Foster turns youthful hobby into business

By ANDREA LAMB Staff Writer

The thought of buying a computer - much less using one sends most folks cowering behind their Selectric typewriters or filing cabinets.

Add to that tension a computer salesman with the face of Opie Taylor who looks as though he should be pushing McDLTs.

Mike Foster, owner of the recently opened Foster Electronics at 407 N. Main St., admits he looks 16 and even tried to grow a moustache to ease his clients' nerves, but the 23-year-old Hereford High School graduate doesn't need facial hair because his pert and knowledgable computer talk soon erases any misgivings the customer may have.

"I was a little nervous when he first walked into my office and said he was Mike Foster," said Lola Faye Veazey, Deaf Smith County district clerk who utilized Foster's help in getting the office computer running. "But I like him really really well because he knows what he's talking about and doesn't talk over my head."

Foster draws his ken of computers from four years of studying engineering-physics and computer science at Texas Tech University, but Foster grew weary of the tests and textbooks and quit school.

"A lot of the reason I quit was burnout, but I also ran out of funds. I got tired of tagging onto my mother and dad and they, in turn, got tired of me," said

Degreeless and penniless, Foster decided to return to Hereford and set up shop doing

Representatives with the local financial institutions were a little leary about loaning such large chunks of money to a youngster, but the financing was approved

August to the old Pat Walker's Figure Perfection Salon-flocked wallpaper and all.

"I started the business because, number one, I needed to earn some money. Number two-I felt like Hereford needed some sort of computer business where the town would have easy access to equipment and supplies."

Foster lives and breathes computers, often spending six to 12 hours per week reading current material on computers so the advancing technology won't "leave me in the dust. I don't look at any of this as work; it's all play to me," said Foster as he drags up a prismatic graphic on the screen.

Foster is considered the senior staff member since his three programmers' average age is 19, and like their boss, they share the same zeal for computers.

"In a way, it's refreshing to work with the younger people because we already associate and we don't have to bridge any generation gaps."

Foster's staff-Allen Hyer (18), Heath Urbanczyk (20) and Kelley Wilburn (20)-got acquainted with each other when the three joined the computer club Foster started when he was in high school.

"So when I came back to Hereford from college, they were the first ones I approached," Foster said.

Wilburn, who is majoring in computers at West Texas State University, said he loves working with Foster and would like to join up with him once he graduates from college.

Youth certainly has its advantages, but to help customers feel at ease and to keep the office from looking like a fraternity house

Foster hired a salesman with the look of experience (52-year-old Dick Frye) to better reach the older set.

Reaching people hasn't been that easy in a depressed economy, said Foster, and the purse strings have been a little tight.

"If the business goes well, I'd. like to be here in 10 years. But we just need to convince Hereford that computers are very important to any business because it frees up time that can be spent on other things," stated Foster in his business-like demeanor.

Computer didn't free up any time Foster had. The computer whiz was so fascinated with the hardware that he let other things

"When I was in sixth or seventh grade, I would continually badger the people down at Radio Shack about wanting to work on their computers. They had the first computer in town, and I went over there constantly to work with them. Those computers are considered junk compared to the computers we have today," said Foster

Even though Foster finished 10th in his high school class, he claims he might have ranked higher had he not spent his spare time staring at a computer terminal. The gifted man admits he still counts on his fingers.

Foster's love for the computer might hark back to his discovery (See FOSTER, Page 2A)

Reward offered for industry

WANTED! New Industry. $1,000 reward for information leading to the ultimate location of a non-retail industrial employer with an initial employment of at least 15 people.

Those words headline a "tent card" the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce is placing in all restaurants and motels in Hereford. The promotion serves both as a real potential in landing a new industry as well as publicity for the community's aggressive pursuit of an expanded economic base.

Wording on the card also says: The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will professionally and confidentially follow up on your suggestion. If your recommended lead successfully locates in Deaf Smith County within 12 months of the date this card is received, you will receive a $1,000 check for providing us with the information."

The folded card includes a postage-paid return card for tips on new industries.

The Dullas Morning News DALLAS (AP) - Sure, you're tired of people saying: "Have a nice

The mechanic who gives you a triple-digit estimate for transmission repairs says: "Have a nice day."

The drugstore clerk who sells you Preparation H says: "Have a nice day.

Just be mindful that Texas temperature extremes range more than 140 degrees F. So in Texas, the wish to "have a nice day" can be sincere or even urgent.

Consider Baylor County's blistering 120 degrees on Aug. 12, 1936, or Gaines County's icy 23 below zero on Feb. 8, 1933.

More than a yard of rain can fall in 24 hours, as it did when the Williamson County settlement of Thrall got more than 38 inches on Sept. 9-10.

Or, baby, the rain won't fall at all. For instance, rain became a dusty memory in the Winkler County town of Wink in 1956 when only 1.76 inches teased the rain gauge all year

But those extremes may seem more an accumulation of "nice days" to anyone who has experienced really bad weather in Texas.

A tornado - now, that's bad weather.

Rotating winds of 200 mph have been recorded in Texas tornadoes, not to mention rain, hail, mud balls, house trailers, outhouses, a $30,000 poker pot and possibly a farm girl or two with a little dog named Toto.

Texans have learned to insulate themselves from the cold and wet and even the heat. But tornadoes remain hard to ignore.

Engineers at Texas Tech University in Lubbock have designed a tornado shelter that fits in the house like a steel closet. But try to find one:

Threatened by a tornado, most folks simply ball up beneath a stainway or crawl into a bathtub under a mattress.

But any Texan old enough to recall Pappy O'Daniel can remember a better way of dealing with tornadoes. Back then, everyone knew where to go when clouds began their cyclonic

LIVING WITH A

PERFECTIONIST My husband's parents as well as my own are celebrating their 40th plus wedding anniversaries this month. That's a long time to tolerate each other's little idiosyncrasies! I actually have very little reason to voice any complaints about my husband. He's pretty close to being perfect. For as long as I can remember, I've wanted to be married to a man who would share household responsibilities (without being nagged) and who would lead the family with a sense of humor. I finally found the man of my dreams only to be disillusioned after six mon-

John is a very agreeable type person especially where I'm concerned. He never complains about the way I run the house or my lack of enthusiasm for doing the household chores. To me, a clean house is what the visitor sees. I'm a surface cleaner. My husband, however, likes EVERYTHING to be clean and orderly. If I do a chore and it doesn't suit him, he says nothing, but simply does it over.

Following three months of his intense tidiness, whether in the house. the cars, garage, junk room, attic, ard, etc., I was getting crazy. I had a heart-to-heart with my new mother-in-law. She assured me that he was very normal while living at home. His room as typical: it looked like something out of the movie, "Animal House," with clothes, books, records, sports equipment, etc., scattered everywhere. This eased my mind somewhat but it didn't explain when or why this "perfec- of windex and cloth wiping spots of tionist flaw" first manifested itself in his character. I guess this will always be a mystery.

His closet is a testimony to his obsession with perfect orderliness. He has all of his shirts divided into groups: all-cotton long sleeves, all cotton short sleeves, golf shirts, ial shirts, etc. The front of each shirt must face the south and every hanger must face the west. He also has three laundry baskets tucked away in there for white clothes, colored things and miscellaneous items. His caps with advertising on them are stacked (in alphabetical order) on one of the top closet shelves.

