White says pressure off

USDA postpones quarantine of Texas cattle

AUSTIN (AP) — Postponement of the threatened cattle quarantine will take the pressure off Texas officials and legislators trying to solve the problem — as well as Texas cattlemen — says Gov. Mark White.

However, White told a Wednesday news conference, a special legislative session is always a possibility. "We will not let the cattle industry in Texas be subjected to a quarantine," he said. White confirmed at the news conference previous reports that the U.S. Department of Agriculture would give Texas 30 or more days to settle the differences between state and federal regulations on brucellosis control. "We are going to be working with some substantive proposals to see if there can't be some solution to this problem without a special session," White said. "I think there are avenues that have not been addressed that may be productive, and I will endeavor to do that." White said one of the possibilities was some method of inspecting and vaccinating cattle herds for brucellosis in different manners. "There are many different ways you can go about testing and vaccinating herds to detect brucellosis. ... It may be that some herds can be treated differently from others," he said. "Those people who ship only for slaughter there are some alternate programs that might be available," White said. "I'm not saying it's going to happen but it needs to be explored. They might be able to qualify that would permit them to operate somewhat different from other herd operations and still have protection." White said this category apparently includes South

Texas rancher R.J. Nunley of Sabinal, who has a permanent injunction against the state to prevent inspection of his cattle. White said he thought the greatest benefit of the delayed quarantine was "it will let all states be advised we are working for a solution and should relieve the pressure from other states." A federal court hearing that had been scheduled for today on enforcement of a quarantine was cancelled. In Washington, C.W. McMillan, assistant secretary for marketing and inspection services, USDA, said the court had been notified the USDA would no longer seek to impose the quarantine as an emergency. McMillan said the USDA would instead try to impose the quarantine through normal rulemaking procedures, allowing until July 25 for comments on the proposal. Taking into consideration the time needed for analysis of the comments, McMillan said it probably "would be a couple of months before the quarantine would be imposed." McMillan said the "federal government's involvement was strictly predicated upon the pressures we were receiving from other states." He said, "There are about 16 states that either have quarantined or will have some degree of quarantine on the movement of breeding animals." (See PRESSURE, Page 2)

Court trial may conclude today

A federal court trial which concerns a claim by the Texas Rural Legal Aid and the Texas Farm Workers Union that the Deaf Smith County lawmen and district attorney conspired with shippers and growers to fight union involvement in 1980 should be complete by today, according to Sheriff Travis McPherson.

The trial, held in Amarillo, will determine whether the TFWU can be paid for damages it claims were sustained as the direct result of a restraining order issued by the county during that summer. "We don't think we can expect a decision on it for six to nine months," McPherson said. He said the judge ordered a full transcript of the trial, which started Monday. Today testimony will be from the attorney general's office on constitutional issues. The restraining order required union solicitors who were trying to get field workers to strike to stay 50 feet away from any entrance to a field.

Shuttle launch countdown begins

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Five American astronauts, including the nation's first space-faring woman, conducted launch-site training today after countdown began for Saturday's early morning blastoff. A NASA spokesman said crews were checking one potential problem. Sally Ride and four male astronauts said they were "ready to go" for the seventh space shuttle mission. The count started at 3 a.m. EDT, with the clock ticking down from 40 hours toward a liftoff at 7:33 a.m. Saturday. Twelve hours and 33 minutes of "hold" time are built into the count to allow for contingencies. A NASA spokesman said that crews were checking one of two master events controllers — a unit needed to control the explosion that separates the shuttle rockets from the orbiter shortly after launch. "It may be bad," he said. If it is, it must be fixed before launch. Commander Robert Crippen was flying test landings before dawn today while his crew was going through early morning equipment checks. Test conductor Robert Webster's "call to stations" summoned more than 50 engineers and technicians to consoles in the control center three miles from the launch pad. Scores more workers were on the pad, grooming the sleek spaceship Challenger for the six-day trip. Their first tasks were to check the external fuel tank, verify the shuttle's computers and navigation systems and test the crew's drinking water. Much of the pre-launch media attention has focused on Ms. Ride, the 32-year-old astrophysicist who is the first woman named to a U.S. space flight, although the trail was blazed by two Soviet female cosmonauts.

Andropov elected Soviet president

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist Party leader Yuri V. Andropov was elected president of the Soviet Union today, consolidating his power by taking over the post that had remained vacant since the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev seven months ago. His unanimous election at the opening session of the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament, means that Andropov has taken firm control of this nation of 280 million people.

Andropov, who turned 69 Wednesday, was nominated for the position by Konstantin U. Chernenko, who said it was "expedient" for the head of the Communist Party to also be president. Chernenko, a veteran Politburo member who was a close associate of Brezhnev, in the past several months had been thought to be Andropov's chief rival for power.

By succeeding Brezhnev has head of the all-powerful Communist Party, taking over the presidency and assuming the leadership of the Soviet Union's military council in May, Andropov now has all three of the posts held by Brezhnev.

"Allow me to express my wholehearted appreciation and gratitude for the high trust and honor given me in electing me chairman of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR," said Andropov, a former head of the Soviet KGB intelligence agency, in a brief acceptance speech. "Your trust and consideration are a trust placed in the Communist Party and a member of this party for over 40 years," he added. "I would like to assure you that I will use my experience...to respond to your trust and confidence." Andropov became party general secretary on Nov. 12, 1982, two days after former leader Brezhnev died after 18 years at the helm of the Kremlin. Brezhnev had held both positions, and Andropov, whose health is believed to be failing, was expected to become president last November. He did not take the post then, sparking speculation that he had been unable to consolidate his absolute hold on the nation's secretive political apparatus.

Pope on visit to Polish homeland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II today embarked on an eight-day pilgrimage to his homeland, declaring he would pray for Poles at the shrine where they have always gathered "in the happy and sad hours of their history."

Wednesday in St. Peter's Square on the eve of his eight-day, six-city tour. It is a pilgrimage anxiously awaited by his devoutly Roman Catholic countrymen, who for centuries have sought refuge in the church in times of crisis. Waleza, one of the faithful described by authorities as the "former leader of a former union," vowed to meet the pontiff despite security police guarding his home in Gdansk, the Baltic seaport birthplace of the Solidarity movement that many say was inspired by the last papal visit.

The pope left Rome aboard a special Alitalia jetliner at 2:55 p.m. (8:55 a.m. EDT) on the two-hour flight to Poland. In a telegram to Italian President Sandro Pertini who telephoned the pope earlier in the day to wish him a good trip, John Paul said: "I undertake this pilgrimage to my homeland...to pray at the feet of Our Lady of Jasna Gora for the Polish people who have always gathered around that venerated icon in the happy and sad hours of their history." Police patrolled the rain-soaked streets of Warsaw and placed guards around Solidarity chief Lech Waleza hours before the start of the papal pilgrimage.

The tight security, designed both to protect the pontiff and to forestall any outbursts of support for the outlawed independent labor union, underscored the stark difference between the Poland which John Paul visited in 1979 and the country still under the shadow of martial law today. The visit comes at "an immensely difficult moment in the life of my country," John Paul said at his audience

HISD using TABS results in planning

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

The Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test results have been turned into tools for planning and self-examination for the Hereford Independent School District. The district will be using the results more intensively as it focuses on objective teaching and development of curriculum.

In looking at those results, a layman needs to understand testing term definitions and what perspective a certain test provides. Mal Manchec, director of program development for HISD, explained a few terms used with the TABS test. The TABS test is a "criterion-reference test." That means the exam merely measures one's ability to perform a certain skill. The score is not compared to other student scores. In other words, how well Johnny himself can add and subtract is determined — not how well he does compared to the rest of the class.

"Mastery" is the minimal competency to perform a certain objective. Mastery means Johnny is able to add and subtract. Non-mastery means he cannot. Each specific skill is called an "objective." In math, some objectives are use of decimals, use measurement units, and addition and subtraction. For reading, objectives may be following written direction, identifying the main idea or distinguishing fact from fiction. Johnny may be able to follow directions, but he still may not know a fairy tale from a history essay. Each question on the exam is called an "item." "Exit level" is the achievement of basic skills which all student graduating from high school should be able to accomplish. Ninth grade students tested are graded on this exit level. The TABS test determines mastery by using four items for each objective. If a student is correct on three or four of those items, he can master that objective. The Hereford district is looking at TABS results to check itself on what it is offering students. Deficiencies are pointed out and educators are aware of what needs emphasis. The district is focusing on "objective teaching." A teacher will have a solid syllabus for himself to follow. Johnny must be taught this, or that, or something else. One example of a shortcoming the TABS has shown for the last four years in Hereford is in the objective of solving personal finance problems. The 1983 objective showed 42 percent of ninth graders tested mastered that skill. In 1980, 44 percent mastered it. An example of success is seen on the fifth grade (See TABS, Page 2)

Insecticide cloud causes excitement

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — A dense, toxic cloud of insecticide sent scores of injured and hysterical people to hospitals and chased 1,500 others away from their beds during the tense hours before it dissipated early today. The 100-yard-wide cloud leaked from a campus greenhouse Wednesday night where biology students set off nine pesticide bombs. During the next four hours at least 118 people were treated at two hospitals for hysteria or inhalation of the fumes. Hospital officials said eight people were admitted, including Nacogdoches' mayor. "They suffered eye irritation, nausea, mild respiratory distress, burning skin, abdominal pain and headaches," said Medical Center Hospital assistant administrator Linda Lujan. "There was a tremendous amount of people coming in, but everyone was very cool and very organized at the hospital. Most of the staff was on the premises by the time the first victim arrived," she said. Crazy Days are coming! The popular "Crazy Days" Sales are scheduled in Hereford next week, and merchants are preparing for the big event. A Crazy Days Fun Breakfast will be held next Thursday morning to launch the three-day intensive sales promotion.

