Senate okays state budget

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators have approved a $33.1 billion state budget that includes a $2.1 billion shopping list of things they want only if the Legislature decides to raise taxes to pay for them.

The two-year budget, which was sent to the House on a 27-3 vote Thursday, was criticized for allocating too much money for highways at the expense of public school teacher salaries.

Without the Senate's "wish list," the budget proposes spending $30.9 billion from all funds.

House members are scheduled to debate their own $30.8 billion spending measure next week.

"They (the House) ought to be as worried as I am about the need that has been expressed uniformly across the state for a massive increase in funding for education, particularly in teacher salaries," Gov. Mark White said.

"The needs are great, and the time is now," White added at a Thursday news conference. "I am persuaded that sin taxes, or our luxury tax, will go a long way toward providing the needed education funds. We may need to find more sin to tax."

Sen. Grant Jones, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the proposed budget was the result of "some rather unpleasant decisions" as committee members were forced to slash $2.5 billion to match declining revenue estimates.

Texas' pay-as-you-go constitutional provision prohibits the Legislature from appropriating more money than the state comptroller says will be available. Comptroller Bob Bullock has dropped his revenue estimate three times this year, citing lower crude oil prices and a decrease in the sales tax. Sen. John Leedom, said, however, Texas "should not poor mouth it but be thankful for how fortunate we are compared to the rest of the states." He said the 1984-85 budget proposal is $4.3 billion — or 16.4 percent — higher than the current budget.

"This is far from a bare bones budget," said Leedom, R-Dallas, who suggested a statewide referendum on whether the Legislature should enact the first general tax bill in 12 years.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who voted against the budget, said the bill ensured "adequate funding for highways but did not apply the same kind of standard to education."

The bill would finance teacher salaries at the current rate, which includes automatic pay raises ranging from 4.1 percent to 9.4 percent over two years. This is far short of what White and teacher groups have requested.

Another $600 million, which depends on a tax increase, was proposed for a special education fund, which could be used by local school officials for pay raises and other school expenses.

Jones, D-Abilene, said teacher salaries had doubled since 1975, but Doggett responded that their purchasing power is 89 percent of what it was in 1970.

"Some people may not be embarrassed by the salaries proposed under this bill, but I am," said Doggett, D-Austin. Sen. Bob Vale, D-San Antonio, said with the student population increasing and teachers leaving the profession Texas has a "crisis in public education."

The proposed budget would appropriate $4 billion for the

Stone facing forbidding Central America challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the newly nominated special U.S. envoy to Central America, former Sen. Richard Stone is about to take on perhaps the most forbidding challenge of his public career, and he himself admits the odds against success are long.

President Reagan nominated Stone to the ambassador-at-large post on Thursday, predicting easy Senate confirmation for the Florida Democrat.

One encouraging sign for Stone, 54, was that Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., called him "an acceptable nominee" even though Tsongas has been one of the administration's toughest critics on Central America policy.

Tsongas said he would have preferred that Reagan nominate Sol Linowitz, who served former President Carter as negotiator for the Panama Canal treaties and for a Middle East peace settlement. But, said Tsongas, "you're not going to get a Sol Linowitz out of this administration."

A State Department official defended the choice of Stone, calling him a "doer" who has the proper credentials for the job: "a great big foot, a thick skin and a great big mouth."

The selection of Stone, known for his conservative views, appeared to reflect the influence of National Security Adviser William Clark and United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, both representing the administration's conservative wing.

Outlining his role, Stone said he will "invite opposition groups to participate in a peaceful political process, and to facilitate and support the efforts of Latin nations themselves to set their own agendas and advance their agendas toward peace." He admitted the "odds are long" against success.

Over the short term,

Stone's main task will be to try to create conditions in El Salvador leading to broad participation in the presidential elections set for December.

But Elliot Abrams, assistant secretary of state for human rights, said in a speech Thursday night that to force the Salvadoran government to negotiate with the guerrillas as equals would "risk its collapse" and subsequent anarchy. Abrams said also that "enlightened public opinion" in the United States is pressing for such negotiations.

There was little expectation that Stone will have much impact on El Salvador's guerrilla movement, which has dismissed the elections as a "farce." Some resistance to Stone from the Salvadoran establishment was likely as well.

President Alvaro Magana of El Salvador welcomed Stone's nomination, saying it was "a good idea to appoint a high-level official with a direct line to the White

Bike-A-Thon set Saturday

Registration for the countywide Cystic Fibrosis Bike-A-Thon will begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, with the event set to begin at 10:00 a.m. at Veteran's Park.

The Bike-A-Thon is open to everyone who wants to join in the fight against Cystic Fibrosis which, among genetic diseases, is the leading cause of death in children and young adults.

Sponsoring the event again this year is the Criminal District Attorney's office. DA Roland Saul and his staff will conduct the Bike-A-Thon and award prizes to the riders collecting the most money through sponsors.

Awards will include tee shirts to each rider who collects $25 or more. Young riders will also compete for a Huffy Pro-Thunder bicycle and a Huffy Omni 10-speed bike, while adult riders will be aiming at a Panasonic portable TV set.

According to Saul, the total amount collected from the sponsors will be based upon how many of the 20 miles in the route each rider completes. The event will cover a 10-mile loop twice, following a police escort provided by the Hereford Police Department.

Refreshments will be provided to the participants during the Bike-A-Thon, compliments of local merchants.

There is presently no cure for Cystic Fibrosis, which affects one of every 1,800 births. Youngsters with the disease may be smaller than their peers, tire more easily, and be out of breath. They may also have persistent coughs. Fortunately the disease is not contagious.

Deaf Smith County was number two in the state among areas which held Bike-A-Thons last year, and Saul and his staff are aiming at moving to the top this year.

Despite claiming innocent victims

Argentina says crackdown 'justified'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A crackdown that left thousands of Argentines dead in the 1970s was justified to thwart subversion, the military government says — while conceding that "errors" may have claimed innocent victims.

The ruling junta, in a report released Thursday, officially declared that those who disappeared during the campaign are dead but said the military acted to save the nation and would do the same again if necessary.

Human rights groups, which estimate between 6,000 and 15,000 people disappeared in Argentina between 1975 and 1979, condemned the junta's 22-page document. Its contents were broadcast nationwide Thursday night on television and radio.

"If the report accepts as reality that the disappeared — including children — are dead, we are faced with a horror that history and mankind must judge today," the Argentine League for Human Rights said in a statement.

The report, entitled "Final Document on the War Against Subversion and Terrorism," outlined the origins of guerrilla and terrorist activity in the late 1960s and attempted to justify the junta's actions against it.

Three main guerrilla organizations — the Montoneros, the People's Revolutionary Army and the Revolutionary Armed Forces — tried to overthrow the Argentine government in the mid-1970s. The junta's report said the subversives numbered 25,000 with 15,000 of them "trained and ideologically fanaticized to kill."

The leftists were virtually wiped out by the end of 1978, 2½ years after the military took power promising to eradicate subversion. The report gave no figures on the number of dead.

"Only history will be able to determine with precision who must bear the direct responsibility for unjust methods or innocent deaths," the report said.

It admitted that in the "near apocalyptic" climate of civil strife "errors were committed which, as in every armed conflict, may have sometimes gone beyond the limits of respect for fundamental human rights and which remain subject in each man's conscience to the judgment of God and the understanding of mankind."

Human rights organizations say the armed forces resorted to official terror to defeat the rebels. They contend most of the victims were abducted by security forces, tortured and summarily executed.

The regime repeatedly has refused to provide specific information about the people listed as missing. The junta's report said it was impossible to identify many of the revolutionaries killed because they used false documents and added that some guerrillas killed themselves or were killed by other revolutionaries.

The military took power in March 1976 in a coup that ousted President Isabel Peron. The government has scheduled general elections for Oct. 30 and transfer of power to elected authorities in January.

Local human rights groups wasted no time in bitterly condemning the junta's document.

The mothers of the Plaza de Mayo, women who took their name from the plaza where they have marched every week for six years to demand information about their missing children, issued a statement noting that the junta declared the anti-guerrilla campaign "acts of service."

"Are kidnapping, torturing, murdering and shamelessly lying then acts of service?" the mothers asked. "Only impudence and shamelessness can qualify these crimes as such."

The mothers demanded "the reappearance, alive, of the missing and the investigation and judgement of those responsible whatever the consequences."

Shultz contends desire is present

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says it may be more difficult than he expected to reach agreement on troop withdrawal from Lebanon, but "there is a genuine desire" by both Israel and Lebanon to do so.

