At least 4 demonstrators killed in Honduras

Students burn U.S. Embassy annexes

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Students stormed two U.S. Embassy annex buildings and set them ablaze before they were dispersed with bullets and tear gas. The Red Cross said at least four demonstrators were killed and 10 wounded. An Embassy spokesman reported extensive damage from Thursday night's attack, but said no U.S. citizens were injured. Police said the crowd of more than 1,000 university students also set fire to about 25 automobiles belonging to embassy personnel that were parked near the annex complex, which is across the street from the embassy's main building. The students were protesting the forced extradition this week of an alleged drug trafficker suspected of involvement in the killing of a U.S. drug agent. They also voiced anger at President Reagan's dispatch of additional American troops to Honduras last month.

Private Honduran guards posted at the embassy fired shots and lobbed tear gas grenades at the demonstrators from inside the embassy annex buildings, said police sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But Michael O'Brien, the Embassy spokesman, said neither U.S. Marine guards nor Honduran guards stationed at the complex took violent action against the protesters. He said Honduran riot police had fired on the crowd.

Students told reporters they had disarmed about 10 of the private guards.

O'Brien, in a telephone interview, said demonstrators had surged into an annex complex. "There was a lot of damage. They burned a number of goods."

He would not say what goods or documents were stored in the annex, and also said no U.S. citizens were hurt.

The three-hour demonstration began at the National Autonomous University, located on the outskirts of Tegucigalpa.

Shouting anti-U.S. slogans, the students marched seven miles to the embassy, located in an eastern district of the city.

EDSC okays $25,000 grant to study research facility

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The Economic Development Strategy Council approved a $25,000 allocation for Archer & Archer of Boise City, Okla., to study the feasibility of establishing a research and development center for commodity development, marketing and processing in Hereford.

The council approved the grant during its Thursday meeting at the Deaf Smith County Library. The money originates from a mill-per-kilowatt hour levy against users of electricity generated by nuclear power plants and is allocated by the Department of Energy and the state of Texas.

What we want to find out is what Deaf Smith County can do with a research center," said Shannon Wilburn, Archer's chief coordinator. "One facet would be to think tanks. Another would be how the average man can get involved in a manufacturing process, and another would be how a large investor could get involved."

Wilburn stressed that the study would be generic enough to determine what type of research and development facility would be best suited to the community's needs—no matter if it is Archer or some other manufacturer or marketer.

One of the goals would be perhaps to talk with local inventors, show them how to get patents, to market their property and ideas, and to provide some of the technology they may need to complete their idea," Wilburn said. A research facility could also be used to make or package an item on a small scale, get contract for large-scale manufacturing of the product, then construct the facilities necessary to meet demand. The study will also study the need for commodity and meat processing, financing structures, and availability and organizing plans for efficiency and profitability, according to Philip Nodzenski-Eichner, EDSC's executive director.

Eichner said he has invited a representative of the National Development Corporation, a non-profit organization that helps package economic development programs. To come to Hereford next week to lend expertise to the study.

Virgil Archer, the company's executive officer, has also been a leader in the development of ovens that use a unique patented process of heat and air to rapidly cook foodstuffs. He was one of four persons who developed the two-minute pizza oven for Pizza Hut, and the ovens are now used locally by Arrowhead Mills, a major granary, food processor, and by Garth Merrick, but not yet produced by Hereford B&P plants.

Archer also said a representative of G. D. Searle and Co., the makers of Nutrasweet, will visit the Arrowhead Mills facility next week to see if the unique ovens can be used in making foods using the artificial sweetener.

The company has also developed an innovative sterilizing unit, which Wilburn said was about the size of a breadbox, that has proven to kill 100 percent of the germs on dental equipment that was used on patients suffering from AIDS or highly contagious Hepatitis B.

A dentist said he had problems with sterilization of his equipment after working with patients with these diseases," Wilburn said. "He would have to use such intense heat that the instruments would become distorted, lose their shape and become useless after five or six treatments."

"We were able to come up with a unit that killed 100 percent of the germs in each of 1,500 tests. The next-best competitor had a 35 percent kill," Archer and Archer hopes to have the unit on the market in June.

The committee also approved a $4,750 contract for a one-time community newsletter with Patrick McWehby of Hereford and reviewed a draft analysis of Hereford's economic development program as compared with cities of similar size and economies and other regional cities.

The EDSC will also sponsor a community rally in the future, but has not set a date for the rally.