Prizes will go to the folks who show up in the craziest attire. You don't have to dress crazy to attend the breakfast, and the usual fun and games, announcements and presentations will be made.

This writer's mother underwent surgery for a tumor on the brain Monday afternoon, and we're happy to report that all is going well. She will be in intensive care for another day or two, so we're still waiting for her to tell us that everything is okay.

While spending those tense hours in the waiting room Monday evening, our thoughts turned to the events of the two days preceding the operation. The build-up of emotions to the appointed time were in complete command of my mother.

She held court from her hospital room like a queen on her throne—guiding the conversation to cheery thoughts, introducing friends who didn't know each other and telling each about the special traits of others, praising nurses and aides for their performance of duty, and making sure that everyone in her realm was comfortable and at ease. She was determined to make the time a celebration of life and not have folks dwell on her affliction.

"My doctor is a pretty sharp guy," she told friends. "I asked him if he thought I'd make it through this okay and he told me, 'You'd better make it or I'll never speak to you again.'"

"I have trouble remembering things some times and I asked him to work on that while he was in there close to my brain," she said. A little earlier, someone had asked me the age of our oldest son. While I was thinking back to count up the years, she jumped into the conversation. "He was born Nov. 3, 1954," she responded. Her memory is not so bad on some topics.

"The nurses and doctors are really nice in this hospital," she noted. "One of the nurses guessed my age at 68, but I'm sure she was being nice and subtracting about 10 years. I don't mind telling my age...I'm proud to be 76."

"You can't believe how young some of these aides and nurses and doctors are," she said. "I think that's great, but my surgeon is only 36...do you think he's learned enough to handle this job?"

"The surgeon said I was going to come through with flying colors," said Mom. "I told him that's the only colors you carry when the Lord is on your side."

The anesthesiologist came by to ask some questions and have her sign an insurance form. She felt compelled to explain some things to him. "I've got Medicare and hospitalization insurance, and there should be enough there to pay you, so don't be soaking me for anymore money," she told the young doctor. "I'm not going to argue with you, Mrs. Nieman," he said politely.

"Of course not," she said. "You know that doctors and hospitals are making the costs too high. I'm on a fixed income, and taxpayers shouldn't have to pay extra costs." Before he left the room, she also cautioned him, "It

Mayor says she thought crowd on verge of riot

HOUSTON (AP) — About 300 city employees who came to a City Council meeting to heckle Kathy Whitmire appeared on the verge of violence, the mayor of Houston says.

"I thought there could have been a riot," Mrs. Whitmire said Wednesday after the confrontation. She called three times for a recess but got no support from council members.

Members of the group came to protest Mrs. Whitmire's call for 300 layoffs of municipal workers and other proposals she made in her 1984 budget.

The group assembled in front of City Hall. Members of the crowd clapped their hands, shouted, booed and whistled when Mrs. Whitmire entered the room.

Mrs. Whitmire, visibly shaken, tried to bring the crowd under control but was shouted down.

"You're a coward. You're a chicken," one unidentified officer yelled after the mayor sought a motion to recess.

Most of the workers who crowded into the council chambers were uniformed police officers, though 20 or 30 were firefighters and 20 were from the city water division. They gathered before City Hall before the meeting.

Maynard White, business manager of the municipal employees union, told the gathering that city workers are "unhappy with this administration."

He cited Mrs. Whitmire's call for 300 layoffs in her proposed budget for fiscal 1984; an increase in the cost of health insurance; and the fact that employees have not received a pay increase since December 1981.

Officer arrested on kidnapping

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A San Antonio police officer coming back into the country from Mexico was arrested here on a warrant charging him with the aggravated kidnapping of his ex-wife, authorities said.

Sam Saldana, 30, was arrested by Laredo police at the old International Bridge at 3:20 p.m. Wednesday, said U.S. Customs Inspector Albert Farias. His former wife, Irene Saldana, 31, was with him and was released unharmed.

The arrest warrant charging Saldana with abducting his former wife was issued just nine days after the couple's 12-year marriage was dissolved. Saldana is a patrolman and records show he joined the department in 1974.

Saldana was re-entering the country from Mexico when he was arrested, Farias said.

San Antonio Homicide Lt. Jack Summey and two other detectives went to Laredo late Wednesday night to return the couple to San Antonio.

Justice of the Peace Irene Canales de Janssen signed the warrant for Saldana's arrest Wednesday morning, charging him with aggravated kidnapping.

Saldana allegedly abducted his former wife from a San Antonio home and drove her to Mexico, authorities said.

Couple sues three firms over fumes in trailer

HOUSTON (AP) — A firefighter and his wife have sued three firms for $1.72 million, saying they suffered cold-like symptoms and their baby had respiratory ailments from birth because of formaldehyde fumes in their mobile home.

Joe and Debbie Burleson said in their suit they moved out of the trailer in September on their doctor's advice. They are seeking to regain money from their down payment as well as other housing.

The suit, filed in federal court Tuesday, names as defendants Moduline Industries Inc.; Texas National Manufactured Housing, a trailer sales business in Porter; and Citicorp Acceptance Co. of Houston. The lawsuit claims the three companies were liable because they had "tie-in type arrangements" to sell the homes.

The lawsuit said the Burlesons purchased the mobile home in July 1981 and moved in. After a brief period of time, the suit said, the Burlesons began to have "headaches, cold-like symptoms and other non-specific acute symptoms."

However, the couple's son Jeffrey, who was born a year later, was most severely affected by "noxious formaldehyde fumes," the suit said.

Arnold Anderson Vickery, the Burlesons' attorney, says the couple has continued to make payments on the mobile home even though they live elsewhere.

The backward nations

We have not been helping the situation in backward nations by designating them something other than backward.

We've been calling them "disadvantaged nations" or "emerging nations" or "developing nations."

The fact is that most of them had a head start on us — by thousands of years — but they were and remain "backward" nations. Other societies, other economies advanced — theirs did not.

Only nine black African countries grow enough to feed themselves.

Twenty-two remain among the poorest countries in the world.

So-called "Third World" countries in Asia have prospered this last decade; the economies of eight African states actually shrank.

Nor were the Soviets any more successful in communizing Africa than well-intentioned Americans were in Christianizing it.

In one after another black African nations the Soviets have been thrown out; most are now steering themselves away from socialism. That may be their best hope.

African resources, mostly minerals and metals, are an enormous prize in the East-West struggle.

But the experience of both East and West has been that African regurgitates outsiders.

Sociologists explain that the African climate inhibits efficiency; that paraditic diseases dilute energies; that ancient tribal rivalries distract and destroy.

So fields stand idle, mines lose money. A bicycle factory in Tanzania with no competition — and despite overwhelming demand — can't make a go of it. African nations find it cheaper to buy bicycles from the West than from one another.

In Ghana, cocoa production dropped because somebody forgot to order more machetes.

Recently The Wall Street Journal did the best it could to anticipate the future for this polyglot continent and decided that "for most of Africa's 39 nations there is no hope."

Governments come and go, bleeding the treasury for the few years they occupy the Palace. Those leaders feather their nests and flee to Switzerland and new parasites move in.

Africans used to blame their colonial legacy for all their problems; now almost half a century later they have only themselves to blame.

We are told we must not let the African economies collapse; that ten percent of our nation's exports are sold to Africa.

But those nations seldom "pay" for what they "buy"; African nations' debt to the West has increased 1,000 percent in 10 years.

For us to continue to keep Africa "on welfare" can only perpetuate dependence.

97-year-old wins state pageant

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Without a swimsuit competition or talent show, 97-year-old Dora Schoumann won Oklahoma's first nursing home pageant with inner beauty: her sense of humor, personality and talent for growing old gracefully.

Each finalist wore her Sunday best, had a fresh permanent and wore a white orchid corsage along with the sash proclaiming her the winner of a regional pageant.

A panel of five, including Nigh's wife, Donna, and Oklahoma's health commissioner, Dr. Joan Levitt, judged the finalists for personality, sense of humor and adjustment to nursing home life as they answered questions posed by a master of ceremonies.

Mrs. Schoumann was the oldest of seven finalists in the "Ms. Oklahoma Nursing Home" pageant at a downtown hotel. Marie Smith, 87, was first runner-up and the youngest finalist, 66-year-old Martina Stirman, was second runner-up.

When asked jokingly if she was really 97, Mrs. Schoumann shot back, "I've got the papers to prove it, and that's all that's necessary."

She has outlived her husband and her three sons and she added, "I am the third youngest in a family of 12. I'm the only one left and I don't know why. I just can't figure why."

"God loves you," suggested the Gaylon Stacy, the master of ceremonies.

"Well, there's something wrong somewhere," Mrs.

Schoumann replied. "I did my best to be out of this deal, but she wouldn't let me," the winner said, referring to the nursing home administrator.

Mrs. Schoumann, whose education ended in eighth grade when she left to help on the family farm, said she always has believed in hard work. At the nursing home she raises and lowers the American flag every day, delivers newspapers to other residents, works on her quilting, and plays dominoes, cards or bingo.

She said the pageant victory won't mean any big changes in her life. "The Lord has blessed me and I'm going right down the road," she said. "I'm going to pick up where I left off."

"Well, there's something wrong somewhere," Mrs.

Judge to watch Beaumont's actions

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal judge says he'll monitor compliance with his desegregation order indefinitely because he is convinced that given a chance, a Beaumont school district would reopen separate schools for blacks and whites.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker issued the change of plan in an order filed Wednesday. His original 1981 ruling did away with separate black and white high schools in the South Park Independent School District, establishing one campus for ninth- and 10th-graders and the other for 11th- and 12th-graders.

Parker acted Wednesday to grant the school district's request to move 10th-grade classes to the senior campus, the former site of Forest Park High School, almost all of whose students were white. School officials cited overcrowding at the junior campus, formerly all-black Hebert High School, in seeking the change.

