Schools apply for grant to help dropouts

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The Hereford public schools will apply for a $24,000 grant that could lead to day care being provided for school-age students who have dropped out of school but would like to go back.

If guidelines can be adopted to meet school board concerns and if the grant is approved, the program could be in place sometime in October. That would allow up to 12 students not currently in school to attend the last five six-weeks of the year.

The school district, working with the Texas Department of Human Services (DHS), attempted to contact as many drop-outs as possible from lists from Hereford High School and Hereford Junior High.

Those names were compared to lists of names of recipients of services from DHS. Those persons were then sent a letter asking for permission for Blanca Hernandez, who conducted the survey, to interview them. From 419 prospective candidates, 117 interviews were completed.

Of 113 who responded, 76 indicated they had completed at least one grade in high school. Twenty of the 108 who gave an indication said they would like to return to high school for a diploma, while 88 said they would try to get a general equivalency diploma (GED).

"We would like to work with the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) to see if they could qualify for GED training with JTPA funding," said school official Corky Lockmiller.

The survey also indicated that 79 of the 117 persons interviewed were receiving some type of aid from a government agency. Many of the 79 were receiving aid in two or more areas including Medicaid, food stamps, unemployment benefits, housing assistance, AFDC, JTPA or WIC.

The board is not opposed to the program, which would place the students in "core" classes but also focus on teaching vocational skills. Some board members expressed fears that the program might be abused, especially the child-care services which would be provided by outside day-care providers.

"No one is against helping someone who wants to help themselves," said board vice president Kathy Moore. "I would hope that someone who would use this just for a babysitting service would be weeded out by grades.

"We need specific guidelines, because if we don't have specific guidelines something will be overlooked. We need to be strict, but no one is against this program as long as (the prospective students) put out some effort."

Nena Veazey, director of special education for the Hereford schools, reviewed a pilot project being used at Aikman Primary School to assist students with learning disabilities.

In the past, these children were pulled out of their regular classroom to go to another room where they received general assistance in problem areas. Under the pilot program at Aikman, they stay in their regular classrooms as long as possible, staying in the "mainstream." When they need help, they are given passes so they can seek help from a special teacher.

The program is being directed by Aikman principal John Poindexter, who modified a program used in Carrollton schools to fit Aikman's needs.

Parents of 15 Aikman students involved in the program have already met with school officials and have given their blessings to the project.

"We tended to pull these children out of social studies and science," Veazey said. "We don't want to pull them out of their core classes, but we have help for them during school ... tutoring before and after school, and their 'regular' teachers are working with the special education teachers."

"This has taken some training with the children," Poindexter said. "We want to teach these children that it is okay to go and ask for help."

The board also approved a five-year instructional technology plan which would eventually have a computer laboratory at each Hereford campus and a computer in every classroom. Based on current prices, that could amount to almost $500,000 over the next five years for equipment, software and training.

Lockmiller said it was "mega bucks," but emphasized that the district would exhaust all alternative funding sources to try to fund the program.

The board also reviewed the Pegasus program for gifted and talented students in first through sixth grades. Elva Devers explained how a battery of tests is used to determine placement in the program. G-T teacher Mary Robinson reviewed some of the subjects tackled in the program.

The Pegasus program features group training in various areas, enrichment in subject area, and student selected subjects and projects.

The enrichment program teaches matter not normally taught to students at elementary levels, Robinson explained. For instance, the students study Latin, the basis for the Romance (Roman-based) languages including a fair amount of the English language. They also study computer programming, do laboratory work and geometry, among other subjects and depending on the level of the students.

"The main focus of the program is to make children want to learn," Robinson said. "We want them to be life-long learners."

The board also honored Tierra Blanca secretary Yvonne Simpson and Tierra Blanca teacher Dorothy Brownlow as the employees of the month, and accepted a bid from Whiteface Ford for a new pickup.

Walking to safety

A man clutches a young child while other persons emerge from a car and walk to safety after their car was flooded in a lake in the San Jose Labor Camp area southwest of Hereford on Tuesday. The driver was attempting to cross the lake when the car quit running because of the high water and left the car, and occupants, stranded in the lake. In the lake with the family is Hereford volunteer fireman/police officer Kirk Spain, while other emergency personnel were on hand to help in case of trouble. Hereford has officially received just over an inch of rain in the past three days, but unofficial reports have ranged up to over 3 inches.

East Germans protest open border

BERLIN (AP) - East Germany's Communist leaders are demanding that Hungary stop allowing East Germans to flee to West Germany by the thousands in an exodus that is draining their labor pool of young, skilled workers.

About 11,000 refugees had arrived by Tuesday night and West German border officials said the mass trek to the West may have peaked. There were indications East Berlin had begun restricting travel to Hungary.

The refugees have traveled by car, train and bus through Austria to their new homeland since midnight Sunday, when Hungary suspended a 1969 agreement with East Germany and opened its border to the refugees.

The border officials said the number of refugees, who are granted automatic citizenship in West Germany, could top 15,000.

In West Germany, the new arrivals crowded relocation camps and were greeted with plenty of job offers.

The exodus comes at a time of dramatic change in the East bloc. Poland has installed the bloc's first non-Communist government, and Hungary's leaders are promising free elections.

West Germany and Hungary have worked together to coordinate free passage for the East Germans, and that has added to the strain in relations between those countries and East Berlin.

It is the first time an East bloc nation has assisted in an exodus to the West of citizens from a Warsaw Pact ally.

On Tuesday, Yegor Ligachev, a hard-line member of the Soviet Politburo, arrived in East Berlin for a visit indicative of Moscow's concern.

In a statement he issued with East German Politburo member Werner Krollikowski, Ligachev accused West Germany of "slander, enticement and luring away" East Germans.

East German leader Erich Honecker's prolonged recovery from gall bladder surgery has complicated the situation. Communist Party officials acknowledge that decision-making in East Berlin is virtually paralyzed as a result.

East Germany's state-run news agency, ADN, said Tuesday the government issued a formal protest to the Hungarian Foreign Ministry in Budapest and demanded the flood of refugees be stopped.

"The German Democratic Republic expects the immediate rescinding" of Hungary's decision to "unilaterally suspend" parts of bilateral agreements on border controls, ADN said.

An estimated 50,000 East Germans were reported in Hungary Tuesday on tourist visas, which have traditionally been relatively easy to obtain.

However, sources say East Germany police officers are now turning down many more applications for tourist visas to Hungary than they are approving.

The sources say the offices are filled nearly every day with applicants. No official figures are available on the number of East Germans waiting for a judgment on their visa applications.

Most of the East German emigres are young workers and their families who say they left their homeland because of repression and frustration over the government's refusal to adopt political reforms.

Many of the emigres have traveled directly to relatives in West Germany, while others are being temporarily put up at refugee camps.

At a crowded tent city in Tiefenbach, bulletin boards with scores of job notices have been set up.

Brady urges more saving

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration is gearing up for a major campaign to encourage Americans to save more money and urge U.S. companies to make long-term investments rather than chasing fast-buck takeover deals.

"We've been willing to mortgage our future, to sacrifice quality and to cut corners in the pursuit of the immediate payoff," Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said Tuesday night. The United States needs to make fundamental changes in its economic affairs or risk losing out to international competitors, he warned.

Brady indicated the administration is considering ways to expand tax incentives to encourage individual savings, proposals to eliminate the double-taxation of stock dividends and initiatives that would encourage corporate managers to focus more on long-term performance.

"Our approach to the challenges of the 1990s and beyond should be to maintain our competitiveness where it's strong and to rebuild it where it has faltered," Brady said in a speech billed as the opening salvo in the administration's new campaign.

Brady said other nations are challenging America's economic leadership because the country has grown complacent with too many corporate executives chasing quick profits rather than investing for long-term performance.

"It worries me when I see many of the best minds in America concentrating on financial engineering rather than laying plans for sound corporate strategies for the future," Brady told members of the American Business Conference, who were invited to dinner at the Treasury Department.

Brady's comments received a generally warm response from the executives.

American Stock Exchange Chairman Arthur Levitt Jr. told Brady that many of his suggestions were similar to proposals by the Business Conference, which earlier this year called for a major government effort to boost the nation's savings rate to lower the cost of capital for U.S. businesses.

Brady, however, conceded that the administration hasn't found an answer to the key problem raised by the proposals - how should they be funded.

Suggestions to expand tax-deferred savings plans such as Individual Retirement Accounts could cost $15 billion over five years, while any proposal to eliminate the double taxation of corporate dividends might cost as much as $40 billion annually.

The 1986 tax law sharply curbed IRA tax benefits for workers who make more than $40,000 a year and are covered by a company retirement plan.

Brady said the administration is currently wrestling with the cost question. He said final decisions probably will not come until President Bush presents his next budget to Congress in January.

Here's a G-T 'test'

Here's an example of a "test" given to elementary students in the Pegasus gifted and talented program in the Hereford schools. Not all "tests" are this humorous, but it's one way to introduce vocabulary words for geometry to younger students. Each of the 10 questions can be answered using one of the words listed at the bottom of the "test." See how many you can name.

1. That which Noah built.
2. An article for serving ice cream.
3. What a bloodhound does in chasing a woman.
4. An expression to represent the loss of a parrot.
5. An appropriate title for a knight named Koll.
6. A sunburned man.
7. A tall pot perking.
8. What one does when it rains.
9. What a little acorn says when he grows up.
10. What you do if you have yarn and needles.

Here are the answers in random order: hypotenuse polygon arc inscribe tangent unit geometry coincide center circle cone (Note: one of the words won't be used. Good luck! Answers on Thursday).

Inside today's Hereford Brand:

- Hereford almost set a new low temperature record this morning with a low of 41 degrees. The record is 40, set in 1959. See the forecast in Local Roundup, Page 2.

Local Roundup Reports are investigated

Incidents investigated by the Hereford Police Department overnight were:

A domestic dispute reported in the 400 block of Ave. B; a dispute between in-laws; theft of a ring reported at a local convenience store with a 16-year-old juvenile suspect; theft of gasoline reported at a local convenience store; and charges are pending for a reported case of assault.

The Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office received one report of a bicycle stolen from the 100 block of Dayton Street.

City police issued nine citations and investigated two minor accidents. The Hereford Volunteer Fire Department responded to two fire calls, both minor.

Arrests made by county officers were a man, 22, on a warrant for violation of probation and a man, 51, for indecency with a child.

City officers arrested one man, 18, for driving while intoxicated.

