GAO suggests government control of S&Ls
WASHINGTON (AP)—The General Accounting Office today recommended that the government take over about 350 failing savings and loans, the Los Angeles Times reported.
The GAO report, to be unveiled in congressional testimony, says that S&Ls under government control should be banned from continuing the business practices that got the thrifts into trouble in the first place.
Comptroller General Charles Bowsher was also highly critical of deals arranged by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board that allowed investors to contribute "minimal" capital to assume failed S&Ls.
The report says that ailing S&Ls should be "effectively isolated" from the healthy segment of the industry.

Eades chosen to head EDC effort

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor
Bud Eades will be the new executive director of the Hereford Area Economic Development Council after he was formally approved at an EDC meeting Wednesday night at the Hereford City Hall.
Eades will serve full-time in the post and will, for the time being, work without pay.
Eades, owner of Plains Insurance Agency and a Hereford city commissioner, will continue in his role as chairman of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce's Industrial Development Committee. He assumed that post in January.
"I want this thing to be real open," Eades told the EDC board Wednesday. "If you feel it isn't working, say so. If you feel we need to be doing something or going after something, tell me. You won't hurt my feelings. I'm just going to give this my best shot."

EDC chairman John Perrin said the Orlie Buehler, an Oklahoma consultant who had been hired for the job last month, had turned down the job to take a post with Oklahoma Gov. Henry Bellmon.
"When I called Orlie last month to tell him he was hired, he sounded real down," Perrin said. "He said that he had been offered this job with the governor and was going to have to turn us down. He had been doing some work with the governor and felt it was something he couldn't turn down."
"We're looking forward to working with Bud, looking forward to his leadership," Cheryl Pink, a development specialist with Southwestern Public Service, met with the board to discuss programs and agencies in place that could give the board a boost in its development efforts.
She outlined the duties of the Texas

Department of Commerce, the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, the Texas Department of Agriculture and services offered by SPS.
SPS has taken a more active role in development efforts in the last two years. The electric utility was instrumental in efforts to lure the Azteca corn mill to the Panhandle. Hereford and Plainview were the finalists for the plant, which finally opted for Plainview.
"You had a textbook presentation for the Azteca plant," Pink said. "I know you have already worked very hard for some goals that are not always recognized or appreciated by the community."
"With leadership, effort and cooperation things will happen. Without cooperation and leadership things won't happen, no matter how attractive a community is."
"I really believe you have some wonderful opportunities here. You have an established workbase, and I feel you have some very strong opportunities for food processing operations in the future."

The EDC is also considering contracting with the National Development Council to help with prospect development and financing alternatives for expansion and relocation prospects.
While NDC would charge to perform the same services that are available for little or no cost from the Texas agencies, NDC could provide full attention to Hereford's needs, while, for example, the three-person Texas Department of Commerce staff is spread over the state.
Eades will schedule a trip to Austin within the next two weeks to meet with state agency officials and will also visit with NDC representatives to help determine which course the Hereford EDC should take.

4 Texas congressmen support raise

WASHINGTON (AP)—The heat may be white hot, but four Texas congressmen say they support a 50 percent pay raise that many of their colleagues are blasting as excessive and unwarranted.
Most Texas congressmen say they would oppose raising their salaries from $89,500 to $135,000 if House Speaker Jim Wright brings the controversial proposal to a vote.
Wright, a Fort Worth Democrat, had planned to allow the increase to become law Feb. 8 without a vote in the House. But now he says members can have a vote if that's what they tell him they want in a confidential survey circulated this week.

The speaker said he expected members to tell him what they already communicated privately: they want the raise without a vote, even if the Senate defeats the pay hike as expected this week.
Both houses of Congress must vote down the raise to keep it from taking effect.
Most Texas congressmen want a vote, and so far, only four say they would vote for the raise, Reps. Marvin Leath of Waco, Charlie Wilson of Lufkin, Mickey Leland of Houston and Jack Brooks of Beaumont.
Rep. Solomon Ortiz, a Corpus Christi Democrat, says he would like to see Congress ban honoraria but make up the loss in speaking fees members receive from special interest groups through a smaller raise.
"I want to serve one master and that is my constituents," Ortiz said.
Ortiz says many members would like a raise, but explaining the increase is difficult back home, especially because not everyone understands how expensive Washington is.

"For some of us, this is our bread and butter," he said. Other Congressmen say they're frustrated with the whole process and the size of the raise.
A presidential commission recommended the increase, and former president Ronald Reagan put his stamp of approval on it before leaving office.
"It's just a little zinger from the president to Congress that he left us with. It's just an albatross around the neck of Congress as we start with a new president," said Rep. Ralph Hall, a Rockwall Democrat.
Hall said the commission's recommendation has caused "more animosity and more acrimony" from the people who elected us to those of us who are elected.
In answering Wright's survey, Rep. Jack Fields, a Republican from Humble, wrote, "My constituents are outraged not only with the excessive amount of the pay raise but also the process by which it is being implemented."
Congress is also wrestling with a ban on honoraria and closing a loophole that allows members of Congress in office before Jan. 8, 1980, to convert stockpiled campaign funds to personal use when they retire.

Eleven Texas House members would lose their right if the loophole is closed.
Rep. Bill Archer, a Houston Republican, has the greatest surplus in campaign funds in his war chest among the 11, $637,810, and favors doing away with the loophole.
According to Federal Election Commission records, other "grandfathered" Texans and their totals:
Leath, $486,033; Brooks, $439,347; Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas, $252,418; Rep. Kika de la Garza of Mission, $174,778; Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford, $146,801; Rep. Jake Pickle of Austin, $140,496; Wilson, $94,837; Wright, $83,843; Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio, $15,346; and Leland, $13,916.
Sens. Phil Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen are also covered by the grandfather loophole. However, Bentsen, a Democrat who was just re-elected, ended his campaign with a debt of $11,718, FEC records indicated, and Gramm, a Republican who has $1.94 million, is up for re-election next year.

Both Gramm and Bentsen have lined up against a pay raise that would boost their salaries from $89,500 to $135,000.
Democratic congressmen from Texas announced as against the pay hike are Pickle, Stenholm, Hall, de la Garza, Frost, John Bryant of Dallas, Michael Andrews of Houston, Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs, Greg Laughlin of West Columbia, Albert Bustamante of San Antonio, Ron Coleman of El Paso, Bill Sarpalus of Amarillo and Solomon Ortiz of Corpus Christi.
Republican congressmen from Texas against it are Fields, Archer, Dick Arney of Copper Canyon, Lamar Smith of San Antonio, Joe Barton of Ennis, Larry Combest of Lubbock, Steve Bartlett of Dallas and Tom DeLay of Sugar Land.
Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio has not taken a position on the raise although he supports a vote, an aide said.
Wright personally supports a 30 percent pay raise tied to a repeal of honoraria, a spokesman said.

Gomez applies for station

An application for a new FM radio station in Hereford has been filed with the Federal Communications Commission by Jhonny V. Gomez of Amarillo.
The FCC recently expanded the number of FM frequencies across the country and sites in this area included Hereford, Littlefield and Texico, N.M. The last date for submission of applications was Jan. 23.
Gomez's application was filed Jan. 23, according to a legal notice here in the county clerk's office. Gomez is listed as the sole owner and general manager.
The broadcast station license sought is a Class C2 FM station operating unlimited hours with power of 50 kilowatts. The tower and transmitter would be located about 9.8 miles south of Hereford. The offices and studio would be in Hereford at a site to be determined.
The application states that the broadcast emphasis would be "on news and community involvement," with the station to be operated on a 24-hour basis, seven days a week. The station would operate at 103.5 on the FM dial.
No other application has been filed with the county clerk for the FM station opening here.