But he said the district's "frivolous appeal" of his order to the Supreme Court led him to extend indefinitely the three-year period in which a six-member committee is to monitor compliance with his order.

"The court remains convinced that left to its own devices, the school board would dismantle the desegregation order and reinstate racially divided attendance zones," Parker wrote in his two-page ruling.

School Superintendent Mike Taylor said he was unconcerned with Parker's action.

"I have no qualms with that one way or another," he said. "Personally, I'm not sure it's necessary."

A panel of judges from the U.S. 5th District Court of Appeals upheld Parker's desegregation plan March 1. School board members voted 6-1 March 17 to appeal to the Supreme Court. Lamar University professor Richard Price, the only dissenting member and formerly the only black member, was defeated in a re-election bid in April.

School board members have complained that Parker's order calls for a "perfect racial balance" and went beyond legal requirements. Board members called the three-judge 5th Circuit panel "pro-busing."

The two campuses of the combined Westbrook High School are about 8 miles apart.

Ed Moore, head of the Citizen's Action Committee, said he believes black students will bear an unfair burden under the decision.

"It's obvious black kids are going to be bused three years and white kids only one," he said. "I don't think the morale of the black kids has been considered."

But Parker said he had "carefully weighed the educational considerations versus the disparate impact on 10th-grade black students and has concluded that equitable considerations weigh in favor of the change."

cattle from Texas."

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin issued a temporary restraining order against the USDA on May 31, saying it would cause "immediate and irreparable" damage to Texas' cattle industry.

On June 7, more than 800 cattlemen gathered in Austin to demand that White call a special session try to avoid the quarantine.

In another resolution, they asked the USDA to delay enforcement until the Legislature could act on the matter.

The quarantine was announced by the USDA when it became apparent Texas' lawmakers would finish their 140-day regular session and go home May 30 without passing a bill that would have brought the state's brucellosis controls in line with federal standards.

Taylor said a poll of ninth-graders taken in May showed a large majority of black and white students favored moving the 10th grade to the senior campus.

The junior campus' capacity is listed at 1,350 students, but 1,356 attended school there this year.

Ag Committee warned about compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is warning the Senate Agriculture Committee that any changes in a compromise plan to slash the cost of the 1984 farm program could doom the proposal and jeopardize the government's entire price support system.

"The compromise doesn't necessarily make anyone too happy," says William Leshner, the Agriculture Department's top economist. "The compromise now is on very thin ice, ... and any changes would just chip away at that," Leshner told the committee Wednesday as he tried but failed to make any progress on moving the massive proposal to a vote in the full Senate.

"We're trying to walk a middle road" that will garner the support needed to cut costs, he said of the overall plan. "We don't want to jeopardize losing the whole program."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said if the compromise package is sent to the full Senate with any significant changes, he will try to impose more adverse cost-cutting measures during the floor debate.

"We're back in the same old catch," added Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan. "Nobody wants to give up anything, but everybody wants to go out and ... complain about the (federal budget)."

With huge commodity surpluses and low market prices showing the cost of this year's farm program to $21 billions, the administration and the Congress are trying to curb the pricetag of especially expensive price support for dairy and grains and cotton.

Congress, with administration approval, is also trying to fight off critics of the complex tobacco program by making changes that will stall efforts to abolish it completely.

The House Agriculture Committee has acted only on the dairy section of the compromise, declining to take action to freeze so-called target prices for grains and cotton.

Its failure to link the two prompted Agriculture Secretary John Block to withdraw his endorsement of the dairy plan and signal the possibility that it would be vetoed if the grain-cotton provisions were not restored.

Under the target price program, farmers receive a direct government payment for the difference between the average market price for

She's inclined to "preach" a little. Her son heard plenty of sermons while he was growing up and, thankfully, many of them are still remembered.

She's also inclined toward giving, but never receiving. As visitors came to her hospital room, she "fussed" at them for coming. "I know you have more important things to do." We have to remind her that it's okay to accept a compliment, to be on the receiving end of gifts and good deeds.

Minutes before they came after her, the room was full of family and friends. "What's going on here-are you having a convention?" asked a nurse who came in the room.

"I'm trying to get one of them to take my place," mother told the nurse, "but so far there are no takers!" One of her friends, who had been through the same type of surgery and by the same surgeon, was on hand and was a great inspiration. "I'm a little jealous of her and the doctor," joked my mother, "but I'm going to beat her time!"

And, just before the operation, she told the doctor: "You've got to get me well—I have a lot of friends at the Senior Citizens' center who need my help."

are allowing people back in their homes."

Authorities routed students on the southern part of the campus and residents living south of the university from their homes as the gas, kept close to the ground by calm winds and high humidity, drifted across the area.

"We are lucky we didn't have to evacuate the hospital, if it had got much farther south we would have had to," said Ammons, referring to Nacogdoches Memorial Hospital.

He said the city's emergency plan, which had been tested during chemical spills from train derailments in 1974 and 1978, had worked well and enabled authorities to act quickly.

"We were very fortunate it was so well organized. ... There may have been a little over reaction, but I certainly would rather overreact in a situation like this," he said.

Mayor A.L. Mangham was the most seriously injured. He was overcome by fumes as he watched firefighters hose down the greenhouse.

Nacogdoches Memorial Hospital administrator James Mofsky said 51 people, about half of them children under 15 years of age, were treated and released at his hospital for minor respiratory ailments and hysteria.

McDonald's 'hamburguesas' and 'papas fritas' served

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A famous Saturday Night Live television skit featured a Greek restaurant where no matter what patrons ordered, they always ended up with a cheeseburger.

But in El Paso, the nation's most Hispanic large city, residents who crave a cheeseburger can go to any of McDonald's 11 local restaurants and order a "hamburguesa con queso" — cheeseburger in Spanish.

"We consider the Hispanic market exceptionally important to us as a business," McDonald's Corp. Oak Brook, Ill., spokesman Bob Keyser said.

With Hispanics making up 62 percent of El Paso's nearly half-million residents, it's little wonder this West Texas border city's McDonald's menus are in English and Spanish.

"In a market like El Paso that's fairly unique, it's not a hiring requirement, but most people who work for us also are bilingual," said Gail Burbank, McDonald's spokeswoman in El Paso.

Bilingualism and English-Spanish menus are necessary to those who work in the Mills Avenue McDonald's, just a half-mile from the muddy Rio Grande that separates El Paso from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

"Hamburguesa con queso or cheeseburger? What's the difference? This is El Paso, so there's not much difference," maid Manuela de la Esperanza said. She travels four days a week from her home in Juarez to work for an El Paso family.

Ms. de la Esperanza and fellow maid Roberta Ayala Gutierrez only speak Spanish, and said that after work they love to stop in McDonald's downtown restaurant near the bus stop to order a cool "barquillo" — vanilla ice cream cone.

"It gets too hot here in summer, so it's really nice to have an ice cream," Mrs. Ayala Gutierrez said, wiping her brow with her hand. "We can't always get ice cream in Mexico."

Mexico's economic problems have spilled over into neighboring El Paso, where three 1982 peso devaluations sliced by one-sixth the Mexican's purchasing power, and caused the closure of an estimated 35 El Paso stores that depended on cross-over business from Juarez shoppers.

Even McDonald's has been affected. "Problems across the border obviously have had sporadic effects on our walk-in business. The better the situation is in Mexico, the better we do," Keyser said.

McDonald's El Paso stores stopped accepting pesos for payment last August.

"The peso was fluctuating too much (against the U.S. dollar). We lost $160 one day in the peso exchange," store manager Gordon Chamberlain said.

But many Mexicans changing their dollars for pesos - the rate is now 148 to the dollar - still think they get their money's worth at McDonald's. "Desayuno - breakfast - is a bargain at 99 cents for an Egg McMuffin," 18-year-old Juan Luis Alvarez said.

There is no Spanish translation for Egg McMuffin, so the menu name for a McMuffin in both languages is unchanged. There also is no translation needed for Big Macs, hot cakes and McRib - they're the same in both languages.

Not so for an All-American piece of apple pie - the Spanish equivalent is "pastel manzana" - an apple pastry.

But "huevos revueltos" is scrambled eggs and the quarter-pounder with cheese is a "quarter-pounder con queso."

"I still like a 'hamburguesa con queso y papas fritas' - french fries - best," Alvarez said. "We can't get any good ones in Juarez."

Get most out of irrigation water

COLLEGE STATION - Since Texas homeowners can't always rely on rain to keep their yards and gardens lush and growing, they need to get the most from irrigation water.

Everett E. Janne, landscape horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says much of the water used on yards and gardens is often wasted because of improper methods of application and poor cultural practices.

"Slow, deep watering will allow plant roots to penetrate deeper so that plants become more stress-resistant," Janne says. "Soaker hoses and drip irrigation systems are excellent for trees and shrubs while overhead sprinklers are more effective for lawns.

It's important that water be applied no faster than the soil can absorb it, emphasizes the horticulturist. If it is applied too rapidly, much of the water will be lost to runoff and evaporation. Excessive amounts of water can cause soil to become water-logged in the root area, causing rotting, especially if internal drainage is poor.

"Be careful not to over-water plants native to more arid regions of the state," Janne says. "They can be damaged by root rot. Also, since they often fail to go dormant but stay soft and succulent into the winter, such plants can be damaged by low temperatures."

Shrubs and trees near foundations, under eaves or on southern and western exposures need watering more frequently than others, says Janne. These plants often receive less benefit from rainfall and have to deal with heat reflected from walls.

Areas under overhangs should usually be leached every few months to remove concentrations of salt left from water evaporation.

Plants on mounds or steep slopes suffer from drought stress more easily than those in level areas.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—The State of Texas, facing eye to eye with the federal government over a possible quarantine of Texas cattle, refused to blink last week.