"I thought it was going to be difficult when I started out ... And I am even more convinced (now) that it is tough," said Shultz, who meets today with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin for the third time in as many days.

"I can see that there are quite a number of difficult issues," Shultz said on his flight from Beirut to Jerusalem Thursday night.

But he added that "the general spirit of the people as I've talked to them gives me confidence that we'll get there."

Shultz spent five hours in Beirut Thursday with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel before shuttling back to Jerusalem.

The secretary of state told reporters he is ready to play a more energetic role in seeking a withdrawal agreement after spending two days sounding out Begin and Gemayel on their views. But he cautioned that an agreement was "not going to happen overnight."

Shultz said, as he has

Reagan to appear at Tower dinner

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is getting an early start on helping his political friends build their campaign finances for next year.

The president, who began fund-raising work for 1984 as early as last January with a campaign dinner in Chicago for Sen. Charles Percy, is the central attraction at a similar dinner in Houston tonight for Sen. John Tower, a key Reagan supporter in the Senate.

One Republican source said the dinner might raise as much as $2 million for the Tower re-election campaign, but Tower said earlier in the week a figure of $1 million was more likely.

Before the dinner, Reagan planned to visit the Cenikor Foundation, a non-profit drug and alcohol rehabilitation center that is supported by contributions and its own enterprise operations.

Tower, whose victory margins have been shrinking, squeaked by in 1978 when he defeated former Rep. Robert Krueger by 12,000 votes out of 2.2 million cast. In 1982, Texas Republicans suffered setbacks when incumbent

Indicators up 1.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main barometer of future economic strength rose 1.5 percent last month, officials reported today. It was the seventh gain in a row and an apparent new sign the young economic recovery will last.

The forecasting gauge, the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators, is a compilation of forward-pointing statistics covering manufacturing, employment, prices and other areas.

Based on past experience, the indicators forecast economic changes that will likely occur nine months in the future. So it now appears the recovery will last at least through the end of the year.

The March gain in the indicators was slightly greater than the 1.4 percent in February, but well below the 3.2 percent of January.

Seven of the 11 available indicators rose in March, with the biggest contribution coming from an increase in the prices of sensitive raw and semi-finished materials.

Although price increases are not good news in all ways, they can often be a sign of rising demand, and therefore an indicator of improving economic conditions.

Also pushing the index upward were increases for the average workweek, formation of new businesses, contracts and orders for new plants and equipment, stock prices and the money supply. In addition, deliveries were slower than in February, indicating a greater volume of business.

Index components showing a worse performance in March than in February included an increase in initial claims for unemployment benefits, and decreases in building permits, outstanding credit and orders for consumer goods and materials.

The overall index rose in March to 149.8 percent of the 1967 base. The accompanying Index of Coincident Indicators, designed to measure current conditions rather than forecast those of the future, rose 0.7 percent to 134 percent of its base during March.

The coincident index had dropped 0.5 percent in February after rising 1.3 percent in January.

Employees take pay cut to keep plant open

BORGER, Texas (AP) — Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union have decided that they are willing to take a 7½-percent pay cut in order to keep their jobs.

The rank and file voted Thursday night to accept company-proposed concessions in order to keep the Phillips Petroleum chemical and rubber complex here open.

"I'm pleased with the outcome of the election," said Jim Savage, chairman of the local union. "We recommend that the company's proposal be approved. With the way the economy going, we had to make some concessions."

Savage said the members agreed in a "close vote" to roll back a wage hike granted in January, and agreed to no pay increases until 1985.

Operating engineers at the plant have not yet agreed to the concessions. Talks with that group begin Friday.

Savage declined to release a vote count.

Law firm leaving TDC case on AG's orders

HOUSTON (AP) — Fulbright & Jaworski, which piled up bills of more than $1.2 million in less than two years, has phased out its work on the Texas prison reform lawsuit and turned the case over to the attorney general's office.

The prominent law firm wrapped up its work on orders by Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"The decision was made here that the work is primarily to be done in-house," David Richards, an executive assistant to Mattox, said Thursday. "We have an obligation, whenever we can, to handle the litigation of the state of Texas."

But the attorney general's office will continue to retain at least one law firm to assist in the case, Richards said.

Rick Gray, who left the attorney general's office when Texas Gov. Mark White took office, will serve as lead counsel on the prison case, he said.

In 1981, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler ordered sweeping changes within the Texas prison system, the nation's largest. The state still is litigating parts of the wide-ranging case.

The state hired Fulbright & Jaworski when it needed "extra manpower" to prepare a massive brief to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said Jerry Smith, a lawyer with the Houston-based firm.

After the appeals brief was filed, the firm's attorneys spearheaded the state's opposition to Vincent Nathan, who was appointed special master by Justice to oversee the reform efforts.

The state's vocal opposition was short-lived and the firm's role in the case has diminished in the last year, "as we believe it should have," said Smith.

During the height of the firm's efforts, however, "45 lawyers put in some time" on the prison case, Smith said.

Suspect free on bond after arraignment

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — An Edinburg man is free on bond following his arraignment on charges of murder and involuntary manslaughter in connection with the February traffic death of a Department of Public Safety trooper.

Salvador Sarsen Luna, 36, pleaded innocent during his arraignment Thursday before State District Judge John Dominguez, who scheduled a July 20 pretrial hearing. No trial date has been set.

Luna is accused of slaying trooper Ernesto Alanis, who was struck and killed by Luna's car as he investigated a traffic accident about 1 a.m. Feb. 27.

Alanis, 26, died of head injuries at an Edinburg hospital. He had been commended several times for his effort to keep drunken drivers off the roads.

Luna, who authorities said was drunk at the time of the accident, was arrested at the accident scene and charged with involuntary manslaughter.

He posted $25,000 bond and was released until he was indicted April 20 by a Hidalgo County grand jury.

Corsican group claims responsibility for bombs

PARIS (AP) — Fourteen small bombs went off in Paris, Marseille and Aix-En-Provence early this morning and the outlawed Corsican National Liberation Front claimed responsibility.

No injuries were caused by the bombs, which damaged baggage check areas in four major Paris railroad stations and a downtown Air France terminal, and banks, police buildings and telephone booths in the other cities.

The bombings were typical of the work of the tiny group seeking independence of the Mediterranean island from France. It was declared an illegal organization by the Paris government earlier this year.

The claim was made in a telephone call to news organizations in Ajaccio, Corsica, and was verified though acknowledged channels.

In the past, the Front has exploded up to 80 small bombs in one night on Corsica and the mainland. It usually times and locates explosions to avoid causing injury.

Swiss expel Soviet press official from Bern

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss government today expelled a Soviet press agency official, charging that his Bern office was a center of "agitation and subversion" in this neutral country.

The Foreign Ministry said it lodged a formal protest with the Soviet Embassy accusing the Novosti press agency office of "continued, grave interference in Swiss affairs incompatible" with its expected functions.

A strongly worded communique from the ministry said that under the leadership of Alexei Dumov, Novosti's director for Switzerland, the office had been involved in political activities ranging from masterminding anti-nuclear demonstrations to "paramilitary training" of youths.

Enterprise waited for tide, stuck five hours in bay

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — Makeup on waiting wives streaked in the rain and at least one wedding was put on hold as the USS Enterprise spent five hours rocking in the muck of San Francisco Bay "like a car stuck in the mud."

About 3,000 relatives and friends of the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier's 5,500 sailors were waiting Thursday as the ship wallowed like a giant beached whale, halted only 1,000 yards from its dock after a 46,500-mile, eight-month cruise.

Capt. Robert J. Kelly, who has commanded the Enterprise for 3½ years, explained that once the ship got stuck "all we could do was to wait for the tide."

Even Mr. Sulu — actor George Takei from the fictional starship Enterprise of "Star Trek" fame — was unable to help, although he was aboard the carrier as a guest.

The ship, which needs water at least 39 feet deep, was being towed through the 42-foot channel leading to its home dock at the Alameda Naval Air Station when it ran aground. The edges of the channel are 29 feet deep.

Seven tugboats pushed and pulled at the 21-year-old ship before finally freeing it at 3:12 p.m. with the help of a high tide and a burst from the ship's engines.

The ship's crew lined up on the port side in an effort to help tilt the ship and hundreds of tons of ballast were shifted, causing the ship to develop a 10-degree list to port.

Petty Officer Ron Ostarelo likened the 1,102-foot carrier to "a car stuck in the mud. You have to rock it back and forth to get it free."

