said. "Still, I'm exhausted. I must have lost seven or eight pounds."

Clemens ran his road record this season to 10-0 and improved to 4-0 in eight career starts against Texas as he tossed his fifth road shutout of the season. Clemens fired his fourth three-hitter of the season.

"Clemens was as good as I've seen him," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "He threw all his fastballs at the upper edge of the strike zone. He got enough of them called where we had to swing at them."

Rookie Jody Reed's two-out single to center in the seventh gave the Red Sox their first run, making a loser of Texas starter Charlie Hough, 9-11. Reed went two-for-three with a walk.

"When we got that first run, it was like 30 runs," Clemens said.

"I thought one run would be enough but you never know," said manager Joe Morgan said. "But one run allowed looks big to me when Roger's out there."

Hough allowed only four hits in throwing his seventh complete game of the season.

"Charlie pitched a great game," Valentine said. "We had a couple of key at-bats where the outfielders caught 'em."

"A loss is a loss," Hough said. "It doesn't make any difference if it's 1-0 or 10-9. They'll add up at the end of the year. With a few more breaks, we're still playing."

Clemens yielded a leadoff double to Pete O'Brien in the seventh and later allowed a two-out walk to Geno Petralli. At that point Morgan wondered if his ace was tiring.

"I thought he was losing it too but he just seems to find it," Morgan said. "He's quite a competitor. He can go back and get a little extra when he needs to."

Morgan visited the mound before Petralli's at-bat.

"Everytime he comes out to the mound he shows he knows what he's talking about," Clemens said. "He's shown he knows how to manage."

Boston added an unearned insurance run in the eighth on Wade Boggs' sacrifice fly.

Clemens struck out 10 or more for the 11th time this season and 32nd of his career. Texas managed only seven baserunners.

The Red Sox last won 12 in a row in 1948, when they finished with a streak of 13 straight.

Boston kept Morgan unbeaten since taking over 12 games ago, extending Morgan's major league record for consecutive victories by a replacement manager.

Traditional desserts have down-home flavor

Americans are known for having what could be called a collective sweet tooth. This comes as no surprise. Desserts have always been an important part of the American diet, something which is obvious when looking through most of the cookbooks from the 1800s.

Early American cooks knew what they were doing and knew that traditional treats were more satisfying when made (more or less) in the traditional fashion.

This does not mean improvisation should be avoided; after all, the traditional ways had to have been improvised at one time or another. But to satisfy that desire for down-home flavor, there's nothing like turning to an old-fashioned dessert made with good, wholesome ingredients.

APPLE NUT STRUDEL

4-6 medium cooking apples
 1/2 c. chopped walnuts or pecans
 1/4 c. raisins
 2 Tbsp. honey or maple syrup
 1 Tbsp. oil
 1 Tbsp. flour
 6 sheets of phyllo dough
 5 Tbsp. melted butter
 Poppy seeds

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Peel apples, if desired. Core and thinly slice. Combine slices with nuts, raisins, honey, oil, and flour. Stir together.

Unroll phyllo dough. Remove 1 sheet and lay it on a smooth surface. (Keep rest of dough between dampened towels to prevent drying.) Brush with melted butter. Cover with another sheet of pastry, butter, and repeat process with remaining 4 sheets.

Spread apple filling over the last pastry, leaving wide margins at ends and sides. Fold margin of long sides over on the filling. Roll the pastry from one end. Gently lifting, with the help of a spatula, place the pastry on an oiled cookie sheet. Slit the top in 2 diagonal slashes, and brush with a bit more butter. Sprinkle with poppy seeds.

Bake for 30 minutes, or until golden. Apple Nut Strudel is delicious served warm, topped with yogurt or honey ice cream.

Serves 6-8.

PEACH HAZELNUT CAKE

1/2 c. butter
 3/4 c. sugar
 1 egg
 2 c. flour (all unbleached white or half white, half whole wheat pastry)
 2 tsp. baking powder
 1/2 tsp. baking soda
 1/2 tsp. salt
 1/2 tsp. cinnamon
 2 tsp. freshly grated nutmeg
 1/4 c. buttermilk
 1 tsp. vanilla
 1 c. chopped peeled peaches, dredged with flour
 2 c. ground hazelnuts

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Butter an 8-inch round cake pan, an 8 1/2 x 4 1/2 x 2 1/2-inch loaf pan, or a 9-inch loaf pan.

Cream together butter and sugar. Add the egg. Sift the dry ingredients together and add them, alternating with the buttermilk (dry ingredients in three additions, buttermilk in two). Add vanilla, peaches and nuts. Pour into prepared pan and bake until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean, about 35 to 45 minutes.

Set on rack to cool about 20 minutes before removing from pan.

Serves 6-8.

