Everyday's a Banner day

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

The two-story house at 601 Grand has more Banners than a Thanksgiving Day parade.

When Gerald and Monica Banner gather all their children, all the sons- and daughters-in-laws, and all the grandchildren, it is a house-full. All together, there are 50 different Banners.

The Banner home provides a prime example of the Thanksgiving tradition of families reunited.

Monica remembers a comment once made by a visitor to their home. The woman said that no matter how many people the Banners bring into their house, it never seems full. The Banner residence always has room for at least one more.

The same might be said of Banner hearts.

While the family home has an infinite capacity for company, Banner hearts have an infinite capacity for caring.

"There's so much love coming at me at one time, I can't hardly handle it," Monica said as she sat around a table with her three daughters while grandchildren flowed in and out the kitchen door.

The mother of ten was referring to birthdays and Christmas, times when an influx of cards gives the family an opportunity to distill and express all the love they share.

"I know right now that ten people will love me always," Monica said. "That's a real comfort to me."

The love that Gerald and Monica share with their children has a wonderful habit of lapping over and spilling onto the world around them.

"This is where all the neighbors played," said Nancy Caperton, one of the Banner's three daughters, about her parents' home. Monica recalls making sling-shots for her sons out of apple boxes.

"Pretty soon, the neighbors would come in and say, 'Mrs. Banner, can we have a sling-shot?'" she said.

This "welcome-to-all" is not limited to Banner home life. Gerald and Monica are long-time members of St. Anthony's Catholic Church where they are both well-known and well-respected. Friday night, members of the St. Anthony's Caring and Sharing organization took the opportunity to return just a little of the Banner's years of giving. A family dance and game night was held in honor of Gerald and Monica at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Their religion was an important part of the Banners' lives as Gerald and Monica raised their ten children. The church has remained important to them now that those children are raising their own offspring.

Secondary specialists love work

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Media specialists at Hereford's primary and intermediate schools work hard to unlock the secrets behind the skills of reading and using all of the resources a library has to offer.

The specialists at Hereford Junior High and Hereford High School, Norma Jean Gripp, Lois Mitchell and Carole McGilvary, want students to know that the door is still open and there are more secrets waiting to be shared than they could ever dream.

Younger students go to the library as regularly as the sun comes up and goes down, but for older students it's different. Many times, the secondary school specialists see students on an irregular schedule as the students come to the library to do various types of research.

"Students are doing even more research today than they used to, especially on current events," said Mrs. Mitchell at HHS, the specialists will order about $3,000 worth of periodicals a year to meet all of the demands on the materials, but wonder where and when the funding will come.

At the junior high "teachers assign book reports more than research papers, but the advanced classes will do more research papers in the spring," said Mrs. Gripp.

The three specialists have settled in after a bit of a helter-skelter 1988-89 year. That's when Stanton and La Palata junior highs were consolidated into Hereford Junior High, and freshmen were added to Hereford High School.

"I like the enlarged library," said Mrs. Gripp, who ended up with enough room for more shelves, an area for supervised testing, and a reading area for teachers among other new amenities. "We have more students and teachers, but we also have more services."

Mrs. McGilvary was long-time media specialist at Stanton.

"I still miss Stanton a little," she said. "It was my library. But I like the move to high school. It's fun to work with all of the different personalities."

Also among the new services are computers that help with material handling.

"Automation is the biggest thing," said Mrs. Mitchell.

"We were the first library to go on computer, and the library (student) aides enjoy them," said Mrs. Gripp. "It has improved our ability to see immediately what we have available, and almost anyone can look items up on the computer."

But the three feel that computers will never do away with the staple of any library: the card catalog.

What will probably be done away with are some of the audio-visual stand-bys like 16 millimeter film projectors, filmstrip projectors, and the accompanying films and strips.

"I think we will be seeing more and more of these videos," Mrs. Gripp said. "They like the videos better, seem to respond to them better."

"The high school has quite a big video library already. It's the thing, and it's better than other types of video."

Mrs. Mitchell said the day is near when each classroom will have its own screen and VCR unit.

If the money is available. "Our funding isn't what it was," Mrs. Mitchell said.

"If we don't have the money we don't have the money, but it's certainly going to put a crimp in everyone's style because we don't have that much money left and there are many things we need just to make it through the school year," Mrs. McGilvary said.

"I think we are fortunate in Hereford that our libraries have been considered assets more and more through the years," Mrs. McGilvary added. "That is unusual in some parts of the state. We have a person certified in library science at each campus media center. To have all certified personnel is not typical of every system. In some districts there may only be one certified person to serve a district. I think we are fortunate to be where we are."

'Peace' of the Berlin Wall

Kit Sanders displays the chunk of the Berlin Wall which he recently brought back from Germany. Sanders was on hand to see the historic day when East Germany opened its borders.

Sanders comes home with some of The Wall

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

Kit Sanders came home with a piece of the wall.

Not just any wall...the wall. It's the very symbol of governmental persecution. Kit Sanders is the proud owner of a piece of the Berlin Wall.

"It's just a dirty old piece of concrete," Sanders said.

It's a dirty old piece of concrete whose symbolic value makes it an object of beauty. Sanders was on hand to view the historic events which his tiny slab of Berlin Wall represents.

Sanders, a pilot for Pan Am Airlines, is currently living in West Berlin as he flies routes throughout much of Europe. His wife, Judy, continues to maintain the family home west of Hereford.

than a block outside bank entrances.

Most of those 100 mark allocations remained in West Berlin. The herds of visitors from the east side of the wall were making full use of the opportunity to shop in a free market.

"They came! They saw! They did a little shopping," wrote a sample of graffiti on the west side of the Berlin Wall.

The west side of that wall is covered in graffiti. Up until Nov. 10, the east side of that wall remained perfectly clean. It was unmarked by any comments which the heavily restricted East German residents may have wished to add to the freedom of expression written by West Germans on the opposite side of that wall.

The east side of the wall is no longer clean. On the historic Friday when East Berliners were first allowed to cross freely into West Berlin, a few scattered spray painted contributions were added to the no-longer-virgin surface of the east wall.

The east side of the wall is no longer unmarked, and the East German people are no longer prisoners in their own country.

Sanders was on hand to view the reuniting of German families, many of whom had been separated since the wall was built 28 years ago.

"It's almost tearful to see these people who have been separated for so many years, finally come together again," Sanders said.

The pilot recalls parking beside one Trabant driven by a young East German man. The car was filled with baked goods. In a brief chat, Sanders learned that they were gifts from family members on the east side of the wall for family members on the west side.

It would appear to have been an excellent object lesson proving that, once again, all Germans are enjoying the flavor of freedom.

Along with his chunk of wall, Sanders brought home a historic video tape when he returned to Hereford this week. The pilot returned home on Monday and will be spending Thanksgiving with his family.

Thanks to the technology of video, Sanders has been able to share much of his first hand experience in seeing the opening of borders between East and West Germany. Sanders filmed the rows of East German police stationed atop the wall. They were there to protect the now unnecessary structure from demolition by souvenir hunters.

He filmed row after row of Trabants (about the only model of car available to East Germans) parked along the streets in West Berlin shopping districts.

"That was the first time I'd ever seen any East German cars in West Berlin," Sanders said.

He also caught the lines of patient East Germans planted outside West Berlin banks, waiting to receive the 100 marks (about $54) which the West German government allocates to each East German visitor. Some of those lines stretched better

Santa letters needed

Kids, it's time to sharpen those pencils or crayons or whatever you would like to use to write a letter to Santa this Christmas.

A special box will be available at the Brand to deposit the letters. Many elementary schools in Hereford will be using the letters as a writing project. All letters should be submitted to the Brand by Dec. 13 to be included in our special Christmas edition.

While the letters to Santa that are given to the Brand will be forwarded to Santa in time for processing for Christmas, children are also encouraged to write Santa another letter to be mailed to Santa himself at a special nine-digit ZIP + 4 address that has been established by the United States Postal Service just for Santa.

The special address is: Santa Claus, North Pole, 30351-1989. The special nine-digit ZIP Code will allow easier handling of the millions of letters sent to Santa. Also, Coca-Cola USA will donate five cents for the first two million letters received at the special address to the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve's Toys for Tots program.

Down to the nanosecond In an exacting world, that's pretty exact time

EDITOR'S NOTE - Once upon a time nobody could tell time. Well, they sure can now, down to the nanosecond. On the day we return to standard time, here are some ruminations by one of America's secret addicts, a time freak.

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) - There is a time to reap and a time to sow and a time to set the clocks back. Today, for a growing number of Americans, it is a time fraught with excitement.

I am one of that number. I am a time freak. High time I confessed. No telling how many of us there are in America. Addiction isn't something you go around talking about. One time freak, however, can spot another. The other day someone asked my friend, Jim Smith, what time it was. He replied, "eight-thirty-two-oh-three." No doubt about it, Jim Smith is one of us.

A time freak would no more say "about half past eight" than a brain surgeon would say "about three or four centimeters."

Time addiction, a compulsion for split-second exactitude, began its insidious boring into the American psyche during the 1970s. The specific date is inescapably imprecise. But the culprit is not.

It was the affliction upon an unsuspecting populace of the quartz watch.

Like most addictive agents, quartz watches come cheap and easy. In New York, you can buy one on the street.

Experts will tell you that when it comes to accuracy, the most jeweled chronometer ever crafted by a Swiss master can't hold a candle (once used to tell time, by the way) to a plastic stick-on quartz watch you can pick up at the supermarket checkout for $2.49.

Time addicts aside, America seems to have become a nation of clock addicts as well. There's a difference.

When I was a boy, my father had a pocket watch and my mother had a clock in the kitchen. That was it. The time change was accomplished, as it were, in no time.

Today, or last night rather, I had the following to reset:

My watch, her watch, the kitchen wall clock, the stove clock, the microwave clock, the telephone clock, the radio clock (Five in the kitchen. Five!) The den wall clock, the VCR clock, the foyer clock, the two clocks in the living room, the four radio-alarm clocks upstairs, the travel alarm and, finally, the car.

Eighteen, then. And if you're a time freak, this can't be done casually. No indeed. All those clocks must agree precisely and all must be right.

So first you must determine the exact time. From the radio? From the local number in the phone book? Never. Not if you're serious about this business. If you're truly time-addicted, you go to The Source.

You phone 1-900-410-TIME. It's a toll call but money is of no consequence; time is of the essence. Or you phone 202-653-1800. Either number will connect you with the nation's Master Clock at the U.S. Naval Observatory in Washington, D.C. A recording will give you the exact time, to the second, at the time.

But wait. Just to be sure, you must also phone 303-499-7111. You will reach the National Institute of Time and Technology in Boulder, Colo., where the tone will tell you Coordinated Universal Time, Universal!

And if you're wondering how many time freaks are loose in the land, out there glancing at their quartz watches, here's one indication. The observatory averages about 6,000 calls a day on both its numbers, the NITTT in Boulder about 5,000.

