U.S., Soviets starting new talks

- On strategic missiles -

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) - The United States tries to break the deadlock in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks today by offering the Soviet Union a new proposal for reducing long-range nuclear arms.

The meeting of the full Soviet-U.S. delegations today opens a fifth round of 15-month-old talks aimed at reducing strategic nuclear weapons. They parallel the separate Intermediate Range Nuclear Force talks on limiting medium-range missiles in Europe.

Although Rowny and Karpov met cordially Wednesday outside the ornate villa at the Soviet embassy after a one-month recess, the official Soviet news agency Tass branded Reagan's new proposals "vague, obscure and unclear."

Reagan called for a "build-down," or destruction of at least 5 percent of each side's strategic missiles a year, while offering to negotiate limits on long-range bombers and air-launched cruise missiles. The United States holds a 410 to 343 edge over the Soviet Union in bombers. Reagan, who sought earlier to require substantial cutbacks in the heavy missiles that comprise two-thirds of the Soviet force, said his new plan to include the bombers

"removed the dividing line" between the two U.S. proposals. The "build-down" concept means old missiles would be destroyed faster than new ones are deployed. Senior U.S. officials say two intercontinental ballistic missiles might be scrapped for each new one, while submarine missiles would be updated on a three-for-two basis. The Soviets have offered to limit each side to a total of 1,800 missiles and bombers and is calling for a freeze of U.S.-Soviet nuclear forces.

The United States has about 1,600 missiles, while the Soviet Union has 2,340. TASS, echoing charges by Karpov that the United States was using the START talks to cover its build-up of forces, charged Reagan's proposal actually amounted to a modernization program. Citing U.S. defense spending, Reagan's proposal to build 100 MX Missiles, the B-1 bomber and other arms, TASS concluded: "What is meant in fact is that the sides

Midland bank in serious trouble

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - First National Bank of Midland, the largest independent bank in Texas, has told its stockholders that unless it can sell from $40 million to $60 million in new stock to replace dwindling equity, the $1.5 billion institution will have to be sold. Bank directors called an emergency meeting for Oct. 14 in Midland to seek stockholders' approval for offering 10 million shares of preferred stock at $1 per share, raising common stock shares from 5 million to 50 million, and declaring a 2-for-1 split of the existing 5 million common stocks shares. Bank officials told stockholders in a proxy statement Tuesday that the bank lost $114.7 million the first six months of this year and that the bank's stockholder equity had dropped to less than $1 million because of energy-related losses. "Due to the large losses in 1983, the bank's capital has been seriously eroded. The current capital level is inadequate from a regulatory and operating viewpoint and will not be adequate to absorb future losses," the bank report stated. Shareholders of the Midland bank include Inter-First Corp. of Dallas, the state's largest holding company, which owns just under 5 percent of the Midland bank. The bank's capital, according to Tuesday's statement, stood at $122 million last December, but had dwindled to $7 million on June 30 and to $862,000 on Aug. 31, the statement said. The bank also said in its special report that it is under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the U.S. Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. Bank spokesman Guy McCrary declined to comment on First National's statement. "I refer you to the proxy (statement)," McCrary said. The statement said the investment banking firm of First Boston Corp. has been hired to explore the bank's financial alternatives. A merger has been sought since the first of the year, but no prospects are imminent, the statement added.

The bank's total deposits have declined to $854 million as of Aug. 31, compared with $1.47 billion for June 30, 1982. "Lending has been curtailed due to the drop in deposits and heavy dependence on borrowed money," according to the statement. Delinquent loans doubled in 1983 from $150.4 million to $314 million on June 30. The bank currently has borrowed $530 million from the Federal Reserve Bank, the statement said. Bob Walters, an analyst with the Austin banking research firm Sheshunoff and Co., said the Midland bank has essentially "lost all of its capital" because of loan losses. "The question becomes, can they sell additional stock? Can they raise $100 million if need be? They already sold their building in a favorable deal for $30 million, and issued more than $20 million in common stock," Walters said. "Is there a market for the new stock?" he asked. The bank's proxy statement said a future negative equity situation is possible, adding that in such a case the bank could owe more money to creditors than it could raise upon liquidation. Two West Texas banks have failed in the last three months, largely because of energy loan losses. The National Bank of Odessa was closed last Friday and reopened Monday under new ownership as First State Bank of Odessa. Metro Bank of Midland was ordered closed July 29 and later reopened as Mid-Cities National Bank.

Conducted by DOE

Nuke forum set Friday

A public forum, conducted by the U.S. Department of Energy, will be held Friday at the Community Center to discuss nuclear waste issues which were raised by area residents at a May public meeting. The forum, called a "public information exchange" by DOE officials, will begin at 2 p.m. and extend to 9 p.m. The forum is slated for hour-long segments pertaining to repository design, geology and hydrology, health and safety, transportation, environment, and socioeconomics. The panelists will include representatives of DOE and Battelle's Office of Nuclear Waste Isolation. Each panelist will talk about 30 minutes on one of the topics and this will be followed by questions and comments from the audience. Dr. Tim Revell, chairman of POWER (People Opposed to Wasted Energy Repositories), complained this week that DOE scheduled the meeting at a poor time, what with Hereford High School having a Homecoming parade and football game on Friday. Linda McClain, DOE project manager in the study area, said efforts were made to avoid major scheduling conflicts and that future forums are expected to be held for those who miss this meeting. She also pointed out that scientists, when not participating in the panel Friday afternoon, will staff information tables in an outer area of the Community Center. They will have printed information and will be available for individual questions and discussion. Deaf Smith County and Swisher County have been selected as two of the nine potentially acceptable sites in six states as being suitable for a waste repository. DOE plans to nominate at least five of the nine sites for "site characterization," following issuance of the siting guidelines required by the Nuclear Waste Policy Act.

The siting guidelines are now being finalized through consultation with governors of affected states and are expected to be submitted this fall to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for concurrence before their adoption by DOE. The Nuclear Waste Policy Act requires DOE to recommend three of the nominated sites to the President for site characterization by January, 1985. "Site characterization," according to DOE, means the program of exploration to establish the geologic conditions at a potential site and determine suitability for a repository. The studies include borings, surface exploration, exploratory shafts, limited excavations at the base of the shaft, environmental, socioeconomic and other studies. According to the Nuclear Waste Policy Act, the President is to recommend one site for the first repository to Congress by 1987.

Bingo players in Deaf Smith County shelled out some $68,650 to participate in local games in a three-month period, according to a recent report from the state comptroller's office.

The report showed that the county received $1,373 for the period, May through August, which represented the 2 percent tax allotted to the county. Potter County received $12,789 as its share for that period.

Whether or not voters approve a Buffalo Lake Water District in a November election, a management plan for the Buffalo Lake National Refuge is based on the lake bed remaining dry for at least another nine years, it was reported by the Amarillo Globe-News this week.

Refuge Manager Rodney Krey, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, explained in his report that "the drawgates in Umberger Dam are open by court order, so potential water runoff would drain away immediately." If a decision were made to rebuild the dam, it would be the fall of 1986 before bids could be taken, another year before construction, and about four years for the dam to be completed.

The report also pointed out that heavy irrigation and upstream impoundments on Tierra Blanca Creek have decreased the flow of water to the refuge, except after heavy rains.

New York Archdiocese head succumbs to leukemia today

By RON POWERS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Cardinal Terence Cooke, who rose from a modest job as a South Bronx priest to become the powerful head of the New York Archdiocese, died today at the age of 62. Rev. Peter Finn, director of the Office of Communications for the Archdiocese of New York, said Cooke died at 4:45 a.m. today.

Cooke, the spiritual leader of 1.8 million Roman Catholics in the archdiocese and 2 million Catholics in the military, suffered from "acute leukemia complicating a chronic lymphoma condition," according to the archdiocese.

He spent the last days of his illness "at peace with himself" and under a nurse's care at his residence in the chancery behind St. Patrick's Cathedral, said Finn.

President Reagan, in a statement issued by the White House, said Cooke in life "inspired us — with his personal holiness, his dedication to the church, his devotion to his flock."

"But, in death as well, he had for us a special gift and a special inspiration. The world has rarely seen a more moving display of the three cardinal virtues than in the faith, hope and love with which Cardinal Cooke confronted and conquered death," Reagan said.

Pope John Paul II announced Cooke's death to bishops gathered for a world synod, then led them in prayer, the Vatican said.

Finn said Cooke's physician, Dr. Kevin Cahill, was at the cardinal's bedside along with two nurses when he died. Also present was Msgr. Joseph Murphy, chancellor of the archdiocese. Msgr.

Charles McDonagh and the Rev. Edwin F. O'Brien, who were both secretaries to the cardinal, arrived at the rectory moments after Cooke's death.

At 6:30 p.m. Friday, the cardinal's body will return to the cathedral. The wake will begin then and continue through the weekend. The Mass of Christian Burial is scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday. Burial will be in the crypt under the main altar in the cathedral where all Cooke's predecessors in office have been buried.

No one has been named to succeed Cooke but church officials scheduled a meeting of the Board of Consultors, which Finn said consists of between 12 and 24 clergymen. They will elect an administrator who will run the archdiocese until Pope John Paul II names a successor.

Several activities slated for Friday

Several Homecoming activities are planned Friday for Hereford High School students and the community-at-large.

A pep rally at 1:50 p.m. will feature the crowning of this year's Homecoming Queen. The event will take place in the HHS gymnasium. All three queen candidates and the two attendants are to ride in a halftime parade at the evening's football game.

School for all district students is over at 2:20 p.m. and another parade will follow 40 minutes later. It will begin near the high school on Park Avenue and wind south on Main Street.

At 7:10 p.m. in Whiteface Stadium, the HHS band will present its contest show. The grid contest against Tascosa is supposed to kick off at 7:30 p.m. Preceding the halftime parade will be a marching performance by the Tascosa instrumentalists.

