

U.S. plans for European missiles causes Soviet threat to halt talks

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is threatening to break off talks with the United States if an agreement is not reached by December blocking the deployment of the first batch of American nuclear missiles aimed at Soviet territory from European soil, according to U.S. officials here.

While the move is taken seriously, it is seen as an attempt to influence public opinion in western Europe against the Reagan administration. "They're trying to put the screws to the Europeans," said one official Tuesday.

The current round of talks in Geneva, Switzerland, is scheduled to wind up at the end of the month. Despite concessions by both sides, the outlook for an agreement by December is uncertain. That is when nine U.S. Pershing 2 missiles are due to be deployed in West Germany and 16 cruise missiles in Britain and Italy, unless an agreement is reached.

The United States, with the support of its allies, has pledged to try to keep the talks going if an agreement is not reached by December. According to Reagan and other top U.S. officials, the Soviets will bargain seriously only when they are faced with the American deployment.

proposal. He said the administration had been considering extending the current round of talks into next month, but the Soviets might move to cut it short. "We would hope they don't walk out and we intend to keep pushing for continued negotiations," he said.

Test exemption policy altered

New reading program examined

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor
Administrator John Walch was grilled about a new reading program and the high school's policy on test exemptions was changed Tuesday at a regular meeting of the Hereford Independent School District Board of Education.

claimed he had received a lot of "negative feedback" and accused the HISD administrative staff of having been negligent in "selling" the new reading system. "I think our PR is not very credible," Mason commented.

Walch, assistant superintendent for instruction, admitted several people are upset with the way the program has been administered. However, he said most comments - save some by instructors - have been positive regarding the program itself.

Elementary teachers, Walch said he had heard, are spending anywhere from two-to-four hours per day performing the paperwork made necessary by the program. Dr. Harrell Holder, HISD superintendent, said instructors would "soon become sick" of all the extra work.

After Mason's prompting, Walch admitted the program may have been better received should it have begun four-to-six weeks into the school year. He felt such timing would have allowed teachers and students to have become more familiar and comfortable with each other.

"We're certainly going to have an open mind, get the big picture," Walch said, "and try to solve some of the problems." The assistant superintendent claimed he has frequently visited with involved teachers and principals to learn of and discuss some of the complaints.

Meanwhile, the school board agreed to make mandatory Hereford High School tests at the conclusion of every nine-week session (half of a semester). It also amended the current policy on exemptions for final semester examinations.

Second-semester seniors, who previously had laxer exemption requirements, are now subject to the same rules as is everyone else. Specifically, a student is eligible to avoid final exams should he have the necessary attendance and grade deemed adequate by the policy. A "B" student, for example, does not have to take the test should he have three or fewer absences and fewer than three unexcused tardies.

Fat Daddy's doughnut shop drops dancing

THORNTON, Colo. (AP) — Mixing pastries and pasties is still a good idea but it needs some refinement, insists Gene Alarid, whose adults-only doughnut shop is weathering hard times.

Alarid, operator of Fat Daddy's Doughnut Shop where waitresses divide their time as toppers dancers, has laid off the performers and is considering a new location.

"This is a real slow location," Alarid said from this suburb northeast of Denver. "There is nothing out here but this one little shopping center, and it's hard to even see it from the road."

Alarid turned to toppers about in late August, after he found business dismal at his 6-month-old doughnut shop.

Waitresses donned frilly "French maid" costumes and were paid $6 an hour to wait on tables and dance for the customers. The maid's apparel came off during showtime to reveal bikini panties and pasties. No liquor was served.

The doughnut machine had to go shortly after the dancers became part of the shop. The "girls complained about all the grease" and, Alarid adds, he no longer could afford the overhead of making his own pastries.

Last week, Alarid suggested the dancers take less pay for their labors. They objected, and he laid them off until Oct. 24.

Meanwhile, several people have inquired about franchises, Alarid said. "I can't believe all the interest... I never thought anyone would be this interested in my little doughnut shop."

Chief Justice of State announces retirement

AUSTIN (AP) — Chief Justice John Phillips of the Texas 3rd Court of Appeals has announced his retirement, and Associate Justice Bob Shannon says he will run next year for Phillips' job.

Phillips, 65, said Tuesday he would not seek re-election when his term expires Dec. 31, 1984.

"The main reason" for his decision, "is that I'm old enough and probably should retire," said Phillips. "I've been on the court for 20 years. It's time to let someone else do it."

Phillips, a former FBI agent, has been on the court since 1963 and has served as chief justice since 1967.

Shannon, a member of the 3rd Court of Appeals since 1971, said he would run in the Democratic primary for chief justice. Except for Phillips, he is the senior judge on the six-member court.

Shannon, a native of Brown County, graduated from the University of Texas Law School in 1957 and practiced law in Austin before being elected to the appeals court.

The court reviews trial court judgments from 24 Central Texas counties.

Hospital hired banker after merger rumors

HOUSTON (AP) — Lifemark Corp., one of the nation's largest hospital chains, hired an investment banker after rumors circulated that the firm would be involved in a merger, officials said.

President William S. Mackey Jr. said the firm's board of directors retained First Boston Corp. because "our stock was very active Friday due to rumors of a planned merger and we felt we had to make a statement."

Mackey said Lifemark's directors had also approved preliminary discussions of possible acquisitions.

"We don't have any offers at this time and we don't have any agreements," Mackey said Monday.

One analyst who did not want to be identified said Lifemark has been "shown" to about 10 firms seeking a possible merger. Seven of the firms are in the hospital management field and three are outside, he said.

"Lifemark is shopping around. Of the three companies outside the field, one could possibly be a large insurance group," he said.

Lifemark had revenues in 1982 of $483 million and earnings of $27.8 million. In 1981, Lifemark posted revenues of $301.7 million and earnings of $18.3 million.

Lifemark, which is traded on the New York Stock Exchange, closed Monday at 38 1/2, up 7/8.

The Houston-based company owns 26 hospitals nationwide, with about 4,170 beds.

In Philippines

Personal violence common

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — With guns and murderous bolo knives, Filipinos have notched some of the world's bloodiest crime statistics, but anti-government turmoil has spilled relatively little blood despite mass rallies and the passions they provoke.

Newspapers frequently report incidents of "huramentado," instances when something snaps and a seemingly crazed killer slaughters anyone in sight.

Courts often cite "kurusunada," or killings for an alleged slight, an unpleasant stare or an offhand comment. The killers in those cases are often drunk.

In the countryside, there are duels to the death, and feuds — sometimes entangled in politics — may extend over generations and decimate families.

The national homicide rate in 1982 is given by police as about 34 per 100,000 people, one of the highest in the world. The highest murder rate ever recorded was Mexico's 46.3 per 100,000 in 1970, according to the Guinness Book of World Records. The homicide rate in the United States was 11 per 100,000 in 1980, according to the National Center for Health Statistics. The 1982 figure for Japan is 1.5 per 100,000, says the Japan National Police Agency.

