

Man killed in Christmas plane crash

A Hereford man died Monday from injuries he received in a plane crash on Christmas Day northeast of Hereford.

Joe Paetzold, 38, died of burns and injuries he received in the crash of a single-engine homemade airplane. The plane was about to land on a grass landing strip on the farm of his brother, Larry, 11 miles north and five miles east of Hereford at about 5:15 p.m. Monday.

Larry Paetzold, 39, the plane's pilot, was slightly burned on his hands and received a few cuts. He suffered the injuries while pulling his brother from the wreckage. Larry Paetzold is in satisfactory condition and is being treated at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Others to stand trial in Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) - The provisional government today set up military tribunals to try members of the security police of Nicolae Ceausescu, who denied right up until a firing squad executed him that he ruled by terror.

State television, headquarters for the mix of dissidents, disaffected government officials and army commanders who are running the country, on Tuesday night broadcast footage of Ceausescu at his secret military trial.

The 40-minute videotape showed an unrepentant man refusing to acknowledge either the severe hardship he forced on the Romanian people or the massacre of thousands of people by his security forces.

"Everything that was said here is false, and I don't want to talk anymore," the man who ruled Romania for 24 years told his accusers. He insisted he was still in power.

Earlier in the day, state television showed pictures of the bullet-riddled bodies of Ceausescu and his wife and second-in-command, Elena. Ousted Friday and captured Saturday, they were tried, convicted and executed on Monday.

The 37-member governing National Salvation Committee, which has run the short and bloody revolution since taking over TV headquarters on Friday, began to try to restore order so the democracy they have promised can be built.

The Ceausescus were dealt with swiftly in a bid to end resistance by Ceausescu loyalists who killed civilians by the hundreds over the weekend. It had been feared they would find out where the deposed dictator and his wife were being held and try to free them.

Sporadic gunfire still rang out through parts of the capital after proof of the execution was broadcast, but Bucharest radio and Romanian sources said Ceausescu loyalists were surrendering by the hundreds.

Military tribunals were being set up across the country to try Ceausescu loyalists who massacred civilians and continue to carry out attacks after Ceausescu's ouster, the radio said.

It said the National Salvation Committee had warned all "terrorist elements" to surrender their weapons by Thursday afternoon or they will be "tried and condemned ... in accordance with emergency procedures."

According to reports, Larry Paetzold had been flying other family members in his handcrafted plane throughout Christmas Day and was about to land the plane on a grass strip near his home when a wing tip struck a telephone pole.

The plane then plummeted to the ground.

The brothers were taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital. Joe Paetzold was airlifted, by helicopter, to Lubbock General Hospital. He died at 10:26 p.m. Monday.

Joe Paetzold was born on Oct. 19, 1951 in Hereford. He was a farmer and involved in other agribusiness in Hereford.

Services will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Church of the Nazarene with the Rev. Bob Huffaker, the Rev. Ted Taylor and Dennis Latham officiating. Burial will follow in West Park Cemetery by Rix Funeral Directors.

He was a member of the Church of the Nazarene, where he served as a lay pastor and served on the board of the Nazarene Christian Academy.

Paetzold was a lifelong Hereford resident and was a graduate of Hereford High School. He married Kathy Markley on April 3, 1971.

Survivors include his wife, Kathy; a daughter, Jill Paetzold, of the home; two sons, Jason and Luke, of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward "Bud" Paetzold of Hereford; a brother, Larry, of Hereford; a sister, Patsy Douglas, of Washington, D.C.; and a grandmother, Sophia Snoga, of Canyon.

When it's over...

A lone Christmas tree sits next to a dumpster in Hereford on the day after Christmas. Not a lot of trees were around dumpsters, but many were filled with scraps of gaily colored paper that had covered treasures unwrapped on Christmas.

Troops maintain vigil, wait for Noriega deal

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) - U.S. troops pestered the Vatican Embassy today after their commander failed in hours of curbside diplomacy to break a stalemate over the status of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said in Italy today that there was no legal way the Holy See could hand over Noriega to U.S. authorities. The ousted dictator took refuge in the Vatican Embassy on Christmas Eve.

Before dawn, a company of American soldiers paraded past the embassy. American troops mowed down a field of tall grass alongside the embassy overnight and shot out all working street lights with a pellet gun.

On Tuesday, U.S. soldiers searched the Vatican representative, Monsignor Sebastian Laboa, and his car as he left the embassy, apparently to prevent Noriega from being spirited out.

After a week of fighting, order returned to Panama City. Crews cleared mounds of garbage left from wild looting sprees that emptied shelves, and many people returned to work.

The U.S. military reported only scattered clashes with Noriega loyalists Tuesday. A few members of his Defense Forces were arrested and many surrendered.

On the third day of negotiations over Noriega's fate, Gen. Maxwell Thurman, who commands U.S. forces in Central and South America, posted himself outside the Vatican Embassy for nearly six hours Tuesday afternoon.

He met three times with Laboa in the street and spent the rest of the time waiting in a car, one of a caravan of sedans, jeeps and armored personnel carriers that escorted him to the mission.

Neither Thurman nor other U.S. officials would comment on the negotiations.

American troops invaded Panama one week ago in a bid to capture Noriega, and Washington said it is determined to take him back to the United States to stand trial on charges of trafficking in Colombian cocaine.

Faced with the possibility Noriega might be granted asylum in a third country, the Bush administration said it would file papers today in more than six countries to freeze more than $10 million in "illegal drug money" it says Noriega has stashed away.

A State Department source in Washington said the United States used "extraordinarily tough terms" in demanding the Vatican hand over the general.

At the Vatican, Navarro told reporters the Holy See could not legally give Noriega to U.S. officials because the embassy is empowered to deal only with the Panamanian government. He said Panama's U.S.-backed civilian government had not made any request for Noriega.

Navarro also said the Vatican had not spoken with other countries about arranging exile for Noriega.

The United States and the Vatican have no extradition treaty and the Vatican criticized the bloody U.S. invasion that toppled the general and installed the government of President Guillermo Endara, who was elected in May in balloting Noriega nullified.

Without an agreement, Noriega will not get past the U.S. troops surrounding the Vatican mission. Under international law, embassies are considered inviolable and U.S. troops cannot legally enter the mission to get him.

Spain and the Dominican Republic, where one of Noriega's daughters lives, had been mentioned as possible sanctuaries for Noriega, but Spain has refused to grant him asylum.

U.S. troops also surrounded the Cuban, Nicaraguan and Libyan embassies, where it was thought Noriega might try to seek refuge.

Cuba on Tuesday asked for an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council to condemn the move.

The U.S. Southern Command said Noriega probably went to the Vatican mission on his own after his closest collaborators either deserted him or were arrested.

Lt. Col. Luis del Cid, considered one of Noriega's right-hand men, pleaded innocent Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Miami to drug smuggling charges.

"I surrendered myself - I wanted to be brought here," he told the court.

He is charged with racketeering, drug smuggling and money laundering in the same February 1988 indictment that names Noriega.

Since the invasion began, 23 Americans and 293 Panamanian military have been killed and 330 Americans and 123 Panamanians wounded, according to the Southern Command. Another 4,446 Panamanians have been detained.

Panamanian doctors say more than 100 civilians were killed and hundreds of others injured. No complete figure was available because many civilians were buried quickly in common graves and there were no authorities to keep records.

Smithee will run for return to Austin

State Rep. John Smithee of Amarillo announced today that he will seek a fourth term in the Texas Legislature.

Smithee represents the 86th District, which includes all of Randall and Deaf Smith counties.

Smithee filed papers Tuesday with the Secretary of State's office in Austin.

Smithee said the Texas Legislature has been busy during the past year. The Amarillo resident said still more work is to be done in 1990 with at least one special session, in March to deal with school finance, on the horizon.

"We were able to get a bill passed on the West Texas State University merger with Texas A&M University," Smithee said in reviewing the accomplishments of the recent legislative sessions. "The Coordinating Board is still having problems with that, and there is still work to be done. The merger could have a tremendous benefit for Deaf Smith County with the agricultural research and other areas, and we hope to have everything done before the next legislative session."