"The cause is under investigation. We do not know exactly what happened," said Kelly. "We're trying to reconstruct the events."

The Navy said it had already begun a routine investigation into the incident. No one was hurt, and Navy officials said they did not think the $450 million ship, commissioned on Nov. 25, 1961, was damaged.

Kelly, recently recommended for promotion to commodore, said he developed a "very deep feeling in the pit of my stomach" when the Enterprise got stuck about 10 a.m. He was guiding the ship with the help of a civilian pilot at the time.

Takei said Kelly performed just as well as Star Trek's Capt. James Kirk would have at the moment of crisis. "We have a new drink now — the Enterprise on the rocks," he joked.

"It was the kind of thing where we were so close, yet so far. All you could do was grin and bear it," said Capt. Jack McAuley, whose wife was one of those waiting ashore.

Shirley Denson of Centerville, Ala., waited for Petty Officer Timothy Turner with one eye on the clock. The two planned to marry in the San Francisco County Clerk's office, if they could get there before it closed.

"There's got to be a justice of the peace somewhere," said the 33-year-old bride-to-be. "I just don't want it to be tomorrow — it's not soon enough. It should have been eight months ago."

She said she'd already been waiting "too long. And I don't want to wait longer. We're going to Vegas for five days — 4½ days, now."

15 arrested at drug bust

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Fifteen people, including one man who was called to get his son, have been arrested at Ball High School on charges of selling drugs to an undercover narcotics officer posing as a marijuana-smoking student, police said.

The investigation, from Jan. 28 to March 25, was initiated by Galveston Independent School District trustees and administrators, Sgt. Howard Picard of the Galveston Police Department said Thursday.

A 22-year-old undercover officer from Port Arthur said shaved his mustache, grew his hair "a little longer" and then enrolled in four classes at the high school. The agent deliberately did things to get himself suspended from school.

"It's good to see a school ready to get rid of drugs," the agent said. "I wasn't thrilled about making cases against young people with their lives ahead of them but I saw it as a way to help the school."

However, the agent added, "Students should have the right not to be approached by it (drugs) or be pushed into it."

Galveston and Port Arthur narcotics agents, as well as U.S. Customs agents and officers from the Galveston County organized crime control unit, converged on the school campus Thursday morning, Picard said.

Nine suspects were called from their classes, searched, handcuffed and taken to City Jail in a paddy wagon, Picard said. The other six were arrested later at their homes or on public streets, he said.

Picard said the agent thought the use of drugs at the school was not as bad as he thought it might be.

"He said it was probably the cleanest school he has been to," Picard told the Galveston Daily News. "The frightening thing is that we had an individual who was selling LSD."

Charged with delivery of marijuana were Vincent Alvarado, Michael O'Conner, James R. Killgore, Michael McChesney, George Jones, Earl D. Greer, all 17; Lewis Galicia, Ralph Joseph Rodriguez, and Roger Mendez Ramirez, all 18; Amado Lopez III, 19; and Benny Frederick Kline, 21.

Daniel Sampson, 18, and Durrell A. Williams, 19, each were charged with delivery and possession of marijuana.

Alvin Leon Stevenson Jr., 17, was charged with one count of delivery of marijuana and three counts of possession of a controlled substance — LSD and methaqualone.

Jerry F. Killgore, 47, was charged with delivery of marijuana. Picard said Killgore was arrested when he arrived at school to pick up his son.

Three students, ages 14 to 16, also were taken into custody by juvenile authorities, Picard said.

Superintendent Wayne Blevins said students who are found guilty will be suspended the rest of the school session and forced to repeat the year.

"A number of them are seniors, which means they won't graduate," Blevins said.

The investigation is continuing, and school officials will consider a recommendation from the officer to increase surveillance of drug trafficking, including the use of dogs to sniff lockers and cars for drugs, he said.

Wife of mentally ill soldier to get $9 million from U.S.

HOUSTON (AP) — The federal government has agreed to pay $9 million in damages for failing to diagnose the mental problems of an AWOL soldier who shot his pregnant wife and unborn son and killed his 2-year-old daughter before committing suicide, attorneys say.

Sherry Lea Peterson, 24, filed the lawsuit in 1980, claiming the Army had been warned that her estranged husband, Private David Peterson, was mentally disturbed, but failed to adequately treat him.

On Dec. 14, 1976, Peterson shot and killed his daughter, Amy, wounded his wife, who was 6½ months pregnant, and then killed himself.

Ms. Peterson, shot twice in the head, had to learn to walk and talk again, said her lawyer, Gary Stephens. She still suffers physical and psychological problems, and her right arm and foot are paralyzed. She has an arm in a sling but can walk with a brace on her right leg.

Eric was born handicapped less than a month later while Mrs. Peterson was unconscious in a hospital. The boy, now 6, suffered severe lung complications and brain damage.

Judge called 'big, old, fat politician'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has acquitted a man accused of assaulting City Councilman Bernardo Eureste, leading the councilman to label the judge a "big, old fat politician" and the district attorney a "Nazi."

Eureste was mugged by three men early Feb. 18 while sitting in a car in a San Antonio park with a young female aide.

He was stabbed and ran for help, while the aide was sexually assaulted.

Eureste immediately charged the highly publicized mugging was perpetrated by a cadre of paid assassins sent by the San Antonio police department. He never backed up the claim.

The councilman held on to his seat earlier this month after being forced into a runoff election.

State District Judge James Barlow ruled Wednesday that Edward Valdez, 20, was not guilty of attacking Eureka.

After District Attorney Sam Millsap said the charges against two other defendants may be dropped, Eureka accused Millsap of running a "little Nazi fiefdom" that discriminates against Mexican-Americans.

Attorneys for both sides had agreed to waive a jury trial and let Barlow decide.

The judge was highly critical of the state's case after rendering his verdict.

"As far as I'm concerned," Barlow said, "there was a serious question about the credibility of all the people involved in this case."

The defense called no witnesses.

Valdez had been charged with aggravated assault, and Barlow questioned whether the charge was accurate.

"The facts show clearly Councilman Eureka grabbed the knife," the judge said.

The female aide told prosecutors she would refuse to testify at any trials, forcing Millsap to drop sexual assault charges.

Eureka called Barlow "a big, old fat politician" and claimed former district attorney Bill White made Barlow "go out to get me because I worked to oust White and some of his good old boy friends."

"Someone asked me earlier if I think Millsap if a Democrat or a Republican," the councilman said. "I said he is a Nazi."

Shultz said he has ideas on how to resolve some disputes but not all of them.

In considering a possible increased role for American forces, Shultz said he already can envisage new areas where U.S. Marines can be deployed, but said, "I don't want to leave any impression at all that I am getting ready to propose American troops in a combat role in southern Lebanon. I am not contemplating that."

It now appears Shultz may remain in the Middle East for at least two more weeks, or until a May 9 meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris which he is scheduled to attend.

He said Thursday he has arranged a series of meetings with Begin to review U.S.-Israeli relations, including a discussion of President Reagan's faltering Mideast peace initiative.

Shultz said he will also try to go to Syria, Saudi Arabia and Jordan if there is time.

Tower

Gov. William Clements was defeated by Mark White, and Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen was re-elected in a landslide over GOP Rep. Jim Collins.

Earlier this month, Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said that Tower was one of the two most vulnerable Republican senators going into the 1984 election.

The Republican source, who asked that he not be identified by name, said that by raising money 18 months before the election, Tower was getting a leg-up on any potential challenger.

Four Democrats have been mentioned as possible challengers: Krueger, former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Rep. Kent R. Hance, and State Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

Tickets for the dinner at the Albert Thomas Convention Center range from $200 to $1,000. Among Tower's Washington colleagues expected to attend are Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, Assistant Majority Leader Ted Stevens of Alaska, and at least four committee chairmen from the Republican-controlled Senate.

In 1981 and 1982, Tower raised $1.4 million in anticipation of a re-election campaign. Brad O'Leary, a campaign consultant, said Tower is "sitting on a war chest of about $2 million and we haven't begun to do any serious fund-raising."

assistant, Will Ball, estimated that a statewide race in Texas in 1984 "is probably going to cost in excess of $6 million."

Tower, 57, was elected in 1961 to fill the seat vacated when Lyndon B. Johnson became vice president. Tower was elected with 56 percent of the vote in 1966, 53 percent in 1972, and just slightly more than 50 percent in 1978.

He has been one of Reagan's most loyal supporters in the Senate, and one White House aide said "no one has been any more supportive than Tower."