That's nearly 7 million long-distance calls a year, folks, just to find out what time it is. Could this addiction be nearing an epidemic?

"The numbers keep increasing," says Sheila Faulkner, who keeps track of the observatory calls. "That's why we added the 900 number. The other line was often busy. The 900 number," she says, "can handle 8,000 calls simultaneously."

Ms. Faulkner also observes that the heaviest calling periods are Monday mornings and Friday afternoons, the daylight-standard change days, and New Year's Eve. "Both our numbers have peaked on New Year's Eve, 40,000 on one phone and 36,000 on the other."

All those New Year's Eve callers probably aren't true time freaks, though. Like New Year's Eve drinkers, they likely include a fair number of amateurs.

If time freaks are a fairly recent breed, their opposites, those who could not care less about exactitude, have been around for ages.

The Navajos, for instance, feel it is far more important to live in harmony with nature's own rhythms. A favorite of tribal festivals is a prankster dressed in a three-piece suit, waving a big alarm clock and shouting "Time to be hungry!"

"Confound the man," wrote a Roman poet named Plautus in 200 B.C., "who in this place set up a sundial to cut and hack my days so wretchedly into small portions."

You have to wonder what old Plautus would have thought of David Allan. Allan can cut and hack a second of time, one tick, into a billion parts, into nanoseconds.

He is the head of the time laboratory at Boulder's National Institute of Time and Technology, formerly the Bureau of Standards. You might say David Allan is America's Father Time. It is Allan who decides how long a second is in the first place. His lab sets the standard.

Before 1967 time was measured by astronomical instruments. They were accurate to a millisecond, a thousandth of a second. Since then the standard has been an atomic second, measured by an electron spinning around the nucleus of a cesium atom like the Earth around the sun. It's more complex, but there's no time to go into it.

Let's just say that that electron spins around that nucleus in a regular pattern, a frequency. When it spins 9,192,631,770 times, that's a second.

"It takes a good counter to count it," Allan says, "but we can do that."

The basis of the atomic clock came from the pioneering work of Norman F. Ramsey of Harvard who just recently was awarded the Nobel

The world of exact time has been boosted by super-accurate atomic clocks.

Prize in physics. His discoveries have enabled science to refine accuracy to a nanosecond, a billionth, a million times more accurate than before. David Allan's vocabulary also includes picosecond, a trillionth.

Apart from causing time freaks to drool, is that degree of accuracy of any practical use?

"Voyager II's encounter with Neptune," says Allan, "could not have been navigated without atomic clocks in various places around the world coordinated to the nanosecond. Yes, it is necessary."

Well, we time addicts get enough of a fix with our simple quartz watches, set, at the tone, to Coordinated Universal Time.

Quartz, Allan explains, has a special quality. When you pass an electric current over a piece of it, it sets up a resonance, like a plucked guitar string or a tuning fork, except that as long as the electricity lasts the resonance remains steady, it doesn't die down. Hence its remarkable accuracy.

David Allan, incidentally, wears a quartz wristwatch, an obvious seal of approval. I should note that most freaks disdain digital watches. We need to SEE each universally coordinated second go by, tick by tick.

We feel smug, if a bit foolish, going about with our quartz watches noticing, for example, that the lovely sidewalk clock in front of the bank in Closter, N.J., is a bit slow, that the 6 o'clock whistle in Riverdale, N.J., a local convenience, blows a shade early, that the Newsweek building in New York has a clock, though a tad fast, and that the Time building has none. No Time clock. A pity.

Those of you who have resisted the quartz-accuracy narcotic and don't go around babbling about picoseconds, take heart. The clock is striking back.

Thomas Bartels reports that membership in his organization is growing apace and so is the demand for old-fashioned watchmakers.

Bartels is executive director of the National Association of Watch and Clock Collectors Inc., an organization of 34,000 members nationwide. Its museum in Columbia, Pa., is the repository of more than 9,000 artifacts, none of them digital, none of them quartz.

"Old mechanical watches have become extremely popular in the last couple of years," says Bartels. "There's a whole new generation of collectors."

He believes this horological renaissance is a reaction to the clinical view of timekeeping by people such as me, overlooking the beauty and artistry of watchmaking, the poetry of craftsmanship.

"I see it all around the country," he says, "young people interested in mechanical watches, and, as a result, a great demand put on our remaining watchmakers who were a vanishing breed. Our watchmaking clinics are busier than ever."

Bartels keeps 400 to 500 of the museum clocks running at all times. "People like to hear the ticks and the chimes." So imagine his time-change chore.

"It's something we dread twice a year. It takes the whole staff all day to reset them."

Tom Bartels, not incidentally, carries a mechanical pocket watch. He is having the time of his life.

"The kids all still go to church, which I'm real proud of," Monica said.

A strong faith in God has helped the Banners through thick and thin, good times and bad.

"I taught them (her children) to look at the sunset and the pretty flowers... to see God in everything," Monica said.

Now that they are grown, the Banner children have retained this reverence, Monica says that, occasionally, one of the children will still give her a call just to tell of a beautiful sunset. This sharing of natural beauty with their mother is something which the ten Banner children learned in their childhood.

"She had more dandelion bouquets than you can imagine," daughter Nancy said.

cherish her dandelion bouquets. If there is one lesson which is apparent in a Banner upbringing, it is the ability to give and receive love.

The happiness which this exchange of affection brings is apparent even in trying times.

"Sometimes we have to laugh at stuff to keep from crying," said Dianne Clevenger, the Banner's youngest daughter.

There would be reason enough to cry, Monica is currently undergoing treatment for cancer and Gerald is almost bedfast from crippling arthritis.

Occasionally there are tears, and with the tears there is the comforting love of family. But mostly, the family spends their time celebrating the joy of life... the happiness of being together.

There are certainly enough of them to be together. The list of Gerald and Monica's children alone looks like a roster for some team sport.

Greg, the oldest son, is living in Midland while the second son, Douglas, is in Amarillo. Mark is in Hereford; and Robert is in Amarillo.

The three girls, Deborah, Nancy and Dianne, are all in Hereford. Jim is in Clinton, Oklahoma; Philip is in Hereford; and Roy is in Clinton.

Now that their parents have become older, they are in need of the some of the attention which they once lavished on their small children. The Banner kids have not forgotten.

"We all switch off," Dianne said. The children have worked out a system whereby they share the time and responsibility of their parents' care.

"Our closets aren't organized, but our lives are," Dianne said with a laugh.

Monica spoke with pride of the remodeling on the family home which her children did. She spoke with a certain degree of awe that their brood would undertake such a project for herself and her husband.

"It's because we love you," Nancy said.

Between the Covers

BY JANA MORGAN

Danielle Steel's long awaited new novel is here. Daddy once again displays her unequalled talent for exploring universal human emotions as she probes the hearts, minds and lives of three men and three generations.

Oliver Watson has worked hard to build a safe predictable world. But suddenly it seems to dissolve around him; there is no one for him to turn to or share his life with. The marriage he thought was perfect is over. After 18 years, Sarah decides to go back to school to get her master's degree. She walks out on a successful husband, a seemingly happy marriage and three children, hoping to recapture the youth and freedom she thinks she has lost. With his marriage over, Oliver must learn to cope with a new life.

When Oliver's mother is killed in an automobile accident, Oliver's father's life is changed as well. Braver than his son, George Watson, at 72, quickly adjusts and eventually remarries.

Ben, Oliver's oldest son, rejects his father when their marriage dissolves. He is under the influence that he is grown up and can make his own decisions. So at 17, his girlfriend gets pregnant and he is faced suddenly with obligations and responsibilities he feels he must live up to. Melanie, the middle child blames her father for her mother leaving. And Sam, the youngest, is too shaken to deal with it all. Now as the only parent "Daddy" must try to help his troubled family.

Each of the three men must start a new life. Nothing is as it was before, and nothing is as they once thought it would be. But in the end, different is better, different is more, for each of them -- and especially for "Daddy."

The lush islands of the Caribbean have always possessed a special allure; as colonial treasures in days gone by, as vacation retreats today. Caribbean by James A. Michener is a magnificent story of the struggle for empire, of political economic and racial currents in one of the most beautiful regions of the globe.

Beginning with tribal conflicts on the island of Dominica, then goes on to tell the arrival of Columbus. Then on to the great days of the buccaneers, the rise of the Jamaican sugar plantations, the bloody slave revolt of 1800 on Haiti, and up to the problems of the present day.

Through Mr. Michener's unequalled gifts of characterization, great historical events are portrayed with human drama. Landowners on Barbados are driven apart by the execution, half a world away, by King Charles I; a contemporary black academic, exploring her Haitian roots, steps into an ancient world where zombies walk; prominent Miami emigres returns to Cuba on a secret mission, which could destroy them.

James A. Michener's command of history, with his outstanding talent for storytelling, as fictional and historical characters come vividly to life makes, Caribbean a thrilling novel by a master writing at the peak of his power.

Mary Higgins Clark, author of such best sellers as Where are the Children? to her latest best seller, While My Pretty One Sleeps, has written a collection of short fiction, titled The Anastasis Syndrome and Other Short Stories. This book reflects the author's intense personal interest in parapsychology, the sixth sense, and thought transference.

In the title story, inspired by the true story of Anna Anderson, the woman who claimed to be the Grand Duchess Anastasia, daughter of the Russian Czar, a woman in love is forced to confront the demons of her past, and present, as haunting sense of deja vu inexorably draws her toward the appalling truth about a wave of terrorist bombings.

The remaining four stories in the collection are the inner secrets of the human mind. A supernatural phenomenon occurs in "Double Vision", a nightmarish thriller about twin sisters stalked by a psychopath. Obsessive love is the theme of "Terror Stalks the Class Reunion," a story which draws much of its character from Mary Higgins Clark's fascination with actual criminal trials. "The Lost Angel" is a tender Christmas story, well on its way to becoming a classic. And "Lucky Day," a twisty tale of love, death, and a lottery jackpot, has been compared to O. Henry's masterpiece, "The Gift of the Magi."

This collection of stories is sure to thrill her fans. Compelling, intriguing, wonderfully entertaining, The Anastasis Syndrome is Mary Higgins Clark at her best.

A book that might be of interest to you is When Heaven and Earth

Changed Places by Le Ly Hayslip, a true story about a Vietnamese woman's journey from war to peace.

The story of the Vietnam War has been told from many perspectives: by American journalists, soldiers and political analysts. Now it is recounted by one of many who knew it best, a child of the war who survived the horror.

Le Ly Hayslip was 12 when the U.S. helicopters landed in her village in Central Vietnam. Having lived in an occupied territory all her life, she was accustomed to hunger and death. But when she watched her neighbors die and was forced by the Vietnamese into the children's troop, she questioned the long-standing loyalties and traditions of her ancestors. She was the youngest of six children in a close-knit family, was betrothed at the age of 13, yet "ruined" for marriage when she was raped by Viet Cong soldiers. She was taught to love life and respect elders, but was caught between opposing beliefs as she was imprisoned and tortured by the South Vietnamese soldiers, then sentenced to death by the Viet Cong. Although her family and her land were most dear to her heart, she fled to the United States with her own children, in order to find peace.