Smithee said the worker's compensation reform bill recently passed was "on a scale of 1 to 10, probably an eight. It was pretty good, but not perfect," Smithee said. "Worker's comp will continue to be an issue as we try to get the reforms into effect and get the rates down."

The school finance issue should benefit area schools, Smithee said.

"Anything we do should help," he said. "I don't think anyone will be hurt. The redistricting issue will be here in 1991. Deaf Smith County is kind of in the middle, on the border of two Congressional districts, two senate districts, two house districts. We need to see where Hereford fits best."

"There are rumors that Deaf Smith and Hale counties will be placed in the 13th Congressional District (both are currently in the 19th District, represented by Larry Combest). We need to all work together to make sure everyone is in the most advantageous place. It is really tough for any locality to be redistricted. That, however, is the only way to keep things even."

'Strongman' roared, but scurried like a mouse

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) - He roared like a lion, but when it was time to fight he scurried like a mouse, running from hole to hole as U.S. paratroopers tried to trap him.

"He repressed us for years and then he humiliated us by giving up without a fight," said taxi driver Pedro Hernandez. "I never supported him, but he should have fought."

There was no final power play and Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega didn't go down in a blaze of bullets, a fitting end for someone to be romanticized in Latin American folklore once his political crimes and other sins are forgotten.

"He did not even have the guts to kill himself," said housewife Martiza Martinez.

Instead of the name "commander of dignity" his cronies gave him because he stood up to Americans, Mrs. Martinez said he was the "commander of indignity."

Although most Panamanians were opposed to the military strongman who named and fired six presidents like shop supervisors, they almost believed his nationalist rhetoric of fighting to the death.

He was said to enjoy a crisis, and it seemed that was the case as he survived threat after threat to his reign. Many expected him to die fighting, to be "carried out of the barracks face up."

Noriega was defiant and mocking when the United States indicted him in 1988 on drug trafficking charges. He vowed "our life for Panama" and said the U.S. accusations were masking designs to renege on the Panama Canal treaties and maintain the U.S. military presence in Panama.

For more than a year Noriega repressed all dissent, silenced all opposition, survived two coup attempts and got away with annulling the May 7 election his candidates lost. He portrayed himself as David fighting the American Goliath, arms in the air, ever the winner.

So his flight to the Vatican's embassy on Sunday to seek asylum was an anticlimax not only for his supporters, who hoped he would take to the hills and lead an insurgency war, but also to detractors who wished him dead.

"It was a big bluff," said Judith Alvarez, who said she was still "nervous" even though Noriega was closeted in the Vatican mission. "I will feel safe when I see him behind bars."

Many Panamanians felt it was more a question of the Americans suffering him until their patience ran out. That happened on Dec. 16 when members of Noriega's security forces killed an American soldier in civilian clothes near Panamanian military headquarters.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Marlene Dietrich is 88. Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, is 65. Psychologist Lee Salk is 63. Actress Tovah Feldshuh is 37.

Thought for Today: "It is the steady and merciless increase of occupations, the augmented speed at which we are always trying to live, the crowding of each day with more work than it can profitably hold, which has cost us, among other good things, the undisturbed enjoyment of friends. Friendship takes time, and we have no time to give it." - Agnes Repplier, American essayist (1858-1950).

Three jailed after fight

Three persons were arrested Christmas Eve in connection with an incident in the 300 block of Adclito Calle.

According to reports, a fight broke out at the residence and Hereford police were called to the scene. Three officers who responded to the call were also assaulted by the persons. Three men were charged with aggravated assault on a police officer. One of the men, 35, was also charged with aggravated assault, resisting arrest and interference with the duty of a public servant. A man, 17, was charged with aggravated assault, violation of probation, resisting arrest, and on warrants for bail jumping and failure to appear. Citrus growers to recover

MCALLEN, Texas (AP) - Rio Grande Valley citrus growers say the Christmas weekend arctic blast that wiped out the year's remaining crop did not sound the industry's death knell.

But the rate of recovery will depend upon the extent of damages to citrus trees, more than one-third of which were replanted after a similar freeze in 1983.

Les Whitlock, manager of the Texas Valley Citrus Committee in McAllen, on Tuesday warned that more cold weather could hamper another comeback. "We're not through sweating out winter."

Producers and agricultural officials were assessing the extent of damages Tuesday, although they were already labeling most of this year's crop a total loss. An estimated 65 percent of the harvest was on the trees when the freeze hit, representing a value of up to $55 million at the wholesale level.

Grapefruit and oranges were frozen solid, making them salvageable only for juice - which brings about half the price of fresh fruit.

But the rapid warming Sunday and Monday may have thawed the chilled fruit too quickly, making it unsuitable even for juice.

"We don't see it as a complete negative loss," said Richard Walsh, a citrus grower and president of Mission Shippers, a Valley packing operation. "The difference between this freeze and 1983 is that we don't see the (same) damage to the trees."

"We've lost the remaining fruit on the trees," he told The Dallas Morning News. "But we've proven to everyone that we can come back."

Walsh and other shippers were busy finding markets for grapefruit and oranges picked before the freeze last week.

Meanwhile, Florida citrus growers said that despite a numbing Christmas freeze, they were optimistic their trees suffered little damage and much of the iced fruit can be turned into juice.

Other arrests included a man, 35, for driving while intoxicated; a man, 29, was brought back to Hereford by Plainview police on outstanding warrants for false identification to a peace officer and public intoxication; a man, 19, and a man, 24, were arrested for public intoxication; a man, 20, was arrested on a warrant for failure to pay fines;

A man, 43, was arrested in the 100 block of Lawton for public intoxication and disorderly conduct; a man, 23, was arrested for public intoxication; a man, 19, was arrested for driving while intoxicated; and a man, 19, was arrested for driving without liability insurance and for no driver's license.

County arrests five

Deaf Smith County sheriff's deputies arrested four persons over the holiday weekend.

The arrests included a man, 26, for driving while intoxicated; a man, 17, on a theft warrant; a man, 21, for aggravated assault; and a man, 18, on a warrant on a motion to revoke probation.

Reports included a fight between two persons, but no charges were filed; and a business 18 miles north of Hereford on U.S. Highway 385 that was burglarized. Suspects broke a window on the door and took $125 in petty cash.

Deputies arrested a man, 25, on a DWI jail commitment out of county court on Tuesday.

Firefighters kept busy

Hereford volunteer firefighters were busy over the holiday weekend, continuing a record year for calls to which the department has responded.

Heat tape on pipes set fire to a cabinet which heavily damaged a house at 330 West Second in Hereford.

Firemen also responded to a dumpster fire on Dec. 22 in the alley between the 300 blocks of Avenues E and F.

Calls on Christmas Day included a false alarm on an accident six miles east of Ford; three dumpster fires; the plane crash northeast of Hereford (see separate story, Page 1); and an accident on Christmas night.

The calls brought the number made in 1989 by the fire department to 457. That is 100 over average and well over the previous record of 368 calls per year.

Blood drive is today

A blood drive will be held today from 4 p.m. until 7 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

The drive is sponsored by the Women's division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. There is a tremendous need for blood this time of year, and donors are urged to participate.

Bush carries on quail-hunting tradition

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush is winding up his first year as president pretty much the same way he ended the year before, and the year before that, going back several decades: quail hunting on a Texas ranch.

Bush aides say they hope he'll have better luck than last year, when dry conditions made the tiny game birds scarce.

The president will spend several days isolated - but never out of touch, aides insist - at the 10,000-acre Lazy F Ranch near Beeville in South Texas, owned by his friend, Houston millionaire Will Farish.

"It's been a tradition for the past 20 years," said aide Stephen Hart, who worked for Bush as vice president and has been along on several of the previous quail-hunting trips.

In the past, Bush has hunted quail with a 20-gauge shotgun, dressed in snake-resistant chaps, heavy leather boots and an orange hunting cap.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, expected to be along on the trip, is known to prefer turkey hunting, which requires greater patience.

But Bush, who likes to jump from event to event, has defended the sport of quail hunting as more to his liking - and has asserted that the birds are not to be regarded as cute animals but as wily, determined quarry.

The Texas office of The Fund for Animals has written to Bush asking him to cancel the hunt, and plans to have animal activists travel to Beeville to protest his activities if he carries out his hunting plans.