The aide said Reagan had agreed to attend the Percy and Tower fund-raising dinners as part of a commitment to visit six such events in 1983 on behalf of the Republican campaign committee.

'I hate Pepsi'

Teacher obsessed with Coke

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The den at Mark Lawrence's home is a shrine to the pause that refreshes — a massive collection of Coca-Cola signs, Coke bottles, Coke radios, pillows, umbrellas, trays, curtains and even a Coke machine.

"I hate Pepsi," says Lawrence, 30, an elementary school teacher and member of a national group of Coke-aholics called the Cola Clan.

Lawrence is so effervescent about Coke that instead of getting apples from his students, he gets additions to his Coke collection — such as a Coca-Cola eraser that smells like the soft drink.

"My students think I'm nuts," he said.

His wife, 29-year-old Jeanne Boyer, is a bit more diplomatic, even though she thinks things go better with iced tea.

"I try to show a wifely enthusiasm," said Ms. Boyer. "... At least it keeps him off the streets and into the junkyards."

Ms. Boyer even accompanied Lawrence to a national Cola Clan convention several years ago in Minnesota.

"The people were nice," she conceded, "but I didn't fit in."

Lawrence said the conventions are "fun. Besides, I meet people as crazy as I am."

thing for Lawrence. Among the items in his collection are toy Coke trucks, Coke thermometers, a Coke breadspread, Coke keychains, matchbooks, flashlights, salt and pepper shakers, tool kits, knives, shoelaces, door locks, tie tacks, ties, school boxes, lighters, checkers, ice picks, pretzel dishes and yo-yos.

There are Coke signs that rotate, light up and simply hang on the wall.

Ms. Boyer said she made her husband confine his collection to the den because "I couldn't take all that stuff in the living room."

Unlike some purists who want only antiques, Lawrence will settle for any Coke collectibles.

Lawrence's oldest item, for which he paid $100, is a small 1906 tip tray painted with a sweet young woman drinking a Coke. His newest acquisitions, costing a total of $12, are a Diet Coke pen, a pewter Coke toothbrush and a Coke Rubik's cube.

But Lawrence is proudest of the 61 decks of Coca-Cola playing cards. Primarily festooned with pretty, wholesome-looking young women, the decks cost anywhere from $100 to $500.

During a recent interview, Lawrence wore a Coke delivery man's shirt from the 1950s — complete with green pinstripes and "Enjoy Coca-Cola" patches. He admitted being a bit too embarrassed to wear the pants.

Lawrence stumbled onto his first and still-favorite find 13 years ago when he was house manager at a theater. While scavenging for movie projector parts at a rival theater that had been condemned, he was intrigued by a lighted waterfall-type sign that said, "Pause and Refresh. Drink Coca-Cola. Please Pay When Served."

Lawrence has been trying to slake his thirst for Coke memorabilia ever since.

"Maybe I've got a fraction of what's available," he said. "... I try to get a little of everything."

Ann Landers

Too many advantages

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you stand a letter that disagrees with the conciliatory tone most of your respondents have expressed in regard to adult children who have moved back with their parents because they have lost their jobs? The young man who wrote resented being asked personal questions such as "Where are you going?" You said, "Talk to them. They should respect your wishes." Why not lay it right out on the rug, Ann? That kid is invading the privacy of his parents' home. He is interfering with their plans in more ways than one, from cooking meals to going out, staying home quietly or having guests in. It inevitably means more work for mother.

Unless he is cooking for himself, cleaning up after himself, doing his own laundry, entertaining his friends elsewhere or paying for room and board, he has no right to complain.

I am willing to bet a dollar to a donut that his parents did not go home to their parents when things got rough. I know I didn't, and my parents COULDN'T. —We Made It On Our Own (Waterbury, Conn.)

DEAR WATER: Let's face it, this generation is not as rugged as we were, and a lot of it is our fault. Our children have had the disadvantage of too many advantages. We HAD to make it on our own. They didn't. That old safety net we put under them was mighty comforting. It let them know, "it's OK if you lose your footing. You won't fall far. We'll catch you."

Love doesn't mean protecting your kids from the lumps of the real world. It means letting them handle adversity on their own and learning, firsthand, how to cope with mistakes, failure, bum breaks and tough luck. This is what separates the men from the boys and the girls from the women.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: So many of your columns in recent months have dealt with marital problems. I read recently that almost as many people are getting divorced as are getting married. Perhaps the enclosed will do some good. Will you please print it?—Making It Out West

DEAR MAKING IT: Congratulations. May it be every thus. I liked what you sent and here it is:

HOW TO PRESERVE A HUSBAND

First, use care in the selection. Not too young, but tender, with a potential for growth.

Choose one that will last a lifetime. Like fine wine, it should improve with age. Do not put in hot water. This removes the sweetness and destroys the natural flavor. Prepare as follows: Saturate with love and compassion. Add a generous sprinkling of laughter and good humor. Spice with patience. Wrap well in a mantle of charity. Preserve over a good fire of steady devotion. Serve with peaches and cream. The poorest varieties may be improved by this process and kept indefinitely in any climate.—Author Unknown

Teen tells of life as alien transporter

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The transporter, his knees hunched close to his chest, rocked back and forth slowly as if to ward off a chill.

When he began to tremble, a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service anti-smuggling investigator asked him if he had been using drugs.

"No, no," the transporter answered. "I think he's just scared," the investigator said to his partner.

And well he should be. The 14-year-old boy was taken into custody by the Border Patrol near Freer for transporting illegal aliens.

"It's not unusual to see them this young," said one of the investigators.

The investigator, who asked that his name not be used, said smugglers are recruiting younger transporters because they know U.S. authorities will not prosecute a juvenile.

That's not always right, he said.

"The people running these outfits don't care if they lose a load or a transporter. They're paid up front so it doesn't bother them when these people are caught," explained the other investigator.

The boy, clad in dark brown pants, scruffy black shoes, dark T-shirt and a baseball cap, candidly admitted to the two investigators that he had been told to flee by the man who hired him.

"He said to throw the car into the brush and for me to run if the 'migra' tried to catch me," he said.

Border Patrol agents say that is the pattern they are seeing more and more.

Agents fear that sooner or later, some aliens will be killed when a car rams into a fence, or hits a tree.

"We're trying to apprehend the aliens, but more often it turns out that we have to rescue them from these people. The smugglers don't give a damn about them," one agent said.

What looked like easy money brought the 14-year-old boy more trouble than he ever imagined.

Born in Laredo, he was raised in Nuevo Laredo and has little education. Although he has an older sister and four younger brothers, he is the sole support of his family. Their father abandoned them years ago and "we haven't seen him since," the boy told investigators.

The boy worked as a dishwasher and then as a cook at a small restaurant here, but was let go several months ago. Unable to get a job, he sought employment in Nuevo Laredo and had been working at a garage.

He told investigators a man known only as "Fito" promised to pay him $400 to ferry a group of aliens to Houston.

Sometime during the day, the boy crossed to this side together with several other people. They were met by a man who, the boy said, lives near the river. A short time later, two other unidentified men came for them.

The aliens already were inside the car when he arrived at an undisclosed location, the boy said. He slipped into the driver's seat of a Mercury Cougar and joined the convoy. At the head was one man in a Cherokee who was serving as a scout, followed by a pickup with about 34 aliens.

"You know how to drive?" the boy was asked.

"Nah, just a little," he replied. "But there's nothing to it and I was told it's easy to drive on the highway. I just had to follow the people in front."

The Cherokee was stopped for questioning by the Border Patrol about 2 a.m. and the pickup quickly passed them up. The driver of the pickup tried to ram the vehicle into a fence before stopping. Most of the aliens escaped.

The boy was taken into custody, along with the aliens remaining.

Esler named executive vice-president at SPS

W.R. (Bill) Esler was named the executive vice-president of Southwestern Public Service Co. this week by the electric utility's board of directors.

Esler has served as SPS vice-president of engineering and construction since 1976. A native of Denison, Esler joined SPS in 1948 after earning a master's degree in electrical engineering at the University of Texas.

Esler's first company assignment was as a distribution, substation and operating engineer at Plainview. In 1955, he was named district superintendent at Borger and was appointed division superintendent in Amarillo in 1962.

In 1974, he became the company's chief engineer, a position he held until his promotion in 1976 to vice president. A registered professional engineer and U.S. Navy veteran of World War II, Esler is active in a variety of professional, utility industry, community and civic endeavors.