In her own words, "This book is dedicated to all those who fought for their country. I ask you to read this book and look into your heart of the one you once called enemy. I will try to tell you who your enemy was and why everyone in the country you tried to help resented, feared and misunderstood you. It was not your fault. Long before you arrived, my country had yielded to the terrible logic of war. What for you was normal, a life of peace and plenty, was for us a hazy dream known only in our legends.

Because we had to appease the allied forces by day and were terrorized by Viet Cong at night, we slept as little as you did. We obeyed both sides and wound up pleasing neither. We were people in the middle. We were what the war was all about."

In 1986, she left her sons in California and returned to Vietnam to visit her mother and siblings. She gives a poignant picture of Vietnam then and now, and of the noble, optimistic, and forgiving woman who was born there.

Other titles of interest: All My Best Friends by George Burns. It is the history of show business and of the people who made that history.

Loyalties by Julie Ellis is about two very different cousins who inherit their Great Aunts lumber firm. But can they work together to make the business successful?

The World of Thrush Green by Miss Read explores the background to her novels, from Thrush Green in 1959 to The School at Thrush Green in 1987.

YOUR EYES

THE VDT AND EYE STRAIN

It takes 60,000 eye movements to use a video display terminal several hours per day. Sometimes this is too much for your eyes to accommodate, and your eyes feel exhausted and unduly strained. Even if your workload can't be decreased, there are ways to make your eyes more comfortable.

If possible, move the work station so that glare or sunlight does not come at you from the sides, or place the VDT against a colored wall. Attach an anti-reflection screen to the terminal, or wear a visor to eliminate some of the light. Adjust your chair to avoid neck and back discomfort. And take breaks! When you are doing heavy data work, for example, rest your eyes for five to ten minutes every hour. For normal workloads, rest your eyes for ten to fifteen minutes every two hours.

Common visual defects like age-related presbyopia and astigmatism may be intensified by excessive work at the computer. Specially prescribed glasses and, in some instances, trifocals (lenses with three segments for varying distances) can eliminate many visual and postural problems of computer users.

Editorial opinion from around Texas

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around Texas:

Pick Your Price

A price tag is attached to the Edgewood vs. Kirby ruling that public schools must achieve equity.

Gov. Bill Clements doesn't put a dollar figure on achieving equity, preferring to stress what the Supreme Court said about efficiency. He has named a new study group to come up with suggestions before a special session on education is held next spring.

Some legislators are talking about finding several hundred million dollars to add to what is already budgeted, with more to come later. An earlier study group predicted $300 million to $600 million a year additional would be needed.

Now, the Equity Center, an organization of poor school districts, says $10.5 billion in additional state spending will be needed over the next five years.

There you have it. Estimates ranging from zero to $10 billion. Chances are it won't be either extreme. But chances are, as the director of the Equity Center said, quality education won't be cheap.

-Houston Chronicle, Nov. 20

Extremism Wins in El Salvador

The ugliest, most savage elements of El Salvador's radicalized political environment have sought to trample the fragile buds of democracy.

The assault on democracy escalated cruelly a week ago, when Marxist rebels of the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front mounted the largest and bloodiest offensive of the civil war. Using civilians in San Salvador's poorest neighborhoods as shields, the guerrillas initiated another tragic spasm of death and misery.

Perhaps taking advantage of the bloodstained chaos, gunmen wearing military uniforms massacred six Jesuit priests, including university rector Ignacio Ellacuria, El Salvador's most respected leftist intellectual. The barbarous slayings, which also claimed the lives of the priests' housekeeper and her daughter, may have been carried out by rightist death squads.

Those in the United States and elsewhere who blame only the democratic government for the atrocities fail to appreciate the complexities of El Salvador's plight. Before he was beaten and shot to death, Father Ellacuria himself denounced the FMLN for its senseless offensive.

The inhumane events of the last week are a victory only for the forces of extremism.

Fiscal Accountability Not on Elected Officials' Agenda

It would seem that among the first rules of government service should be that officials account for all public money they spend. Not so with members of the House of Representatives.

The House and Senate had a heated argument over whether individual members of Congress should disclose details on the cost and volume of their mass mailings to constituents.

Senators are required to do so. Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., thought House members also should, and introduced legislation to require it.

... Mass mailings, such as newsletters, are nothing but self-serving propaganda.

While House members reluctantly agreed to some reduction overall in mass mailings, they adamantly refused to go along with a requirement for individual accounting of costs.

The Senate finally threw in the towel recently, rejecting Humphrey's proposal 64-35. The House had threatened to scuttle the overall reduction in mass mailings if the Senate persisted in its efforts to require individual accounting. Humphrey called it "blackmail" ... That seems as good a description as any.

U.S. Indian History Set Straight

The relationship between Native American Indians and the waves of European immigrants for centuries was one of pain and mistrust interspersed with attempts at genocide. That shame has been compounded by the standard history of the Indians, which has been either systematically distorted or treated as insignificant.

It is too late to change history, but there is a chance to rectify some of that historical distortion. Congress has passed legislation providing $127 million to create a National Museum for the American Indian as part of the Smithsonian Institution and two satellite museums. President Bush should sign the legislation promptly.

... This museum will help correct the distorted, Hollywood image most Americans have of this continent's original developers.

The distortion has been compounded by the painful desecration of Indian graves in the 1880s, the Defense Department launched a "study" of Indian craniums, in which soldiers simply robbed graves ... and shipped the head and other artifacts to Washington. The Smithsonian has about 2,500 of the skulls, and the Defense Department still has about 2,000, according to Susan Harjoe of the Morning Star Foundation.

... The legislation wisely requires the Smithsonian to return identifiable bones and relics to their tribe of origin for reburial. That example should be followed by all other institutions that have desecrated the graves of the original Americans.

Finally, Fines To Match Crimes

Corporations that break federal laws often get away with little more than a slap on the wrist. That will change if new recommendations for fines are enforced.

The U.S. Sentencing Commission, established by Congress in 1984, has proposed that judges be required to set fines based on, among other things, the harm that lawbreaking does to the government or the public.

Corporations naturally oppose the plan, arguing that corporations should not be penalized if one employee commits unauthorized illegal acts.

That doesn't wash. In the first place, it's unlikely that an individual could engage in major lawbreaking without others in the firm knowing about it. Even if so, it would indicate a laxity in management that should not absolve a corporation of all responsibility.

Corporations also claim big fines would be passed on to consumers. That still isn't a valid reason to let a company off the hook for breaking the law. And a company that raised prices on its products to cover a penalty for wrongdoing could put itself at risk in the marketplace.

The commission is right. Penalties for corporate lawbreaking should equal the amount of damage done.

More Airline Regulation Isn't the Ticket

Since the airlines were deregulated in 1978, consumers have saved more than $100 billion, according to a report by the Federal Trade Commission ... Without deregulation, this Thanksgiving and Christmas thousands, perhaps millions, of people would be unable to afford flights to visit their loved ones.

But some in Congress want to play Grinch ... Sen. Howard Metzenbaum ... has introduced the Airline Regulation Act, which would give the federal government its old powers to impose on airlines government-set fares, routes and services.

Now, it is true that in recent years some airlines have suffered financial difficulties. And single airlines have concentrated themselves into near-monopolies at major "hub" airports, for example, Delta in Atlanta and Northwest in Detroit.

These are two different problems. First, competition causes financial battles in any industry ... It's called the free market; and to have a free market, you need the risk of failure.

The second problem ... is itself caused by continuing government regulation of airports and the air traffic control system. The way to ensure more competition, and better service to passengers, is to break up these remaining government monopolies.

Only 33 more shopping days until Christmas! Hereford's retail merchants have been busy building a good inventory of merchandise for our Christmas shopping.

I am sure you read with interest Speedy's editorial in last Sunday's paper on the reasons we need to shop Hereford first. Let me reiterate some of those reasons.

Recently I attended the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce annual banquet. The chamber officers were urging the members to support the upcoming proposition to raise their sales tax one-half percent for industrial and economic development. This proposition did pass.

The main selling point of this proposal was that "it will raise $6 million for industrial and economic development and 40 percent of this amount will come from our trade territory."

What this means is that $2.4 million will be contributed to Amarillo's economy development by the citizens of Hereford, Dumas, Pampa, Borger, Dalhart, etc. I have no quarrel with Amarillo's ambitions to grow and prosper. I do wish they would take their efforts to attract industries outside their "trade territory."

Several times the industrial committee people from Amarillo have been in contact with some of the leading industries in Hereford in an attempt to entice them to Amarillo. We, the citizens of Hereford and Deaf Smith County, need to consider our own merchants first with our shopping needs. We need to remember that these merchants help pay our taxes, our salaries, support our churches and our charities.

oOo

Congratulations to Diane Hoelcher, Charles Greenawald, Ken McLain and Waldo Baxter on being chosen as new directors by you, the chamber members. They will be serving for the next three years.

oOo

The next Chamber Fun Breakfast will be Thursday, Nov. 30. This is the annual "Eat-Your-Hear-Out, Neiman-Marcus" Breakfast. Several Hereford merchants will be displaying merchandise to give us some ideas for Christmas gifts. Hope to see you there!

TREES SAVE ENERGY

ATLANTA (AP) - Planting trees near your house will help ease the greenhouse effect as well as reduce your energy needs.

Three mature shade trees next to every U.S. home could save enough utility-generated energy to decrease carbon dioxide emissions by up to 18 million tons annually, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest product firm.

The burning of fossil fuels contributes to the greenhouse effect, which is caused by higher atmospheric levels of carbon dioxide that trap heat and increase surface temperatures. Trees, however, absorb carbon dioxide to produce carbohydrates for nourishment during photosynthesis and release oxygen.

In 1955, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a bill raising the minimum wage from 75 cents to $1 an hour.

The Penultimate Word

THANKS IN SPITE OF

There are some myths surrounding the first Thanksgiving. We have heard the story over and over again and it always comes out the same. These folks got together and had a feast of Thanksgiving and love. They were all in complete agreement without a single dissent.

This myth makes it seem like those folks had something we do not have. Heaven knows we could never put on such an event without the appropriate amount of bickering. Of course they did not have Clint Formby around, so they might have pulled it off a little better than we can.

The truth is those folks were human just like we are and, of course, they had human responses to the event. I will guarantee you there was a group of folks who thought the whole idea was silly and a waste of good food. They clustered around one of the large trees and absolutely refused to enjoy the day. Every party will have its wet-blanket group who are called to be sure no one has a good time.

And there were those who could not understand why they had to invite those "Indians!!" I can almost hear them say, "Now, I know the good Lord loves the Indians and, of course, I love them too, but they must learn to stay in their own place." No one told them this whole country was their place.

And of course there were those who did not like the menu. "Why on earth are we having turkey? Everyone knows how dry and tasteless turkey is. And who in the world decided on pumpkin pie?" This group grumbled behind their aprons all morning while the food was being prepared. "You know why Sister Sara was put in charge of the menu, don't you? She has always been his favorite."

