Texas wants census to include aliens

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas has asked a federal court to let the state join defendants battling against a lawsuit that seeks to bar the U.S. Census Bureau from including illegal aliens in the 1990 census.

State Attorney General Jim Mattox said the lawsuit, if successful, could cost Texas federal funds and U.S. House seats.

"We want everybody counted," Mattox said Tuesday in announcing the state's request to intervene in the lawsuit filed in Pittsburgh.

He said the U.S. Census Bureau has always been required to count all "persons," not just citizens, in the national head-counting conducted every 10 years. The census report is used for several purposes, including the apportionment of U.S. House seats.

Texas, which now has 27 House members, could gain as many as four more in the 1990 census, Mattox said, adding that a court decision ordering the Census Bureau not to count illegal aliens could mean fewer additional seats for the state.

"It is essential these people be counted as they have been for the last 200 years," Mattox said of illegal aliens. "The term 'persons' is all inclusive. We want everybody counted."

The Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund also asked to intervene as a defendant in the federal lawsuit, filed Feb. 18, brought by 41 congressmen and two groups. Mattox said the state of New York and the cities of Chicago and New York have asked to intervene as defendants as well.

He said there could be as many as 1.2 million "undocumented workers" in Texas that would not be counted if the plaintiffs prevail. They are people for whom the state has been ordered to provide a variety of services, including free education.

"This lawsuit would threaten our ability to do that if it is successful," he said at a news conference.

MALDEF lawyer Jose Garza said the lawsuit, if successful, could have a "devastating" effect on the Hispanic community.

"We've had a great deal of difficulty convincing the Hispanic population that they should cooperate (with

Eichner testifies in Austin

The executive director of the Economic Development Strategy Council detailed what Hereford and Deaf Smith County are doing to spur economic development during testimony Monday and Tuesday before the Governor's Task Force on Agricultural Development at the state capitol in Austin.

The task force, which includes Frank Barrett and Bob Josseland of Hereford, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to assist him in development of a legislative agenda for the 71st session of the Texas Legislature, which convenes in January.

Phillip A. Niedzielski-Eichner detailed the county's prowess in state and national agriculture, pointing to the county's cash receipts of $317.7 million from crops and livestock in 1985 — making Deaf Smith County a runaway No. 1 in agriculture.

"In at least three areas, the county is the home of national or world competitive products: fed cattle, hybrid seeds, and health foods," Eichner told the committee. "These successes were not achieved by accident, but by progressive farmers and cattlemen making best use of the natural resources and available technology on a scale that dwarfs many of their peers in the rest of the country. Most operations are still family owned or locally held corporate enterprises."

Then came the bad news. Eichner told the committee that while "Doom is not on the horizon, the community faces a gradual, rather insidious decline," pointing out a loss in population of about 1,500 persons since 1980, wide year-to-year market swings in agriculture, and government intervention that has influenced "production and price, adding another dimension of uncertainty for the long term should national policy shift or change."

Eichner described the erosion of the local retail and service bases and said the economic erosion "it seems to me, has been one of the major chapters in the story of the decline of rural America."

"One of the challenges for Hereford and other ag communities experiencing gradual decline is recognizing the seriousness of the problem now and boldly intervening to change the fundamental conditions before they become irreversible," Eichner said that meaningful change can occur only when there is widespread belief in the need to change and, in Hereford's case, a need to heal itself after the deep-seated wounds suffered in the nuclear waste issue.

Eichner described the process used to derive the draft Strategic Plan for Economic Development and some of the plan's highlights.

Eichner said the state's assistance is mandatory if the plan is to succeed. "Even though (Deaf Smith County) remains strong agriculturally relative to many counties, it is experiencing a gradual economic and population decline."

To arrest this trend, state assistance is needed to generate long term favorable rate financing; to create technical capacity for innovation at the local level; to reduce freight rates as a barrier to Texas food processing development; to combine Texas' agriculture and production expertise; and to support adult training needs, Eichner told the task force.

Dukakis goes over the top Clinches nomination

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis, assured of their parties' presidential nominations, today celebrated the end of the long primary season and declared their readiness to do battle in the general election — a fight both pledged would offer voters a clear choice on the issues.

