Self-responsibility

Hereford shows the way with unique seventh grade class

By ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

The School of Hard Knocks carves an education in a person not so easily forgotten as, say, the Pythagorean theorem or Lady Macbeth's soliloquy in "Macbeth." And while the curricula may be brutal, the student is enriched with a sense of self and a coffer of wisdom.

Hereford's seventh-graders probably don't realize it, but a new required class called Education in Self Responsibility which they're taking is designed to soften those hard knocks most kids their age are feeling.

"My kids really enjoy it," said Brenda Reeh, who teaches the Self Responsibility class three times a day. "They're surprised they can sit in a classroom and learn to make decisions regarding values, alcohol and drug abuse."

The one-semester course germinated in August 1987 from the Texas Education Agency's Education for Self Responsibility project, but the original course merely addressed teen-age pregnancy.

"A group of principals, vice-principals and teachers met with a Dr. Rose who spoke on this at a special education in-service day," said Alice Lockmiller, the school district's curriculum director who constructed the course. "We talked more about what we wanted in Hereford, and we wanted more than just a course dealing with teen-age pregnancy."

The Self Responsibility course incorporates ways to make healthful decisions dealing with cleanliness and safety, sex education, how to study, drug abuse, sexually transmitted diseases (particularly AIDS), and environmental and consumer awareness.

Environmental and consumer awareness deals with handling natural disasters, first-aid, and relationships between a person and the environment.

"One of the major things we added was the 'I Can' program which is based on Zig Ziglar's book 'See You at the Top,'" Lockmiller said. "In the book he deals with self-concept, how important work is, motivation, peer pressure. It's a very positive program. The best thing you can do is tell kids they're worthy. Kids thinking that they're not worthy is what's going to drive them to doing drugs or other bad things."

The Self Responsibility course encompasses the six-week health requirement of all seventh-graders and the course is even touched on in kindergarten through sixth grade.

"I think this course is great because regular teachers don't have time to teach that kind of stuff. They're all saying, 'I've gotta do my math now and I really don't have time to mess with Susy over here whose parents just had a divorce,'" Lockmiller said.

Even though seventh-grader Sally Zapata has been in the course for less than a month, she says learning about values and self-image has helped her.

Miss Reeh has taught us how to understand our parents and talk to them more. And she's taught us how to study better, take notes and how to review them. Zapata said.

Drilling it in

Brenda Reeh, one of the teachers for Hereford Junior High's new Education for Self-Responsibility class, says seventh-graders are the perfect age to be taught about self-esteem and the dangers of drugs because patterns haven't been formed. Since class discussion is so important on such topics, Reeh seats the students shoulder-to-shoulder because it removes the barriers.

Dukakis, Bush set for debate

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Michael Dukakis was cramming in Boston for the debate that one supporter says opens a "new phase" of the presidential campaign, while Vice President George Bush took a break from his preparations in Washington so he could accept the endorsement of a veterans group.

As the two candidates worked with aides for the first such encounter in the 1988 campaign, details were being worked out: whether Bush and Dukakis shake hands before or after the debate, and how they will enter the stage.

An estimated 100 million people will be watching the 90-minute debate on television, and analysts say the debates have taken on an added importance to the candidates since many voters have not expressed strong opinions for either.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., one of those working with the Massachusetts governor in a downtown Boston hotel suite, called the debate "the beginning of a new phase of the campaign."

"I think Michael Dukakis should be Michael Dukakis," he said. "I think his personal strength will be clear, I think his knowledge and commitment and caring will be evident to people and I think that's the best way to approach the debate."

Bush, a decorated World War II pilot, was traveling no farther than his front porch to receive the endorsement of the 2 million-strong Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Bush also stepped outside his Washington residence Friday to highlight his foreign policy credentials in an appearance with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

"It is a pleasure for me to see Mr. Shevardnadze once again," Bush said. "We have met several times." Shevardnadze obligingly seconded Bush, saying: "The vice president has already said that this is not our first meeting. He has been involved in all high-level discussions here in Washington and our talks with the president."

But as it turns out, Dukakis will also have his chance with Shevardnadze. Dukakis aide Steven Akoy said the candidate and the foreign minister will meet Wednesday in New York.

Dukakis was expanding his effort to court black voters, signing up Jesse Jackson for radio ads and naming a prominent Jackson aide to his staff of advisers. Jackson was scheduled to record the radio spots today, said Dukakis campaign aide Donna Brazile.

Also, Washington attorney Ronald Brown, a top political adviser to Jackson's former presidential campaign, has agreed to join the Dukakis campaign as a national political adviser, Dukakis spokesman Leslie Dach said.

Dukakis' running mate Lloyd Bentsen, the only candidate on the road Friday, focused on trade.

"Don't you ever put an embargo on another country unless you hurt them more than you hurt yourself," Bentsen told Caterpillar workers in Decatur, Ill. He said they were hurt by a 1982 White House decision to block American equipment destined for building a natural gas pipeline from the Soviet Union to Europe.

Bentsen also had opposed President Carter's grain embargo against the Soviets, but he made no mention of that in his speech condemning the Reagan embargo.

GOP farm leaders, including Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, held a news conference Friday to attack Dukakis on his agricultural policy.

"If the Dukakis farm program ever became law, the drought of '88 would look like a Sunday picnic," Dole said. He said Dukakis would bring in "all the special interests who have little or nothing in common."

Dedication is today

The Church of the Nazarene will dedicate its new quarters for the Nazarene Christian Academy during worship services today at the church at 11 a.m. An open house will be held from 2-4 p.m.

Local Roundup

School board meets Tuesday

Three special programs are on tap for the Hereford school board at its meeting Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. at the Hereford school administration building.

Giving special programs will be leaders of the Peers As Leaders (PALS) and Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) programs, and teachers and administrators on phonics instruction.

The board will also discuss district appraiser assignments, tax abatement and reinvestment zones, and make minor policy changes in four areas.

Census Bureau announces training

Representatives of the U.S. Census Bureau will be in Hereford the week of Oct. 19 to train up to 12 people in how to gather addresses for the 1990 census questionnaire mailing.

John Bell, regional director for the Census Bureau, said the workers will travel door-to-door for about eight weeks gathering addresses. They can be identified by a red, white and blue badge saying "U.S. Census Enumerator," the date the credentials expire and the worker's signature.

The Census Bureau will handle all hiring through the local Texas Employment Commission.

The collected addresses, which are kept confidential, will be entered into a master file which the Bureau will use in mailing the questionnaires.

The official census day is April 1, 1990.

Police arrest one

Hereford police arrested a woman, 18, in the 500 block of North 25 Mile Avenue on Friday on theft charges, and were kept busy with six accidents on Friday.