And yet while the grumbling went on most of the folks found a way to pause and count their blessings.

Last Thursday was no different. There were those who found a way to be grateful in the middle of football games, too much food and the presence of a few old sore heads.

An AP News Analysis

Budget feud is campaign theme

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - As a campaign slogan, sequestration is not going to make it. Too long, almost a tongue-twister, it is four syllables of bureaucratic jargon. Besides, as one Democrat observed, most voters probably think it is an Olympic event having something to do with horses.

No such luck. What it is is the government code for automatic spending cuts, jargon masking the fact that Congress and the White House haven't managed to put together a budget that fits their own deficit rules.

President Bush has delivered a simple, Republican translation that is likely to be built into the GOP campaign of 1990: "Congress is to blame."

Bush has the better pulpit, but the Democrats aren't about to plead guilty. So the budget feud will become a theme of the contest for House and Senate seats next year, by which time the mess may be worse than it is now. The sequester system of spending reductions has been in effect for just short of a month, triggered by budget failure. Bush is threatening to leave it in place, unless Congress devises and delivers spending cuts of about $14 billion.

"Sequestration is a drastic action, but neither the administration nor the Congress must flinch from our obligation to keep this nation's deficit moving down and ultimately to reduce the debt," Bush said in self-appraisal of his presidency so far. But they've already flinched - the deficit hasn't been moving down.

The sequester system of spending reductions is part of a process of deadlines and ceilings that are supposed to rein in deficit spending and start trimming it. The automatic cuts that now are in effect, and become more drastic if they stay, are to reduce spending by an estimated $16.1 billion, although the final figure may turn out to be somewhat lower.

Bush now says that unless Congress can slice the deficit by at least $14 billion in a bill that still is being negotiated, he'll veto the bill and leave the automatic cuts in place. "We are prepared to manage the government under sequester," he said.

The president said the bill will have to produce real reductions in red ink without new taxes, without pushing off spending in a fashion that will push the deficit up in future budgets, and without gimmicks. He didn't define gimmicks, perhaps because the original administration plan for deficit reduction included savings to be realized by pushing up the date of a $3 billion military payroll, and dropping postal costs from the budget numbers.

But there also is an advantage for the administration in keeping the current cuts - Bush must send Congress a new federal budget for the year beginning Oct. 1, 1990, only two months from now. With the automatic cuts in place at least into the winter months, it will be easier to produce a budget meeting next year's deficit ceiling, $74 billion.

That also would strengthen his hand in opposing future tax increases.

Bush said he still wants to work with the Democrats in Congress for a bipartisan budget settlement that will bring down the deficits, and that politics can wait until the fall of 1990.

But budget pronouncements on both sides are taking on a political edge. "The American people know why this deficit isn't down," Bush said last Tuesday. "They see, 4 to 1, that the Congress is to blame."

It's not a new argument. When he signed a 1981 debt ceiling bill that pushed the limit past $1 trillion, Ronald Reagan said the measure "can stand as a monument to the policies of the past which brought it about, policies which as of today are reversed."

The government has had to triple the limit since then. Last week, just before a default deadline, Congress passed and Bush signed a bill increasing the debt limit to $3.12 trillion.

History of "The Tree" reviewed

NEW YORK (AP) - To most New Yorkers and many Americans, the Christmas tree in New York's Rockefeller Center is The Tree.

As this year's giant evergreen from Rockland County, New York, lights up (with 18,000 colored bulbs) in midtown Manhattan, it joins a long line of memorable trees that began with a simple tree put up by construction workmen grateful for work during the Depression.

A 1931 photo shows several dozen men grouped near the tree, festooned with droopy streamers, set up in the rubble of the demolished brownstones which stood on the site of today's Rockefeller Center. Under the tree an earthly version of Santa Claus is pictured handing out the best thing to come in time for Christmas during the early 1930s: paychecks.

Two years later the tree returned more formally, set up in front of the newly completed RCA Building, the flagship skyscraper of the new center. Since then, the tree tradition at the Rockefeller Center has continued unbroken - if occasionally altered - and is now a prime tourist magnet during the holiday season.

Its arrival, hoisting, decoration and official lighting at the Center's skating rink is something of a ritual in itself, heralded by press releases, news reports, and televised entertainment. Then, right after New Year's, the whole show comes down and disappears overnight.

Like so many New Yorkers themselves, the trees originally came from out of town. The tallest, in 1948, was a 90-foot Norway spruce from Mt. Kisco, N.Y. Other New York trees have come from Yaphank, Lake Ronkonkoma, Smithtown, Hurley, Saranac Lake, Suffern, Spring Valley, Rockland County, Valley Cottage, and Nanuet. New Jersey has contributed trees from Allamuchy, Morristown, Belvidere, Tenafly, Montclair, Far Hills, and Raritan Township. Trees have come from Island Pond, Coventry, Holland, East Montpelier and Danville, Vermont; Greenville and Dixfield, Maine; Leighton, Harveyville and Harford, Pa; Whitefield, N.H.; Podunk, Mass.; and the Petawawa Forest of Canada.

Decorations have reflected the times. During World War II, the tree was decked with red and white plastic globes and stars instead of lights because of wartime restrictions on electricity. The lights returned in 1945. Similarly, the number of lights was reduced in response to the energy crisis in 1973, with colored reflective disks added to compensate.

A NEW TREATMENT

NEW YORK (AP) - Although 5 million women suffer from "Dowager's Hump" (spinal osteoporosis), little could be done to prevent or correct the condition until now, according to Mature Health magazine.

The condition is characterized by a loss of bone density which can lead to a curvature of the spine.

A new treatment has been developed by Dr. Charles Y.C. Pak, chief of mineral metabolism and director of the General Clinical Research Center at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center.

The treatment involves the application of a new slow-release form of sodium fluoride with a calcium citrate supplement which has been shown to restore bone mass at a rate of 3 to 6 percent a year and to reduce the number of spinal fractures.

Pasta dishes can be simple or fancy for holiday fare

NEW YORK (AP) - Dressed up for company or pared down to a few basic items, a pasta dish can be as simple or as fancy as ingredients and imagination permit.

In most cases, ingredients for delicious pasta creations are readily on hand: stored in pantries and kitchen cabinets, hiding in refrigerators, tucked away on spice racks.

These items include basics such as salt and pepper, oil, butter or margarine, milk and cream, eggs, flour, onions and herbs (garlic, basil, oregano, tarragon, dill and chili peppers).

Canned goods include tomato sauce, tomato paste, tuna, beans, olives, lemon juice, soups, pimientos and nuts. Refrigerated goods include cheeses, leftover and fresh meats, fresh and frozen vegetables, and dressings.

Most items, including the shapes and sizes of pasta, are interchangeable.

For example, vegetables can easily be substituted for one another in dishes like pasta primavera and vegetarian linguine. Leftover chicken can be cut up for pasta dishes instead of chopped meat. For lasagne, cottage cheese can be exchanged for ricotta and spinach noodles used instead of plain.

Stir-frying noodles with meat and vegetable combinations transforms linguine into Chinese cuisine. For a Mediterranean appeal, pasta shells can be tossed with Greek olives and feta cheese. Likewise, red pepper pasta topped with beans and hot sauce can be the start to a Mexican fiesta.

Let your imagination be your pasta cookbook!

Lady Whitefaces fall in PD rematch Lamar combo tops Katy

The Hereford Lady Whitefaces were scheduled to regroup on Saturday morning against El Paso Irvin in the consolation semifinals of the Amarillo Invitational Tournament after a 48-33 loss to Palo Duro on Friday night.

"Palo Duro played a little better than they did here, but we were flat," said Hereford coach Dickie Faught. "We didn't play with any emotion at all, and we need to play with some emotion. We're the kind of team that needs to play with lots of emotion, and we just didn't do it Friday night." Shantel Cornelius had 12 points and Stacy White added 10 to lead the Lady Whitefaces.

The Hereford girls will begin District 1-4A play on Tuesday at Whiteface Gym, hosting defending Class 4A state champion Levelland at 8 p.m. The JV game will be at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The Hereford boys will be on the road Tuesday, going to Dimmitt for a non-conference tussle with the Bobcats at Middle School Gym.

When things got tough for Houston Lamar in its Class 5A high school football playoff battle Friday night against Katy, the Redskins turned to quarterback Marcus Batts and receiver Ryan Mathews.

They produced a touchdown late in the first half for a 7-7 tie and combined again for another TD late in the game that gave Lamar a 15-14 victory in the Astrodome.

Lamar, which finished the regular season ranked No. 3 among the state's 5A teams in the Associated Press poll, improved its record to 11-0-1. Katy, losing for the first time, finished 11-1.

Batts completed consecutive passes of 21 and 34 yards to Mathews before powering in on fourth-and-goal from the Katy 1 with 42 seconds left in the second quarter.

Katy held Batts in check most of the game, but on second-and-20 from the Lamar 45, with Katy holding a 14-7 lead, Batts threw a 55-yard touchdown pass to Mathews with 1:57 to play. John Manning's 2-point conversion on an option play gave Lamar the victory.

Mathews beat two Katy defenders and made a spectacular over-the-shoulder catch on the late touchdown.

"Ryan is a great player, and great players show up at funny times," Lamar coach Tom Nolen said.

In other Class 5A action, Converse Judson, the state's No. 1-ranked team, ousted Corpus Christi Carroll from the playoffs, 27-12; No. 7-ranked Aldine beat Deer Park 24-3; No. 8-ranked Willowridge took a 20-0 lead early in the third quarter and held off Houston Yates, 20-14; Grand Prairie beat Mesquite 57-17; and Lake Highlands beat North Garland 42-35.

In 4A games, Port Neches-Groves, whose only loss was to West Orange-Stark in the final game of the regular season, upset No. 2-ranked Jasper, 29-18. Houston C.E. King, which eliminated West Orange-Stark last week, stayed alive with a 27-21 victory over Dayton behind the offensive and defensive heroics of Pete Archie.

Archie ran for touchdowns of 32 and 7 yards. He also passed for 59 yards and intercepted two passes, including one at the C.E. King 5-yard-line on the game's final play.

A&M Consolidated ran its record to 11-0 by beating El Campo 14-0. Chapel Hill beat Lancaster 25-0, Edcouch-Elsa beat Uvalde 34-6, Fort Worth Brewer beat Stephenville 31-15, and Gregory-Portland beat Mercedes 23-17. Lamar Consolidated and Tomball fought to a tie, but Lamar Consolidated advanced via a 2-1 edge on penetrations. Schertz Clemens beat Austin Travis 13-9.

In a Class 3A battle of unbeaten, Montgomery defeated Crockett 20-15. Sharyland, unbeaten but once tied, was knocked out of the playoffs when Odem gained a 10-10 tie and had a 5-3 edge in penetrations.