It seems likely that Bush and Baker will discuss another wily, determined quarry while on the ranch - deposed Panamanian dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Noriega's decision to go Sunday to the Vatican embassy in Panama City, where he is currently in hiding, took a lot of pressure off the Bush administration as it seeks to help restore post-invasion order in Panama.

However, aides said Bush never wavered from his determination to make the hunting trip, and that little - short of a major crisis - would force him to cancel the trip.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your advice to the Cleveland widow who complained about being lonely was worthless. Why don't YOU wake up and smell the coffee.

You told her to have a party and invite "three or four extra men." Get real, Ann. Don't you know that today there are at least eight widows to every widower?

My husband died two years ago. I would love to go out with a man occasionally, to a movie or a play or a concert or just for a simple dinner, but the question is, where do I find one?

Please don't tell me to join a singles group. I tried that once. There were 17 widows and two widowers. One was 42, the other was 75. I decided that there are worse things than being alone and I had just seen a couple of them. --Dover, N.J.

DEAR DOVER: Thanks for the message. I received thousands of similar ones after I printed the Cleveland widow's letter. Read on:

FROM LANSING, MICH.: I'd like to ask a question of the Cleveland widow who was married to Ed for 37 years and is now whining because her married friends don't invite her anywhere. Welcome to death and divorce, dearie. How many widows did YOU entertain when you were happily married to Ed? Darned few, I'll bet. The loneliness you are now experiencing is the chickens coming home to roost.

TACOMA, WASH.: May I tell "Cleveland" how to cope with widowhood? Forget about men. What's out there isn't worth bothering about. Oh for dinner (at your place, of course) and park their shoes under your bed, but not one is worth a damn. Stick with your widowed friends and enjoy one another's company.

BROOKLYN: I was a widow at 50 and positive that there could never be another man in the entire world as kind and loving as my Herman. I was wrong. My sister-in-law nagged me for months to go to a meeting of Parents without Partners. Finally I gave in so she'd leave me alone. There I met my second Prince Charming. It was love at first sight. We will celebrate our third wedding anniversary in February.

RALEIGH, N.C.: That widow in Cleveland who misses her husband so much can have mine. I've been married to this miserable skunk for 51 years. He was a gambler, a drunk and a chaser until he wore himself out. The man was no father and no husband. I pray God will take him first and grant me a few years alone.

CHICAGO: A spouse should enrich one's life, not define it. I'm 34 and lost a wonderful man two years ago. I had a terrific marriage and hope I'll get another chance to love again. In the meantime, I'm not looking. I'm going to live my life, develop my skills, further my career and cherish the friends I have.

SACRAMENTO: In California, the widows are dropped like hot potatoes because they are considered a threat by their women friends. The wisest move for a California widow is to leave the state and go to Oregon, Washington or Alaska.

NEWARK: When my husband died I felt like a fifth wheel. Then I joined a group called Widows and Widowers. I had to show my husband's death certificate to prove he died. They don't want divorced people. I met a fabulous man at my first meeting, and life is beautiful again. I now know that love CAN be better the second time around.

BALTIMORE: The widowers and divorced men in this town are looking for fillies half their age. Any female over 40 is considered "over the hill." The last woman in Baltimore to make a brilliant marriage was the Duchess of Windsor.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teen, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada send $4.45.)

Millikin University's founder, philanthropist James Millikin, was so publicity-shy that he declined a place on the platform when President Theodore Roosevelt dedicated the new university in 1903. Millikin preferred to mingle with the crowd.

"Violent Passages"

Louise Woodard won first prize in the Migraine Masterpiece art competition. Her work, entitled "Violent Passages", provides a glimpse at the debilitating nature of migraine.

Suffering for art's sake

Daggers piercing into the eye, split skulls or screws boring down into them, heads tripped in a vice—these are the kinds of images seen at the recent Migraine Masterpiece exhibit held in New York City that is now touring the country.

The exhibit featured the top 25 winning works of the nationwide art competition for migraine sufferers sponsored by the National Headache Foundation and Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories. The purpose of the competition was to educate the public about the severity of the pain of migraine; the works illustrate just how debilitating it can be.

The contest evolved partially from the therapeutic use of art in the treatment of migraine, which gives sufferers a way to cope with their pain by depicting it to others.

Migraine headaches, by virtue of their extremely visual effects, such as flashing lights, zigzagging lines and areas of total darkness, lend themselves easily to an artistic catharsis. Characterized by severe pain, nausea, vomiting, dizziness and sensitivity to light and sound, they have been successfully treated through therapeutic art experiences.

"Art therapy gives patients the opportunity to confront their repressed emotional feelings and come to grips with what's going on," says Dr. Seymour Diamond, executive director of the National Headache Foundation. "Migraine is a very visual headache and seeing these drawings contributed to our decision to join forces with Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories to sponsor the Migraine Masterpiece art competition," he adds.

Those who suffer from migraines or other types of headaches on a regular basis should consult a physician. Preventive medications, such as Inderal LA, have been proven effective in the treatment of migraine. For more information, contact the National Headache Foundation, 1-800-843-2256.

ATLANTA (AP) - Civil rights leader Hosea Williams, who has organized a Christmas dinner for the homeless and hungry for 19 years, is hospitalized with bronchitis and pneumonia, but plans to get back into action soon.

"I'm feeling much better, and I hope to be released in a few days," Williams said Tuesday in a telephone interview from his room at Emory Hospital.

Williams, 64, said his annual Christmas and Thanksgiving feasts since 1970 combined have fed nearly half a million people at a cost of nearly $1 million, and used 65,000 volunteers.

"This was our 19th year, and I'd say we fed a total of about 35,000 at the Christmas dinner, counting the deliveries to sick and old people at their homes," he said. "You watch these families eating, and you realize, if they didn't eat here, where would they eat? They'd just go to bed hungry."

Herd trio makes Super Team

Three members of the 1989 Hereford Whitefaces football team added to a growing list of post-season honors with selection to the Amarillo Globe-News Super Team.

Offensive guard Benny Gonzales, wide receiver Russell Backus and tailback Matt Bromlow were named to the 28-member team picked by the Globe-News sports staff and released in Dec. 24 Sunday News-Globe.

About Gonzales the Globe-News wrote "The 6-0, 248-pound offensive guard was a force on the offensive line as this year's Whitefaces went down as one of the most explosive offensive teams in Hereford history. Gonzales, a two-year starter who bench presses 365 pounds, finished the season with a blocking grade of 90 percent. He allowed only two quarterback sacks in 135 pass attempt. Gonzales was a unanimous All-District 1-4A selection."

"He's been a real leader for us,"

Benny Gonzales

Russell Backus

Matt Bromlow

Herd coach Don Cumpton told the Globe-News. "I think he's the best offensive lineman we've had since Aubrey Richburg played for us in 1981, and Aubrey had a four-year career at Texas Tech."

"The split end wasn't fast," the Globe-News said about Backus, "but had great hands and ran near-perfect patterns. The 5-10, 165-pound senior caught 45 passes for 788 yards and 10 touchdowns. In a 22-19 area playoff loss to Big Spring, Backus caught eight passes for more than 100 yards. Backus also earned All-District 1-4A honors."

"He's just a winner," Cumpton was quoted in the Globe-News. He just figures out a way to get the job done. He made play after play for us all year when it was critical. As far as just catching the ball with the pressure on, he was as good as we've had."

On Bromlow, the Amarillo newspaper wrote "The 6-1, 185-pound junior missed the first two games of the season, then made up for lost time. He rushed for 1,550 yards in nine games to lead Hereford to the Class 4A area playoffs. Bromlow also scored 15 touchdowns and was a unanimous selection to the All-District 1-4A team. Against Levelland, he rushed 28 times for 266 yards. His low game of the season wasn't too shabby either, 15 carries for 113 yards against Randall."

"What's unique about his situation is this is his first season at running back," Cumpton told the Globe-News. He's been a receiver or a defensive back before. I think he's got a chance to be a great one."

Spurrier worried about Tech

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Duke coach Steve Spurrier wants to limit his conversations to his team, the All American Bowl and the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

He doesn't want to talk about whether he will be Duke's football coach again next year.