A near-capacity is anticipated for the game pitting the undefeated Whitefaces against the visiting Rebels. The home (west) side was sold out early this week, but tickets will be available Friday night for the east side.

Larry Wartes, assistant superintendent for the local district, said at least 300 tickets should be on sale. Tascosa fans are not expected to occupy many of the visitor's seats.

Bayne reports

City's water use down

By REED PARSELL
Staff Writer
For the first time in three months, Hereford's water use fell to fewer than 200 million gallons. City Manager Dudley Bayne reported.

From Aug. 18 until Sept. 19, city residents tapped out approximately 184,955,000 gallons, which represents a 26 percent decrease from the previous month's reading. An all-time record 233.6 million gallons were used from July 18 through Aug. 17.

That record broke the one-month-old mark of 206.8 million gallons established between June 18 and July 17.

According to Bayne, the heavy water use may cause some serious aftereffects. "It's sure not going to help anything," he said. "Anytime you're pumping out that rapidly, you'll have some permanent damage."

There are three city-owned wells which were inoperable for most of the summer and are still broken. Bayne has said several other wells are frequently pumping air or are at dangerously low levels.

What is undeniably the biggest reason for record water use is an abnormally low amount of precipitation. According to Chip Formby of KPAN, which keeps the official weather statistics, Hereford has received only 12.48 inches of rain and more this year, which is 1.54 less than average. More revealing, perhaps, are the statistics for the last three months. For July,

August and September, Hereford averages 6.33 inches of precipitation. This year,

Golding wins prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - British writer William Golding, whose novels included "Lord of the Flies," won the 1983 Nobel Prize in literature today, the Swedish Nobel Committee announced.

Golding was cited "for his novels, which with the perspicuity of realistic narrative art and diversity and universality of myth, illuminate the human condition in the world today."

In "Lord of the Flies," his best-known work, he describes the nightmarish adventures of a group of English schoolboys stranded on an island and traces their degeneration from a state of innocence to one of blood lust and savagery.

His later works include "The Inheritors," "Pincher Martin," "Free Fall," "The Spire," "The Pyramid," and "The Scorpion God."

Golding, born in Cornwall 72 years ago, had not figured in pre-awarding speculation here. The latest literature prize that went to Britain was Canetti in 1981, but before that there had been none since Winston Churchill 30 years ago.

Graham Greene and Anthony Burgess had been considered the strongest British candidates for the 1983 prize. Golding, like the other Nobel laureates this year, wins a cash stipend of about $190,000.

Golding's most recent works are the novels "Darkness Visible" in 1979 and "Rites of Passage" in 1980, and a book of essays titled "The Moving Target" last year. He also has written short stories and plays.

Before his literary debut, Golding worked in small theatrical companies as writer, actor and producer, and also occasionally as a teacher.

The literature award was the second Nobel Prize to be awarded this year. Lech Walesa, leader of Poland's Solidarity labor movement, won the Peace Prize, it was announced in Oslo on

Tearful woman sentenced in bank larceny scheme

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has sentenced a tearful San Antonio woman to four years in federal prison for masterminding a bank larceny scheme beginning a year after her high school graduation.

Suzanne Elizabeth Murrey Slaughter, now 21, had pleaded guilty to helping steal $5,000 two years ago from Alamo National Bank.

In exchange, the government agreed not to prosecute her on charges that she planned two other unsuccessful larcenies after being dismissed by the bank.

U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions sentenced Ms. Slaughter as a youth offender, meaning she could be released as soon as officials believe she has reformed.

She could have received up to 10 years in prison.

Her attorney, Fred G. Rodriguez, pleaded for leniency Tuesday, saying Ms. Slaughter had used the money to help pay the debts of a friend and buy toys for the man's children.

Brothers say farewell

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — When Donald Autry said farewell from his prison unit in Colorado to his brother facing execution in Texas, the pair thought it would be their last conversation.

"I tried to cheer him up, told him I was praying for him and said that I wished there was something I could do for him," said the younger Autry, who is serving a four-year sentence for theft at the Rocky Mountain Correctional Institute in Pueblo, Colo.

But James Autry, sentenced to die for the 1980 murder of a convenience store clerk, was granted a stay of execution Tuesday night, just half an hour before he was scheduled to die by lethal injection.

The condemned man also was permitted earlier to talk with his mother, Shirley Stucker of Florence, Colo. She said she did not believe Autry was guilty and said the shooting was done by a companion of Autry's.

A third brother, Robert Autry, 26, is in a Pueblo, Colo. nursing home. He sustained massive head injuries in a December, 1982, auto accident.

Supreme Court action

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has decided to hear a

San Antonio, Texas, case involving city transit workers, and the high court's ruling could influence a similar case in August.

In the Texas case, the justices will decide whether city governments must pay transit workers overtime wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act and whether such city-owned businesses are part of the "traditional" function of city governments.

The case parallels one involving the Augusta Transit Authority, whose workers have sought overtime pay under the federal act. A federal appeals court ruled the Augusta authority is not a function of the government, and its workers are entitled to overtime pay. City officials have appealed to the Supreme Court.

Despite the appeal, however, the Augusta City Council last month approved overtime pay for transit workers who work more than 40 hours per week. City transit officials have estimated that the overtime pay will add $15,000 annually to the city's transit budget.

Dozen dead, hundreds wounded

September 20 of this year 100,000 Filipinos rampaged through the streets of Manila shouting "Revolution! Revolution!"

Theirs was no "revolution."

Before daybreak there were a dozen dead and hundreds wounded on the bloody streets.

But theirs was no revolution.

These were not hungry people who sought to storm the Palace, Manila, comparatively, is prosperous.

These, ostensibly protesting the Marcos regime had nobody better to offer.

But political incendiaries in their midst - using the assassination of Aquino as their excuse - rallied a mob.

It's easy anywhere - especially in the so-called

Third World - to rally a mob.

Let me tell you how easy.

Any fourth-string, bush-league evangelist can announce a religious rally in Jakarta or Seoul and a flood tide of half a million will converge.

Most will not know his name, will not understand his language, but for the eternal-bored it is "something to do," it is "someplace to be."

Evangelists used to credit "a miracle of the Lord."

Some, if only by implication, would credit their own personal magnetism.

Until it was discovered that anybody can do it; that most anybody can attract a crowd in those nations of abundant emni.

Or mobilize a demonstration.

Or incite a riot.

Colonialism - one nation seeking to rule another - failed because it is so easy for people who are unhappy, frustrated, bored....

And we all periodically are unhappy, frustrated, bored.... It is so easy to focus resentment on "outside" rulers.

In nations now independent of foreign domination, any such restiveness must be taken out on the incumbent government - whichever.

I count forty nations presently at war with themselves - and the assortment of justification - ancient hatreds, religious differences, tribal rivalries - all boil down mostly to abject, chronic public boredom.

Periodic elections let off some steam but demonstrating is more fun. Even when it gets bloody.

The communists make the most of this. Americans must at least recognize it - before we exhaust our resources trying to enforce peace and quiet in places already rebelling against too much peace and quiet.

Texas leaders mourning representative's loss

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Gov. Mark White, other legislative colleagues and weeping family members gathered here to mourn state Rep. Matt Garcia, calling him an "eloquent and effective champion of the rights of all the people."

Hundreds of people overflowed the historic San Fernando Cathedral on Tuesday to pay tribute to Garcia, a Democrat who died of a heart attack late Saturday.

"He was a good friend," White said. "He was a great leader in the state and our nation. He will be sorely missed."

The governor refused to speculate when he would set a date for a special election to fill the unexpired term of Garcia, who had been elected to the Texas House six times.

A teary-eyed Attorney General Jim Mattox, House Speaker Gib Lewis and several members of the Legislature attended Tuesday's funeral service and burial, along with many San Antonio city leaders and citizens.

The funeral service was less than a block from the Bexar County Courthouse, where Garcia had practiced law for more than three decades.

Mattox, who has been indicted on a charge of commercial bribery, comforted sobbing members of the lawmaker's family before the service and later fought back tears himself.

"He was my ally and my good friend. We entered the House of Representatives at the same time," said Mattox, brushing tears from his eyes. "Every political battle I ever fought, he was with me. I'll miss him very much. I think everyone will."

Garcia was a tenacious champion of bilingual education, teacher pay raises and Mexican-American causes.

He had turned down two nominations for judgeships by former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, choosing to remain a state representative.

"Matt Garcia was a most eloquent and effective champion of the rights of all the people and fought a most effective fight for human dignity," said Briscoe, who attended Tuesday's funeral.

Former President Jimmy Carter had nominated Garcia to head the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, but he withdrew his name after President Reagan was elected in 1980.

Garcia, who was 55, was a member of the House Appropriations Committee for the past three sessions and chairman of the Mexican-American legislative caucus.

Prospect of default recedes

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An appeals court has stripped a local judge of jurisdiction in a case involving Argentina's huge foreign debt and the judge freed the government's top banker from jail, easing fears the nation would soon default.

The Federal Appeals Court in Comodoro Rivadavia, 1,100 miles south of here, agreed Wednesday to consider the government's appeal of Judge Federico Pinto Kramer's order to suspend negotiations on part of Argentina's $40 billion foreign debt.

Enrique Billote, president of the appeals court, told the official Argentine news agency Telam the appeal by the executive branch was "well-founded" and that Pinto Kramer's order was "an offense" to the executive.

A reversal of Pinto Kramer's order presumably would clear the way for the receipt of fresh foreign credit needed to avoid default but held up by the judge's action.

The army — the power behind the 7-year-old military regime — then delivered an indirect but scathing attack on the "irresponsible actions" of Pinto Kramer and repeated a promise by Argentina's president that the nation would fulfill its financial commitments and that general elections would be held on schedule Oct. 30.