Perennial power Daingerfield beat Clarksville 37-0, Gainesville beat Forney 28-0, and Gladewater beat Queen City 21-7. La Vega beat Navasota 33-28, Newton stunned Hampshire-Fannett 41-14, Bishop defeated Carrizo Springs 35-8 and Sweeny beat Medina Valley 28-7.

In Class 2A, six teams remained unbeaten and untied, while three other teams with perfect records fell by the wayside. Improving to 12-0 records were No. 1-ranked Groveton (39-15 over Overton), No. 2-ranked Lorena (35-6 over Italy), No. 3-ranked Refugio (42-7 over Ben Bolt), Cooper (55-27 over Harmony), Manor (14-2 over Shiner) and West Texas High (21-6 over Farwell).

Eliminated with their first losses of the season were Shallowater, a 25-7 victim of Panhandle; Grand Saline, which fell to Tatum, 17-3; and Farwell.

In Class 1A, No. 1-ranked Munday rolled on, beating Era 37-13, but No. 2 Thorndale and No. 3 Sudan also won to keep their records perfect. Thorndale defeated Crawford 42-0, and Sudan beat Sunray 42-12. Rotan, which must play Munday next week, ran its record to 11-0-1 by beating Santa Anna 13-0. Runge beat Nueces Canyon 43-26 to win the right to play Thorndale next, and Rankin advanced against Sunday by beating Anthony 22-7.

Elsewhere in 1A, Wheeler over Vega 34-11, Garden City over Wink 35-6, spur over Valley View 19-8, Baird over Gorman 23-20, Coolidge over Evadale 40-0, Collinsville over Union Hill 27-0, Frost over Chester 28-14, Bartlett over Riesel 48-7, and Center Port over Charlotte 25-0. Bells tied Lone Oak, 14-14, and advanced on penetrations.

In six-man football, No. 1-ranked Fort Hancock was paired against Panther Creek Saturday night in Fort Stockton. McLean, Christoval and Guthrie stayed unbeaten. McLean beat Wellman 46-0, Christoval beat Sands 52-34, and Guthrie edged Newcastle 29-28.

Lazbuddie advanced by beating New Home 49-6, Zephyr beat Blum 57-26, Cherokee defeated Aquilla 46-28, and Jayton advanced despite a 50-50 tie with Rule because of a 23-16 edge in first downs.

Hogs inch closer to Cotton Bowl

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - The Arkansas Razorbacks will be pulling for the Baylor Bears and Houston Cougars today. The Hogs could officially be in the Cotton Bowl tonight.

If Baylor can beat Texas and Houston defeats Texas Tech, then Arkansas is home free.

The Razorbacks, who beat Texas A&M University 23-22 Friday, can also earn the Cotton Bowl berth outright with a victory over lowly Southern Methodist next Saturday in Little Rock.

The Southwest Conference championship game was settled on a 70-yard scoring drive that included a controversial call.

"You couldn't ask for more in a championship situation," said Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield. "Texas A&M could have tied and we couldn't afford to tie and have a chance at the Cotton Bowl. That's why we went for the win."

Fullback Barry Foster's two-yard touchdown run with 2:52 to play was the game-winner for the Hogs, who lost 17-3 in the Cotton Bowl to UCLA last January.

Line judge Ron Underwood of Little Rock, an Arkansas graduate, made a critical interference call that kept the drive alive. Instant replay indicated it was a proper call, although Texas A&M protested.

"You just don't know how sweet this is," Hatfield said. "We're ready to go back to the Cotton Bowl and show more than we did last year."

Arkansas (9-1 overall and 6-1 in SWC play) will likely get Tennessee as a Cotton Bowl opponent.

"This is as good a win as I've had since I've been at Arkansas," Hatfield said. "We'll savor this one a little while before we get ready for SMU."

The Aggies (7-3 and 5-2) will get a consolation prize when they are invited to the Sun Bowl or John Hancock Bowl, as it was recently renamed. The bowl will be played on Dec. 30 in El Paso with the University of Pittsburgh also expected to be invited.

"We will accept the Sun Bowl bid but it's a big disappointment not to win the championship," Slocum said. "We had it right there then it got away."

It took an interference call on safety Larry Horton on 4th and 3 at the Aggie 13-yard line to keep the Hogs game-winning drive alive. Officials ruled he tackled tight end Billy Winston too soon.

Horton disagreed. "I thought it was a clean play," Horton said. "I jumped over the top of him. I hit the ball and then I made contact with his body."

"I thought Horton made a great play," said Slocum. "The flag came mighty late. Horton has a right to the ball too. It's a shame the game came down to a penalty."

Arkansas struck for two touchdowns in 52 seconds to take a 14-0 first quarter lead but the Razorbacks had to hang on for a 17-14 halftime edge over the rallying Aggies.

Layne Talbot's 23-yard field goal tied it 17-17 then Keith McAfee sprinted 46 yards to setup a 38-yard field goal by Talbot to give A&M the lead.

Arkansas punter Allen Meacham took an intentional safety with 29 seconds left to get the Hogs out of a deep hole. Then Ken Benson recovered quarterback Lance Pavlas' fumble on the final play of the game at midfield to preserve the victory.

It was the first time Arkansas had defeated A&M in College Station since 1981. The Aggies had a streak of 19 consecutive home conference victories going into the game.

NFL's replays anything but instant

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) - Somehow, instant replay has turned into the monster that ate the NFL.

What had been a noble idea by former Dallas Cowboys club president Tex Schramm and the competition committee has become the biggest bore this side of watching metal rust.

If you saw Sunday's Miami-Dallas game, you know what I mean. A fast-paced, well-played game was slowed down to a crawl by 14 instant replay reviews. It was like watching the Indianapolis 500 only to see the cars stop after every lap to let a chicken cross the road.

Only one decision by the officials on the field was changed by replay official L.T. Bonner. It changed a punt from being marked on the 1 yard line to the 3 yard line.

The game lasted 3 hours and 14 minutes and should have been over at least 28 minutes earlier (giving a very generous 2 minutes per replay decision).

It was so bad that the Dallas fans booed a decision that favored the Cowboys.

"I don't know what they were doing up there in the replay booth," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson.

"But I've already said enough bad things about instant replay. It just takes away from the flow and excitement of the game."

Dallas owner Jerry Jones said he's going to vote against instant replay no matter what type of improvements are suggested. Jones said there are just too many delays, and the continuity of the game is being destroyed.

Quarterback Troy Aikman called it "ridiculous."

"It was obvious what happened on most of the plays," Aikman said. "What was going on?"

Without Schramm and retired commissioner Pete Rozelle around, there are predictions instant replay is in hot water.

But wait. Before it's killed, the NFL should consider using a refined version of what they had in the United States Football League, where a coach had a certain number of challenges and if the play wasn't overruled, he was punished by being charged with a time out.

There is the undeniable fact that instant replay can save a stupid decision in a big game. One of the biggest plays in the last Super Bowl was overturned by a replay official after a bad call on the field.

But it shouldn't be used on every nickel-and-dime play between the goal lines.

Here's what should be done: Give each coach 1 challenge in each half and a wild card challenge to be used anytime during the game. That would be a maximum of 6 stoppages of play. For the sake of fair play, we'd all spare an extra 15 minutes to get the proper calls on the big plays of the game.

If the NFL can't do it this way, then drop it, buddy.

Judge Wapner on People's Court can make quicker decisions.

Eastland's Tracy Alford just trying to get life back to normal

By BILL HART
Abilene Reporter News

EASTLAND (AP) - Somewhere in the back room at Princess Krantz' home is a "diploma." It's not framed because it means nothing to the family now.

But that little piece of paper, a General Equivalency Diploma is the reason Eastland High School must forfeit four football games, including three District 8-2A victories.

It belongs to her son, Tracy Alford, a reserve lineman, who was ruled ineligible by the District 8-2A executive committee because the University Interscholastic League maintains the GED means Tracy is already a graduate and graduates are not allowed to compete in high school athletics.

When he took the test last spring at Cisco Junior College, Alford had already withdrawn from Eastland High School and wanted to go into the armed forces. Someone had told him the service would take him with a GED.

He passed the test.

But when he went to enlist, he was told that although he could enlist, he couldn't actually serve until he had graduated from high school. The GED was worthless. He later found out that the GED would not get him into a major college or university, either.

So he enrolled at Eastland High School this fall, where he is classified as a sophomore, to get his diploma and go into the service. He also went out for football but was ineligible the first six weeks because he didn't have enough credits.

He made his grades and became eligible academically, but then he became ineligible because of that little piece of paper.

Tracy didn't go back to school this fall to play football, but to get an education and in his own words, "to put my life together."

You see, Tracy admits to being a drug addict and an alcoholic. He dropped out of Eastland High School at midterm 1987, not caring about education. He came back in 1988 for nine days, then quit again.

On Sept. 23, 1988, he entered a program in Dallas called Straight Inc., where he stayed six months. He didn't graduate, in case the UIL is interested.

"I've gone to AA (Alcoholics Anonymous) and to NA (Narcotics Anonymous) meetings, and I've been clean and straight for a year, a month and 10 days," he said Thursday. "All I wanted to do was to get my life in order and this (the forfeitures) comes up."

"But it's not going to get me down. I spent a couple of days in treatment this week learning to cope with things."

Mrs. Krantz said, "We didn't mention Tracy had the GED nor did we try to hide it because it was worthless, it meant nothing."

"He just came back to further his high school education, and we were totally unaware that it would affect his playing athletics," she said.

"We never meant to hurt this town or the kids, especially the kids, because Tracy has grown up here with most of them. They're his friends."

It doesn't bother Tracy too much that he has lost his eligibility because that's not why he's in school. But what has happened to the team is another matter.

"It hurts me and it's unfair that the school and the guys on the team are being punished for something that they are innocent of," he said.

"God is taking care of me and He has promised that I won't be burdened with more than I can handle. Maybe He's telling me that football has become too hard for me to handle and that I need to get back to doing the things that will straighten up my life."

"Sobriety means far more to me than school, football and life; otherwise, I'd be back on the streets. All of this (the district ruling and forfeitures) is tough for anyone who is clean, but it's especially tough on me because I'm also trying to clean up my life."

Eastland High School students and athletes were supportive of Alford Thursday, and from time to time those in the hallway would come up to him, pat him on the shoulders, or give him a hug.

Some shed tears with him and his mother.

"This has been a very tough day for me, but I just had to come to school today of all days," he said. "I've been running from my troubles all my life and I'm just tired of running."

Alford said he appreciates the encouragement from the students and from the team. "But I especially appreciate the support I've gotten from people here who have been through what I'm going through. They can relate more than those who haven't been there."

"I've gotta climb a big mountain to get where I want to in my life and I'm a long way from the top, but I'm going to get there. It's going to take time and I know it, if I'm to get people's trust. And I want to make something of myself. That's why I'm not going to let this set me back."

"I'm not looking for pity nor do I want sympathy from anyone, I just want to get myself straightened out."