Corrections chairman wants overhaul

AUSTIN (AP)—The chairman of the House Corrections Committee says he wants prison bonding legislation to remain in subcommittee until lawmakers and the governor's office agree to address the whole criminal justice issue "as one problem."
"A lack of coordination and planning exists within the criminal justice arena," said Rep. Allen Hightower, a Huntsville Democrat and sponsor of the legislation, on Wednesday.
Hightower said that in that arena, "The left hand builds to relieve overcrowding and the right hand enhances punishment and creates new courts to send more people for longer periods of time, thus overcrowding and exacerbating, not relieving, the system at hand, at the same time having little or no effect on crime."
That doesn't mean the committee won't support the proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds for corrections facilities, Hightower said.
But he said if so, it should be part of an overall solution. He predicted an agreement could be reached among lawmakers involved and the governor's office within two to three weeks.
In other developments Wednesday, a Dallas-based anti-crime group said the "only solution" to problems in the Texas criminal justice system is increasing prison capacity by 40,000 beds at a cost of $1.2 billion.

"If we do anything less than 40,000 beds over the next several years, then we will be here again in two years, same problem, in four years with the same problem, and over and over," said Richard Collins, chairman of Associated Texans Against Crime.
Rep. Sam Johnson, R-Plano, also urged the expansion and added that he was considering filing legislation to allow the death penalty to be imposed on criminals who commit multiple felonies.
Johnson, one of several lawmakers who joined Collins at a news conference, said he got the idea for the capital punishment bill after participating in a radio call-in show in San Antonio.
"Five straight callers said 'What are we going to do with the repeat felony offenders?'" Johnson said. "And I said I don't know, unless we build more prison beds and keep them in jail, because they are not being rehabilitated."

Jury selection has tough going

WASHINGTON (AP)—In a Washington courtroom, a judge is looking for that rarest of creatures, the person who barely knows anything about Oliver North.
The judge selecting jurors to try North is making some progress, but the question arises: Will the jury that results be a cross-section of the community, capable of rendering an informed judgment?
In the legal sense, it will be a jury of North's peers. The law only requires that it be a cross-section of citizens from which no one has been excluded by reason of sex, race or other arbitrary criteria. It need not be people comparable to North in any other way.
What Judge Gerhard A. Gesell seeks is a jury "ignorant" of North's activities, people so removed from world affairs during the summer of 1987 that they were unaware that North told Congress he had lied to it, believing his duty to his country required such deception.
Such searches are conducted to ensure that jurors do not enter a case prejudiced either for or against a defendant. But in North's case, it means the exclusion of an enormous number of potential jurors who, at one point or another, read or heard something about him.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., who served on the Iran-Contra Committee and is a former state judge, said the exclusion of knowledgeable people as jurors "has inherent problems in it and raises real questions," but he doesn't know the answers.
He said some people simply don't watch television out of choice or because they are too busy. "On the other hand, you have the chance they didn't have any interest and you would think they're lacking in the necessary intelligence to serve on it," he said.
"Whether they will differ from normal, average jurors remains to be seen," he said. "If a man never saw anything of it, what type of individual is he?"
Others go further, Bill Moffitt, a well-known criminal defense lawyer, questions whether a fair verdict can be rendered by people who knew nothing about the Iran-Contra affair before stepping into Gesell's courtroom.
"I wouldn't want people who lived in Washington, the seat of government, on that jury who were so uninformed," said Moffitt.

Investigation into tanker crash could take months, says air force spokesmen

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — With limited clues, the investigation into the cause of a fiery explosion of an Air Force tanker that killed 19 people could take weeks, perhaps months, military officials said.

Unlike airliners, the $20 million KC-135A Stratotanker aircraft that crashed early Tuesday afternoon on takeoff from Dyess Air Force Base wasn't equipped with a flight data recorder or a cockpit voice recorder.

The Michigan-based tanker was loaded with 30,000 gallons of fuel for a training flight to Hawaii when it crashed and burned in a mesquite pasture seconds after takeoff.

The KC-135A was from the 410th Bombardment Wing, stationed at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base near Marquette, Mich. It had flown Monday to Dyess, and was scheduled to fly Tuesday to Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii and then on to Guam, Air Force officials said.

Over the Pacific, the tanker was to refuel F-16 fighter jets being flown from Fort Worth to South Korea.

The on-flight recorders, also known as "black boxes," weren't in use 26 years ago when the Stratotanker involved in Tuesday's crash was built, said Capt. Paul Bicking, a Sawyer spokesman.

In addition to the seven-member crew, the aircraft carried at least four active-duty Air Force personnel, and at least seven who were military retirees and their family members.

For $10, military retirees and dependents of active-duty personnel are allowed to fly aboard training flights to destinations outside the 48 continental states on a "space-available" basis, the Air Force said. Military personnel can fly free.

When the plane left Michigan, it carried a crew of seven, plus 10 passengers.

At Abilene, two more passengers boarded, including James A. Phillips, 58, of Abilene, a retired technical sergeant who was taking advantage of the military's "space-available" flight option for the first time since he retired in 1973, his wife said Wednesday.

According to Norma Phillips, his wife of 33 years, her husband — a 23-year veteran of the Air Force — was going to Guam to visit his son, who is in the Navy and who married recently.

"He had time on his hands and decided he would take advantage of this flight," she said.

A team of military investigators began arriving Wednesday afternoon, but refused to speculate on what caused the crash.

One eyewitness said he heard the jet's engines "popping and backfiring" just before the plane hit the ground.

Civilian investigators said that popping noises generally are associated with a phenomenon known as a compressor stall, in which the engine "chokes" because the flow of air or fuel into the engine is disrupted.

Sam Matta, an Abilene justice of the peace who was summoned to the crash site to record deaths, said the plane was in many pieces, the largest of them the tail section.

There were "a bunch of small pieces everywhere. There's a few big sections, 10 to 12 feet long. There's a big wing, pretty badly burned," Matta said.

"It's quite a mess out there, to say the least," Matta said, adding that soil around the two-square-mile crash site is saturated with jet fuel.

At first light Wednesday, investigators began identifying and tagging each piece of debris, wrapping smaller items in plastic bags and mapping the crash site itself.

With the aid of spotlights, investigators combed over the crash site into the night Wednesday, before calling off operations for the day.

Dyess spokesman Lt. John Ames said investigators have a tape recording of the conversation between military air traffic controllers and the jet. He said he didn't know whether the tape contained any information that could help investigators.

One of the retirees on the flight — Lt. Col. Robert W. Curtis of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. — was also a retired professor emeritus of engineering at Lake Superior State University in Sault Ste. Marie.

"He was a great family man, a pillar of the community," said Paul Andary, manager of television station WGTQ in Sault Ste. Marie. Curtis traveled widely on military aircraft and circled the world in 63 days last year, Andary said.

The Air Force identified the airplane's commander as Capt. Robert M. Llewellyn III, 32, of Cumberland, Md., and the co-pilot as 1st Lt. Kenneth A. Brackney, 25, of Ridge Farm, Ill.

Capt. Joseph A. Nellis, 28, of Granger, Ind., was the navigator, and Staff Sgt. David A. Vickers, 34, of Whitmore Lake, Mich., was the in-flight aerial refueler.

Japanese to talk issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's meeting today with Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita is designed to bolster their personal relationship and smooth irritations involving trade and defense issues.

Takeshita, the first foreign leader to be welcomed to the White House by the new president, was slated to meet with Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III before participating in a working lunch.

"The leaders are not competing to reach any new agreements or to achieve miracles," said a senior administration official, who discussed the visit with reporters on condition his name not be used.

"They are here to get to know each other better, to set a tone and direction of cooperation for the future," the official said.

Bush is scheduled to travel to Japan later this month for the funeral of Emperor Hirohito, but the official said today's meeting was timely because talks on such matters as defense, the international economy and Japan's trade surplus will be difficult amid ceremonies for the late emperor.

"It's very important for the two leaders to meet early on to establish a personal rapport and a broad-brush agenda," the official said.

One irritant arose recently when Secretary of Defense-designate John Tower suggested during his confirmation hearings that Japan's contributions to its own defense are inadequate. Tower criticized the nation's constitution as a "lousy idea."

The 1946 constitution, adopted during the post-World War II U.S. occupation, limits Japan's military.

Tower's comments brought a sharp rebuke from the Japanese, who pointed to a new budget that calls for a 5.9 percent increase in military spending.