It was a revelation the first time I laundered and put away his personal belongings. Everything in the drawers were in perfect alignment with exactly three inches in between groups of undergarments. When I saw this, I became hysterical, laughing so hard I couldn't eatch my breath. I ceased my cackling when I saw the hurt look on his face. After a few moments he explained that he also would like his socks, underwear, etc. rotated at least twice a week. I bit my lip trying to stifle another giggle. "That's just too weird," I exclaimed. "If you want them rotated, and I don't want to know the reason for this, do it yourself." (He does)

John also insists on proper bathroom etiquette. He gets aggravated (I can tell by the sign of disgust) if the shampoo and conditioner containers are depressed or if the damp bath towels are not hung (color coordinated, of course) completely straight on the rack. He also goes around behind me with a bottle

So, once again, I am exposing him toothpaste and water off the bathroom mirror while I'm trying to to public scrutiny. The worst that can brush my teeth. appen is that the men will hate him for being so handy around the house.

The rest of the rooms in the house are equally clean do to John's attentiveness. If I don't unload the dishwasher before I go to bed, he'll do it. If anything needs dusting, vacuumed, scoured or taken to the dumpster, here again, it's Johnnyon-the-job.

I have only one major gripe. His good humor. He bounces out of bed each morning singing "Shout" or "Louie, Louie." He whistles in the shower and is disgustingly agreeable regardless of the early hour. I, on the other hand, prefer not to be spoken to for at least two hours.

Writing this column reminds me of a recent conversation I had with a woman in the grocery store. She inquired if my husband ever got miffed with comments I make about him in BRANDed Women. I replied truthfully I didn't know, we had never discussed it. I think he realizes that penning my thoughts is a form of therapy for me.

"The Bank with Confidence"

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says a man pays a luxury tax on his billfold, an income tax on the stuff he puts in it, a sales tax on whatever he takes out, and an inheritance tax if there is anything left in it when he dies.

My uncle is an optimist. He wrote the IRS last week and asked them to take his name off their mailing list.

Sunday is Mother's Day. Many suspect it's just another commercial holiday dreamed up by florists and merchants to stimulate business. Not so! Mother's Day was conceived by Anna Jarvis, Grafton, W.Vir., who in 1907 persuaded her minister to have a special church service to honor her deceased mother. Mrs. Jarvis then worked for years to have the day proclaimed by Congress, and it was approved in 1914.

At first the services were primarily for deceased mothers, but it grew to honor all mothers. The custom arose to have white carnations presented to those without mothers and red to those with living mothers.

Mother's Day is a day of gladness and pride to most mothers. But not for all. Far too many mothers are snubbed, slighted or forgotten. Love for mom, of course, should be expressed through the year, but how anyone could pass up the opportunity to give thanks to mom on Sunday is beyond belief.

Don't let her take it for granted. Take, or make time Sunday to say it. "I love you, Mom!"

Businesses have to be more innovative these days if they hope to survive. We heard about a price war that had evolved in a rural West Texas town with only two grocery stores. The two stores were located directly across the street from each other. During the course of the price war, one merchant advertised bread for 25 cents a loaf. His competitor countered with the same loaf of bread for 20 cents. And so it went, until one finally advertised a loaf of bread for one cent.

Determined not to be outdone, the other grocer spent most of the night trying to figure out a way to outdo his rival-short of giving the bread away.

At sunrise, he had made his decision and hung a large sign in his store window. It read: "Buy your groceries here and we'll give you a penny to buy your bread across the street."

Numerous court decisions, from the U.S. Supreme Court on down, seem to throw a civil rights blanket over the entire American society and result in some odd notions about how we live with one another.

The most recent Supreme Court decision held that a small church college must abide by prescribed rules of conduct and lose their right to set their own rules because some of their students have accepted government guaranteed student loans.

This is stretching it pretty far, but apparently that is now the law of the land.

In previous decisions the Supreme Court has held that social and civic clubs do not have the right to restrict their membership but must open their membership to anyone who applies or else be in violation of the civil rights laws which demand complete equality on the basis of sex, race, religious preference and political idealogy.

What is wrong with having the right to choose our own associates?

Why should not the members of a society or a club or a lodge have the right to set the rules for membership? Surely there is some provision in the U.S. Constitution which guarantees individual rights of association. Apparently no one has found it yet.

Congress can pass all the laws they want to guarantee absolute equality in these United States but it will enver work becausa there is no sucy thing.

Laws can guarantee political equality but that's about it. Laws cannot guarantee social equality because in a white society blacks are not regarded as equals. This may be unfair and bigoted and everything else, but it is the truth, plain and simple. This is not to say that some blacks are not accepted as equals and it is not to say that blacks annot be political equals, economic equals, intellectual equals, but in our pre-sent white society they simply are not social equals. Nobody seems to know where the idea originated that women are some sort of minority group that has to be protected by laws making them absolutely equal to men in every respect. It/does not matter that track and field records favor men, that men can lift heavier weights, run faster, and box better, there are still those who seek to demandby law that women be equal in all these things.

A Lions Clubor a Rotary club or a Kiwanis Club ought to have the right to limit membership to males only if they so desire. These clubs should also have the right to admit women if they so desire. The important thing is that it is their desire, not Uncle Sam's.

When did we lose the right to choose our associates? -The Perryton Herald Page 4A-The Hereford Brand, Sunday, May 8, 1988

COMPARISONS

Well, old Clint is at it again. I said I was not going to say anything else about him after he got me tickets to the Grand Old Opry on short notice. It was not so much gratitude on my part that caused this decision as it was fear.

Who would want to have a running fuss with someone who knows enough people to swing tickets with one phone call? The man is far too powerful for me to pick on. Besides, I may want tickets to the Super Bowl or the Presidential Inauguration. Believe me, Clint can get them.

The trouble is Clint just cannot let sleeping dogs lie. Every time he runs out of soap for his morning program, he drags me out for a going over. Lately he has filled up about three programs comparing me to Donald Trump, the real estate developer from New York.

He has also had a lot of fun out of seeing me in a jogging suit at the Post Office. He says I jog from my office to the Post Office every morning. He gets a kick out of the fact that my office is next door to the Post Of-

I am still not going to retaliate. I promised I would not do so, and I am a man of my word. I did become intrigued with the comparison idea. Clint thinks I am Donald Trump, so I began to wonder who Clint is like. I came up with some great comparisons.

No one person could cover a man as complex as Clint. He is funny like Bob Hope, and almost as old. He has great drive like Lee Iacco, and the same ego. He knows more people than Lyndon Johnson, and uses them all. He preaches better than Jesse Jackson, especially about weeds.

Honoring Clint may be like the dilemma they had in erecting a statue to one of the presidents. The statue was not a problem. Where to place the statue was another story. They could not put the thing next to George Washington, because Washington could not tell a lie. They could not put it next to Lincoln for obvious reasons.

They finally put it next to Columbus because when Columbus left home he did not know where he was going; when he got there he did not know where he was; when he got home he did not know where he had been, and he did it all on borrowed money.