But the United State Agriculture Department's quarantine efforts, currently stalled in the courtroom, are expected to come unlogged soon and someone is going to say "ouch!"

It won't be the feds, if U.S. Agriculture Sec. John Block has his way. Block said last week his department will call off the quarantine only after the Legislature enacts a new brucellosis testing plan.

A controversial bill creating a new brucellosis program actually passed the house in the recent session, but failed in the Senate, largely due to the efforts of former Gov. Dolph Briscoe who said the feds were bluffing and would not quarantine Texas this close to a presidential election year.

Texas is the only state which does not have a brucellosis program (the current program has been struck down by court rulings and does not meet with federal guidelines), and several Western states are blocking the entry of Texas cattle.

Brucellosis causes cows to abort and produce less milk.

Angry Cattlemen

Texas cattlemen traditionally have resisted the expensive brucellosis vaccination program, but many of them are fearful of the economic havoc to be wreaked by a quarantine.

About 1,000 cattle raisers met last week with Gov. Mark White, asking him to call a special session of the Legislature to pass the brucellosis program. The cattle raisers' meeting was among the largest in state history, according to many.

White really incurred their wrath by asking for more time instead of calling in the Legislature. The Governor, who left the room amidst boozing, is probably awaiting the outcome of the courtroom battle. White, who was Texas Secretary of State under Briscoe, is naturally reluctant to undermine his former boss' power play.

Briscoe Reborn?

Briscoe and other South Texas ranchers objected to rounding up their scattered herds for costly vaccinations, but other political factors may be involved. Over the past several months Briscoe has indicated he will run in '84 against U.S. Sen. John Tower, and he has been much more visible on the political scene.

But Briscoe, who caught much criticism for being an "absentee governor," needs an issue to catch the public's eye and he has certainly found the answer to that with the hot brucellosis issue.

Should Briscoe prevail, he will be an instant hero in the cattlemen's and other eyes and a reborn candidate. Should he fail, his own eyes will likely be politically blackened.

Teacher Salaries

White's own pet project, a tax hike for teacher raises, appears to have gained some strength last week. The prime opponent of his proposed tax, House Speaker Gib Lewis, agreed to support the tax increase if a special public school study committee says they are necessary to finance quality education. White, all smiles at that announcement, indicated he will appoint the committee quickly and give them a deadline to make recommendations.

If the committee acts quickly enough, White could conceivably call a special session next month which could settle both the tax and brucellosis issues. The double victory would be a big boost for White.

Business Community
Meanwhile, the Speaker's softening on the issue . . . plus the growing cooperation of Ways and Means chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen . . . indicate that public opinion may actually favor a tax hike for education.

More likely, the business community is working behind the scenes to settle on the type of tax hike which will be acceptable, and is signalling the House leadership to begin opening the gate and allow the tax bill to pass.

Windfall Profits
The controversial windfall profits tax rose its ugly head last week when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously it was not unconstitutional.

The tax was abhorrent to a good many Texans, especially oil and gas producers and royalty owners who charged it would cripple their industry. Congress passed the tax in 1980 on oil windfall profits reaped in the '70s.

The High Court's decision resurrects the issue anew, a year before the coming presidential election, and will surely spark new efforts to kill the tax. The outcome of that effort will quite likely shape the direction Texas takes in the '84 presidential sweepstakes.

Hernandez goes to Mets before trade deadline

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports Writer

Going from the world champions to the team with the worst record in baseball came as a shock to Keith Hernandez. But he says it won't change his approach to the game.

"This game's a challenge, no matter who you play for," Hernandez said after being traded from the St. Louis Cardinals to the New York Mets an hour before the trading deadline Wednesday.

"I talked to (Mets General Manager) Frank Cashen and he's very excited about their getting me. They're hoping that I can turn things around. Hopefully I can."

The trade of the 29-year-old Hernandez, a one-time National League Most Valuable Player, was the only pre-deadline deal that could be classified as a blockbuster.

In return, the Cardinals got Neil Allen, the reliever beset this season by personal and professional troubles, and Rick Ownbey, a raw but promising right-hander who was promptly dispatched to Louisville of the American Association.

There were only two other major deals, both in the American League.

In one, the Chicago White Sox and Seattle Mariners exchanged second basemen. The Mariners got switch-hitting Tony Bernazard; the White Sox got Julio Cruz, the leading base-stealer in the majors this year with 33, who is playing out his option.

In the other, the New York Yankees got a right-handed starting pitcher, a commodity they sorely lacked, in Matt Keough. Keough came from the Oakland A's in return for first baseman Marshall Brant and pitcher Ben Callahan, both minor leaguers.

Hernandez, hitting .284 with three home runs and 26 RBIs, was unaware that he had been dealt until 20 minutes before the trade was announced at 7 p.m. EDT, an hour before the deadline. He was taking batting practice in preparation for Wednesday night's game with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I wasn't shocked that I was traded," he said. "I was shocked that it was to the Mets."

A .299 lifetime hitter, Hernandez is expected to replace Dave Kingman at first base for the Mets. Kingman, who led the National League with 37 home runs last year while hitting only .204, has 12 homers this year, but is hitting only .204 and has been the subject of recurrent trade rumors.

"Dave Kingman is still with the club, but in all conscience I have to try to make a trade for him," Cashen said.

The trade of Hernandez finally opens up the outfield spot the Cardinals had wanted for David Green, who had been shut out of the alignment of Lonnie Smith, Willie McGee and George Hendrick. Smith is currently going under voluntary therapy in a drug-rehabilitation center.

Open golfers may not use drivers

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Seve Ballesteros are in agreement on at least one point:

For the most part, the driver stays in the bag during the 83rd U.S. Open Golf Championship which began today. The rough is so deep, so severe, if a player challenges it with the driver "he's out of his tree," Nicklaus said.

John Hand, director of competitions for the sponsoring USGA, said "the only word to describe it is 'penal'."

Ballesteros, the young Spaniard who won the Masters and established himself as a solid favorite here when he won the Westchester Classic last Sunday, said he used a one-iron off the tee 11 times and the driver only on the three par-5 holes on treacherous Oakmont during his final practice round Wednesday.

"You don't hit the driver very often," agreed Nicklaus, who will be seeking the record fifth American national championship that was denied him by Tom Watson's dramatic chip-in a year ago at Pebble Beach.

But, in taking the driver out of the hands of the players, "they've taken an awful lot of the gamble out of the golf course," Nicklaus said.

"They've forced you to play safe. As a result, the scores are going to be lower. If the gamble was left in, the scores would be higher."

Ballesteros predicted the scores will be high enough in any event.

"The fairways are very narrow. There is too much rough. The greens are fast, very fast. You cannot chip. The scores will be high. Maybe two over (par) will win," he said.

Ballesteros, 26, now the winner of two Masters and a British Open crown, said "my confidence is very, very high," coming into today's first round.

He noted, however, "this tournament has not been any good to me." He once was disqualified for missing his starting times and failed to qualify for the final two rounds on another occasion.

"Seve is a very good player," agreed Nicklaus, at age 43 seeking still another addition to the record 19 major titles he's collected in an unmatched career.

"But he hasn't yet proved he can win on an Open course."

Nicklaus hasn't won this year but, he said, that is not significant coming into this one.

"I'm well prepared," he said. "Actually, I'm playing rather well. I have a shot."

Cowboys sign rugby star as top punter candidate

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rugby star Naas Botha flew to the United States on Wednesday, saying he was confident of making the Dallas Cowboys as a punter. Some rugby writers have called him South Africa's best-ever rugby player.

"One has to be confident for most things in life and I believe I will do all right in America," Botha said before his departure.

Wearing a badge of the South African national rugby team, he told an airport news conference that his experience in international rugby matches had "hardened me for the road ahead. Without that experience, I would never have had the courage to go to America."

That experience included the violence-plagued South African rugby tour of New Zealand in 1981, when apartheid opponents tried to prevent the Springboks from playing.

Botha is a national hero in this rugby-crazy nation, although critics have accused him of playing dirty and avoiding contact. One businessman reportedly offered him a high-paying job if he would stay here, but Botha declined.

Botha, 25, whose brother, Darius, also has played for the national rugby team, was given leave by the paramilitary South African police to try out with the Cowboys. Botha had been working in the sports office of the police.

Dallas officials said they were impressed when Botha approached them asking for a chance to show his kicking ability.

Botha had set South African and world records for points scored, almost all of them by drop-kicking the rugby equivalent of American football field goals and converting after tries, the equivalent of extra points after touchdowns in football.

He said, "To be honest I have a lump in my throat. But I have reached the saturation point in my rugby career in South Africa."

Botha said he had been thinking of turning professional since 1979 when he injured a leg.

He said he had signed a three-year contract with the Cowboys, contingent upon his winning the punting job in summer camp tryouts.

Palmer 'let Bear out of cage' at Oakmont tourney 21 years ago

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Oakmont revisited — 21 years later.

Who can forget the June of 1962 when the pendulum of bigtime tournament golf swung from the fabled, charismatic Charger to the dour, workmanlike fat kid from Ohio?

"I let the Bear out of the cage," Arnold Palmer was to remark later in reviewing his playoff defeat at the hands of the bulbous, 22-year-old rookie, Jack Nicklaus, in the 62nd U. S. Open Golf Championship.

"If I had been able to beat that strong, young dude in that tournament, I might have held him off for another five years. But Jack gained such confidence and momentum there was no stopping him after that."

It is now two decades plus a year later and this storied old course still lies here tucked in the side of a mountain outside Pittsburgh — hardly a blade of grass changed.

Arnie and Jack are back, too, but the same can't be said of them.

Arnie is 53, his hair a silvery sheen, and some of his oldtime ability on the course dulled by the years but still, nut-brown and lean, a magnetic, macho personality.