There were slight injuries in three of the accidents, and no injuries in the other three accidents.

Incidents reported to police on Friday included a wallet containing $96 taken in the 500 block of East Park Avenue; disorderly conduct in the 400 block of West Fourth; an sexual abuse case that may have happened in Midland was reported to local police; suspicious activity was reported on the Santa Fe Railroad right-of-way;

Assault was reported in the 300 block of Avenue A; $200 was taken in the 200 block of Kibbe Street; harassing phone calls were reported in the 600 block of Irving Street; disturbing the peace was reported in

United Way meeting moved

The second report meeting of the 1988 campaign of the United Way of Deaf Smith County will be held Monday at noon at The Ranch House on West U.S. Highway 60.

The meeting place has been changed, and division heads and other volunteers should make note of the new site.

County will meet Monday

Deaf Smith county commissioners could appoint a new tax assessor-collector at Monday's commissioners' court meeting at 10 a.m. at the courthouse in Hereford.

Other items include bids for medical insurance for county employees; advertisement for two seven-foot shredders for Precinct 1; discussion of load signs for county bridges;

Negotiation and discussion of computer programming services with Hart Graphics; discussion of public hearing for a noxious weed district election; and amendments for the 1987-88 budget.

Manges looks for new magic

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FREER, Texas. Eight miles west of Freer, an arched gateway marks the entrance to the remote Duval County Ranch that Clinton Manges calls home.

The ranch is called The Magic Kingdom. He is called the Desert Fox.

The house itself is big and luxurious and open, with the kitchen set apart by a circular bar and the living area anchored by a magnificent fireplace. It is a warm and friendly desert hideaway for a person once described as brilliant, backward, brash, bashful and ruthless.

Clinton Manges also has been portrayed as persecuted, powerful, generous, ignorant, lucky, shy and misunderstood.

Today, Manges is highly agitated and just a little combative.

A Seattle bank wants to foreclose on his 100,000-acre ranch to settle a $53 million debt and the local school district is demanding $1.5 million in back taxes.

There are other lawsuits, other creditors, other unpaid bills and other miseries stemming from his ownership of the San Antonio Gunslingers of the ill-fated United States Football League.

But what irks Manges as much as anything is that he wants a new car and can't get it, despite assets of perhaps several hundred million dollars.

His credit and current cash flow are zilch.

"There's not a bank in Texas that will loan me 15 cents," he grumbles as he guides a visitor around his ranch and past herds of deer, buffalo and cattle. "I've been on a cash basis for five years."

"When they cut off all your blood, somewhere down the line you're supposed to die. But I didn't."

Who is Clinton Manges? The answer depends on who you ask. "A liar and a fraud," says San Antonio attorney Pat Maloney, a former friend and legal counsel who once sued Manges for $20 million in a flap over the Gunslingers. It was also Maloney who said: "He has a degree of raw courage. He's quick. He's tough. He's the best trader I've ever seen."

San Antonio lawyer James Ingram: "He's very tough and very shrewd. I doubt that you could ever apply enough heat to force him to his knees. He'll fight you till his last breath."

A.G. McNeese, retired chief executive officer of Houston's Bank of the Southwest, now MBank: "A classic subject for publicity, a poor boy, with little formal education, scaling heights so few people ever reach."

Ruth Manges, Clinton's wife of 42 years and mother of the couple's four adopted children: "Everybody in town knows who he is. But they don't know him."

In 1974, Texas newspapers speculated that a "rags to riches" rancher named Clinton Manges might seize the South Texas power base of troubled political boss George Parr, the legendary Duke of Duval County.

Parr later killed himself. In 1984, Texas Monthly concluded that the newspaper prophecy had come to pass.

The magazine described Manges as corrupt and manipulative, a convicted felon who was reluctant to pay his bills. Yet, the article conceded:

"His mystique and money have combined to make him the most powerful, and most controversial, behind-the-scenes figure in current Texas politics..."

Manges angrily dismissed the article as a "hatchet job."

Regarding the crime itself, a false statement on a 1959 Small Business loan application, Manges friend Lloyd Bentsen, father of the state's senior U.S. senator, contended that the indictment "should never have been brought and was only sustained on a technicality."

At 64, Clinton Manges is hefty and balding, with muscular arms and a round face creased by sun, wind, sand and stress. He often speaks in rapid spurts, like bursts from a machine gun.

"Despite what they call me," said Manges, pouring gravy over freshly fried quail, "I'm not a kingmaker or a power broker. But I have helped a lot of people."

He said it was no secret that he funneled nearly $1 million into the 1982 state Democratic primary through a political action committee headed by Pat Maloney and called Texans for Good Government.

But, he smiled, he actually spent about $3 million in that election, much of it earmarked for a wide range of liberal Democrats.

"The PAC money they know about," he said. "What else I did, nobody knows."

Whatever he did, it was money well spent. His candidates captured several of the state's top offices, judgeships and legislative seats.

Jim Mattox is now attorney general, Garry Mauro is land commissioner, Bob Bullock is state comptroller and Jim Hightower is agriculture commissioner.

All could move up in 1990, when Mattox most likely will run for governor and Hightower will oppose U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, a conservative Republican.

"You know why they're ready to move up?" Manges asked his visitor. "Because they're good people. They're clean and they're fair. You don't catch them running around taking payoffs like that bunch controlled by the establishment."

They're not doing too badly by Manges, either. As representatives of the state, Mattox and Mauro played pivotal roles in the 1984 settlement of a $1.7 billion lawsuit filed by Manges against Mobil Oil Corp.

With the State of Texas aligned with Manges, Mobil surrendered its oil and gas lease covering 64,000 acres of the Duval County Ranch. The settlement was hailed as a $100 million windfall for the state treasury and a $400 million victory for Manges.

Those figures are now suspect, based as they were on what was later described as a "property, production and paper deal." But there is no doubt that Manges emerged the big winner in his battle with Mobil.

"I wasn't trying to get a fix," Manges insists when questioned about the political funding activities that preceded the state's intervention in his case. "All I wanted was a fair shake."

"Mobil didn't want any part of that lawsuit after the election. They knew they were facing people with no love for big oil companies and they knew they couldn't buy them."

There is no evidence to suggest that Mattox or Mauro peddled their influence on Manges' behalf or in fact did anything improper. On the contrary, both maintain the state will reap millions from the Mobil deal for years to come.

At the moment, Manges' most pressing concern is Seafirst Bank of Seattle, which wants to foreclose on his ranch to settle a debt now exceeding $53 million.

That debt stems from loans in the early 1980s that Manges used to finance his high-stakes battle with Mobil and the related multimillion-dollar political contributions.