In the Philippines, there are almost daily reports of deaths in Communist guerrilla clashes, and during the past decade more than 50,000 have been killed in a Moslem rebellion in the southern part of the country.

Yet many Filipinos insist they are a peaceful people. "We have passed through so many crises. We resort to arms only as an extreme," said Teodoro Agoncillo, one of the country's most prominent historians. "It took us 333 years to rise up against the brutality of the Spanish colonials."

But Agoncillo and a number of others interviewed did not discount the possibility of a bloody phase in the current political upheavals directed against the regime of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

"We are a personal society. If things don't affect us directly we won't fight," said Perla Makil, a lawyer and board member of the Ramon Magsaysay Foundation, which annually presents what is regarded as Asia's Nobel prizes. But she added that the cold-blooded murder of Marcos' chief political rival Benigno Aquino touched something deeply personal in millions of Filipinos and thus held potential for mass violence.

The Aug. 21 killing prompted a funeral procession with 2 million people, cries for Marcos' resignation and criticism of human-rights abuses.

But Miss Makil said to date the demonstrators have only flirted with violence. Twelve people have been killed in dozens of protests over a seven-week period in Manila.

The same number perished when a single hand grenade ripped through a provincial beauty pageant crowd, an incident that received only scant notice and was probably the work of a revenge-seeker.

"The patience of the Filipino is legendary," Salvador H. Laurel, leader of the largest political opposition group, told reporters recently. "It's like that of a carabao (water buffalo). But out of the blue, violence can explode and when it does it shatters everything in its path."

No Filipino national leader has been killed in modern times.

"The political killings have been in the countryside, where they are mixed up in personal rivalries and competition for limited money and power," said Frankie Sionil-jose, a leading Filipino author. "In Manila, the pie is big — millions, billions — and politicians figure, 'If I can't get a cut this year, maybe next.'"

But Aquino's death "has changed the political complexion," he said. "We'll have to see what happens next."

Few, however, are willing to predict what it would take to escalate the current troubles into a bloody uprising.

The relationship of personal and political violence has surfaced before. Marcos stressed lawlessness — both personal and political — as one justification for declaring martial law in 1972, when large numbers of weapons were confiscated and private armies were disbanded.

Some in the opposition camp now say Marcos exaggerated or manufactured this lawlessness to justify his drastic move, but violence in the 1970s was unquestionably a major problem.

A 1971 study by the Rand Corporation, the American "think tank," noted: "Filipinos and foreigners alike view the Philippines as a violent society, beset by murder, robbery and theft. The impression is hard to escape — at least in Manila where the armed guards, lurid newspaper headlines and 'check your firearms' signs are everywhere."

The study said that in Ilocos Sur, a politically volatile area north of Manila, the homicide rate was a staggering 134 per 100,000.

Opposition holds largest rally

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile's political opposition staged the largest anti-government rally in 10 years of military rule, and demonstrators later clashed with riot police as they tried to march to the presidential palace.

Tens of thousands of Chileans, some perched in treetops and others standing shoulder-to-shoulder near Santiago's main avenue, chanted slogans Tuesday night during two hours of folk music and militant speeches demanding democratic elections.

The festive rally, which was permitted by President Gen. Augusto Pinochet's government, ended with an attempted torchlight march toward the presidential palace two miles away. Hundreds of riot police broke it up with clubs, tear gas and water cannons after the marchers traveled five blocks, and at least three people were wounded.

Elsewhere in Chile, police arrested more than 100 demonstrators in Valparaiso, broke up smaller protests in Concepcion and permitted an anti-government rally in Temuco on Tuesday — the sixth round of monthly protests against high unemployment and government repression.

There was none of the banging of empty pots and pans and only scattered street barricades that characterized the five previous protests, in which hundreds of thousands of Chileans took part and 51 protesters died in clashes with police.

The unrest has led to a limited political liberalization but no government commitment to a timetable for return to civilian rule.

Under a month-old provision allowing public gatherings, the five-party Democratic Alliance, the main non-Marxist opposition group, sought permission for a rally at the same downtown site as a Sept. 8 government march. The government offered a different location, away from the city center, but the Alliance balked.

However, a new center-left coalition, the Unitary Democratic Command, took up the negotiations and settled on a four-block strip of a downtown. Crowd estimates ranged from 30,000 to 50,000.

Banners above the throng bore emblems of the Christian Democrats, Communists, Socialists and even the Leftist Revolutionary Movement, the guerrilla group accused of assassinating Santiago's governor last month. There were huge likenesses of the late Socialist President Salvador Allende, who died in the 1973 coup that brought Pinochet to power.

President attends World Series

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Reagan flew through a nighttime rainstorm to attend the opening game of the 1983 World Series, but arrived late and then left early before Philadelphia notched a 2-1 victory over Baltimore.

Reagan, whose first big job was as a sports announcer in Iowa in the early 1930s, was the guest Tuesday night of Orioles owner Edward Bennett Williams in his private box behind homeplate. Several hours before the game the box was enclosed in bulletproof glass. Who did he want to win? "You know I can't answer that," said Reagan. "He likes them all," said White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes. "He's a baseball fan of the first order."

"But are there more votes in Baltimore or Philly?" Speakes asked with a grin.

Reagan flew to the game in Baltimore by helicopter and arrived at the top of the second inning. He was cheered loudly.

The president stayed about

1 1/2 hours and left at the top of the eighth. It was raining even harder during the trip back, and took about 40 minutes to return to Washington — about twice as long as the trip to the game.

White House assistant press secretary Mark Weinberg said the president deliberately arrived late and left early in order not to inconvenience fans. Presidential motorcades always tie up traffic.

Before leaving, Reagan paused for an interview by ABC-TV, which broadcast the game. He retold one of his favorite stories from his sportscasting days, when he used to recreate games on the radio from teletype messages.

"It was the ninth inning, Cubs and Cards, nothing-nothing, and the wire went dead as I was making a telegraphic report.

"Billy Jurges was at the plate and I decided that maybe I'd take a chance, so I had him foul one, then I had him foul another and then I had him foul one that was almost a home run and went on until I was setting a world record for foul balls. We finally got the wire fixed while I still had him at the plate and word came to me that he popped out on the first pitch."

Asked how he maintained his neutrality for the series, Reagan said, "It ain't easy. I realize I can't have favorites anymore."

Reagan's appearance at the contest between Baltimore and Philadelphia was the 12th time that a president has been at a World Series game. The last time was the seventh game of the 1979 series in Baltimore when Jimmy Carter saw the Orioles lose to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Permission was then granted by the board for area schools to distribute to students leaflets announcing the meeting dates. The two

Such Navy helicopters would be escorted by fighters to prevent Iranian interference with mine-clearing, these officials said.

There has been speculation in the past that the Iranians might try to sink ship hulks in the waterway to prevent tankers from passing through.

But Navy officials said there are two major channels through the strait and that it would be difficult for the Iranians to plug both without being detected by U.S. aerial patrols from the carrier Ranger, now in the Arabian Sea.