"The race to the finish line begins," proclaimed a jubilant Dukakis after returns from a four-state primary sweep guaranteed him a delegate majority. He won races in California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico.

"Now we'll be going into the major-league ballgame and I am ready on the issues," declared Bush, who locked up the GOP nomination more than a month ago and cruised to uncontested wins in the states voting Tuesday.

Jesse Jackson congratulated Dukakis for a "fine campaign," but also vowed to "keep our campaign alive." He said he would continue urging uncommitted delegates to support him at the convention.

Dukakis' season-ending sweep gave the Massachusetts governor victories in 30 states. The marathon primary contest began with seven contenders, but over the last two months came down to a head-to-head battle between Dukakis and Jackson.

The magic number for a convention majority was 2,081 and Dukakis easily surpassed that with his landslide finale.

Confronted by polls showing Dukakis was the current choice of a majority of voters, Bush said, "I'm fighting back. I'm the underdog now."

While Dukakis could enter the race with an edge in polls showing Americans wanting a change after nearly eight years of Ronald Reagan's presidency, Bush could find strength in the Republican hold on the electoral votes of Southern and Western states.

Both Bush and Dukakis vowed to avoid negative campaigns.

Dukakis said voters were not interested in "slashing attacks" and he warned the Republicans not to engage in "mudslinging and name-calling."

"I don't think you have to run a negative, nasty campaign," said Bush. "What I think you have to do though is be sure the American people perceive what you really want for this country."

Party unity and the search for running mates were top priorities for both Bush and Dukakis as they looked ahead to their party conventions — the Democrats in July, the Republicans in August — and beyond.

Campaigning in California for two days before the primary, Bush previewed his fall strategy, repeatedly portraying the Massachusetts governor as a liberal likely to advocate tax increases.

"Michael Dukakis said he would not rule out a tax increase," Bush said. "I'll rule it out."

For Dukakis, Jackson remained an unpredictable figure in an otherwise smooth road to party unity. Commanding the loyalty of black voters who are a critical part of the Democratic Party's coalition, Jackson was insisting that an offer of the vice presidential nomination was "an option my constituency has earned."

But Dukakis has repeatedly said that while he believes Jackson deserves consideration for the second spot on the ticket, he does not merit special treatment.

Jackson will have more than 1,000 delegates at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta. Dukakis predicted there would be "a floor fight or two" over platform issues, but none that would split the party.

"We'll have to work together," said Jackson, who added: "What Michael Dukakis is due very special congratulations."

Bentsen says Boulter charge 'funny'

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's spokesman says it's foolish to charge that Bentsen's 1978 vote to give away the Panama Canal was ill-advised due to government knowledge of drug trafficking by Panamanian officials.

The charge was raised again Tuesday by Republican Senate hopeful Beau Boulter, who also said Bentsen's earlier response — that the charge was "funny" and "ridiculous" — was off-base.

"It's not funny that Lloyd Bentsen voted to give the canal to a government of drug dealers. It's not funny that Col. Noriega today is what he was then — a drug thug. And it's not funny that Panama today is a major pipeline for drugs into our country," Boulter told a news conference Tuesday.

Displaying a copy of the Feb. 21, 1978 Congressional Record, Boulter said a debate on the canal treaty in the Senate that day touched on the character of Panamanian officials and the alleged narcotics involvement of some of them. Noriega, then a colonel, was chief of military intelligence.

"Noriega is mentioned more than several times in this (debate) transcript," Boulter said.

Bentsen twice voted present in the Senate the day of that debate, Boulter added.

Jack DeVore, Bentsen's press secretary, said Boulter's charge still is ridiculous.

"This is just another foolish stunt by Congressman Boulter. The fact is, Vice President (George) Bush himself says we only recently got conclusive proof of Noriega's drug smuggling. Yet Boulter claims that Sen. Bentsen had the proof 10 years ago," DeVore said.

"It was a debate with one side claiming one thing and the other side claiming another thing," Bentsen's spokesman said.

Asked whether Bentsen had any second thoughts about his 1978 vote to ratify the canal treaty, DeVore said, "No."

While information aired in the debate didn't constitute conclusive proof, Boulter said, it was sufficient to raise questions about the activities of some Panamanian officials.