The senior administration official pointed out that Japan is spending $2.5 billion to support U.S. troops stationed there. He acknowledged that the United States "would like to see a lot of these things increased," but said the administration was pleased Japan "is moving in the right direction."

Takeshita also was expected to highlight the efforts his government has made to open his country's markets — particularly in light of the $67 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan, which is the world's largest imbalance.

The official said that while the trade shortfall has eased slightly in recent months, "it is still very enormous, and we still have to work on it."

Measles rampant at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Hoping to avoid a red measles epidemic, Texas Tech University officials set up three emergency immunization locations on campus and said they were prepared to give free shots today to up to 1,000 students.

Fifteen cases had been reported among the student body by Wednesday noon, but by the end of the day the number of students infected with the highly contagious disease had risen to 50.

Dr. Scott Fry, director of student health services at the 24,000-student university, said approximately 1,400 students were immunized Wednesday. The shots will be provided again today and Friday. Fry said.

Three immunization stations set up

Students lined up in dormitories Wednesday to receive the vaccinations, and phone lines into the student health center were jammed all day as students sought information on how to avoid illness.

Tech ordered 1,400 doses of vaccine for Wednesday's immunizations, and another 1,000 doses were on order. Officials rushed to get enough vaccine, because measles immunization must occur within three days of exposure to be effective.

City and campus health officials expressed fear the outbreak could spread among the 6,000 students who live or eat in university dormitories.

"Cases have been documented in residents of at least four different dorms," city health administrator Dr. Anthony Way said.

Measles symptoms include a red rash, high fever and sore throat and eyes. Complications are rare, but the disease will "make the person very sick for a couple of weeks."

Health officials recommended that dormitory residents get the shot if they are under 33 or haven't been immunized against measles since before 1980.

"We have no way of knowing where the outbreak began," said

Way. "But measles are extraordinarily contagious. One person can infect a very large number of other people in a very short amount of time."

The said no reports of measles cases have come from the Lubbock community outside Tech.

The Texas Department of Health said Texas Tech's measles outbreak is part of a recent statewide rise in occurrence of measles. As of Jan. 19, there were 344 confirmed cases of measles in Texas. Officials said they believe the outbreak began in the Houston area.

About 35 percent of the statewide cases were among school-age children.

Senate panel OKs Lujan for interior

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee on Wednesday unanimously approved the nomination of Manuel Lujan as interior secretary and confirmation by the full Senate is expected within days.

Lujan's nomination was cleared by the Energy and Natural Resources Committee by a 19-0 vote after less than 30 minutes of discussion.

Lujan, 60, who spent 20 years as a member of the House from New Mexico, is one of two Hispanics nominated for Cabinet posts by President Bush.

He breezed through a hearing before the committee last week, promising to be "committed to protecting and enhancing" the natural resources while allowing needed development.

His swift approval by the committee was anticipated.

Some environmental groups have raised concern about Lujan's selection by Bush, citing positions on several environmental matters Lujan took while in Congress.

During his years in Congress, Lujan received consistently low ratings from the League of Conservation Voters, the lobbying arm of the major environmental organizations. The group said Lujan voted in favor of pro-environmental legislation only twice out of 16 test votes cast.

At the same time, he has been characterized as a pragmatist and strong advocate for the varying interests of the West.

During his confirmation hearing, Lujan defended his voting record on environmental issues, but also said the need to develop the country's natural resources must not be overlooked.

Promising to be a "steward" of the nation's natural resources, Lujan told the senators that he and Bush "are committed to protecting and enhancing the nation's valuable resources, as well as proceeding with their environmentally sound development."

"We can do both. We do not have to choose between them," Lujan maintained.

Texas bouncing back

Bullock projecting about 90,000 new jobs in '89

AUSTIN (AP) — Still rebounding, the overall Texas economy will grow by 2.4 percent in 1989, about the same as the nation's economy, the comptroller's office reports.

A measure of the recovery is that 90,000 new jobs should be created in 1989, Comptroller Bob Bullock said. Such a jobs gain would set a record of 6.7 million Texans gainfully employed by year's end.

"Texas has weathered the oil-bust years well. We've regained most of the ground we lost, and the state's outlook continues to improve," Bullock said.

The latest edition of "Fiscal Notes," published by the comptroller's office, reported Wednesday that since the recession's low point in spring 1987, the state has gained 176,000 jobs and recovered 80 percent of the jobs lost during the bleak 1986-87 period.

Unemployment has fallen nearly three percentage points, to about 7 percent by the end of 1988.

"Assuming the U.S. economy remains healthy and oil prices are relatively stable in the current range, Texas' economic growth will continue through 1989," the publication said.

"By the end of the year, recovery will turn into expansion as statewide employment surpasses its late-1985 peak."

The major force driving the recovery will continue to be manufacturing, which benefits from the lower dollar and increasing competitiveness of American exports, the comptroller's report said.

Most of the new jobs, however, will be in trade and service industries.

Side swiped

Mary Hernandez, 40, of 923 Brevard Street sustained minor injuries after the Cadillac she was driving collided with a Ford pickup at Fourth Street and Witherspoon Avenue Wednesday around noon. William Glen West, 58, was traveling north on Witherspoon, and was cited with failure to stop. West stated in reports that he was at the stop sign when he picked something from the floor and failed to stop.

Hund honored

The E.B. Black House was the setting of Saturday's bridal shower held in honor of Angela Hund, bride-elect of Joe Hochstein. Guests were greeted (from left) by May Hochstein, the prospective groom's mother; the honoree; and Alice Hund, the bride-elect's mother. Wedding vows will be solemnized Feb. 4 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Bridal shower fetes Hund Saturday

Angela Hund, bride-elect of Joe Hochstein of Nazareth, was honored with a bridal shower Saturday morning in the E.B. Black House.

The honoree greeted guests as did her mother, Alice Hund, and the prospective bridegroom's mother, May Hochstein.

Refreshments served included assorted fruits and pastries and spiced tea and coffee. A white lace cloth topped the serving table, which was centered by white candles and a potted plant featuring red blooms. Refreshments were served from a silver service.

The hostesses presented Miss Hund with a stainless cookpot set. Hostesses included Annette Albracht, Nadine Berend, Cheryl Bétzen, Opal Blakely, Oleta Diller, Ella Dupnik, Carolyn Evers, Francie Farr, Debbie Fetsch, Whilamine Fetsch, Carol Gerk, Jo Ann Jesko, Patty Jesko, Betty Koelzer, Karen Martin, Kelly Ramirez, Clara Reinart, Loraine Schwertner, Aurelia Urbanczyk, Velma Warren, and Opal Walterscheid.

The couple will exchange wedding vows Feb. 4 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

TM disorder difficult to detect

Most of us can chew, yawn and open and close our mouths effortlessly; our jaws and surrounding facial muscles work together in harmony. Some disruption in this intricate interrelationship between muscles and bones, however, can trigger the chronic facial discomfort of a temporomandibular (TM) disorder.

The temporomandibular joint is the joint that connects the jaw to the skull. For a long time, dentists thought TM disorders were caused solely by malocclusions, or problems with the way the teeth fit together. They now know that TM disorders are really a group of several different disorders, each with unique causes and each requiring unique treatments.

TM disorders are by no means rare, according to the South Plains District Dental Society. An estimated 10 million Americans suffer from them. One of the most prevalent, myofascial pain dysfunction, stems from a tendency to deal with stress by repeatedly tightening the jaw muscles or clenching the teeth, a habit known as bruxism.

Common symptoms of TM disorders include a vague, aching pain on the sides of the face that can spread to the shoulders and the back of the head, difficulty opening the mouth or chewing, clicking or popping sounds around the jaw, and jaw-muscle tenderness. Other potential symptoms include ringing in the ears, hearing loss, sinus pain and dizziness.

According to the South Plains District Dental Society, TM disorders have been mistaken for migraine headaches or earaches because they are complex and difficult to diagnose. However, recent widespread publicity about TM disorders has led more and more people to dental offices thinking they have a TM disorder when what they really have is a migraine or some other medical problem.