"Don't worry about me for now. We want to concentrate on Texas Tech and the game. I'm here to talk about Duke University and the bowl game and not myself," Spurrier said Tuesday, brushing aside questions about his future - questions that have abounded since mid-season.

"He's the hottest coach in America," said Spike Dykes, coach of the Texas Tech team that will meet Duke in the All American Bowl at 7 p.m. CST Thursday in a game televised by ESPN.

"He could go anywhere. That's a tribute to him."

There have been persistent reports that Spurrier will go somewhere, probably to his alma mater, Florida, where he won the Heisman Trophy as a quarterback in 1966. Two NFL teams, Atlanta and Phoenix, also have expressed interest.

"All that won't affect our team," Spurrier said. "It's been going on since mid-season. I won't have anything to say until four or five days after the game."

Duke center Carey Metts said the Blue Devils "were pretty much a doornail earlier, but Spurrier installed an attitude that makes the game fun. You know what you have to do and you go out and do it."

Metts said he will "have to respect his decision, whether he goes or stays. If he goes somewhere else, he'll be successful there, too."

Clarkston Hines, All American receiver who holds virtually all of Duke's pass-catching records, credited his success to listening to Spurrier. "You don't have a better teacher than him," Hines said.

Quarterback Billy Ray said that Spurrier's success as a player and coach gets him respect.

"When he tells you something, you're going to listen," Ray said.

Both teams, Texas Tech of the Southwest Conference, and Duke of the Atlantic Coast Conference, have 8-3 records and both are nationally ranked. Duke at No. 20 and Tech at No. 24.

David Brown, who will alternate with Ray in the bowl game, noted that Duke's basketball program long has received national attention.

Nadia: Just another rouged homewrecker

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) - The trail got cold just two weeks and a few miles from here. But if Nadia Comaneci fell off the end of the earth tomorrow, it wouldn't be soon enough or too far away for some people.

Maria Panait for one. Her husband Constantin ran off with the recently arrived Olympic vixen, leaving behind four young children, two vans, no money and who knows how many headaches.

"I thought at least he would call for Christmas," she said Tuesday, "but no."

The tall palms on the narrow street sway gently as she struggles to push a vacuum cleaner across the front seat of an aging Buick parked in the middle of the front lawn. Two of her three daughters criss-cross the grass pushing new toys.

She is angry. Constantin, a self-employed roofer, left for Romania Nov. 2 to visit his sick mother. The next time she saw him, he was standing next to Nadia at a news conference in New York. Maria actually believed he was her manager and as soon as she turned off the TV set, she began preparing a guest room in their modest home for the woman she thought would be their exalted guest.

"He called me once and that was it. If he has called friends, friends of his, they wouldn't contact me. And so I have no idea where they are. And," she added, "I wouldn't even know where to begin looking."

Sightings of the couple since they checked out of a Pompano Beach hotel and bought a flashy black Chevy convertible for $20,000 in cash would make Elvis green with envy. In her short stay in the United States, she already has become a master of the disinformation campaign.

They were lovers, they were not, they were misunderstood. They were Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sweeney, or so they told the clerk in Pompano Beach.

They were in Disney World in nearby Orlando. Or maybe they left the state for New York. Or Cleveland. Or ...

"I heard West Palm Beach from one member of my congregation," said Father Traian Pedrescu, pastor of The Holy Trinity Romanian Orthodox Church in neighboring Mirmar, a gathering place for many of the estimated 5,000 Romanians who have settled in south Florida. "Another told me they are staying at hotels around here, moving every two or three days to stay free from reporters."

"But honestly," he continued, "with what is happening now in our country, most of them would say, 'Who cares?' Oh, when we first heard on TV she was coming, the Romanian people were very, very excited. Fifteen of us went to the airport to welcome her, but we could not get near her."

"Then, after this shameful thing - the woman has four children and here, Nadia can meet lots of rich men - we made prayers in our church that they would change," he continued. "That God would change their minds and they would change their ways."

"But now, we are ashamed for her," he said, "and we must pray for bigger things."

Because the Panait and their children were in his church a number of times, Father Pedrescu clung to the slim hope that he might be able to speak with Constantin, or Nadia, or both in person. He harbors no illusions any longer.

Nadia was a 14-year-old picture of perfection in the 1976 Olympic Games. She is regarded now by most of her countrymen as a rouged homewrecker along the quiet streets in Hallandale and Hollywood where she would have been a hero. The irony is that she appears to be the only one for whom the picture is still out of focus.

Bird free throws give Boston win

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Two-tenths of a second and 15 years. That was the long and the short of it in the NBA.

The two-tenths of a second was the time remaining when Larry Bird was fouled. He made two free throws, giving the Boston Celtics a 112-111 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday night. It also was the time left when Ron Harper took an inbounds pass, turned and made a 3-pointer that officials ruled he released after time expired.

Across town, the Los Angeles Lakers extended to 37 games over 15 years their Forum dominance of the Kings franchise.

Sacramento, home for the Kings since the club moved from Kansas City, appeared ready to end it after taking a 102-94 lead with 2:50 to play. The Lakers scored the last 10 points of the game to win 104-102.

In other NBA games, it was New Jersey 101, Washington 94; San Antonio 107, Charlotte 82; New York

100, Miami 94; Indiana 98, Orlando 90; Chicago 112, Minnesota 99; Milwaukee 103, Houston 96; Denver 114, Philadelphia 111; Utah 133, Golden State 118 and Phoenix 121, Portland 105.

Celtics 112, Clippers 111
Reggie Lewis had a season-high 28 as a reserve for Boston, which has beaten the Clippers 11 consecutive games.

Charles Smith, who scored a career-high 33 points for the Clippers, said he didn't foul Bird on the game-deciding play.

"It's frustrating to come up with a loss when you know you didn't lose," Smith said.

Knicks 100, Heat 94
New York won its seventh consecutive game despite a subpar performance by Patrick Ewing, who was 4-for-18 from the field.

Ewing, third in NBA scoring at 29 points per game, was outdone 26-11 by center Rony Seikaly of the Heat, which lost its fourth straight game, all at home.

Oakley had 19 points and 12 rebounds for New York, and Sherman Douglas scored 22 points for Miami. Spurs 107, Hornets 82

San Antonio extended its winning streak to six as Terry Cummings matched his season high with 32 points and David Robinson added 14 points and 14 rebounds.

Cummings scored 18 points in the first quarter as the Spurs took a 30-16 advantage, and San Antonio led by at least 21 points throughout the second half.

Dell Curry led the Hornets with 17 points.

Bulls 112, Timberwolves 99
Chicago won its 10th straight at home for the first time since the 1977-78 season and Minnesota lost its ninth consecutive game as Michael Jordan scored 28 points and Scottie Pippen 22.

The Bulls, 11-1 in Chicago Stadium, pulled away in the third quarter behind Jordan's 10 points and Pippen's eight. The margin was 89-71 with 2:03 remaining in the period and Chicago wasn't threatened in the fourth quarter. Tony Campbell paced Minnesota with 20 points and Sam Mitchell had 19.

Nuggets 114, 76ers 111
Walter Davis scored 24 points, including a key jump shot with 1:16 to go.

Davis scored Denver's only four points of the final four minutes. His jump shot came with the shot clock down to two seconds and gave the Nuggets a 114-109 lead.

Philadelphia had a chance to tie the game after Ron Anderson's basket with 33 seconds left had pulled the 76ers within three. Charles Barkley, who had 32 points and 16 rebounds, missed a 3-point attempt with five seconds to go.

Suns 121, Trail Blazers 105
Kevin Johnson had 31 points, 13 assists and 10 rebounds and Andrew Lang got six of his eight blocked shots in the second quarter for Phoenix.

Portland's fourth consecutive road loss came despite 26 points by Clyde Drexler.

Phoenix led by 31 midway through the third quarter and took a 93-71 lead into the fourth period. Portland got as close as 12 with 4:28 left.

Jazz 133, Warriors 118
Karl Malone scored 18 of his 39 points in a runaway first quarter and John Stockton had 18 points and 17 assists as Utah stopped Golden State's six-game winning streak.

Malone scored 10 points in the first 31 minutes, but the Jazz didn't pull away until a 36-16 surge gave Utah a 44-24 advantage at the end of the first period. The closest Warriors got the rest of the game was the final score.