In a curiously worded ruling against Manges this spring, U.S. District Court Judge H.F. Garcia of San Antonio wrote:

"It seems almost unconscionable that the defendants (Manges) incurred a debt of $50 million, did not pay and had to be sued. Defendants have no one but themselves to blame for their financial predicament."

"They incurred the debt, and it's time for the fat lady to sing."

Seafirst officials seemed only cautiously optimistic about collecting anytime soon. Bank attorney Pat Deely says the ranch has up to a dozen claims against it and the foreclosure cannot proceed until those are cleared up and a final court judgment secured.

Manges could torpedo the issue with a bankruptcy filing, but seems reluctant to do so. Not that he has any warm feelings toward Seafirst.

"All my money goes to Seafirst," he says. "They're supposed to return 25 percent to me for my expenses, but I've never received a cent from them in nearly five years."

Reeh said she sent home a worksheet with the students for the parents to fill out concerning values and where they ranked. "The kids seemed to have really enjoyed sitting down with their parents and they were surprised how much they had in common," Reeh said.

Connie Gilbert, another teacher who has six of the Self Responsibility classes, said she has noticed gradual improvements in her students' attitudes. She cited one student with a chronic problem: coming to class without paper or a pencil because he didn't care. "Now this kid actually asks me if he can do things for me around the classroom," Gilbert said.

Both teachers, who are certified to teach health, say they are slightly nervous about teaching sex and AIDS education, even though the two subjects won't be touched on until later in the semester.

"I think if we approach the kids with why it's important to wait and the consequences of having sex without protection, the parents won't object. We'll present them (kids) with the facts and teach them the decision-making process along with it. It'll ultimately be up to them," said Gilbert.

Not only is the course new to Hereford, but the rest of Texas is curious about it, too. Lockmiller will make a presentation on the course Oct. 2 at a joint meeting of the Texas Association of School Board and the Texas Association of School Administrators in San Antonio.

"We're not going to save all the kids with this course, but there are some kids just waiting for someone to tell them it's OK to be you," said Lockmiller.

CRIMESTOPPERS

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers is offering a $300 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons responsible for the Crime of the Week.

In the night of Sept. 21, a burglary occurred at Gibson's Discount Center in Hereford. Suspects took several handguns and several boxes of ammunition from the store.

A description of the guns is available on the CLUE LINE, 364-CLUE.

Anyone giving information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons responsible for the Crime of the Week will receive a $300 reward. Anyone with information may contact Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers at 364-CLUE or 364-2583.

Any information regarding a crime may be given on the Clue Line. Anyone giving information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons involved in a felony crime may be eligible for a reward of up to $300.

All callers may remain anonymous.

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers will sponsor this year's community-wide Halloween Carnival from 5-8 p.m. on Halloween at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

Organizations wishing to sponsor booths at the carnival should contact Jack Nunnally, John Brooks, Hereford Police Det. David Wagner, or any other Crimestoppers board member or any member of the Hereford Police Department.

10 percent of each organization's proceeds will go to Crimestoppers.

Atlanta's toll-free dialing area is the world's largest, says National Geographic.

Calliopian Club opens club year Thursday

A picnic held Thursday at 7 p.m. in the home of Mary Sue Hull opened the Calliopian Club 1988-89 year. Hostesses were Hull, Jan Furr, Claudia McBrayer, Meredith Wilcox, Jane Gully and Kathryn Ruga. Members were served on tables set up on the covered patio. After the meal and social time, Claudia McBrayer presided over the business meeting. Correspondence was read by Audine Dettmann, corresponding secretary. The treasurer's report was given and there was a report from the membership committee. A letter of resignation from Meredith Wilcox, who is leaving Hereford was read. Her resignation was accepted with deep regrets. Jan Furr, chairman program committee, distributed the new year-books. The theme for the year is "Looking at the Ligher Side." Jan reviewed the programs planned for this year. the business meeting adjourned. Song sheets were given to members and with Jan Waiser at the piano, everyone joined in the singing of some of the "golden oldies." Members present were: Cherry McWhorter, Linda Gilbert, Marjorie Mims, Vera Threewit, Mary Fraser,

Fay Holt, Meredith Wilcox, Kay McWhorter, Kathlee Palmer, Amy Gilliland, Jan Waiser, Virginia Holmes, and the hostesses. MAKING UP IN PUBLIC DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Putting on or freshening makeup in public is a beauty mistake. ### ASK DR. LAMB

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 75 years old and a professional walker. I had just finished a 26-mile walk when the problem began and I have gone downhill ever since. I have polymyalgia rheumatica with terrible pain. My doctor is giving me prednisone and I have taken it for about a month. But I am afraid of the side effects. I have the painful condition in my shoulders and pelvis. Will this make me an invalid or can I get better? What can I do to help? I exercise on my bicycle and still walk six miles sometimes. Will exercise help? My doctor told me I'm not halfway there in this disease yet.

DEAR READER: It is surprising that there is so little said about this common disease. Polymyalgia rheumatica is more common than rheumatoid arthritis. The painful joints are usually symmetrical, such as both shoulders or both sides of the pelvic area. Polymyalgia rheumatica may strike suddenly or come on gradually. No one knows what causes it, but it occurs most often in people over 60 years of age and almost never in those under 50. It can strike in a person who has been perfectly healthy and active the day before. It can be associated with giant cell arteritis, that can involve the temporal artery at the side of your forehead. That is double trouble, as the disease can involve the branch of the artery to the eye and cause blindness, usually on just one side. That is why immediate treatment is indicated. Large doses of prednisone are absolutely necessary if there is any indication of artery involvement. That can save a person's eyesight. It doesn't require as much for the treatment of uncomplicated polymyalgia rheumatica. A fairly large dose may be required for the first few weeks.

Gifted-talented program pays off

Part of far reaching school reform package passed by the Texas legislature two years ago sets up a program for the gifted and talented students, giving these students more courses and much more challenge.

The program has been in effect for several years in the Perryton schools in grades 3-6. State law requires that it be in place for grades kindergarten through the senior class by 1991.

This program is one attempt to meet the criticism of the American public school education program which has seen test scores decline and high school graduates come out of school as functional illiterates, often unable to perform simple mathematics or reading requirements.

One of the main obstacles to providing a quality education is the insistence that everybody in the classroom proceed at the pace of the slowest learners.

This approach, designed to eliminate any charge of racism or favoritism, does treat everybody equally. But it brings the level of learning down to the lowest calibre of student.

Attempts at "grouping" in the public schools, including Perryton, have been met with criticism and complaints from parents whose children were placed in lower groups than the parents thought they should be.

It does not take many complaints of favoritism or unfair treatment to cause those programs to be abandoned.

In the state mandated gifted and talented program, students are selected on the basis of test scores and the judgement of educators, parents, community members, peers and experts.