Senior parents to meet

Parents of seniors at Hereford High School will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the HHS auditorium.

Parents of all of this year's seniors are urged to attend this important meeting.

Forecast: a little warmer

Tonight will be cloudy and not quite so cold with a 40 percent chance of showers and a few thunderstorms. The low will be 45, with northeast winds 5-15 mph.

Thursday will be mostly cloudy and a little warmer with a 40 percent chance of showers. The high will be 65, with northeast winds 10-20 mph.

This morning's low at KPAN was 41 degrees, just one degree above the record of 40 degrees set in 1959. Tuesday's high was 62 degrees. KPAN had recorded .94 inch of rain in the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today.

Kiwanians honored Tuesday

Several Hereford Kiwanians were honored Tuesday at the annual installation banquet at the Hereford Community Center. Five Kiwanians, above, received the Legion of Honor Award from the Texas-Oklahoma District for 25 years or more of service and made them life members. They include, from left, Dean Herring, Jim Arney, Bub Sparks, Wayne Phillips and Bartley Dowell. Dick Montgomery, left, was named the Workhorse of the Year by the Hereford Kiwanis Club. He was honored for his work as chairman of the triangle garden project at the intersection of U.S. Highway 385 and Lee Street in Hereford. Officers for both Hereford Kiwanis clubs were also installed Tuesday.

World/National

AT THE BALLOT BOX - David Dinkins defeated New York Mayor Edward Koch in a bid to become the city's first black mayor, while Detroit Mayor Coleman Young won a primary victory that could catapult him into a record fifth term. Pete Geren narrowly won the Texas seat left vacant by House Speaker Jim Wright.

BERLIN - East Germany's Communist leaders condemn Hungary for draining their labor pool by letting thousands of East Germans flee to West Germany, where officials say the exodus may have peaked after more than 11,000 arrivals.

WASHINGTON - The Bush administration wants to accept 50,000 Soviet refugees plus another 6,500 from Eastern Europe and to phase out processing offices in Vienna and Rome, U.S. officials and sources in the American Jewish community say.

WASHINGTON - The White House is asking Senate Democrats to compromise on anti-drug legislation, while President Bush warns young people not to "blow it" by getting involved in drugs.

WASHINGTON - Democratic leaders say House approval of a bill outlawing flag-burning weakens the push for a constitutional amendment on the issue, but President Bush and others vow to fight for their politically more strident approach.

WASHINGTON - Commonly used high school textbooks neglect the impact of religion on American history and provide little insight into the thinking of such major figures as Abraham Lincoln, an analysis released today by a teachers' organization said.

HONG KONG - One of China's most wanted dissident intellectuals, the author of the controversial "River Elgy" television series, escapes China and says the many people who aided him are all in "extremely dangerous situations."

WASHINGTON - Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, in seeking a higher U.S. savings rate, is firing the opening round in an expected major initiative by the Bush administration to boost U.S. international competitiveness.

WASHINGTON - After months of criticizing President Bush's proposed capital gains tax cut as a giveaway to the rich, Democratic leaders are offering an alternative for "average folks" - a return to tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts.

State

FORT WORTH - Democrats held onto the District 12 congressional seat they've considered their own for more than three decades by electing former congressional aide Pete Geren, a political rookie, to replace deposed House Speaker Jim Wright. Geren took 51.03 percent of the vote Tuesday to beat Republican Dr. Bob Lanier, a TV medical commentator, who had 48.97 percent.

GRAND PRAIRIE - Five years after her sudden death, the body of a wax museum owner's secretary was exhumed by authorities who want to find out whether she was poisoned. The museum was later destroyed by fire.

LUBBOCK - A 43-year-old U.S. Supreme Court precedent is one of the most important factors in the trial of D.L. "Danny" Faulkner and six others as the jury begins its 15th day of deliberations today.

Democrats push tax-deductible IRAs

WASHINGTON (AP) - After months of criticizing President Bush's proposed capital gains tax cut as a giveaway to the rich, Democratic leaders are offering an alternative for "average folks" - a return to tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said allowing all workers to have IRAs would be a better way to encourage saving than the proposed capital gains cut.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., and Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, said they agree.

"The Senate and the American people now have a clear choice between competing plans to advance our economy," Mitchell said Tuesday.

"Cutting capital gains (taxes) is an investment incentive for a few, but the problem is broader than that," Bentsen said Tuesday in announcing his proposal. "With the IRA, we'd have the participation of a broad spectrum of middle Americans."

All workers were allowed fully deductible IRAs before passage of the 1986 tax overhaul. That law made them available only to workers not covered by a company pension, and to covered workers with incomes under $25,000 and couples under $40,000. Partial deductions are allowed couples with incomes under $50,000 and single people under $35,000.

Under Bentsen's proposal, a person could contribute up to $2,000 a year to an IRA and avoid current taxation on half the sum. The contribution and the interest earned would not be taxed until the money was withdrawn for retirement, tuition or making the down payment on a first home.

"This IRA affects average folks," Bentsen said. "It helps address three of the primary concerns of middle-income Americans, lower-income Americans: buying that first home, financing a college education or providing for one's retirement."

Bentsen outlined his proposal as the House Ways and Means Committee struggled to solve the capital gains issue, which has stalemated the panel for several weeks. The committee's 13 Republicans and six Democrats - a bare majority of the 37-member panel - favor a capital gains cut, which Bush has endorsed.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the committee chairman, has blocked a vote on the cut. Although he opposes a capital gains reduction, he is trying to develop a compromise that could win back one of the six dissident Democrats.

The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that as much as 80 percent of the benefits of the capital gains cut would go to those with incomes above $100,000 a year.

Nevertheless, Bush contends, the cut is necessary to encourage saving and job-creating investments.

Economists disagree on that argument, just as they disagree on whether IRAs encourage saving or simply reward those who transfer money from a taxable savings account into an IRA.

Neiman Marcus goes West

DALLAS (AP) - Neiman Marcus, seller of sumptuous fantasies for 81 years, is inviting its well-heeled clientele to put on a pair of spurs and recapture the Wild West.

The Dallas-based retailer Tuesday began delivery of its Christmas catalog, the annual wishbook of the wealthy. For one cowpoke with $108,000, Neiman Marcus will sell a hand-tooled saddle by Edward H. Bohlin Co., lavishly furnished with sterling silver and 18-karat gold.

A cowboy ain't a cowboy without a horse, so for $4,000 and up Neiman Marcus is offering a selection of champion bloodline painted horses from the Real Ranch in Kerrville. Buyers can choose from 1989 weanlings and up - from black to bay.

Those wishing to relive the great cattle drives of the Old West can reserve a pony to chase herd a weekend at the Y.O. Ranch, also near Kerrville. There is room for 150 people to attend the ranch's 110th anniversary in April 1990.

"I do not recommend this for pussymothers," said Jan Roberts, a Neiman Marcus spokeswoman.

To give prospective ropers across the country an equal shot at the event, Neiman Marcus has set 11 a.m. CDT Oct. 18 as the time it will begin taking reservations. The weekend costs $627 for a double occupancy room.

"Texas is really in right now,"

Ms. Roberts said. "From the president to Lonesome Dove, Texas and the West are in vogue. And because Neiman Marcus is from Texas, we thought we should get back to our roots and pay tribute to our heritage."

The catalog includes more whimsical gifts with a Western flavor, including teepee salt and pepper shakers and a replica of the badge deputized lawmen once fashioned.

In recent years, Neiman Marcus has offered a spangled cat, his-and-her mummy cases and giant hot air balloons.

The catalog always contains several pages of furs and a coat of Russian lynx bellies selling for $150,000 ranks.

For fisherman who can't wait to see what they are reeling in, an 8-foot glass-bottom boat is available for $1,800.

The catalog does not leave out the pet or pet lover. In a section titled "From Santa Paws," the catalog features townhouses for tomcats and beds for bulldogs along with a cat collar lined with fish-shaped pearls.

The 130-page catalog does not simply cater to those just under royalty either, Ms. Roberts said.

"This year we have six pages dedicated to gifts for $26 or less," she said.

Senior citizens are flexing muscles

Senior citizens today are exercising more frequently and in greater numbers than ever before. Exercise classes report record enrollments and senior aerobic video-tapes are selling briskly throughout the country.

Although virtually everyone agrees on the value of exercise for seniors, there is tremendous confusion as to the preferred form and frequency of physical activity. Health professionals concur on the following guidelines for seniors looking to begin exercise programs.

Select an activity appropriate to your interests and objectives. Although many people associate exercise with rigorous workouts in a health spa, such outdoor activities as swimming, cycling and jogging as well as dancing, lawn games and even gardening can provide health benefits.

Many sports medicine specialists believe that walking is one of the most useful exercises in which seniors can engage. Walking satisfies all of the prerequisites for senior citizen exercise, including cardiovascular development and overall toning, with minimal risk of injury.

"Intensive exercise is not a prerequisite of senior fitness," says Dr. Ann Ward at the University of Massachusetts Medical School's Department of Exercise Physiology. "In fact, we often advise a regimen of low-impact conditioning, such as that afforded by walking.

Be alert to physical conditions which require special attention. High blood pressure and diabetes, once very real impediments to senior citizen exercise, today can be managed by medication. Even incontinence, a condition affecting several million seniors in the country, can be controlled. "The introduction of discreet and comfortable absorbent products developed specifically for active adults has enabled a growing number of senior citizens to exercise free of worry," notes Lynn Trump, who answers a toll free "Helpline" for Suretys, which recently introduced a fashion panty designed for incontinent protection.

Decide upon a suitable environment. Many seniors enjoy the camaraderie of health spas or community centers, which feature structured classes, state of the art equipment and expert trainers. Others, particularly in warm climates, prefer to exercise outdoors, whether in groups or alone. The single most important factor is how comfortable your feel. If you are at ease in your exercise environment, you most likely will spend more time there.

Establish an exercise schedule. This schedule will necessarily vary with the type of exercise you have selected and with your physical condition, as determined by a doctor. For example, a senior in reasonably good health could conceivably walk one hour each day of the week. Remember that, in general, any exercise should be practiced at least three times a week in order to yield real health benefits. What type of activity to engage in, how often and where must be decided by anyone embarking on an exercise program. But there are several exercise-related concerns exclusive to seniors:

Most important is a full physical examination before undertaking any exercise program. A necessary component of such an examination is "stress testing." A stress test includes a cardiogram and blood pressure test in conjunction with a test of physical capability, measured on a bike or treadmill.