Reserve guard Tom Tolbert had 20 points for Golden State. Bucks 103, Rockets 96

Milwaukee handed Houston its seventh straight road loss as Jack Sikma scored 26 points, including 13 in the fourth quarter.

The Bucks opened the fourth quarter with an 18-4 run for an 94-78 lead, the biggest of the game. Sikma, who finished with 14 rebounds, had seven points in the spurt, including a 3-point goal.

Akeem Olajuwon had 34 points and 12 rebounds for Houston. Pacers 98, Magic 90

Reggie Miller scored 12 points in the third period and 10 in the fourth en route to a 28-point night for Indiana in a victory over Orlando.

Mike Sanders, starting in place of Chuck Person, who's out with a scratched eye, scored 17 points for the Pacers and LaSalle Thompson had 14 points and 16 rebounds.

Sam Vincent scored 29 points for Orlando. Nets 101, Bullets 94

New Jersey handed Washington its 10th straight road loss behind Roy Hinson's season-high 31 points and 11 rebounds.

Hinson had 16 points in the first period as the Nets forced 10 Bullets turnovers in taking a 31-18 lead.

Washington, which got 27 points from Bernard King and 24 from Jeff Malone, tied the score in the third quarter, but the Nets regained control with an 18-8 spurt for a 77-67 lead.

Martin services planned

PORT CRANE, N.Y. (AP) - Funeral services for former New York Yankees manager Billy Martin, who died in a car crash on a country road, will be held Friday in New York City, scene of his greatest triumphs, failures and confrontations.

Martin, 61, died Christmas night when the truck in which he was a passenger skidded off an icy rural road and into a ditch outside his 148-acre farm near Binghamton.

A wake will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday for Martin at the Frank Campbell Funeral Chapel in Manhattan. A funeral will be held Friday at 10:30 a.m. at St. Patrick's Cathedral in Manhattan. Burial plans are pending.

William Reedy, a Detroit bar owner and long-time Martin friend who was driving the truck early Monday evening, was charged with drunken driving, a misdemeanor that carries at most a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Reedy, owner of Reedy's Bar near Detroit's Tiger Stadium, sustained a broken hip and possible broken ribs in the accident. He was listed in fair condition Tuesday in the Upstate Medical Center Hospital at Syracuse.

King's Manor: a leader in its field

Enhances quality of life for the elderly

BY ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

King's Manor is a national yardstick in retirement and health care—a sprawling complex on the north side of Hereford where lifestyles are enhanced on an upbeat of positive people.

From California to Florida, King's Manor has an image of western hospitality where the quality of life is a reality... "adding life to years and years to life."

"King's Manor is dedicated to the belief that life is a matter of continued fulfillment, not merely extended years," said Joyce Lyons, president and chief executive officer of the retirement and nursing care center. "This belief has been actively practiced and promoted during our decades of service to our residents."

But King's Manor is much more than a variety of retirement quarters and nursing stations for the aged. It is truly a blend of the young and the old in home-styled atmospheres where the dignity of the individual has priority. Sandwiched between the retirement village and the nursing care unit is a child care unit where toddlers romp in a make-believe world of papier-mache and Crayons... interaction between generations add to the quality of life around King's Manor.

"The child care unit not only gives us a full spectrum of family living at King's Manor, but it also serves as an excellent way for the young couples to see first-hand our fine campus that's designed to enhance the quality of life for the elderly," said Mrs. Lyons, who been a leader at the center for 18 years. "Each level of care provides a wide range of individual choice and each enhances a person's spiritual, mental and physical well-being."

In addition to being one of the finest, if not the finest, non-profit retirement and health care centers in the nation, King's Manor has become a cornerstone of the Hereford community which has taken an active role in its development since its inception 30 years ago. A 15-acre campus now valued in excess of $5 million began as a community effort in 1960 with $125,000 in contributions and a ton of love for mankind.

King's Manor now has an annual budget of $1.8 million and a staff of 86 which accounts for a $1-million-payroll for this Deaf Smith County seat. With the retirement center and health care units chartered as a non-profit corporation, all contributions are tax deductible with charitable gifts, foundation grants and monies received going directly for supplies, maintenance and development.

"We average about $100,000 a year in over-riding expenditures for some who just cannot afford to pay," said Mrs. Lyons. "Once we have someone under our care, we've never turned anyone out because they were unable to pay... all of our people at King's Manor get identically the same treatment from our staff irregardless of their ability to pay... folks at King's Manor have a close-knit friendship that becomes something mighty close to family living."

At the time of this writing, every room in the Westgate nursing care unit was filled to capacity and activity in the retirement village was filled with the good tidings of the winter holidays. A well-adorned Christmas tree stood tall in the entrance corridors, with wreaths of holly and words of good cheer alined on every hallway. One group was busy with a morning Bible study in the Activities Room where King's Manor Chaplain Lanny J. Wheeler charted a set of Scriptures on a podium screen. A few yards down a westerly hallway, a couple of old friends talked of other times... times when they stood tall in the mainstream of the Hereford business world.

Visitors from far and near tipped their hats or gave a friendly smile as they passed in the halls to visit loved ones. From the nurses stations in the Westgate unit to the housekeepers in the laundry, every inch of King's Manor glistened with cleanliness and friendliness.

"If you think things shine now, you ought to see it about mid-morning," said Toni Guzman, who has been head of housekeeping for 18 years. "We take great pride in King's Manor and we hope it shows." And so it did—Mrs. Guzman herself gave the appearance of a woman of fine stature.

Gwen Whittaker, head dietician for the kitchen staff, sets a daily pace that would be envious of fine restaurants, with Chef Rosie Tijerina coming up with daily surprises on the King's Manor menus.

In response to local and national requests for a continuing development program in positive planning, the King's Manor Board of Trustees 18 months ago brought in a native son of Hereford to assume day-to-day responsibilities of this momentous task. He is Jim Conkwright, whose western heritage is an rich as the land it serves.

As director of development for King's Manor, Conkwright, working hand-in-hand with Mrs. Lyons, has already spearheaded a number of developments that have added to the lifestyles of many who gave much of their lives to the betterment of their communities, their state and their nation.

"This position with King's Manor may not seem too enhanced on the surface, but in reality it has become a great challenge," said Conkwright, as he outlined a half-dozen development projects which are now on the drawing board. "But with a board of trustees such as we have here at King's Manor, the challenge becomes exciting—then when you think of the great community of Hereford that is behind the board, one can't work long enough, hard enough or fast enough."

One of the proposed projects on the priority list is a new Activities Center which would put the polish, in paraphrasing, on what is already spic'n span. This proposed expansion would include such physical therapy equipment as whirlpool, hot tub, special exercise units and added space for special meetings and family get-togethers.

"We have a beautiful community

Joyce Lyons... president, chief executive officer

Jim Conkwright... director of development of beautiful people who seldom asked but gave a lot so we believe that the quality of life and the integrity of the individual is our priority," said Conkwright.

Another point in proposed expansion is the development of an intermediate unit that would serve somewhat as a bridge between the retirement center and the nursing care unit. As Conkwright put it, "This would be a unit whereby an individual would require only occasional attention, such as making sure medication is taken regularly or perhaps for those who need occasional assistance in physical needs."

Conkwright noted that everyone at King's Manor retirement village—which includes cottages and apartments—develops their own lifestyles, whether it's sleeping in late or an early-riser seeking an old-fashioned country breakfast. There are no nurses on duty in the retirement village. Medical needs, such as personal desires, are met by the individuals.

Mrs. Lyons and Conkwright make a formidable team for the elderly—they coordinate the past with the present, with meeded goals organized for the future. "We're not looking out for the day-to-day needs of 1990, but we're looking into the 21st Century," said Conkwright. "We hear much talk about bringing in new industry to Hereford and we believe that is extremely important, but we also believe that we should not overlook what we already have... it seems as though some of the best kept secrets in Texas are found right here in Hereford."