Further said the committee.

Credit card charges will be disclosed

AUSTIN (AP) — Secretary of State Jack Rains says officeholders and candidates must file a detailed accounting of how they spend their political funds.

The ruling Thursday means that officials cannot merely list "miscellaneous payments" or payments to credit card companies in disclosing how they spent money raised for their campaign and office expenses.

Rains' ruling came only days after The Dallas Morning News reports that top state officials were among political candidates who had simply listed payments to credit card companies instead of issuing detailed reports.

"This means that the public is now going to have the full benefits of the law as it was originally intended," Rains said. "No longer will the financial trail stop at the front door of Mastercard or American Express."

Gov. Bill Clements said Thursday before the ruling by Rains that he would file a detailed report on costs charged to credit cards and not fully explained in an earlier political spending report.

He urged other public officials to

A 10-year old was asked—"What's wrong with grown-ups?"

—Grown-ups make promises and forget them, or say it was not really a promise, just that "we'll see."

—Grown-ups always tell me not to interrupt people, but grown-ups interrupt children all the time.

—Grown-ups do not do the things they always tell us kids to do—like picking their things up or speaking correctly or always telling the truth.

—Grown-ups tell me to say "excuse me" when I burp, but when they do it they think it's funny and laugh.

—Grown-ups tell us not to talk about each other, but when grown-ups are together they talk about each other all the time.

—Grown-ups tell us to eat our broccoli and cauliflower and drink our milk, but I never see grown-ups eating that stuff.

—Grown-ups always tell us to be good sports and act decently, not boo the officials, then they go to games and embarrass everyone around by being a poor sport and acting like a fool.

—Grown-ups act like kids are invisible and talk about us as though we aren't even there.

—Grown-ups lots of time act like kids and that is really embarrassing to a lot of us kids.

—Grown-ups worry a lot about everything.

I hope when I grow up I'll remember what it was like being a kid.

And I hope that I never grow-up to be a sour and disgusted "old" foggie like some people I know.

Maybe we should start listening and paying more attention to "kids." Who knows, we might learn some valuable lessons like love, compassion, enthusiasm, hope and faith.

Are you a good Grown-up?

13 white supremacists let off on conspiracy charges 'religious freedom alive'

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The acquittal of 13 white supremacists on sedition charges means that "religious freedom is still alive in this country," says one of the defendants in the seven-week federal trial.

An all-white jury Thursday acquitted the men, including a former Texas Ku Klux Klan leader, of conspiring to kill a federal judge and FBI agent and plotting to overthrow the federal government and establish an all-white nation in the Pacific Northwest.

Defendant Robert E. Miles, 63, a white supremacist leader from Cohoctah, Mich., praised the verdicts. But when asked how the trial had affected the supremacist movement, he said, "Who knows? What movement? What's left of it after this?"

"This proves that the common law is still alive," said defendant Richard G. Butler of Hayden Lake, Idaho. "This means we still enjoy the freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of association and freedom of religion."

The government presented 113 witnesses during the trial, which began Feb. 16. Prosecutors sought to prove that supremacists robbed banks and armored trucks of $4.1 million to finance their activities, including about $1 million still missing. The jury deliberated four days.

The defense, which called 79 witnesses, contended the conspiracy theory was made up by a key government witness, James Ellison, 47, who led a supremacist group in Arkansas and is serving 20 years for racketeering.

To discredit Ellison, the defense disclosed he had two wives, thought he received messages from God and had himself crowned King James of the Ozarks.

Defendants said the government was trying to suppress their call for white separatism and other aspects of their political and religious views.

But U.S. Attorney J. Michael Fitzgugh denied that the charges were politically motivated.

"We weren't after them because of what they believed or what they said," he said. "We were after them because of what they did."

Defendant Louis Ray Beam Jr., 41, of Houston, celebrated his acquittal by standing in the shadow of a Confederate memorial opposite the court building and claiming victory against what he calls the Zionist Occupation Government.

"I think ZOG has suffered a terrible defeat here today," Beam said. "I think everyone saw through the charade and saw that I was simply being punished for being a vociferous and outspoken opponent of ZOG."

Burton Levinson, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League, called the verdicts "a real setback in the war against organized hate."

"Although many of the defendants are already serving prison terms growing out of their extremist activities, the others, including the most important leaders, will now be free to once again promote their anti-democratic and bigoted aims," Levinson said in a statement from New York. "The outcome means that we must and will remain vigilant."