If the Iranians were somehow able to sink a hulk in the channel, officials said, the Navy could remove such an obstacle by blowing it up.

Some Pentagon officials suggested that Iran would face "counteraction" by other nations dependent on Persian Gulf oil if it interfered with oil-tanker movements.

"This would be a rash act on the part of Iran," said one official.

Funerals held for victims of execution style murders

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Investigators continued to grope for clues in the slayings of four men at an aircraft hangar while shocked friends and relatives attended funeral services for three of the victims.

About 100 mourners crowded around the grave Tuesday of Philip Good, who would have been 30 on Sunday.

"Our gathering goes beyond the shock of what has taken place," the Rev. Danny R. Wood told the mourners at West Hill Cemetery Tuesday morning at Good's burial. "We realize there has been a great loss. The loss of a husband, the loss of a father and the loss of a son."

Marlene Good, the widow of the slain man, wept as Wood recited the Lord's Prayer.

Grayson County Sheriff J.E. Driscoll, along with nine deputies, stood at attention near the gravesite during the service. Good had been appointed a deputy sheriff on Oct. 1.

Good's body was found along with those of B&B Ranch owner and Denison building contractor Bob Tate, 51; Sherman painting contractor Jerry Brown, 51; and former Sherman police officer Ronald Mayes, 37, in the hangar on Tate's ranch Saturday night.

Mayes and Brown were also buried Tuesday. Tate's burial was scheduled for today.

Driscoll, who is an investigative hypnotist, had said he planned to question Mrs. Good under hypnosis after her husband's funeral to see if she could remember the name of a potential buyer of an ultralight aircraft the men were to meet the night they were killed.

But Tuesday, he said he would let the family decide if they wanted him to try hypnosis.

"That's purely speculative. It all depends of the feelings of the family," Driscoll said.

A preliminary autopsy report showed that Mayes was shot five times as he apparently tried to run for his life. The other three men were shot twice in the head, the report said.

The bodies of Tate, Good and Brown were found covered by a carpet a few feet from pools of blood on the hangar floor and on a card table. Mayes' body had been dragged almost 9 feet and was lying in a pool of blood against a door.

Driscoll said there was "nothing new" in the case, but said the Sherman Crime Stopper's Board had authorized him to offer a $4,000 award for information leading to an arrest and indictment in the slayings.

Relatives of the victims said a one-seat ultralight aircraft marked with Tate's initials was missing from the hangar. They told authorities three of the men had gone to the hangar about 4 p.m. to meet a man from Dallas who was interested in buying a plane.

Mayes, who lived within sight of the Tate ranch, knew that the men were in the hangar, became curious when they never opened its doors and went over to investigate, said his uncle, George Barbee of Dallas.

Mayes' body was found by Tate's wife and son, who had gone to the ranch about 8:30 p.m. Saturday when Tate failed to return home, Driscoll said. Sheriff's deputies found the other three bodies.

Investigators found money ranging from $13 to $100 in the men's wallets and all still wore their jewelry, Driscoll said.

Ann Landers Make helmets mandatory

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a CCRN (critical care registered nurse) with 13 years in intensive care and trauma. I have seen mothers and fathers crushed by grief, not able to believe what happened to their precious children. How ironic that they will spend $2,500 for a motorcycle and forget the most important accessory—a $25 helmet. That wonderful child was not reckless or wild. He never broke a traffic rule in his life — but the drunk who hit him, his record wasn't so good.

Last week I held the limp form of a five-year-old girl in my arms. She died within minutes. Her brother decided to take his little sister out for a spin on the new bike he got for his 18th birthday. Now those parents are childless. Please, Ann, impress on cyclists the need for safety helmets. They come in all sizes and colors and they save lives.—Sick Of The Carnage In California

DEAR CALIF.: Every state in the union should make motorcycle helmets mandatory. Suicide is against the law in the United States and when people don't have ordinary good sense a law can be mighty useful.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I was growing up, books were my dearest friends. I read everything I could get my hands on. The woman who worked at the public library said I was her "best customer." I cannot imagine life without books.

I am writing to ask what to do about my children, ages eight and 12. They are bright and make fairly good grades in school, but the world of books, so vital to my growing-up years, holds no interest for them.

I am sure one of the big drawbacks is TV. I monitor and limit their viewing, but it makes them want it even more. They would spend all their waking hours in front of that electronic monster if I would permit it. Reading a book would never occur to them.

What can I do about this problem. I feel they are missing so much.—Frustrated Mother In Conn.

DEAR MOTHER: The late Mrs. Robert S. McNamara started an organization that speaks to your needs perfectly. It is called RIF (Reading is Fundamental). There are now 3,227 local RIF projects.

RIF operated on the theory that once children learn books can be fun, they WILL read. Also, children need to have the privilege of selecting their own books and keeping them. RIF distributes books without charge. (Each local community raises its own funds.) Since 1966, RIF has distributed more than 52 million books.

I urge you to acquaint yourself with this splendid group. It will teach you how to motivate your children to read and enable you to help other mothers who are faced with the same problem.

Write to RIF Inc., 600 Maryland Ave. SW, Suit 500, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. 20560.

Mrs. Elliot Richardson is chairman of the board. And as you must know, anything connected with the Smithsonian has got to be first class.

Music therapist presents program

Judy Summerville, a registered music therapist, presented a program to Hereford Music Study Club Monday in Kinsey Parlor of the First Baptist Church.

She stated that music therapy is using music in working with the handicapped and traced a brief history of the art and its growth. Programs can be found in use in several places in Amarillo, she said, including Kilgore Children's Hospital, the Psychiatric Pavilion, and St. Anthony's.

Music therapy is used in working with the emotionally disturbed child in classroom situations and also with the mentally and physically handicapped, noted Ms. Summerville. She explained how music therapy can be adapted for many different purposes and ages, and demonstrated by quickly teaching Margaret Schroeter to play the guitar.

Ms. Summerville teaches in Canyon at the only school in the area with a music therapy program.

Mrs. Ken Walser, club president, presided as minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and as club members voted to buy a family membership for the Community Concerts.

Members present were Mmes. Thomas Betzen, Bill Brady, W.T. Carmichael, Brent Caviness, A.T. Griffin, J.C. McCracken, Donald Meyer, Joe Reinauer Sr., Joe Reinauer Jr., A.J. Schroeter, Sid Shaw, Wayne Thomas, Walser, Mary B. Carter, and J.D. Neill.

Members begin making festival preparations

Members of the Young Mothers Study Club began making Christmas ornaments for the Wesley arts and crafts festival when they met Monday at Wesley Methodist Church.

After roll call was answered with "the last nice thing your husband did for you," working shifts for the crafts festival were discussed and minutes from the last meeting were read and approved. A fresh vegetable tray of cheese, crackers and dip was served to those attending by the hostesses, Tracy Coker and Rochelle Hutcherson.