He serves on the board of the Texas American Bank, the YWCA, and the Salvation Army. He is a past president of the Institute of Electrical & Electronic Engineers, the United Way of Amarillo, Amarillo Aquatic Club, and the YWCA. He has served on the boards of the Selective Service and Rotary Club of Amarillo.

Esler has been chairman of the Salvation Army and YWCA fund drives, and served as secretary of the Amarillo Yacht Club. He is a member of the steering committee and a past chairman of the Southwest Electrical Distribution Exchange. He is a ruling elder of the First Presbyterian Church, Amarillo.

The Texas Society of Professional Engineers recognized Esler as the Outstanding Engineer of 1974. In 1973, he received the Harry Mays Memorial Award and the YWCA Service to Youth Award.

Esler and his wife, Jerre, have three sons—Vance and Clint of Amarillo, and Scott of Austin.

White disappointed, exhilarated after 100 days

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he "didn't worry much about being governor" until he was elected in an upset over Republican incumbent Bill Clements last year.

Now, after 100 days in office, he worries about only two things — time and money.

White faces the unhappy prospect of being the first governor in 12 years to preside over a state tax hike. Two of his campaign promises — to raise teacher salaries and not increase taxes — are on a collision course.

Reduced revenue predictions, which play havoc with the state budget, have been issued three times since Jan. 1 by Comptroller Bob Bullock, a fellow Democrat who says he can do White's job better.

Lawmakers faced with a potential tax increase on their records have been less than enthusiastic about the new governor's suggested solutions to the state budget crunch.

Time is his other crisis — he has little of it for his young family, or to come up with details of a long-term agenda that he has yet to bring into focus.

He blames post-campaign debt-paying and a system that forces a new governor to "play catch-up" with a Legislature already in session.

White can be witty and charming, but he has moods. It was obvious during a car ride to yet another personal appearance, this time in San Marcos, that it had already been a long day.

"As governor, I guess the big disappointment is just the incredible drain on time," White said.

"You don't have an opportunity to sit down and spend hours and hours working hands-on with various agencies trying to get them to do the things you want them to do, because your time is constrained by meetings with members of the Legislature, meetings with so-and-so so-and-so, the schoolteachers and administrators and various groups that are interested in legislation that's pending, plus you've got your roommate from 1958 who comes in and wants to say hi and you can't say, 'No, I can't see him today,' because he'll leave and say, 'You know, he wasn't so hot when he was my roommate. Now he thinks he's a pretty big deal.'"

He finally pauses and adds, "But very few people impose on you for more than a reasonable amount of time. What is difficult to understand is when you add up all those reasonable people, it almost becomes unreasonable."

"Other than that, it's been a very exhilarating time."

Despite the challenges of his first 100 days in office, White still revels in his victory over Clements, whom he calls "the $15 million man" or "that guy."

But the future holds hard philosophical choices for White, seen by some of his colleagues as an accomplished politician who is still an unknown quantity as a leader.

When he is asked what he considers his biggest accomplishment thus far, White ponders for several seconds before answering.

He decides on the Public Utility Commission that he virtually bullied into resigning. The three-member board now is made up totally of White's appointees, including the "housewife" he promised to appoint after Clements said he knew of no such person qualified to serve.

White is unhappy about suggestions that he made some campaign promises he will not be able to keep.

"If you look back at the promises I made, I promised to abolish the fuel adjustment clause, I promised to raise teachers' salaries. I don't know if I made any other promises of significance," he said and shrugged.

What about the one he made in Longview last year, when he told an audience, "I'll assure you we won't have to raise taxes while Mark White is governor?"

"There were no new taxes needed with $5 billion in surplus revenue," White said. "I was just dealing with the reality back at that time."

He predicted the Legislature will be "very close" to his tax proposals by the end of the session. He has suggested raising "sin taxes" on cigarettes, liquor and arcade games to pay for the 24 percent teacher pay raise he supports.

He has gradually shifted his position on other taxes, however, indicating he will stand by the teachers who helped elect him and swallow a general tax increase "if necessary" to give them a raise.

Previously opposed to an increase in the state gas tax, he recently said he would consider doubling the 5-cent-a-gallon tax to fund highway bonds — but only in a proposed constitutional amendment which would be put to a referendum.

"I'm not going to impose any increased taxes," White told reporters in Houston last week. "The people are going to have a chance to vote on it."

White's win over Clements — Texas' first Republican governor since Reconstruction and a supporter of Ronald Reagan — has put him on some "corner" lists in Washington. White has already been mentioned as a possible Democratic vice presidential candidate. His record as governor will not be scrutinized only by Texas voters.

"Not many people knew about Mark White in Washington," said a presidential candidate's campaign manager who asked that his name not be used. "He came out of the election viewed as a good campaigner, so they're watching. Some good candidates are lousy elected officials."

Also watching is Bullock, who told reporters that he plans to run for governor in 1986.

"My lord, I'd take a test with him any day of the week about government," Bullock said of White in a recent interview. "He's had no legislative experience, and that's being reflected at this time."

"He could have run last time," said White of Bullock, "a little while back when I stood up and said I'm willing to run. I don't know if he missed that last election or not. We just got through with one. He could have been in it if he wanted to be governor. Maybe he would have won. But we were successful against a $15 million man, and whatever Mr. Bullock wants to do he's free to do."

White, a protege of former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, was considered the conservative among the field of Democrats who did seek the gubernatorial nomination last year. Since assuming office, he has shifted to a populist image.

He became the first governor to go to the voters via television commercials.

As soon as he was sworn in on Jan. 18, White led reporters and well-wishers to the Governor's Mansion where he cut from the front gate a chain and lock installed just for that purpose, then invited everybody inside.

In February, he received a summons for jury duty. Instead of quietly disposing of it, White flew to his hometown of Houston to wait with the panel of other prospective jurors. White was not selected for service, however.

During a February trip to Washington, White took on the Reagan administration's economic policies, telling the Democratic National Committee, "All you have to do is walk a few blocks from our Capitol there in Austin, as I did two days ago, to find people living in makeshift shacks of cardboard with a piece of plastic the only roof over their head."

After the Dallas Times Herald ran a story saying Austin officials could find no such shacks, White interrupted his weekly news conference to lead reporters on a brisk walk to the creekside shanties, actually about a dozen blocks from the Capitol, and visited with the people living in the camp.

He has traveled to Chicago to try to persuade Micro Electronics Corp. to locate a new manufacturing plant in Texas. He sees high-technology industry as the key to long-term economic prosperity and was not shy about telling a recent meeting of oil workers they should seek new training in computers.

His speeches are not always totally convincing, however. Last month, he expounded at length to a visiting group of community business leaders on the virtues of Wichita Falls. One man finally called out meekly, "We're from Sherman."

White said Sherman was nice, too.

He told an audience in a "little bitty hotel in College Station" that Alaska's tourism advertising campaign was very effective, but added that he didn't know why "anyone would want to go to a cold, barren place like that."

White said the comment was offered in jest, but it reached Alaska, and Alaskans responded by writing insulting songs about White and sending him a small, stuffed white rat. "They said that was a Texas polar bear," White told an audience in Washington.

White will vacation, not in Alaska, but in Europe after the Legislature completes its work.

The immediate budget quandary may be behind him when he returns, but other serious problems for Texas which have been pushed into background will re-emerge.

A fluctuating oil market continues to affect Texas' economy from Odessa to Beaumont. Meanwhile, the Rio Grande Valley remains at record unemployment following repeated devaluations of the Mexican peso.

The emotional and politically touchy problem of dealing with an influx of illegal aliens will fall on White's shoulders as governor of the state with the longest U.S. border with a foreign country.

White candidly told a news conference in March that he "can find no consensus" for any solution and appointed a task force to wrangle with the issue and make recommendations to Congress, where immigration policy is formulated.

The federal government is seeking a spot for a nuclear waste dump, and the Texas Panhandle is on a list of potential sites. White is trying to block it.

White said twice problems and his own "program development" in such areas as school discipline and crime prevention will not give him any more time after the Legislature completes its work to spend with his three children, Wells, Andy and Elizabeth.

That bothers him, he said. "Yeah, it really does, because they're at a really critical stage. They're getting to the point now, Wells particularly is 12 and going to have a lot of changes in his life, both at school and every other way," White said. "I think Andy (10) is so close behind him, it's almost hard to distinguish between the two, so for that reason their problems are potentially more acute right now. Elizabeth (8), I think, is still enjoying the novelty of it all and giggles a lot right now just out of the 'this is fun.' I don't think she views it as any hardship on her as yet."