FUDGE BROWNIES

2 Tbsp. cocoa
 3/4 c. dark brown sugar, firmly packed
 1/3 c. margarine, melted
 1 large egg, slightly beaten
 1/2 c. all-purpose unbleached flour
 1/2 tsp. salt
 1/2 c. coarsely chopped walnuts
 1/4 tsp. vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. In a mixing bowl, combine cocoa and brown sugar. Stir in margarine and egg. Beat with a wooden spoon until thoroughly blended.

Sift together flour and salt. Mix into the batter along with chopped walnuts. Stir in vanilla extract. Pour the batter into a greased 8x8x2-inch square pan. Bake 25 minutes, or until done.

Remove from oven and cool on a wire rack for about 5 minutes. Cut into squares and let cool further before removing from pan. Store in a covered container.

CHEESECAKE

Crust

2 Tbsp. honey
 2 Tbsp. butter
 6 Tbsp. fine whole wheat flour
 1/2 tsp. baking powder

Topping

1/3 c. honey
 1/2 c. butter
 4 Tbsp. potato flour
 4 eggs, separated
 Juice and grated rind of 1 lemon or orange
 2 1/4 c. yogurt
 2 1/4 c. lowfat skim milk cheese

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees F. Grease and line a 9-inch pie dish or shallow cake pan.

Make the crust: cream together the honey and butter in a bowl. Add the flour and baking powder to make a fairly crumbly dough.

Place the mixture in the prepared pan, press down well and bake for 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from the oven. Turn the oven down to 300 degrees F.

Make the topping: cream together the honey and butter. Add the potato flour and mix it in. Add the rest of the ingredients, except the egg whites, and mix thoroughly.

Beat the egg whites until stiff and carefully fold into the mixture. Pour over the crust. Bake for 1 1/4 hours or until set.

Turn the oven off and leave for another hour so it can cool down slowly. Remove from the oven and serve chilled, if wished.

SPREAD THE TRUTH

NEW YORK (AP) — The "middle-age spread" is a myth, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says research shows that the time people devote to aerobic exercise — not their age — determines fat level.

Physiologists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging compared body fat percentage of two groups of men, one in their 20s and the other in their 50s. They found fat levels had nothing to do with age, only with the amount of time the men exercised.

SKIN AND AGING

ESSEX, Conn. (AP) — "When skin first starts to show signs of aging many women go through a period of questioning not only their physical attractiveness, but other qualities as well," according to E.E. Dickinson Witch Hazel Co.

However, it says the fear of looking older seems less important to women after the age of 65, when they really are more likely to show the visible signs of age.

Social Security

Have you a question about Social Security? Address it to Jim Talbot, Social Security Office, Suite 16, 3601 W. 15th, Amarillo, Texas 79102. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.

Some questions and answers follow:

Q: My father is in a nursing home and receives a $25 supplemental security income check each month. He said one of the nurses told him his check amount would increase soon. Is that true?

A: Yes, starting July 1, 1988, the $25 personal needs allowance for recipients in medical institutions where Medicaid pays for their care will increase to $30.

Q: I currently receive SSI and, therefore, have Medicaid coverage. When I turn 60 in a few months I'll begin receiving Social Security widow's benefits instead of SSI. Will I still be eligible for Medicaid?

A: Yes. There's a special provision in the law that allows widows and widowers over 60 to keep their Medicaid coverage when they start receiving Social Security. It's not automatic, however. You'll have to contact your local Medicaid agency shortly before you turn 60.

Q: My daughter who recently divorced wants to add my name to her bank account so I'll have access to the money if something happens to her. I receive SSI checks and remembers there's some special rule about joint bank accounts. Can you refresh my memory?

A: Generally, the money in any account with your name on it is considered to be yours, even if you don't use the money or account. Check with your Social Security office before your daughter adds your name to her account.

Q: Does Medicare hospital insurance pay for care in a psychiatric hospital?

A: Yes, but it can help pay for no more than lifetime total of 190 days of care in a participating psychiatric hospital.

Q: Who can get Medicare?

A: People 65 and older, certain disabled people and most people with permanent kidney failure can get Medicare insurance. Local Social Security offices take applications of Medicare and provide information about the program.

Q: I understand it is important for your employer to have your correct Social Security number. How can I be sure my employer has my correct Social Security number?

A: Just check your pay stub. And it is a good idea to check every now and then. If there is an error, be sure to let your employer know about it right away. If wages were reported for you under an incorrect Social Security number, the error can be corrected. Contact any Social Security office. But do not delay. You'll want to get full credit for your correct wages.

Q: I have heard that everyone should check their Social Security earnings record about every three years. Is this true? Is there any charge to have it checked?

A: Yes, you should check your Social Security earnings record about every three years. And no, there is no fee or charge to check your lifetime Social Security earnings record.