Bentsen "knew or he should have known that Noriega was involved in drug dealings. He knew or he should have known the character and kind of people that he was in favor of giving the Panama Canal to," Boulter told a news conference. "My claim is not preposterous. It is, in fact, true."

The Republican said Bentsen should explain why he voted to ratify the canal treaty.

Boulter said Bentsen now is advocating additional federal spending on drug interdiction efforts along the nation's southern border.

Babbling Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

Now I'm jealous. The esteemed publisher of this here publication, Mr. O.G. (Rapido) Nieman, who is also quite an experienced light-bulb changer and mess-mopper-upper par excellence, has received a formal request by the Hon. Putt Powell, sports columnist of a certain pair of broadsheet publications printed somewhere between Canyon and Dumas, to make a formal contribution to the Hon. Mr. Powell's column.

Putt asked Speedy to list the people he would most like to shake hands with, his first sports heroes, and who he would want most to have the ball in a crucial situation.

Since Putt didn't ask me, I'll tell y'all so you won't be having to go spend a quarter and find out somewhere else.

Handling the ball—I think Speedy agreed with me on this one. Roger Staubach. He led the Cowboys to something like 12 come-from-behind wins, and most were in the very late stages of the fourth quarter, and most were when the Cowboys had to have two scores of some type.

I think the best of those comebacks was against the Vikings in Minnesota. Drew Pearson caught the winning touchdown pass on his hip, and a Viking fan caught an official in the head with a whiskey bottle.

I still have a cassette tape of that game and listen to it every now and then. It's a goose-pimple-raiser even now.

The person with whom I would most like to shake hands is a toss-up. I think maybe it would be Alexander Cartwright, who is probably the real inventor of baseball.

My first sports hero is easy. Willie Mays. I got to see Willie in spring training when I was growing up in Arizona. I still have, and cherish, his autograph.

My other sports hero is Kenneth Cleveland in Dimmitt. I've seen him take a bunch of lil' old country boys and make a heckuva basketball team out of them year after year after year. 750-odd wins can't be too wrong.

The thought crossed my mind Tuesday when I was giving a last look-see of the picture of Sen. Phil Gramm holding a sack of Holly Sugar that it was the first time a senator had fondled sugar in public like that since Gary Hart.

Had another unsigned letter in our mailbag Tuesday, this one concerning economic development.

If I've gotta put my name on my convictions, which appear at times in this space, then you've gotta put your name on yours.

Sign it. Sometimes it's a little easier to voice your convictions if one knows who is doing the hotting, like most radio talk shows. I also know from the number of unsigned letters that crop up about certain subjects, and, much more often, the phone calls we get, that finding out a name to match the opinion is kind of like telling Pete Gray to use two hands to catch the ball.

If you don't know, Pete Gray was the one-armed outfielder for the St. Louis Browns during the war.

While I have Putt Powell on the line, I've been meaning to tell him for a year that he was wrong about the Bill James Historical Baseball Abstract.

Putt said that James said Joe Morgan was better than Stan Musial.

Wrong, Putt. James said that Morgan at his peak was better than Musial at his peak. If you look, you'll see that Stan The Man is rated much higher over his career than Morgan over his career. It's a heckuva book, Putt, and you oughtta read the whole thing. My copy is almost completely dog-eared from overuse.

I think you gotta realize that Musial never really had a peak. He was great from Day One to Day Final. Morgan was good, but not great, when he was with the Houston Astros. It just so happened that his trade to Cincinnati coincided with his blossoming into a super second baseman.

State Republican convention expected to be harmonious since party agrees on issues

GOP gathers

HOUSTON (AP) — The state Republican convention in Houston this week should be a relatively harmonious affair, top party officials say.

"Old Republicans as well as new Republicans agree on about 90 percent of the issues," GOP Chairman George Strake said Tuesday. "My job ... is to get people to focus on things they agree on."

He said no major skirmishes were expected between supporters of George Bush, the likely nominee, and supporters of former candidate Pat Robertson.

"I've said all along I look at the Robertson situation as an unlimited opportunity," Strake said at a news conference prefacing the three-day convention, which begins Thursday.

"I think this party would not be where it is today, on the verge of becoming a majority party, if we would not have had the Robertson faction."

Party officials estimate about 40 percent of the 6,000 delegates to the state convention back the former television evangelist while 55 percent support Bush, the party's likely presidential nominee.