"This action with the intent to undermine (the transition to civilian rule) has brought the country to one of the most critical economic situations in its history with regard to the international community," an army communique said.

The newspaper Clarin said President Reynaldo Bignone had told the military regime he would quit before the elections if Pinto Kramer successfully blocked the debt renegotiations.

Last week Pinto Kramer, who sits in Rio Gallegos, 1,900 miles south of Buenos Aires, suspended the renegotiation of the foreign debts of state-owned Argentine companies because he believed the proposed contracts were detrimental to Argentine interests.

On Monday he ordered the arrest of Central Bank President Julio Gonzalez del Solar on his return from a meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Washington.

But Wednesday, after hearing 10 hours of testimony from the bank president, he had him released.

Pinto Kramer's action had prompted foreign banks and the IMF to hold up delivery of $830 million in already-approved fresh credit. Without those funds, Argentina would not be able to make a $300 million repayment to foreign banks due Oct. 17 and would enter into default.

The army said in its communique, "The army considers it absolutely necessary that the country respect and fulfill all its international commitments, as has been its custom throughout its history."

The executive branch, apparently trying to protect the scarce hard currency on deposit, decreed that citizens with cash savings accounts will not be allowed to withdraw their funds for 60 days.

Nicaragua says it expects new attacks

Nicaragua's defense minister says his soldiers are braced for a new offensive by anti-Sandinista guerrillas, and the Honduran army is on a "state of alert" in case Nicaraguan troops cross the border in pursuit of the rebels.

"The escalation of aggression has reached a high point, and even our right to self-defense is interpreted as aggression," Defense Minister Humberto Ortega Saavedra said Wednesday. "The whole region is at a critical point."

Ortega said the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, a Costa Rican-based rebel group, launched raids against Nicaragua from El Salvador airfields. He accused unnamed "Salvadoran air force contacts" of helping coordinate the attacks.

The alliance is led by former Sandinista hero Eden Pastora, also known as Commander Zero, who has taken credit for several recent attacks against various targets in leftist-ruled Nicaragua.

Ortega said 400 rebels and 33 government troops died in fighting between Aug. 15 and Tuesday. There was no way to independently verify the claim.

Honduras-based rebels of the Democratic Nicaraguan Force have received $19 million in CIA funds, according to congressional testimony, but Pastora's force is not known to have gotten CIA money.

Ortega defended Nicaragua's right to attack the rebels, but said "we will not invade any country."

Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua have exchanged barbs over the past week after Ortega's brother, junta coordinator Daniel Ortega Saavedra, who said the Sandinistas would chase the rebels into what he called "no-man's land" border areas to fight rebels based in Honduras and Costa Rica.

Honduran Defense Minister Amilcar Castillo Suazo said Wednesday the Honduran army is on "a state of alert" because of Nicaragua's threat, and President Roberto Suazo Cordova said he hoped military exercises with the United States "continue as long as I am president."

About 4,000 U.S. troops and 5,000 Honduran soldiers started maneuvers Aug. 5 at Palmarola, 48 miles of the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa. The maneuvers will continue until at least March.

At the United Nations, Colombian President Belisario Bentacur called for the removal of all foreign troops and military advisers from Central America. Colombia, Venezuela, Mexico and Panama form the Contadora group which is seeking a peaceful solution to Central America's regional conflicts.

In other Central American developments, Salvadoran leftists Wednesday battled government troops in the wooded hills south of Jucupa, 69 miles east of the Salvadoran capital of El Salvador.

City Manager

According to Dudley Bayne, Hereford city manager, water use for the most recent billing period was about 26 percent lower than the all-time record use recorded from July 18 through Aug. 17. He feels there has been some permanent damage done to city wells thanks to the heavy summer water usage.

New aid total $137 million; but not all for border

WASHINGTON (AP) — Though under fire for the way it is tallying its assistance to Southwest border areas, the Reagan administration is continuing to include in its total $94.8 million in financial guarantees most of which were not actually targeted for the border.

The $94.8 million was included in $137 million in assistance the administration announced Tuesday had been awarded so far to Southwest border communities whose economies are suffering from last year's devaluations of the Mexican peso.

Alix Reed, an assistant press secretary to Vice President George Bush, said she had "no quarrel" with published accounts that only about $11 million raised through the guarantees actually had been allocated to the border — for a drill rig construction project in Brownsville, Texas.

But she said the $94.8 million in guarantees had been granted to a Houston company as a single award and "the decision was made there was just going to leave it at that," with the whole amount considered as border aid.

Texas Rep. Ron Coleman, an El Paso Democrat, has accused the administration of using the $94.8 million in guarantees to inflate its border aid figures, saying the move "calls into question the credibility of their whole program of border assistance."

That program was launched in August by a special multi-agency task force appointed by President Reagan to accelerate federal assistance to the border areas. The task force is chaired by Bush.

The vice president's office announced the $94.8 million in financial guarantees for a subsidiary of Global Marine Inc. last month, included the entire amount in its border aid tallies and said it would "keep 500 workers on the job in (a) Brownsville, Texas shipyard."

But The El Paso Times later reported that the company actually had only an $11 million share of a $55 million rig being built at the shipyard.

Ms. Reed said the company had "not indicated what they are going to do" with the rest of the $94.8 million so "we're not going to change the status of it."

Ms. Reed also defended the inclusion in border aid tallies last month of a $4.2 million low interest loan for a housing project in Cathedral City, Calif., which a local official told the Times was basically a community "tied to the resort economy, not the peso."

Ms. Reed described the community as a "pocket of poverty" and said it was in "definite need."

Among that was $1.3 million described as contracts from the Small Business Administration "for firms in affected border counties." However, Ms. Reed could not name the counties.

Other awards announced for the past week were:

— A $798,000 Department of Agriculture loan to provide rental housing in Tombstone, Ariz.

— A $133,430 Department of Agriculture grant to provide housing in Amado, Ariz.

— Loan guarantees of $5,583,000 from the Department of Agriculture for construction of new electric utility lines in 17 counties, of which 12 are in the border region. Those counties were identified as Dimmit, Kinney, Uvalde, Webb, Zavala, Jim Hogg, LaSalle, McMullen, Starr, Zapata, Edwards and Real, all in Texas. The task force did not specify how much was going to these 12 counties.

— A $1,025,000 Department of Agriculture grant and loan to help build a sewer system in Presidio, Texas.

US can outproduce Soviets in weaponry

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the Soviets should negotiate an arms control agreement with the United States "before they find themselves out-produced and can't do anything about it."

"One way or the other, they can have peace with us," the president said. "And it's up to them."

The alternatives, the president said, are "the arms race — decide it that way — or decide it in a common sense stabilization and reduction" of the intercontinental and medium-range nuclear weapons that are the focus of current negotiations.

The president made his remarks Wednesday in an interview with the board of directors of The Associated Press.

He spoke one day after sending Edward Rowny, his chief arms negotiator, to Geneva, Switzerland, for a new round of talks with the Soviet Union on reducing long-range nuclear weapons.

Asked whether U.S. relations with the Soviet Union were at their lowest point since the Cold War of the 1950s and early 1960s, Reagan replied: "I don't think they are at all."

"I think they are more realistic than they've been in a great many years," he said, adding that the Soviets "have a greater understanding today of where we're coming from."

"They realize that they have to talk with us, they have to deal," he said. "I don't think they are there at the table for arms negotiations because of any great desire to reduce their weapons. They're there because they know that common sense dictates they'd better be there."

The president recalled an editorial cartoon featuring Leonid Brezhnev, the late Soviet president, saying to a Soviet general, "I liked the arms race better when we were the only ones in it."

He said that the Soviets know that "if put to a real test, they could not keep pace with the Western world. So the best answer for them is to sit down with us and work out a fair and equitable arrangement before they find themselves outproduced and can't do anything about it."

In the political realm, the president was asked whether he should run for a second term, rather than whether he would run, and said, "I've never had it asked that way before." But he refused to discuss his plans, and stated "I'll make my judgment based on what the people think."

though, the total plummeted to just 2.62 - with 1.33 of that recorded in September.

In July, Bayne felt there might be a need for water rationing should high usage and low rainfall have continued. Prevailing bad conditions, however, did not cause such a measure.

"Of course," Bayne said earlier this week, "we still could use rain. But by now our wells are rested from our record use."

A decrease in local water tapping was evident, Bayne said, by a 2-million fall in two recent Sundays a couple of weeks apart.

In other news from City Hall, there were nine building permits for $136,400 issued in September. That brings the year's figures to 99 and $1,222,184.

Of the September permits, one was for a $95,000 house.

By October of 1982, 84 permits were issued for $842,690. Last September, an estimated $233,750 was to be spent on 12 permits.

Airline negotiations go behind closed doors

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) —

Negotiation teams from the Continental Airlines management and from a pilots' union meet behind closed doors again today for the second session of discussions on a work contract that slashes salaries in half and increases work hours, spokesmen said.

The negotiators met for three hours on Wednesday, but Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said representatives from the Airline Pilots Association failed to present a counter offer to the company proposed new work rules and pay scales.

Neither Hicks nor spokesmen for the pilots would give details of the negotiations, keeping secret even the location of the meetings.

"We have no comment on negotiations other than to say they will take place," said Gary Thomas of the pilots' union.

Hicks said the secrecy was necessary to prevent the process from being besieged by the media.

"You cannot have a negotiation process when it is being bombarded by people not involved in the negotiating process," Hicks said. He said today's session was to begin at 1 p.m.

The airline, meanwhile, announced it was cutting the flying hours of its schedule by about eight percent. Hicks said that would be accomplished by canceling four to eight selected flights daily.

Decisions on the cancellations will be made five days in advance of the affected flights and passengers holding reservations will be notified, said Hicks. He said different flights will be affected from day to day.

Hicks said no cities would be dropped from service, but the number of flights to selected cities may be reduced from time to time to accommodate the availability of flight crews.