We encourage workers to check every few years to make sure their records are correct and up-to-date. If there is an error, you'll be able to fix it while the correct information is still relatively fresh and easy to obtain. To check your earnings record, call or stop by any Social Security office and ask for the form to request a free statement of your Social Security earnings history. Just fill out the form, add first class postage, and mail to us.

Senator Bill Sarpalius reports

AUSTIN — Perry Adkinson, chancellor of the Texas A&M University System recently wrote an insightful column about agriculture that was reprinted in a number of the state's newspapers.

In it, Adkinson pointed out that agriculture can play a big role in the state's future economy. He said that most Texans think economic diversification means moving beyond agriculture which, along with energy, historically has been one of Texas' dominant industries. Adkinson argues that the state would be better off by expanding agriculture as well as seeking alternative industries.

He's right. The agriculture industry can be a source of many new jobs in Texas. We can experiment — carefully — with new crops that support labor-intensive industries. We can expand agriculture to include more post-production processing. The possibilities are exciting.

There's only one problem with all this. Texas, almost as a matter of government policy, has let agriculture's image drop to an all-time low. The state systematically has fostered a notion that agriculture is in decline as an economically important industry. Our state education policy, for instance, discourages the study of agriculture in the public schools.

We had the privilege last week of testifying before the Governor's Task Force on Agriculture when that group met in San Antonio. In discussing with them our concerns about agriculture's image, we posed this question: How can we hope to revitalize the agriculture industry if we are telling our public school students that agriculture is not a worthwhile course of study?

This backlash against agriculture education dates back to 1984, when the Legislature passed House Bill 72. The education-reform package was designed in part to encourage students to concentrate on traditional academic subjects as well as vocational subjects. And, we will grant you that some vocational courses were outdated, and that H.B. 72 forced their improvement.

But, no one ever intended H.B. 72 to be a vehicle for the de-emphasis of vocational agriculture courses in our curriculum. On the contrary, we hoped the reform movement would lead to a strengthening of those courses and a recognition that agriculture education can lay a strong foundation for a student's success in the adult world.

Good agriculture education serves two purposes. For the student who intends to pursue a career in production agriculture, it provides the technical and practical information that can help start the student's career. For those students who will enter another ag-related field or not pursue an ag career, it provides a basic understanding of how agriculture works and gives them an appreciation of agriculture's complexity.

More than anything, agriculture education can dispel the myth that agriculture is nothing but farming and ranching. Any student of agriculture will tell you that agriculture is much, much more, and that it provides thousands of career opportunities. Many of those careers, it might be added, require advanced degrees.

What, then, is the formula for success in Texas' economy and in Texas agriculture? For the economy, go ahead and look for those new industries that will diversify our economic base. Just don't forget that agriculture can be a part of that diversification. For agriculture, work hard to improve your image. And, remember, that improvement begins with education.

If you have any questions about agriculture's role in economic diversification, please contact us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

Check out seller with BBB before buying

If the idea of buying a timeshare unit that you can use year after year appeals to you, you're not alone. Last year Americans spent 1.9 billion dollars on vacation timeshares.

There is a variety of timeshare purchasing plans. The two major categories are "fee simple," where the buyer gets title to a fraction of the unit; and "right-to-use" where the buyer may use the unit for a specified period of time, but does not have ownership interest. Most resorts only offer fee simple plans.

Fee simple plans have the benefit of ownership, tax advantages and equity. However, right-to-use plans are generally less expensive. Also, the developer has a greater incentive to keep the property in good shape since it will revert back to him at some future date.

The cost of a timeshare unit, usually sold in one week increments, depends on its size, amenities and location. Also, each week in the year may not cost the same—winter weeks may cost more than summer weeks in hot, sunny climates. In addition to the purchase price and any interest charges, there's also an annual maintenance fee. This fee may increase as the property ages and upkeep becomes more expensive.

If possible, visit the property. Inspect the quality of the construction as well as the furniture and appliances. If the project isn't completed yet, the Vacation Ownership Council (formerly the National Timesharing Council) advises that payments be held in escrow until the unit is clear of lender obligations or encumbrances.

To determine if the property will be properly maintained, ask questions about the quality of the management. Is it adequate for the size of the project? What about housekeeping and security? Do owners have to check in at the front desk?

Before signing a contract, check out the developer/seller with your Better Business Bureau. Also, make sure the contract includes all oral agreements and have a lawyer review it.

IMPROVED SLEEP HABITS

ATLANTA (AP) — People with rheumatoid arthritis who cannot sleep well because of pain can learn to make sleeping easier, says the Arthritis Foundation.

Research has shown that people with arthritis have more sleeping difficulties, such as waking up in the middle of the night, than people without arthritis. New research suggests techniques can be learned to improve sleep and even to reduce arthritic pain during the day. They include:

- Setting specific times to go to bed and to awake.
- Participation in a regular exercise program.
- Avoiding large meals and alcohol before bedtime.
- The use of relaxation exercises.