Robertson was expected to arrive at the convention Thursday but was not scheduled to speak until Saturday. Vice President Bush, who calls Houston home, is slated to address the convention Thursday.

Other convention speakers were to include Gov. Bill Clements, Secretary of Education William Bennett, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and GOP National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf.

"We want to leave this town with an upbeat attitude," Strake said. "What I want to do in November is win big because a big win will help us all the way down the ballot."

Strake said he expected Republicans to gain 10 seats this November in the Texas House, two to four seats in the Senate, keep its two spots on the Texas Supreme Court and add two or three more.

He speculated it would be a struggle for Republicans to keep the congressional seat being vacated by Beau Boulter, who is running for U.S. Senate, and that Bush's pull in Texas would keep two-term U.S. Rep. Mac Sweeney of Wharton in office. Among the Democratic incumbents, Jim Chapman's 1st District seat and John Bryant's in the 5th District are the most vulnerable, he said.

Boulter, waging an uphill battle against U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, could pull off a big surprise, according to Strake, who said such an upset was possible only if Bush won big in Texas.

Stars, fans meet at Nashville gala

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Charley Pride set up a gazebo. Loretta Lynn boasted a hot-pink booth with revolving mannequins. Barbara Mandrell, surrounded by red, white and blue, offered up baseball and apple pie.

To hear country music stars tell it, Nashville's annual "Fan Fair" is as important to them as it is to the thousands who make the pilgrimage year after year to collect their autographs or exchange a few words with their idols.

"People think that it's a drag for performers to meet fans live," said singer K.T. Oslin, who won a Grammy this year as country female vocalist for her single, "The Ladies."

"It isn't. It's great fun," she said Tuesday. "I mean that's the only way you can tell what your work is going to when somebody looks you in the face and they say, 'I love your record and I'm from so-and-so.' And you go, 'All right, they hear me there.' The fans are fun."

More than 20,000 country music lovers are expected to descend on the state fairgrounds this week for seven days of festivities that feature about 30 hours of concerts and 365 autograph booths.

Nasmi Judd, the older half of mother-daughter singing duo The Judds, said she owes it to the fans to come to the festival.

"You come to see us when we come to your hometown. You guys go buy the tickets, get babysitters, get your outfits ready and hassle the traffic and come to see us," she said. "I think the least we can do when you come to our hometown is to show up."

Pride manned a gazebo to greet his fans. Miss Lynn's booth was painted hot pink and had revolving mannequins displaying T-shirts. Miss Mandrell used a red, white and blue baseball motif for her booth and offered apple pie to her fans.

The fair gives the performers a chance to pay back their fans, said singer Eddy Raven.

"Anybody who tells you that they come out here just because they love to come — in the heat and all that — that's wrong. It's not true," he said. "It's a time that we can really come and meet folks and not be under the pressure of having to perform."

The festival, in its 17th year, also gives the entertainers an opportunity to sell merchandise.

T.G. Sheppard photo magnets were going for $1. A Ricky Scaggs T-shirt cost $13. Tanya Tucker caps were selling for $8 and the Oak Ridge Boys had sweatshirts for $20.

Connie May's of Dayton, Ohio, said she has come to Fan Fair for the past seven or eight years.

"You look forward to it. As soon as you're going home, you think about, 'Gee, I can't wait until next year,'" she said. "You take pictures of the same people every year, but you just still like it."

INS agents' gripes draw probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators are reviewing allegations that the Immigration and Naturalization Service retaliated against agents who complained that an administrative assignment put their undercover identities in jeopardy and that they were told to falsify their time cards.

The alleged reprisals began after all eight agents in the Houston anti-smuggling unit told Congress they were being reassigned part of the time to contact employers about the new immigration law and sanctions for hiring illegal aliens.

CENSUS

the Census Bureau) and that it is in their best interests to cooperate," he said, adding that some illegal aliens have feared information they gave to census officials would be turned over to immigration officials.

The lead plaintiff in the lawsuit is

They were allegedly told to record those duties as anti-smuggling work on their time cards.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas and chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, contends the agents' safety was threatened when they had to meet employers who may have been hiring illegal aliens.