Besides Miles, Butler and Beam, the other defendants were:

—Richard Joseph Scutari, 40, of New York, already serving 60 years for racketeering.

—Bruce Carroll Pierce, 32, of Metairie Falls, Wash., serving 100 years for racketeering and 150 years for violating the civil rights of Denver radio personality Alan Berg by killing him.

—Andrew Virgil Barnhill, 31, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., serving 40 years for racketeering.

—Ardie McBrearty, 60, of Gentry, Ark., serving 40 years for racketeering.

—David Eden Lane, 48, of Denver, serving 40 years for racketeering and 150 years for Berg's death.

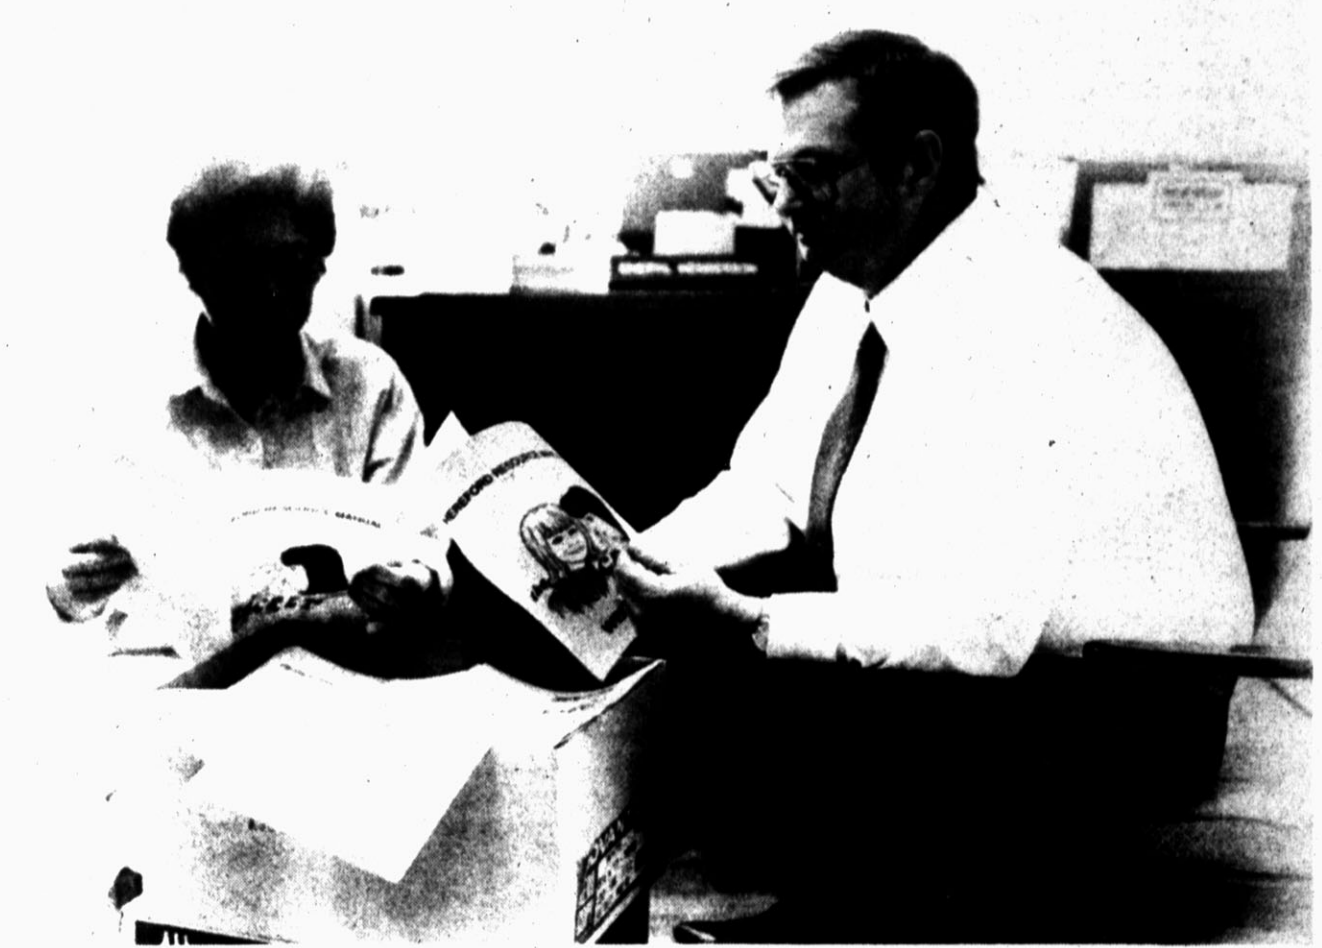

—Richard Wayne Snell, 57, of Muse, Okla., sentenced to die for the murder of a pawn shop operator in 1983 and life in prison without parole for the 1984 slaying of an Arkansas state trooper.