Nicklaus is no longer the kid whose Ohio State teammates called "Blobbo," "Whaleman" and "Baby Dumberling."

He shed some 20 pounds, let his gold-colored hair grow to a fashionable length and turned into a Hollywood matinee idol type while amassing the greatest collection of major championships — 19 — in the history of the game.

The "Golden Bear" became the "Golden Boy," one of the most popular personalities in all sports. But at 42, without a tour victory in a year, he is looking over his shoulder at a brilliant, daring young Spaniard named Seve Ballesteros.

The dark-eyed Latin may be the new crown prince of golf, but he will have to go far to transcend the drama that signaled the changing of the guard on this same course 21 years ago.

As 20-year-old amateur, Nicklaus had finished second to Palmer in the U. S. Open at Denver in 1960 and won the NCAA and his second U. S. Amateur title in 1961 before turning pro. As a brash, raw rookie, he now was daring to challenge the great Palmer in his own backyard before all his neighbors and friends.

Oakmont galleries were understandably hostile to Nicklaus. To them, he was a brash young outsider who threatened their hometown hero.

Palmer and Nicklaus ultimately tied for the championship at 283, forcing a playoff. Big Jack won the playoff, 71 to 74, suffering some of the grossest indignities ever heaped on a competitor.

"Jack beat me on the greens," Arnie said. "I had 10 one-putt greens. He had one. I gave him 12 strokes on the greens."

And a push to stardom the world will never forget.

Texas Am Golf set

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Defending champion Scott Verplank wants to be the first man to win back-to-back Texas Amateur Golf Tournament titles in more than four decades, but he says the tournament's toughest field stands between him and his goal.

"People were saying that last year was the best field ever," said Verplank. "Judging by the players I know who are in it, I think it's tougher this year."

Verplank, an 18-year-old Oklahoma State freshman from Dallas, is one of the favorites to win the 72-hole tournament at the 7,077-yard, par 72 Fairway Oaks Golf & Racquet Club course here.

If Verplank repeats — and no one has since Billy Bob Coffey won in 1940 and 1941 — he'll probably have to withstand a stiff challenge from one or both of two of his playing partners on Thursday, John Slaughter of Abilene and Mark Brooks of Fort Worth.

Slaughter, an All-America from the University of Houston, was the runnerup last year and he will have the advantage of playing on his home course. Brooks, an All-America at the University of Texas, won the tournament in 1979 and 1981.

Besides Brooks, two other former champions are entered. John Paul Cain won the tournament in 1961 while Bill Holstead took the title in 1970. In addition, the sons of two former champions also are in the field, Kyle Coody of Abilene and Don Massengale Jr. of Harlingen.

Evans socks 3 homers to beat Astros, 7-1

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Darrell Evans stayed up to watch his own version of the late show — then put on a show all by himself against the Houston Astros.

"This is incredible. I've never done anything like this before," said Evans after his three home runs and six RBI powered the San Francisco Giants to a 7-1 victory over the Astros Wednesday.

Perhaps Evans wouldn't have been as successful had he not stayed up late to do his homework. Hitless in 17 previous trips against the Astros, Evans studied video tapes of himself for a couple of hours after Tuesday night's 12-inning, 3-2 loss to the Astros. He said he paid particular attention to his hands and feet and made some adjustments.

"I can hardly wait to get up to the plate when I'm hitting like this," said the 13-year veteran after boosting his home run total to a National League-tying 18 and RBI to 44. He also is hitting .315 and has a slugging average of .653.

In other NL action, it was Atlanta 3, Los Angeles 2; Montreal 7, Pittsburgh 4; St. Louis 7, Philadelphia 6; Chicago 7, New York 4 in 10 innings and San Diego 5, Cincinnati 1.

With his explosive afternoon, Evans tied Atlanta's Dale Murphy for the NL lead in homers, ran his career total to 250 and became the first National Leaguer to hit three homers in a game since Claudell Washington did it for the New York Mets against the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1980.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

Jerry Royster tied the game with a run-producing infield single, then Dale Murphy's sacrifice fly provided the deciding run as Atlanta rallied for two runs in the ninth to beat Los Angeles.

With the bases loaded, Royster bounced a hard grounder off the foot of reliever Dave Stewart, 5-2, to tie the score. Murphy then followed with his game-winning sacrifice fly.

Expos 7, Pirates 4

Andre Dawson drove in four runs, two during a four-run fifth inning, and belted a homer as Montreal rallied to defeat Pittsburgh.

Ray Burris, 2-2, survived a three-run first inning and went on to gain the victory with relief help from Jeff Reardon, who posted his ninth save. Burris, 0-11 as a starter in 1982, posted his first victory in a starting role since the NL playoffs in 1981.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 6
David Green lashed a two-out RBI single in the eighth inning, capping a four-run rally that led St. Louis over Philadelphia in a game that saw Steve Carlton regain the all-time career strikeout mark.

The Cardinals' rally marred a seven-strikeout performance by Carlton, boosting his lifetime total to 3,542 — seven more than Nolan Ryan, with whom he had been tied. Both Carlton and Ryan earlier this year topped Walter Johnson's lifetime mark of 3,508.

Losing 6-3, the Cardinals won the game in the eighth on an RBI single by Dane Iorg, Glenn Brummer's run-scoring grounder, and RBI singles by Darrell Porter and Green.

Cubs 7, Mets 4

Jay Johnstone's bases-loaded, two-run single in the 10th led Chicago over New York. Mell Hall opened the inning with a single and moved to second on Ryne Sandberg's sacrifice which saw Mets' first baseman Rusty Staub charged with an error for missing the tag, and advanced to second on Bill Buckner's sacrifice.

Ron Cey was walked intentionally to load the bases and Johnstone delivered his two-run single off Scott Holman, the fifth of six pitchers used by the Mets. Holman, 1-5, was lifted in favor of Mike Torrez after walking Cubs winner Lee Smith, 2-4. Larry Bowa then greeted Torrez with an RBI single to make it 7-4.

Padres 5, Reds 1
Ed Whitson pitched a three-hitter and helped himself with a two-run single as San Diego defeated Cincinnati. Whitson, 1-4, making his fourth start since coming off the disabled list May 20, struck out five and walked one.

Terry Kennedy also slugged a two-run homer for the Padres. His blast in the first off Charlie Puleo, 2-3, actually provided the Padres with their winning run.

Duran eyes comeback against unbeaten Moore

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Duran, fighting in the twilight of what has been a legendary boxing career, reaches back for one more dawn tonight, challenging unbeaten Davey Moore for the World Boxing Association junior middleweight championship.

The two-time champ comes into the fight at Madison Square Garden on his 32nd birthday in what many Duran-watchers say is the best condition of his life, eager for a chance to redeem himself for the sorry "No Mas" loss of his welterweight title to Sugar Ray Leonard 2½ years ago.

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

Shane Rawley and LaMarr Hoyt didn't feel all that well — but they were better than the batters they faced.

Rawley, fighting a fever, struggled to a nine-hitter as the New York Yankees snapped a four-game losing streak by beating the Cleveland Indians 8-5, and Hoyt, likewise battling the flu, scattered four hits in seven innings as the Chicago White Sox defeated California 5-2 in a pair of American League games Wednesday night.

Elsewhere it was Oakland 10, Toronto 1; Detroit 4, Boston 2; Minnesota 6, Kansas City 2; Seattle 6, Texas 4, and Baltimore 11, Milwaukee 8 in 10 innings.

"I had a pretty high fever last night, a sore throat, and I ached all over," Rawley said. "I was just a little weak, and it affected my velocity just a little." He walked five batters and struck out only two.

Despite those normally mediocre numbers, Yankees Manager Billy Martin called Rawley's performance heroic.

His victory came less than 24 hours after Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said he was unhappy with the team's performance and some of Martin's activities, creating more headlines.

White Sox 5, Angels 2

Hoyt seemingly didn't mind getting lifted by Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa after seven innings, during which he fanned four batters and walked one.

"I was gassed," he said. "I had the flu the last couple of days and the fatigue from my illness just didn't make me feel strong enough to finish."

Scott Fletcher triggered the White Sox's decisive two-run rally in the fifth-inning with a double and also had a sacrifice fly. With one out, he doubled and Jerry Dybzinski tied it 2-2 with a single. With two away, Carlton Fisk tripled to center to put Chicago ahead to stay.

Mariners 6, Rangers 4

Al Cowens hit a two-out, two-run triple in a three-run ninth inning as the Mariners vaulted past Texas.

His game-winning hit to right-center field off the Rangers' ace reliever, Odell Jones, followed singles by Domingo Ramos and Steve Henderson, put Seattle on top 5-4 and snapped a five-game victory streak by Texas.

A's 10, Blue Jays 1

Davey Lopes drove in seven runs for Oakland with a double, a triple and a grand-slam homer.

Lopes, an 11-year veteran, drove in two runs with a second-inning double off Luis Leal, then picked on Toronto reliever Dave Geisel for a run-scoring triple in the fourth and his seventh homer of the year and third career grand slam in the fifth.

Rookie Mike Krueger picked his first major-league complete game for the A's, scattering eight hits.

Tigers 4, Red Sox 2

Kirk Gibson, Detroit's batting star in a losing effort the previous evening, kept his bat hot against the Red Sox, drilling a two-run triple.

"Like I said last night, it's a lot more fun to contribute to a winning cause," said Gibson. "That's what we're here for."

Chet Lemon and Lance Parrish each hit a solo homer.

Twins 6, Royals 2

Scott Ulliger and Frank Viola teamed their talents for the Twins to turn back Kansas City.

Ulliger, replacing injured Kent Hrbek at first base, drilled three hits — two doubles and a single — to match his previous total big-league output. Viola scattered eight Royals hits.