"I'd hate to be an undercover agent traveling around and visiting those big employers of aliens. They'd recognize you; you'd stand out like a sore thumb," Brooks said.

But INS Commissioner Alan

Nelson said it is "ludicrous" to claim the agents' cover was blown by meeting with employers. Nelson said he's "not aware there's any truth" to the allegations about the time cards.

"It's a basic and simple case of insubordination and failure to follow directions that started the whole thing," Nelson said. "It is our belief that they failed to perform their duties and appropriate action took place."

Nelson said it was necessary nationwide to shift manpower to accomplish the visits with employers.

U.S. Rep. Thomas Ridge, R-Pa., who is concerned his state will lose U.S. House seats as a result of the 1990 census if illegal aliens are counted.

Projections by the bipartisan Congressional Research Service Study show that Texas and California are certain to gain House seats if illegal aliens are counted, while Pennsylvania and Connecticut will lose seats.

Alabama, North Carolina, Michigan and Missouri are at risk of losing seats, according to the study.

Lead deadends in locating boy's home

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Officials plan to continue their efforts to identify a deaf-mute boy found wandering last year in Mexico after the mysterious boy's footprints didn't match those of a missing Illinois boy.

The deaf-mute boy, nicknamed Sabat, was found last November near an international bridge in El Paso's Mexican sister city of Ciudad Juarez. He cannot speak and communicates through drawings and gestures.

Officials believe the boy, whom they estimate to be 7 or 8 years old, might be from the United States because of his preference for American cartoons and food and his familiarity with U.S. money. Pictures he has drawn seem to indicate the boy survived a small-plane crash that killed his parents and sister.

The Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington, D.C., sent birth footprints of a missing Decatur, Ill., boy to the El Paso County Sheriff's Office. But the boys' footprints did not match when they were compared Tuesday evening, said FBI spokesman Eric Benson.

No other prints are expected soon, Benson said, and the FBI is fielding calls from all over the country in seeking leads as to Sabat's identity.

Sabat's description roughly matched that of T.J. Davison, who was 4 years old when he disappeared in October 1985 from a car parked in front of a Decatur, Ill., grocery store. Davison's footprints arrived Tuesday afternoon in El Paso and the FBI and Sheriff's Office compared his prints to Sabat's.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am in a real bind and need your advice. Here is exactly what happened. Do you see any way out for me?

Last June, after college graduation, I moved from the East Coast to Los Angeles. I had no close friends in L.A., only acquaintances. A guy I will call "Willie" totaled his car and was in a spot. He needed transportation to get to and from his job. His dad offered to lend him money to buy a new one, but he needed a car "for a few days." Would I help him rent a car? He was under 25 and had no credit card I said, "OK."

Three days later I called Willie to see how things were working out. He said, "Everything is great. I returned the rental and my dad loaned me money to buy a Rabbit."

Three weeks later I got a call from the car rental place asking me to return the car. I told them the car had been returned. They said, "A guy brought the car in and exchanged it for a Rabbit." Of course he put the new car charge on my card.

I called Willie right away. The phone had been disconnected. A mutual friend told me the next day that Willie had wrecked the new Rabbit and left town.

My credit card bill is $2,000. It makes no sense to sue the guy, according to my lawyer, because he doesn't have anything and it's not worth the effort and legal bills.

Do you see any way out for me?—Stuck in Calif.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Dogs cannot sign credit card vouchers nor can they take out car rental contracts.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If you want to know what is wrong with today's youth, I can tell you. It's the adults.

I am a 45-year-old woman with three children and three grandchildren—not exactly a kid. In the four years that I have been working with the public I have seen it all. The way some parents treat their children is a disgrace. No wonder the children turn out hostile, angry and destructive, a problem to society and themselves.

I've seen parents hit, kick, beat, curse and scream at their children in shopping malls, restaurants and on buses. If they treat them like that in public I can just imagine how they treat them at home.

Children need to be respected and loved. They treat others the way they are treated. They learn what they live. Isn't there enough suffering in this world without heaping abuse and humiliation on those we are supposed to value?

I know this letter is too long and too poorly written to be printed, but it is something that I had to say.—Caring, Loving Mom in S. Carolina

DEAR LOVING MOM: Thanks for saying it. Your message is an important one and you said it well. No need to apologize. Write again anytime.