The new system enables the airline to plan in advance for any service reduction and will enable the airline to accommodate passengers on alternate flights, or even on other airlines, Hicks said.

A spokeswoman for the pilots, Julie Graves, would only affirm that representatives of the two groups were meeting.

"I'm not giving out locations," she said, adding that the groups wanted to avoid negotiating through the press.

The negotiations began the day after a handful of pilots met Continental President Frank Lorenzo in Houston and Denver. Those who attended the meeting said Lorenzo told pilots the company had three options: to shut down the carrier completely, continue flying under the new work rules and pay scales or to lease to airline's planes to other carriers.

Only about 45 pilots met Lorenzo in the two sessions Tuesday.

Continental filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act Sept. 24, suspending all domestic flights for two days and then resuming service to only 25 of the 78 U.S. destinations it previously served. It laid off about 70 percent of its 12,000 workers, instituted new work rules and slashed salaries.

The airline has lost more than $471 million since January 1979. Lorenzo has said losses in the first nine months of this year could top $130 million, including more than $50 million in the third quarter.

Hicks said Continental completed 92 percent of its 158 flights Tuesday with 67 percent of the seats on domestic flights filled. Systemwide, 64 percent of the seats were occupied, he said. Pilots and flight attendants struck the carrier Saturday to protest new work rules and pay cuts of about 50 percent. The airline announced the new contracts upon reopening its operations Sept. 27.

Hicks also announced that the airline would extend its $75 or less fare on any nonstop domestic flight through Oct. 22. The company said the fare was to have expired on Oct. 15 but its popularity had steadily increased passenger load factors on Continental's 25-city domestic system.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid says Mexico's middle classes lived better than their counterparts in industrialized countries in the recent past, but it was an "artificial standard of living."

"We Mexicans lost, for a time, the sense of proportion, the sense of limitations, but what is most serious, the sense of discipline and productive work," de la Madrid told private sector representatives during a tour of the state of Mexico, bordering Mexico City, on Monday.

"Now all Mexican society is subject to a readjustment, all Mexican society is seeing the effects on artificial standards of living that we only achieved through unrealistic economic and financial policies and as a result of habits whose cost the country was not prepared to pay."

The president referred to the oil boom of the late 1970s when the government and its wealthier people spent heavily. Overborrowing and lower-than-anticipated oil income plunged the country into its deepest economic crisis in 50 years.

To control the foreign debt and pull the country out of recession, at $85 billion, second highest in the Third World after Brazil's, de la Madrid imposed strict austerity measures, cutting government hiring, slashing subsidies and restricting imports. Those steps, devaluations of the peso from 27 to 150 pesos to the dollar and inflation, running at 80 percent this year, have cut into Mexican standard of living. —

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Young Mexicans looking for work have few possibilities of finding a job, the country's top labor leader says.

"There simply are no jobs to be had," said Fidel Velazquez, secretary general of the Mexican Federation of Labor, the country's largest labor organization.

But Velazquez said he still maintains that unemployment due to the country's economic recession has peaked.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Shouting anti-government slogans, an estimated 15,000 demonstrators marched to the Zocalo, the city's main plaza, tossing two fire bombs at the National Palace as they passed by.

Guards at the palace, location of several cabinet ministries and President Miguel de la Madrid's offices, quickly extinguished the fires and the bombs caused no substantial damage. De la Madrid was not there at the time of the Monday evening demonstration.

Protesting inflation, government austerity moves and demanding salary increases, demonstrators from 60 political, labor, student and other organizations marched in two columns that converged at the Zocalo Monday evening. The march commemorated the 15th anniversary of the shooting of dozens of students during a 1968 demonstration.

Q: What's the difference between regular shock absorbers and gas shock absorbers?

A: To explain the difference, we must first point out a similarity: All shock absorbers, whether regular, gas or air, contain fluid which allows the shock to dampen the motion of the springs. Gas shocks also contain nitrogen, in addition to fluid which is used to control the action of the fluid as it is displaced by the piston inside the shock. Although fluid surge may have little or no effect on the stability of a large car with good suspension, this surge can worsen the rolling and bouncing motions of small cars. The gas serves to cushion this surge to help maintain stability. Gas shocks on larger cars whose suspension systems have loosened can have the same effect. In this instance, the installation of heavy shocks as replacements will also do the job.

Chisox take 'ugly win' over Orioles, 2-1

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Chicago White Sox can't escape their "winning ugly" stigma, even after taking a major step in quest of their first World Series appearance in 24 years.

Manager Tony LaRussa bristled at the suggestion after faulty Baltimore fielding helped Chicago score a 2-1 victory in Wednesday's opening game of the American League Championship Series.

Texas Manager Doug Rader hung the "ugly" tag on the White Sox during the regular season because they sometimes won when they did not play well.

"There's no such thing as an ugly win," LaRussa insisted, even though the White Sox wasted numerous scoring opportunities and needed help from the Orioles. "I think we earned every bit of that game."

The Orioles, who had never lost an opener in six previous playoffs and five World Series, saw it differently.

"We made mistakes," said catcher Rick Dempsey. "We gave them two runs. When you give a game away, that's an ugly loss."

"Certainly it's not the way the Orioles usually play," said loser Scott McGregor. "We broke tradition. We're sorry."

In true "ugly" style, the White Sox advanced 11 runners into scoring position without getting them across. Two runners were thrown out at the plate and another was forced at third on a bunt.

Chicago, which lost the season series to the Orioles 7-5, broke a scoreless tie in the third on three consecutive two-out singles by Rudy Law, Carlton Fisk and Tom Paciorek.

The RBI hit by Paciorek went threw the legs of third baseman Todd Cruz, a converted shortstop who failed to get into position to block the ball.

In the sixth, the White Sox made it 2-0 when Paciorek walked, moved to third on a fielding error by first baseman Eddie Murray on a twisting grounder by Greg Luzinski, and scored as Ron Kittle grounded into a double play.

That was enough for LaMarr Hoyt, who won his last 13 regular-season decisions on the way to a 24-10 record. He hurled a superb five-hitter and didn't allow a run until Dan Ford doubled with two outs in the ninth and scored on a single by Cal Ripken Jr.

The stage was set for the Orioles, who scored 36 come-from-behind victories during the regular season.

But Murray, who hit 33 homers and drove in 111 runs in 1983, bounced back through the middle on the first pitch and forced Ripken to end the game.

"To see Eddie Murray standing up there was pretty frightening," said Paciorek. "Fortunately we got out of it."

"We figure LaMarr Hoyt is the best pitcher in baseball," said Paciorek. "We know if we can get him a few runs, he'll shut the other team down."

Manager Joe Altobelli of the Orioles, who rebounded from two seven-game losing streaks to win the AL East down the stretch, wasn't ready to concede.

"The first game of five is awfully important," he conceded. "But a team has come back from two losses. I think of California winning the first two last year and then losing three (to Milwaukee). History has proven it can be done."

The task won't be any easier for the Orioles in tonight's game, when they must face left-hander Floyd Bannister, 16-10, who has won 13 of his last 14 decisions.

NFL may rule against 49er chief

NEW YORK (AP) — San Francisco 49ers owner Edward J. DeBartolo Jr., whose father owns the United States Football League's Pittsburgh Maulers, could be asked by the National Football League to sell his franchise to avoid what it sees as conflict of interest.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Wednesday, following a day of owners' meetings, that he would conduct a hearing within a month to decide whether he or the league should impose sanctions against the younger DeBartolo, who has refused to divest himself of the 49ers.

DeBartolo says no conflict exists because the two franchises are in no way linked.

Rozelle also said Leon Hess, owner of the New York Jets, outlined for the other owners the problems he has had at Shea Stadium "and he told them he has not definitely made up his mind but that he may move" next season to Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

"As far as the league reviewing it or voting on it, our attorneys have advised us because of the Raiders' case, that franchises, in effect, pending appeal, are free agents."

Al Davis, the owner of the Los Angeles Raiders, took on the league in court when he moved his franchise from Oakland. He and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission won $49 million in damages.

In another matter related to the rivalry building between the 64-year-old NFL and the infant USFL, the senior league's owners decided not to change the date of its annual college draft from late April-early May to the first week in February. The USFL holds its draft early in January and some NFL owners have said they think this gives the younger league a jump on signing prospective pros.

A three-man committee formed last May and headed by Judge Robert J. Parins, president of the Green Bay Packers, studied the 49ers-Maulers ownership question and told the NFL there was sufficient cause to suggest serious conflicts because of:

- The existence of two competing football leagues, one team owned by a son and the other by his father.
- The existence of respect and trust between the two.
- The younger DeBartolo being a member of the NFL's executive committee (club owners).

"They conceded," Rozelle said of the 27 other franchise owners, "that Eddie's been put in a very embarrassing position, a difficult position" because of the competition between the two leagues for coaches and players as well as front-office staff. "He said he was uncomfortable... It's a situation that's not necessarily all of his doing, but it exists."

Dodgers rebound, score 4-1 victory over Phils

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some predicted that a loss by the Los Angeles Dodgers to the Philadelphia Phillies in Game 2 of the National League Championships would, in effect, mean the end of the series.

"It was a very tough game; it was very important that we win the second game here," Dodger pitcher Fernando Valenzuela said Wednesday night after notching the win as the Dodgers downed the Phillies 4-1 to square the best-of-five playoffs at one game each.

Had the Dodgers lost, they would have faced the difficult task of having to sweep the Phillies in Philadelphia this weekend.

Asked how it feels to be going into the Phillies' park needing to win two of three games, Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda replied: "A heck of a lot better than if we needed to go in there and win three out of three."

Los Angeles' Bob Welch, 15-12 during the regular season, will face Philadelphia rookie Charles Hudson, 8-8, in Friday afternoon's third game.