Viewpoint

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his johnson farm on Tierra Blanca Creek exmines foreign policy this week, Dear editor:

According to the political wr ters, one of the big issues in the coming Presidential campaign will be which candidate knows the most about foreign affairs and what will his foreign policy be.

A President, the argument goes, should have a thorough knowledge of other countries and their leaders if he's going to have an effective foreign policy.

But what if you travel to Italy for example and get acquainted with the Italian leaders and get set for a fine foreign policy toward them and by the time you get back home they've been kicked out of office and you've got it all to do over again?

Some countries change leaders so often you could be three or four foreign policies behind with them.

We've had foreign policies for 200 years, some other countries have had them for 1,000 years, and considering the number of times countries have been at each other's throats squabbling over territory, over boundaries, over riches, over human rights, fishing rights, doublecrossings, etc., it would appear that a lot of world leaders have been mighty weak in the foreign policy

Moreover, in a campaign, one candidate running against another candidate's foreign policy has a hard job when neither he nor his opponent knows what his or the other's foreign policy is.

Don't ask me what our foreign policy is. I have heard Secretary Schultz discussing U.S. foreign policy on television but I must have missed the program when he said what it is.

Nonetheless, there's probably nothing wrong with our foreign policy, whatever it is, except that other countries won't pay any attention to it.

Sometimes truth is hurtful thing

By Richard L. Lesher,

To be an effective liberal these days, it is necessary to shield oneself from economic reality.

If you doubt the wisdom of that observation, just ask Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Ga., chairman of the House Education and Labor Commit-sional Budget Office (CBO) to pertee. As a prominent member of the form an analysis of its impact upon House leadership and an outspoken champion of organized labor, regarded as an objective, nonpar-Hawkins is leading the campaign for tisan organiztaion. in 37 months. As is the custom when controversial legislative issues are at state, Hawkins called upon the Congresthe economy. The CBO is highly ed by Democrats. Even so, the CBO has always striven to maintain its reputation for integrity and professional objectivity.

So the CBO told the Education and Labor Committee, in a report dated March 25, 1988, exactly what effect the proposed increase in the minimum wage would have on our economy. Among other things, the CBO said it would destroy between 250,000 and 500,000 jobs.

Even worse, the CBO said, the loss of employment opportunities would afflict primarily those people the increase is designed to help-workrs at the bottom of the income scale, mainly teenagers. Apparently, the CBO report did not please Chairman Hawkins and other members of the House Education and Labor Committee majority. Almost immediately, the CBO withdrew its report from circulation without explanation. Four days later, on March 29,1988, the CBO issued a revised report. It contains essentially the same information as the earlier one except for the data on lost jobs. In fact, the entire subsection entitled "Effects On The Economy" has disappeared altogether form the revised report.

As for Chairman Hawkins and other members of the majority leadership, they are proceeding as if nothing had happened, still deman-ding a higher minimum wage, still insisting it would improve the lot of lower income workers. Their own economists have told them it isn't true, but they do not want to hear the truth when it is painful.

But one thing is clear. Anyone who really believes a higher minimum wage is a good idea must at all costs avoid contact with the truth. Sometimes truth can be a hurtful

Tijerina named Scholastic All-American Scholar

The National Secondary Education Council announced recently that Mandie Ann Tijerina has been named a Scholastic All-American.

The NSEC has established the Scholastic All-American Scholar Award Program in order to offer deserved recognition to superior students who excel in the Academic disciplines. The Scholastic All-American Scholars must earn a 3.3 or better grade point average.

Only Scholars selected by a secondary school instructor, counselor, or other qualified sponsor are accepted. These scholars are also eligible for other awards given by the NSEC. These are awards few students can ever hope to attain.

Mandie Ann, who attends Stanton Jr. High, was nominated for this National Award by Mrs. Caroline Waters.

Mandie Ann will appear in the Scholastic All-American Scholar Directory, which is published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in American history. Certainwinners of the Scholastic All-American Awards should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, executive director of the National Secondary Education Council.

CAN NEARSIGHTEDNESS BE CURED

Nearsighted eyes see clearly only those things that are close by. It's really a focusing problem. Light entering the eye is focused on a plane in front of the retina, instead of on the retina itself. Nearsightedness generally develops as we grow and the eye grows. Misuse of the eye muscles may contribute to the problem. Although an operation has been developed to correct extreme nearsightedness it is not recommended for most nearsighted individuals. And whether most nearsightedness can be prevented or reversed by other methods is debatable. Sometimes, however, reading glasses prescribed for nearsighted eyes reduce muscle stress and seem to slow down the role of increase. In some cases,

BEEF PROMOTION!

LET'S KBB IT GOING!

VOTE YES May 10 at your county extension office

Beef is coming back because beef producers are fighting back!

Today, more consumers are eating more beef and cattle prices and profits are up.

Let's vote to continue The National Beef Promotion Program. It's working! May 10, vote "YES"!

FACT! The program is controlled by producers. Cattlepeople run it. It's not a government program.

FACT! Each state decides how to spend 50 cents of every dollar.

FACT! Beef importers and all producers pay their share -$1 per head. This money is invested in consumer education, promotion, advertising and research.

FACT! Only 5% is allowed for administrative costs. 95% of every dollar is spent on the program itself.

NATIONAL BEEF PROMOTION IS GREAT!

Basketball camp scheduled in summer at WT

The Mark Adams' All-Star Boys' Basketball Camp will have three sessions this summer at West Texas State University.

The session dates are July 3-8, July 10-15, and July 31-Aug. 5. Camp director Mark Adams is head men's basketball coach at WTSU.

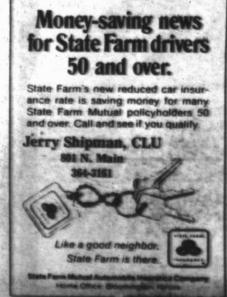

The camp will include six-game league competition, demonstrations by college players, three-man league competition, offensive and defensive drills, instruction in game fundamentals, and guest speakers.

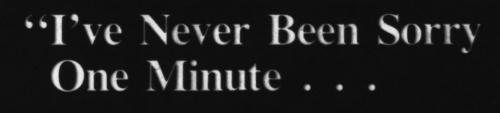

Boys ages eight to 17 may participate. Texas UIL rules allow only those who have not participated on varsity teams to attend camps. Outof-state campers from grades five to 12 may attend.

Registration fees are $200 for each overnight camper and $175 for each day camper. The camp ends each week at 1 p.m. Friday after an awards banquet.

For more information or for entry forms, write to: Mark Adams Basketball Camp, W.T. Box 206, Canyon, TX, 79016.

Junior high golf round played Friday

Hereford teams placed second and fourth in a 9-hole junior high school golf round played Friday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course in Hereford.

The Hereford Maroon team placed second with a score of 187, and the Hereford White team placed fourth with a score of 202. Other team scores were Canyon "A," 167; Canyon "B," 196; Valleyview "A," 207; and Valleyview "B," 229.

Two members of the Hereford Maroon team, Max Mungia and Shawn Savage, tied for fourth place among individuals with two other golfers with scores of 42.

Other members of the Hereford Maroon team, and their scores, were: David McCarter, 51, and Anthony Gale and Kevin Kelso, both 52.