However, when a student is presented to the committee for placement in the gifted and talented program, the committee does not know his or her name. All they know is the test score and the other qualifications.

The program is not for everybody. An estimated 5 percent of the students will qualify for the extra work required in the GT program. And not every student who qualifies will be eager to take on the extra work required.

But the concept is sound and certainly long overdue. Those students who are capable of learning and absorbing much more than they are getting should be allowed to proceed at a faster pace with their education.

The American education system has long been preoccupied with providing an education for minorities, for the disadvantaged. It is high time that a program be implemented for the fast learner who has been bored by endless repetition in a classroom designed for the slower learners.

-The Perryton Herald

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around Texas:

Second Mortgages Are An Essential Reform

The movement to allow second mortgages is producing some interesting battle formations: Last week, the Dallas Citizens Council adopted a resolution calling on the Texas Legislature to amend the Texas Homestead Act to allow second mortgages. Not long before, the Texas Bankers Association decided to abandon that fight on the assumption it was a lost cause. Just prior to the bankers' retreat, a cabal of interests led by Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower gathered on the steps of the Capitol to demagogue an issue of critical importance to the state's economic future.

The Citizen's Council is dead right. ... The bankers were foolish; they should reconsider their action. Texans have $240 billion in equity they cannot touch for new business start-ups, college tuition or other critical needs. Even if the equity were released into the state's capital-starved economy at $24 billion a year, a massive infusion of capital would occur.

As Jim Hightower should well know, no one is suggesting the Homestead Act be repealed, only changed slightly. Current Texas law does not allow a homeowner to borrow against the equity on his homestead. ...

Elements of the business community of Texas that are concerned about economic growth and job creation, and that realize that capital is a key to both, should stand fast and close ranks to press lawmakers to adopt this absolutely essential reform.

-The Dallas Morning News, Sept. 19

Improve the Odds

A funny thing happened to the search for an executive director of the Texas State Racing Commission. One by one, all the three "finalists" being considered for the position counted themselves out. That leaves the commission back at the starting gate. But Chairman Hilary Doran expressed optimism there'll be other candidates to consider next month.

Maybe so. But the fact that all three of those culled from previous applicants turned the job down before it was offered suggests there's a problem. It could be the pay scale — $60,000 per year. That simply may not be enough to entice the sort of first-teamer, experienced in racing and with impeccable credentials, the state should have as its racing chief. This is a vital position; it shouldn't go to a less than top-notch candidate for want of sufficient salary. That would be the worst form of false economy.

Fetal Tissue Can Help Patients

Fetal tissue resulting from abortions has become an issue unnecessarily confused by ideology. Scientists want to continue research on fetal tissue, since it holds great promise for the treatment of maladies such as Parkinson's disease. The Reagan administration wants it halted.

To his credit, Health and Human Services Secretary Otis Bowen ... announced he will not go along with the White House's proposed ban on the practice until the National Institutes of Health complete a thorough, scientific study of the practice and its scientific and ethical ramifications.

... Fetal tissue is particularly well suited for research because it is relatively pure and is dividing rapidly. Also, human tissue is a much more valid experimentation medium than animal cells. The White House wants to ban all such research, because the material emanates from abortions, which the president would like to ban, but cannot.

Secretary Bowen noted reasonably that "inasmuch as abortions are legal, being unable to utilize the tissue ... would result in the waste of a resource that is life-saving and curing for several diseases." The secretary is correct.

The Penultimate Word

SPELLING

I am the world's worst speller. I had an English teacher in college who accepted me as her personal challenge. She had never failed to teach a student how to spell. I went to her office every afternoon for an intense time of learning all of the rules. "I" before "E" except after "C" and several more which I could not remember. The English language is a mixed up mess. All of the rules have exceptions, so no one knows when the rule applies and when the exception applies. I misspell words in places the rules never think about. The teacher finally had the Psychology department run some tests to see if there were deep-seated reasons for my failure. Maybe I misspell words because I was mistreated as a child. Maybe it is a rebellion against authority. Maybe it is because I am dumb.

I never did learn how to spell. The teacher's record was no longer perfect. She had a great deal of struggle with her own self-worth over the failure. Years later I sent her a copy of the first book I wrote. I am sure her first thought was, "How in the world did they ever get his spelling corrected?"

There were some words I could spell. I could always spell Geography. I could spell it because someone told me this word was spelled by the first letters in the sentence: George Ellen's old grandmaw rode a pig home yesterday. Of course it would have been easier to learn how to spell the word than to memorize the sentence but I still use the sentence to spell geography.

I learned the notes on the music scale with the same kind of memory aid. The spaces in the treble clef spell F A C E. The lines say Every Good Boy Does Fine. In the bass clef they say All Cows Eat Grass, and Good Boys Do Fine Always.

Now I have a computer with a spell checker. Like a whiz the thing will run through a document and spot every misspelled word. I thought I had found mecca. The problem is most of the words I misspell either the computer has never heard of the word, or I am so far off the computer can't figure out what word I had in mind. The computer is on an "I" before "E" kick and I am still trying to find more George Ellen's old grandmaw statements. Does anyone have one for rhododendron? or phenomenon? Well then, how about accessible, bulletin, disappoint, erratic...

TV Campaign: Let's Hope It Keeps Drunks Off Roads

The television industry deserves a pat on the back for developing a campaign against drinking and driving.

So does Jay Winsten, an assistant dean of the Harvard School of Public Health, who thought up the project.

Winsten announced that the three major networks and 13 studios which create most of their programming have agreed to sponsor a two-pronged attack: public-service advertising to encourage the use of "designated drivers" among drinking groups — one who abstains from drinking and sees that his friends get home safely; and the insertion of dialogue in entertainment shows toward the same end.

For example, in a bar scene, a person might be asked to have a drink and that person will respond, "No thanks, I'm driving tonight."

... Let's hope that the television campaign will more firmly implant in the minds of the American public the fundamental truth that drinking and driving are a dangerous and often fatal combination.

Raise Congress, Ban Honoraria

Because of public disagreement over what constitutes adequate pay, salaries for members of Congress have been unrealistically low for years. Lawmakers depend on "honoraria" to augment their incomes.

Those who hand out honoraria, and those who accept, should quit kidding themselves that there is anything honorable about the custom. Despite the euphemistic label, honoraria paid to or charged by lawmakers has the unmistakable taint of influence peddling and should be stopped.

Members of Congress should be paid salaries commensurate with the service they are elected to perform, and outside compensation relating to their office should be outlawed.

That means making it an impeachable offense for senators and representatives to accept gifts and fees for delivering speeches and making public appearances.

A new salary commission will be appointed in October to make recommendations on congressional pay. The previous commission recommended senators and representatives both be paid $135,000 a year. That is reasonable compensation. ...