Members present were Jeanie Lomas, Kathy Boyd, Dee Dee Coker, Kelly Wagner, Pam Wagner, Alice Lockmiller, Lisa Blakely, Charla Schlabs, Georgia Auckerman, Carla Hollinger, and Becky Stovall.

Addicted to laxative

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 23 years old and I am addicted to Dulcolax as a laxative. It all started when I began dieting and became very constipated. My doctor suggested that I take a laxative. Now I average around 10 pills a week. I lost my weight but I have a fear of gaining it back so every time I eat too much I down a few pills.

For the past two years I have not had a normal bowel movement. I am extremely active and exercise all the time. I have tried bran and prune juice but this just causes severe cramping along with a bloated stomach.

I'm really concerned about this condition, especially since my husband and I want to have a baby soon. Will this cause problems with my pregnancy? This is urgent because I may already be pregnant.

DEAR READER — You owe it to your doctor and yourself to tell him about your habit. Your use of laxatives every time you think you have eaten too much smacks of a person with anorexia nervosa — a dangerous preoccupation with being too thin.

Dulcolax is supposed to have only a local effect on the colon and is not absorbed. In that case it will not cause any chemical action in your body or the baby's body. Nevertheless, the colonic contractions that

Phillies win Series opener, 2-1, on 2 homers

BALTIMORE (AP) — Philadelphia's Garry Maddox and Joe Morgan found two of Scott McGregor's 83 pitches to their liking, and the resulting home runs proved decisive in the opening game of the 1983 World Series.

McGregor and winning pitcher John Denny were superb in a classic pitching duel, neither making many mistakes in the strike zone and fewer out of it in the first walkless Series game since 1967.

So sharp was McGregor that he threw about 40 fewer pitches than one could expect in an eight-inning performance. But Morgan's game-tying homer in the sixth inning and Maddox' game-winning in the eighth rendered those numbers inconsequential.

All that really mattered was that the Phillies had a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series on the strength of a 2-1 victory Tuesday night over the Baltimore Orioles.

The Orioles, who live by the home run, scored their only run in that fashion when Jim Dwyer connected in the first inning. But Denny was clearly in control until the first hint of late trouble.

That came in the eighth, but vanished quickly when Manager Paul Owens reached into his bullpen for Al Holland. The ace Philadelphia reliever mowed down the last four Oriole hitters to nail down the victory on a rainy, windy night more suited for football than baseball.

Dwyer was the Orioles' second batter of the game and he jumped on a pitch down the middle, sending it soaring over the right field fence to become the 18th man in history to hit a home run in his first World Series at-bat.

"I was just trying to get on base," said Dwyer, who hit just eight homers during the regular season and is not known for his power. "I knew before the game it was going to be a low-scoring contest."

"Dwyer hit his pitch," Denny decided. "It was not a good pitch to throw."

"A fastball down the middle," noted Dwyer.

He didn't see any more of those, he said. It was to be Denny's only major mistake and, on this night, he could afford only one.

The run stood up through five innings as McGregor pitched airtight baseball. The Oriole left-hander had two out in the sixth and on the Phillie bench, Owens started to squirm.

Morgan was the next Phillie hitter.

"I threw him a curve," said McGregor.

That seemed sensible, since the Phillies are supposed to be a fastball hitting team. It did not work, though. "I don't know if he was swinging for a fastball, but he smoked it," McGregor continued. "He was right there on it."

Most 40-year-old players watch the World Series on television. But Morgan laughs at the suggestion that he ought to be doing that just because there were so many candles on his last birthday cake.

"First I was too short to play this game," said Morgan, who's all of 5-foot-7. "Now I'm too old. I don't worry about that."

He had supplied the Phillies with their first hit off McGregor in the fourth inning and this time, he tied the score.

"Any time I come to the plate when we're one run down, I try to drive the ball to the right side," Morgan said. "I don't really try to hit the ball out, just go for the extra base hit. You can't think, 'I've got to hit a home run and tie the score.' I just try to hit the ball hard to right center."

And the homer?

"It was a good pitch," said Morgan. "It was down."

After McGregor breezed through the seventh, Maddox opened the eighth for the Phillies.

"The previous two at-bats, he had thrown me all fastballs," the Phillie center fielder said. "I figured he'd try to get ahead. I wasn't going to be taking. If I got a pitch I can handle, I was going to try and hit it hard."

He did that, drilling the first pitch well over the left field fence for the homer that gave the Phillies the lead.

McGregor confirmed Maddox' diagnosis.

"He hit a fastball pretty much where I wanted to throw it, but he smoked it."

In the bottom of the eighth, Denny retired the first two batters and then gave up a double to Al Bumby. Owens beat a quick path to the mound, and in came Holland.

"I wasn't out of gas," said Denny, "but I understood what had to be done."

"He's a (Goose) Gossage type," Owens said of Holland. "My bullpen is great. When we get into the sixth inning, I know which way I'm going."

When Holland arrived, the Orioles went south for the night.

"I threw them nothing but fastballs," the left-handed reliever said. "There was nothing fancy about it. They knew it was coming. It was just 'Hit it if you can.'"

Series telecast okay, but who needs Cosell?

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck Howard, the producer of ABC's World Series telecast, said before Tuesday night's opening game that he was tired of ABC's work on baseball being compared unfavorably to NBC's.

Well, ABC did quite commendably Tuesday night with one exception — Howard Cosell, who just couldn't stay silent.

Aside from Cosell, there was little to take issue with. The production crew led by Howard and director Chet Forte was just judicious enough, making the game the story rather than their gadgets.

Blimp shots were limited and the replays were restricted only to those plays on which they were needed. When they were used, the angles were just right and they weren't repeated ad nauseum.

Play-by-play man Al Michaels showed why he is at the top of his trade. For example, he knew without coaching that Garry Maddox's minuscule home run totals were deceiving. "He has more power than statistics show," Michaels said as Maddox's game-winning home run settled into the left-field seats.

Earl Weaver, only a year away from the Orioles dugout, provided television viewers with the kind of inside knowledge rarely available to them.

Known as a manager who could spot the right hitter to use at the right time, he sensed just before Joe Morgan's home run that Morgan was zeroing in on pitcher Scott McGregor. At other times, Weaver seemed about a step ahead of everyone else in seeing what was coming.

But Cosell was Cosell.

He stepped on everyone's lines — even on Forte's camera when he punctuated a replay of a catch by John Lowenstein with the comment, "I don't want to sound self-serving but that was marvelous camerawork."

Nothing fazes Cosell. Time after time, Weaver or Michaels would make a point and Cosell would jump in even if he had nothing better to say than, "Good point."

The sad thing is that Cosell has a contribution to make.

Set To Block

With an unidentified Caprock player spiking, Hereford High School junior Yvette Gamboa readies to block Tuesday in a varsity volleyball match. Watching in the background are junior Cindy Pruitt (Number 4) and Shannon Evers (2), a senior. Caprock won 15-11, 15-8.