First Lady Linda Gale White says she told the children they would see more of daddy when the election was over. Now, she says, she tells them to wait until the legislative session ends.

But when she picks up a mansion phone to call her husband, she says, "That's one of the pluses of this job — I can always find him."

White says all in all he, too, is happy that he is governor.

"Can you think of anything better than being governor of Texas?" he asks. "You don't have to worry about the bomb. All you have to worry about is where they put the nuclear waste."

Thrill of Competition

Fourth, fifth and sixth-grade students from Hereford elementary schools competed Thursday in the annual Kiwanis Club track meet at Whiteface

Stadium. The one-day event attracted several hundred youngsters who competed in high jumping, running, long jumping and shot put events. As you can tell from the expressions on some of the participants, the competition was intense. (Brand Photo by Les Giles)

Fires 4-under 67

Wadkins Nelson Classic leader

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Lanny Wadkins considered the shot facing him: 208 yards, uphill, into a stiff Texas wind.

"I told my caddy to give me the 3-wood," Wadkins said. "I told him, 'I know I can hit a 3-wood 208 yards, wind or no wind.'"

The wind, however, 20-25 miles per hour and gusting higher, was stronger than he thought. He was about nine yards short on the tough, controversial final hole, but made the long putt that finished off a 4-under-par 67 and provided him with the first round lead Thursday in the $400,000 Byron Nelson Classic.

Wadkins, who won the Tournament Players Championship in the howling winds of Sawgrass in 1979, shrugged off the effects of the gales that raked the new 7,002-yard Las Colinas Sports Center course.

"If you're going good you can handle the winds. If you're not going good you can't handle the winds," said Wadkins. And, quite obviously, the aggressive, gambling Wadkins has it going good right now. He's won two tournaments and $164,225 in his last four starts.

"I'm just carrying over from the last four weeks," said Wadkins, currently the season's leading money-winner.

He admitted, however, that the 18th, a par-4 that measures 466 uphill yards, and this day played directly into the teeth of the wind, was a severe test. "You've got to stand on your head to hit two big shots, uphill, into the wind," he said.

"I'm not sure it's fair, but it's a golf hole and everybody has to play it," said Canadian Dave Barr, who failed to find the green with a 2-iron. Barr birdied seven times in one stretch of nine holes, but finished bogey-bogey for a 68 that left him alone in second.

"Probably the best stretch of holes I've played in more than two years," he said of the string that began with a chip-in birdie on the sixth.

Rex Caldwell, the man who lost two consecutive playoffs and had a string of three second place finishes in a row early this year, was more outspoken about the 18th.

He bogeyed the hole, hitting a driver from the fairway, to drop back to 69, two off the pace and 2-under-par on the course that is being played in Tour competition for the first time.

Jack Nicklaus, who spiced his effort with a 3-iron shot to three feet for an eagle-3 on the seventh, also was at 69 along with Mark Lye, Brad Bryant, Doug Tewell, Pat Lindsey and Mick Soli.

"No complaints for an opening round," said Nicklaus, who holds a record 17 major professional titles.

Tom Watson, who won this title four times and was second on two other occasions when the tournament was played at Preston Trail, continued to have his difficulties. Watson, a non-winner this season, struggled to a 75. PGA champion Ray Floyd and Nelson defending titleholder Bob Gilder each shot 73.

DeVicenzo, Funseth one shot back

Fleck, Hawkins forge Legends lead

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Oldtimers Jack Fleck and Fred Hawkins, who rarely shared the spotlight during their regular playing days, owned a one-shot lead going in today's second round of the $485,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament and they owed it all to their "young" putting nerves.

"We made some field goals out there," said Fleck, the 1955 U.S. Open champion who beat out Ben Hogan. "It seemed like every hole was a dream."

The 62-year-old Fleck, who won only two PGA tour events, and the 59-year-old Hawkins, who was a runnerup 28 times on the PGA Tour, birdied seven of the first eight holes Thursday for a tournament record 28 on the front nine.

They coasted home with a 1-under par 34 to finish with an 8-under par 62 over the tight but testy Onion Creek Golf Club, good for a one-shot edge.

Argentina's Roberto De Vicenzo, who eagled the first hole, and substitute Rod Funseth went out in 32 and came home in 31 for a 63.

The 59-year-old Hawkins, who won two PGA tour events and quit golf for 12 years before he rekindled his interest, holed putts of 30, 4, 10, 20, and 10 feet on the front nine.

Fleck made a 30-footer and a 15-footer for birdie and saved par from 4 feet after coming out of a bunker.

Hawkins' sank a 20-foot putt for par on the rugged 440-yard par 4 No. 15 and Fleck dropped a 3-foot birdie on the 16th green.

"We ham-and-egged it all day," said Hawkins. "It's the best start we ever had here. We finished ninth last year."

Gene Littler and Bob Rosburg, were two shots back, touring the testy 6,584-yard course in six-under-par 64.

Defending champions Sam Snead and Don January posted a 4-under-par 66 and January said "I played terrible. I just couldn't get it going."

January shot a course record 10-under-par 60 in Wednesday's Pro-Am and Snead had an ace.

De Vicenzo, who teamed with Julios Boros to win this event in 1978, was originally scheduled to play with Bob Goalby.

Goalby injured his back lifting his golf bag and Funseth, who just turned 50 and earned over $600,000 on the PGA Tour, was rushed to Austin.

"It will probably take four 62s to win here because the course is in such great shape," said Fleck. "I just hope we keep putting like we did. It was really incredible."

"Hawkins had predicted we were going to get off to a fast start. I just hope we hold up today."

'I'm not worried': Moe

Nuggets host Spurs in key NBA playoff clash

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Coach Doug Moe believes the Denver Nuggets are at their best when things are bleakest, and if that's true, the San Antonio Spurs could be in trouble.

The Nuggets are down 0-2 in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series with the Spurs, while league scoring champion Alex English and star center Dan Issel are both nursing injuries going into tonight's third game in Denver.

"I'm not worried," Moe said Thursday. "When things go well, this team goes right into the tank."

In the other Western Conference semifinal, Los Angeles is at Portland tonight in a series the Lakers lead 2-0, while Milwaukee is at Boston for the second game of an Eastern Conference semifinal that the Bucks lead 1-0. The New York Knicks, trailing 0-2, host Philadelphia in the other Eastern semifinal on Saturday. English, who averaged 28.4 points this season, missed Wednesday night's 126-109 loss with an ankle injury, and Issel, third on the team with a 21.6 norm, suffered a strained tendon in his left knee during the second game.

The status of both players is uncertain for tonight.

Moe says he will stick with his strategy of trying to stop San Antonio's all-stars, Artis Gilmore and George Gervin, which has freed point guard Johnny Moore to shoot from the outside or find someone else open.

This strategy has backfired in the first two games. Moore had 24 points and 17 assists in the opener and 26 points and an NBA playoff record 20 assists in Game 2.

"If they beat us that way (from the outside), you congratulate them," Moe said. "If we give Johnny Moore the outside shot, we can shut off the inside. He's going to have those shots the next two games, and we're going to win them. He's going to be wide open."

"If they slough off, I'll continue to shoot," said Moore, who scored 12.2 points per game and was second in the NBA in assists during the regular season. "They're playing the odds. It's obvious they'd rather have me shoot the long jumper than Artis, who has the high percentage shot. Unfortunately for Denver, I'm hitting that shot."

"They can't give Johnny Moore that shot like they used to," said Gervin, who celebrated his 30th birthday Wednesday night with 30 points.

Portland goes home hoping that its rabid followers can make up the difference against the Lakers. The Trail Blazers have sold out for every home game for six years and 12,666 will attend tonight's playoff meeting.

"We don't want to let Blazermania get started," Lakers forward Jamaal Wilkes said, but Los Angeles had the luxury of knowing the Trail Blazers must win the next two games at Portland to have a realistic chance of winning the series.

"The pressure is off us," Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "If they lose one in Portland it's going to be very tough for them to win the series."

Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points to spearhead the Lakers' 118-97 victory over Portland in the clubs' opening playoff game. Then, with two and three men guarding him when he had the ball, he pumped in 37 points and had a team-high seven assists in the Lakers' 112-106 triumph Tuesday night.

"He's awesome all the time, but he's more awesome in the playoffs," Lakers guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson said of his teammate. "In the playoffs, it's like his time of the year. In tight games, you say, 'Please, big fella, save us.'"