Dentists use a wide range of treatments to manage TM disorders, from drug therapy with tranquilizers to surgery. Other components of treatment programs for TM disorders include soft-food diets, massage, moist heat applications, bite adjustments and relaxation exercises.

A new technique called anthropometry may soon be routinely used to detect TM disorders. The technique uses a highly sensitive microphone to record sound patterns produced during jaw movement. Analysis of the sound patterns can increase the accuracy of a diagnosis, researchers believe.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was a model student in high school, well-behaved--no sex and no drugs. When I was 19, I fell in love with "Pete." We became intimate after six months and went together for a year. We were in love and I thought I knew him well.

After the split we remained friends, but I never slept with him again. Three months ago Pete called me up and said, "I think I ought to tell you I have AIDS."

I was tested immediately and, thank God, it was negative. The test was done at Planned Parenthood, and the counselor was very supportive. He gave me a load of reading material, and helped prepare me for what might lie ahead. I will have to be tested every six months. (Waiting for the results is plain hell.)

The point I want to make is this: No matter who you are or how well you think you know someone, you can't be too careful. After we split up I learned that Pete was bisexual. This came as a shock because he appeared to be as straight as any guy I had ever met.

I'm 21 now, and this one affair will shadow my life for many years to come. Pete is getting sicker every day, and I am frightened for him. I am also frightened for myself and for all the young people who the young people who think it can't happen to them.

If I can help educate just one person about the long-term consequences of unprotected sex, I will be amply rewarded for the pain it took to write this letter. Is the pleasure of sex worth dying for? I wish I had asked myself that question before I got intimate with Pete. A condom may not be romantic, spontaneous or even comfortable, but it beats dying, by a long shot.--Learned Too Late in California

DEAR CALIFORNIA: Thanks for telling us your story. You are awfully young to be saddled with this kind of worry, and I'll keep my fingers crossed that everything turns out OK.

A condom, you should know, is not 100 percent protection against AIDS, but as I've said before, 90 percent is a lot better than nothing. Good luck, dear.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am enclosing a copy of the note my friend sent when her daughter failed to send thank-you notes for wedding gifts. I think it's terrific and so do the other mothers I have talked to. What do you think? Here 'tis:

"We regretfully acknowledge our daughter's irresponsibility in not sending thank-you notes for her wedding gifts. We want you to know that we appreciated your attendance and gift for this occasion and express a heartfelt 'Thank you.'" Sign me--

Marianna, Pa.

DEAR MARIANNA: I'm sure the mother who sent that barbed message enjoyed the sweetness of revenge, but I can assure you it didn't enhance her relationship with her daughter.

Compare that with the gracious note that I received in the mail recently:

Thank you for remembering Sara and Jamie with a lovely wedding gift. They will be writing you to acknowledge your thoughtfulness when they return from their honeymoon

Woman's Health

BLEEDING DURING PREGNANCY

By Robert C. Park, M.D.
President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Bleeding during pregnancy is upsetting when it happens to you. It is not always a sign that something is wrong, but it should prompt a call to your doctor.

The earliest bleeding in pregnancy occurs at about the same time you would have your period. Instead of a normal period, though, you may have some spotting. This happens when the fertilized egg becomes attached to the wall of the uterus.

Bleeding during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy, especially if you have lower back pain and cramping, may be a sign of miscarriage. Sometimes, though, this kind of bleeding stops and the pregnancy continues without any risks to the fetus or mother. If the pregnancy is not developing normally, the lining of the uterus (womb) will break apart and bleed through the vagina, and the pregnancy ends. Miscarriage occurs in about 15 to 20 percent of all pregnancies and generally is caused by a problem with the chromosomes, not by something that you did or did not do.

A much less common, but more serious reason for bleeding in the first trimester is an ectopic pregnancy--a condition where the pregnancy does not grow in the uterus where it should, but starts to grow elsewhere. The earliest symptom of an ectopic pregnancy is pain in the lower abdomen or back. If you experience such pain or any bleeding, call your doctor right away. An ectopic pregnancy is a serious condition that needs prompt medical attention.

Bleeding later in pregnancy will always require some medical attention. Toward the very end of pregnancy, many women will notice a pinkish discharge. This is known as the "bloody show," and usually signals that labor will start soon.

Heavy vaginal bleeding late in pregnancy is most likely caused by problems with the placenta--the organ that transports nutrients and oxygen to the baby. The placenta may either develop in the wrong place (placenta previa) or separate prematurely from the uterus (abruptio placenta). Both conditions require immediate medical attention and may require cesarean delivery.

Bleeding during pregnancy can be scary. Sometimes it can mean only minor conditions that need no treatment, but it could also be a sign of a serious problem that could put both you and your unborn baby in danger. The best thing you can do if you bleed at any time during your pregnancy is to call your doctor right away.

SMU upsets TCU; Tech whips Bears

By The Associated Press
Southern Methodist Coach John Shumate says Todd Alexander was the difference as the Mustangs defeated Texas Christian and knocked the Horned Frogs out of a three-way tie for the lead in the Southwest Conference basketball title race.

Alexander scored 21 points Wednesday night, including six points in the final two minutes, to lead the Mustangs to a 68-57 victory over TCU, knocking the Horned Frogs out of a three-way with Arkansas and Texas.

Arkansas edged Houston, 88-87, and Texas slipped past Texas A&M, 85-80, to remain tied atop the conference standings.

In other SWC games, Texas Tech downed Baylor, 74-66, and Rice whipped Eastern New Mexico, 90-83, in a non-conference game.

Shumate said Alexander, playing in his eighth game after returning to the team after leaving for personal reasons, provided the spark the Mustangs needed for the upset.

"Todd is an outstanding player and is fighting every day to get into shape," Shumate said. "Every day he is getting better and better. You could tell out there tonight that he was an experienced, seasoned point guard."

TCU coach Moe Iba said, "SMU switched defenses a lot and kept us off balance. We looked like a team that hadn't played a game in a week."

The Mustangs increased their record to 8-10 overall and 4-4 in league play while TCU dropped to 13-7 and 6-2. SMU led all the way before 4,690 fans in Moody Coliseum but had some unsettling moments toward the end of the game.

Danny Hughes led TCU with 14 points.

Keith Wilson hit the front end of a one-and-one free throw with no time remaining to give the Razorbacks an 88-87 win over the Houston Cougars.

Wilson was fouled by Houston's Roger Fernandes after a missed shot by Craig Upchurch with two seconds left.

Razorbacks Todd Day and Lenzie Howell each hit career highs of 29 and 26 points respectively as Arkansas increased its record to 14-4 and 7-1 in conference play. Houston fell to 12-8 and 4-4.

Horace Chaney scored 28 points to lead the Cougars.

Arkansas had not beaten the Cougars in Houston since 1979, when the Razorbacks won 62-61, and

Starling takes on Honeyghan next

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Marlon Starling will challenge Lloyd Honeyghan of Britain for a piece of the welterweight championship Saturday night, but he does not consider himself a challenger.

"I'm a champion, whether I have a title or not," the 30-year-old Starling, of Hartford, Conn., said Wednesday. "I'm the best welterweight in the world."

Starling lost the World Boxing Association title to Tomas Molineras of Colombia on a controversial sixth-round knockout last July 29 at Atlantic City, N.J. Tapes clearly showed the knockout blow was delivered after the bell sounded ending the sixth round.

The New Jersey Athletic Commission changed the result to "no decision," but the WBA did not reverse the result or order an immediate rematch.

"Politics," muttered Starling. Molineras was scheduled to defend the WBA title against former champion Mark Breland of New York on the Honeyghan-Starling card at Caesars Palace. Molineras, however, recently relinquished the title after a physician said he was suffering from depression.

So Breland will fight for the vacated title in a 12-round match against Lee Seun-Soon of South Korea.

Breland lost the WBA title to Starling on an 11th-round knockout Aug. 22, 1987, and he fought a 12-round draw with Starling last April 16.

Noting his controversial loss, his

Wilson was not about to let this one slip away.

"It was pressure because I'm the only senior on the team and I had to show the guys I wouldn't choke," Wilson said.