The Hereford White team members and their scores were:
Mikel Walser, Damon Godwin, and

Corey Newton, each 50; Ben Weatherly, 52; and Jayson Mines, 56. Two girls from each school competed also on Friday. Teresa Baker was first with a 53, and Amber Brooks tied for fourth with a 59.

The junior high school golfers from Hereford will compete in two more rounds — at Hunsely Hills Golf Course in Canyon on Friday, and at Southwest Golf Course in Amarillo on May 19.

In 1895, the Belmont Stakes was not held until November because of problems in New York racing.

2 prairie opinions

EDITORIAL

Paper's policies, actions examined

There is no question that newspaper publishing is a business, but it is also a profession with standards. It is a public service, a public duty to be accurate and objective.

For the citizens of the Panhandle area, this trust is possibly being compromised by their newspaper company -- The Amarillo Globe-News.

The Prairie's investigation into a former editor's involvement in the underground paper, The Rest of The Prairie, while employed with the Globe-News, led to the discovery of a "philosophy" that seems to permeate the Globe-News.

The "philosophy" that seems to have developed is one of biased reporting regarding WT evident by the words and actions of some employees of the Globe-News.

One example involves Jason Akst. Akst is a graduate of WT and began reporting for the Globe-News in the summer of 1987. While attending WT, Akst allegedly helped organize protest rallies against Roach, made and sold Roach buster" buttons and has now been linked to involvement with The Rest of The Prairie.

Despite the fact that Garret Von Netzer, assistant general manager and executive editor of the Globe-News, was informed of these activities, Akst continues to cover the education beat which includes WT.

And let us not forget the Kari Flugel and David Bloom story entitled "Students Sound Off on WTSU President," in which Flugel and Bloom became involved in the meeting and actually conducted it but failed to report that in their

According to The Canyon News, Bloom took the podium and began to take control of the meeting. However, it took a letter to the editor for the Globe-News to acknowledge "the errors of judgment and the accompanying perception of ethical compromise" by their reporters and assign them to different beats.

Another example is the Globe-News' inconsistency in adhering to its own letters-to-the-editor policy. According to Phil Fretz, editorial editor, one criteria is that letters must be original or they will not be considered for publication. However, several letters have been run by the Globe-News after appearing in The Prairie and The Canyon News. All critical of the University.

Another incident involving then Globe-News general manager Jerry Huff was related to The Prairie in an interview with John McKissack, news director of KVII-TV (Channel 7).

On March 1, 1986, during a media luncheon at the Amarillo Club, Huff approached McKissack to discuss problems at WT. According to McKissack, after asking several questions, Huff said, "The problem is Pickens. You know Roach is Pickens' hand-picked boy; he's Boone's boy. Pickens is way off base with Ed Roach.

"Pickens is so well insulated we can't get him, but Roach is Boone's hand-picked boy. We can get Pickens by getting Roach. We're going to get Roach.

McKissack told Huff he did not know Roach and therefore could not comment on the situation at WT.

In retrospect, McKissack told The Prairie, "If they want to run Boone and Mesa out of town, then that is not part of their business. We're not in the business to run people out of town. We look at our role in the media as being a mirror. We need to reflect the activities of the community without affecting and changing the course of the activities. What do you do when your reporter becomes a part of the story? Does he still report it or do you pull him out and assign someone else?"

That's a question Von Netzer has apparently chosen to ignore in regard to Akst. Though Akst has proven himself to be a very capable reporter, the conflict of interest issue must not be overlooked.

Von Netzer seems to whitewash many questions about his paper by touting all the recent changes he has made, including the addition of a reader representative to handle complaints about the papers. Though Von Netzer is hard to pin down, others have hit the issue right on the head.

In a letter by Gib Lewis, Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, Lewis writes, "To me a newspaper has three obligations: the first, to report the news; the second, to report that news accurately; and third, to help build the community in which the paper is circulated. From my view this has not been the case in recent years with the Amarillo Globe-News."

No one expects the Globe-News to deliver "happy news." What we do expect is that the Globe-News deliver fair and factual reporting and to present both sides of an issue.

The readers of newspapers must learn to see through the conventions and excuses behind which their newspapers operate. Myths about journalism abound and unless the readers see through them, they will be manipulated by them.

Considering canola

Frank Bezner Jr. surveys the canola crop growing in his field near Hereford. Bezner has been growing contract crops for Frito-Lay for the past seven years, and was honored as one of its top corn growers last year. May 19, a field day will be held at Donald Meyer Farms, 12 miles north of Hereford on U.S. 385.

Seventeen area farmers are growing a new crop that could lead to some big dividends for producers in the future.

The farmers have contracted with Frito-Lay, Inc., to grow canola - a Canadian-created cousin of rapeseed. Canola oil, according to Frito-Lay, contains only 6 percent saturated fatty acids-less than half the amount found in corn oil. Canola oil is 94 percent unsaturated, and the amount of monounsaturated fatty acids is most favorable.

Although it hasn't been harvested a fixed market crop. yet, Frito-Lay is already calling the crop successful, and the full, yellow flowers would seem to attest that fact. Frito-Lay is setting up a May 19 meeting at 9:30 a.m. at the Donald Meyer Farms, 12 miles north of Hereford on U.S. 385, to view the canola field and learn details of the company's contract plans. Frito-Lay is looking to contract direct with farmers who would plant certified canola seed and then sell the

The 1987-88 canola contracts (the seed is planted in September, and is harvested about two weeks before winter wheat) were with farmers in an area bounded roughly by Olton, Clovis, Sunray and Wellington to test the crop under a variety of conditions. While Frito-Lay gave pointers on the plant, farmers adapted the plant to their own practices.

Like any crop, yields will vary acresulting crop direct to Frito-Lay at cording to those practices and year's harvest results first.

moisture received. Dryland yields will be about 1,400-1,800 pounds per acre for dryland and soar to about 3,000 pounds for irrigated acreage.

While Frito-Lay officials are expected to discuss most of their contract program details at the May 19 field day, the exact price to be offered in flat-price contracts in July and August haven't been set because the company wants to review this

Tuesday, May 10, is an historic day for cattlemen across the United the checkoff is a producer-run pro- health care professionals have market-oriented questions such as States. That's the day cattle producers decide the fate of the Beef Checkoff program in a referendum.

Voting for Deaf Smith County will take place at the County Extension office in the courthouse during normal business hours. Anyone who has owned cattle between Oct. 1, 1986(the start of the checkoff program) and March 23, 1988, is eligible to vote regardless of age.

The referendum will decide the fate of the $1-per-head checkoff. Under the program, every producereven importers, invests $1 per head of cattle sold. The funds are used for more than 100 programs whose sole purpose is to promote more beef consumption.

Leaders in the beef industry are calling it a fight for survival, "the single most important issue for cattlemen this year and likely the most important of the decade."

Mike Bowles, co-chairman of the Deaf Smith County Beef Referendum committee, says that after years of beef bashing by consumer activists, beef producers now realize they must fight back.

'It's not a fight the beef industry wanted," reports Bowles, "but when a misinformed minority suggests that beef is not healthy or that it is somehow an old-fashioned food, it's a fight the industry must accept."