Orioles 11, Brewers 8

Baltimore, riding five runs batted in by Cal Ripken Jr., rallied from a seven-run deficit after six innings and beat Milwaukee on John Shelby's single that produced the Orioles' winning run in a four-run 10th inning.

"This might top them all," Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn muttered. "It probably does, getting a 7-0 lead and losing in extra innings." Mark Brouhard hit a two-run homer for Milwaukee.

Now You're Cookin'

By SANDY PANKEY
Staff Writer

"Moving into this house was like finally coming home," exclaimed Tracy Coker.

"Our home once belonged to my grandparents, Frank and Etta Barber from 1945-1960. When I found that it was for sale six years ago I told my husband that's where I wanted to raise my family."

"I have many fond memories of this house and when members of the Barber family come to visit they feel that they, too, are at 'home'." Tracy continued.

"Throughout the years, this house has represented a family gathering place."

Tracy and her husband Phil have remodeled almost every room of their home at 1101 Union. It has taken several years to redecorate the four bedroom, two story house. Although they have freshly painted and papered, the house still has a feeling of the old mixed with the new.

All of the bedrooms are upstairs and are decorated and furnished according to the tastes of the individual family member.

The downstairs' foyer has a parquet floor as does the dining room and natural wood fixtures enhance the homey atmosphere.

Tracy covered three feet of the dining area walls in a brightly printed fabric and textured and painted the remaining space. Most every room has different printed wall paper and coordinating curtains and carpet.

The kitchen features an old-world look. "We cut oval panels for the cabinet doors and placed glue chip glass with oval beveled glass in the centers of each and also had a new floor laid," Tracy explained. "This was one room that I wanted completed because I'm in it a great deal."

With the exception of the living area, ceiling fans have been placed in all rooms.

"It's amazing how they help heat and cool the house. It will be more difficult to have a fan put in the livingroom because the ceiling is 10 foot high."

"Redecorating is my main hobby and because I have such a love for this house, it has been a lot of fun," she added.

Another interest the homemaker has is collecting antiques. One of her favorite pieces is a wooden high chair that her aunt gave her. "It's been in the family for years," she said. "We traced back to 1925 when the family first began using it."

My cousin made me a brass plaque and had it inscribed with the family members who used it and the dates of each."

Tracy finds that decorating with plants adds an airy touch to the rooms. Two unusual plants include a 10 foot weeping fig placed in her livingroom and a hoya plant given to her by her grandmother.

"I have had the hoya for 11 years and it is just now beginning to bloom," she laughed. "One of my grandmothers gave a cutting to another grandmother and she in turn gave me a cutting. This plant has sentimental value to me. I guess after all these years, tender loving care finally paid off."

Finding time to remodel, raise three children and being active in her church takes organization and Tracy does this well.

"I try to give each child individual attention," she said. "That's sometimes difficult to do but I think the child is better adjusted when they have 'special' time with their parents."

The Cokers' five-year-old daughter, Anna, was recently named Cutest Miss in the Little Miss Pageant. "I entered her for one reason; not with the thought that she would win, but to give her a time that was devoted just for her."

"I don't think receiving first place was that important to Anna," Tracy adds. "She was more thrilled at receiving a trophy whether it was for first place or last place."

"Our youngest son, Paul, is two and he naturally demands a lot of attention and our seven-year-old Cliff, is handicapped and requires constant care," Tracy emphasized.

Cliff was born with spina bifida, an open spine where the nerves are exposed. He is paralyzed from the waist down and wears a back brace and leg braces.

"When he was 17 hours old, he had surgery to close the lesion on his spine and at four weeks, he had a shunt placed in his head to avoid access spinal fluid to accumulate on his brain," Tracy remarked.

Cliff has had four operations since that time and the couple take him to Dallas every six months to be examined and evaluated by a team of orthopedic surgeons and urologists.

"We take him to Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas where, besides the physical examination, he also has his braces adjusted," she stated.

"This hospital has been a blessing for us. Other than our expenses commuting, and the expense for motel rooms and food, everything else is paid for."

"When we leave the hospital after a two day stay or five week stay, we don't owe them anything. The hospital is maintained by the Scottish Rite Masons which provides free medical care."

She continued, "Say that Cliff had to have surgery and was in a hospital for two or three weeks, the medical bill could easily amount to over $20,000. At Scottish Rite there would be absolutely no cost to the family."

"To date, that organization has saved us about $150,000 in medical fees," she said.

"Some people don't realize that if they have a disabled child that all they have to do is obtain a disabled contract application from any Mason."

Although there have been many frustrating and worrisome times with their seven-year-old son, it has brought the family closer together. "We all take extra time and care with Cliff and Anna is very sensitive to his needs. But like any other brother and sister, they do argue."

The couple belong to Wesley United Methodist Church where Tracy is director of the children's choir. She is also treasurer of the Young Mothers' Study Club.

"Our family is always on the go and I like to prepare easy meals," she added. She explained that her husband, who owns Neill's Body Shop, has erratic working hours and it's difficult to know when to start preparing a meal. One dish which is easy to make and tastes good reheated is Impossible Bacon Pie. Tracy mentions that this is a modified recipe and a variety of meats and cheeses may be substituted.

IMPOSSIBLE BACON PIE
12 slices of bacon, crisply fried and crumbled (other meats may be substituted)
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
One-third to 1/2 cup chopped onion
1 cup Bisquick baking mix

4 eggs
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
Heat oven to 400 degrees. Grease 10 inch quiche dish or pie plate. Sprinkle bacon, cheese and onion in plate. Beat remaining ingredients until smooth. (15 seconds in blender on high or 1 minute with a mixer)
Pour into pan and bake until knife inserted between center and edge comes out clean. (Usually about 34 to 40 minutes). Cool for 5 minutes.

Fathers honored Tuesday night

Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 honored fathers with a covered dish supper Tuesday evening. Chad Fitzgerald made and decorated a cake which was enjoyed by Ben Conklin, C.D. Fitzgerald and David Rettman.

A brief business meeting was conducted with 23 visits, nine cheer cards, two flowers and three dishes to the sick reported.

Members were reminded of District 5 meeting scheduled Monday in Friona. Also a district meeting June 27 in Muleshoe was scheduled. Jesselee Velie, president of Rebekah Assembly of Texas, will make her official visit.

A letter was read from Frances Parker of Breckenridge, a member of the Hereford Lodge and former resident of Hereford.

Others attending included Glessie Shelton, Anna Conklin, Lavita Fitzgerald, Susie Curtsinger, Verna Sowell, Martha Bridges, Ada Hollabaugh, Peggy Lemons, Beth Hall, Edna Mathes, Irene Merritt.

Also, Faye Brownlow, Nellie Beauford, Merle Booser, Karrol Rettman and Leona Sowell.

"See me for all your family insurance needs."

Women's Organization meets for luncheon

St. Anthony's Women's Organization held their final meeting recently with a mass, meeting and luncheon. The six members who were received into the Confraternity of Christian Mothers during the annual morning mass were Mmes. James Glueck, Tommy Walch, Leander Reinart, Jr., Tommy Weaver, Glynn Yosten and Billie Stubbs.

Mrs. Eddie Artho presided over the meeting when members decided to enter a float in the Town 'n' Country Jubilee parade scheduled in August. An ice cream social to welcome newcomers in the parish was also planned for the latter part of August.

Plans were not yet finalized for the Vacation Bible School which is to be held in July. Hattie Gallagher reported that 18 cheer cards were sent to members during May. The new edition of St. Anthony's Women's Organization cookbooks have arrived. They can be obtained from Martha Lueb, Connie Backus, Karla Vasek, Grace Paschel and Sandra Burrus.

Hostesses, Pat Simmacher, Christine Marnell, Clara Reinart and Jerline Bartels, served a luncheon to 31 members and guests. SAWO will reconvene in September with a salad supper as the highlight of the evening.

Convention planned in Albuquerque

Thirteen Spanish-speaking congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses from the northern part of New Mexico and the Panhandle of Texas are preparing to attend a week-end convention in Albuquerque on the campus of Albuquerque High School June 18 and 19.

The program begins at 9:55 a.m. daily and will continue until 4:15 on Saturday and 4:30 on Sunday. All sessions are to be conducted in Spanish.

The main theme for the convention will be "Be Rich Toward God, Not Covetous." The theme will be emphasized throughout the convention by constructive discourses and demonstrations and will be highlighted by the main lecture on Sunday at 2 p.m. presented by F.L. Aleman, a traveling representative for Jehovah's Witnesses from Brooklyn, N.Y. The theme for the special discourse will be: "Is the World Doomed for Ruin?"

The Newspaper BIBLE

CAN A BABY BE BORN OF A VIRGIN?

Zacharias stayed on at the Temple for the remaining days of his Temple duties and then returned home.

Soon afterwards Elizabeth his wife became pregnant and went into seclusion for five months. "How kind the Lord is," she exclaimed, "to take away my disgrace of having no children!"

The following month God sent the angel Gabriel to Nazareth, a village in Galilee, to a virgin, Mary, engaged to be married to a man named Joseph, a descendant of King David.

Gabriel appeared to her and said, "Congratulations, favored lady! The Lord is with you!"

Confused and disturbed, Mary tried to think what the angel could mean.

"Don't be frightened, Mary," the angel told her, "for God has decided to wonderfully bless you! Very soon now, you will become pregnant and have a baby boy, and you are to name Him 'Jesus.' He shall be very great and shall be called the Son of God. And the Lord shall give Him the throne of His ancestor David. And He shall reign over Israel forever; His Kingdom shall never end!"

Mary asked the angel, "But how can I have a baby? I am a virgin."

The angel replied, "The Holy Spirit shall come upon you, and the power of God shall overshadow you; so the baby born to you will be utterly holy--the Son of God."

"Furthermore, six months ago your cousin Elizabeth--the barren one, they called her--became pregnant in her old age! For every promise from God shall surely come true."