Junior forward Lance Blanks hit 23 points as the Texas Longhorns fought off Texas A&M 85-80.

The game was played before a noisy sellout crowd of 16,231 fans, Texas' first full house since February of 1986 against this same Aggie team.

The victory propels the Longhorns to a 16-4 season record and 7-1 in conference, tied with Arkansas for the top spot. The Aggies, losers of five straight, dip to 8-12 and 1-7.

"I think a key for us is shooting 39 percent and still being able to win the game," said Texas Coach Tom Penders. "This is one game where if we're not a good team, we come out of here with a mark in the wrong column."

"Our guys put everything on the line tonight, said Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf, who watched his team lose for the 11th time in the past 13 games. "I just hope we can build on this kind of effort and turn this thing around."

Sean Gay scored 24 points and Texas Tech hit 22 of 24 free throws in the final four minutes of play to hold off Baylor, 74-66.

The Bears remain in the conference cellar, dropping to 1-7 and 5-14 overall. The Red Raiders evened their SWC mark at 4-4 and improved to 9-10 overall.

Center J.D. Sanders added 14 points and nine rebounds and guard Jerry Mason chipped in 12 for Texas Tech.

Julius Denton paced Baylor with 15 points and eight rebounds. Donnell Hayden added 14 points and Ivan Jones had 10 for the Bears.

Players from both teams appeared unaffected by pre-game inoculations for measles. An outbreak of the illness on the Texas Tech campus prompted the move by Baylor officials, who feared the same might happen in Waco.

Greg Price scored 22 points and Andy Gilchrist had 21 to lead the Rice Owls to a 90-83 win over the Eastern New Mexico Greyhounds.

Dana Hardy added 15 points for the Owls as they increased their season record to 8-11.

Eastern New Mexico, 13-6, was led by Darwin Pauley with 22 points followed by Rick Pickren and Troy Inmann with 14 each.

success against Breland and his decision victory over Simon Brown, the current International Boxing Federation champion, in 1985, Starling said:

"This fight is for the undisputed welterweight championship of the world."

The winners on the HBO television doubleheader Saturday night are likely to meet, and Honeyghan and Breland are rooting for one another.

Neither Breland nor Honeyghan pretend to like Starling.

"Probably because of my tactics and the way I fight," Starling said with a smile.

The ill feeling between Honeyghan and Starling was underscored by an incident Honeyghan says occurred at the Sugar Ray Leonard-Donny Lalonde fight at Caesars Palace Nov. 6. Starling denies it.

Starling appeared before Honeyghan and began taunting him, according to Honeyghan.

"I did not punch him because I wasn't being paid to put on a show," Honeyghan recalled. "The next best thing I could do was spit in his face," which, Honeyghan said, is what he did.

"Do you think Lloyd Honeyghan spit in my face and is still fighting today?" Starling asked.

Herd baseball team to stress defense

Baseball season opened Monday with the first day of practice at Hereford High School.

Hereford coach T.R. Sartor told the Hereford Lions Club on Wednesday that 48 players are currently out for baseball, with several more players to join the squad at the end of the boys' basketball season.

"We have more players out than we have in the past because we now have freshmen in the high school," Sartor said. With the increase in players, David Ashby, who served as head baseball coach several years ago, will join Sartor's staff as an assistant along with Bill Bridge.

T.R. SARTOR

Sartor has two returning all-district starters, DH Roger McCracken and left fielder Keith Brown, returning, and all-state pitcher Jason Scott will be back on the mound on the Herd.

Also returning will be shortstop Russell Backus, who started several games last year at shortstop, and pitcher Clint Cotten, who went 4-2 last year and picked up a playoff-game win in a three-hitter against Pecos.

"We won't be as strong at the plate this year, but we won't be bad," Sartor said. Last year's regional-finalist squad had a team batting average around .400 for most of the season.

"We'll make up for a little less strength at the plate with a little better defense," Sartor said. "We weren't a great defensive team last year, but we had enough offense to outscore a lot of folks. This year, our defense will be better."

Hereford will open its season March 2 in the tough Abilene tournament, then begin its District 1-4A schedule March 7 at Lubbock Dunbar.

"We're not even favored to win our district," Sartor said. "Estacado (which finished the regular season in a three-way tie with Canyon and Dumas) has all but one player back and they have an outstanding pitcher from two years ago that was hurt last year."

"A lot of other teams are going to be better than they were last year. I think it's going to be a very tough district race."

Cowboys to leave Whites unprotected

IRVING, Texas (AP) — When the NFL releases a list of 22 unprotected Dallas Cowboys today, some of the names will be those of old hands, such as quarterback Danny White and defensive tackle Randy White, who know what it's like to win.

But the placement of the Whites on the list should come as no surprise.

Both men are in their mid 30s and are unlikely to attract much interest because of their large salaries. Also, the Cowboys are expected to draft UCLA star quarterback Troy Aikman.

Dallas coach Tom Landry said the placement of the two stars on the list would not necessarily serve as a signal their careers were at an end.

"They may still be invited to training camp," said Landry, "but no decision has been made."

Other prominent Cowboys expected to be on the list include safety Victor Scott, who finished the season on NFL suspension for substance abuse; center Tom Rafferty, 35, quarterback Kevin Sweeney, who started two games last year, tight end Doug Cosbie, who underwent foot surgery recently, and wide receiver Mike Sherrard, who hasn't played in two seasons because of a broken leg.

The Cowboys will protect 37 players, among them young quarterback Scott Secules, who will be given a good look in training camp. If no team signs the 22 unprotected players, their contracts revert back to the Cowboys on April 2.

The Cowboys have three free agent players — defensive end Jim Jeffcoat, quarterback Steve Pelluer and guard Crawford Ker — and made qualifying orders to them on Wednesday.

Only one Triple Crown winner has sired another Triple Crown winner. Gallant Fox, the 1930 champion, sired Omaha, who was the 1935 champ.

Meanwhile, club president Tex Schramm said the Cowboys will be aggressive in signing free agents.

Because of Dallas' 3-13 record, the team can sign as many free agents as it desires and can afford.

Free-agent list has big names

NEW YORK (AP) — George Young, general manager of the New York Giants, once was shown an "all-star" team of big-name players who had been released in training camp. He was asked how many games it might win in the NFL.

"None," Young replied without hesitation.

Young and the rest of the NFL's personnel people hope the same principle applies to the players whom the 28 teams left unprotected as the league's new free agency plan took effect Wednesday.

Although the official lists won't be released until late today or Friday, the drift has become clear the past few days as players acknowledge they've been told their status. Many of the players reportedly left unprotected are among the game's biggest names, most of them in their declining years.

They include Steve Largent of Seattle, the NFL's all-time leading pass receiver; veteran All-Pro center Mike Webster of Pittsburgh, the last holdover from the Steelers' Super Bowl teams of '70s; Charles White of the Los Angeles Rams, a one-time Heisman Trophy winner who led the NFL in rushing in 1987; three-time Pro Bowl guard Russ Grimm and 16-year defensive tackle Dave Butz of Washington; perennial All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White of the Cowboys; Otis Anderson of the Giants, the 11th leading rusher in NFL history; and such former Pro Bowlers as Wesley Walker of the Jets, Jim Burt of the Giants, Cris Collinsworth of the Bengals, E.J. Junior of the Cardinals and Joe Klecko of the Colts.

But most had the same reaction as teams tried to protect young prospects, knowing that other teams would be unlikely to pursue high-salaried veterans who are well-settled in their home areas.

"I knew a long time ago they would do this," said Webster, who will be 37 next season. "They would be foolish not to put me on the list."

"I understand why they're doing this, but it kind of hurts your ego a little bit," said Grimm, who will be 30 on May 2 and makes $450,000 a year. "Will I look around? I don't think I'll look that hard, but if the phone rings I'll answer it. Obviously, the Redskins don't look at this as a gamble on me. How many teams will pay that type of salary, and I'm getting on in years."

The plan was unilaterally imposed by the owners without union consent as an attempt to satisfy Judge David Doty, presiding over the antitrust suit filed by the NFL Players Association at the end of the 24-day strike in 1987. It took effect following a last-ditch meeting on the morning of the Super Bowl, Jan. 22, between negotiators for the two sides that ended as fruitlessly as the rest of the numerous union-management sessions in the past two years.