Laker Coach Pat Riley said of Abdul-Jabbar's performance in Game 2 of the series: "They didn't hesitate to triple-team him, but he was awesome anyway."

But Portland forward Mychal Thompson said he doubted the 34-year-old Abdul-Jabbar would continue to play so well.

"As great as he is, he can't keep scoring as much as he has been in the past two games," Thompson said.

The Celtics, who lost the opener 116-95, also are in a virtual "must-win" situation in tonight's second game against Milwaukee.

Only four teams in NBA playoff history have won a series after falling behind 2-0. Of those four, only the 1969 Los Angeles Lakers have come back to win a series after losing the first two games at home.

The Lakers won four games in a row, three on the road, to beat San Francisco 4-2 in a 1969 Western Conference semifinal.

Thoughts of .400 .....again

Brett on batting rampage

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

Kansas City's George Brett is on a batting rampage again and, with magnolias not yet in full bloom, baseball buffs are talking guardedly about maybe getting another .400 hitter after more than 40 years.

It's been a long wait.

Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox, .406 in 1941, was the last and, before him, Bill Terry of the old New York Giants, .401 in 1930. It's one of the game's most elusive goals, but both Williams and Terry think Brett is the man to do it.

"It has to happen," says Williams, now an inveterate fisherman who spends more time casting a rod than hanging around ballparks. "It's not as out of reach as Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak or Lou Gehrig's consecutive games (2,130).

"I don't know this boy up there," says Terry, an ex-Tennessean who operates a Buick agency in Jacksonville, Fla. "He seems to have good eyes and a fine swing. He can hit to all fields.

"I thought he would do it three years ago when he made such a good bid. One of my mechanics was from Kansas City. When he went home, I told him to see Brett and tell him I was pulling for him."

Cherished records continue to fall in this old game built on legend and statistics. The modern athlete keeps defying the supposition that he is soft and pampered compared with the rugged characters who came off the farms and out of the mines in the early part of the century.

Babe Ruth's home run marks died on the bats of Roger Maris and Hank Aaron. Pete Rose already has erased many of Ty Cobb's durability records and is zeroing in on the proudest, Cobb's 4,191 hits.

Only Wednesday, Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros struck out his 3,509th batter and scaled a Walter Johnson plateau that had stood since 1927.

At the moment three records appear inviolate — besides the consistency streaks of DiMaggio and Gehrig, the 511 pitching victories of Cy Young. Gaylord Perry, 44 years old, is still some 200 away.

The indefatigable Rose has challenged DiMaggio's hitting streak and along with Steve Garvey is building up astounding figures for consecutive games played, but there seems little chance of either — or anybody else — reaching the plateaus of the two Yankee greats.

When George Brett departed New York Wednesday with the Royals, he was leading the American League with a .466 batting average, with five home runs and 19 runs-batted-in. His strong start brought back memories of the 1980 season when he flitted around the .400 mark deep into the season, finally finishing with .390.

Unwilling helpers

Record contributors

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

When Montreal's Brad Mills took a curve on the corner to become the 3,509th strikeout victim in Nolan Ryan's fabulous career, he earned a line in the baseball record book. A negative one perhaps, but a line nevertheless.

"If I had my choice," Mills said, "I'd rather get in some other way."

But he's got plenty of unwitting company — players who contributed to a slice of baseball history, even though that wasn't exactly what they had in mind at the time.

There was Milwaukee pitcher Doc Medich and catcher Ted Simmons, victimized when Oakland's Rickey Henderson stole his 119th base on the road to 130, breaking Lou Brock's record last season.

There was pitcher Pat Zachry, then with the New York Mets, surrendering a single to Pete Rose on July 25, 1978 that broke the modern National League consecutive game hitting streak of 37 games held by Tommy Holmes. Zachry was so upset that he kicked the dugout step, broke his foot and missed the rest of the season. Rose's streak reached 44 before it was halted.

There was Tracy Stallard of the Boston Red Sox, who threw the pitch Roger Maris hit for his 61st home run, the shot that broke Babe Ruth's record in 1961.

Mills' strikeout will be remembered, but perhaps the most famous called third strike in history was the one Dale Mitchell of the Brooklyn Dodgers took, also as a pinch hitter, on Oct. 8, 1956. He was the 27th batter in Don Larsen's perfect game for the New York Yankees, the only no-hitter in World Series history.

"We were in the game," Mitchell said. "He was pitching good, but he had been fortunate. (Jackie) Robinson bounced a ball off the third baseman and got thrown out by the shortstop. How often does that happen? It was only 2-0 and we've all seen pitchers lose a no-hitter and then, right after that, lose the game."

So the Dodgers were conceding nothing to Larsen, even with two out in the ninth inning, when Manager Walt Alston turned to Mitchell to bat for Sal Maglie.

"It was no surprise. I was a left-handed hitter. Larsen was a righty. Everybody knew I'd be the guy. Alston said, 'Get a bat, go up and hit one.' Twenty-six guys had been up and down. But that's the life of a pinch hitter. It was no big deal."

Larsen worked carefully. "I had a pitch to hit, a curve on 1-1 that hung," Mitchell recalled. "But I fouled it off. When you go up there, you look for that one pitch to hit. If you get two, you're fortunate."

Mitchell was not. Larsen zipped a fastball by him and plate umpire Babe Pinelli's arm shot up. Strike Three!

"It was over fast," said Mitchell. "A called third strike and everybody ran off the field. There was no chance to argue."

Pinelli retired after that Series. He should have retired before it," he said.

Mitchell batted once more as a pinch hitter in the seventh game of the Series and then he also retired, leaving baseball after 11 years with a career batting average of .312. He'd rather be remembered for that.

Vilas advances in WCT Finals

DALLAS (AP) — Guillermo Vilas said two jokers sitting at court-side bothered his game. But it was Vitas Gerulaitis' blistering serve that really made the difference.

Gerulaitis moved into the semifinals of the World Champions of Texas Finals here with a 7-6 (7-3), 6-4, 6-2 win over Vilas.

The 28-year-old New Yorker fired off 17 aces to even the pair's eight-year rivalry at six matches apiece. Vilas had no aces.

"I served terrible," said Vilas, a native of Argentina. "But on the changeover I had a couple of guys sitting behind me telling jokes so loud I had to tell the referee to quiet them down. After that, I couldn't get myself together."

Gerulaitis, who advanced to the quarter finals with a tough four-set win over Jose-Luis Clerc, was together throughout the match Thursday night.

"I usually have a pretty good service game when I play him," said Gerulaitis. "Because he guesses on forehand or backhand. If I'm guessing well, I should get quite a few aces and near aces."

Quarter final play was scheduled to continue today with top-seeded Ivan Lendl facing Steve Denton and No. 4 seed Kevin Curren playing Bill Scanlon.

Vilas, appearing in the Finals for the first time since 1976, stumbled through four double faults. Two came in one game with Vilas leading the first set 5-4. Gerulaitis tied the set and went on to win it in a tie-breaker.

Gerulaitis, who lost to Bjorn Borg in the finals of the 1979 tournament here, downplayed a recent change in his serve.

"I quit looking back over my shoulder before I serve, but the rest of it is the same," he said. "I only did it because my coach, Harry Hopman, told me it looked pretty ridiculous."

Vilas, 30, has won five tournaments in the past year and has played in the finals of eight more.

Stocks rallying round the world

Prices are booming on stock exchanges around the world, breaking decade-old records and generating big profits for millions of investors.

"It seems to move in waves," Ib Paaschburg, managing director of the Copenhagen Stock Exchange in Denmark, said of his market's record rise. "I can't see the end of it."

An index of prices on the Copenhagen exchange has risen 38 percent since it started Jan. 1, and the daily trading session has been extended from 2 1/2 hours to four to accommodate the surge in trading volume.

In Sweden, volume on the Stockholm exchange has been so heavy that trading will be halted for six sessions, starting today, to allow the central computer to catch up.

In Copenhagen, the bond market was closed briefly earlier this month for similar reasons.

The trend is a hopeful sign for more than those people with money in the market.

The climb in stock prices means investors — from the housewife who owns a dozen shares of stock to the huge companies with million-dollar portfolios — see better economic times ahead. If they are right, the change should be seen soon.

The world economy has been mired in recession since 1979, stifled by high interest rates, high inflation and rising oil prices. In recent months, however, inflation has declined to the slowest pace in years, borrowing costs have dropped and oil prices have tumbled.