Warming up before sustained physical activity is particularly important for seniors. Simple stretching exercises can prevent muscle injury and improve circulation.

Be wary of exercises that place excessive strain on the heart, back or knees, particularly if there is a past history of injury.

By following these simple precautions, a sensible exercise program can be developed for any senior looking to give younger people a "run for their money."

Bride honored

Mrs. Scott Calkins was honored with a bridal shower Sunday afternoon in Ward Parlor of First United Methodist Church. Pictured with the honoree were (from left), her mother, Mrs. Dean A. Watson; the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Tony Calkins; and his grandmother, Mrs. Clifford Trotter.

Bridal shower held for Carol Calkins

Ward Parlor at the First Methodist Church was the scene of a wedding shower Sunday honoring Mrs. Scott Calkins, formerly Carol Watson of Midland.

Special guests recognized at the shower included: Mrs. Tony Calkins, mother of the groom; Mrs. Dean Watson, and daughters, Karen and Cassie, of Midland; and Mrs. Clifford Trotter, grandmother of the groom, of Amarillo.

The table was laid with a white cutwork handkerchief linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of pink carnations and aqua and rose colored spider mums. Mrs. Terry Langhenning and Mrs. Oveta White served refreshments of cookies, cheese wafers, cheese puffs, and assorted fruit plate.

Registering guests was the groom's sister, Kristen Calkins.

Hostesses were Mmes. Norman Gray, A.T. Mims, Terry Langhenning, Oveta White, Julius Bodner, Bobby Boyd, Steve Sobczak, John Stribling, Bill Bookout, Wesley Fisher, Virginia Holmes, Leona Kimball and Earnest Langley.

Brisendine serves as hostess

The North Hereford Extension Homemakers Club met Thursday in the home of Naomi Brisendine. County Extension Agent Beverly Harder spoke on Christmas gifts, caring and sharing.

Harder said "Handcrafted gifts are twofold to everyone concerned. For the giver there is satisfaction in creating and pleasure in seeing the gift appreciated. The receiver not only receives the gift but a portion of the heart."

The next meeting will be at the home of Martha Lueb.

Edith Higgins received a gift. Brisendine was hostess and members present were: Peg Hoff, Lueb, Evelyn Crofford and Edith Higgins.

Wagners serve as hosts for 42nd annual reunion

The 62nd Armored Field Artillery Battalion Association held its 42nd annual reunion at the Fifth Season West in Amarillo Sept. 7-9. The reunions have been held annually at various locations throughout the United States since 1947.

Hosts for the event were Lester and Viola Wagner of Hereford. There were 115 in attendance.

Fort Bliss in El Paso was the origin of the 62nd A.F.A.Bn. which was activated Feb. 10, 1941, from a cadre of soldiers from the First Cavalry Division, (horse drawn) field artillery and men arriving from the first draft or Selective Service.

The battalion went ashore at Casablanca, French Morocco in November 1942 and participated in the African Campaign. Members are veterans of two assault landings, "D" Day on Sicily and "D" Day on Omaha Beach. It served with five U.S. Armies, the First, Third, Fifth, Seventh and Ninth as well as the French and British Armies.

Among the many decorations, its men were awarded are seven Campaign Stars, six Legion of Merits, 38 Silver Stars, 19 Air Medals, 107 Bronze Stars, and 120 Purple Hearts, along with eight Battlefield Commissions. The battalion received seven Commendations with 20 Indorsements from the first, second, and third Infantry Divisions, first and second Armored Divisions, 18th and 19th Infantry Regiments and the fifth Armored Artillery Group.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband bought me a large bottle of expensive perfume last year for my birthday. I hated to use it a lot and kept it on a shelf in my bathroom, saving it for special occasions. It has evaporated a little and the color appears to be darker. The fragrance doesn't seem the same either.

I've always used the cologne in this particular brand. I love the scent and use it all the time. It didn't happen to the cologne. Is there something I should know about perfume to prevent this if I should receive another bottle? — Julie Young, Dallas, Texas

Well, we hope you do receive another one as a gift. Perfume should be used just as often as you use cologne. Don't save it for that special occasion. The shelf life of perfume is only about 12 to 14 months.

Heat will make a fragrance evaporate, and the more alcohol in the product, the shorter its shelf life. Storing perfume and cologne in the fridge is a good idea. Who doesn't love to splash on cool cologne?

Another good idea when purchasing perfume is to buy a small bottle and when that's used, get another. You won't be taking a chance of ruining a large amount of expensive perfume. — Heloise

PHOTOS OF CONSTRUCTION

Dear Heloise: After digging in my backyard for hours trying to find a pipe, I came up with this idea that may save other people all the aggravation and time involved trying to find something buried.

We are planning on building a new home in a few months and I'm going to take photographs of everything that goes underground, like pipes, wires and the septic tank.

Even though I will see everything going in, I may forget exactly where it is, and it will help any new owners in the future. — Tom Stanger, Little Rock, Ark.

Very smart and it may just save you when and if there's an "underground" problem.

It's so convenient to know where everything is if something goes wrong years down the road. Custom home-builders should do this for their customers. It certainly would help them.

Thanks for sharing your hint. — Heloise

Herd thumps Dunbar to claim early share of District 1-4A lead

The Hereford Whiteface volleyball teams got their first taste of home cooking in three weeks Tuesday as they opened District 1-4A competition with a 15-3, 15-5 win over the Dunbar Panthers at HHS Gym. The win upped the Herd's season record to 13-3 and took a share of the early district lead at 1-0 with Dumas, Borger and Estacado.

In the junior varsity contest, Hereford took a 15-1, 15-5 win.

In the varsity match, the teams went through a full rotation of serve tied at 3-3 before Nikki self tallied four points to run the score to 7-4, Hereford.

Libby Kosub added three points on her serve before Jill West hit on five straight for the 15-3 win.

Self opened the second game of the match with six straight points with Kosub and Shantel Cornelius adding one each and Poppy Richardson getting two to give the Herd a 10-2 lead.

Dunbar's Alicia Boswell cut the lead to 10-4 before Self scored twice more and Cornelius once. Kelli Thames served for the final two points of the match including an ace on match point.

For the match, Self was credited with 13 service points and four aces while Cornelius led with four kills and five stuffs to go along with three points on serve.

Kosub finished with four service points with an ace and had three kills and three digs. West scored five points on serve with an ace and a pair of kills and Richardson contributed three service points with an ace and three kills and a stuff.

Cande Robbins was credited with four kills and two digs while Krystal Sims added a kill. Thames' only scoring came on the match's final two serves.

"I'm very happy with our performance," Coach Brenda Reeh said.

"We used all our hitters very well and everyone got to hit the ball real hard. We also served very well, missing only one out of 45. We know we must serve in if we want a chance to capture the momentum."

"We also had a goal to maintain a high level of intensity throughout the match," she added, "regardless of the score or combination of players on the floor."

"Now our focus is on preparing to beat Dumas. We'll work hard on every aspect of defense and on mixing up our offensive attacks."

"We have to have nine players playing their best match of the year if we want to beat Dumas."

Herd JV vs. Dunbar

The Herd opened up a 4-1 lead in the first game with Jennifer Bullard and Jayme Moore each scoring twice. Dunbar's Angie Johnson scored the Panther's only point to make the score 2-1, but that was as close as it got.

Lori Sanders ran off 11 straight points with eight aces to end the game.

The Herd took a 2-0 lead in the second game on separate services by Brooke Seiver Before Renee Walker tied the score for Dunbar.

Robin White then scored four points on serve to five Hereford a 6-2 lead.

With the score at 9-5, Sarita Romero connected for the final six points of the match including four aces in the run.

The junior varsity finished the match with 18 service aces out of 30 points.

"This was a good match for us," junior varsity coach Lynn Gilbreath said. Every player got good quality playing time.

"We set the ball up well and maintained our level of play, but we'll be challenged when we play Dumas on Saturday. We'll have to put our skills to good use."

Going up

Shantel Cornelius (15) gets off the floor for a spike during the first game of the Herd's 15-3, 15-5 win over Dunbar Tuesday at the HHS Gym as Jill West (14) and Poppy Richardson (13) look on.

Hargrove may be next Tribe manager

CLEVELAND (AP) - In another year, the Cleveland Indians' late-season collapse wouldn't have mattered much. This year, it knocked them out of the race in the weak American League East and cost Manager Doc Edwards his job.

Edwards was fired on Tuesday and replaced for the rest of the season by special assignment scout John Hart.

Team president Hank Peters said Cleveland's inability to contend after getting within 1 1/2 games of first place in early August forced him to fire Edwards.

"I think they (Indians' players) had reached the point where they were satisfied with the type of baseball they were playing, and I wasn't," Peters said. "The thing that changed the perspective this year was the nature of the race in the East. We looked at the standings in August and said, 'My gosh, anybody can win this.'"

The Indians were 54-54 on Aug. 4. But in Edwards' final 35 games, they went 11-24, falling to a season-low 14 1/2 games off the pace at 65-78.

"It was pretty hard to make this decision. No one has shown more loyalty or dedication or worked harder at his job than Doc," Peters said.

Hart, 41, was formerly a coach and minor-league manager in the Baltimore organization, where Peters was general manager. Hart was the Orioles' third-base coach last year before Peters hired him as a Cleveland scout in November.

A leading candidate to be Edwards' permanent replacement is Mike Hargrove, a former Cleveland player who managed the Indians' Class AAA Colorado Springs affiliate this year. Hargrove and Hart will be among those considered for the job, Peters said.

Others outside the organization, including former major-league managers John McNamara and Lou Piniella, will also be considered.

Edwards was heading for his home in Great Valley, N.Y., and did not want to discuss his situation immediately, Indians spokesman Bob DiBascio said. Edwards was offered a chance to stay in the organization.

"He was a players' manager," said outfielder Cory Snyder, whose .222 average contributed to the Indians' problems. "He didn't have a lot of rules. He kind of put the lineup up and let us play."

"We've been going the wrong way the last five or six weeks. Sometimes you have to get on the players. He never got mad at us or yelled at us."

Hitting coach Charlie Manuel said Edwards' attempt to be fair to all his players may have been his undoing.

"Sometimes, I don't think our players knew how good he was to them, how fair he was to them," Manuel said.

Holdouts worth wait

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

It was the answer to an agent's dream. Deion Sanders, Barry Sanders, Anthony Carter and Greg Bell, all playing as if they hadn't missed a day of training camp, let alone five to seven weeks holding out.