The plan allows each team to protect 37 players with the rest — even those with existing contracts — permitted to negotiate with any other team until April 1. If they have not gone elsewhere by then, they revert back to their old teams with their old contracts.

Moreover, teams are allowed to protect players whose contracts have expired under the old rules, which require a team signing a player to give his old team the right of first refusal and surrender draft choices as compensation. Only two players in the last decade — the most notable linebacker Wilber Marshall, who went from Chicago to Washington a year ago — have changed teams in that fashion.

Worrell signs rich pact

By The Associated Press

Reliever Todd Worrell wanted to see if the St. Louis Cardinals would "play fair," and when they did, he signed a contract that more than quadrupled his salary.

"I wanted to see how far the Cardinals were willing to come over the midpoint ($862,500)," Worrell said Wednesday after signing a one-year contract. "If the Cardinals hadn't come to the midpoint, I'd have had to consider arbitration."

The 29-year-old bullpen ace agreed to a one-year contract for $875,000, a raise of 307 percent from the $215,000 he made last season. Worrell had 32 saves last season, a 5-9 record and a 3.00 earned-run average.

Worrell, scheduled to take his salary request before an arbitrator next Monday, had asked for $925,000. St. Louis was offering $800,000.

"But I think they played fair," he said of the Cardinals. "They said they would come to me after three years and they did. I appreciate it."

Worrell has 106 saves in a little over three major league seasons, ranking him second on St. Louis' all-time list. He was the National League Rookie of the Year in 1986 when he set a record for a first-year major league pitcher with 36 saves.

"Once we established the upper and lower boundaries, we took a look at the various comparables and went from there," general manager Dal Maxvill said.

Worrell's contract will make him the highest-paid reliever in history for those with just three years' service.

Also signing Wednesday were Jimmy Key, Chili Davis and Rob Deer, all of whom get multiyear deals. They were among nine players who avoided salary arbitration hearings.

Davis agreed to a three-year contract worth $4.1 million. The outfielder, who made $950,000 last season after leaving San Francisco and signing with California as a free agent, gets $1.275 million this year, $1.375 in 1990 and $1.45 million in 1991.

Left-hander Key, the ace of Toronto's pitching staff, signed a three-year contract at well over $1 million a year, with an option for a fourth season. Key had asked for $1.35 million in arbitration and the Blue Jays countered with $1.2 million.

Deer, an outfielder for the Milwaukee Brewers, signed a two-year contract for $1,645,000. Deer, who made $460,000 last season, gets $760,000 this year and $885,000 in 1990.

Dan Plesac, the Brewers' ace left-handed reliever, settled on a one-year deal for $725,000, a raise of $435,000.

Atlanta first baseman Gerald Perry agreed to $682,500, a raise of $237,500, and Braves reliever Charlie Puleo settled for $325,000, a raise of $102,500.

Another reliever, Brad Havens of the Cleveland Indians, agreed to a one-year contract for $225,000, a raise of $105,000.

Rick Aguilera, a New York Mets' right-hander who was injured most of last season, agreed to a one-year contract for $290,000, a $5,000 cut.

Dion James of Atlanta became the first player to have an arbitration hearing. He and Braves representatives appeared before arbitrator Daniel Collins, but several other signings reduced the number of players eligible for arbitration to 55.

Three players — shortstop Dickie Thon of the Philadelphia Phillies, first baseman Steve Balboni of the Seattle Mariners and outfielder Albert Hall of the Braves — were scheduled for hearings today.

Former Whiteface star Brockman earns top UT awards

University of Texas senior linebacker Lee Brockman received three top awards at the Ex-Students' Association's Longhorn Football Awards Dinner held Jan. 27 at the Erwin Center in Austin.

Brockman, of Hereford earned the Lan Hewlett Award for Scholarship for having the top grade point average of all junior and senior football players.

Brockman, a marketing major, has been on the Dean's List for four semesters and was earlier named a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholarship Athlete for 1988.

Brockman, a captain on last year's team, also won two of the five awards given by team vote: the D.X. Bible Team Spirit Award and the Longhorn Sportsmanship Award.

Brockman has also won Southwest conference Player of the Week honors, is a GTE Academic All-American and is active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Brockman was a leader in several statistical categories for the 1988 Longhorns. He was second-high in tackles with 113, caused an interception, recovered a fumble, caused three fumbles, blocked two kicks and recorded six sacks.

Olympic star Lewis says steroid use by women is on increase

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The way Carl Lewis sees it, steroid use by women in track and field has been on the rise, ethics of Americans in his sport are low, and The Athletics Congress is more of a hindrance than a help.

Lewis, a winner of six gold medals in the last two Olympic Games, also said Wednesday that improvement by track and field athletes might be slowed by sub-par coaching.

Lewis was in Los Angeles for filming of the Fox Network television show "Beyond Tomorrow, the Hit-tech Science Series." The show will be aired Saturday, Feb. 11 at 9 p.m.

"I believe the performance-enhancing drug usage among women is higher than among men, this year," Lewis said in a telephone interview. "Last year, I wouldn't agree with that. I think the men declined in 1988."

"People generally focus on the men. Maybe it will improve in 1989 for the women."

Lewis, who won four gold medals in the 1984 Olympics and two in the Games at Seoul, South Korea, last summer, refused to name names.

"We're trying to create awareness," he said. "When we focus on the individuals, it takes away from the problem."

"It's definitely a turnoff to me, not only from an athletic standpoint but from a society standpoint," Lewis said of steroids. "It's a drug. Every drug collectively is just ruining our society as a whole. I'm more against it for that reason."

Lewis said a lack of ethics contributed to steroid use.

"Eventually, hopefully ethics can take over," he said. "Our ethics are very low. Some people justify taking drugs, the idea being whatever it takes to win and it's not illegal. But it's unethical."

Lewis, 27, also expressed the opinion that The Athletics Congress, the governing body of track and field in the United States, is damaging the sport.

"I believe that TAC is hurting the sport, definitely, in America. I believe that strongly," he said.

"I know that many kinds of funds they're receiving for competition aren't getting there. I'm not saying that from an illegal standpoint. I don't know where it's going. I know all of it isn't getting to the meets. We're getting more television (coverage) every year but less money."

Lewis said sub-par coaching might hinder progress in his sport.

"The thing that might slow it (improvement among all track athletes) down more than anything is coaching," he said. "We need to get more consistent and better coaches around the world, not just America but the world."

For years, Lewis has chased Bob Beamon's world record of 29 feet, 2 1/4 inches in the long jump. Nevertheless, Lewis said a 30-foot jump is possible.

"There's no question (a 30-foot jump is possible) if everything is right," he said.

Carter's grading system gets clearance from TEA

AUSTIN (AP) — Preliminary findings of a review of Dallas Carter High School's grading system indicates the system works, said Texas Education Agency Commissioner William N. Kirby.

The grading system was at the center of a dispute when the state tried to prevent Carter from competing in last year's Class 5A football playoffs. Carter won a court order to remain in the playoffs and eventually won the state championship.

Kirby had determined a student on the Carter team had failed a class and was ineligible to play. But Dallas school district officials said the failing grade given to defensive back Gary Edwards was due to a miscalculation, and that Edwards actually passed.

After the court battle, TEA officials began investigating the grading system following complaints from other schools that Carter's grading standards were too low.

But Kirby said Wednesday that TEA officials were generally pleased by what they saw of the Carter grading system.

"Initially they have said to me they have found a lot of positive attributes. There are a lot of things that are being tried out up there that are really aimed at helping kids," Kirby said.

"The one drawback that they raised a question about had to do with the volume of paperwork involved," he said. Kirby said the final report will be completed in the next several weeks.

At Carter, students are graded on homework, class participation, weekly tests and six weeks' tests. Each area is worth 25 percent of the grade. A student cannot receive a numerical grade of less than 50 on any particular assignment.