How much do you know about pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, crack, speed and downers? Think you can handle them? California blanks Rangers, 1-0

Angels' Finley fires 1-hitter

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Last season Chuck Finley was an ineffective long reliever. Then late in the year the California Angels converted the left-hander to a starter. Now he's the most effective member of their rotation.

Finley fired a five-hitter for 8 2-3 innings Tuesday night as the struggling California Angels blanked the Texas Rangers, 1-0.

Finley got into ninth inning difficulties, allowing a pair of singles to put runners on first and third with two outs. Manager Cookie Rojas summoned right-hander Bryan Harvey to pitch to pinch-hitter Pete O'Brien, who fanned on three pitches for Harvey's fourth save.

"I'd say that's the best stuff I've had in any major league game," said Finley, 4-7, making his 15th career start. "I wouldn't say this turns me around but it's a good step.

"I kept telling myself to slow down my mechanics, to keep the ball low and stay in a groove. I've had some tough games but I feel I'm maturing."

Finley was disappointed when he failed to get a complete game but wouldn't knock Rojas' decision to pull him.

The 25-year-old Finley had 32 relief appearances last season before making three starts in September. Finley remained in the rotation this spring and pitched his first complete game on April 30, a 6-1 five-hitter over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Finley struck out seven and didn't allow a walk as he came within one out of becoming the first Ranger opponent to toss a complete game shutout at Arlington Stadium since Bud Black, then of Kansas City, accomplished the feat in May of 1965.

"He pitched a heck of a game," Rojas said. "He had good control of his curve. He's pitched well all year. His record deserves to be reversed but he hasn't gotten a lot of runs."

"That's the best he's thrown," said catcher Bob Boone. "He's always had great stuff. The key for a young guy is consistency."

Finley got a scare in the eighth when Jerry Browne's two-out fly ball dropped between left fielder George Hendrick and center fielder Chico Walker for a tainted double.

But Finley got Bob Brower to fly to right, ending the threat.

"I kept telling myself not to let it affect me," Finley said. "Everyone makes mistakes. That's what makes you a pitcher. You have to pick up your teammates."

Finley got all the offense he needed in the sixth on Brian Downing's towering leadoff homer to left, his ninth. It was Downing's third game-winner of the season.

Texas' Charlie Hough, 5-7, also pitched a masterful game, allowing five hits while striking out nine and walking three.

The Rangers got an unlucky break in the fifth when Mike Stanley hit a two-out single and Geno Petralli followed with a double to right. Petralli's hit glanced off the screen on the right-field foul pole for a ground-rule double and Stanley had to stop at third.

Hough had command of his knuckleball for the first time in several starts.

Find weak spot in L.A.'s Heep

Astros, Darwin score 5-2 win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was a good night for Danny Darwin, and it could be an even better week for his Houston Astros.

Houston, which quickly found a weak spot in Los Angeles first baseman Danny Heep, beat the Dodgers 5-2 Tuesday night to move within one-half game of first place in the National League West.

Darwin, 3-4, ended a personal four-game losing streak by scattering seven hits, striking out eight and walking none. He worked out of a two-out, bases-loaded jam in the fifth and pitched his second complete game.

"One thing about Danny, if he's still in there in the seventh, he's got that tenacious attitude out there, and he's fearless," said teammate Kevin Bass, who drove in two runs. "He's from the old school. He goes out there and gives you everything he's got on every pitch, and that's what you want."

"I felt stronger tonight and I had good control of my fastball," Darwin said. "I was able to throw it in on right-handers and they were hitting it on the ground. As far as my location, it was my best game."

"We've got our two aces going now," he continued. "If we can leave here with three out of four, we're in good shape. We're playing the brand of ball we're capable of."

Houston has taken two straight from the division-leading Dodgers, and have Mike Scott throwing tonight and Nolan Ryan on Thursday afternoon.

Heep, a utility outfielder making his first start of the season at first, failed to field a couple of playable grounders in the second inning, resulting in two runs. He experienced more frustration in the third when the Astros added three unearned runs to take a 5-1 lead against starter Tim Belcher, 3-3.

Bill Doran singled with one out in the second and took third when Alan Ashby grounded a double between Heep and the bag. Doran scored when Heep misplayed Bass' grounder for an error and Rafael Ramirez extended his hitting streak to nine games with a single that scored Ashby.