To paraphrase an old saying: Wait 'til next week.

"Nobody said these guys aren't great athletes," general manager George Young of the New York Giants said after Sanders (Deion) returned a punt 68 yards for a touchdown after two days of practice with Atlanta, and Sanders (Barry) gained 72 yards in nine carries for Detroit.

"But next week," Young warned, "they'll be feeling the hits they took this week."

In fact, for every holdout who performed well Sunday, presumably justifying staying out of training camp, there were those who performed less than satisfactorily and those who simply weren't there.

So while Anthony Carter was catching seven passes for Minnesota after playing in only one exhibition game, and Greg Bell was running for 126 yards for the Los Angeles Rams, Tony Mandarich and his hefty salary stood on the sideline in civilian clothes in Green Bay and Pro Bowl tight end Steve Jordan, who showed up last week, caught just one pass for Minnesota - for a 2-yard touchdown.

Jordan, in fact, has already felt the hits.

He'll miss Sunday's game with the Bears with a sprained ankle, the same injury that has sent Wesley Walker of the New York Jets to the injured reserve list after holding out for 42 days. Those nagging injuries are the kind of things that last year turned All-Pro Mark Bavaro and Carl Banks of the Giants into all-duds after holdouts that lasted into the final week of training camp.

The perfect example of what can happen in such cases happened to Tim Worley of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Like Mandarich and Barry and Deion Sanders (Nos. 2, 3 and 5 in your draft order), Worley was a high No. 1 - eighth overall. He had played in the final exhibition game, so he was in his second game with the Steelers when he fumbled three times on Sunday, contributing mightily to a 51-0 loss to the Cleveland Browns.

But the most significant non-contribution from a holdout - one that didn't show up in your box score - may have been in Chicago. That's where Max Montoya, Cincinnati's Pro Bowl guard, didn't start and then was at less than his best. He reported just after the final exhibition game and because he doesn't play a skill position.

Starting at Montoya's left guard spot was another holdout - Bruce Kozerski, who usually plays center. He reported a week earlier than Montoya, and Kozerski's spot was filled by Paul Jetton.

Opposite them was Dan Hampton, a 32-year All-Pro with two bad knees and a very big heart. "He's a warrior," teammate Mike Singletary said.

In a game the Bears won 17-14, Hampton was the difference.

How to Spot and Prevent Gas Pipeline Emergencies

Natural gas is transported through a system of underground piping. These pipelines are installed and maintained in accordance with highest safety standards, but damage from outside forces can occur. If the pipes are struck or disturbed by excavators or by natural disasters such as floods or tornadoes, personal injury or property damage could result.

You can help prevent or minimize pipeline emergencies by keeping in mind the 3 R's of Pipeline Safety:

RECOGNIZE a pipeline emergency:

- Hissing or shrill SOUND.
- Unusual BLOWING dirt or dust.
- Persistent BUBBLES in water.
- DYING PLANTS amid healthy ones.
- Distinctive SMELL, if odorized.
- FIRE or EXPLOSION near pipeline.

REPORT a pipeline emergency:

Phone the Natural Gas Pipeline 24-hour line: 1-312-691-3399. Call COLLECT.

RESPOND to a pipeline emergency:

- Evacuate the area immediately.
- Avoid potential ignition sources.
- Warn others to stay away.
- Phone Natural.

YOU CAN PREVENT PIPELINE ACCIDENTS:

- Call BEFORE you dig, drill, or doze.
- Watch for our signs at road, railroad and river crossings, at fence lines, ditches and other sites.
- For no-cost location of ALL underground facilities, call the Texas Excavation Safety System (TESS) at 1-800-DIG-TESS. Please call 48 hours in advance.

White Sox pound Baltimore, 11-1

By The Associated Press

Chicken a la King will never replace crab cakes as a Baltimore specialty even though Eric King is making a specialty of beating the Baltimore Orioles.

The Chicago White Sox dined on Oriole a la King Tuesday night as King beat Baltimore for the third time this season and Ivan Calderon, Carlton Fisk and Scott Fletcher homered in an 11-1 slaughter.

The Orioles, however, weren't doing any laughing since the setback prevented them from gaining ground in the American League East. They remained two games behind Toronto, which lost to Minnesota 8-2.

"I don't know what it is. It just happened to be them," said King, 8-9, who yielded only three hits in seven innings.

The Orioles didn't understand it, either.

"When he's bad he beats us. When he's good he beats us," batting coach Tommy McCraw said. "There's always one guy who wears you out. I'm sure there's nothing you can put your finger on. I'm sure if Nolan (Ryan) knew, he'd change."

It was King's fourth start against Baltimore. He has held the Orioles to five runs in 27 1-3 innings. Ironically, the Orioles are 3-0 against Ryan this season and have beaten him nine straight times.

Elsewhere, it was Milwaukee 7, Oakland 6; Kansas City 6, Texas 5; Cleveland 1, Detroit 0; Seattle 5, Boston 3 and California 7, New York 6.

While King was raising his career record against Baltimore to 6-1, the White Sox had seven runs, 10 hits and 15 baserunners in chasing three Baltimore pitchers, including No. 1 draft choice Ben McDonald, by the end of the fourth inning.

Twins 8, Blue Jays 2

Kent Hrbek had a grand slam and a career-high five RBIs and David West won for the third time in four starts since arriving in the Frank Viola trade.

West yielded six hits and struck out a career-high seven in seven innings.

Toronto's Todd Stottlemyre gave up nine hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Brewers 7, Athletics 6

Greg Vaughn's three-run homer capped a five-run fourth-inning rally and Dan Plesac tied a club record with his 97th career save as Milwaukee came back from a 5-0.

The A's took a 5-0 off Chris Bosio in the second inning, which included RBI singles by Dave Henderson and Mike Gallego and sacrifice flies by Rickey Henderson and Jose Canseco. Canseco also homered in the eighth.

Don August allowed one run in five innings of relief before Plesac came on and tied Rollie Fingers' club record for career saves.

Royals 6, Rangers 5

Pinch hitter Pat Tabler greeted Texas reliever Kenny Rogers with a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, nullifying 13 strikeouts by Nolan Ryan.

Frank White doubled leading off the ninth. Rogers relieved Ryan and yielded Tabler's second home run of the season.

Rick Luecken, the fourth Kansas City pitcher, was the winner despite yielding a run in the top of the ninth on a two-out walk to Jack Daugherty and Fred Manrique's RBI double.

Indians 1, Tigers 0

Jerry Browne singled home the game's only run in the eighth inning and Bud Black pitched a five-hitter.

Black walked two and struck out four.

Loser Frank Tanana pitched a six-hitter but Joel Skinner led off the Cleveland eighth with a single and pinch runner Tommy Hinzo was sacrificed to second by Felix Fermin. Browne then singled to right-center, scoring Hinzo.

Mariners 5, Red Sox 3

Greg Briley hit a two-run homer and Jay Buhner had a two-run double.

After Mike Greenwell doubled a run home in the top of the first, Seattle scored three times in the bottom of the inning.

Winner Scott Bankhead yielded two runs and six hits in 5 2-3 innings and Mike Schooler came on in the eighth for his 28th save.

Angels 7, Yankees 6

Wally Joyner's RBI single with two out in the ninth lifted California within four games of first place in the AL West.

Claude Washington doubled with one out off Chuck Cary. After Devon White flied out, Chili Davis was intentionally walked but Joynr singled to score Washington.

New York tied the game against Angels relief ace Bryan Harvey in the top of the ninth on Luis Polonia's two-run single.

Cubs pulling away in NL East race

By The Associated Press

The best race in the National League East right now is for second place. The Cubbies are waving goodbye.

Mike Bielecki pitched a two-hitter - allowing no hits over the final seven innings - and the Chicago Cubs beat Montreal 2-0 Tuesday night to take a 4 1/2-game lead over St. Louis.

The third-place New York Mets are 5 1/2 out and the Expos trail by six.

"It looks like there's a race for second place right now," Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog said. "We need about six shutouts in a row and have to hope we can win them."

The way the Cubs are playing, that probably wouldn't be good enough.

The Cubs, who most observers thought would fade in June, have won four straight and five of six heading down the stretch.

Bielecki gave up a leadoff single to Tim Raines in the first inning and a single to Tim Wallach with one out in the second.

"I've never pitched a better game but it could have gone either way," said Bielecki, whose previous best effort was a three-hit, 4-0 shutout against Los Angeles on July 19.

"Mike Bielecki pitched a helluva game, the best I've ever seen him pitch," Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said. "We didn't have a shot at him. Bryn Smith pitched a winning type of game but it wasn't good enough against a guy like Bielecki."

Bielecki, 16-6, and Smith, 10-9, were locked in a scoreless duel when Vance Law opened the fifth with a single and moved to third on Shawn Dunston's double.

Smith retired Rick Wrona on an infield pop and struck out Bielecki. Jerome Walton then swung at a 1-0 pitch that eluded catcher Nelson Santovenia and Law scored an unearned run on the passed ball.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Pittsburgh 5, St. Louis 2; Philadelphia 2, New York 1; Atlanta 6, San Francisco 5; San Diego 9, Houston 0 and Los Angeles 5, Cincinnati 4.

Ryne Sandberg led off the eighth inning against reliever John Candalaria with his 30th homer to give the Cubs a 2-0 lead. Sandberg became the first second baseman to hit 30 home runs in one season since California's Bobby Grich did it in 1979.

Pirates 5, Cardinals 2

Bob Walk allowed five hits in 8 2-3 innings.

Walk, 13-10, gave up a single to Milt Thompson with two outs in the ninth and Bill Landrum relieved. Pedro Guerrero then hit his 15th homer.

Joe Magrane, 18-8, lost for the first time since July 25.

Phillies 2, Mets 1

Dickie Thon homered with one out in the ninth inning.

Reliever Don Aase, 1-5, retired pinch-hitter Len Dykstra on a popup to start the ninth, before Thon hit a 2-2 pitch over the left-field wall for his 13th home run - tops among NL shortstops.

Roger McDowell, 4-6, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory.

Braves 6, Giants 5

Dale Murphy hit a three-run homer off Steve Bedrosian to cap a five-run Atlanta rally in the eighth inning.

Murphy hit Bedrosian's second pitch over the right-field fence for his 19th homer after Kelly Downs faltered in relief of Rick Reuschel. Jay Aldrich, 1-0, pitched three innings for the victory.