Representatives now make $86,263 a year and senators $87,483.

Joint Rio Grande Cleanup Moves Nearer Reality

Although the U.S.-Mexico Binational Commission has achieved some results in reducing environmental problems, such as last year's pact to enforce emission controls on a Mexican smelter that spread toxic waste into Arizona, more needs to be done by both nations. ...

And more is beginning to be done. Last week, a U.S. Senate committee approved legislation that would authorize negotiations with Mexico over cleaning up the Rio Grande, which is polluted by ... industrial waste and raw sewage.

... Such cooperation is vital. The United States and Mexico are no different from Europe or other industrialized areas in that pollution knows no international boundaries, and it requires mutual, international cooperation to keep the environment clean.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek looks at an ignored campaign issue this week.

Dear editor:

Some people are complaining that the two candidates, Bush and Dukakis, are ducking the big Presidential issues facing the country and spending their time name-calling and back-biting.

Probably the biggest issue, they say, is the ever-increasing national debt, so big now that it takes $40 billion a year just to pay the interest on it. Every Monday morning the government borrows 6 to 7 million dollars just to keep its head above water.

Moreover, every year the government spends around $150 billion more than it takes in.

The candidates however don't discuss this issue. They're like the man who, failing to pay his house mortgage every month, tries to sweep it under the rug, only to find out the rug is mortgaged too. And probably the broom he's sweeping with.

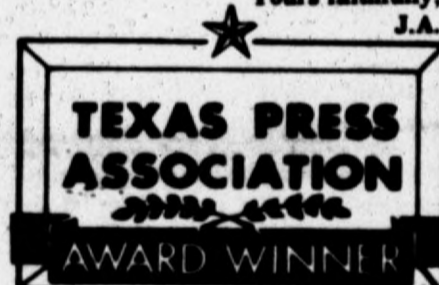

Furthermore, critics point out, the United States in the last eight years has become the world's largest debtor nation. A large portion of the money we're borrowing is coming from other countries.

And what happens, it's asked, if those other countries should suddenly call in their loans?

That's something that shouldn't be discussed. Don't let this out, but you reckon the U.S. economy is based on the dumbness of other countries who don't know a risky loan when they see it?

The reason the candidates don't touch the big issue of national debt is contained in the handbook of political campaigning: "Don't bring up a subject you don't know the answer to."

Yours faithfully,

Prayer in the Executive Suite

By Dr. Richard L. Leshner
President

WASHINGTON — President Reagan once said that as long as there are final exams, there will be prayer in schools.

To which I might add that as long as there are pre-election legislative sessions, there will be - or at least should be - prayer in executive suites.

During the countdown to election day, otherwise rational senators and representatives have been known to approve bad laws and dubious programs hastily, causing no end of mischief to our country. And the potential for mischief this year is especially grim.

Several items on the congressional plate warrant concern, not the list of which is the truckload of labor laws in various stages of the legislative process. Congress has already enacted an ill-considered plant closing bill which will, as its name implies, cause many plant closings. Other bad concepts in the mill include a proposed hike in the minimum wage; a ban on dual shops that would, in effect, draft millions of construction workers into unions against their will; a requirement that all employers provide paid leave to new parents, regardless of whether the business can afford it; a broad expansion of mandatory health benefits for employees, again without consideration of an employer's ability to pay; and a hazard notification rule that would serve primarily to provoke a new avalanche of lawsuits.

Without question, these laws would strangle this vibrant economy that has added more than 17 million jobs in less than six years. To impose such requirements upon employers would amount to killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. In the pre-election frenzy that now besets Congress, such things are not only possible, but probable.

Other potential disasters on the legislative agenda are a foolish expansion of sanctions against South Africa and a proposed national child-care program.