Although the Phillies seemed generally satisfied to get a split of the two contests at Dodger Stadium, heading home for the final three games might not necessarily mean "advantage" for them.

During the regular season, the Dodgers' 11-1 record against Philadelphia included five-of-six for Los Angeles at Veterans Stadium.

Lasorda, however, said that regular-season dominance doesn't mean much now.

The Dodgers, blanked 1-0 by Steve Carlton in the series opener at Dodger Stadium, got a good pitching performance from Valenzuela, a clutch triple from Pedro Guerrero, and some solid fielding to win the second game.

Valenzuela scattered seven hits and held the Phillies to one run, Gary Matthews' second-inning homer, before he yielded to reliever Tom Niedenfuer with one on and none out in the ninth inning.

Guerrero snapped a 1-1 tie when he tripled into the rightfield corner with two away and two on in the fifth inning. The Dodgers' defensive effort included three double plays to end Philadelphia scoring threats, and Mike Marshall's sliding catch in the eighth.

The Phillies had two runners on base when Marshall ran full speed toward the right field line and hauled in Joe Morgan's fly to end the inning.

"Guerrero's hit fell in, Joe's didn't," Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens said of the two similar fly balls.

"That made the difference." The Phillies also made some costly fielding miscues. Los Angeles scored its initial run after Dusty Baker reached first with two away when Philadelphia shortstop Ivan DeJesus couldn't handle his grounder to short. Phillies' starter John Denny then hit Guerrero with a pitch, and Ken Landreaux followed with a run-producing single.

Another error, center-fielder Garry Maddox' inability to catch Valenzuela's deep fly to right-center in the fifth inning, hurt even more. Valenzuela wound up at third, then, after Steve Sax grounded out to second, was thrown out at home trying to score on Greg Brock's grounder to third — which would have been the final out if Maddox had made the catch earlier in the frame.

Denny then walked Dusty Baker and Guerrero followed with his tie-breaking triple. The Dodgers' final run came in the eighth, when Bill Russell walked, stole second and scored on Jack Fimple's single.

Against Tascosa here Friday

Herd eyes 6th straight

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Some folks are still wondering if the Herd is "for real" this season, and the Whitefaces will be trying to prove it once again when Amarillo's Tascosa Rebels come to town as the Homecoming foe Friday night.

Kickoff time is 7:30 p.m. for the District 3-5A encounter, and the home (West) side was sold out early this week. There will be 300 or more tickets available Friday night on the East side and they will go on sale at 6:30 p.m.

The Herd will be out to protect its unblemished record, 5-0 for the season and 3-0 in district play, while Tascosa is 1-4 on the season and 0-4 in loop action. It will mark only the fourth meeting between the schools, and Hereford has a 3-0 record in the series which started in 1980.

Herd Coach Jerry Taylor said Thursday morning the team is at its best physical condition in the past three weeks. "We have some bruises and nagging injuries that have healed," he said. Mark Lytal, big senior tackle, should be ready to go after being sidelined with a knee injury.

"We have to be ready to play; we can't sit around and wait for a big play," said Taylor. Taylor said the district has some critical match-ups each week and four or five teams are still in contention for a playoff berth.

Taylor said he thought Amarillo was in the driver's seat at this time. "They've got one more victory than us and they've already played Monterey and Plainview. If they beat Palo Duro this week, the Sandies will be in good shape." He said one of the playoff berths could be decided by a coin flip.

In district statistics released this week, Hereford boasts the best team defensive record, giving up only 179 yards a game. The Herd ranks second in team offense behind Palo Duro. The Whitefaces are averaging 186 yards a game rushing and 101 passing, or 287.8 yards per game.

Hereford's Ronnie Terry is the league's top rusher with 558 yards, and he also has a sparkling 7.7 yards-per-carry. He and Amarillo's Scotty Reasonover are tied for the scoring lead with 42 points each. Mickey Stengel of Hereford is third in scoring with 27 points.

Herd quarterback Mike Scott is third in total passing yardage with 474, but he is the most accurate in the league—hitting 34 of 61 for a 55.7 percentage mark. Stengel is the Herd's top receiver with 10 catches for 190 yards, and Robert Amar is next with 6 receptions for 94 yards.

Tascosa's Brad Pemberton has passed for more yards than anyone in the district, but the report from Amarillo is that the Rebel quarterback is out with an injury. Tascosa also has the top pass receiver in the district. As a team, the Rebels are fourth in the district in team offense, but the defense ranks 8th—just ahead of Lubbock High.

Elway benched by Denver; DeBerg will face Houston

DENVER (AP) — The experiment is over. Rookie quarterbacks frequently haven't fared well in the National Football League, and John Elway, despite his buildup, is no exception. Denver Broncos Coach Dan Reeves, saying his offense was "not getting the job done," benched his struggling rookie on Wednesday in favor of veteran Steve DeBerg.

"For five weeks our offense has been last in the league, and I felt we had to make a change," Reeves said at his weekly press conference. DeBerg will start Sunday in Houston against the winless Oilers. "It's Steve's job," said Reeves, "but I expect John to play some."

Elway, the first player chosen in this year's NFL draft, and DeBerg had battled on virtually even terms for the starting job in the preseason. But Reeves, with an eye on the future, awarded the job to Elway. The highly regarded rookie, who signed a five-year, $5 million contract after a trade with Baltimore, has shown signs of brilliance, but overall his performance has been disappointing.

He has had difficulty mastering Denver's multiple offense, modeled after the sophisticated Dallas Cowboys' offense. He at times appeared confused, and was often rattled by the blitz. In an effort to speed Elway's learning process, Reeves endeavored to simplify Denver's offense, but the former Stanford star still struggled.

In five games, Elway completed 38 of 83 passes for 420 yards, with one touchdown and five interceptions. His pass efficiency rating was a meager 40.3, worst in the league.

DeBerg, by contrast, has played well in relief, rallying Denver to victories in its first two games and staging a brief second-half rally in Sunday's 31-14 loss to Chicago, which dropped Denver's record to 2-3.

"I feel we have to go back to our multiple-offense concept to move the ball, and Steve can do the things we need done," said Reeves. "John was having a hard time handling it."

Whitefaces ranked 36th in state; favored by 16 in rating system

The Harris Rating System for schoolboy teams has Hereford as a 16-point favorite over Amarillo Tascosa Friday night. Hereford is ranked 36th among Class 5A teams.

Odessa Permian, rated No. 1, takes on district foe San Angelo Central Friday, and the Bobcats are ranked No. 2 by Harris. Midland Lee dropped to 10th place after losing a close game to San Angelo last week. Hereford's "power rating" in the system is 166, compared to 165 for Amarillo High, or 182 for top-ranked Permian.

Willowridge is the top-ranked team in Class 4A, while Lubbock Dunbar is the nearest area contender in 21st place. Harris rates Daingerfield as the top team in AAA, with Littlefield holding down the second spot. Idalou is ranked 14th and Muleshoe is 24th.

The Newspaper BIBLE

DO YOU WORSHIP "THE UNKNOWN GOD?"

Paul, standing before the people at the Mars Hill forum, addressed them as follows: "Men of Athens, I notice that you are very religious, for as I was out walking I saw your many altars, and one of them had this inscription on it -- 'To the Unknown God.' You have been worshipping Him without knowing who He is, and now I wish to tell you about Him. "He made the world and everything in it, and since He is Lord of heaven and earth, He doesn't live in man-made temples; and human hands can't minister to His needs -- for He has no needs! He Himself gives life and breath to everything, and satisfies every need there is. He created all the people of the world from one man, Adam, and scattered the nations across the face of the earth. He decided beforehand which should rise and fall, and when. He determined their boundaries. His purpose in all of this is that they should seek after God, and perhaps feel their way toward Him and find Him -- though He is not far from any one of us. For in Him we live and move and are! As one of your own poets says it, 'We are the sons of God.' "If this is true, we shouldn't think of God as an idol made by men from gold and silver or chipped from stone. God tolerated man's past ignorance about these things, but now He commands everyone to put away idols and worship only Him. For He has set a day for justly judging the world by the man He has appointed, and has pointed Him out by bringing Him back to life again." "When they heard Paul speak of the resurrection of a person who had been dead, some laughed, but others said, "We want to hear more about this later." But a few joined him and became believers. Acts 17:22-34

Man to leave town to begin treatments

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A judge has ordered attorneys to keep mum about the facility where a San Antonio man will begin "chemical castration" injections, warning that disclosing his location would jeopardize the treatment's success.

State District Judge Tom Rickhoff said Joseph Frank Smith, 29, would leave town "as soon as possible" to begin the controversial treatments.

Smith, who pleaded guilty to two rape related charges in August, was assessed 10 years probation and a $10,000 fine after indicating he was willing to undergo injections of Depo-Provera, a chemical which supposedly would make him temporarily impotent.

Rickhoff refused Tuesday to disclose where Smith would receive the treatments, fearing the arrangement could fall through and that Smith would not be safe.

"Further notoriety concerning the location and manner of treatment of this defendant will jeopardize the success of the treatment," Rickhoff said.

The judge imposed a gag order on defense attorneys, prosecutors and probation officials so Smith's location could not be leaked.

"It is of vital and paramount importance that this defendant undergo the treatment program prescribed in the court's order," he said.

Smith cannot be forced to undergo the treatments, but has volunteered to take the chemical injections.

The unemployed paperhanger pleaded guilty to two counts of burglary with intent to commit rape in connection with two separate sexual assaults on a San Antonio woman.

He was apprehended by an angry group of the women's neighbors -- and wearing only socks and a ski mask -- when he entered her house a third time, police said.

Smith originally was to have been sent to the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, but doctors there refused to accept him as a patient.

Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore said Smith could be treated there only if he paid $1,200 in advance.

Psychiatrists testified at Smith's trial that he received too much sexual stimulation as a child because his mother was a topless dancer who walked around the house scantily clad.