There were times when both Alford and his mother broke down in telling their story, and at times all in the room had lumps in their throats. It wasn't easy when Mrs. Krantz admitted that her other two sons and her daughter are currently in recovery from drug addiction and alcoholism, too.

"I want you to know that I am very proud of Tracy today. He didn't have to talk about this, but he took a giant step today by doing so," she said. "I think he'll be all right."

So do others in Eastland who have been working with him.

A CHRISTMAS SAFETY CHECK

- Before hanging strings of lights, spread them on the floor and check for frayed or bare wires, cracked insulation, loose connections, and damaged plugs or light sockets.
- Check extension cords for wear or damage and don't run them across walking areas.
- Test lights before putting them on the tree. Unplug them before making repairs or replacing bulbs.
- Overloading circuits with too many lights can cause fire. Follow manufacturer's instructions about the number of lights allowed on one circuit.
- Never string lights on a metallic tree.
- Choose a fresh, green tree, trim its base and keep it in plenty of water. If the needles are brown and break off easily, it could be a fire risk.
- If you buy an artificial tree, make sure it has been tested for flammability by Underwriters Laboratories (UL).
- Always turn off lights before leaving home or going to bed. You'll save money and be safer, too.
- Do not use inside lights on the outside. All outside lighting equipment, including lights, cords and plugs, should be waterproof and made for outdoor use. Also, hang sockets downward and don't leave a socket empty.
- When hanging lights on the rooftop or in tall trees outdoors, stay clear of electrical lines.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Tommy Lasorda, the manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers, had some good seasons pitching in the minor leagues but never won a major league game.

Lasorda pitched in eight games over a two-season span, 1954-55, for the Brooklyn Dodgers and did not figure in a decision. But in 1956 Tommy got into 18 games for Kansas City of the American League and had a record of no victories and four losses.

That made his full major league record 0-4 with an earned-run average of 6.52.

AGRICULTURAL MILESTONES

In 1888, the first Annual Report of the new Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) said, "Soon after the organization of the Station, many letters were received requesting the Station to investigate the root rot or cotton blight, a disease that destroys cotton totally or partially on thousands of acres of what would otherwise be the most productive cotton lands in the state."

In December 1888, TAES Bulletin No. 4 reported the first observations on root rot of cotton. Briefly, the author recognized that the problem was a soil-borne disease and that plants on alkali soils did not seem to be troubled by root rot. Using his theories, he drew conclusions relative to control which are still valid today. He also discussed a lot of theories of others as to the cause and cure, most of which were wrong.

In the past century, we have learned what causes the problem of cotton root rot and a few ways to combat it, or alleviate the disastrous losses. But we have not eliminated it. Though it is often called cotton root rot, the disease actually attacks at least 2,000 other plants and is the reason that many plants either won't grow or don't do well in some parts of the state.

Another concern appeared in the 1890s in the form of a small gray beetle that was destined to grow into a problem of giant proportions for cotton producers. The "Mexican Cotton Boll Weevil" had invaded the Rio Grande Valley and spread north and east. By 1899 concern was widespread enough that the Texas Legislature passed a bill authorizing employment of an entomologist that, among other things, was to "devise means of destroying the boll weevil, if possible."

In 1904, when Station scientists published Bulletin No. 74 on INSECTS MISTAKEN FOR THE MEXICAN COTTON BOLL WEEVIL, they prefaced it with, "Owing to the large number of insects mistaken for the Cotton Boll Weevil sent us for determination, the following bulletin has been prepared to describe the more common of these insects, and how they may be distinguished from the Boll Weevil."

These were the opening guns in the long battle between the boll weevil and cotton producers, backed by Station scientists, that is still fought today.

Ryan will make announcement

HOUSTON (AP) - Baseball strikeout king Nolan Ryan probably will not seek the Texas agriculture commissioner's office, sources told the Houston Chronicle.

Ryan, who just completed his 22nd major league season, is expected to announce his intentions at a Texas Farm Bureau convention in Fort Worth Monday.

Vernie Glasson, executive director of the Texas Farm Bureau, said he did not know what Ryan would say during his group's convention at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Sources quoted by the Chronicle said the Texas Rangers pitcher, formerly with the Houston Astros, will opt to continue hurling for the Rangers rather than running for office.

Ryan could not be reached for comment Thursday by The Associated Press.

As Ryan apparently prepared to back away from the race, state Rep. Rick Perry of Haskell, who recently switched parties to become a Republican, inched closer to announcing in the race.

"The decision has basically been made," Perry said, noting a formal announcement will be made sometime in December.

Perry said he believed Ryan would announce that he will pitch full time and not run for office.

"He's going to make the best decision first for Nolan Ryan and his family, and then for his teammates and his fans," Perry said.

The bureau had approached Ryan, who farms near Alvin, to run as a Republican against incumbent Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, a Democrat.

Ryan, 42, earns $1.4 million a year with the Rangers, while the agriculture commissioner job would pay $75,000 a year.

Any campaign for agriculture commissioner would require that Ryan either retire from baseball or attempt to campaign during the baseball season.

Hightower has been at odds with the Farm Bureau since he first took office in 1983. The farm group said Hightower's efforts to improve safety in the handling of pesticides resulted in unnecessary regulation.

Expert: beef exports up

LEXINGTON, Neb. (AP) - New markets in Japan and Eastern Europe present an opportunity to triple American beef exports despite the western European ban on beef with growth hormones, the president of the U.S. Meat Export Federation said.

Alan Middaugh, in a speech to the Nebraska Rural Radio Association, also said beef producers should play a bigger role in the exportation of their product.

"New doors continue to open," Middaugh said. "Right now, 2.9

percent of our domestic production of beef and pork is being shipped overseas. I think it is realistic to increase that amount to 10 percent.

"Jan. 1, 1990, we lose the European market because of (growth) hormones we use during production, but new markets in Japan have already opened, and markets in Eastern Europe show great opportunity," he said Monday night.

Middaugh said that eight years ago less than 1 percent of U.S. meat production was shipped overseas. Because of increased exports, he said, U.S. cattle producers received about $30 more per head in 1988 than would have been possible without exports.

"Exports really do help what you can get for your cattle. And the future continues to get better," he said. "The opening of the Japanese market has provided enormous opportunities to people like yourselves, as well as ConAgra and IBP."

Middaugh said foreign governments respond to pressure, as long as exporters are willing to communicate and work with that government's people.

"You have to be willing to commit yourself to the task," he said. "A key to a successful trade settlement is to stay with it for years. The correct window of opportunity soon opens. Foreigners also like to know who they are dealing with. They want someone trustworthy."

Middaugh said a market plan is essential. He foresees export growth to come from the medium-sized packers who do something different to market their product.

"You must have market intelligence, and you better know the territory," Middaugh said. "You need to put the ideas into their language, to something they can understand."

Middaugh said communication is especially important. For example, Middaugh said, the Japanese market might not have opened if the Livestock-based federation didn't have a representative who speaks fluent Japanese living in Japan.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department says two farms near Boone, Iowa, are in friendly competition to test the merits of low-input methods against more traditional ways of producing crops.

Information will be gathered by USDA scientists over a number of years to help determine which kind of farming is superior, the department's Agricultural Research Service said Wednesday. The study began last spring, and results of the 1989 harvest are being analyzed.

Jerry L. Hatfield of the USDA agency said the Iowa project is "one of the first studies to combine basic scientific studies with an economic analysis."

Tech president happy as leader

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK (AP) - After a career of being No. 2, Robert Lawless has reached the pinnacle.

The president of Texas Tech University and its Health Sciences Center realized his 15-year ambition of leading a major university when the nine regents unanimously hired him March 30.

Now he aims to make Texas Tech No. 1, as well - a research institution on the same level as Texas A&M and the University of Texas.

"This looked like a place where you could look back 10 years from now and say, 'Now it's an institution of the first rank, and I had something to do with it,'" Lawless said.

Tech, with 24,000 students, mostly from Texas, has had a reputation of being the place to go if one is not accepted to the University of Texas or Texas A&M.

As Lawless puts it: "High school counselors would say, 'You can always get in Texas Tech, but try to go somewhere else first if you can.'"

Since taking office July 1, Lawless has tightened admissions standards, getting rid of the probationary admission under which students who didn't meet standards were admitted anyway and monitored for their progress.

"There is some correlation to how good a school is to how difficult it is to get in," Lawless said.

He is trying to attract more scholarship and research money and identify types of research where the school can become the national leader, such as rural health and development of crops for arid regions.

He is getting good reviews. "From what I know and what I've perceived, I've been very impressed with Dr. Lawless," said Edward Anderson, chairman of mechanical engineering. "He appears to have the right priorities for what Texas Tech has to do."

Those priorities, Anderson said, are upgrading Tech's research capabilities and its image.

J.L. Gulley, a Tyler oilman, Tech regent and member of the search committee, said he is pleased with Lawless' performance and was impressed by Lawless' pledge during the selection process that Tech "would be his final shot at education."

"He had an idea for the betterment of this university, its Health Sciences Center, its law school - his whole final push," Gulley said. "He's not like some younger person who would use the job as a stepping stone."

Lawless, 52, makes it clear he considers the Texas Tech presidency the culmination of his professional life.

He first set his sights a university presidency while serving as No. 2 in the hierarchy at the University of Houston, as senior vice chancellor in 1980-82.

But his path took a seven-year detour while he rose to the No. 2 position at Dallas-based Southwest Airlines.

His dream of heading a university was revived when Texas Tech regents included him in their search for someone to replace Lauro Cavazos, now U.S. education secretary.

By one standard, moving to Tech was a step down. Lawless and his wife, Marcy - who was Southwest's vice president in charge of personnel and now volunteers as Tech's first lady - took a pay cut from a combined $350,000 to Lawless's presidential salary of about $160,000.

"Certainly I felt it would be coming down in terms of income, but it was a situation of being comfortable with what you're living on," he said.

Lawless said he is much busier at Tech than he was at Southwest. He and Marcy attend dinners and functions almost daily as they introduce themselves to city and university leaders. He averages more than a speech a day.

"From July 1 to the end of the semester, I think we have about three evenings when we don't have something to do in the evening. I think a lot of that has something to do with being in the No. 1 position compared to the No. 2 position," Lawless said.

The native of Goose Creek, near Houston, appears to relish his new job. When he's not chatting with local politicians, meeting alumni or addressing faculty groups, he walks about his spacious office in shirt sleeves. He sports an oversize wristwatch bearing the Tech double-T logo. He prefers to talk with visitors around a low coffee table about 10 paces from his lifeboat-size desk.

Lawless is proud of his varied career. While he was pursuing a doctorate in operations research at Texas A&M from 1964 to 1968, he taught freshmen math and helped design a way to smoothly merge highways together.

After teaching industrial engineering at Texas A&M and management at the University of Houston, he was assigned to set up Houston's doctoral program in business. From September 1980 to June 1982, he ran the University of Houston's day-to-day operations.

In 1978, Lawless was assigned to help Houston lawyer Herbert Kelleher straighten out the university's investment program. Four years later, when Kelleher was hired as Southwest chairman, president and chief executive officer, he called Lawless, saying he needed a finance man.