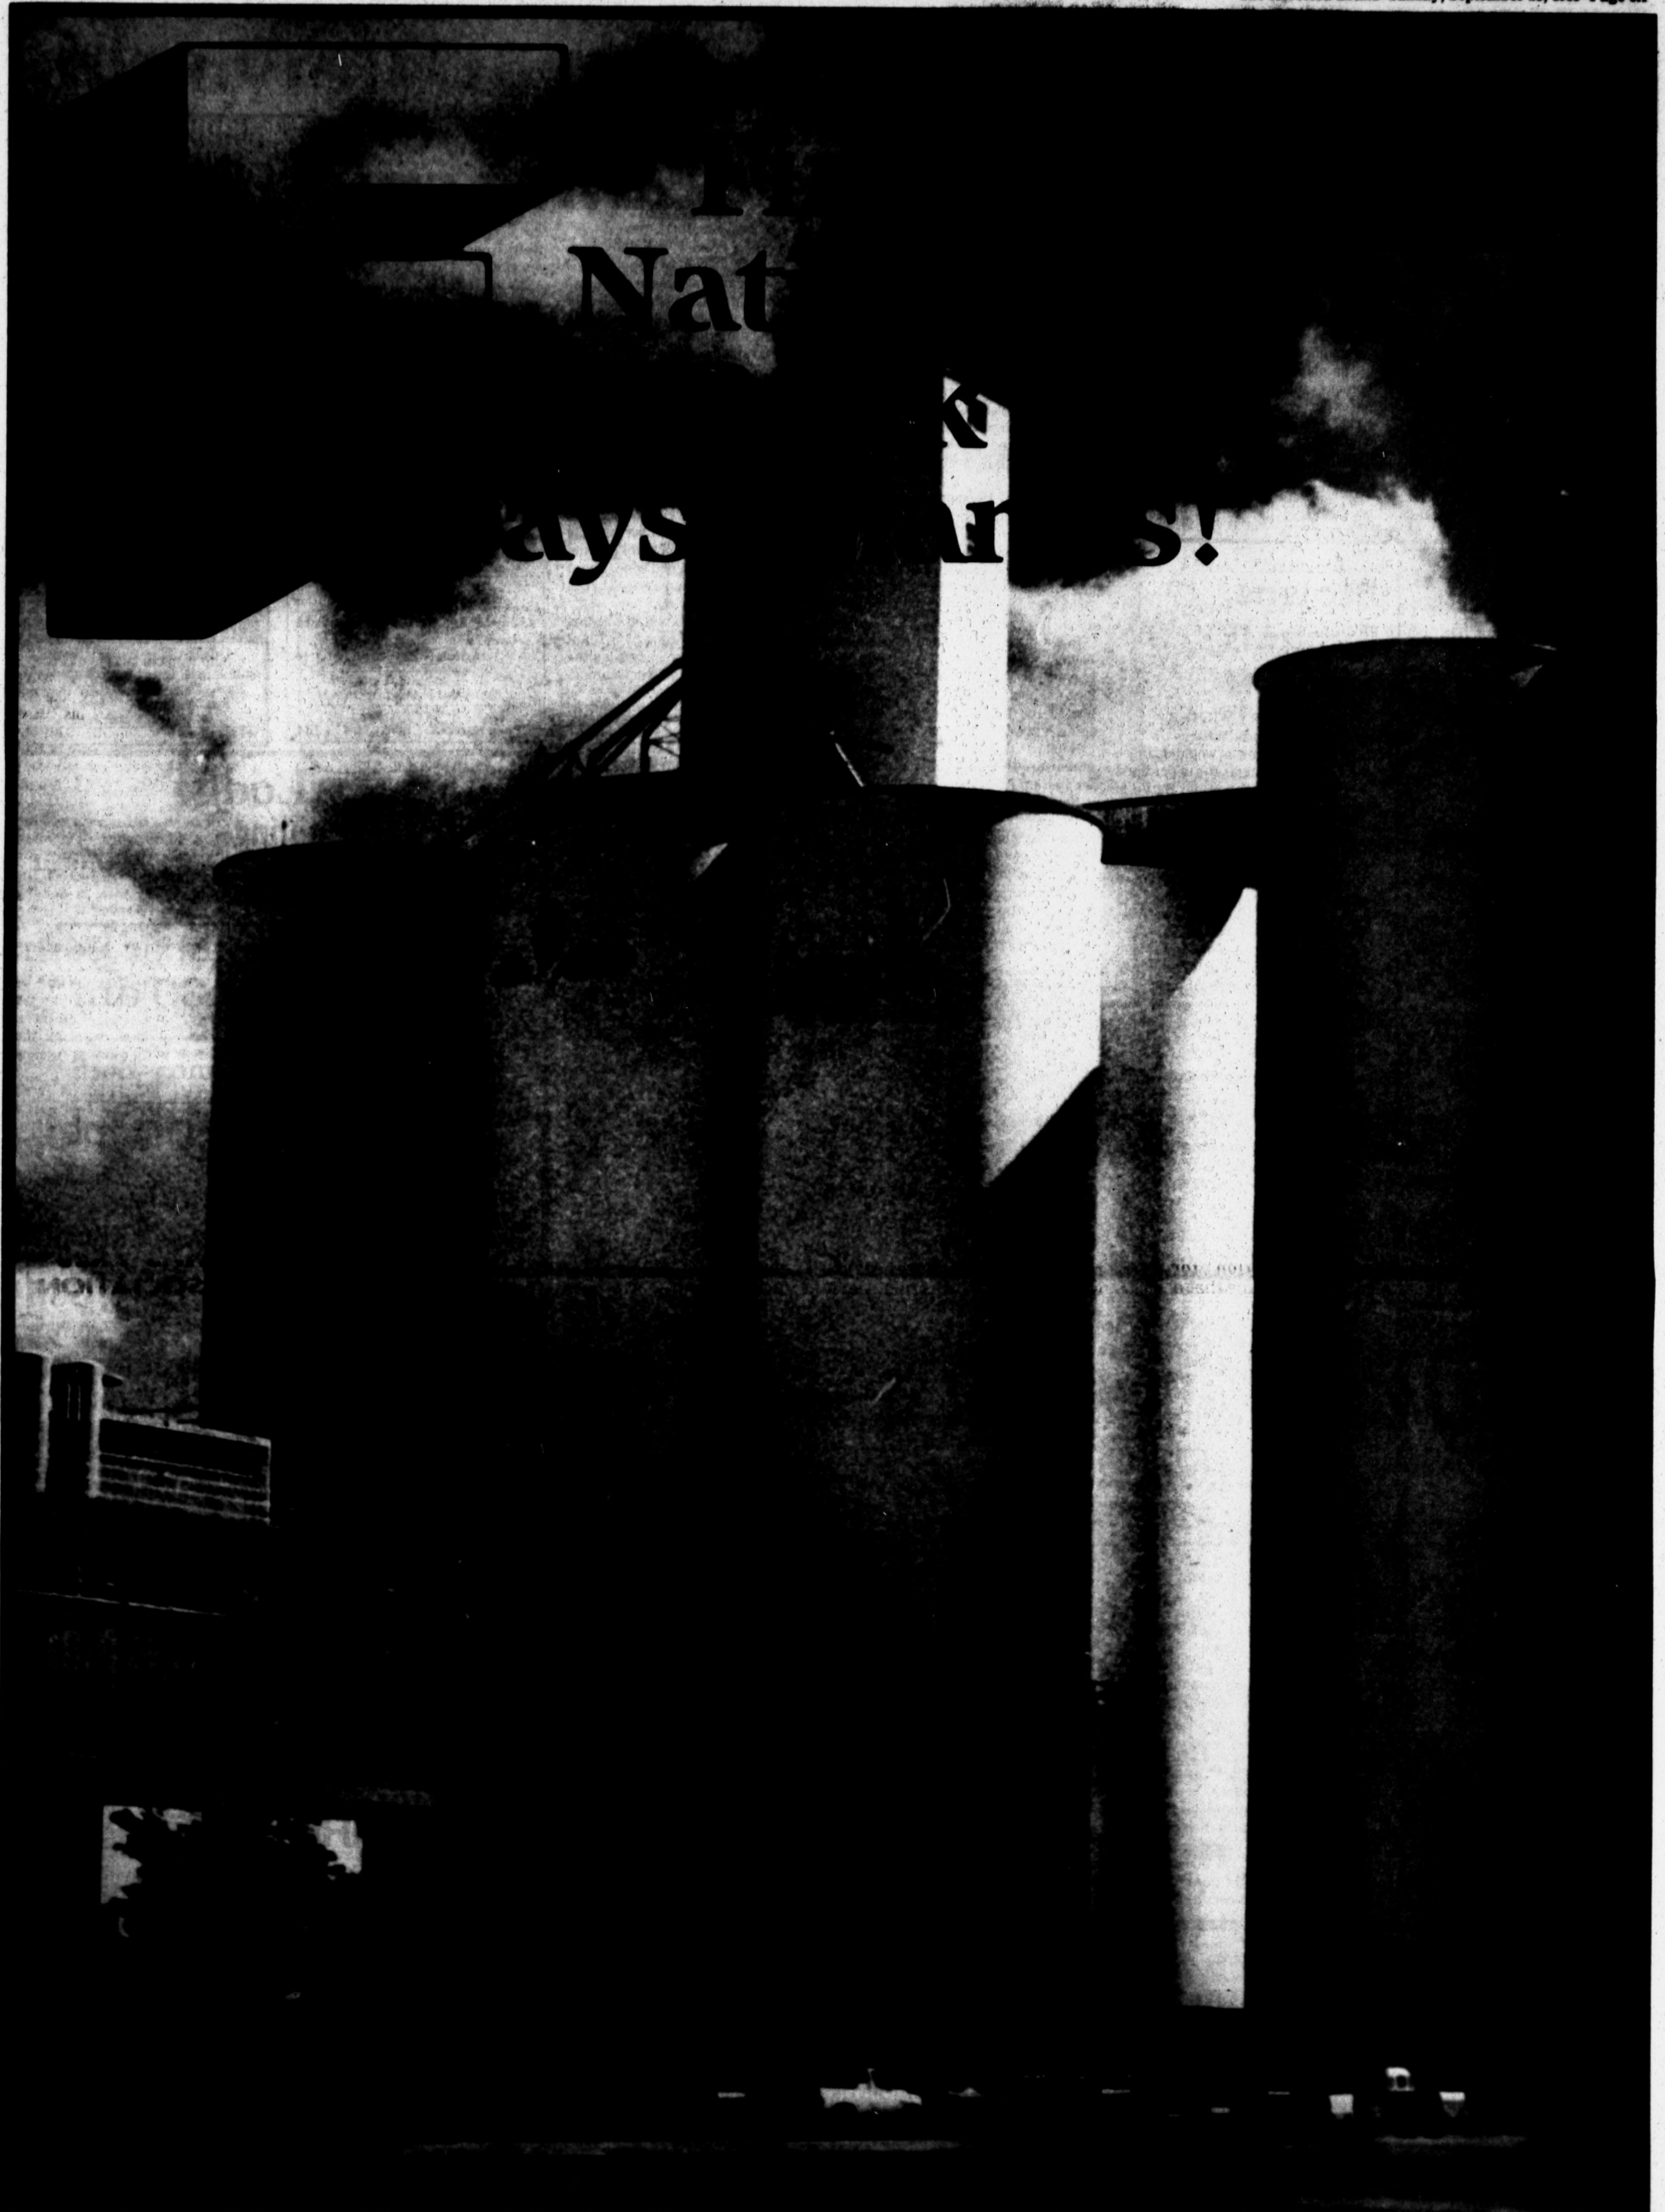

What Congress really wants to do is to go home and campaign for re-election, and the sooner it does so, the better. There are only a few things that really require immediate action—such as appropriations, approval of the Canadian free trade agreement and a bill authorizing the Pentagon to shut down obsolete military bases.

Everything else should be put on the back burner until the election is over. In this perilous time, we should all encourage our elected representatives to knock off work early and go home. Until they get out of town, no American can rest easy.

1964 was a very good year for Hereford, Texas — for our people, our economy, and for economic development. This was the year that Holly Sugar opened its Hereford operation. Of all the places in the United States, Hereford seemed to offer the agriculture environment and soil type Holly was looking for. Like so many other businesses, they saw the potential and made a commitment to become a major part of our community.

In 1988, Holly Sugar continues to grow, thanks to what Hereford has to offer. And Hereford's industrial base is stronger than ever thanks to the many ways in which Holly Sugar has given back to this community. Its contributions come in the form of three to four hundred jobs and close to 40 million dollars a year back into our economy. And with so many employees who are actively involved in civic programs and organizations, it's obvious that Holly has lived up to its commitment to be a major part of our growth and prosperity.

We at the First National Bank want to say thanks to the men and women of Holly Sugar who believed in our area back twenty-four years ago, and for all that you've done over the years to help make Hereford what it is today.

Canseco goes 40-40

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics became the first player in major league history to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in one season when he stole two bases Friday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Canseco stole his 39th base in the first inning after reaching on a single off Milwaukee's Juan Nieves.

In the fifth inning, the 6-foot-3, 230-pound Canseco bunted for a base hit and then stole second on an 0-1 pitch to teammate Mark McGwire.

The game was stopped and Canseco was given the second base bag at County Stadium.

The 24-year-old Canseco set the 40-40 goal for himself in April, not realizing at the time that no major leaguer had ever achieved it.

Ten players have hit at least 30 homers and stolen at least 30 bases in one season, including Eric Davis of the Cincinnati Reds, who had 37 homers and 50 steals in 1987.

Bobby Bonds, who had five 30-30 seasons, had 43 steals and 39 homers for the San Francisco Giants in 1973.

PAT rule adding spice

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