Padres 9, Astros 0

Bruce Hurst pitched a two-hitter for his ninth complete game and Roberto Alomar drove in four runs.

Jim Clancy, 7-12, entered the game 4-0 with a 1.74 ERA against the Padres this season. This time, he allowed five runs and six hits in four innings.

Dodgers 5, Reds 4

Pinch-hitter Mike Marshall's bases-loaded, two-run double with none out in the ninth inning off Rob Dibble, 8-5, rallied Los Angeles.

Jay Howell, 5-3, who allowed two runs in the eighth, pitched two innings for the victory.

Vincent could be elected today

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Fay Vincent's election as baseball commissioner could come as soon as today.

The executive council on Tuesday unanimously recommended that Vincent fill the remaining 4 1/2 years of the late A. Bartlett Giamatti's term, and attempted to move up the vote on his election to today.

The executive council, consisting of the two league presidents and four club representatives from each league, met for 3 hours, 15 minutes and did not reveal its decision.

Sources familiar with the meeting said Vincent, Giamatti's deputy commissioner, had no opposition.

The election of Giamatti's successor was scheduled for a joint meeting of the American and National Leagues on Thursday.

Rich Levin, a spokesman for the commissioner's office, said an attempt was being made to schedule a joint meeting for today.

AL president Bobby Brown and NL president Bill White emerged from the meeting after two hours and Brown read a brief statement on behalf of both.

"The executive council will make a recommendation to the leagues tomorrow but in deference to the rights of all the owners, will not make any announcement until that time," he said. "I'm sorry we can't make any comment. I'm sure you'll understand why."

Baseball's executive council has been running the sport since Giamatti's death on Sept. 1 following a heart attack. A commissioner can be elected only during a joint meeting of the leagues and must receive three-quarters of the votes, including at least five from each league.

Vincent, 51, who headed Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. for almost a decade, arrived at midday Tuesday for the meeting and later said the council revealed its decision to him. He would not confirm it, however.

"We worked hard," he said as he left the meeting. "It was the agenda Bart and I put together. It was substantial business and we went through it."

Vincent, a former securities lawyer, has been working on baseball's new international broadcasting contract. A source, who asked not to be identified, said the contract will be presented to owners for approval Thursday.

Zimmer finally becomes a 'genius'

CHICAGO (AP) - With all the plastic plugs already embedded up there, it's a wonder Don Zimmer has room enough in his head for all the wacky notions that zip through it.

But - snap! crackle! pop! - zip through it they do.

And - biff! bam! boom! oops! bunt! - the Chicago Cubs keep turning over trump cards for the gamblingest manager still making a living in baseball.

"I've been around a long time and I never played for a manager quite like Zim. He likes to play risky baseball," Andre Dawson said Tuesday night before the Cubs subdued Montreal's Expos 2-0, widening their National League East lead to 4 1/2 games.

"Suicide squeeze, safety bunt, hit-and-run, just about anything any time."

"I've seen him hit-and-run with the bases loaded, and I've only seen that twice in my entire career," Dawson added, shaking his head. "Zimmer - both times."

In fact, no part of the team is safe from that bowling ball - at 5-foot-7, a diet has brought his weight back to 190 - in chubby, Cubby blue pinstripes.

Zimmer uses the hook on his pitching staff with a zeal unmatched since vaudeville, thinks nothing of taking the ball from his most consistent late-inning reliever in mid-count and handing it to his wildest, and already doled out more intentional passes this season than the backers of a Broadway play roasted by the critics on opening night.

He plugs rookies and retools into the lineup in the heat of a race with equal aplomb, then tilts back the chair in his office until it - and his back - are against the wall and waits for the second-guessers to beat down the door.

"If I never do nothing, I can't get criticized. But because we do so many things, we're going to get caught looking pretty silly some times."

"So what am I supposed to do, fold up the tent? Let me tell you something," he continued. "Nothing I do out there is going to affect how I sleep at night."

If Zimmer were taking such chances with a last-place team, it would be one thing. But doing it in a race with already-certified geniuses Whitey Herzog of the Cardinals and Davey Johnson of the Mets on his tail is another.

Yet, from whence all this daring springs is anyone's guess. Here, however, are several theories:

- Zimmer's own round, nearly bald head was splintered 36 years earlier by a beaming in the minor leagues - the plastic plugs hold together his cranium - and the delayed reaction is just now becoming apparent.

- The 1978 Boston Red Sox club he managed blew a 14 1/2-game lead while Zimmer stood pat, losing the AL East crown to the Yankees in a one-game playoff that made Bucky Dent a folk hero - and the delayed reaction is just now becoming apparent.

- After being fired from the same job in San Diego, Boston and Texas, and either leaving or being shown the door to the coaching box in Montreal, San Diego, Boston, New York (Yankees), Chicago and San Francisco, Zimmer figures there are another 20 cities where he might still find a job.

- Necessity. "I didn't have to make no moves (in 1978), I almost couldn't make any because I had nine guys there having great years."

"But all the moves with this team are made out of necessity," Zimmer said. "I had three outfielders go on the disabled list early, otherwise I might never have seen (Dwight) Smith and (Lloyd) McClendon."

If truth be told, a surprising number of his fits have been nearly perfect - as this past weekend proved again.

Earlier this year Zimmer shrunk his starting rotation from five pitchers to four, and after splitting the first two of a three-game series against the close-pursuing Cardinals, changed his mind yet again.

Just before Sunday's game, arguably the most important one of the season, Zimmer decided to give ace Greg Maddux an extra day's rest and so elevated rookie middle reliever Steve Wilson, a lefty, to

No. 5 starter. The last time Zimmer did that, Sept. 1 against Atlanta, Wilson failed to retire a batter.

Impulsive? Not exactly. Turning St. Louis' most dangerous hitters to the right side, Wilson promptly struck out 10 and the Cubs won going away.

Maddux, a right-hander, then mowed down Montreal's right-handed muscle on Monday and what could have been a close shave in the NL East began to show some stubble.

OLYMPIC PROS
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Karl Malone, the star forward of the Utah Jazz, didn't like it one bit when Russia won the gold medal in men's basketball in the 1988 Olympics.

Malone was asked if he would play if NBA stars were allowed to represent the United States in future Games. He said he would even play his way to Barcelona for the 1992 Olympics if the professionals were allowed to compete.

"What annoyed me," he said, "was watching the Russians high-fiving one another as though they had beaten America's best."

'Long term' has less value in our system

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - As John Tuccillo sees it, the long term holds less and less value in our American economic system. Money now, not later, is more important, even if it might diminish personal or business longevity.

Look around and see the evidence: College coaches suspended for trying to buy success, elected officials throwing away careers, well-paid brokers and some executives jailed for manipulations.

All, says Tuccillo, have this in common: They sacrificed a very good long-term situation by succumbing to the temptations of the moment. They had it good, but it wasn't good enough. They couldn't take the time.

In a sense, he suggests, the values of these folks aren't much different from those of the drug seller or drug user, both of whom cannot resist the temptation of "now" while diminishing the chances of a long life span.

Tuccillo is a business economist and, he insists, these are economic considerations. Specifically, he is a real estate economist, and he believes the "now" mode of thinking can damage real estate sales.

In his fears he has plenty of company, including President George Bush and Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, who are examining ways to build long-term incentives into the business system, the better to compete.

While Americans are accustomed to hearing of easy money and quick results in sports, the underworld, lotteries, corrupt politics and entertainment, they sometimes fail to realize that it prevails elsewhere too.

In business, he relates, "the prominent figures, no longer make cars or steel or produce petroleum products. Today Ford, Carnegie and Rockefeller are Donald Trump and Carl Icahn, guys who makes deals, not sedans."

He concedes there are some executives, such as Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, who may be viewed as exceptions. But, he notes, "Chrysler makes more of its profit from financing cars than it does from making them."

All this, he suggests, is a product of the incentives systems permeating our society and economy. Reward structures have become increasingly short-term in focus, benefiting consumption at the expense of building for the future.

"Government service is no longer viewed as a long-term career, as it is in Japan or Europe, but a two-year steppingstone to big consulting contracts," he says. Even some business activities that appear long-term "are more on the order of rearranging the deck chairs," involving debt and sales of assets.

Consumers are no exception. Says economist Tuccillo: "We want what we want when we want it, and if achieving that requires spending more than we earn, so be it."

What has this got to do with real estate? Well, it's hurting home sales. By now, everyone has heard that first-time buyers find it difficult to afford a house. It's hard on them, no doubt - but reason to give up?

Based on past experience, it isn't. In the past, families somehow managed to buy against what might appear by today's standards to be insurmountable odds. They would have bided their time, worked and saved.

Business Briefs

Business briefs from the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce:

Dean Turney is the new manager of Higginbotham-Bartlett Lumber Co. Dean and his wife Becky and family have moved her from Earth.

Congratulations to Gilbert Tijerina on the opening of the all new Hereford Meat Market at 411 N. 25 Mile Ave. . . Montye Gafford has moved here from Dumas and will be the new assistant manager of Furr's. . . Cordia Sossaman is the owner of Sam's, a new liquor and beverage store at 511 N. 25 Mile Ave. . . Congratulations to Scott Keeling on the expansion of Keeling Cattle Co. feedyard west of Hereford. . . Gene Hicks moved here from Tucumcari as the new manager at K-Bob's Steakhouse. Gene replaces Sam Macias who moved to Hobbs. . . Michael and Cindy Pottorff have moved here from Hays, Kan. Michael is employed with AgriPro and Cindy is a school teacher. . . Micah and Debra Nash moved here from Amarillo to open the new Rainbo Bakeries Warehouse. . . The new Park Avenue Bowl is nearing completion with a Sept. 25 opening being planned.

Economic Development Chairman Bud Eades has announced that updated booklets are available for use by local residents to assist with economic development. The booklets, entitled "Facts About Hereford and Deaf Smith County", can be used as tools by local residents as they travel and make contacts with prospects in other cities.

The Farmers Market has expanded to two days a week. The market is open 5 to 8 p.m. on Thursdays and 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays. Those interested in booth space should contact the chamber office.

The chamber's next Fun Breakfast is scheduled Thursday, Sept. 21 at 6:30 a.m. in the Community Center. Co-chairmen John Stagner and Charlie Bell have some special plans for the event, which is to be co-sponsored by Olney Savings. Everyone is invited--call the chamber office and make reservations!

Solutions, quality, service are keys to Poarch Bros.