Volleyball team loses

Tough face-mask penalty is urged

CINCINNATI (AP) — Paul Brown, general manager of the Cincinnati Bengals, believes the face-mask hit that put quarterback Ken Anderson out of the game with Pittsburgh on Monday night may finally bring about some rule changes.

"We were fortunate it was on national TV," Brown said Tuesday. "Maybe now it won't be repeated."

Anderson suffered a severe neck sprain when Steelers' defensive end Keith Gary flung him to the Astroturf and out of the game.

The Steelers were penalized 15 yards, but Gary denied his action was intentional.

"He turned toward me and I grabbed him around the neck," Gary said. "Unfortunately, my hand slipped and got his face mask. It was unfortunate but I couldn't get down about it. I was trying to make a big play."

Brown said he believed it to be as vicious a play as he had ever seen. Ironically, it was Brown who introduced the face mask to the National Football League to reduce injuries.

"It was uncalled for," said Brown, a member of the NFL Competition Committee. He believes there is an inequity in the rules when it comes to hurting quarterbacks.

"What's 15 yards when you get rid of the opponent's quarterback?" Brown said.

"Personally, I believe there should be a disqualification and a major fine. Kenny's X-rays are OK, but how long he'll be out is a Visiting Caprock was just too much for Hereford High School's varsity volleyball squad Tuesday, as it won in straight games 15-11, 15-8.

The loss dropped the Whitefaces to 4-17 overall and 1-8 in their district.

"Well, at least we looked like we wanted to play," commented HHS coach Sharma Smith, who explained the team was coming off some lackluster performances. "It wasn't a bad game."

Senior Shannon Evers led Hereford in scoring, netting 10 points — all in the first game. Junior Cindy Pruitt added five tallies for the evening.

In junior varsity action, Caprock again prevailed, this time 15-9, 15-4. Nancy Escobedo had five points to pace the Whitefaces.

Thursday night, awesome Amarillo High School will be in town. The JV match is slated to start at 6 p.m. in the HHS gymnasium. Amarillo's varsity squad is riding a large winning streak.

Ryder Cup golf matches slated

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Tony Jacklin, non-playing captain for the European team, is well aware of the heavy odds stacked against him in the biennial Ryder Cup golf matches with the United States this weekend.

"We have an awesome task," Jacklin said. "But I believe in my heart it is not impossible. If we play poorly, we'll get beat. If we play well, we'll win."

The Americans, however, have an overwhelming record of 20 victories, three losses and one tie in the matches that date back to 1927 when Samuel Ryder, a wealthy British seed merchant, put up a silver trophy for competition between professionals representing the United States and Great Britain. In the years since World War II, the British have won only once, in 1957. And they've never won in the United States.

The American dominance in the oldest and most important of all golf's international competitions has been so complete that the British side was expanded, in 1979, to include all of Europe.

And that expansion provides Jacklin with two of his strongest players, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Seve Ballesteros of Spain. Ballesteros, probably the outstanding player in the world this year, won the Westchester Classic, scored his second Masters victory earlier this season and added the Irish Open and British PGA titles.

The American team, with five Ryder Cup rookies, is led by non-playing captain Jack Nicklaus. It includes veterans Tom Watson, Ray Floyd, Lanny Wadkins, Fuzzy Zoeller, Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw and Gil Morgan. The first-time players are Craig Stadler, Jay Haas, Curtis Strange, Cal Peete and Bob Gilder.

The match-play competition begins Friday on the PGA National Golf Club course with four best-ball matches, in which scoring is based on the better ball of each two-man team. The afternoon play will be four Scotch foursomes, in which each two-man team plays alternate strokes on the same ball. Four more bestball and four more foursomes matches will be played Saturday. Twelve singles matches will conclude play Sunday. One point is awarded in each match.

Portions of Sunday's play will be televised nationally by ABC.

Nets waive star after drug problem

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey Nets officials say they waived three-time All-Star guard Michael Ray Richardson, who last week acknowledged a setback in his battle against drug dependency, because "there is nothing more we can do."

The release came Tuesday when the 28-year-old — who over his five-year career averaged 14 points a game and led the National Basketball Association in steals for two seasons — refused a league order to report for immediate treatment, said Nets Executive Vice President Lewis Schaffel.

But Richardson's agent, Patrick Healy, says his client has not declined treatment, that he has made arrangements to enter a rehabilitation program and that the waiver was "totally a surprise."

Schaffel said Richardson was released because he did not obey the league's order to report Tuesday to the Life Extension Institute, a New York City counseling service with which the NBA became affiliated in 1981.

"He ate the last straw," said Schaffel.

Richardson had twice before entered drug rehabilitation centers and held an emotional September news conference to describe how cocaine abuse had been "killing" him.

Oilers pick Studley as interim coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Interim head coach Chuck Studley has assumed control of a Houston Oilers team full of memories of Bum Phillips and Ed Biles.

Now there is more.

"This football team right now is a combination of 'Phillips-isms' and 'Biles-isms,'" Studley observed Tuesday as he became the 11th head coach in the National Football League club's 23-year history. "Let's get to work on a few 'Studley-isms' and see what happens."

The first Studley-ism is an honest and open view of his position.

"I didn't look up the word 'interim' but I think it means temporary," Studley said. "If we continue to play inconsistently, it's adios (goodbye) at the end of the season."

"I realize it is a different ball game now and only time will tell if I can handle it."

Studley-ism No. 2 is he doesn't read the newspaper in the morning.

"My day gets ruined fast enough anyway, but maybe I'll have to start now," Studley said.

Whoa, what's this? Another homespun, one-line artist? Studley may not have the one-line capabilities of Phillips and he doesn't intend to try to erase anything from the past. "Bum has quite an image around here and I'm not going to make any effort to alter it," Studley said. "All I want to do is win some games."

Studley, who must try to break the chain of 13 consecutive losses, including six this season, said he eventually would put his finger print on the Oilers team.

But first he must learn to wear two hats. He will continue as defensive coordinator.

"I'm still the defensive coordinator and I know what that involves plus I have the duties of the head coach and at this point I'm not sure what that involves," Studley said.

Studley and Oilers offensive coordinator Kay Dalton were the two primary candidates for Biles' job.

Studley said Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzog informed the two coaches Tuesday morning that Studley would be the head coach.

"I've talked to Kay and I think he's doing a great job," Studley said. "I'm sure our relationship will not change."

Biles resigned Monday following a 26-14 loss to the Denver Broncos on Sunday. Biles was booed lustily during the game when his picture was flashed on a huge screen in the Astrodome.

The Oilers have not won a game since Sept. 19, 1982 when they defeated Seattle 23-21.

Studley came to the Oilers in January after serving as defensive coordinator of the San Francisco 49ers for three years, including a march to the 1981 Super Bowl.

Studley started his coaching career in 1955 as an assistant at his alma mater, the University of Illinois. Studley was head coach at the University of Massachusetts for one year and for eight seasons at the University of Cincinnati.