Lawless, who had decided around 1975 that he was a good administrator and wanted to be a university president, mulled Kelleher's offer for a couple of months, then accepted.

He thought the Southwest job would be exciting, and he was uncertain whether he'd ever be offered a university presidency. He figured he was giving up that goal for good when he was promoted at Southwest to operations director, in 1985.

But then the Tech search committee came calling, and Lawless went along on a lark, he said.

The link between his jobs at the University of Houston, at Southwest and at Tech is the drive for efficiency, he said. He thinks of the university as a business and students as customers to be satisfied.

His ambition now, he said, is to be remembered as the president who transformed Tech into a premier research university with a high reputation.

"That's really kind of my goal," he said. "Leaving the industrial world to come out here to provide some leadership."

The Australian walking fish can not only survive out of water, he can actually climb trees to feed on insects there.

WHO CAN CUT YOUR EMPLOYEE TRAINING COSTS IN HALF?

There are hundreds of jobless people in the Texas Panhandle who want to work. The problem is, they lack the skills necessary to get the jobs that are available.

Now there's an organization that shares the cost of training when a business hires and trains the jobless. It's called the Panhandle Job Training Partnership, and it will pay up to 50% of the cost of on-the-job training.

If you're in business, the next time you need employees, call the Panhandle Job Training Partnership. We'll recruit and screen applicants to your specifications. You decide which to hire. Once their training begins, we'll reimburse you for up to 50% of their training costs. And when the training is completed, you can receive tax credits for wages paid to trainees who become long-term employees.

The Panhandle Job Training Partnership is a local organization directed by local people. Virtually any business, large or small, in the Texas Panhandle can participate.

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I shared a sampling of responses from correspondents expressing their view on the legalization of same-sex marriages.

It seems there are no moderates when it comes to this issue. People are either passionately in favor of it or vehemently opposed. I must say again that I was appalled by the intolerance and viciousness of so many readers.

Yesterday the count was 55,000 and the mail continues to pour in. It remains 2 to 1 against legalization of same-sex marriages.

The Canadian mail is more objective and less shrill than that from the U.S. This subject seems to be of little interest in Bangkok, Seoul, Hong Kong, Tokyo, Caracas, Mexico City and other foreign cities (very little mail from there), but since there is such great interest among my Northern American readers, I've decided to share some additional responses.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS.: I vote NO. The notion that members of the same sex should have the rights and privileges of normal couples is outrageous. I am not a religious fundamentalist, but I believe that homosexuality is morally wrong. Those faggots should go back in the closet where they belong.

CHICAGO: The family unit is the core of civilization. This means parents and children. When homosexuals can be biologically altered so that they can produce a child I will vote YES. Until then, I'm voting NO.

JACKSON, MISS.: You are sure to be swamped with letters from every queer in the country. I hope enough normal people write so that you will get an accurate reading of what decent folks think. Those of us in our right minds find the concept of homosexuals being allowed to marry as just plain nuts.

CHARLESTON, W.VA.: If society had not placed such a stigma on homosexuality, I would have been able to face myself as I truly am instead of living a lie, marrying a wonderful woman and messing up her life.

LUBBOCK, TEX.: Homosexuality is against the law of nature, God and Texas. Remember that commercial, "It is not nice to fool Mother Nature"? Well, that's what the perverts are trying to do and it doesn't work.

RALEIGH, N.C.: Marriage? I wouldn't go that far, but since I have been in a monogamous same-sex relationship for 10 years I certainly would like to see a tax break. I am in the 30 percent bracket because I am considered single. My significant other and I are just as much "married" as many of our friends, yet we get none of the tax advantages.

MIAMI: Allowing homosexuals to marry is insane. Why give this special privilege to a segment of society that has given us AIDS?

MILWAUKEE, WIS.: I think all the gays should get married and go live in California. It would be another Sodom. Then when God decides to do away with them, as he did in biblical times, they would all be in one place.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers' Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada send $4.45.)

Doctor's Discovery May End Cholesterol Problems Forever

DALLAS - Dr. DeLamar Gibbons M.D., revealed today phenomenal results of a two-year clinical test that included over 1,000 patients who used a formula that is now being called ALBACAR 2000. Dr. Gibbons is the former director of clinical research for the Saturday Evening Post, a noted author and head of research and development for the Academy of Health. Dr. Gibbons said, "Using ALBACAR 2000 as directed may reduce the risk of heart attack, coronary heart disease, or stroke by reducing and controlling cholesterol levels; this could save up to 500,000 lives a year." Dr. Gibbons stated that positive levels of cholesterol and triglyceride (blood fat) reduction were exhibited within 14 days with the most dramatic reductions occurring within a 30- to 60-day period. ALBACAR 2000 is safe for everyone and you do not have to make dietary changes to achieve positive results. ALBACAR 2000 uses ingredients that are recognized as safe and is available on a limited basis through physicians and pharmacies. A 30-day supply of 180 wafers is only $29.95.

ONE THING IN COMMON

NEW YORK (AP) - Movie star Faye Dunaway, singer Helen Reddy and author Paul Theroux have this in common: they were born in 1941.

Others born that year include movie stars Ryan O'Neal, Juliet Mills, Ann-Margret, Tom Conti, Sarah Miles, Elke Sommer, Stacy Keach and Susannah York.

Musician-composers Bob Dylan, Paul Anka, Art Garfunkel and Chubby Checker also have 1941 birthdates, along with singers Vikki Carr, Neil Diamond, John Davidson, Joan Baez and Dionne Warwick.

from Duncan & Boyd and many specialty items.

The goal of this committee is to make the Cattle Barron's Ball, a major fundraiser across the state of Texas, into an annual event that will raise $1 million over the next 10 years. All of the proceeds from this event will be used to aid in research, education and services needed by the local unit.

In keeping with the spirit of the American Cancer Society, the CBB has named Carol Cline Harlow as Honorary Chairman. "As a cancer patient, I have used the American Cancer Society greatly for the vast amount of information they provide regarding all aspects of cancer. There are many services that I have not used yet, but the one benefit all cancer patients receive is the discoveries made by research," said Harlow.

Select safe toys

By The Associated Press

Take toys seriously as you shop for the holidays.

To make safe and appropriate selections, keep in mind this checklist offered by the Toy Manufacturers of America, an industry trade association:

- Use the age group label as a guide and look for other safety messages printed on the packaging.

- Think about other children who may have access to the toy in your home. A toy intended for an older child may be dangerous in the hands of a younger sibling, so consider supervision and storage.

- When buying toys for children under three, avoid those with small parts that can be swallowed or with sharp points or edges that could be hazardous.

- Stuffed animals and dolls should have sturdy, well-sewn seams, and attached items like eyes and noses should be securely fastened so they cannot be bitten or pulled off.

- Rubber toys such as rattles, squeakers or teething rings should be too large to fit in an infant's mouth, even when compressed.

- Electric toys with heating elements should be chosen only for children over 8, and then only when there will be adult supervision.

- Toy arrows and darts should have blunt tips made of rubber, flexible plastic or cork. Make sure the tips are securely attached to their shafts.

- If the toy is painted, look for the words "non-toxic" on the package or label. Fabrics should be labeled "flame retardant" or "flame resistant," and stuffed and cloth toys should be marked "machine-surface washable." Electrical toys should have the Underwriters Laboratories "UL Approved" tag.

- Choose a toy chest that has a removable lid or a lid with spring-loaded support that will hold it securely open. The chest should have smooth, finished edges, holes for ventilation and hinge-line clearance to prevent pinched fingers.

The TMA also notes that plastic wrappings from toys and other products should be discarded immediately. Adults should check toys periodically and encourage safe play habits, such as following recommended instructions and secure storage. Toys appropriate to an older child but potentially hazardous to a younger sibling in the house should be stored out of reach of the younger child. Games or toys with small pieces are especially hazardous to small children, who tend to put things into their mouths.

Establish a toy storage habit with your children and explain to them how accidents can happen with unattended toys. Large toys like wagons or bikes should be protected from the elements and not left where they can become fire or safety hazards. Encourage children to inspect toys for needed repairs or replacements.

To maintain crib safety, the crib gym meant to be a grasping exerciser for your baby should be removed once he reaches 5 months or begins to push up on his hands and knees. Crib toys should never be hung or attached with anything that might entangle the infant. Replace the plastic side railing on the crib if it becomes worn and brittle from the baby's teething.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - Our growing opposition to nuclear war won't save us from annihilation if we accept conventional warfare as a permissible alternative, according to a University of Rochester philosopher. "Conventional war has acquired a kind of respectability," says Robert Holmes, author of "On War and Morality."

Check labels closely on bottled waters

NEW YORK (AP) - Even though many labels show beautiful mountain streams and cascading waterfalls, not all bottled waters are the same. Some may be little more than purified tap water.

The price of a bottled water may not indicate quality. Heavy bottles traveling long distances carry high shipping costs.

So check labels closely; they'll provide clues to what's inside.

There are 650 different brands of bottled water sold in Canada and the United States. Michele Asbar of Naya Beverages in Mirabel, Quebec, Canada, says some bottled waters are nothing more than treated tap water.

"As with other products in the food stores today, consumers need to understand the differences in bottled water and become alert label readers," Asbar says.

When choosing a bottled water, look at the label. The line beneath the brand name tells you whether it's natural, treated or distilled water.

NATURAL SPRING WATER=
Natural spring water must originate from a natural aquifer, or underground spring, with nothing added or taken away. It may be naturally carbonated, or still (non-carbonated).

Not all natural spring waters are the same. A major difference is the amount of dissolved minerals, or solids, they contain. The lower the dissolved mineral salts, the better the taste. However, you do want a small amount of minerals in the water or it will taste flat.

The container used to bottle natural spring waters can make a difference in taste. For reasons of breakage and shipping weight, most bottles of still water are plastic. Polyvinyl chloride

(PVC) is the most common material, but using this material can mean the transfer of outside odors through to the water. Polyethylene terephthalate (PET) is a newer packaging material that does not allow foreign odors to penetrate.

TREATED WATER=
Treated water is essentially tap water, with the harmful bacteria removed. Ozone and chlorine, among the most commonly used additives, are effective purifiers, but may leave a bitter aftertaste.

DISTILLED WATER=
Distilled water is also known as demineralized and salt- and chemical-free water. Distilled water is tap water with the undesirable bacteria and mineral content removed. This can be accomplished by charcoal filtration and deionization and, in some cases, carbonating the water. Distilled water can serve as drinking water, but the absence of minerals leaves a flat taste.

DON'T USE ICE CUBES=
If you drink bottled water, don't make your ice cubes from tap water. "Cubes made from ordinary tap water can't help but detract from the purity of bottled water, so chill bottled water, just as you would fine champagne," Asbar says.

ABOUT THE COMPANY=
Naya draws its water from a huge underground layer of water that is 250 feet below the Laurentian Mountains. The water passed through natural filters of limestone and shale and is protected under a waterproof seal of hardened clay. The aquifer lies beneath 20 million square feet of wilderness, far from industrial development.