In the third, Billy Hatcher reached base on a throwing error by Dodgers third baseman Jeff Hamilton and stole second. Doran, given a second chance when left fielder Kirk Gibson missed his two-out foul fly by inches after a long run, hit a single past the

Social Security

Have you a question about Social Security? Address it to Jim Talbot, Manager, Social Security Office, Suite 16, 3601 W. 15th, Amarillo, Texas 79102. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.

QUESTION: A few years ago I worked briefly for a company that soon thereafter went out of business. How can I be sure that I received Social Security credit for my wages?

ANSWER: The Social Security Administration maintains each person's individual earnings record at its headquarters in Baltimore, Maryland. To receive a statement summarizing the information contained in your earnings record, you may get in touch with any Social Security office and ask for Form SSA-7004 entitled "Request for Statement of Earnings." Fill it out and mail it, and you will receive the information in a few weeks.

QUESTION: I recently got married, but I haven't changed my name as far as my job is concerned. Do I have to let Social Security know I got married?

ANSWER: No, not as long as you keep using your maiden name and you do not get Social Security benefits. However, if you start using your married name, you should notify Social Security of the change.

QUESTION: I have never worked under Social Security but my husband has for many years. When can I get retirement benefits as his wife?

ANSWER: In order to receive a wife's benefit you must be 62 years old. In addition, your husband will have to apply for his own retirement.

QUESTION: When I started receiving SSI checks, I received a booklet that told me what I should report to Social Security. I don't know what I did with it. Can I get another one?

ANSWER: Yes. Just call your Social Security office and ask for the booklet. What you have to know about SSI. A new booklet will be sent to you, free of charge.

QUESTION: My doctor has advised me to get a flu shot this year. Will Medicare pay for this vaccine?

ANSWER: No. Medicare medical insurance cannot pay for immunizations (except pneumococcal vaccinations or those required because of an injury or immediate risk of infection).

QUESTION: I will be hospitalized next month, and I will need to be on a special diet. Will medicar pay for my special diet meals?

ANSWER: Yes, Medicare hospital insurance can pay for this service.

QUESTION: Does medicar pay for podiatrists' services?

ANSWER: Medicare medical insurance can help pay for certain services of a licensed podiatrist, including the removal of plantar warts. But it does not generally cover routine foot care unless you have a medical condition affecting the lower limbs (such as severe diabetes).

QUESTION: My wife is covered by Medicare. Recently she had a stroke and now has difficulty speaking. Will Medicare help pay for outpatient speech therapy once she leaves the hospital?

ANSWER: Yes, your wife may receive this therapy under Medicare medical insurance. However, certain deductibles apply, and there is a yearly maximum amount payable for this therapy.

QUESTION: I recently saw a poster that said people 65 or over with limited income and resources should apply for supplemental security income at any Social Security office. Well, I'm 67 and have limited income and resources so I thought I'd apply. But a neighbor told me I probably couldn't get it because I have children who could help support me. Is that true?

ANSWER: No. Your eligibility for supplemental security income (SSI) would not be affected by your children's ability to help support you. However, any support they give you would be considered income for SSI purposes and could affect the amount of your payment. Call or write any Social Security office for information about applying for SSI.

Medical research reports available

The Health Resource is a national health information service which provides clients with comprehensive research reports on their medical problems and illnesses. Reports contain information on treatment options—both conventional and alternative—research, self-help measures, nutrition, resource organizations, specialists, and reviews of relevant books.

The information provided in the reports is current, reliable, and designed to address individual needs. The Health Resource has access to medical school, university, and public libraries and uses computer databases to locate the most current medical literature in the United States and abroad.

Research reports cost $55 (cancer reports are $65 plus $3 shipping and range in length from 40 to 150 pages. If clients are not 100 percent satisfied with the information they receive, they may return the report and receive a full cash refund.

"Mini-reports" are also available for $17.50 plus $2 shipping. These reports contain 15-25 pages. Information on specific medical tests, drugs, and supplements can also be obtained from The Health Resource.