Mary said, "I am the Lord's servant, and I am willing to do whatever He wants. May everything you said come true." And then the angel disappeared.

Luke 1:23-38

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 16, the 167th day of 1983. There are 198 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 16, 1963, the world's first female space traveler, Valentina Tereshkova, was launched into space by the Soviet Union.

On this date:

In 1917, the first All-Russian Congress of the Soviets was convened.

In 1920, the Council of the League of Nations held its first public meeting at St. James Palace in London.

In 1971, the U.S. Senate voted against a plan calling for total American troop withdrawal from Vietnam by the end of the year.

In 1976, U.S. Ambassador Francis Meloy and his counselor, Robert Waring, were kidnapped and killed in Beirut, Lebanon.

Ten years ago: Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev arrived in the United States to begin a nine-day visit.

Five years ago: The new Panama Canal treaties were formally signed at ceremonies in Panama attended by President Jimmy Carter.

One year ago: Reagan administration officials said Israel had given its assurance that its troops would not seize Beirut.

Today's birthdays: Newspaper publisher Katherine Graham is 66. Former major league baseball star Ron Leflore is 31.

Thought for today: "A state from which religion is banished can never be well-governed." -- Pope Leo XIII (1810-1903).

Leonardo Da Vinci could draw with one hand and write with the other, almost simultaneously.

The first television broadcasts were made in England in 1927 and in the U.S. in 1930, but regular broadcasting did not begin until 1939 in New York City.

Group may seek to overturn approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national Hispanic organization says it may ask a court to overturn the Department of Education's approval of a Texas plan for desegregating its public higher education system, the nation's second largest.

"We are still considering going to the judge, because we don't believe they've turned over a full plan," said Norma Cantu, an attorney for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, which has sued in U.S. District Court to force desegregation of the Texas college and university system.

The department on Wednesday announced approval of the Texas desegregation plan despite earlier objections from MALDEF and the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund that the plan was inadequate.

Elliott C. Lichtman, an attorney for the NAACP Fund, which is also involved in the suit, said one option "would be to request that the judge direct the agency to revoke its approval" of the plan.

However, Lichtman and Ms. Cantu said no decision has been reached to take such action.

"I just can't at this point say what we'll do next," said Lichtman, who in a letter to the department last month had referred to the Texas plan as "completely inadequate" and "in fact, not a desegregation plan at all."

In announcing approval, Harry M. Singleton, the department's assistant secretary for civil rights, said that "I believe this plan includes many fine elements which, when implemented, can achieve important desegregation objectives."

However, in a letter to Texas Gov. Mark White, Singleton said acceptance was contingent on Texas providing "adequate funding" for the plan, approval of the plan by the various Texas higher education boards and early completion of several studies and proposals related to the plan.

Failure of Texas to meet the three requirements would invalidate the department's approval, Singleton said.

Lichtman, who said he had not yet seen Singleton's statement, commented that "if it's the same plan we objected to, our objections remain exactly the same."

Lichtman also said that "if (approval is) contingent on future funding, that just underscores the impropriety of accepting this plan..."

Ms. Cantu said that MALDEF had "mixed reaction" to the plan's acceptance, pleased that a plan will take effect but unhappy with its shortcomings.

"The mixed reaction comes from the fact that we've only gotten half a plan," said Ms. Cantu. "There are so many components of the plan that are missing."

The complex, 170-page plan was submitted by Texas on May 9 in response to an order from Judge John H. Pratt, who is hearing the suit and who had instructed the department to begin enforcement proceedings against Texas if it did not submit an acceptable plan by that date.

With 105 colleges and universities and more than 667,000 students, the Texas system is the nation's second largest behind California's, according to education officials.

It receives an estimated $300 million annually in federal aid, some or all of which could have been eventually jeopardized by failure to submit an acceptable plan.

The plan makes a broad range of commitments aimed at upgrading programs at the state's two traditionally black institutions, Texas Southern University and Prairie View A&M University, and increasing minority enrollments at traditionally white ones.

It also commits the state to increasing the number of minority employees in the higher education system.

"Though it has made steady progress in eliminating ethnic disparities, the state feels this plan sets out in concrete fashion how further progress can be achieved," Texas said in its plan.

In comments submitted to the department, the NAACP, Fund and MALDEF contended the plan was short on specific programs and did not assure adequate funding to carry out desegregation.

Singleton said the plan "includes the essential ingredients of an acceptable desegregation plan" but that Texas "must continue to monitor and evaluate closely and continuously the desegregation efforts..."

Under the plan, the state committed itself to improving physical facilities, salaries, recruitment, scholarships, academic programs and counseling at the two traditional black institutions, according to education officials.

More than $135 million was to be spent at Texas Southern University and over $111 million at Prairie View, including programs underway, the officials said.

As adults grow older, less energy is needed to keep the body functioning.

Ann Landers

Helpful information provided

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In one of your recent columns a lady said she had sent for your booklets about teenage sex and discussed them with her girls.

Your booklets would like something that would be very helpful to me and my 12-year-old daughter. I would like to order them but the column did not give the cost of the booklets or any other details.

May I order them through this letter and send you a check? Or, will you print this for the benefit of others like myself who are very much interested? — Flint Reader

DEAR FLINT READER: Below is a list of the Ann Landers booklets. They may be obtained by writing to Ann Landers, at P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing coin or check. Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for each booklet requested.

An aside to those readers who may feel this is a crass commercial venture: All revenue I get from these booklets is turned over to charity.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need to know the answer to this question: Will a flasher molest children?

The man is in his late 20's, never married and lives with a maiden aunt. He never has had a date nor has he had any sexual encounters that anyone knows about.

He has a history of flashing women in parks, shopping centers and parking lots. What do the experts say about this? — Worried In Philadelphia

DEAR WORRIED: The experts say flashers are almost always incontinent. They get their jollies by exposing themselves, but are seldom able to do more.

Of course, these people are sick and should be reported. The public has a right to be spared from such sights.

DEAR ANN: The letter by the dad who "kept his kids in line" with the razor strap reminded me of the wise words of Nietzsche: "Distrust all in whom the impulse to punish is powerful." — Cambridge Reader.

DEAR C.B. (sounds like Harvard): Thanks for those words of wisdom. Self-righteousness to me is one of the gravest of all sins.

Drive through market saves time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Customers can't pay cash or squeeze the tomatoes, but there's no waiting in line at the checkout counter in California's latest car-related convenience, the Phone-In Drive-Thru Market.

Customers call in their shopping list to the 3-week-old grocery store, choosing from a catalog that lists 4,000 items. Orders are punched into a computer, then transmitted to workers who pull groceries from shelves. The computer also determines the sequence so employees don't have to backtrack, and items that crush easily — such as bread — are picked up last.

Three hours after orders are called in, customers can pick them up by punching their telephone number into a small terminal outside the market. The computer directs them to loading zones where workers put the bags into cars and present an itemized bill.

So far, between 60 and 100 customers a day are visiting the West Los Angeles store, which market officials say could process up to 300 orders an hour.

But hundreds more are calling for catalogs, and market founder and president Ron Cameron said he hopes eventually to be serving 6,000 customers a week for gross sales of $150,000 to $300,000 — the same volume as regular supermarkets.

Surveys show that customers spend an average of about half an hour inside regular supermarkets, and Phone-In Drive-Thru promises to have bags loaded two to five minutes after the client arrives.

"It doesn't cost them any more money and it will save them time," Cameron said Wednesday. "As far as we know, this has never been done before anywhere."

But success in car-oriented California is essential. "If it doesn't work here, it probably won't work anywhere," said marketing vice president Dave Burs-teen.

The market is in a 37,000-square-foot warehouse beside the San Diego Freeway.

Payment is by personal check only, plus a $1.50 service charge for each order. Cents-off coupons are credited to a customer's next order, and the market will home-deliver missing items free of charge.

The Hot Dog Vendor

There was a man who lived by the side of the road and sold hot dogs. He sold very good hot dogs. He put up signs along the highway and advertised in the newspaper telling how good they were.

He stood on the side of the road and cried:

"Buy a hot dog, Mister?" And people bought.

He increased his meat and bun orders.

He bought a bigger stove to take care of his trade.

He finally got his son home from college to help him out.

But then something happened. His son said, "Father, haven't you been listening to the radio and watching TV?"

There's a big depression. The foreign situation is terrible. The domestic situation is worse."

Whereupon the father thought, "Well, my son's been to college, he listens to the radio and watches TV and he ought to know."

So the father cut down on his meat and bun orders, took down his signs and cancelled his newspaper ads and no longer bothered to stand out on the highway to sell his hot dogs.

And his hot dog sales fell almost overnight.

"You're right, son," the father said to the boy.

"We certainly are in the middle of a great depression."

77-year-old shoeshine man takes pride in work

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Charles Kylandezes is a "natural man." In seven decades of experience, he has become a master of a disappearing craft — shoeshining.

Since he learned to clean his own shoes as a boy in San Antonio, Kylandezes has spent many of his days bent in concentrated dignity at the feet of his customers in barbershops and at his little stand.

Kylandezes considers himself a "natural" because much of what he has learned in life "came" to him.

"That's how I learned to play the saxophone," he said. "I have rhythm and timing and if I hear a piece, I can play it my way."

Kylandezes explained he blows as well as ever, but the cigarettes he started smoking a few years back have robbed him of strength. He is 77.

Being a barber "came" to Kylandezes, too. In the years he worked at barbershops, he observed the cutting, taking in every technique used.

Later, while working as a porter at old Kerrville State Hospital, Kylandezes was asked to be a barber.

"They didn't have no barber for Negroes there and they sent me along to the hospital shop to learn how," he said. "In three days, the barber there told them he couldn't teach me nothing because I already knew all there was to know."