He joined the pro ranks in 1969 with the Cincinnati Bengals where he remained for 10 years before moving to the 49ers.

Reagan appears at World Series

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent
BALTIMORE (AP) — It was a command performance, but the president of the United States missed two — and possibly three — of the most dramatic happenings in the opening game baseball's 1983 World Series.

"Sure, I was nervous," said rangy John Denny, winning pitcher in the Philadelphia Phillies' 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

"I was deeply honored that he was there. I wanted to tip my hat to him but I was afraid I might lose my concentration."

"I thought that every day he puts up with what I did in just one evening. His pressure is so tremendous and important it made my performance seem insignificant."

Following a tradition that began with Woodrow Wilson in 1915 and continued with Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, Franklin Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower and Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan put in a surprise appearance at the fall classic, arriving at Memorial Stadium after the game had started.

He had not settled comfortably in Oriole owner Edward Bennett Williams' bullet-proof box when Baltimore's right fielder, Jim Dwyer, smote a mighty home run over the right field wall in the first inning to put the Orioles 1-up.

"I heard the announcement but I never thought about it," said Dwyer. "I'm not sure he even saw my home run."

Unlike his mound rival, Scott McGregor, the Orioles' losing pitcher, said he never intended to tip his hat. "My first thought was, 'Is he going to raise taxes or something?'" the lean, mustachioed left-hander said. "I didn't even know whether my wife was there or not, much less the president."

"I heard when he was announced. Everybody stood up and strained to look, but they couldn't see a thing." Centerfielder Gary Maddox of the Phillies said he thought about the president when little Joe Morgan hit his home run in the sixth inning to tie the score.

"I said to myself, 'I wonder if he even knows who Joe Morgan is?'"

Despite overhanging clouds and rain that intensified as play progressed, it was a game fit for a pharaoh or a president.

Restaurants monitored after hepatitis breakout

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — At least 57 people have been afflicted with hepatitis in an outbreak that apparently began in a restaurant having problems with sewage back-up, authorities said.

Health officials said they were closely monitoring restaurants and other businesses in an effort to stop the spread of contagious but non-fatal type-A hepatitis.

Dr. Anthony Way, the public health officer for the Lubbock Health Department, said the hepatitis apparently began spreading last Wednesday from the restaurant, which has since voluntarily closed for two weeks.

Way said the contagious disease has advanced to a point where new infections could crop up across the city if proper hygienic measures were not taken immediately.

The exact cause of the outbreak was not known, Way said, but he said the People's Restaurant where the outbreak was thought to have started has had sewage back up three times in the last month.

Don Penney, the owner of a JT McCord's restaurant in south Lubbock, said one of his employees contracted hepatitis four days after leaving his job at People's.

But Way said the employee was not handling food at either restaurant.

"We're not concerned about a single employee at a single place like JT McCord's," Way said.

Hepatitis symptoms include a flu-like feeling, general weakness, aches, loss of appetite, possible nausea, fever or headache and jaundice or yellowing of the skin, Way said.

"A lot of people who have been exposed will not become ill," said Way, adding many people build up antibodies against the disease.

"But they will become infectious. We're asking them to practice good personal hygiene. It's easy to interrupt (the spread of hepatitis) — just wash your hands," he said.

Meanwhile, hospitals and emergency centers reported a large number of people were being inoculated.

Dr. Murdo McDonald, director of the student health clinic at Texas Tech University, said the clinic was flooded with students who thought they had contracted hepatitis. He said the facility was running out of the vaccine.

Judge grants delay in baby deaths trial

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — A defense attorney says he's "quite surprised" that a judge has granted a 2½ month delay in the trial of a nurse accused of murdering an infant girl with drug injections.

State District Judge John Carter on Tuesday agreed to a second continuance request by attorneys for Gene Jones, pushing the trial date back to Jan. 9.

Ms. Jones' murder trial had been scheduled to begin next Monday with jury selection.

"I was surprised we got the continuance, but hope springs eternal," said Georgetown attorney Jim Brookshire. "You can well imagine (Ms. Jones) was happy."

Ms. Jones, 33, is charged with the September 1982 death of 15-month-old Chelsea Ann McClellan of Kerrville.

The vocational nurse will be tried later on charges she injured six other children with injections of a powerful muscle relaxant, succinylcholine.

Brookshire, who was appointed less than a month ago, and defense attorney William Chenault were rebuffed by the judge last month in their initial request for a trial delay.

Brookshire's second motion said prosecutors had not provided him with enough information about tests conducted on tissue samples from the McClellan infant's body.

"I think the judge is a man of good heart and has a lot of feeling for the accused," Brookshire said. "I can always use three months. Now I have time to get my thoughts together."

Brookshire's initial motion for the continuance had argued that he needed more time to prepare the nurse's defense since he was new to the complex case.

He was appointed after widespread publicity forced Ms. Jones' trial to be moved here on a change of venue.

A Bexar County grand jury has been investigating a string of suspicious infant deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit of San Antonio's Medical Center Hospital from 1978 to early 1982.

Ms. Jones worked at the hospital during that period, before moving 60 miles northwest to Kerrville to work in a pediatric clinic. She has denied any wrongdoing.

Because of conflicts and policy, two former leaders in crude oil production—Iran and Iraq—have dramatically fallen from pre-1980 levels. Overall, world crude oil production peaked at 62.6 million barrels per day (mil b/d) in 1979, and has declined 9.5 mil b/d—15 percent—mainly as a result of depressed economies and worldwide conservation measures.

WILLING TO BE JAILED FOR JESUS!

Paul was going by land to Assos, and we went on ahead by ship. He joined us there and we sailed together to Mitylene; the next day we passed Chios; the next, we touched at Samos; and a day later we arrived at Miletus. Paul had decided against stopping at Ephesus this time, as he was hurrying to get to Jerusalem, if possible, for the celebration of Pentecost.

But when we landed at Miletus, he sent a message to the elders of the church at Ephesus asking them to come down to the boat to meet him.

When they arrived he told them, "You men know that from the day I set foot in Turkey until now I have done the Lord's work humbly -- yes, and with tears -- and have faced grave danger from the plots of the Jews against my life. Yet I never shrank from telling the truth, either publicly or in your homes. I have had one message for Jews and Gentiles alike the necessity of turning from sin to God through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

"And now I am going to Jerusalem, drawn there irresistibly by the Holy Spirit, not knowing what awaits me, except that the Holy Spirit has told me in city after city that jail and suffering lie ahead. But life is worth nothing unless I use it for doing the work assigned me by the Lord Jesus -- the work of telling others the Good News about God's mighty kindness and love. And now I know that none of you among whom I went about teaching the Kingdom will ever see me again."

PIK, drought affecting nation's grain inventory

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the effects of this year's payment-in-kind program and the crop-withering drought is that the United States probably will wind up a year from now controlling dramatically less of the world's grain inventory.