It only took the first Saturday of September for one of football's newest rule to have an impact on a football game.

St. John's was playing Iona, and St. John's had just scored the tying touchdown, and there was no time left on the clock. The Redmen lined up to kick the winning extra point.

Iona blocked the kick, picked up the loose football, and ran it back all the way.

Iona won by two points. A similar play almost happened in last week's Hereford-Estacado game. Hereford had just scored to go ahead 6-0. The center snap was just out of the reach of holder Carl Delozier. Delozier fell on the ball about 15 yards downfield.

In the past, Delozier or any other holder or other player in a game played with NCAA rules, like Texas high school football, might have picked the ball up and tried make something of a bad situation.

Not anymore. Delozier wanted to make sure that Estacado didn't pick the ball up (it could have been ruled a muff, like that ill-fated kickoff in last week's Dallas-Giants game should have been ruled) and return it for a two-point score for the defense.

The rule was implemented by the NCAA rules committee last spring and was also approved by the executive committee of the University Interscholastic League, the overseers of Texas schoolboy football, to live up the extra-point try.

Not only can the defense score two points, it can also score one point, or give up one or two points, depending upon the situation.

Here are some examples of what could happen:

—During a two-point try, Team B (the defense) intercepts a Team A (offense) pass or catches a fumble in the air or catches or recovers a kick. Team B then fumbles, and Team A recovers in the end zone. It's two points for Team A.

—A Team B player is the first player beyond the line of scrimmage to touch Team A's blocked kick and muffs the kick in the end zone. Team A recovers in the end zone. That is two points for Team A.

—There is a fumble, and the ball is knocked into the end zone by a Team B player. Team B player falls on the ball in the end zone. That is a one-point safety for Team A.

—On an extra-point kick, Team B blocks the kick, and a Team A player picks up the ball BEHIND the line of scrimmage. The Team A player advances the ball across Team B's goal line. It's two points for Team A. (If the Team A player picks up the blocked kick BEYOND the line of scrimmage, the play is over.)

You could have a one-point safety against the offensive team, too. That rule has always been in effect according to Hereford's Walt Davis, a high school football official. That rule was pretty much disregarded until this year.

Say a Team B player is running down the field with the ball and is finally hit by a Team A player, who picks up a fumble in the air at his own six-yard line.

The Team A player starts running around with the ball and runs into his own end zone, where he is tackled by Team B.

That is a one-point safety.