—Lambert Miller, 47, of Springfield, Mo.

—David Michael McGuire, 25, of Greenville, Ill.

—Ivan Ray Wade, 35, of Smithville, Ark.

—William Wade, 68, of Smithville, father of Ivan Ray Wade.

Democratic presidential candidates in New York

Dukakis, Jackson touting oneness

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic presidential front-runners Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson are preaching unity in the volatile political atmosphere of the New York primary campaign, but Sen. Albert Gore Jr. says he will persist in "drawing a contrast" with his opponents.

From ethnic neighborhoods to special interest forums, the Democratic contenders were campaigning for the 255-delegate prize at stake in the April 19 primary.

A poll released today said Dukakis was the choice of 47 percent of likely Democratic voters, while 31 percent backed Jackson. Gore was the choice of 6 percent.

The Marist College Institute for Public Opinion questioned 404 Democrats Tuesday and Wednesday for the survey which had a margin of error of 5 percentage points. A similar survey conducted by the institute in mid-March had Dukakis the choice of 37 percent of Democrats and Jackson the pick of 28 percent.

A fourth Democratic presidential candidate, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, put his campaign in cold storage on Thursday — and drew sharp criticism from Jackson for technically remaining in the race to keep control of the block of 47 at-large delegates he will get as a result of his Illinois primary victory.

If Simon dropped out, those delegates would go to Jackson, who finished second in Illinois.

"I would hope that in time Mr. Simon ... now that he has made the decision to leave the race will leave so honorably, and hide behind no technicalities to block those as my delegates which in fact belong to me," said Jackson.

Vice President George Bush, considered a sure bet for the Republican presidential nomination even by his only remaining rival, Pat Robertson, was heading for Texas to wind up the fund-raising phase of his campaign.

Robertson, who has said he will not campaign in New York, dropped his Secret Service protection on Thursday but an aide said the former television evangelist would remain an active candidate up to the GOP convention in New Orleans in August.

The Democratic candidates crossed paths often in New York, appearing at forums sponsored by the state party and The Democracy Project, a liberal-oriented group.

They often found it difficult to escape the shadows of Gov. Mario Cuomo and New York City Mayor Ed Koch.

"Who cares what ... Mario Cuomo says?" responded Cuomo when pressed about whether he would endorse one of the contenders.

Cuomo also has advised Gore to tone down criticism of his rivals — a request seconded by party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr.

No sooner had Kirk and Cuomo spoken than Gore let loose with a fresh attack. He accused the Dukakis campaign of trying to fuel a "stop Jackson" movement by spreading party chairman and said Jews would have to be "crazy" to vote for Jackson because of his views on Israel.

The Dukakis campaign denied that, and Jackson's campaign manager, Gerald Austin, said Gore has used that strategy himself.

Jackson brushed aside the remark, saying "Let us keep this campaign above any form of racial or religious bigotry."

Jackson came under strong criticism in 1984 for his relationship with Louis Farrakhan, leader of the National of Islam, a Black Muslim group. Farrakhan once described Judaism as a "gutter religion."

Asked what his relationship now is with Farrakhan, Jackson said, "We do not have one. It is precisely that."

do likewise. "The more detail and the more beyond question that we can put all these kinds of expenditures, the better I like it and the better it is for the state of Texas," Clements said. "I don't want any misunderstanding about that from where I'm coming from."

Thursday news conference to the newspaper's report.

The newspaper quoted a member of the State Ethics Advisory Commission and others as saying the law requires a detailed accounting of all contributions and expenditures of more than $50.

Clements said a review by his staff indicated a total of about $8,900 in expenses had been lumped into credit card payments from March through December, 1987. He said the expenses were incurred by staff members who use a specific credit card account that is maintained to cover travel costs.

survey being conducted by Dr. Steve Murdock of Texas A&M University is past the halfway point, with 110 of the necessary 200 completed surveys done.