But King's Manor is no secret to America. Retirement and nursing care leaders and executives from throughout the nation frequent the corridors of King's Manor to pattern new developments after this center. Though the architectural design is still being used as a national yardstick after 28 years of use, the King's Manor staff also sets standards second to none in America. As a recent written testimonial to its quality care, an individual in California mailed a $1,000 check to the center as a token of appreciation in caring for loved ones. Such contributions come from points across the nation, but all too often it is still not enough to meet the heavy demand of the patient load.

Today, King's Manor complex includes 33 resident rooms, a hostess room, 19 cottages, four houses, a chaplain house and Westgate nursing care unit now housing some 65 residents. Recent remodeling has included installation of secure care and nursing call systems, a renovated dining room, upgraded hallway lighting and the remodeling of 24 rooms. These recent developments were funded with a $250,000 donation willed to King's Manor by the late Mrs. J. Paul Craig of Amarillo.

"Mrs. Craig became acquainted with King's Manor through a friend who resides in Westgate," said Mrs. Lyons. "She restricted the use of the money to use one-half for remodeling Westgate and to use the remainder to subsidize care for residents who cannot afford to pay the full cost."

Conkwright pointed out that many contributions to King's Manor have been made through bequests of people who have either lived here or who have had friends or relatives as King's Manor residents. "We have developed a program whereby one may also give through a life insurance program," said Conkwright, who had become a specialist in investments before joining King's Manor.

The retirement center and the nursing care unit each has a director who plans diversional activities for residents. Such activities include church services, shopping transportation, barber and beauty shop appointments, arts and crafts, and recreational activities. King's Manor also has a full-service barber and beauty shop exquisitely designed for its residents, a couple of kilns for those interested in ceramics and spacious patios for outdoor visiting and games.

Headed by Mrs. Whittaker, the kitchen is one of the most important units of the complex. As a sage once put it, "the way to a person's heart is through the stomach." A kitchen staff of 15 includes three men—Jacob Miller, Steve Romero and Frank Olguin. Irene Bauler has been on the kitchen staff since 1970; Irene Lumas has been there since 1975, and Jo Hill has been in the middle of pots and pans since 1978. Other long-timers include Donna Hill, Elvira Mendoza, Alice Hayes, Jenny Harbison, Elvia Marquez, Becky Ramirez and Vicki Rodriguez.

Though King's Manor actually has community roots that date back to the pastoral work of Rev. Don Davidson in the 1940s, an organized effort to build the complex did not surface until 1960 when the Business and Professional Women's Club of Hereford launched a community effort to build a home for the elderly. Headed by Eunice Peterson, the professional group saw the need for such a center and invited a number of civic and business leaders of Hereford to join in the early discussions.

At about the same time, Rev. Davidson, a former pastor of the First United Methodist Church here, had determined that the Methodist Church in the Northwest Texas Conference Area, that includes Hereford, should have a place for the elderly and began an investigation into the matter that ultimately led to his becoming something of an authority on the elderly in the Northwest Texas Conference.

As something of a coincidence, Earnest Langley, a Hereford lawyer and a member of the Methodist Church, knew of both moves toward establishing a home for the elderly, and it is believed that it was he who first suggested that the two groups join forces to fill a common goal.

"The 22 members of the club wanted a project and I took the idea to them," said Mrs. Peterson, during recent festivities when King's Manor hosted its 25th anniversary. At that time (1960), Mrs. Peterson was appointed to chair a committee of three—Sue James and Ellen Carter being the other two—to research the proposed project. "It didn't take the three of us long to decide we didn't know enough to make a decision about who needed the housing or how to go about building the project, so we asked 15 men in town to help us with the research." One of the 15 was the young lawyer by the name of Langley.

Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Don Davidson are now both residents at King's Manor and, during the recent open house event, Mrs. Davidson also recalled the formation of the King's Manor foundations:

"As conference director of the Golden Cross, Don attended hospital and homes meetings all over. He met administrators at these meetings and got interested in the operation of the facilities. He knew there was not a similar facility in the Northwest Conference and he told me he felt a direct calling from God to build a retirement home in the Northwest Conference area."

But Rev. Davidson met with opposition—track records of retirement homes had not been the greatest at that point in time and there were also other towns in the conference that wanted the facility if it were to be built. She said recently that she doesn't know what exactly brought the Conference leaders' thinking around to that of Rev. Davidson, but they elected to go for it if adequate funds could be raised on a local level. And that's when Rev. Davidson and the Business and Professional Women's Club decided to join forces, with Langley being a vital link between the two.

News of the Northwest Texas Conference project spread and requests rushed in from every hamlet and town. Rev. Davidson made a fast decision on fast money—"Whoever raised $100,000 the quickest would get the site." Hereford was the first—raising the money in 10 days with $25,000 to spare.

When asked in later years why he chose Hereford over the other towns of the Northwest Conference, the Rev. Davidson frequently replied: "None of them offered me $100,000 and 13 acres of land." Thus, King's Manor Methodist Home, Inc. became a non-profit corporate entity.

However, putting together this community package was no simple matter. Acting under the directions of Langley, the 15-member committee first chartered a non-profit community corporation called Hereford Area Foundation, Inc. In addition to Langley and Mrs. Peterson, other committee members included Henry Sears, James W. Witherspoon, Palmer Norton, Owen Seamonds, Wayne Wallace and Carl McCaslin.

Sears actually led the drive that raised the first $125,000 with almost every club and civic group jumping on the bandwagon with cash in hand. The Hereford Lions Club was one of the largest organizational contributors in the initial fund drive. Then came the acquisition of the land. Rev. Davidson had informed the Hereford group that the Northwest Texas Conference would perhaps be even more attentive to Hereford's proposal if he could offer at least 10 acres of land.

A 30-acre tract was purchased with the backing and credit of Wayne Wallace and Carl McCaslin, then 20 acres were deeded to the City of Hereford for a park and to McCaslin and Wallace for residential development. The end result was that the 10 acres needed for the home was acquired at no net cost to the newly-formed Hereford Area Foundation.

With the proposed package intact, the Methodist Church voted to build the home in Hereford under the leadership of Rev. Davidson. He acquired additional monies from another non-profit foundation called Ideas Eternal. This foundation provided seed money for operational and organizational expenses as an idea of a group of women and a Methodist preacher developed into a community cornerstone of brick and mortar and stout-hearted people.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were staged in March of 1962 and seven months later, on Oct. 7, 1962, the first staff members moved into King's Manor which consisted of 20 apartments.

"Mrs. Ola Davis and her assistant, Anna Blake, were the first to move in," Mrs. Peterson said later. "The apartments had been carpeted but no furniture had arrived, so she and Anna slept on the floor that night."

On Oct. 11, 1962, Ida Wilcox of Panhandle was the first resident to move into the retirement facility. On Dec. 9, 1962, more than 1,000 residents from throughout the High Plains were on hand at the first open house of King's Manor in Hereford.

The largest individual contributor in the initial funding of King's Manor was Mrs. J.F. Ward, a pioneer woman of the Panhandle who also became one of the first residents of King's Manor.

In addition to the Hereford Area Foundation, the Methodist Church itself instituted a group called "The Founders"—people who made larger contributions to the construction and operation of the center. A roster of Honorary Founders are cited on a bronze plaque at King's Manor.

Through the years, King's Manor continued to expand, with the Westgate unit added in 1964, and in 1986 the retirement center and Westgate were connected with a common entrance.

In the first 21 years, King's Manor had less than a 4 percent staff turnover. This figure, however, has risen to around 15 percent during the past two years as result of changes in working procedures. Jean Hamilton is in charge of nursing care, with 36 employees that include two RNs and 10 LVNs. In describing the retirement cottages and apartments of King's Manor, Mrs. Lyons noted that all units and rooms are decorated in a variety of personal preferences, with attractive landscaping and numerous conveniences. The apartments are spacious units that offer many options for the young at heart—a golden opportunity to relax in Texas sunshine and leave the laws to someone else.

Bea Noland, activities director for the retirement folks, heads up a host of night activities, such as parties and games, along with a dozen additional activities such as painting, ceramics, and exercising classes. Helen Kirkeby is director of the Westgate unit activities which include most of those available to the retirement residents.

Bil Bookout of Hereford, owner-manager of Bookout Masonry Contractors, was elected Sept. 30 as chairman of the Board of Trustees for King's Manor Methodist Home, Inc. His wife, Joan, is a member of the King's Manor Founders' Association and is now serving as its secretary.