Kylandezes has the highest praise for his customers over the years. They have been kind to him. One gave him a saxophone when his was stolen and another helped him buy a car.

But not all his customers have been polite and Kylandezes turned his sense of humor on one man who didn't believe in Kylandezes' restorative powers on leather.

"This man came in the shop and I asked him if he wanted a shine," Kylandezes explained. "He said they was his work boots and I couldn't do nothing for them. I said I could and he just said 'No,' so I told him I'd give him a free shine. He got right up in the chair then."

Kylandezes went to work. Shortly, the man's left work boot was gleaming.

Kylandezes stopped and told the man he was through.

The incensed customer left, but another man coming in saw the departing man and compared the shined and unshined boots. He then wanted Kylandezes to work on his shoes.

A bad accident in 1969 helped develop Kylandezes' stronger "faith in the Lord," he said.

Kylandezes' dog, Visitor, also "came" to him. He opened the door of his closet-sized shop one evening a few months ago and found a tiny ball of fur on the step.

"You know if you open your door and look down and see that you might say, 'I've got a visitor.' That's how I come to name him."

The companionship is worth more than money to Kylandezes.

His wife is dead. He says he hasn't heard from his son in a long time. His daughter lives in Houston with her husband and children. They come to visit sometimes.

His life is focused on leather. He said he likes his quiet spot because he can concentrate on refurbishing shoes and boots people bring to him.

Kylandezes ran his long, brown fingertips over a superlative shine on a pair of antique boots as he talked about his standards of quality.

"Sometimes people come in and give me some boots or shoes to work on and tell me to do what I think needs to be done," he said. "When they come back, I tell them their boots are out on the rack."

"They say they can't find them. I'll go out and show them their shoes and they'll be pleased," she said. "I like to please them, but mostly I'm worried about pleasing me when I work."

HEALTH Low blood pressure

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR LAMB — About two years ago my husband, 66 years old, began fainting. The first time he blacked out he had gone to the bathroom to urinate. He always passed out while standing.

During his regular medical checkup his blood pressure was so low when he was standing that the nurse couldn't get it. He was put in the hospital and a lot of tests were done. I take his blood pressure and it is normal or even high while lying down.

It may be 198 over 115, but when he stands it falls to 70 over 40. He gets weak and faint. He doesn't faint anymore because when he feels weak he sits down immediately and waits for his blood pressure to build up.

The doctor says he has orthostatic hypotension. He is treating him with Florinef. He also has an aneurysm in his abdomen. Do you have any suggestions that could help us?

DEAR READER — The term orthostatic hypotension really means low blood pressure on standing. It is often associated with absent or diminished sweating and in men it may cause impotence.

In the classic case these changes are thought to be caused by some abnormality in the sympathetic nervous system that controls the ability of the arteries to dilate and constrict.

When a normal person stands up there is a rapid message from the nervous system to the muscles in the arteries in the legs to contract, thereby constricting the arteries. This keeps the blood from running out your arteries in your legs. Without that nerve reflex mechanism the blood does run out into the vascular bed. The pressure falls and there is not enough blood pressure to send sufficient blood to the brain. Fainting follows.

I am sending you the Health Letter 9-2, Fainting: Loss of Consciousness or Syncope, which explains why people faint. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Your husband may benefit from a pressure garment from his feet to his waist. Even elastic bandages wrapped from his ankle to his hip before he gets up can help. The external pressure helps prevent accumulation of blood in the legs. This helps prevent the fall in blood pressure and the fainting episodes.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns you mentioned that lecithin was a fat substance. Did I understand this correctly? I began taking lecithin to keep from having cholesterol in my veins. I did this on my own. Will the lecithin cause more fat and keep me from losing weight? I do notice that losing 10 pounds is harder now than before. I thought lecithin dissolved fat and helped you eliminate it from your body.

DEAR READER — You understood me correctly. Lecithin is a chemical compound. We know it is made up of fatty acids and glycerol just as other fats are. The main difference is that it contains choline. When you swallow lecithin it is digested like other foods. The choline is split off in your intestine and none of the whole lecithin compound ever gets into your circulation.

Instead the fatty acids, choline and glycerol are absorbed. If your body needs choline it may be useful. If it doesn't, it won't be. I doubt the small amount (I hope) of lecithin you are taking would make much difference either way on your body fat. And lecithin does not help people lose weight.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have just learned that many homosexuals are having some kind of a new disease and there is no known cure for it. We have a good friend who is a homosexual and visits our family occasionally. I would like to know what the disease is and how we would know if he had it. Would it be easy to pick up from using a wash cloth or towel or handling dishes or silverware?

DEAR READER — You probably mean AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome. And while it occurs in homosexuals, it also occurs in people who are not homosexuals, such as natives of Haiti. Also, it is not common even in homosexuals.

The disease is an acquired loss of the body's normal ability to provide immunity against infections. As a result, common infectious organisms can overwhelm the body's defenses and death may occur.

It is not easily transmitted. We don't know too much about how it is transmitted, but it is evidently transmitted through blood. You may have read about a child who developed it apparently from a blood transfusion.

There is no reason to think you or your family would be apt to catch this disease from your friend because of a friendly visit.

Orders to start or stop classified ads in The Brand must be submitted by 3 p.m. the day prior to publication. Deadline is 3 p.m. Friday for Sunday's edition. Call 364-2030 for further information.

Candle wax challenge

DEAR POLLY — During the Christmas holidays, a large candle dripped on my shag carpeting. This wasn't noticed until the wax had already hardened. I've tried chipping parts of the candle wax off to no avail. Any hints on how to remove this mess without ruining the carpet? — EVELYN

DEAR EVELYN — You'll have to soften the wax with heat to remove it from the carpeting. First, try aiming a hair dryer at the wax just until the wax has softened. You should then be able to gently scrape up much of the softened wax with a dull knife. Then cover the remaining wax with several layers of paper towels and iron over it with a warm iron. Be careful not to burn the towels or carpet with the iron. The wax should melt and be absorbed into the paper towels. Change the towels frequently as they become saturated with wax, continuing until all the wax has been removed. Treat any remaining stain with a little rubbing alcohol (test in a hidden spot first) or a drycleaning type spot remover.

For more help in removing wax stains and other spots and stains, I'm sending along a copy of "Polly's Guide to Spots and Stains." Other readers who would like a copy of this booklet may send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10101. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — If you grow a large crop of cherry tomatoes, wash them, then freeze them whole in plastic freezer bags or freezer containers. When you want to use them, put the frozen tomatoes in a cup and cover them with hot water for a few seconds. Then drain. The skins will slip right off. These are great to use in soups, casseroles and other cooked dishes. — JOLENE

DEAR POLLY — While cleaning the house with a disinfectant cleaner, I always take time to wipe off the telephone — especially the mouthpiece. This kills germs and helps keep the incidence of colds and flu down. — MRS. G.L.

Chinese have own cemetery

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Chinese cemetery seems as misplaced in the middle of the nation's most Hispanic large city as the Cantonese language that is spoken each Sunday to about 50 parishioners at El Paso's Grant Avenue Baptist Church.

The 81 graves inscribed with Chinese writings in Concordia Cemetery reveal the richness of Oriental influence in El Paso, where Grant Avenue pastor Isaac Chan conducts Sunday school classes and sermons in his native Cantonese.

A church interpreter translates Chan's sermons into English for the younger Chinese-Americans who don't speak the Chinese dialect.

"Most people don't know El Paso has such a strong Chinese past," said Helen Chan, the pastor's wife.

El Paso, a border city where Hispanics make up 62 percent of its 450,000 residents, may seem an unlikely site for Chinese culture, but children of the estimated 600 Chinese-Americans in Texas' fourth-largest city still can learn the language, artful dances and hymns of their Far East homeland.

Cantonese and Mandarin Chinese language classes, the main Chinese dialects, periodically are offered by the church to the public.

"There aren't any more opium dens like there used to be, but we do try to teach our children the language and ways of China," Mrs. Chan said.

In the 1880s, about 900 Chinese lived in El Paso, then a city of 8,000 that coveted the coming of the Southern Pacific railroad. The 18 laundries were owned by the Chinese, and opium smoking dens were so common in Chinatown that a city ordinance was passed prohibiting public consumption of the narcotic.

"Chinatown's ... opium dens and gambling halls (are) a hazard to the health of the entire community," an El Paso newspaper said. Two dollar fines were meted out to violators.

Chinatown, across the river from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, also became a smuggling hotbed for Chinese who had been turned back by U.S. immigration authorities because of the 1882 Chinese Exclusion Act.

Congress was told the 50,000 Chinese who came to California after the 1849 gold rush would rob Americans of jobs, so the act was passed.

Chinatown "was a honeycomb of underground passages, believed to be used for hiding 'mail-order' brides and the illegal aliens who were smuggled into the country from Mexico," historian Nancy Farrar said.

Few Chinese women initially came to America, staying behind until their husband could send for them or return with savings from his work. El Paso city records in 1910 show only two females among the 325 Chinese.

Chinese legally couldn't enter the United States until 1943, when President Franklin Roosevelt repealed the Exclusion Act to thank the Chinese for their military assistance during World War II.

Chew Din, born 93 years ago in Canton and an El Paso resident since 1915, went to China after the Exclusion Act's repeal to bring back his wife and daughter. He currently is the Chinese community's elder citizen.

Some of Din's contemporaries are buried in the walled Chinese cemetery, where names of the deceased — such as Carlos Chio and Alberto Cuan — date to the turn of the century when Chinese first intermarried with locals.

Marrying Mexicans once was tantamount to ostracism from the powerful Chinese tongs, or fraternal groups, that operated in El Paso's almost wholly male Chinatown. But El Paso's Chinatown died away in the 1950s, as did the rigid ban against intermarriages, restaurateur Noon Pon said.