The water is bottled without contact with outside air, piped through stainless steel directly from the source to the bottles. Clear bottles made of polyethylene terephthalate are used to guard against absorption of foreign tastes or odors.

Film holiday festivities

Camcorder users filming holiday festivities should vary their shots - using pan, tilt, zoom or different camera angles - to keep the interest level high.

But don't overdo it, or audiences may get dizzy, cautions the 8mm Video Council, a New York-based industry trade group.

Know when to stop shooting when filming children's parties, the organization also says. "Though it doesn't seem long, one to two minutes per activity is plenty, and will make for better viewing later."

Other suggestions:
- Keep the camera stationary and let the people create the action in your video.

- Don't backlight your subject. "Backlighting will make your subjects' features completely unrecognizable."

- When videotaping indoors, consider supplementary lights to accentuate color.

- Never aim the camcorder directly at the sun or a bright light or you risk causing permanent damage.

- Press the "white balance" button before shooting in a new setting. "This will automatically compensate for any discrepancies in lighting."

- Make use of your camcorder's high fidelity sound capabilities. But unless you're narrating, let your subjects do the talking.

Now's nog time, and here are egg nog recipes offered by Meyers's Rum: ORIGINAL EGG NOG
12 egg yolks
1/2 pound sugar
1 quart light cream
1 bottle (750ml) dark rum
1 quart heavy cream

Beat 12 egg yolks with the sugar until mixture is thick and pale yellow. Stir in the light cream and the rum. Chill three hours. Then whip the heavy cream until stiff. Pour the rum mixture into a punch bowl and fold in the cream. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Makes 24 punch cup servings. EGG NOG GLACE=

4 large egg yolks 1 cup extra fine sugar 1 cup half-and-half 1 teaspoon ground nutmeg 1 teaspoon vanilla extract 6 tablespoons dark rum 2 cups chilled heavy cream dash of salt

Beat the egg yolks, sugar, half-and-half, nutmeg and vanilla extract in a bowl with an electric mixer. Set the bowl in a saucpan of hot water. Beat the mixture until it is thickened and roughly double its original volume (10 minutes). Stir in the rum. Set the bowl into a tray of ice cubes and continue beating until the mixture is cold. Add the cream and salt and beat the mixture well. Transfer the mixture to your ice-cream machine and freeze it according to manufacturer's instructions. Makes one quart.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I like to think of myself as being organized. I try to accomplish my everyday routine with ease and no stress. Since I work full time, I don't have a lot of time for grocery shopping. Here are my favorite tips to help make it faster and easier.

I made a master list that is set up the same as the grocery-store aisles. This saves trips from one end of the store to the other.

I choose a store that has all the services I need. For instance, I like a store with a bakery, delicatessen, pharmacy, photo developing and check cashing so that all my needs can be met in one stop.

Before leaving for the store, I always make sure I have everything I need on my list. I also check with all my family members to see if they need something that is not on the master list, like toiletries or school supplies.

I usually shop late in the evening when the store is less crowded.

If I need to buy paper towels or toilet tissue, I buy several rolls. This way I never run out. I do this with all non-perishable items. Running to the store for one or two items is a waste of time. — Belinda Reaser, Marion, Texas

A woman after my own heart! I always buy in bulk to the point that my husband refuses to go to the store with me when toilet paper and paper towels are on sale. — Heloise

AIRLINE FOOD

Dear Heloise: I never liked the food served on airlines. I recently called a travel agent to make some reservations and the agent asked me if I wanted a dinner flight. I told her I didn't care for the meals they served and would much rather bring fresh fruit or other snacks.

She told me that airlines offer menu options. They even have a fruit plate. I was shocked! Now whenever I fly I always ask for the fruit plate. — Amy F., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Airlines do offer menu options and I always order one when making my reservation. You can usually order low-salt, low-calorie, low-fat, low-cholesterol or even vegetarian. It's a good idea to confirm your selection 24 hours before departure. — Heloise

STOCKING TREE

Dear Heloise: We moved into a new home recently and are now faced with the absence of a fireplace.

"Where, oh where, are we to hang our Christmas stockings?" was my children's question. I knew that I had to think of something and quick!

I got a brainstorm. I purchased one of those popular pole planters. Since our family numbers four and the pole has four hooks, I found my solution. We now have a stocking "tree."

My children thought it was the greatest. — Rhonda Kay, Colorado Springs, Colo.

BIRTHDAY BOY

Dear Heloise: This year I wanted to do something to make my young son's birthday a little more special.

I decided on the following. After he went to bed the night before and I was sure he was asleep, I blew up about 20 balloons and decorated his room with them. In the morning he was so excited, and it helped him start off his special day. — Tim's Mom, Roanoke, Va.

Initiation scheduled Nov. 27

Members of the Order of Eastern Star No. 312 are reminded of a called meeting at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 27 in the Masonic Hall for initiation. Presiding will be Doris Wilson, Worthy Matron and Marvin Coffey, past patron.

On July 8, 1896, William Jennings Bryan captivated the Democratic National Convention in Chicago with a speech in which he denounced supporters of the gold standard, saying, "You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold." The next day, Bryan was nominated for president in the first of three unsuccessful bids for the White House.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

The spirit of Walt Disney is alive and well, and shining with renewed vigor in...

THE LITTLE MERMAID: A film adaptation of the enchanting Hans Christian Andersen fantasy about a beautiful young mermaid who falls in love with a handsome human prince.

Hans Christian Andersen ranks at the top of great storytellers in the annals of literature. As a weaver of fantastic dreams, he has been touching readers with his charming and whimsical tales since the publication of his first book in 1829. Andersen could not have found a better interpreter of his romantic dreams than the late Walt Disney or the current Disney Studio.

The Little Mermaid film brims with stunning visuals and is an irresistible combination of hip and wholesome that will immediately rank it as a Disney classic.

The story will enchant you. You'll adore the cast: Ariel, the lovestruck mermaid with the beautiful voice, whose fascination with all things human leads to her discovery of a human prince; Sebastian, the frenetic calypso-crab who "attempts" to watch over Ariel, and Ursula, the delightfully evil octopus. The film is a musical extravaganza with seven original songs from reggae to romantic that will have you dancing down the aisle as you leave the theater.

Please take every child you know (including your spouse) to see this sentimental, contemporary classic. Rated G.

PINOCCHIO: (1940) From Carlo Collodi's story about the puppet who becomes human and learns about telling the truth. This Disney version is a marvel: the animation is dazzling and the songs are catchy and clever.

DUMBO: (1941) The story of a little elephant with big ears who learns to fly is still one of the most charming of the Disney features. It gets back to the freshness, exuberance, and innocence of the short cartoons of the thirties.

THE WIND IN THE WILLOWS:

(1949) This adaptation of Kenneth Graham's classic deals with the adventures of J. Thaddeus Toad and his friends Cyril, Mole, Rat and Mac Badger. Basil Rathbone narrates this classic short.

THE LEGEND OF SLEEPY HOLLOW: (1949) This featurette is a broad, warmhearted version of the spooky Washington Irving tale. The final, fateful ride of Ichabod Crane's pursuit by the Headless Horseman is very scary. Narrated by Bing Crosby.

SLEEPING BEAUTY: (1950) This adaptation of Charles Perrault's seventeenth-century version of the famous fairy tale may surprise some used to the "softer" Disney style of animation. Nonetheless, this film (Walt Disney's last personally supervised film) belongs in the list of the very best children's films (and adult's).

CINDERELLA: (1950) Superb animation and a bright score highlight this version of the fairy tale. Augmenting the romance of the poor girl capturing a prince are the mandatory godmother as well as an assortment of cartoon mice.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: (1951) The magic of the animators is applied to Lewis Carroll's classic with entertaining results. As with the book, the film is episodic with a few absolutely wonderful sequences - like the Mad Hatter's tea party and the appearances of the Cheshire Cat - make it worth seeing.

PETER PAN: (1953) This famous flight of fantasy celebrates the spirit and beauty of Peter Pan. The film is just as potent stirring the hearts and imagination today as it was on its initial release. The film is a charming tale of imperishable youth that chartered a course to follow "the second star to the right and straight on 'till morning."

THE LADY AND THE TRAMP: (1955) This is one of the sweetest tales from Disney. The story concerns a high-bred cocker spaniel (Lady) who runs away from home after the arrival of a new baby, and the adventures she has along the way with a raffish mongrel stray (The Tramp). They survive against all odds. Fabulous songs by Peggy Lee.

THE SWORD AND THE STONE: (1963) A plucky youngster proves his kingliness by removing the sword Excalibur from the stone. Although this movie is not up to the film company's highest standards, it still provides fun entertainment for the young and young at heart.

ROBIN HOOD: (1973) This engaging Disney cartoon is not in a league with their finest achievements. It is, however, a respectable entry among their latter-day work. Recasting the "Robin Hood" legend with animals works beautifully as a foxy Robin outmaneuvers an union-hearted King and his serpentine sidekick.

FOOTNOTE: Let's start a movement to have Walt Disney nominated posthumously for the

McRaney happy in uniform

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Gerald McRaney thought it was time to get into uniform after seven years as laid-back detective Rick Simon on "Simon & Simon."

"I'd wanted to do a show about somebody in the service to show the human side," says McRaney, who stars in the new CBS comedy "Major Dad."

"I'd gotten fed up with people in the service being portrayed as bumbling fools or Rambos. I have a lot of friends and relatives in the service. They're just ordinary people. I wanted to do a sitcom. I couldn't face the rigorous schedule of doing another hour show."

McRaney plays Marine Maj. John D. MacGillis in "Major Dad," which opens CBS' Monday night comedy block. His new bride, Delta Burke, is one of the stars of "Designing Women," which follows later in the evening.

Unlike Rick Simon, MacGillis is ramrod straight, neat from his pressed uniform to his polished boots and has his receding hair cut so short he almost looks bald.

MacGillis, a conservative career officer, marries a liberal newspaper reporter who is a widow with three daughters. The longtime bachelor, a man long used to an environment of men, suddenly finds himself surrounded by women. The major's wife, Polly, is played by Shanna Reed.

"Polly may be liberal, but she's steeped in a lot of old-fashioned ideals," McRaney says. "Rearing her children has top priority with her. But the show's about more than just a nuclear family. Most of the stories take place in the home."

"You knew that Ozzie Nelson was a band leader from the radio show but on television you never knew what he did for a living. Here, you see Mac at work. Some of it takes place at his office, and the Marine Corps is a family, too."

MacGillis is a hardnose, which is the nature of the business, but he's also very good at what he does. McRaney portrays him as a man who's dedicated and cares about his job and the people he works with. He sees the major as a man whose skills would allow him to take a much higher-paying civilian job. He remains in the Marine corps out of patriotism and a sense of duty.

Among the largest human teeth scientists have found are those of the Java man, who lived one and a half million years ago.