From two-man blacksmith shop to 50-man force with national reputation, company has grown with Hereford

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

From a two-man blacksmith shop of anvils and a hand-cranked forge, Poarch Bros., Manufacturing has spawned into a 50-man work force geared for production needs of mainstream America.

Tucked near the intersection of U.S. 60 and Holly Road, Poarch has built a nationwide reputation of producing custom designed solutions to unique problems, and they do it in steel.

Factory headquarters includes 30,000 square feet of men and machines forging products for people, a point on the west edge of Hereford where progress is the cutting edge of business. Off to one end of the factory, welders were giving a delicate manicure to a 50-ton rock crusher towering nearly two stories high. A few yards to the left, a metal finisher was putting his best touch to a high-tech drive coupling.

"When we find or discover a need, we try to solve it," said A.L. Black, owner of Poarch Bros. Manufacturing, Inc. "If there's not a need, we don't build."

While reflecting on the success of the Poarch firm, Black pointed out that from the very beginning 42 years ago the company has stressed service and quality in custom work. "We service everything we build and everything we build will give the ultimate in service."

Though the manufacturing company was built on the needs of Hereford's agribusiness community, Poarch engineers and craftsmen have moved into areas of national marketing and distribution, from the fabrication of a rather small inexpensive metering device to high-security products for the nation's defense systems. And there are a number of Poarch devices which evolved from custom application to standardized and commercially-produced products, such as the Poarch Portable Hydraulic Winch primarily designed for the company's own installation crews and the Poarch Bell Conveyor.

"The Poarch reputation has been built primarily through helping customers solve problems, such as custom-built feed mills, feed manufacturing facilities, grain storage complexes, food processing plants and individual needs for heavy industry," said Black, as he summarized nearly a half century of work. "All of these many segments of industry have technical problems unique even to a particular product being handled. . . Poarch Bros. has developed a number of products which were found to have far broader application than the specific job for which they were originally intended."

One of the newest products coming out of the Poarch factory is the Poarch SA Coupling. It's designed to take the shock from the drive-train of any mobilized vehicle. Simply put, the patented shock absorbing rotary coupling provides a high density urethane cushion between the universal joint and the drive shaft. The urethane coupling cushion initially was designed to absorb torque shock of the drive shaft in the big 18-wheelers. But now, the unique unit is being applied to a wide range of mobilization, from the roadside grass cutters to heavy industry.

At the other end of the factory, as an example of production extremes, giant concrete and rock crushers are being stitched together with five-eighths plate and faultless seams of molten metal. A pilot rig was specifically designed for Jake Diel Construction Co. of Hereford and Amarillo to grind giant chunks of reinforced concrete into powder of pebbles. The crushing hopper alone weighs more than 20 tons, with the steel plate shell doubly reinforced with a second layer of hardened steel having the maximum erosion resistance.

This machine, which dwarfs the men who built it, levels off on the road at around 13 feet, 6 inches high, measures 65 feet long and weighs more than 60 tons. Despite its massiveness, the rock crusher is highly mobile and can be moved from site to site with the aid of a fifth-wheel system for its triple-axle frame. In addition to its crushing capabilities, the rig is also capable of separating concrete from iron reinforcement materials, spitting out steel from one lip while chomping rock with the other. Its radiator cooling system is about the height of a man, with a 400-horsepower diesel putting everything in motion.

Though not as prolific, the hydraulic reservoir segment of the factory has become a key leg of the business. Almost every shape and size of hydraulic reservoir imaginable is built at Poarch. T-shaped, L-shaped, flat-top, box-shaped. . . you sketch it and they'll build it, then cut out custom-built accessories to fit the needs.

Though Poarch sort of honed its edges on the High Plains cattle feeding boom of the 1960s, the Hereford-based company is continuously seeking new and better systems in servicing the vast beef business. One such device is the new Poarch Round Steam Cabinet, a new design for the old mills, most of which have been in operation for more than 20 years. As an example of the efficiency and effectiveness of the new steam cabinets, a local feedmill operator reported that one new Poarch unit was providing ample steam for one-third additional grain rollers and producing about one-third more finished feed than two older steam cabinets that had a combined capacity of the new rig.

Ken Walser, president and general manager of Poarch Bros. Manufacturing, pointed out that servicing the food manufacturing plants and the livestock feedmills remains a major facet of the steel fabricating company. "We have mobilized crews equipped to meet any needs of the High Plains cattle feeding industry," said Walser, a native of Hereford. "Cattle feeders have always been a very important segment of Poarch

...owner, Poarch Bros. Manufacturing

Bros. and will continue to be so in the future."

From tiny sketches in a drawing room to the finished products on the factory floor, Walser runs the show, but managerial status is maintained at a low profile among both employees and customers. "When we come up with a job, we give it to our employees and tell them to do it," said Walser, as he stepped from aisle to aisle in the big building. "We try to have as little supervision as possible in that each worker already knows that he is to do the very best job possible, and that's what they do--the best job possible. Each of our employees take great pride in their craftsmanship."

The sound of metal against metal rose from the factory floor where spots of fiery arcs silhouetted the hooded welders. Confident faces reflected a new age in metal fabrication where man is now working the machine. There was a time when brawn of the blacksmith forged the edge of progress with a two-pound hammer.

In recalling the beginning of the Poarch Bros Manufacturing Co., Hoot Poarch pointed out that he was born on the old M Bar Ranch out northwest of Wildorado, a spread that is now owned and operated by a well-known ranchwoman, Nancy Binford. However, when he was only 3, his parents, Charlie and Mary Poarch, moved to Sayre, Okla.

In 1936, just as the dust was beginning to settle from a five-year blow, Hoot Poarch came into Hereford looking for a job. He wound up on steel-lugged tractors at a dollar a day. . . Model D John Deeres, the old 15-30 Internationals, the Twin-city rigs, the once-popular Olivers and J.I. Case's red-orange wheatlands.

War lords sounded the cry of battle as the decade of the 1930s wound down and two Hereford men, Hoot and Earl Poarch, reported for work in a Naval shipyard at Vallejo, Calif. Thirteen days after the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, Hoot Poarch arrived at the bombed-out port with a volunteer civilian work force to repair and raise the crippled ships. Some of the ships which Poarch helped in putting back in operation included the USS Oklahoma and Nevada.

"We actually worked on the whole fleet during the two years I was at Pearl Harbor," recalled Poarch, who is now semi-retired in the cattle business at Georgetown, Tx. He still acts as a special consultant on various factory jobs and was in Hereford this week looking at a new job.

Earl Poarch died in 1984. Poarch later served a stint with the Air Force and following the war, he and his brother, Earl, returned to Hereford where they bought a small blacksmith shop at 119 Lee Street. "The building we started in was a little wooden building about the size of this office," said Poarch. "But we outgrew this right away."

Poarch noted that the main business of the day in those first years were the sharpening of lister shares, plow points and rolling oneway discs.

"Irrigation was beginning to boom about that time so we moved real fast into the irrigation business," said Poarch, as he told of the old cable-tooled water drilling rigs that were man-handled into drilling position before the coming of the hydraulic systems. This was also the time of the old carbide welding units that frequently exploded with the whim of the weather. "We never had one to explode but we've had them to walk around a little," Poarch added with a chuckle.

"I guess we built a million feet of irrigation pipe for W.D. Jones," Poarch noted, as he recalled the Hereford irrigation boom of the 1950s. "We built the first jack-knife drilling rig in Hereford--we had been using those old telescope rigs. . . it would take two days just to guy-line them out. But with the new rigs, the drillers could go out and drill a 300-foot well and be back in town by sundown. The jack-knife rig made Mr. Jones a very successful driller."

The business grew with the agribusiness industry and in 1957, the Poarch brothers moved to the present location on Holly Road where they built an initial 10,000-square-foot building. An addition in 1975 increased the factory to 20,000 feet, with the headquarters now boasting 30,000 feet. In 1980 a machine shop serving the general public was added along with additional shop and warehouse units. In 1981, the office was remodeled into its present size where office personnel handle volumes of paperwork that is order of the day for patented manufactured products and devices. Black pointed out that all files are kept intact through the years so that customers can easily relate to former work. In addition to a workforce of craftsmen, the company also has a computerized drafting system to backshop the drafting tables.

In showing early relationships between his investments and Poarch Bros., Black related the growth of Friona Feedyards and Poarch. "When we decided to build Friona Feedyard in 1962, we contacted Poarch Bros. to build forms for our feedbanks and from there they started doing all of our steel fabrication," said Black. "then as Friona Feedyard grew, eventually grew into Friona Industries, Poarch also continued to grow and do all of our fabrication."

"Then when the brothers (Poarch) decided to liquidate their company, it had become sort of mutual understanding that we at Friona Industries would have first option in buying."

When Poarch was bought by Friona Industries in 1976, the Hereford factory became a subsidiary of Friona Industries but continued as separate entity. In February 1982, Black retired as chairman of the board of Friona

Texas Business Today

Business Council to begin statewide tour of seminars

Dear Readers: I hope that many of you attended our previous Texas Business Council meetings and are ready to join us for the third round of these informative, cost cutting seminars.

You may recall that the Texas Business Council was formed in 1987 and was designed to facilitate cooperation and communication between private business and state government. The objective of the Council has always been to provide information on laws and state regulatory procedures while showing taxpayers how to save money, time, and frustration in dealing with government.

This year, we have a record number of state agencies participating on the Council, all of whom will have representatives at the meeting in your area who can talk with you personally and answer any questions you might have. There will be presentations from: Texas Employment Commission, Texas Commission on Human Rights, Texas Department of Commerce, State Purchasing and General Services Commission, Comptroller of Public Accounts, State Board of Insurance, Texas Land Commission, Texas Water Commission,

COMMISSIONER

TEXAS BUSINESS TODAY

Texas Rehabilitation Commission, Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, Texas Association of Private Industry Councils and the Texas Department of Human Services.

The Texas Business Council Fall/Spring schedule is as follows:

- September 28, 1989 - Beaumont
- October 11, 1989 - McAllen
- October 26, 1989 - Austin
- November 10, 1989 - El Paso
- December 1, 1989 - Houston
- January 10, 1990 - Corpus Christi
- January 25, 1990 - Fort Worth
- February 9, 1990 - San Antonio
- February 28, 1990 - Dallas

- March 1, 1990 - Dallas
- March 9, 1990 - San Angelo
- March 23, 1990 - Lubbock
- April 6, 1990 - Longview

Those of you who are on my mailing list and receive the Texas Business Today monthly newsletter will automatically receive an invitation/registration to the Texas Business Council meeting for your area. If you are not on my mailing list and wish to receive a registration form for the meeting, just drop me a letter at the address below.