There has been no organized opposition to the referendum locally, but beef leaders think it will be important to get out the vote in support of the checkoff program.

Bowles and his co-chairman, Charmayne Klett believe approval of the referendum is vital to the future of the beef industry. They explain that For example, more than 30,000 gram that seeks to win back beef received pamphlets that offer a changes in consumer tastes, beef eaters through consumer education. Mrs. Klett said there is a common misconception that checkoff dollars go to fancy offices, high salaries, or lots of airplane travel. "The fact is that Beef Board administrative costs for the beef checkoff are strictly limited, by law, to no more than 5 percent of the funds collected." She adds that the program also has a strong element of local control in that up to 50 cents of every dollar collected is kept by each state's own local beef council.

Both Bowles and Klett report that initial checkoff results have been impressive. One recent survey shows that the number of consumers who believe beef is an important part of a well-balanced diet increased from 51 percent to 56 percent over a sixmonth period. Another independent study shows that 13.9 million Americans who initially classified themselves as "light" beef users are now buying more beef after seeing checkoff ads.

While national advertising remains the most visible part of the program, education and research are also major components of the more than 100 programs.

One goal, points out Mrs. Klett, is educating-or re-educating-American consumers about beef.

Bowles added that more than $4 million will be spent on checkofffunded research this year. The program will look at everything from cholesterol to product safety to microwave packaging. Research

Tiny parasites may end up preventing crop diseases and pesty insects. U.S.D.A. scientists have developed a solution which preserve tiny parasites that can cause crop diseases. These parasites, called spiroplasms, live in plants, insects and ticks and are 500 times thinner than human hair. Preservation of the bac is important because it allows for research. Ways are being sought which will diagnose and fight the crop disc caused by the parasites. After sufficie data is in on the parasites, scientists hope to genetically engineer plants to be resis-tant to their diseases. Scientists also may result in a better way to control insects such as the fruit fly and the Colorado getato beetle.

USDA study shows unique area differences

WASHINGTON (AP) - It was part of what explorer Zebulon Pike in 1806 called the Great American Desert, the High Plains where grass was the natural crop and buffaloes roamed far and wide.

Pike's adventures along the Arkansas River to the Rocky Mountains gave rise to a notion at the time that the huge region of low rainfall, short grass and few natural water holes was a natural barrier that would limit U.S. westward expan-

Farmers tried to tame it with the plow, but often drought and crop failure dominated the huge region, generally west of the 100th meridian. Dryland farming, the settlers found, was a precarious business in the Great American Desert.

It began to change after enterprising farmers tapped underground water supplies for large-scale irrigation. A huge, invisible lake - the Ogallala Aquifer - was a gold mine for parts of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska.

But for years the underground water level has been receding, forcing deeper drilling and greater pumping costs. Already irrigation has become uneconomical for many.

"In order to maintain a viable agricultural economy, this area must return to a dryland type of production," says Agriculture Department economist Wendell Holmes in the current issue of Farmline magazine. "How soon the transition will be made depends somewhat on how willing farmers are to change their irrigation practices."

Holmes said "it seems reasonable to assume" that some irrigation will continue for a number of years. New technologies and more droughttolerant plants may help for a time.

'Whatever the time, though, adjustments must be made in order to be ready when the wells run dry," he

Holmes and a colleague, Mindy Petrulis, in the department's Economic Research Service studied an area of the high plains in West Texas, which included seven irrigated counties and eight neighboring dryland counties.

The irrigated counties included Castro, Crosby, Floyd, Hale, Lamb, Parmer and Swisher, while the dryland counties were Baylor, Cottle, Foard, Haskell, King, Knox, Stonewall and Throckmorton.

Holmes said the irrigated counties enjoyed an economic boom in the 1940s and 1950s as irrigation became widespread. A move to "center pivot" systems made it possible to nearly triple yields of cotton, wheat and corn on land previously farmed without irrigation.

become one of the most irrigation-

By 1960, the Texas high plains had dependent areas of the United States. But the nearby dryland counties, which lie just to the east of the Ogallala Aquifer, have never had enough water from surface or belowground sources to develop agriculture based on irrigation. Holmes said that has been apparent from their economic performance be inning in the 1940s.

"The economy of the dryland farming area continued to stagnate and periodically worsen, because of the lack of water for crops," Holmes said. "One effect has been a continued heavy outmigration of rural people."

For example, between 1940 and 1984, the total population of the dryland counties was cut in half and employment was reduced by a

In contrast, Holmes said, the irrigated counties experienced rapid economic growth and development during most of the 1940-84 period. Despite a small decline in the last few decades, total population in the mid-1980s exceeded 100,000 people, a 38 percent increase from 1940, and employment at about 41,000 was up nearly 80 percent.

Meanwhile, in the dryland counties that weren't blessed with an abundance of water, farms grew larger and fewer in order to maintain their incomes, and population dropped by 32 percent from 1940 to 1959.

"Dryland farming does not require a large labor force, nor can it support a large rural or urban population," Holmes said. "Thus, there was little inducement for people to move into the area or, having been born there, to stay. More and more people found employment elsewhere."

But by 1960, the fast-track development of the irrigated counties slowed down. From 1959 to 1978, he said, the value of farm products sold increased about 60 percent, compared with a tenfold increase in the previous 19

And by 1978, almost 2,400 irrigation farmers had gone out of business and 140,000 acres of cropland had been taken out of irrigation. Rising costs of energy took a toll.

The tough times continued among dryland farmers, too. Population in those counties dropped by more than a fourth from 1959 to 1978, total employment was down more than a tenth, and 31 percent of the farm operators went out of business, Holmes said.

In the 1980s, the financial situation for farmers across the nation edged higher. Between 1978 and 1984, the total value of farm products sold dropped 4 percent in the irrigated counties, while they increased about 10 percent in the dryland area.

Holmes said the population of the irrigated counties in 1978-84 declined about 3 percent, and total employment decreased for the first time since the Great Depression of the

Holmes said that was because the proportion of total farm sales from wheat in the dryland areas tripled from 1978 to 1984 because of government price support programs. And dryland farm operations cost much

In fact, he said, per capita income in the dryland counties in 1964 was higher than it had ever been in the irrigated counties. Unfortunately, the long decades of decline in the dryland counties had resulted in a grim bottoming out.

"So many people have left that the economy has finally stabilized, and most of those who remain are those with the jobs that are still available," Holmes said.

prices of food commodities averaged higher in 1987 after declining for two years, and retail grocery prices rose even faster, says an Agriculture Department report.

So, for the third straight year farmers got a declining share of the consumer food dollar - an average of 29 percent, or 29 cents out of every dollar spent at grocery stores for a market-basket list of food items.

With 29 percent of the retail cost of market basket going to farmers, that means the remaining 71 percent went to those who handle raw food products after they leave the farm.

The market basket contains average quantities of domestically produced food bought in grocery stores, excluding non-alcoholic beverages, and fish and seafood.

Department economists use several basic components to describe what happens to the market basket each year: -Farm value represents prices farmers receive for the raw commodities equivalent to foods in the market basket. -The farm-to-retail price spread is the difference between the retail price and the farm value. The price spread is the charge for processing, distributing and retailing foods.