In a related development, State Rep. Fred Hill, R-Richardson, filed a bill that would make the TEA commissioner the final authority in disputes over whether a student is academically eligible to participate in extracurricular activities.

House Speaker Gib Lewis signed on as a co-sponsor to Hill's bill. "We must continue down a course that encourages academic performance. House Bill 2 will enhance that pursuit," said Lewis.

Donald Hicks, Carter's lead attorney in the lawsuit, blasted the proposal.

"What they're trying to accomplish is to run minority districts," he said. Carter, an inner-city school of approximately 1,650 students, is predominantly black.

Hicks said suburban and rural school districts are trying to beat Carter in the statehouse and courthouse because they can't compete with them on the playing field.

"We have a powerhouse of athletic talent in the southern section of Dallas. The only way these guys are going to be able to come out from under it is to knock them (Carter) out on technicalities," he said.

Hill said the Carter controversy prompted the bill, but that it was not aimed at a specific school.

"The Carter situation is not the real reason for this bill being filed. The reason for it is simply to stress that academics are very important to the educational system and we don't want extracurricular activities to override the importance of academics," he said.

Also on Wednesday, the University Interscholastic League, which governs extracurricular activities in public schools, dropped its appeal of the court order that allowed Carter to continue playing in the state football playoffs.

Since the playoffs are over, the appeal is irrelevant, said UIL attorney Lucius Bunton. Bunton said the UIL would continue to prepare for the trial on the merits of the case in March.

If the TEA and the UIL win that court fight with the Dallas school district, Carter would be stripped of its state title.

Girl Scout cookies featured in imaginative, easy recipes

The sale of Girl Scout cookies will continue locally through Sunday.

Priced at $2 per box, the cookies may be purchased from local Girl Scout Troops of Brownies, Juniors, and Cadettes or by calling Linda Arellano, leader of Junior Troop No. 282, at 364-6112 or 364-5305.

No money will be collected until the cookies are delivered Feb. 23-March 5.

Seven kinds of cookies, all made with only vegetable shortening and containing no preservatives, are available.

Savannah cookies offer peanut butter sandwiched between two cookie cakes and Hoedowns are a crunchy peanut butter cookie coated with chocolate. Jubilees are a chocolate, caramel cookie featuring toasted coconut on top and chocolate stripes.

Classic Creme cookies are traditional chocolate and vanilla sandwich cookies and Scot-Teas are traditional shortbread cookies lightly dusted with sugar. Thin Mints are crunchy cookies flavored with peppermint and coated with chocolate. Special snack crackers made with real cheddar cheese and containing no added sugar are Golden Yangles.

Know signals of stroke

According to the American Heart Association, more than 500,000 Americans will experience a stroke this year. In many cases, quick action can prevent more serious problems from occurring as the result of a stroke.

A stroke happens when oxygen-rich blood is cut off on its way to the brain. This can be caused by a clot in an artery that supplies blood to the brain, or by an aneurysm, the bursting of a blood vessel in the brain. How a person is affected by a stroke depends largely on what part of the brain is robbed of the needed oxygen.

There are several ways your body may warn you of a major stroke.

- a sudden, temporary weakness or numbness of the face, arm or leg;
- temporary difficulty or loss of speech, or trouble understanding speech;
- sudden, temporary dimness or loss of vision, usually in one eye;
- temporary dizziness or unsteadiness, especially when associated with the conditions listed above.

Scientific advancements in the area of stroke treatment have included drugs, surgical procedures and improved diagnostic techniques unheard of a few short years ago.

But the most important weapon against stroke is early detection. If you notice one or more of these signals, see your doctor as soon as possible.

Beaumont set for opening of likenesses of music trio

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — For rock 'n' roll fans, J.P. Richardson is immortal as the Big Bopper of the late 1950s, booming out "HELLO BAYYYYYY-BEE!" at the start of his classic "Chantilly Lace."
And now on the 30th anniversary of the Bopper's death in a plane crash that also killed rock legend Buddy Holly and Ritchie Valens of "La Bamba" fame, their life-sized likenesses are being preserved together for posterity in bronze.
"It looks good," J.P. Richardson III, the Bopper's son, said of photos he's seen of the sculpture by Port Arthur artist Doug Clark. "I guess if you had 10 sculptors in there you'd get 10 different things. You can look at it one way and it's just a dead ringer. I'm happy with it overall."
Richardson, 29, who now lives in Houston, and other members of the Holly and Valens families were invited to a reception Thursday night to get their first look at the sculpture of the Bopper and a companion bronze triumvirate of Richardson with his arms around Holly and Valens.
Clark said he worked from videos of Richardson and Holly and from photos of Valens. His pose of the three is intended to show the trio as they were standing for a picture just before boarding the fateful flight to Fargo, N.D.
"I don't know that there really is such a picture," Clark said. "But I could just imagine someone getting one last shot before they got on the airplane."
The Richardson sculpture shows the wide-eyed grinning singer with a guitar at his waist and his arms wide open.

"I was watching a video and at the end of 'Chantilly Lace' he held out his hands and I thought, 'That's it!'" Clark said.
On Friday, the Port Arthur Historical Society was holding a concert in adjacent Beaumont to show the sculptures to the public for the first time and mark the Feb. 3, 1959 crash near Clear Lake, Iowa.
Proceeds from the affair were intended to bolster the fund to purchase a $50,000 building for a Port Arthur museum that would include local rock 'n' roll memorabilia.
The Port Arthur-Beaumont area is rich in music history and garnered much publicity a year ago with the unveiling of a Clark sculpture of late 1960s rock queen Janis Joplin, a Port Arthur native who died in 1970.
"Everybody said we should do something but nobody did," said John Palmer, a Port Arthur businessman credited with being the force behind the memorials. "So I said, 'Do it!'"
"I think we're really doing something here not only to honor the artists but to help other people appreciate the artists. These guys need to be recognized."
"We're certainly not celebrating his death, we're celebrating his life," Richardson's son said. "Of course, the death is always a sad time. But it's going to be a happy-sad time."
Richardson III was born three months after the death of his 33-year-old father, Jiles Perry Richardson Jr., who had gained fame in Southeast Texas as a disc jockey at KTRM in Beaumont and as a club performer in the area. His Big Bopper character was started in 1953.

As a writer, the elder Richardson already had made a name for himself in music circles for penning "Running Bear," a chart-topper sung by friend Johnny Preston of Port Arthur.
In 1968, he struck gold with "Chantilly Lace," which enabled him to hit the road in a big way. Richardson, a big man who often complained about being unable to get comfortable in bus seats, got a seat on the ill-fated flight with Holly when Holly's bass player, Waylon Jennings, gave up his spot on the plane headed for Fargo.
"He was my hero," said Palmer, who used to listen to the Bopper on the radio. "These guys were budding stars and then they were gone — whammo! It's frightening and it can happen to anybody. To think the only memorial to these guys is here, it shakes me. I'm so happy."
"Things went in different directions when dad was killed," Richardson's son said. "Mother being pregnant and having a daughter 5 at the time."
Richardson's wife remarried a year and a half later.
"The only dad I knew was my stepfather," he said. "I'm fortunate I guess. I had two dads."
Although his stepfather taught him the flooring business, for the past 14 months J.P. Richardson III has been collecting remembrances of his father and doing research for a movie to be made about the Big Bopper.
"Mother had just lost a husband and she wasn't too worried about the pictures, guitar, briefcases, papers. This past year I've been putting it all together — everything that went different directions 30 years ago," Richardson said.
Like the plane ticket to Fargo, or an itinerary of the trip. And a letter of condolence from Holly's parents and a telegram from Elvis Presley and his manager, Col. Tom Parker.
A limited edition book of photographs about Richardson's life was released this week and a compact disc rereleasing his recordings came out recently.
"I have two notebooks of songs written by my father that he never had a chance to record or have music — just lyrics," Richardson said.
"We have a lot to be thankful for. What we got out of it are friendships that will last a lifetime and love for one another. So it wasn't all bad."
And what would his father have thought of all the hoopla?
"I think he's up there saying, 'You're doing the right thing but do you have to embarrass me so damn much?' J.P. probably would be quite embarrassed about it," Richardson said.
"But the Bopper might laugh about it and say, 'You KNOW what I like ...'"