Chief Adult Probation Officer Cesar Garcia said Smith would repay the probation department for the costs of his treatment.

Are federal food-safety regulations adequate?

EDITOR'S NOTE — Recent reports that two companies in Colorado and Nebraska providing meat for the school lunch program were using substandard cattle and processing the beef under unsanitary conditions have put the spotlight on the safety of our food. The first tests of meat from the companies found no contamination. But the issue of food safety is not a new one. Here is a look at how the government tries to protect the public and some of the problems.

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The federal government spends more than $400 million a year policing the U.S. food supply, but the inspection system already has serious problems and a government agency says the public may be less well protected in the future.

A recent report from the Business Mirror

General Accounting Office said foods that violate safety standards wound up on market shelves despite inspections, that regulation was fragmented and that safety laws had gaps.

It also said spending cutbacks and changes in the food supply from staples to processed products meant that the "ability of food regulation programs to efficiently and effectively protect the U.S. public may be diminished in the future."

"It is generally believed," the GAO report said, "that federal food safety regulation provides adequate protection for the U.S. public, although we believe that comprehensive information to support that belief does not exist."

The government watchdog agency said a review of past studies showed basic problems had not been corrected, and it said change was not likely "as long as mafor food-related disasters do not occur."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration in the Department of Health and Human Services have most of the responsibility for enforcing laws on food safety.

In general, the USDA oversees meat and poultry; the FDA looks after everything else. But the two agencies operate very differently.

The USDA, for example, inspects virtually all the livestock and poultry we eat. Inspectors are on duty continuously in slaughter and processing plants.

"We inspect 123 million head of livestock in this country every year," said John McClung, head of information for the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

"We inspect 4½ billion poultry... Every one of those animals has to be inspected before it's killed (and) after it's killed... If they're processed further... then we have to inspect the processing function as well."

The FDA, by contrast, makes only periodic inspections. Plants processing foods where there is a high risk of trouble may be inspected once a year; others are visited less frequently. The GAO report said that as of 1982, the FDA planned to inspect processing plants on the average of once every five or six years.

Are the inspections frequent enough? "Probably not," said an FDA spokesman who agreed to be interviewed only if he were not identified by name. "But it's all the manpower we've got."

The FDA's Bureau of Foods has about 900 field investigators. According to the GAO report, they are responsible for about 64,000 processors, storage facilities and repacking and relabeling plants.

The USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service has about 7,500 inspectors, responsible for about 7,200 slaughterhouses and processing plants, McClung said. The GAO has said the continuous inspections by the USDA may not be necessary. McClung said the USDA agreed, but lawmakers did not.

"The way we are doing inspections is antiquated," he said. "The costs are just too high and technologically, there's not a need to do that anymore... We have tried to promote that sort of concept (non-continuous inspections) and it did not sell very well with a large number of the members of Congress."

The GAO said past studies found that "adulterated products continued to reach consumers..." despite the USDA and the FDA. But officials say the statistics didn't always tell the whole story.

A 1981 GAO report, for example, "found that 24.9 percent of meat and poultry slaughtered under USDA inspection at plants within six states reviewed came from plants not meeting one or more USDA inspection program requirements."

McClung replied: "Maybe you have one incidence of an inspector in a plant seeing flies... on one line on a temporary basis. That plant would then be written up and become part of that 24.9 percent. That does not by any stretch of the imagination mean that 24.9 percent of the product is somehow substandard."

Is our food safe? "Absolutely," said McClung. "The supply of meat in this country is phenomenally safe and phenomenally wholesome."

Could it be safer? "I suppose it could," said the FDA spokesman. "But I don't think it would be materially safer. Even if you put 10 times as many people on the street as we have now, you probably couldn't make it a whole lot safer... You could just get closer to approaching zero (risk), I suppose. Zero's an unachievable goal."

Competition is good and bad

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP
Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A competitive market can be great for consumers but cruel for producers, who sometimes get into fights so savage they forget what it's all about and succumb to exhaustion.

"A market is identified as promising, the gates of financing are opened and there is almost instant overbuilding," says Charles Wingo of Lomas & Nettleton, which calls itself the nation's biggest mortgage lender.

Wingo, spoke recently about the construction of rental real estate, a business that every four or five years leaves its dead, dying and bankrupts in the cellars of uncompleted projects.

But he could have been talking about several other basic industries — of airlines, computer manufacturing, banking or farming — all of which have companies that are involved in life-death struggles.

Major airlines, such as Western, have sought and won wage concessions from employees in order to survive. Failing to obtain concessions, Continental Airlines has sought protection to reorganize under the federal bankruptcy law.

Others could follow. Eastern, said it may seek similar protection if its workers turn down a request to cut their incomes by 15 percent. Many others are feeling the stress of costs.

Deregulation of the industry, which has permitted newer, smaller airlines — many of them with relatively small payrolls — to pick off some of the more lucrative routes, is frequently given as a major reason for the problems.

The impact of deregulation is now at work in banking also, as you can determine from the signs in the window of your local savings institution. Freed to offer rates of their own choosing on certificates of deposit, rather than rates dictated by regulators, banks have been thrown into competition that could produce stress or even failure on some of them.

Although the deregulation of CD rates has only begun, many banks are offering bonuses to those who open new accounts, some have installed hotlines on which collect calls can be placed, and almost all have raised savings rates.

Already, a record-high 597 banks are on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. "problem" list, meaning they have serious difficulties that demand close supervision, and the higher costs of deregulation could worsen that figure.