Choose credit cards with taxes in mind

For years, many consumers simply shrugged their shoulders at the amount of interest they paid on credit spending, saying "at least we can take it off the taxes." But no

As part of the federal tax reform package, only 65% of consumer interest was deductible on 1987 income taxes and onv 40% of interest paid will be deductible in 1988. By 1991 the deduction will be eliminated.

"With the phase-out of consumer interest deductions on federal income taxes, people are starting to look more closely at the way in which they use their credit cards," according to Nancy L. Granovsky, a family economics specialist.

"For some families, this may mean cutting back on credit card purchases or paying the bills in full each month. For others it may involve shopping around for the last costly credit card alternatives," she

Unfortunately, comparison shopping for credit cards isn't always easy, notes Granovsky, a home economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension

'Comparing the annual percentage rate (APR) of interest charged is a good place to start, but it doesn't tell the whole story," she says.

The amount of annual fee, the method used to determine the balance on which finance charges will be based and whether or not the company allows a grace period are also important."

"The best credit card choice will depend on the size of your typical account balance, your timing of purchases and payments and whether you typically pay in full each month, avoiding all finance charges, or pay only part of the balance."

If you tend to run large balances and make partial payments each month, the specialist advies shopping for the lowest possible annual percentage rate (APR).

COOKING AND EATING SOLO

Eating alone isn't unusual. Teenagers do it after school, employees do it when they're staying late at work and singles of all age do it almost every day.

Eating alone and eating nutritiously don't have to be two separate things. With a little planning-even if that planning only goes on in your head-vou can make sure vou're getting a balanced diet.

Here are some ideas to make preparing "meals for one" more convenient, enjoyable and nutritious.

-Take advantage of the singleserving frozen entrees, soups, cereals and other products on the market. They may be more expensive, but can save money if you are not good about eating up leftovers and therefore waste food.

-Items that work especially well for single servings include chicken and turkey cutlets, chops, steaks and fish and seafood which can be purchased in small quantities. These foods are a major source of protein and can be prepared quickly and easily in single serving sizes by broiling the meats or poaching the fish.

-Set aside an evening or afternoon to do quantity cooking for future meals. Package, label and freeze in single servings.

-If a recipe serves two or more, one serving should go on the plate and the rest should be put in the refrigerator or freezer immediately. This will help you avoid overeating. -Heat-sealed freezing/cooking pouches are good for storing leftovers. They are reheated in boiling water or a microwave, which saves time and cleanup.

-If you have a good cafeteria available at work or school, or you go to business lunches, eat your big meal at noon. Then you can have a or national origin.

This is a recaptured moment of transformation unique in our history, when a sleepy, old fashion southern town became the energizing heart of a unprecedented national endeavor overnight. Washington, D.C. is a wonderland suddenly alive with incident, personality, drama, and comedy when it finds itself a world center of action and power.

From the fall of Poland in 1939, America begins to move into the war. Brinkley surrounds the reader with the fascinating people who moved and shook FDR's Washington. "Cissy" Patterson, the flamboyant newspaper publisher who loathed FDR; Evalyn Walsh McLean, whose Sunday soirees were the most coveted in town; and Chester Bowles, the genial ad man who succeeded in the hair-raising task of regulating wages and prices in a nation of individualists, are just a few of the Washington personalities

This narrative carries us through the suspense of D-Day, the death of FDR, Truman's inauguration, the celebration at last of VE and V-J Day, and shows a city and nation moving into an era, profoundly changed forever.

It is the Bicentenary year and Australia is having the party of a life time. Inspector Scobie Malone would much rather be out on Sydney Harbor with his family and friends watching the fun, but he is on duty, investigating the murder of President Timori's aid. The bullet was clearly meant for the President, and Malone

Interfering in the case at every opportunity is Hans Vanderberg, premier of the state of New South Wales, a political enemy of Prime Minister Norvel and master of every political trick ever devised. Told with dry Australian humor, compassion, and gripping suspense Dragons at the Party, by Jon Cleary, takes Malone from the opulence of Point Piper mansions to the tenement slums of the Abroigines. Jon Cleary truly "has a noble gift of storytelling."

Thomas Perry's new book is Island A husband and wife con team has stolen the payoff and are now on the run from the mob. The only way to survive is to hide in such a remote place that even the mob can't find you. Then comes the idea and offer.

Tapestry by Belva Plains is another you won't want to miss. Set in the tumultuous 1920's and 1930's the saga of the Werner family continues. Paul Werner, scion of a banking family, is married to one woman, but loves another. Paul must face the most painful loss imaginable: the stillborn birth of his child which results in the barren state of his gentle wife, Maria. Paul loves and respects her, but now his desire for the forbidden Anna grows stronger.

Paul, a man divided, is publicly sure and decisive, who even risks his life to help German Jews flee their country; while he privately cahses a fantasy woman might have been. This is truly a Belva Plains novel for her readers to relish and remember.

FRANCIS W. EDMONDS

NEW YORK (AP) - The exhibition "Francis W. Edmonds: American Master in the Dutch Tradition" focuses on the work of Edmonds (1806-63) and the stylistic debt 19th century American art owed to Dutch painting.

The exhibit, at the New York Historical Society through June 19, traces Edmonds' career and includes 27 paintings and 13 oil studies and drawings. It also includes two of his sketchbooks.

Of Edmonds, the society says, "He took inspiration from 17th century Dutch genre painting, echoing its meticulous rendering of the everyday world and its fondness for rustic and humorous scenes."

COOKING OUT THE OIL

BARTLESVILLA, Okla. (AP) - Oil which is much like natural crude can be cooked out of organic material under pressure in a few days.

This indicates the crude oil found in nature was formed from organisms. Studies show that enough marine and duced during earth's history to generate present known oil reserves many times over. Much remains to be learned about how, when and where crude oil originated. At Phillips petroleum laboratories such research continues with the objective of improving predictions of where to explore for oil.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Are you nuts? The advice you gave to "Needing Advice in Oil Country" was the dumbest yet.

A woman writes that her 34-yearold brother (working part-time and married to a shopping addict) is in a tight spot financially, for the umpteenth time. He needs financial help or they will lose their home. Their mother has told Sis that if she doesn't come through, she will give Sonny Boy her Social Security check.

And you caved in! Don't you realize that Mom is blackmailing her and if Sis keeps bailing them out they will never be able to make it on their own? Let them lose the house. It might wake them up .- Don T., Oakland, Calif.

DEAR DON: My mailman has a hernia from carrying in the bags of mail. Thousands of readers are letting me know that my advice was terrible. Here are some additional comments.

From New Orleans: I wish "Oil Country" had written to me instead of to you. She would have gotten a much more sensible answer. Her brother has a history of fiscal irresponsibility. He has always lived beyond his means. Rescuing him again will only postpone the day of reckoning. The sooner he is jolted back to reality the better. You goofed, Annie.

From Rockford, Ill .: "Oil Country" sounds like she's a member of my husband's family. Every time the phone rings I wonder which in-law is calling to hit us up for a little cash until next payday. A few weeks ago his brother called and said he needed money for fuel oil. My husband got smart and asked, "What's the number of the company you buy from? I'll order the oil and ask them to send the bill to me." His brother shot back, "Forget it," and hung up. We now know that we were being tapped for money to buy booze and cigarettes.