Police apologize for wrong arrests

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police and Travis County sheriff's officials apologized to a man who said he was arrested more than a dozen times on warrants meant for someone else with the same name.
But the authorities deny that the repeated arrests of Sylvester Brown were racially motivated, as alleged by local black leaders.
"There have been people of all races arrested on warrants that were issued for another person with the same name," said Assistant Police Chief Ray Sanders.
"We would hope that the person in-sist he is not the right one and that the officers would listen to him. It would appear that the ball was dropped in this case," Sanders said.
At a Tuesday news conference, Sylvester Brown said he was arrested 14 times over the past 10 years on warrants issued for a Sylvester E. Brown. Both are now 39.
After learning of the mistaken arrests, Sheriff Doyle Bailey issued a memorandum in October alerting deputies and booking officers of the "existence of two Sylvester Browns with the similar descriptions and dates of birth." Brown was given a copy of the memo to carry.

But the wrongly arrested Brown said only one arresting officer gave him the opportunity to explain that he wasn't the man named in the warrants.
"There are real racial overtones. I don't think that a white person would have been treated the same way," said Gary Bledsoe, president of the local NAACP.
Lt. Roger Napier, of the police internal affairs division, said his office was investigating the warrants to see when they were issued and why they were never cleared.
The Police Department also plans to issue a memorandum to all officers informing them of the mistaken arrests, Napier said.

Pressure cooker saves time when making beef and ham stew

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine
Food Editor

Warning! You may be hiding a valuable timesaving appliance in the back of a cabinet. If you own a pressure cooker, you can use it to cook one-pot meals three to 10 times faster than other cooking methods. For instance, this pressure-cooked stew is ready in 35 minutes, about one-third the usual time.

Make sure the pressure control maintains a slow, steady rocking motion during the cooking time. This ensures even heat distribution inside the cooker. Do not attempt to remove the cover until the pressure is completely reduced and no steam escapes when the pressure regulator is tilted.

BEEF AND HAM STEW WITH CARROT DUMPLINGS

4 slices bacon
1 1/2 pounds beef stew meat, cut into 1-inch cubes
3 medium carrots, cut into thin strips
8 to 10 boiling onions
1 1/2 cups beef broth
1/2 cup dry red wine
1/2 cup diced fully cooked ham
6 whole allspice
1 bay leaf
Carrot Dumplings (recipe follows)
1 teaspoon snipped parsley
In a 4-quart pressure saucepan cook bacon until crisp, reserving drippings in pan. Crumble bacon; set aside. Cook beef in drippings until brown. Drain fat. Add carrots, onions, broth, wine, ham, allspice, bay leaf and crumbled bacon. Cover pan; set control at 15 pounds pressure. Place pan over high heat until control jiggles. Reduce heat (control should still rock back and forth); cook 20 minutes. Remove pan from heat; immediately run cold water over cooker to reduce pressure. Uncover pan. Skim fat from broth; remove allspice and bay leaf. Return pan to range top. Cook, uncovered, until stew simmers.

Drop Carrot Dumpling dough from a tablespoon, making 6 to 8 mounds on top of stew. Sprinkle dumplings with parsley. Simmer, uncovered, about 5 minutes or until dumplings are tender. Remove pressure gauge from lid; loosely cover pan. Allow a small stream of steam to escape from the vent tube for 5 minutes more. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Carrot Dumplings: In a mixing bowl stir together 1 cup all-purpose flour and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Combine 1/2 cup milk and 2 tablespoons cooking oil; add all at once to flour mixture along with 1-3rd cup finely shredded carrot. Stir just until moistened.

Abundant Life

BEING PLEASANT

By Bob Wear

There may be many things that we cannot be and do, but 'being pleasant' is one thing we can be and do; and it will make life better for us, and for all who may be associated with us. This will not just happen, and it may not always be easy for us; but we can train ourselves and discipline ourselves, and can establish our thought and behavior patterns so that 'being pleasant' becomes dominant, as the prevailing mood.

Most of us, perhaps all of us prefer to be with and do business with people who are pleasant in their talk, and in their general interaction with us. It is also a fact that we feel better about ourselves, and about what we do, when we are pleasant. This is not some kind of character of personality weakness, but is very definitely part of one's personal strength. Our journey through life will be a more satisfactory experience, and we may be able to make the way a little better for others. This will be a blessing for all of us. The climate created will help preserve all of the more desirable elements of the life experience.

In the marketplace, the business world, the 'pleasant' treatment or response is the most attractive commodity. Everything else being equal, the business establishment with pleasant personnel will be the most desirable, and the one most of us will patronize. 'Being pleasant', however, has more than material value, as an

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress-singer Madonna and actor Sean Penn apparently have reached an amicable agreement to end their stormy three-year marriage and divide their property, court records show.

A divorce petition filed in Los Angeles County Superior Court cited irreconcilable differences and seeks restoration of the pop singer's former name, Madonna Ciccone.

It also said community property and financial obligations shared by the couple "have been disposed of by written agreement." No details were disclosed in the two-page petition filed Jan. 25.

Madonna publicist Liz Rosenberg said last week Penn would get the couple's Malibu home and the singer would keep their New York apartment. Madonna recently bought a $2.9 million Hollywood Hills home.

"That's it," Penn publicist Lois Smith said Wednesday. "She kept one and he kept the other."

The divorce action follows a Dec. 28 incident in which Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department deputies were called to the couple's Malibu home after the hot-tempered Penn allegedly beat Madonna. No charges were filed.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali is taking on K mart Corp. and another company for knockout stakes over an order of shoe polish.

Muhammad Ali Champion Brand Co., owned by the ex-fighter, is suing K mart and Melville Corp. for allegedly balking on a contract for shoe polish and failing to sell the polish in 500 stores, according to motorcycle stunt driver Evel Knievel, a spokesman for Ali and senior vice president of his company.

"They only put it in about 60 stores. That's a breach of promise," said Knievel. "I don't know why they would do that."

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court, seeks $550 million in damages, as well as $30,000 for attorney's fees and money owed to creditors.

Arthur Morrison, the attorney for Ali's company, said K mart and Melville backed out on their order when the Muhammad Ali shoe polish was delivered.

Arthur Richards, general counsel for Melville in Harrison, N.Y., refused to comment.

Orren F. Knauer, director of investor relations at K mart's Troy, Mich., home office, said nobody was available to comment.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Given the choice to hear talks by California Gov. George Deukmejian or the woman who oversees the Playboy empire, crowds at an elite international seminar chose Christie Hefner by a 2-1 margin.

Deukmejian spoke Tuesday about "The Nation State of California" at the annual World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, while just next door the chairwoman and chief executive of Playboy Enterprises was speaking about "Leisure Life in the 90s."

Ms. Hefner, who inherited the reins of Playboy from her father, Hugh Hefner, spoke to a standing room only crowd of about 160 on the changing tastes of the baby boom generation, family values and grown-up toys, according to the Los Angeles Times.

"The governor of California is concerned because our seminar is scheduled opposite of his," she said. "As someone who does a lot of business in California, I am sympathetic, but..."

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS STORY

"Everybody Already Knows My Store And What I Carry."

Sound Familiar?

Advertising is news about the marketplace, if you don't advertise, you're telling consumers there's no news from your store. But your competition is fighting for the public's interest with regular ads; if you want to keep your share of the market, you need to be in the same arena, bidding for the business. You need to advertise in the newspaper. Plus, people move out of the area and new people move in. Advertise to bring new customers into the store. Sell your store and your service through newspaper advertising.

NOT CONVINCED?

Newspaper advertising is unlike any other media choice. You're reaching a friendly, receptive audience with your advertising message. So receptive that they pay to have the paper delivered to their home. No wonder consumers consider newspapers the most believable advertising medium.

Newspaper advertising can help your business. It can increase sales and in a competitive market, it can give your business and edge over the other guy.

Don't tempt fate. Join the many successful businesses who know what works for them and what doesn't. Advertise in the newspaper and get results.