Other members of the Board of Trustees elected to posts last August include W.L. Davis Jr. and R.D. Hicks, both of Hereford; Wallace Fields of Shamrock, Donald M. Hunt of Lubbock, and Dr. Clifford Trotter of Amarillo. This group joins Bishop Louis W. Schowenegerdt, presiding Bishop of Northwest Texas Conference; Rev. Albert F. Lindley, district superintendent of the Amarillo district of NWTTC; Dr. David A. Shaw, NWTTC chairperson, division of health and welfare.

Founders' Association officers for 1990 include Mark Hicks, president; Jeff Brown, vice president, and Joan Bookout, secretary-treasurer. Directors include John Bunch and Johnny Trotter, who this fall replaced long-time board members B.F. Cain and Wanda Hoover.

Bob Sims, outgoing Founders Association president, was master of ceremonies for the 24th annual dinner of the association on Nov. 9. Earlier this past fall, Earnest Langley was recognized for his outstanding service to King's Manor, having served the maximum allowed on the Board of Trustees (12 years). He was elected as an honorary trustee in 1973. He continues to serve as general counsel and a member of the executive committee, adding up to a total of 28 years on the governing body of King's Manor. Langley is a member of the Hereford law firm of Witherspoon, Aiken & Langley.

A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Potter, Mrs. Lyons was 6 when her family moved to Hereford from the irrigation farming districts of Idaho—they came to Texas to raise potatoes and he became one of the early commercial vegetable growers around Hereford. In 1979, Mrs. Lyons went to work as secretary to the executive director of King's Manor. Following a couple of promotions during the 1970s, Mrs. Lyons became a licensed administrator, having taken advanced studies in management. When the position became available in 1974, the board named the Hereford executive to the top post of administrator for the entire center. Recently, the board named her president/CEO of King's Manor. She has three children—Ginger, Steven and Frank.

Conkwright, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Colby Conkwright, was reared in the registered Hereford ranching business and for many years operated the family ranch near Hereford. His father arrived in Hereford in 1926 by train from Winchester, Ky., and went to work on local ranches. His mother, Dorothy Flanery, also came to Hereford by train in 1928, but she came from Sherman to join the 16-member school teacher staff in Hereford.

Mrs. Conkwright recalled once that when the Great Depression came in the 1930s, she had to take her school pay in script while the school board awaited for the Santa Fe Railway to pay their taxes in February.

She and Colby Conkwright were married in 1934 and together they developed a registered Hereford herd that was to become one of the finest in the Southwest. Mr. Conkwright died in 1985. Mrs. Conkwright still resides in Hereford.

Prior to selling the ranching operations in 1983, Jim Conkwright served as president of Consumers Fuel Co-Op Association; he was a member of the Deaf Smith Hospital

Front entrance of King's Manor complex

Board, a director of the Hereford State Bank, and president of the Panhandle Livestock Association. The Conkwrights went down on record as having raised Herefords for 50 years, getting their first start in 1933.

After selling the ranch, Jim Conkwright and his family moved to Hereford where he later became involved in investments. He earlier had served on the King's Manor board for 12 years. When the board elected to establish a department of development a couple of years ago, Conkwright was asked to accept the position as director. Conkwright and his wife, Janice, have two daughters, Robbin and Leslie.

"We've done a lot in the past 16 months, but we've just touched the tip of the projects we'd like to see developed here in the 1990s," said Conkwright.

And Mrs. Lyons shared Conkwright's enthusiasm in positive thinking: "This development department should have been established 15 years ago—we're late in getting started but maybe with a lot of hard work and the people of the Hereford area behind us, we can develop some of the much-needed proposed projects."

She pointed out that even though the center is operated under the auspices of the Northwest Texas Conference, nearly all of the budget is funded by the King's Manor residents and tax-deductible contributions.

"Many people believe that you must be a Methodist to get in King's Manor, but that conception is totally wrong," said Mrs. Lyons. "We accept folks from all faiths and all walks of life—this home was designed to serve the people."

A VCR cassette telling the story of King's Manor is now available for viewing free of charge to the public.

Both Conkwright and Mrs. Lyons believe the proposed Activities Center would be a great calling card for Hereford and for King's Manor—"We believe that with the excellent retirement and nursing care facilities already here, the proposed Activities Center would attract a great number of people from both area and national points."

"We're fortunate in being located here in the great Southwest where there's lots of sunshine, relatively moderate temperatures, the finest drinking water on Earth and only a short distance from some of the finest medical facilities in America. This is Hereford, Texas . . . this is King's Manor and we're proud to tell the world about it."

Santa has mixed bag for retailers

By MARYBETH NIBLEY
AP Business Writer

Bargain hunters had reason to rejoice this Christmas, but store owners had less cause for celebrating.

Retailers rang up mostly respectable holiday sales gains but many relied on profit-eating discounts to woo customers.

Kurt Barnard, publisher of the newsletter Retail Marketing Report, said Tuesday that judging by the evidence so far, his prediction of a 5 percent increase in holiday sales this year looks accurate.

To eke out the estimated increase, which falls short of 1988's 7 percent rise above the previous year, retailers had to accept lower prices that pinched their profits.

"I think the consumer had a very, very merry Christmas and I'm not so sure that the retailers did from a profit point of view," said analyst Linda R. Morris of PNC Financial Corp. in Philadelphia.

Many stores still are stuck with too much inventory, so post-Christmas price cutting is expected to be more extensive than normal, Barnard said.

Holiday shoppers lived up to their reputation as procrastinators and didn't spend heavily until the final days before Christmas, helping to salvage the season for some retailers. Last year, a belated surge boosted business and more than made up for earlier weakness.

Not every retailer had to resort to unusually intense price-cutting. Dayton Hudson Corp., which operates the Target discount chain and the Dayton Hudson and Mervyn's department stores, said business this year was slightly less promotional than in 1988. However, sales were good.

"We are very pleased with the results," said Kenneth A. Macke, chairman and chief executive officer of the Minneapolis-based retailer. "We continue to expect a strong fourth quarter."

Deep discounts, giveaways and other promotions have been fiercest in the most competitive areas of the country, particularly in cities where department stores owned by heavily indebted Campeau Corp. operate.

Campeau stores such as Bloomingdale's, The Bon Marche, Burdines, Lazarus and Rich's have been under pressure to generate sales to cover the parent company's debt payments.

Stores emphasizing clothing indicated they enjoyed better results than general merchants, continuing a yearlong pattern. Frigid weather in many parts of the country sent shoppers searching for overcoats, sweaters, scarves and similar cold-weather garb, retailers said.

J.C. Penney Co. Inc., which does most of its business in clothing, finished the season strongly, said spokesman Duncan Muir. He said double-digit sales gains occurred at many stores around the country run by the Texas-based retailer.

The nation's biggest retailer, Sears, Roebuck and Co., also benefited from a late surge in shopping, spokesman Ernest Arms said. But overall Sears holiday sales probably will turn out to be about the same as last year, when the retailer reported a 12.1 percent jump in sales over 1987.

Cynthia Turk, a retail specialist with the accounting firm Deloitte & Touche, estimated that chains achieved sales gains of 5 percent to 8 percent over last year.

"The higher gains within this average clearly are among the specialty stores," she said. "There is, however, a lot of disappointment because of the weak profitability environment."

Thomas A. Edison received his last patent when he was 81.

Club installs officers

Westway Extension Homemakers Club met recently at the home of Grace Covington for the election of officers.

New officers were installed by Johnnie Messer. Officers elected were Elizabeth DeKoster, president; Helen Brown, vice president; Martha Rickmon, sec.-reporter;

Mary Dee Hoelscher, treasurer; Jeanette Ramey, phone committee; Leta Kaul, council delegate; and Carolyn Evers, bazaar chairman.

Members met a K-Bob's Steak House for a Christmas meeting. After the meal they attended the festive food program at the Reddy Room at Southwestern Public Service. A gift exchange followed the installation of officers.

The next meeting will be at Sirloin Stockade.