According to Agriculture Department projections, the U.S. stockpile of wheat and coarse grain — mostly corn — will be reduced to around 78 million metric tons at the end of the 1983-84 season from a carryover of 148.8 million tons at the end of 1982-83.

The figures can be a bit tricky to relate because they are based on an international marketing calendar which runs from July 1 to the following June 30 for wheat, and Oct. 1 to Sept. 1 for coarse grains.

Also, the projections are in metric tons — 2,205 pounds per ton — which are the units favored in world grain trade. One ton is the equivalent of 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Despite the statistical fuzz, the figures do portray the grain supply situation and suggest how world grain stocks may add up in the future. Thus, the numbers are watched closely by U.S. grain traders and producer groups, as well as prospective foreign buyers and exporters.

As the figures show, the U.S. grain carryover a year from now — 78 million tons — will represent about 44 percent of the total held by major exporting and importing nations.

This year, when the U.S. granary had a carryover of 148.8 million tons, the share was 74 percent of a global stockpile of 201 million tons of wheat and coarse grains.

At the end of the 1981-82 season, the U.S. grain carryover was 97.3 million tons or 51.4 percent of the world total of 200.1 million tons. The carryover at the end of 1980-81 — reflecting another short harvest in the United States — was 61.6 million tons or only 38.3 percent of the global stockpile of 160.7 million tons.

The figures, as prosaic as they may seem, illustrate how remarkably sensitive the world grain supply is to the production fortunes of the American farmer. If more evidence is needed, consider: —Total world production of wheat and coarse grains this season is estimated at slightly more than 1.16 billion tons, about 8 percent less than the record of 1.26 billion tons produced in 1982-83. The U.S. harvest, at 208.3 million tons, is down 37 percent. That was more than enough to offset a production increase in the rest of the world.

—World grain exports in 1983-84 are expected to increase slightly to 189.2 million tons from 186.7 million tons last year. The U.S. grain shipments will also increase slightly to about 95 million tons, also a slight increase from last year.

Pasture seeding symposium slated

VERNON — A three-state symposium on range and pasture seeding in the Southern Great Plains will be held here Oct. 19. The program at the Wilbarger County Auditorium will feature discussions and demonstrations on the newest grasses, seeding techniques and harvesting and processing equipment.

The symposium will bring together leading ranchers, grass producers, research scientists and equipment dealers from southwest Oklahoma, eastern New Mexico and Texas, said U.U. "Al" Alexander, agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Vernon.

An outstanding group of speakers has been assembled and participants should plan to arrive early, advised Harold Wiedemann, associate professor of agricultural engineering with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Vernon.

Registration will begin at 7:30 a.m. and the program starts at 8:30 a.m. The symposium will end at 4:00 p.m.

The registration fee of $10 includes lunch and printed proceedings, noted Wiedemann, symposium coordinator. Advance registration may be made by writing Wiedemann at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, P.O. Box 1658, Vernon, Tx. 76384.

Program topics include promising new grasses, grass establishment, rainfall and germination, grass seed harvesting, seeding equipment, seed processing, testing, and modification.

U.S. butter output declined in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's output of butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk declined in August from July levels, says the Agriculture Department.

Butter production, at 83.9 million pounds, was down 11 percent from July, while total cheese output dropped 5 percent to 381 million pounds. Non-fat dry milk production declined 12 percent in August to 128 million pounds.

The production of ice cream, however, rose to 91.9 million gallons in August, a 4 percent increase from July production.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

Amendment No. 3

AUSTIN — For years Texas agriculture had available a method by which it could promote its goods, thereby creating more jobs in the industry and related industries such as finance, trucking, railroading, storage, processing and exporting.

However, a court decision in 1975 determined that the refundable self-assessment program constituted a "tax" and since farm products in the hands of producers are exempt from taxation, the court declared the program unconstitutional.

On November 8th, Texas voters will have the final say as to whether producer organizations of commodities such as wheat, cotton, corn, grain sorghum, soybeans and others can assess refundable fees on their own products in an effort to expand markets and sales of the products.

Those who favor the amendment say that it will help correct a problem which now finds 40 percent of all crop land in Texas idle. They add that if new markets can be found and portions of this idle land can be put into production that in turn it will create thousands of new job opportunities in many industries throughout the state.

There would be no cost to the state. Assessments are made on the producers. Those who do not wish to participate can request a refund. Finally, it is the producers themselves who would vote on whether assessments should be levied.

Those who disagree with the proposal say that producers should not be required to contribute for promotion unless they want to contribute. They also say that since producer boards are quasi-governmental that they would be intervening in private enterprise and that the government does not promote other types of products.

If you want further information about the agricultural commodities amendment or any of the other 10 amendments, please write to me, Senator Bill Sarpalius at Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

Block wants USDA to be efficient as farmer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Agriculture Secretary John R. Block the efficiency and productivity of the American farmer set standards he seeks to achieve in his own agency.

Block told the Association of Government Accountants Thursday that U.S. agriculture is the nation's largest industry, with assets equal to 70 percent of the capital assets of all the manufacturing corporations in the country.

Moreover, he said, agriculture and the rest of the nation's food pipeline account for one out of every five jobs in private enterprise.

Block said "to deal with this colossus, USDA is also on

Cattle provide best way to manage wildlife habitat

LUBBOCK — Give a cow a little water, a little salt and a nutritional supplement and she will help manage acres of wildlife habitat.

Fred S. Guthery, associate professor of wildlife management at Texas Tech University, told participants at Texas Tech's recent 20th annual Ranch Management Conference that cattle and wildlife can live together harmoniously.

Cattle are the most economical and most efficient way to make rangeland attractive to game birds, Guthery said.

For wildlife management, other habitat improvement methods are more expensive, he cautioned. Burning costs more than $2 per acre and modifying habitat with heavy equipment can exceed $40 per acre.

"With cattle, all you do is turn them loose," he said. Different rangeland vegetation provides habitats for several bird species including bobwhites, wild turkeys and mourning doves.

Range classified as fair to good because of large percentages of forbs—weeds usually not favored for grazing cattle—makes excellent bobwhite habitat.

Tall grasses and forbs such as croton, partridge pea or Western ragweed provide cover for larger birds, while bare ground allows bobwhites to forage for seeds. Thick grass and plants make seed-gathering difficult for the small birds, 6 inches or shorter.

Wild turkeys need range with a mixture of vegetation including tall perennial grasses. Turkeys like big bluestem, Indian grass and switch grass for nesting cover.

Well-distributed sands of tall grass are difficult to find in some range areas, and ranchers who want more turkeys should study cattle grazing patterns, Guthery said.

On the other hand, grazed range is attractive to mourning doves who feed on forb seeds. Guthery said that overgrazing and subsequent soil erosion can limit dove numbers.

China reports record wheat crop this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — China reportedly has harvested a record wheat crop this year and apparently has beat the U.S. record for yield per acre.

The Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday in a brief report that China's wheat crop is estimated at a record 80 million metric tons. The average yield was estimated at 2.8 tons per hectare.