From Charlotte, N.C.: Why did you encourage that freeloader's sister to be an "enabler"? He has an addiction that is similar to alcoholism. Until he recognizes his problem and learns to deal with it, nothing will change.

From Los Angeles: Get real, Ann. Why should Sis keep rescuing a 34-year-old wimp and his shoppingaddicted wife? Have you gone on vacation and turned the column over to a part-time high school copy girl? I can't believe you wrote that lousy

From Omaha: Your advice to Sis was wrong, wrong, wrong. I've been through the same thing with my younger sister and it's no fun. Dad spoiled her rotten and she played him like a harp. Everything she wanted he gave her, even though he didn't have much to begin with. Sis married a no-good burn and had two kids. Dad still paid her bills. After Dad died she tried to get me to bail her out. My husband said, "No way." I'm glad he had the strength to hang tough. I straightened my sister around. She pays her own bills now and no longer looks for handouts.

From Lake Forest, Ill.: Your advice to Sis blew my mind. How could you be so dumb as to underwrite an intrafamily free-lunch program? You should have told the big stiff to get a full-time job and keep his wife out of the stores. Everyone should cut him off. When there is no life net to land in, I'll bet he learns to live within his means.

So, dear readers, there you have it from The World at Large. I hereby acknowledge that my advice was a bummer. I hope Sis sees this column and follows the suggestions of the jury that judges me every day. There's a lot of wisdom out there.

TALKING DOES IT By Bob Wear

Talking is a very important part of our daily activity, and our manner of talking has the potential to make our day a good day or a day of loss and regret. So much depends upon the quality of our talking. There may be nothing about our daily life that does as much to determine the kind of day

Much that is good and truly worthwhile is begun with talking, and, unfortunately, much that is evil and harmful also begins with talking. One of the most abused notions is that we have the right to talk as we please. With this attitude, it is possible to become very careless and misguided in our talking. In a general way, perhaps, we do have the right to talk as we please. We call it free speech; however, being wise in our talking is the best way to express our appreciation for our freedom, and will be helpful in maintaining the

Our choice of words is a very important part of our talking. There are good words and there are bad words; right words and wrong words. The other critical element concerning our talking is our tone of vocie. We make our talking most effective, when we choose the most appropriate words and use the most suitable tone of voice. We do have the capability and the responsibility of controlling both.

"Words are the best medium of exchange of thoughts and ideas between people. Their use is worthy of study and consideration in order that we may use them more intelligently. The more clearly we express ourselves, the more we avoid misunderstandings: and better understanding is what we need in this world."-Wm. Ross.

Talking does it. All of us know that talking often maks the difference between desirable and undesirable human situations.

Opening ceremonies were conducted per ritual. Roll of officers was called with all offices present. Minutes were read and approved, treasurer's report given, bills presented and paid.

In making plans for the District 13 Convention to be held in Hereford May 14-15, it was decided for all members to meet at the VFW Post Home on Wednesday, May 11, at 6 p.m. to make table decorations. Members should bring paper goods to be given as a door prize at the Convention.

Morris installed the following officers: Marta Williams, president;

The Ladies Auxiliary to VFW Post Martha Bridges, senior vicepresident; Erma Murphey, treasurer; Mabel Yocum, chaplain; Edith Richardson, conductress; Essie Martin, guard; Erma Loving, three-year trustee; Betty Boggs, one-year trustee; Darleen Carroll, secretary, and Terrye Rhyne, patriotic instructor.

Closing ceremonies were held per ritual. The meeting was closed to reopen at 8 p.m. on May 16, 1988.

Other members present were Debbie Broadstreet, Doris Wilson and Marie Goheen.

Entertainment Chamberlain coming back

LOS ANGELES (AP) - It's been more than 20 years since Richard Chamberlain has starred in a regular television series, but he says he's about to make a comeback.

Not that Chamberlain has been a stranger to the tube. He has been bouncing around the world the past few years filming miniseries.

In his latest, he co-stars with Jacyln Smith in "The Bourne Identity." based on Robert Ludlum's spy thriller, which ABC will televise in two parts on Sunday and Monday.

Chamberlain is now developing a regular series, his first since he quit "Dr. Kildare" in 1966 and took off to

"We've hit on a wonderful idea, which I can't talk about," he says. 'We took the idea to CBS and Lorimar and got a deal for 13 shows."

Chamberlain is quite ready to relinquish his title as the "king of the miniseries" and have work that will keep him off the road.

"I'm tired of this gypsy life," says Chamberlain, just back from four months in Europe filming the Ludlum story.

England to shed his boyish image way to settle down. When you do a series you're at the studio all the time, but you do get to go home at night."

Smith, the former "Charlie's Angel" who's known as the "queen of the miniseries," also doesn't want to travel as much now that her children are approaching school age. She's looking for a comedy series.

About his role in "The Bourne Identity," Chamberlain says:

"Jason Bourne is a fascinating character, very complex, very divided. He's basically a scholar and teacher, but he has become this terribly efficient undercover agent. The story begins when he has been shot in the head and washes up on shore in the South of France with amnesia.

"All he knows is that he has a Swiss bank account with $15 million and everyone is trying to kill him. Evidence begins to build that he is the notorious terrorist Carlos. He takes Jackie Smith hostage. Then they fall in love. She ends up saving him."

The story, like all of those by Ludlum, is terribly complicated, but it has been simplified by screenwriter 'Carol Sobieski.

GATEWAYS TO THEIR STATES

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) - Serving as a crossroads between the plains of North Dakota and the pine forests of Northern Minnesota for more than 100 vears, the cities of Grand Forks and East Grand Forks, Minn., are still vibrant gatetways to their states. Since the 1870s, when the meeting of the Red River of the North and Red Lake River became a thoroughfare for people, the two cities have become a ocal point of trade and service.

Today, there are more than 300,000 people in an 18-county area now known as "Greater Grand Forks."

During her program, Bradley explained that patchwork originated from the Seminole Indians.

Summer can lead to heat-related deaths

Texas summers lend a new definition to the term "hot," and this summer will probably be no exception. Although summer does not officially begin until Monday, June 20 (10:57 PM CDT, to be precise), experienced Texans know that it really begins as early as March and can stick around until well into October.

Summer heat increases the number of people taking part in outdoor activities, and this leads to a rise in heat-related deaths and injuries. Few people realize it, but nationally there are more deaths each year from heat than from floods, hurricanes, lightening, and tornadoes

Flippo to serve as director

Steve Flippo, son of Ernie and Toddie Flippo of Hereford, was selected by the Student Government Association at St. Mary's University to serve as director of communications.

Flippo, a graduate of Hereford High School who was also an employee at The Hereford Brand in the advertising department, is an English communications art major. He has exetnsive experience in the university's relations office designing posters, flyers and printing newsletters. He will be a senior in Texas Safety Association, in cooperation with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and the National Weather Service, offers this easy rule-of-thumb: When the temperature goes up, slow down! Remembering a few safety rules will let you enjoy your Texas summer activities without risking your health.

Take it slow! Heed your body's early warnings and reduce your activities. Stay in cool, shaded areas as much as possible.