This is the most comprehensive outreach project ever attempted by state government. Past response has been overwhelmingly positive and enthusiastic. I know you will find the program informative and useful and I look forward to seeing you when the Texas Business Council arrives in your area.

Mary Scott Nabers represents all Texas employers. If you have any questions you want answered, please write Commissioner Nabers at: TEXAS BUSINESS TODAY, 614 TEC Building, 15th and Congress, Austin, Tx. 78778.

Teamwork stressed by firm

Industries and in an effort to have "something to do" he opted on a stock swap and acquired full ownership of Poarch Bros. During the growth of Friona Industries, Poarch built all of the livestock feed-producing equipment for Friona.

A native of Eastern New Mexico, Black moved to Parmer County in 1944 when he began developing holdings in farming and the cattle industry. Later, he and a group of investors elected to launch Friona Feedyard, with Jack Corruthers as general manager.

"Poarch Brothers played a very important role in building Friona Industries by being able to furnish the technology and the fabrication knowledge that we needed to build such a unit," said Black. He pointed out that he was chairman of the Friona group in the building, then when the company went public in 1972, Corruthers was named chairman and upon Corruthers' death in the late 1970s, Black returned as chairman of the board of Friona Industries. He is not connected with the firm now in any way and has his corporate headquarters in Hereford.

Walser, a son of Guy and Rebecca Walser, was reared in the Hereford community and graduated from West Texas State University in 1966. He and his wife, Jan, have a daughter, Jill. Mrs. Walser is choir director for Hereford Junior High and Hereford High School. She is also pianist for the First Baptist Church of Hereford.

Walser said he began working part-time as a draftsman for Poarch Bros. in 1964 while still a student at WTSU. Following graduation and a tour of duty in Vietnam, he joined Poarch as a career employee and is now in his 20th year with the Hereford firm.

"There is just no other place like Hereford and no other company like Poarch," said Walser, who pointed out that the entire staff at Poarch works as a team. "We stress teamwork throughout our company and give each individual the liberty or freedom to do his best in whatever job he's doing."

The list of commercial feedmills built for the High Plains cattle feeding industry is impressive, to say the least: Champion Feedyards, Paco Feedyards, Southwest Feedyards, Hi-Pro Feeds, Bovina Feedyards, Friona Feedyards, Cactus Feedyards, Easley Feedyards, Coronado Feedyard, XIT Feedyard, Cimmarron Feeders, Stratford Feedyards and the rebuilt Bar-G Feedyard mill.

Walser noted that in addition to handling service work for the vast grain and cattle industries, they also handle extensive work for Southwestern Public Service Co. His list of customers showed that the Poarch work force has been on top of about every grain elevator in the Panhandle.

A relatively new division of the company the Poarch SA Coupling Division is being headed by John Chance who is expanding the marketing of the rotary coupling nationwide. In simplifying the shock-absorbing qualities of the coupling, Chance pointed to large 18-wheeler trucks: "We can take those trucks in their lowest gear, stuck in the sand, going up a hill or whatever without any harm to our unit. And we can also run it up to two or three thousand RPM going down the road. What this amounts to is that this coupling can be used on many varied applications. It takes the shock out of the drive line."

Chance said the new coupling has been readily accepted throughout the automotive industry, with initial marketings promising a successful venture into a new game on an old field. A native of Oklahoma, Chance came to Poarch four years ago by the way of Dallas. He estimated that the rotary coupler could double the life of most heavy-duty vehicles. Born and reared on a farm, Chance spent many years in various phases of automotive merchandising.

The son of Marvin and Belle Black, the 71-year-old Black remains positive on the future of Hereford: "We went through a recession in the 1980s just as everyone else did, but I see Hereford moving toward a higher plane...we're coming back into its original stride and becoming aggressive in all phases of progress."

"We're a combination of agricultural and industrial community that's utilizing all natural resources at a much higher degree of efficiency than ever before--we now have irrigators with farms, not farmers with irrigation."

He also pointed to increased technology in the Hereford seed industry and the cattle feeding business, showing where each has moved to unequalled levels.

"Hereford has been able to diversify in many segments of agribusiness and heavy industry," he added, in projecting local production in the 1990s. "We're not only looking at the cattle industry but to related industries that will carry us into the next century."

Lawyers run legal aid program for poor

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) - In a back office in the Jefferson County Courthouse, two women run a shoestring operation that has helped 182 poor people get the legal help they needed but couldn't afford.

In its first full year of operations, the program set up by Assistant District Attorney Michelle Mehaffy and Carol Flores, executive director of the Jefferson County Bar Association, won the prestigious 1989 State Bar of Texas Pro Bono Award.

Two years ago, the bar association's pro bono, or legal aid, program was inactive. While 68 lawyers were signed up to represent indigent people, no system was in place to screen applicants or refer them to lawyers.

Traditionally, the poor got legal help from East Texas Legal Services Inc., but that agency was hamstrung by budget cuts during a time when a faltering local economy pushed the number of people qualifying for services up to 61,000 from the 33,000 who qualified in 1980.

In spring 1987, Bill Townsley, then president of the county bar association, set up a family law committee on indigency with Mehaffy as chairwoman. But, Mehaffy said, the committee got bogged down in talk.

"Carol and I said, 'This is crazy. Let's just do it ourselves,'" Mehaffy said. The duo asked for and got approval from the bar, developed an application, a screening procedure and an interview format and wrote a letter to the entire bar membership, urging participation.

From October 1987 to March 1989, the number of participating lawyers rose to 106 and now includes some of the county's large firms that previously were reluctant to sign on for pro bono cases.

The program received 292 applications from the beginning of 1988 to date and rejected 50 that did not qualify. Sixty applicants couldn't be located after acceptance. The other 182 received free legal help. The 1988 budget, financed by the bar association, wasn't extravagant - $2,202.24 in expenses plus $8,100 worth of hours for Flores, the only paid staff member.

"When you don't have red tape or any grants or forms to fill out, you can help a lot more people," Mehaffy said. "We made the rules easy. We won't turn down anyone who's eligible. We will refer each case to a lawyer. We will see that each case is finished."

The system is as straightforward as the rules. Flores does the initial screening, then gives the application to Mehaffy, who decides whether to accept the case. To qualify for free legal aid, a person must be a county resident and must fit federal poverty guidelines, a scale based on family size and income. To qualify, a family of four must make no more than $933 a month. If the applicant is separated from his or her spouse and is seeking help with a divorce, the spouse's income is not considered.

If the applicant qualifies, Flores or Mehaffy contacts a lawyer. Flores said they signed up a lot of lawyers for the program just by making telephone calls. Also, the state and county Young Lawyers Associations put on a family law seminar in May 1988 that was free to any lawyer willing to take two pro bono cases.

"We just started picking on people," Mehaffy joked. "But it's really been easy."

The program has unified a lot of lawyers who didn't previously have much in common, Flores said. "It makes for great cocktail talk," Mehaffy said. "They talk about how mad they are at Carol and me. They get mad, but then they kind of giggle at us. We couldn't do this if it were our job and we were making money at it. The only reason we get away with it is they know we're working on it for free."

"Does your bank, credit union or S & L still return your cancelled checks?"

"Of course if you bank with us, the answer is yes...and we do it because we still believe that our customers get a lot of value out of having their checks returned."

"It costs us a little more in postage and handling costs to do it, but your checks come in handy when you're working on your income taxes...or trying to prove you paid a bill."

"Our technology is as advanced as you'll find at any bank today, but we still return your checks. And if that's important to you, we invite you to come bank with us."

FOI hotline is available for access issues

DALLAS (AP) - The Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas has established a statewide toll-free hotline.

Callers dialing 1-800-580-6651 will receive information about attorneys available to answer FOI questions dealing with a variety of access issues.

The foundation's purpose is to educate the public about their rights and responsibilities under the Texas Open Meetings and Records laws.

FOI attorneys from throughout Texas are available to answer callers' questions without charge.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been reading your column for several years, hoping someone would write in with my problem. It hasn't appeared so I assume I am the only one who has it. I'm getting desperate, Ann. Please help me.

My husband is a wonderful person, but he has developed a quirk that drives me crazy. The man is hooked on water.

I believe most doctors recommend eight glasses a day. Well, "Albert" drinks at least 16. He carries a thermos everywhere -- to church, the movies, even if we go for a short drive. At night he has a thermos by his pillow.

The drinking is not what bothers me. It's the consequences that cause so much embarrassment. The man cannot sit through a concert, a movie, a play, a lecture, a church service, a ball game or even a conversation that lasts more than 20 minutes. He is always excusing himself.

The minute we arrive anywhere, Albert starts looking for the bathroom. If we are there for two hours, he has made at least three trips. I am tired of people asking me, "What is wrong with Albert? Is he all right?"

My husband is 65 years old and in good health. Is he putting a strain on his bladder? Is he wearing out his kidneys? What can be done to get him to be more moderate? -- San Antonio

DEAR SAN ANTONIO: My consultant is Dr. Craig Shadur, a Harvard-trained kidney specialist in Des Moines.

Dr. Shadur says Albert cannot hurt himself by drinking 16 glasses of water a day, but there may be a medical reason for his inordinate liquid intake. You should insist that he have a complete physical check-up. One possibility is an unusual type of diabetes.

If Albert gets a clean bill of health, I hope you will simply refuse to be embarrassed by his frequent absences. When people question you about it (bad taste) simply say, "Why don't you ask him?"

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please explain to me how cheating and lying to a spouse can build self-esteem.

Years ago, my husband told me that he felt like a loser until he met a woman at work who was not very attractive. She felt as if she didn't have much going for her. They decided to build each other up by having an affair. It went on for a number of years before I found out about it. His explanation was very painful, but wanting desperately for the marriage to work, I accepted it and stayed with him.

Recently, I've heard this same theory from a couple of my friends. They said having an affair was the best thing that ever happened to them because it built up their sagging egos and made them feel desirable.

Ann, am I crazy or just plain out of step with the world? I've always thought self-esteem was built by being with the best person you can be. Now I am told that it can be acquired by being dishonest and unfaithful. What goes on? -- Disillusioned in Illinois

DEAR ILLINOIS: An affair may inflate the ego for about 30 minutes, but when reality sets in the rosy glow is replaced by feelings of guilt and emptiness. It's a real downer, honey. Stick with your ideas.