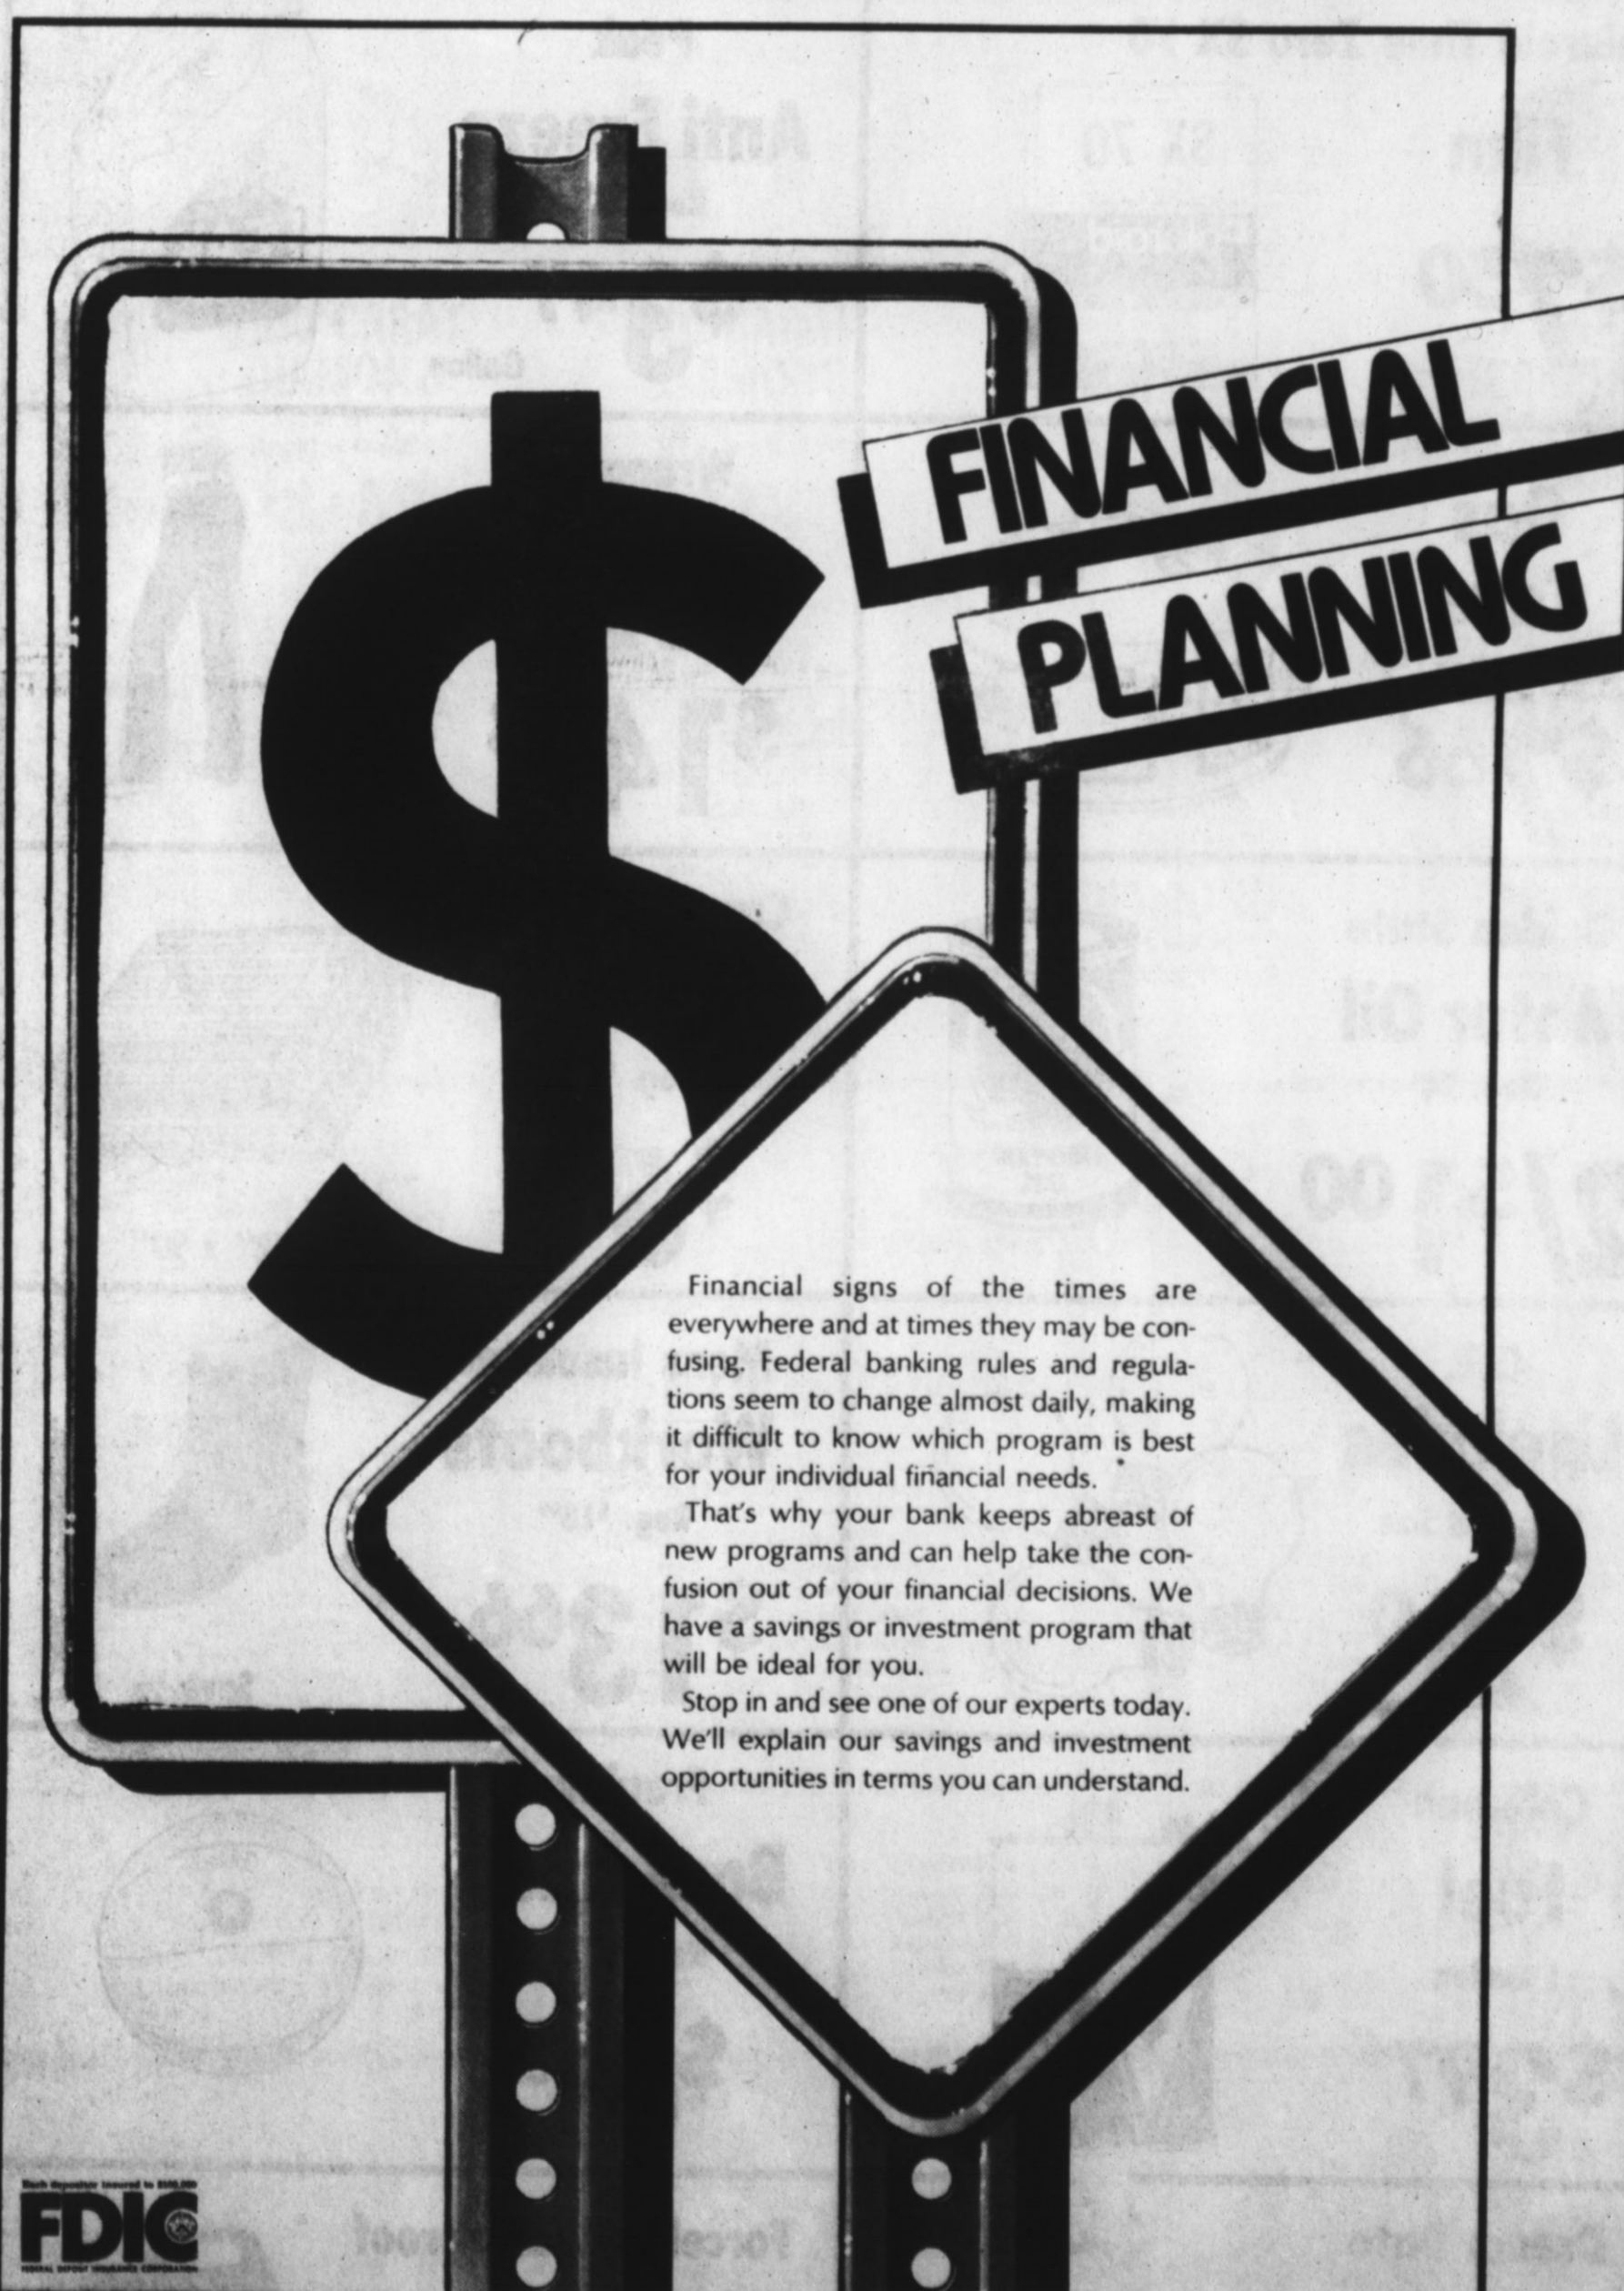

Many farmers greatly overexpanded several years ago, in some instances multiplying their acreage and equipment several times when the market for U.S. grains seemed unlimited. A U.S. grain embargo against the Soviet Union, falling product and land prices and the rising cost of their variable loans left many farmers with a financial dilemma and eventual bankruptcy.

A somewhat comparable situation seems to exist in the computer industry, where companies have been lured by an expanding market into some of the biggest financial gambles of their lives, and bankruptcies already are occurring.

Habitat program discussed

Pat Clarke, director of Habitat for Amarillo, a branch of the international Habitat for Humanity, was introduced by Mary Williamson as the program speaker for La Afflatus Estudio Club Tuesday afternoon.

Members met in the home of Pet Ott, with Ms. Williamson as co-hostess. Ms. Ott, president, opened the meeting by asking Eva Gilliland to lead the reading of the club collect.

A film strip entitled "Love in the Mortar Joints" was shown by Ms. Clarke. The film portrayed the Habitat program in action in Zaire and the United States. She explained that Habitat for Humanity is a program of Christian outreach helping selected low income families to buy their own homes.

She also showed slides of the program working in Amarillo where passive solar houses are being built through donations, using volunteer labor as much as possible to cut costs of the houses in half.

The families who buy the houses are charged no interest," noted Ms. Clarke, following the admonition in Exodus 22:25, "If you lend money to any of my people who are poor, do not act like a moneylender and charge interest."

Marie Carroll and Lola Jewell were welcomed by Ms.

Ott as new members. Beatrice Hutson, who was unable to attend, was also accepted as a new member.

Other members present were Madeline Bell, Opal Elliston, Tresa Hale, Alberta Higgins, Lucile Hughes, Allyne Johnson, and Della Stagner.

The next meeting will be on Oct. 18 in the home of Ms. Elliston.

Ann Landers Fantasy suicidal

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 24 years old, 6 feet tall and weigh 510 pounds. Not only am I healthy, I am happy.

I have gained over 200 pounds in the last 28 months and did it on purpose. I would like to gain more. I feel good and I find that the extra weight is very sensual. I also have discovered that a lot of men are turned on by obese women. Also many people get turned on to helping women like me gain even more weight.

I'm sure this is not normal, yet you would be amazed at the number of people who are sexually stimulated by this type of behavior. What causes it? What can I do to change? I have read enough on this subject to know that when I reach 700 pounds (the ultimate fantasy for me), I will be nearly dead and virtually immovable. I am afraid to reveal my true feelings about this because I am so mixed up and couldn't explain it to anyone.