Drink plenty of non-alcoholic liquids. A glucose replacement is excellent if you are outside for more than an hour or two, but plain water is a good substitute.

Wear lightweight, light-colored, and loose-fitting clothing appropriate to hot weather to help maintain normal body temperature. Your head is a prime target for the sun's rays, so wear a hat and sunglasses, too.

Heatstroke tends to develop quickly and with little warning, with victims becoming ill in less than 24 hours. Go slow the first few days to let your body become accustomed to the heat.

For a few hours each day, get out of the heat as much as possible. Airconditioned areas or those equipped with ceiling fans are best, but any well-ventilated, shady areas will do.

Gallery brings glitz to store

Piped-in music is interrupted occasionally by a call for customer service. The pictures are hung a bit high and not quite flush-top. But the carpet is appropriate, industrial gray. The walls are white, and the track lights are plentiful and properly adjusted.

On balance, The Art Corner Gallery in the Standard Brands Paint Co. store on University Drive feels right for what it is - a professionally operated, non-profit gallerywithin-a-store that exhibits work by serious amateurs and emerging professionals in the community.

The gallery has been open at the paint and art supply store near Fort Worth's Cultural District for almost three years. That a retailer would devote some 450 square feet of sales area to an unprofitable enterprise seems dubious, perhaps, from a bottom-line point of view.

But in-store galleries have been part of the Southern California-based retailer's marketing philosophy since about 1980, company representative Heidi Gatej said. The company knows it's good business and good public relations.

The Fort Worth gallery is one of only four placed in a Standard Brands home-decorating store. There are 135 such stores in eight Western states. There are eight other in-store galleries, but they are in outlets that sell only art supplies.

"We have the galleries in the art stores to give community members who don't have the opportunity to show their work in museums and galleries a place to show their work," Ms. Gatej said. "We have them in order to give back to the communities."

The true extent of community support for the Fort Worth gallery was

When he was confronted with the prospect of closing the gallery, Fort Worth store manager Simon Quintero said he assembled evidence of community suport that included newspaper clippings, letters from artists and a copy of the mailing list of about 1,000 names.

As a result, the gallery remains open, and it has shows booked into early 1989.

"The nice thing about the galleries especially about Fort Worth, is that the managers are so involved. They really make it work," Ms. Gatej said. "Basically we try to participate actively in the local arts," said Quintero, a Fort Worth native familiar with the local clientele. "We're not here to compete with local galleries. Hopefully we're providing a launching pad for local ar-

"gallery-ready" - framed and ready to hang. Depending on the nature of the installation and the extent of publicity, the cost of putting on a show may vary from $300 to $900, according to the gallery log.

Day-to-day gallery operations, as well as installation, are handled by Quintero and assistant store managers Don Redfield and Robert Campbell. And Quintero bases his curatorial decisions on portfolio reviews and studio visits.

"We want to show work that will reflect credibly upon itself," he said. Their work is paying off in terms of earning the respect of local gallery professionals, as well. As a gallery addendum to the store, the Art Corner is commendable, said Jeff Kelley, director of the Center for Research in Contemporary Art at the University of Texas at Arlington. He and Quintero have worked together on two joint exhibitions at the Art Corner, and Kelley also has judged two of the gallery's competitive exhibitions.

"The people at Standard Brands have been real open to ways in which their gallery might broaden its appeal to a number of audiences," Kelley said. "They have a traditional amateur audience, which they haven't broken away from. But they've broadened in the direction of a professioanl caliber of contemporary artists."

Barbara O'Neil, assistant to Fort Worth gallery owner Evelyn Siegel, agreed that the Art Corner does a good job, and occupies its own niche in the local art scene.

"They show artists with merit there," Ms. O'Neil said. "I think it's fulfilling a need in the community."

On the House

Q. - I would like to ask about the elbow pipe under our sink. It seems to me these elbow bends in the piping system do little but cause trouble. Every couple of years or so, the elbow has to be cleaned out. When it is cleaned, there are lots of little things there, including small stuff the children have allowed to get into the sink. Why can't the piping be made completely vertical so any small objects that get into the drain will descend by gravity into the septic tank system?

A. - The elbow, or trap, has an important reason for its existence. The water that stays in the elbow prevents gas from backing up into the fixture and the house. Every drainage system must have provisions for keeping out the gas, which normally would rise from the septic tank or other disposal area. Be thankful the trap is there. And teach the children not to throw things into the sink that might clog the drain or settle in the elbow.

Q. - I want to keep the rain from damaging the mortar in the brick joints of our house. What can I use to do this and not change the color of

A. - Try a colorless silicone water conditioning and heating seasons. repellent.

Q. - I plan to paint the inside of our house. The walls in two rooms will be papered, but all the others will be painted. I have been considering putting wallpaper on the ceilings of the two rooms that will have the walls papered. Is this a difficult job? A. - Yes. While ceilings can be papered, you are better off to paint them. Paper the ceiling only if you need some special effect.

Q. - When I paint my white fence. I will be using a spray gun for the first time. How far away from the fence should the gun be held? A. - About 9 or 10 inches. Use steady strokes, overlapping the paint slightly as you move along. It is better to apply two thin coats than one heavy coat. Before you get to work on the fence, practice a bit with the spray gun on some newspaper or cardboard.

Q. - Our house has a large, unfinished attic. I expect to finish the attic and make it into two rooms. I need a little advice on the ceiling. I assume I can use almost any material on the ceilings, but would like to try ceiling tiles. Are they difficult to install? Will I be able to get instructions on their installation at the place where the tiles are purchased?

A. - By all means. The tiles will come with detailed instructions. And no, it is not difficult. A little tedious, perhaps. Most ceiling tiles are porous and have sound-deadening qualities, but if this is extra important, get the acoustical type. Look into the use of insulation, which will help conserve energy both in the air

(Balky toilet tanks, clogged drains, leaky faucets and tank condensation are among the topics discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, selfaddressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Redemption Rights The rights of redemption, as specified in Internal Revenue Code section 6337, are quoted as follows:

Sec. 6337. Redemption of Proper-(a) Before Sale - Any person whose property has been levied upon shall have the right to pay the amount due, together with the expenses of the proceeding, if any, to the Secretary at any time prior to the sale thereof, and upon such payment the Secretary shall restore such property to him, and all further proceedings in connection with the levy on such property shall cease from the time of

such payment. (b) Redemption of Real Estate

After Sale. (1) Period.-The owners of any real property sold as provided in section 6335, their heirs, executors, or administrators, or any person having any interest therein, or a lien thereon, or any person in their behalf, shall be permitted to redeem the property 180 days after the sale thereof.

sold, or any particular tract of such property at any time within (2) Price.-Such property or tract of property shall be permitted to be redeemed upon payment to the purchaser, or in case he cannot be found in the county in which the property to be redeemed is situated, then to the Secretary, for the use of the purchaser, his heirs, or assigns, the amount paid by such purchaser and interest thereon at the rate of 20 percent

Sec. 6339(c). Effect of Junior Encumbrances.

Effect of Junior Encumbrances A certificate of sale of personal property given or a deed to real property executed pursuant to section 6338 shall discharge such property from all liens, encumbrances, and titles over which the lien of the United States with respect to which the levy was made had priority. 217-le