Readers: the poem "My Name Is Cocaine" was written by Daryl Lee Neal. Thanks to J.B.H. of Decatur, Ga., for letting us know.

LONDON (AP) -- Judith Howarth, a 27-year-old rising British soprano who learned to sing in a Salvation Army choir, is heading to Seattle to appear in a concert with opera star Placido Domingo.

"It's a great opportunity. I'm absolutely delighted to be going and to be invited by such a great artist," Miss Howarth told The Associated Press on Tuesday at the Royal Opera House.

At Seattle Opera House on Friday, she will sing four love duets with Domingo from operas by Gaetano Donizetti, Giuseppe Verdi and Pietro Mascagni, as well as three arias.

WT, AC to host Career Day

The West Texas State University office of career planning and placement and the Amarillo College office of student job placement will host more than 100 employer representatives at the annual Career Day Thursday, Sept. 21.

Career Day is open to all interested individuals from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Activities Center Ballroom, Room 202, on the WTSU campus.

"This is not a job fair and even though some of the companies may have openings, the purpose of Career Day is the dissemination of information," Gene Parker, director of career planning and placement at WTSU, said.

"This is an excellent opportunity for students as well as for individuals in the community who have been displaced, are considering job changes or are returning to school."

Company agents available on Career Day represent the government (state and federal), education, business and industry, health care agencies, the military and the professions.

"Most of the representatives are human relations specialists for personnel departments who understand the variety of careers their companies offer. Career Day is a preview for the job search and can inform individuals about the qualities and abilities people need in order to enter certain positions," Parker said.

Career Day, beneficial to hour-and-wage personnel as well as salaried employees, is free and open to the public.

For more information, call the office of career planning and placement at West Texas State University at 806-656-2345 or the office of student job placement at Amarillo College at 806-371-5314.

CHICAGO (AP) - The Lyric Opera of Chicago role originally assigned to operatic superstar Luciano Pavarotti this fall has been split between his fellow Italian Giuseppe Giacomini and Icelandic tenor Kristjan Johannsson.

Pavarotti was scheduled to perform the role of painter and revolutionary Mario Cavaradossi in the Lyric's season premiere of Giacomo Puccini's "Tosca" on Saturday opposite soprano Eva Marton in the title role. But he cancelled his Chicago appearances, pleading illness.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Hello. I'm in prison, and it is told that some of the officers that work here have the AIDS and herpes viruses. If you are just talking to them or when they bring you your food, can you catch these viruses like that? Please explain.

DEAR READER: No. I have no idea what the health status of the officers there might be, but I can assure you that neither the AIDS virus nor the herpes virus is transmitted by such casual contact. Food handlers do not transmit either by handling food or beverages. The herpes virus must enter through the skin and the AIDS virus must pass through the skin in some manner to invade the bloodstream.

You do not get AIDS or herpes by shaking hands or holding hands. You could get herpes by kissing a person who has herpes. But AIDS is not transmitted by kissing, either.

The danger of AIDS in prison is related to sexual habits and intravenous drugs - basically the same problems encountered out of prison. Because of the widespread panic reaction about AIDS, it is often not appreciated that you cannot get AIDS by having any form of sex with another person unless that person has the AIDS virus. And you cannot get herpes from a person unless that person has herpes.

Although the subject is unpleasant, the facts are that gang rapes have been reported in the prison environment. Such an event could carry a significant risk with it, but ordinary contacts including handling food pose no risk.

You will feel better about the risks after reading Special Report 61, Sex and AIDS, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/61, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

U.S. POSTAL SERVICE
OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT...AMARILLO, HEREFORD, AND ALL AREA POST OFFICES HAVE JUST RECEIVED AUTHORIZATION TO ACCEPT APPLICATIONS FOR THE CLERK-CARRIER EXAM IN OCTOBER.
A recent issue of Newsweek magazine noted that the average Postal worker earns $27,500 in salary and benefits. Men and women, regardless of age or experience are eligible to apply. Courses to help you prepare for the above exams will be offered by Postal Exam Workshops. Instructors Doug Allesen, Drini and Bill Harold are considered by many to be the most qualified on how to gain employment with the Postal Service. These exams do not test general knowledge. Proper preparation is the key to getting hired, because people are hired for these positions based on their exam scores. The easy-to-learn techniques taught in these courses were designed by Mr. Harold. He is a former Postal employee, the author of three postal exam guides, and has repeatedly scored 100% on Postal tests.
3 HOUR WORKSHOP: SCORE 95-100%
GUARANTEE: The time-saving and accuracy-increasing methods taught in this course are so powerful that we will enter into a written agreement.
*You will score 95% or higher or your money will be refunded.
*If you do not receive a job application/interview within 90 days of your score, your money will be refunded.

WORKSHOP TUITION is $35 and includes the guaranteed workshop, workbook, interview hints, study guide with 25 complete take-home exams, follow-up consultation privileges with free information phone number, home study program kit, personal notification of future application dates, and more...WANT TO RELOCATE? We offer the Postal Alert Bulletin giving you postal exam dates nationwide. You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal review.

Man Caught With Classified Information

Claims information regularly published

Neighbors today were surprised to learn Melvin Kline, a seemingly quiet, well-mannered man was making extra money with classified information. When questioned earlier this morning, Kline professed surprise that everyone wasn't using the classified section to earn extra income and get rid of unwanted items.

"It's common," he said. Recent studies tend to bear Kline out. Consumer Data Service reported that over 85% of the public read the newspaper and over 80% of those read the classifieds. Kline claimed widespread use was being made of the classified information. "But you have to act quickly," he remarked.

"If I have something to sell, I can be in the paper by tomorrow. I do that a lot now," he confessed. "With classified, whether I'm buying or selling, I can reach a large market instantly. And it's easy...just pick up the phone."

When asked if price mattered at all, Kline stated he was in possession of Consumer Data Service documents that indicated newspaper readership increases as income increases. "The more money they make, the more they read the paper," he said, "and I can prove it."

Asked for a last comment, Kline replied "No matter what you're looking for, a new job, a great car, merchandise, or even a home, take a long look at the classified section."

Local confesses he profited from classified information in newspaper

"Sure, I've made some money from classified information, but so can anyone who reads the paper."

The information's all there." Response Analysis Corp. studies indicate the public does exactly that, with 98% preferring the newspaper over radio and 68% preferring the newspaper instead of TV.

Kline was last seen in the company of an unidentified man carrying two outboard motors.

Be thinner without dieting

When people meet you for the first time, they form up to 11 different opinions of you in just 60 seconds! Things like how attractive you are, how much money you make and even your moral character. All based solely on how you look.

If you are currently involved in a weight loss program, you may have an "I'll worry about how I look after I lose weight" mind set. But how you look now affects how you and other people perceive you. And looking good while you diet improves your chances of sticking to your goal. So, no matter what shape you're currently in, you can-and should-look your best!

Fortunately, all you need is the right information. Jinger Heath, chairman of the board of BeautiControl Cosmetics, America's Premier Image Company, has put together the following image updating tips to help you pull together your best possible image-right now!

Instant image updating tips:

-A spritz of hairspray at the roots (not on top) adds volume to hair and slims the face.

-Remember accessories! The right earrings, scarf or belt can add the extra touch that turn your "clothes" into an "outfit."

-Larger, bolder accessories give you a more confident look.

-To lengthen and slim your legs and body, always match your hosiery color to your hemline or your shoes!

-Be careful not to choose clothes that are too tight or too bulky-they add pounds visually.

-Wear blush correctly! Blush should be applied on top of your cheekbone. It should be worn no lower than your nose, and should be brushed upward in a sweeping motion towards your temple and blended into the hairline.

-Wear Big earrings! Large earrings bring attention up to your face (away from your body) and they brighten your face as well.

-To "lose" 10 pounds from your hips instantly, wear shoulder pads! The best shoulder pads are rounded and smaller than last year. Football shoulders are out.

-Slim a too-round face by brushing bangs off the forehead, adding height on top and keeping hair sleek on the sides. Avoid circular earrings.

ATLANTA (AP) - Nugzar Ruhadze, a journalist from Soviet Georgia who gave TV viewers in U.S. Georgia a new perspective, said he has one overwhelming impression of Americans: their eagerness for peace between the two nations.

Ruhadze, the first Soviet journalist to work for an American television station, left for home Tuesday after spending four months working for WXIA-TV in Atlanta. While here, he produced stories on topics such as Memorial Day, U.S. prisons, flag burning and the differences between the poor and rich in America.

Women invited to workshop

The public is invited to "Once a Month Cooking" workshop Sept. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the youth wing of the First Christian Church.

The program will be presented on video tape and cookbooks will be available for viewing and ordering.

New fall fashions

Yiota's Korner Kloset is among 12 local stores that will be participating in the "Texas Trends Benefit Style Show" set at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 26, at the Hereford Community Center. Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will be sponsoring the event with proceeds to go to the Domestic Violence/Rape Crisis Center and the local Lifeline program. Tickets may be purchased for $3 per person from chapter members, at the door or from participating stores. Modeling new fall fashions from Korner Kloset are, from left, Katerina Malouf and Chasity Rickman. During the show refreshments will be served and door prizes awarded.

High stress levels hasten burnout

Burnout is a condition that occurs when aggressive, motivated and successful people work too hard too long at their jobs, says a family specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"When stress levels stay high over a period of time, an employee will burn out" said Dorothy (cq) Taylor, Extension Service family life specialist at Texas A&M University. "They tend to have mental and physical health problems or begin to be accident-prone."

Employees suffering burnout often exhibit one or more symptoms. "High resistance to going to work and a negative attitude are two of the first symptoms," Taylor said. "Other symptoms are seeming angry all the time, blaming others for their problems, frequent clock watching, and little care or concern for their job."

Additional symptoms include withdrawing from co-workers, postponing client contacts, inability to concentrate, feeling helpless or immobilized, higher absenteeism, resisting any kind of change and having more health problems.

"Coping with job burnout is a challenge," Taylor said. "Before any changes can take place, the burned out employee must be willing to change and be willing to work diligently at turning his or her life around. When burnout occurs, marital and family conflict are natural consequences."

Taylor lists eight recommended practices for keeping mentally and physically fit to prevent burnout:

A human being is born with 305 bones, but during childhood a number of them fuse, so an adult has only about 206.