"What the stock market is doing is betting that ... the United States is out ahead of the pack and that, in the months ahead, we will see convincing evidence that the world economy is indeed bouncing back," said Robert Parry, chief economist at Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles.

Stock exchange indexes have set records in New York, London, Tokyo, Copenhagen, Amsterdam and Frankfurt this month. Stock indexes in 15 capitals are at or near their one-year highs, according to Capital International of Geneva, Switzerland.

Capital International's composite index of 19 stock exchanges hit its highest level in a year during the week ended April 21, up 47 percent from the year's low.

The New York Stock Exchange, the biggest in the world, has been on a tear since last August. In that time, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, the most widely known American index of prices, has jumped more than 55 percent to record levels.

This week the Dow Jones average topped the 1,200 mark for the first time ever.

And while the euphoria for stocks has spread worldwide, the main catalyst remains American. Signs of a pickup in the U.S. economy are growing stronger, and economists say American economic growth will help pull other countries out of recession.

The U.S. gross national product, measuring the value of all goods and services produced in the nation, rose 3.1 percent in the January-March quarter — the biggest increase since the first quarter of 1981, before the recession started.

Earlier this week, the Conference Board, a business-sponsored research group in New York, said U.S. financial executives that it surveyed believe the U.S. economic recovery would pick up speed this year and be sustained at least through 1984.

Recent U.S. government

reports have shown improvement in housing, industrial production, retail sales, inflation, unemployment and worker productivity.

Those indicators have been a catalyst for the stock market because investors believe economic recovery will mean higher profits for the companies in which they invest.

Signs of economic gain are fewer and less convincing in some other industrialized countries. But even in Japan, whose economy is stagnant, a government report this week said exports of autos and other products are reviving.

The Tokyo exchange index has hit record highs more than a dozen times in the past six weeks. Kunio Misaki, general manager of stock trading at Nikko Securities Co., said he believes the rally will continue, "with little risk of a downside."

In the financial capitals of Europe, politics has played nearly as big a role as economics in sustaining the surge of stock prices, international economists said.

The economic policies of conservative leaders such as Chancellor Helmut Kohl in West German and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in Britain are viewed by many investors as good for business — and thus good for growth in stock values.

"Stock markets generally like a move to the right politically," said John Ford, an international equity specialist at T. Rowe Price International Fund in New York.

Kohl's election in March, for example, was considered an important fuel for a rally on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange, where the main stock index is only slightly below the all-time high set in 1960.

In London, where the Financial Times stock index has risen nearly 22 percent in the past year to a record high, the market has been boosted by speculation that Mrs. Thatcher will call an early election and win.

Racial tension surrounds sentence in Hispanic family's death

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — This quiet town has been torn by racial tension since a soldier who got "stumbling drunk" received probation for running over and killing a Mexican-American family of four.

Demonstrators carry picket signs, three jail inmates have launched a hunger strike and this week a largely Hispanic group led a march — all to protest what they consider excessively lenient treatment by authorities.

Comal County District Attorney William Schroeder prosecuted Pfc. William Dale Savage only for the death of the father. The Hispanic community in this town, which was settled by German immigrants, demands that he be tried for the other three deaths.

"If this had been a Mexican-American man running over a German family of four, there's no doubt they would have tried all four cases," Hispanic leader Mack Martinez said.

Savage, 23, assigned to the Army's Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, had downed several beers the night of Oct. 30 at New Braunfels' Wurmfest, an annual celebration of its German heritage.

Ruben Saucedo, his pregnant wife, Hortencia, and their two young children were crossing a highway just outside town when Savage's yellow Volkswagen plowed into them.

Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMio testified that Savage was "stumbling drunk" and registered almost double the legal limit of intoxication.

But Schroeder steadfastly has refused to prosecute Savage further and now he enters the courthouse through the back door.

"There's such a thing in this country as cruel and unusual punishment," Schroeder said. "What's the point of putting that man through four trials? A jury has spoken. A man has been convicted of involuntary manslaughter. If justice is not that jury's verdict, then what is justice?"

The jury, which included one Hispanic, recommended a probation sentence, and the trial judge accepted that recommendation on April 15.

Hispanic leaders bitterly contend there is no justice in New Braunfels for Mexican-Americans, who make up about 30 percent of this picturesque Hill Country town's population of 22,400.

"There's a long tradition of racism against Mexican-Americans in New Braunfels," said Martinez, an Austin lawyer representing a group called the Committee for Justice for All.

Several years ago, U.S.

Rep. Henry Gonzalez of nearby San Antonio, a Hispanic, was denied entrance to a city park.

Justice for All has asked State District Judge Robert Pfeuffer, who presided over Savage's trial, to call in a special prosecutor from the Texas attorney general's office, insisting that Savage be held accountable for all four deaths.

Pickets tote signs outside the courthouse every day now, and most placards include references to a fifth death — Mrs. Saucedo's unborn child.

Savage, of Burlington, Iowa, cried when telling the jury how he tried mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on Saucedo, who died along the edge of the road.

Schroeder pressed for the maximum penalty, 10 years in prison, after Savage was convicted April 14. But he said he could tell the jury was sympathetic to the private.

"He was really very pathetic," Schroeder said of Savage. "He was absolutely in agony about it."

Savage, who had no previous record, also was fined $5,000. He since has returned to the Army base and has had no comment on the case.

Little rules to live by: If there's a better way to do it, you won't learn of it till whatever it is done.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Coffee and 'edginess'

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband drinks about three pots of coffee a day. He seems to be on edge all the time and he says he gets nervous and weak spells if he doesn't get a bite of something to eat. He says he feels like he will pass out. Could this be from coffee? He has had his blood sugar tests run and the sugar was OK.

DEAR READER — If your husband drinks a lot of strong coffee, he is getting a lot of caffeine. Caffeine is a drug. It stimulates the nervous system. It stimulates the release of adrenaline and sensitizes the body to adrenaline.

Adrenaline is the "fight or flight" hormone released under stressful circumstances. It has widespread effects throughout the body.

Feeling shaky, nervous and anxious is the expected response to too much caffeine. You can think of caffeine as causing the same symptoms that anxiety causes.

It is the caffeine in coffee that led to the general recognition of "coffee nerves." It will also increase the resting heart rate, the tendency to have irregular heartbeats (which can be serious in certain circumstances) and perhaps the blood pressure as well. It has the opposite action of tranquilizers. No wonder your husband is on edge.

I'm glad you mentioned that he already had his blood sugar evaluated or I would have gotten a raft of letters insisting that his problem was low blood sugar. Anxiety, low blood glucose and caffeine all have things in common. Anxiety causes a release of adrenaline. A low blood glucose causes a release of adrenaline. Caffeine causes a release and increased sensitivity to adrenaline. No matter which mechanism induces it, the adrenaline action is the same, causing that edgy feeling, sweating, fast heart — the works. And the nicotine in tobacco has an adrenaline action, too.

So anyone who is "edgy" would be wise to avoid caffeine whether it is in coffee, tea, colas or other sources. To give you a complete picture on the problems of caffeine, I am sending you The Health Letter 14-4. Controversial Beverages: Coffee, Tea, Colas and Chocolate. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am one of many people who read your column here in Brazil. When I was 12 years old I had tetanus. Now I am 29. I would like to know what effects tetanus will have on my adult life and also if there is any danger to my descendants.

DEAR READER — The bacteria that causes tetanus produces a toxin that affects the nervous system. This in turn causes the muscle spasms that cause "lockjaw" and tetanic muscle spasms. But once the illness is over, you will not have any further damage to your nervous system or muscles. In other words, your illness will have no new effects on you or on any of your descendants.

Tetanus is caused by a bacteria that is prevalent in the soil and also in the feces of domestic animals. If a wound is contaminated with the tetanus spores, they may multiply and release the toxin. Tetanus is still a major problem in some areas of the world. It can be prevented by a good immunization program and proper treatment of any wounds when they occur.

FAITH MAKES GOOD NEIGHBORS OF GREAT NATIONS

The boundary line dividing two countries can become a barricade of mutual hostility; but in the case of Canada and the United States it has always served as a bridge of friendship between two peoples with such trust, respect and understanding as to make the celebration of Canada-U.S. Goodwill Week quite unnecessary. Nowhere along the three thousand-mile borderline that spans our continent have security measures ever been needed, and the citizens on both sides may enter and leave each other's land whenever they wish. This is a fine example of the spirit of brotherhood that has been taught by every religious faith, in every land. Wherever you live, you will learn this by attending the Church of your choice.

A living proof to all the world of faith in brotherhood.