Members present were Covington, Kaul, Joyce Aycock, DeKoster, Brown, Hoelscher, Terri Johnson, Ramey, and Evers.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Actor Willem Dafoe said he was attracted to the role in the new film "Triumph of the Spirit" in much the way he was drawn to his roles in "Platoon" and "The Last Temptation of Christ."

"They're so unusual," said Dafoe, who is picky about parts he will play. "They're so huge. They raise so many interesting questions that you don't quite know what it is before you start working on it."

Dafoe, whose acting career took off two years ago after the movie "Platoon," is back in the spotlight again with his new film.

In "Triumph of the Spirit," Dafoe portrays a boxer who fights for his survival after he is imprisoned at a Nazi death camp with his family. The critically acclaimed film is based on the life of Salamo Arouch, a Greek Jew and middleweight boxing champion who was sent to Auschwitz.

"I think I'm attracted to roles that are kind of mythic and have some size and, you know, are full of possibility," he said of his penchant for playing unforgettable screen characters.

World's largest shopping bag

Recently, Jennifer Hicks of Hereford, far right, was honored by the 68th National 4-H Congress for exemplary commitment to good nutrition. The ceremonies took place at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, Ill., where Kraft General Foods created the world's largest shopping bag filled with groceries to aid the hungry. Her award included a $1,500 scholarship toward higher education courtesy of Kraft General Foods, which was presented to only six of the 51 national winners. Others on hand were Rebecca Segal, Silver Springs, Md.; Robert Baxter Fur, Harrisburg, N.C.; Andrea White, Fort Cobb, Okla.; Dave Hurwitt, vice president, General Foods USA, marketing and communication services; Dr. Enrique Guardia, senior vice president, General Foods USA, quality, service and technology; Lancy Hewitt, Cobkeville, Tenn.; and Christine Ohlendorf, Lockhart, Texas.

Keep camera flashing during holiday season

The youngsters are excitedly opening their gifts around the Christmas tree, or the New Year's Eve gang is all dressed up and full of good cheer - but your camera is a dead duck. Chances are good that you're the victim of one of the most common problems photographers face: dead batteries.

Dead batteries turn most modern electronic cameras into very expensive paperweights. No meter, no shutter and no film advance mean that all those memorable pictures are lost.

However, there's no need to let yourself in for such disappointment.

A battery check should be part of your tuneup before the holidays or any other important picture-taking session. Many new cameras have a battery check of one kind or another - an indicator light, or a time check on your shutter and aperture indicators. For example, an indicator light will remain on for seven or eight seconds if the batteries are in good shape, and for a shorter time if they are weak.

The smartest thing to do is replace the batteries - those in the camera and in the flash unit - when they become six months old. Batteries will weaken on the shelf or in the camera even if they aren't used. Some last longer than others, but if your pictures are important, why take a chance? There's no way to repeat the holidays, and the relatively low cost of new batteries will save your pictures.

If you are strictly a holiday photographer, take the batteries out of your camera and flash unit when they're not in use. This won't make the batteries last longer, but if they go bad, they won't do it inside your equipment, where they might leak and cause damage.

In any event, it's smart to keep an extra set of batteries on hand at all times. I always have spare batteries and extra film whenever I head out on a picture job. Having extra batteries is a good idea in cold weather, too. Low temperatures quickly reduce the power of batteries, even fresh ones. Keeping a spare set in the warmth of your pocket will solve this problem.

Another part of your camera tuneup is so simple that many photographers skip it, even experienced shooters.

It involves the instruction manual that came with the unit. You remember, the little booklet that was tucked into the box - the thing you glanced at when your camera was new, and was then filed away? Every camera is a little different, and it's easy to forget the necessary steps to set it properly.

If you use one of the older models that doesn't have an automatic DX film setting, it is necessary to set the camera to the proper ISO mark to prevent over- or underexposing the film. Do you know how to make that adjustment?

Let's say you want to get into the picture yourself; does your camera have a self-timer? If so, how do you use it?

This may sound elementary, but I can't count the number of times a photographer has asked me a simple question about his camera that leaves me red-faced because I don't have the answer. I've never read the instruction booklet for that particular model, and I hesitate to guess how to set the camera for fear of damaging it.

I think it's a good idea to skim through the instruction material from time to time during some spare moments. I have four Nikons, ranging from a 30-year-old Model F to a current N8008, and each one works differently from the other. This is especially true of the newest camera, an electronic autofocus.

So, check the batteries, stock some spares, and take a look at the instruction book before the holiday fun starts.

That way, the fun will continue long after your prints have come back from the photofinisher.

Lower number of deaths on Texas highways expected

The Texas Department of Public Safety estimated a very low number of people to die on Texas highways in 1989, New Year's Holiday. Only 32 persons lost their lives in that 78 hours of Operation Life Save in 1989! This is a direct result of positive safe thinking, conservative driving and closer observance of the traffic laws.

Major V.J. Cawthon, Commander of the 60 counties in Region 5, said, "People are becoming more sensible and sensitive about the drinking-driving problem in Texas. Safety belt usage is up and traffic death rates are lower than they were in 1987. If this trend continues, we may see the lowest count of traffic deaths since the record high in 1981."

The continued use of all safety belts in Texas vehicles will help preserve more lives. The National Safety Council states that a person has a five to one chance of surviving in a bad traffic accident while belted in their vehicle. With judicious and reasonable use of alcohol, the National Safety Council foresees a reduction in alcohol related traffic deaths.

Major Cawthon said, "The way to make this year's estimates smaller than expected is to select one sober driver per motor limit and insist that all persons wear safety belts when the vehicle is in motion."

While the New Year Holiday is in effect, there will be additional Highway Patrol troopers on duty to assist stranded motorists and enforce traffic laws, so you may have a safer and happier New Year in 1990.

The United States Military Academy officially opened at West Point, N.Y., in 1802.

On July 4, 1826, the second and third presidents - John Adams and Thomas Jefferson - both died, 50 years to the day after the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

These people are shouting with joy.

Why? Because they're just two of the people who have enjoyed the success of Hereford Brand classifieds. They were able to target what they had to offer to their prospective customers. Like many customers, it cost them less than $11 a week to run their ad every day in the Brand. Because they ran their ad every day for a week, they received a free ad in the Reach 4 More, reaching customers in Hereford, Dimmitt, Friona, Vega and Adrian. You can be a success, too. Dallas needs more time!

IRVING (AP) - A 1-15 first season has convinced Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones that rebuilding the franchise may take a while after all.

"We came in talking about how we wouldn't accept a four-year or five-year rebuilding plan," Jones said. "But reality may make us accept that now."

"There can be no misconceptions about where we stand and what needs to be done," Jones said.

Coach Jimmy Johnson said he'll be putting priority on the defensive line this off-season. The Cowboys cannot become a contender without a fine pass rush, he said.

But running backs and wide receivers are also in demand, he said.

The Cowboys may have the league's worst record, but they don't have the No. 1 pick. They gave that up when they took backup quarterback Steve Walsh in the NFL supplemental draft last July, a move that could still pay big dividends if Dallas can trade Walsh, say to Minnesota, for draft choices and a veteran.

Others who are likely to be gone by next season include defensive back Ed

Jones and center Tom Rafferty, the only remaining players from the 1977 Super Bowl championship team, both of whom might be ready to retire; defensive back Everson Walls, demoted to backup safety; and running back Paul Palmer, who sat out Sunday's 20-10 loss to Green Bay because Johnson said he didn't fit into the game plan.

The Cowboys did pick up Minnesota's No. 1 and 2 picks in the April draft as part of the blockbuster Herschel Walker trade. Dallas has six of the top 80 overall picks.

The Cowboys also plan to aggressively pursue players left off other teams' protected 37-man rosters - so-called Plan B free agents.

The Packers are an example of how Plan B can help a team turn around, Jones and Johnson said. Green Bay went from 4-12 last season to 10-6 after signing 20 Plan B players last year and keeping eight.

Johnson looks to the success of Green Bay coach Lindy Infante in his second season as an indication of what might be possible during Johnson's second year with the Cowboys.

"I really think that having a second year in our system is going to help," Johnson said. "Realistically, and this may sound crazy, but I think we could have a chance to get to the point of being .500 next year."

After Jones and Johnson took over the Cowboys in February, the team's 3-1 record in preseason play led to unrealistic expectations, Jones said.