Murdock has also completed a preliminary trend analysis. "There are no shocking surprises from the negatives that Steve has discovered," Eichner said. "There are also some positives—Deaf Smith County has remained strong in agriculture compared to other Panhandle counties."

"But while the community is strong, the community will deteriorate if there is no effort to strengthen our position," Eichner said the preliminary analysis indicates.

Lifestyles

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Nine years ago I married a man I had known for four years. It was my second marriage and his third. He was charming, attentive, generous, extremely intelligent and responsible at work. He gave some very convincing explanations for his divorces.

Soon after we were married I learned that he had lied to me about a good many matters. He was always secretive and I grew not to trust him.

He turned out to be so demanding sexually that I became physically and emotionally ill. We were in our late 40s when we married and I didn't need sex every day, let alone twice and three times on weekends.

I learned that when his daughter was in high school she had sex in cars after school and didn't mind that other people watched. One of his sons stole money from his employer and was suspected of burning his car to collect the insurance. Another son left his wife and went to live with a prostitute. Obviously something in their backgrounds was not right.

Of course, our marriage did not last. Three years ago he divorced me for a woman 20 years younger. She moved in with him four days after I moved out.

I knew I would need at least three years to heal from that devastating experience. Now the time is up and I'd like to get on with my life, but I lack confidence in my ability to size up a man accurately. What should I look for?—Starting Over in Des Moines

DEAR DES MOINES: It appears to me that you have a good start. You know what you don't want and will not tolerate.

Before you get involved with a man, spend quiet time with him so you can listen to his ideas on all kinds of subjects. Ask questions. Meet his family and friends. Are they the kind of people you care to spend time with? Be alert to inconsistencies and secretive behavior.

Don't be in a hurry. If he's right for you he's worth waiting for. The final test: Is he interested in you? Does he put himself out to please you, or are you always figuring out ways to please him? In a solid marriage, people try to be supportive and helpful to each other.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For Christmas we sent gifts to our out-of-town son and his family. He and his wife called to thank us. Neither of our grandchildren, aged 9 and 14, came to the phone nor did they write a note.

Yesterday was Jane's ninth birthday. We called her to express birthday wishes and told her the gift was on the way. I then told her that I hoped she would call or write to thank us, and that we had not as yet heard from her about our Christmas gift.

Later our son called back to complain that my reminder about the thank-you note for the Christmas gift was petty and "mean-spirited." He said the girl was upset about it and was in an awful mood.

Did I do wrong by reminding a 9-year-old that we had not received an acknowledgment for our Christmas gift? If I'm wrong tell me.—D.C. Grandmother

DEAR D.C. GRAM: What's with the parents of this child? Obviously they aren't teaching their kids the importance of saying thank you. I'd think they'd be glad someone else had offered to do it for them.

Too bad you didn't tell the child that you'll send the birthday gift as soon as she lets you know how she liked the Christmas gift.

Feeling pressured to go "all the way" because everyone else is doing it? You're not alone. For answers to your questions about sex, and to learn how your peers really feel about it, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "Sex and the Teenager." Send $3 plus a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Who will throw out first bulb at Wrigley Field?

By JAMES LITKE
AP Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The only question left to answer now is who will throw out the first bulb.
 Years of political maneuvering, hand-wringing, name-calling, maybe even an era, ended Thursday when light stands began going up at venerable Wrigley Field, where for 72 years, the Chicago Cubs played baseball only in the sunshine.
 "It's funny," said 14-year-old Josh Reingold, watching a helicopter lift ladders to a work crew positioned atop the left-field deck. "I thought the people in the neighborhood had some fight left in them."
 The Cubs owner, Tribune Co., had fought pitched battles with Chicago aldermen over noise ordinances, state legislators over statutes, and a handful of vocal neighborhood groups in court over lights at Wrigley since acquiring the ballclub in 1981.
 But a City Council vote last month removed the final roadblock, even while limiting the team to 18 lighted regular-season contests each season.
 And sometime later this season — team officials will not say when, pending completion of the construction — the Cubs will become the last team to join baseball's enlightened fraternity.
 They do so more than five decades after the Cincinnati Reds played the first major league game under the lights of now-defunct Crosley Field, and 40 years after the Detroit Tigers became the last to do so.
 "It's about time," said Bud Hora, who pitched battles with Chicago aldermen over noise ordinances, state legislators over statutes, and a handful of vocal neighborhood groups in court over lights at Wrigley.