Have you ever run across this type of desire? Can you check with some of your authorities on the subject? You always seem to have the answers, and I would like to stop this wild striving to put on more weight, but I can't.—Fat In Des Moines.

DEAR D.M.: You are right. Your drive to achieve the ultimate fantasy of weighing 700 pounds is abnormal. It is also suicidal.

You are also right when you say some men are turned on by enormously obese women. The question you should ask yourself is why you wish to pander to the perversions of such sickies.

Couple honored with anniversary reception

Mr. and Mrs. J.R. (Jim) Thompson celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary with a reception on Saturday in the Fellowship Hall of Avenue Baptist Church.

The Thompsons were married Sept. 30, 1923, in Paducah. They are both retired and currently reside at 320 Avenue C.

Children of the couple who were present at the reception were Mrs. Wilma Bryan and Don Thompson of Hereford and Leroy Thompson of Aledo. Other children not present include James Rowe Thompson of Pecatonica, Ill., and LaNoa Henry of Rivera, Ariz. Spouse, grandchildren, Shane and Shawn Salvage of Hereford; and great-grandson, Kevin Bryan of Lubbock, were also in attendance.

Registering guests was Mrs. Mary Lou Bryan of Carlsbad. Mrs. Fannie Lou Thompson, Gladine Thompson, Carlene Thompson, Evelyn Crawford, and Brenda Carroll served refreshments and Dareathia Dotson and Natha Carroll registered and displayed gifts. The color scheme was lavender and white.

Out of town relatives in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Thompson of Premont; Alma Williams of Bowie; Mr. and Mrs. Lester English of Alma, Ark.; Teresa West, Gladys Cobb, and Ranona Sloan, all from Carlsbad, N.M.; Leo and Louise Thompson of Lubbock; Nig James of Olton.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis McKinney of Fritch; Delores Shelton of Seminole; Beverly Whitaker from Matador; Delores Hopkins of Enter-

My authorities say you need skilled medical help at once. I hope you get it—and very soon.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I are faithful readers. Recently something happened and I have agreed to haul out the wet noodle if you think it is deserved.

We have always encouraged our children to sell their own raffle tickets and candy and cookies for fund-raising. We have refused to allow them to approach friends who come to visit. Nor do we take these things to work and attempt to peddle them for the young ones.

A few days ago a friend phoned and asked if I would buy some cookies from her daughter. I said yes, but her daughter would have to come over and ask me herself. She became suddenly silent—then said, "Oh?" and down went the receiver.

Yesterday I ran into this friend on the street. She was very cold and hurried on. My husband says I was insensitive and that I owe her an apology. He feels our years of friendship made it OK for the woman to call and make that request. What is your opinion?—B.F. In Pittsburgh

DEAR B.F.: If anyone deserves the wet noodle it is your friend—not you.

You had every right to suggest that the child come over and make her own sales pitch. Selling those cookies herself would have given the girl a great deal more personal satisfaction that self-esteem than having her mother push them off on friends. Too bad the woman didn't get the point.

prise, Ala.; and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ellis and Richard of Friona.

Out of town friends attending included Mr. and Mrs. Buster Cobb, Lois Roper, and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Bryan and Cory, all of Carlsbad; Mr. and Mrs. Slim Hudson of Friona; and Dorris Dobbs from Summerfield.

Color, design analysis discussed Monday night

Members of Veleda Study Club and their guests met Monday night in the home of Marcella McLain. After a brief business meeting, Laurie Stevens was introduced by program chairman

Margaret Zinser.

Ms. Stevens, a representative of Color and Design, presented a program on personal color analysis. She used members and guests to show how colors and patterns can add depth to the eyes and a glow to the skin, thus creating a pleasing appearance.

She pointed out that color has an impact on one's personality, confidence, and self-image. Ms. Stevens listed several advantages of the color and design analysis, including a savings in time and money when shopping by knowing what colors look best, learning to adapt one's individual look to present fashions, and finding new colors to wear.

Color and Design is based on four basic harmony groups, lively spring, subtle summer, dynamic fall, and striking winter. A person's coloring, hair style and personality are correlated to one of these groups.

A trained color analyst like

Ms. Stevens helps determine those colors, selection of lines, designs and texture, and aids one in using them with a personal color analysis.

Following the program, refreshments were served by Ms. McLain to Betty Gilbert, Jean Ruther, Juanita Brown, Norma Walden, Donna Lindeman, Francis Crume, Marcella Bradley, Joyce Ritter, Norma Martin, Snooks Farr, Roberta Caviness, Judy Dettin.

Also, Mary Zinser, Nadine Chance, Bettye Owen, Elizabeth Cesar, Leona Kimball, Nola Jolly, Jolene Bledsoe, Billie Hopson, and Janice Betzen.

Inmates uncertain about own cases

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas Death Row inmates were delighted that one of their own was spared death, but said they are uncertain how their own cases will be affected by the legal arguments that produced a last minute execution stay for condemned murderer James David Autry.

"It's just like Russian roulette. The gun keeps spinning and spinning and if it clicks, it clicks," inmate Thomas Andy Barefoot, who came within 12 hours of execution in January, said Wednesday.

In Austin, Attorney General Jim Mattox predicted Autry's stay will keep Texas from executing its convicts for some time. "I would say that unless the stay is overturned, there will not be an execution in Texas" this year, Mattox said.

Autry, a 29-year-old drifter from Amarillo who was convicted in the 1980 slaying of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk, was snatched from the brink of execution Tuesday night. He had already been strapped to a gurney and attendants had inserted into his arms the two intravenous needles that were to carry the heart-stopping chemicals into his body.

The execution was scheduled to begin at 12:01 a.m. CDT Wednesday, but U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White issued a stay half an hour before. Autry remained on the gurney for another half hour while the stay was confirmed and then was returned to a holding cell.

White's stay was based on an argument that punishment should be proportionally meted out to assure that condemned prisoners in one area of the state are getting the same sentences for the same crime as those in another area.

The state tried but failed to have the stay overturned. The high court refused to accept a verbal motion and Texas officials did not have enough time to submit written motions to each of the justices, Mattox said.

Autry was moved Wednesday morning from the Walls unit holding cell a few feet from the death chamber back to the Ellis Unit, 13 miles away.

He declined to talk to a dozen reporters on Wednesday, the only day media representatives are allowed interviews with death row inmates.

But other inmates said Death Row echoed with cheers and applause after Autry had been spared by the 11th-hour stay.

"We're all happy to see him back here," inmate Billy Hughes said. "We'd like to go slap him on the back and shake his hand and ask him to talk about it. But getting him to talk is hard because he's so shy to begin with."

So they left the condemned prisoner alone in the solitude of his cell after he was returned to Death Row on Wednesday morning.

On Tuesday night, the inmates waited in their darkened cells with radios blaring. When the stay was announced, "there was clapping and cheering just like the Dallas Cowboys were scoring a touchdown," Barefoot said.

Autry said nothing as he was returned to his cell, but he was smiling, said Hughes, who is awaiting execution for the slaying of a state trooper.

Hughes said Autry walked to his cell carrying his belongings in two sacks.

"I was very proud of him," Hughes said. "He carried himself through this ordeal with a lot of dignity even though he was lying there with that monster needle in his arm. If he comes out of this with any sanity left, it will be a miracle."

Most of the 154 inmates living on Death Row had been confident Autry's execution would be blocked. But tension mounted as the execution drew nearer.

"Our nerves were going up and up and up and the mood was going down and down and down," Hughes said. "Some of us started getting a little irritated. My stomach felt like there was a bowling ball in it."

News of the stay surprised some inmates.

"I kept hoping and hoping and praying for a miracle," Hughes said. "But I had come to the conclusion that he was as good as dead."

"When we heard the news, there was a delayed reaction. We had to hear it again."

Ronald Clark O'Bryan, a former Deer Park, Texas optician convicted of poisoning his 8-year-old son with cyanide-spiked Halloween candy almost nine years ago, spoke briefly to Autry on Wednesday morning.

"I walked by his cell and told him I was glad to see him back," O'Bryan said. "He smiled and said, 'Me, too.'"

Autry would have been the ninth U.S. inmate to be executed since the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976. His execution would have made Texas the first state to execute two prisoners since that decision.

The last Texas execution, and the first in the nation to use lethal injection, was Dec. 7, 1982, when convicted killer Charlie Brooks was put to death.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Faint after bed rest

DEAR DR. LAMB — I noticed a very brief remark in one of your columns about bed rest causing a person to have a tendency to faint. Why is that? I have noticed this too whenever I have had to stay in bed with an illness. When I first get up I feel like I am going to faint, even if I have just been in bed a couple of days with a bad cold or the flu. What can you do to prevent this?

The veins expand, allowing blood to pool in your legs. So you have a tendency to faint. Sitting up, and a gradual return to the upright position, rehydrates the tissues in your legs and then you don't feel faint. That is why a patient is often gradually ambulated to normal upright activity.

The influence of inactivity is discussed in more detail in The Health Letter 6-6, Effects of Inactivity, Including Bed Rest, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Enclosed is a label from StressAide vitamins. I would like your opinion about these. I am 65 years old and live alone. As I feel I do not eat properly, I take vitamins. I am in good health, although I take pills for high blood pressure.

DEAR DR. LAMB — The StressAide label you sent me shows that they contain far more vitamins than the recommended daily allowance (RDA) from all sources — food, drink and pills. For example, they contain 12.5 times the daily amount of B-12 that is recommended.

I don't think they are going to hurt you but I don't think you need that much. You would do just as well with a One-A-Day vitamin tablet that provides the RDA. Do some comparative shopping and if you can get a cheaper all-purpose daily vitamin preparation with the RDA amounts, you could use it instead.

Incidentally, I agree that if you are not on a good balanced diet that you should supplement your diet but you don't need to engage in vitamin overkill.