The Health Resource is owned and operated by Janice R. Guthrie of Conway, ARK. The idea for the service came to her as a result of her own status as a cancer patient. "I researched extensively my own type of cancer in medical center, university, and public libraries. The information I gathered helped me to locate a specialist interested in my particular type of tumor and enabled me to discuss intelligently my condition with him and to be an active participant in the decisions regarding my treatment."

"My research was so important to me in enabling me to make informed decisions and in helping me to regain a sense of control over my personal health that I decided I wanted to do similar research as a service for other people with medical problems. This goal was compatible with my formal training in education and research, and thus The Health Resource was born."

For more information, contact, Janice R. Guthrie, The Health Resource, 209 Katherine Drive, Conway, AR 72032; or call 501-329-5272.

Hints from Heloise

PANTS HOLES

Dear Heloise: When my daughter was a toddler she was hard on the knee area of her long pants.

Whenever she developed a worn spot or hole in the fabric, I would crochet a lacy circle or square to cover it. It not only concealed the area, it looked pretty too. — Elisabeth Bergstresser, New Providence, N.J.

FILM CANISTERS

Dear Heloise: Here's a great use for plastic film canisters.

I have many small sample lipsticks. I used to have them scattered in my bathroom vanity drawer or in my purse. I've found that a few of them fit perfectly in a film canister. They are great while traveling instead of bringing large tubes of different shades. Now, I've accumulated many canisters and find that a shoe-box lid placed in a drawer is great to hold them. Joan Adams, Boston, Mass.

WRAPAROUND SKIRT

Dear Heloise: Here's a great idea for those old wraparound skirts you have no more use for.

I had three of them and made them into aprons for my mom who is quite large. I hemmed them about five inches, to just the length of an apron.

She really enjoys them and they look good. It's so nice to recycle rather than discard. — Joan Thomas, Oakland, Calif.

I agree! If we would all think about recycling we would save money and help save our natural resources. — Heloise Advice for home gardeners: "Plant alphabetically—alysium in the first row—bulbs in the second, and so forth. That puts weeds way in the back."

Understanding cholesterol level useful

A routine visit to a physician by a healthy American adult might include having a blood sample drawn and analyzed. Usually the lab work is completed, the results are reported to the physician, and the numbers are recorded on the patient's chart.

The American Heart Association suggests that patients ask their physicians to discuss these results when they are available and understand what the tests are for and what the numbers mean.

One report the physician generally requests is cholesterol level. Cholesterol is a fat-like substance carried in the blood which comes from two sources. "Blood cholesterol" is produced primarily by the liver, while "dietary cholesterol" is found in foods from animals. These foods include egg yolks, meat, fish, poultry and whole milk dairy products such as ice cream and cheese. A certain amount of cholesterol is needed to generate hormones and cells.

However, when the blood cholesterol climbs above the desirable level, cholesterol can build up over a period of time with some other substances on the inner lining of blood vessels like rust in water pipes. During that time, the buildup can narrow those vessels, keeping sufficient oxygen-carrying blood from getting to the heart or brain. It is easy for a clot to form that will clog the vessels, cutting off the flow of blood. The result can be a heart attack or stroke.

To understand what the numbers resulting from a blood cholesterol test mean, first know that cholesterol is measured in milligrams per deciliter of blood, expressed as "mg/dl." Also be aware that the level varies depending on age, sex, and the presence of certain disease. If other risk factors are present—smoking, high blood pressure, diabetes, glucose imbalances, excess weight or a history of heart disease in the patient's family, the probability of having a heart attack increases regardless of the cholesterol level.

The American Heart Association considers a healthy American adult, 20 years or older, at "low risk" for cardiovascular disease when cholesterol measures 200 mg/dl or lower, if no other phase of cardiovascular disease or any other cardiovascular risk factors are present. The same adult is at "moderate risk" if cholesterol level is between 200 and 239 mg/dl, and at "high risk" with a reading of 240 mg/dl or higher.

If it is determined that a patient has a high cholesterol level, the AHA recommends that the physician determine the appropriate treatment. This will usually include a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet. The physician should also address other major risk factors, including smoking and high blood pressure.

More than 50 percent of middle-aged Americans have cholesterol levels 200 mg/dl and above. It is prudent for all adults to follow a heart-healthy, low-fat, low-cholesterol diet as a preventive measure. Have your cholesterol checked regularly by a physician and know your numbers.