Allowing 36.7 bushels in each metric ton of 2,205 pounds and 2.47 acres per hectare, China's wheat harvest was about 2.94 billion bushels — an average of 41.6 bushels per acre.

The 1983 U.S. wheat harvest last month was estimated at about 2.4 billion bushels, with a record average yield of 39.5 bushels per acre.

Officials said China's record harvest also "benefited from near-ideal growing conditions" during much of the year.

The report also showed India's wheat harvest at a record of 42.5 million tons — about 1.56 billion bushels — but included no information on average yields.

Man arrested after DPS officer, four others slain, six abducted

HEMPSTEAD, Texas (AP) — A lone gunman was arrested after a 5½-hour crime spree across Southeast Texas that left a state trooper and four other people dead, a woman critically wounded, and six hostages released unhurt.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Larry Todd said Tuesday night authorities believe the same man was responsible for all of the shootings and the two kidnappings.

Law enforcement authorities said the man killed two people in College Station at about 6 p.m. CDT Tuesday, stole a car and drove to Hempstead, about 40 miles south, where he gunned down a DPS officer who stopped him at about 6:50 p.m.

The man then drove to a truck stop and stole another car, a Waller County sheriff's spokesman said. He killed two people and critically wounded a 70-year-old woman at a home in Hempstead, drove 16 blocks south and abducted a couple and their three young children, stole their car, then released the family and abandoned the vehicle in Pasadena.

In Pasadena, southeast of Houston, the man abducted a maintenance worker at an apartment complex and took his vehicle. The man was arrested at about 11:30 p.m. at a highway roadblock southwest of Houston near Wharton, sheriff's officials said.

The man, Eliseo Hernandez Moreno, 24, of Bryan, was taken before Justice of the Peace Frank Shannon in Wharton and ordered held without bond on a capital murder charge in the death of the trooper.

College Station authorities identified the dead there as Juan Garza Jr., 30, a mailman, and his wife, Esther, 31. Neighbors said the couple's two children, Jessica, 6, and Johnny, 1, ran to a neighbor's apartment when the shootings started.

The highway patrolman, Russell Lynn Boyd, 25, of Hempstead, was shot to death along Texas Highway 6 near Cedar Creek when he stopped a car believed to have been driven by the suspect for a traffic violation, said Todd.

"He had not started to write the ticket when the shot was fired," said Waller County deputy sheriff H. Lester.

Todd said Boyd joined the DPS on Oct. 8, 1982.

Hempstead Police Chief Randy Johnson said he had talked to Boyd a short time before he was killed.

"Thirty minutes before it happened, we were talking on the radio about going deer hunting," said Johnson. "He said, 'I'll bring the ammo.' That's what he said."

Dr. W.D. Baily at Memorial Hospital here identified the two dead in Hempstead as James Bennett and Allie Wilkens. Their ages were not available. Baily said Bennett was the husband of 70-year-old Ann Bennett. She was listed in critical but stable condition at Houston's Hermann Hospital where she was taken by LifeFlight helicopter.

Waller County deputy sheriff Raymond Cook said the gunman kidnapped Billy Shirley Jr., his wife and three children from their home in Hempstead, stole their 1974 Oldsmobile and then released the family unharmed at a truck stop in Cypress, which is about halfway between Hempstead and Houston.

Shirley declined to talk to reporters as he and his wife were driven away from the Waller County sheriff's department by Shirley's parents.

"I'm tired. I'm upset. Please don't ask us no questions," Shirley said.

"It appears their cooperation with him is what accounts for their being alive," said District Attorney Jim Keeshen.

Wharton County Sheriff's investigator David Gaitan said Ronald Wayne Gangle, 29, was abducted in his 1978 Bronco from the apartment complex where he worked in Pasadena after the suspect abandoned the Shirleys' car.

Gaitan said Moreno offered no resistance when he was arrested and that Gangle was unharmed. Gaitan said police found two .357-magnum revolvers in the vehicle, one of them identified as belonging to the slain trooper.

Moreno was arrested at a roadblock on U.S. Highway 59 between Wharton and El Campo, about 50 miles southwest of Houston.

College Station police told the Bryan-College Station Eagle that Garza telephoned detective Mark Langwell moments before he was killed, told him that his tires were slashed over the weekend and that he was afraid his report of the incident to police could result in violence against his family.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Fisher

Is wooden spoon necessary?

DEAR POLLY — Can anyone tell me why so many recipes say "stir with a wooden spoon?" I find it an awkward utensil, especially for something like yeast bread. I've scanned all the books I can find and none gives a clue. — A.P.H.

DEAR A.P.H. — I personally find a wooden spoon the most pleasing utensil in my kitchen, from an aesthetic standpoint. However, aesthetics aside, there are reasons why wooden spoons are so frequently recommended: They won't scratch pots or bowls and the wood won't interact with various types of foods (particularly acids) as some metals will. However, if you feel really uncomfortable using a wooden spoon, I see no reason why a stainless steel spoon could not be used, so long as it won't damage the pot or bowl you're using. One might say, if the spoon fits, use it! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When baking cookies, I use half margarine and half vegetable shortening. The margarine gives the cookies good flavor, and the vegetable shortening keeps them from getting too flat during baking. — GENEVIEVE

DEAR POLLY — When my 3-year-old great-grandson comes to visit, I do not give him "bought" toys. Instead, he loves this game. Take 10 sheets of variously colored construction paper and write on each with a big marker the numbers one through 10. On the reverse side, write a letter on each, such as A through J. Then put the colored sheets of paper in a circle on the floor with a bushy plant in the center. Sing "Here we go round the mulberry bush," then suddenly say "step on red!" or "step on three!" This is fun and my great-grandson looks forward to playing this game. It also helps him learn his colors, numbers and letters. — MRS. O.H.

DEAR POLLY — When making a casserole or meat dish, there are usually many hidden calories in the grease you can't see. Simply put the dish in the refrigerator for a few minutes and the grease will rise to the top. Skim it off, then reheat if necessary. — V.C.K.

DEAR POLLY — Have you ever needed to refer to a guarantee, warranty or an operator's manual for an appliance, only to find it unavailable or misplaced? In our home, this problem has been eliminated, for I've taken a loose-leaf notebook, punched holes in the manuals and warranties, stapled my sales receipts to the last page of the booklets, purchased separators labeled from A to Z, and filed the items accordingly. The stove is filed under S, the dryer under D, the refrigerator under R, etc. Now when I need to produce proof of purchase of an item, no more tears! It's at my fingertips, eliminating hours of frustration. — MRS. V.P.

DEAR POLLY — Cut a twin-bed-sized mattress in half crosswise. Bind the raw edges. You have two perfect playpen pads that can be easily laundered. — HELEN

DEAR POLLY — I have a practical, colorful and simple way of covering food in large bowls or any container. I use a large, clean, plastic shower cap. It's very secure, easy to use and won't come off like plastic wrap. — ANGELINE