What Does a typical Brand Reader Look Like?

The Hereford Brand
 "We Reach Thousands Every Day!"

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well -- white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewives, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often vocal audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Rev. Bruce Kochsmeier's sermon for the regular 10:30 a.m. Sunday worship service is entitled "A Lighter Way." The Scripture lesson is 1 John 1:1-2:2.

If you still would like to participate in this "2nd Mile Giving" that benefits the needy of the world, there's still time to stop in the church office with your gift.

Mo-Ranch Men's Retreat: Last call for this great time of fun and fellowship in the Hill Country April 29-May 1. The cost is only $66. Camperships are available. Men, we want you to experience this great adventure.

Mission Yearbook: It began with Elder Rosemary Bell's dream for a ministry to truckers at the large Brookville Truckstop of America in northwestern Pennsylvania. In 1980 the Rev. Glenn McQuown was called as the truckstop minister. The ministry of a truckstop chaplain is frequently to listen and counsel with the occasional need for crisis intervention, as homeless, runaways, stranded motorists, and destitute travelers often gravitate toward truckstops. Please pray for this imaginative and important ministry.

The scripture for lunch bunch meets each Wednesday at noon at the church for a learning time. Bring your lunch and join us! This week study Luke 24:35-48.

Deputy president presented

District No. 5 Deputy President Wilma Wise was presented at Hereford Rebekah Lodge 228. Her commission was read from Sue Monk, president of Rebekah Assembly of Texas.

Wise gave a short school of instruction and presented each member with a "hug" certificate and a ballpoint pen inscribed with her name. The love basket she carried was presented for gifts for use of residents in the Home of the Aged and the Children's Home.

Noble Grand Thama Pearson presided at the business session.

Thirty-four visits to the sick and 47 cheer cards were reported.

Dorothy Lundry was installed as vice grand by past district deputy Ursalee Jacobsen; Anna Conklin, Deputy marshal; and Lydia Hopson, deputy warden.

Irene Merritt served as hostess to others present. They included Leona Sowell, Marie Harris, Stella Hershey, Susie Curtsinger, Ben Conklin, Erma Loving, Jim Loving, Rosalie Northcutt, Winie Wiseman, Merle Boozer, Shirley Brown and visitor, Charlie Wise of Friona.

Tips given on removing odor from a refrigerator

There may be nothing more unappetizing than opening the refrigerator and being greeted by the odor of spoiled food, long after the food has been removed.

This kind of odor problem can occur if you're away and the refrigerator goes off for several days. Even an empty refrigerator in a rental home, camper or cabin that wasn't thoroughly cleaned before being closed for several weeks may also have a strong odor.

Removing the odor may not be easy, according to a home economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"Most people know to put an open box or dish of baking soda in the refrigerator to absorb the odor," says Marilyn Haggard. "But that will not be sufficient in all cases."

"When the odor remains, crush several charcoal briquettes in a dish and leave in the refrigerator for several weeks. If you can still smell the spoiled odor, replace the briquettes with an open dish of vanilla extract."

If nothing helps, the specialist says the insulation inside the wall may have absorbed the odor and it will be impossible to remove.

A more common problem occurs when someone leaves the refrigerator door open overnight, Haggard remarks. When this happens, odors can be more easily removed with baking soda, but the safety of your food may be in question.

"Foods such as uncracked eggs, fruit juices, fresh vegetables, butter, margarine and hard cheese will be fine," she says. "James, jellies, salad dressing, pickles and olives will also be safe."

Other foods may be questionable. "If your refrigerator is set at 40 degrees or lower, it's running properly, and the food still feels cold, most likely it will be safe to eat," Haggard says.

"This should be true of foods that were in the back of the refrigerator. But raw or cooked meats and casseroles, especially those sitting near the door, may have warmed to the point where bacteria can easily multiply," she explains.

The specialist advises throwing out any food you have doubts about to avoid the possibility of food-borne illness and its uncomfortable flu-like symptoms.

EMOTIONAL CLOSENESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Men play a vital role in the emotional recovery of their wives or girlfriends who are being treated for cancer. But, says a social worker at the University of Rochester Cancer Center, men often don't know how to help.

"For many men, it is difficult to act without having a solution to a problem," says Dr. Constance L. Mindell, chief social worker at the center.

Mindell, who works with cancer patients and their families, advises men to "be there for your wife, hold her hand, listen to her fears and realize that listening and touching is, in itself, therapeutic."