Davis almost had a two-point score by the defense in last week's Canyon-Friona game. A Friona player intercepted a Canyon pass and took off down the field. He was finally tackled far downfield.

Those are just some of the examples. The offense can score one or two points on an extra-point try, including a one-point safety against the defense, and the defense has the ability to score two points on many plays, depending upon how, and where, it gets possession of the ball.

Playing with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956, Dale Mitchell was called out on strikes to end the game in which Don Larsen pitched the only perfect game in World Series history. Larsen pitched for the Yankees.

Browns, Bengals face off

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Beating the Browns would do more than give the Bengals the upper hand in the NFL's version of the Battle of Ohio. It would establish Cincinnati as a viable force in AFC Central — and the entire league.

The Bengals, off to a 3-0 start, would have their best opening record since the 6-0 beginning in 1975 if they beat Cleveland, which has won the division the last three years. They also would grab a two-game lead over the Browns, who enter Sunday's game 2-1 and ravaged by injuries.

A victory Sunday also would give the Bengals reasons to start thinking about a postseason berth for the first time since 1982.

"This is probably the biggest game of the year for us to this point," said Boomer Esiason, one of the main reasons Cincinnati has joined the Rams and Bills as the only unbeaten teams in the league.

Esiason has an NFL-high 115.7 passing rating, having hit 52-of-85 passes (61.2) percent. He has nine touchdown passes and just three interceptions. Thanks to the left-handed quarterback, Cincinnati has the AFC's No. 1 overall offense and is No. 1 in passing.

That has helped offset the worst rushing defense in the conference. But the same defense that lost four non-strike games with fourth-quarter collapses last year, has preserved all three victories by stopping opponents deep in Bengals' territory in the closing minute.

"The defense is playing tremendous football," Coach Sam Wyche said. "The defense is coming now. They believe in themselves."

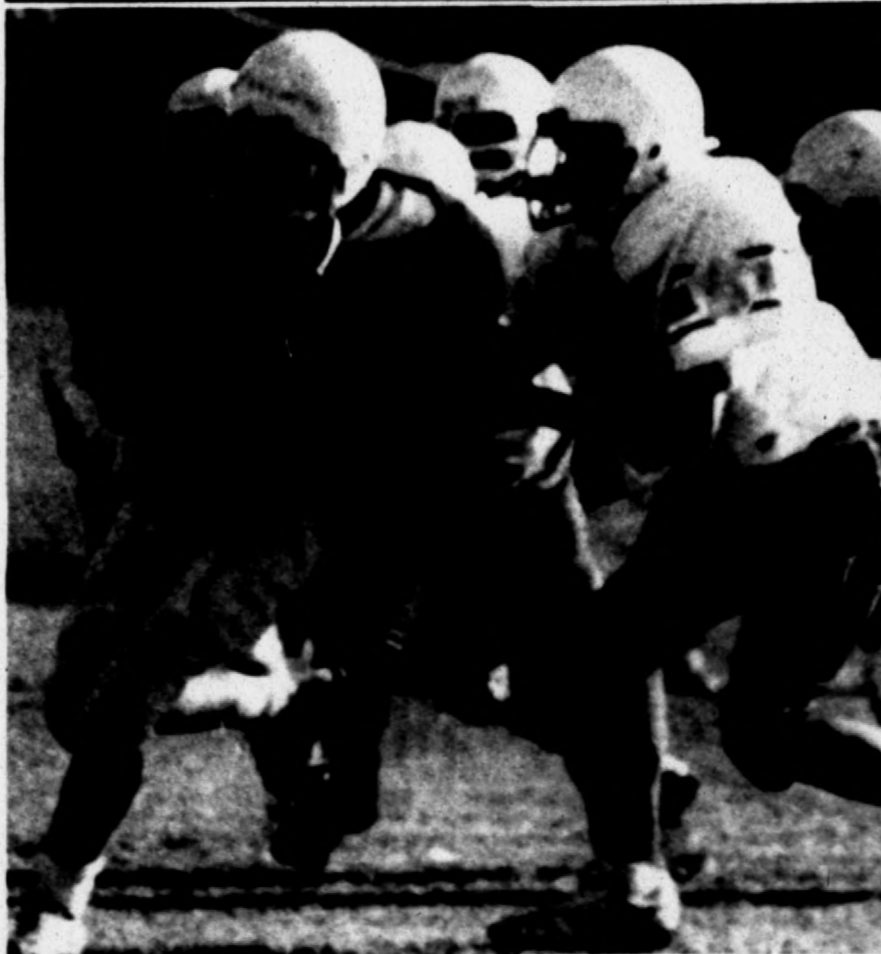

But none of the Bengals are getting carried away by the early success. "We're only three games into it," Wyche said.

The unbeaten Los Angeles Rams are at the New York Giants and the unblemished Buffalo Bills are home to play Pittsburgh on Sunday.

Also, winless Indianapolis entertains Miami, while Green Bay, the NFL's other 0-3 team, is home for Chicago.

In other games, it's Atlanta at Dallas; New England at Houston; the New York Jets at Detroit; Philadelphia at Minnesota; Tampa Bay at New Orleans; San Diego at Kansas City; San Francisco at Seattle; and Washington at Phoenix.

Looking for room

Hereford eighth grade quarterback Chad Sandoval (10) looks for some running room during Thursday's game between the Hereford White A team and Valleyview at the Hereford Junior High field. Sandoval scored on a quarterback sneak in the third quarter, then hooked up on a 57-yard touchdown pass to Ruben Gutierrez with 21 seconds left in the game to give Hereford a 12-8 win.

Farm and Ranch

Drought slows recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although this year's drought apparently has slowed the recovery in U.S. farmland prices, the Agriculture Department says appraisers are optimistic for a healthy increase in 1989.

Rural appraisers surveyed in August by the department's Economic Research Service reported only a 1.2 percent increase nationally in farmland values for May, June and July, compared with a 1.8 percent gain in the first quarter of the year.

"While the appreciation rate for farmland could continue to slow in coming months, the appraisers were more bullish for the year ahead, expecting a 4.6 percent rise in values," the agency said Tuesday. "Last May, surveyed appraisers anticipated only a 3.6 percent gain for the coming year."

Farmland prices began rising in 1987, ending a six-year decline that was part of the worst financial crunch in U.S. agriculture since the Depression.

One of the reasons for optimism about land prices is the improvement in farm income the last year or so. In a related report, the agency released new 1987 farm income statistics which showed last year's state rankings for the first time. California, as usual, headed the list.

Nine of the top 10 states for net farm income in 1987 were there in 1986, the Economic Research Service said. North Carolina replaced Washington in 1987.

USDA drought help starts soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's $3.9 billion emergency program to help farmers recover from this year's devastating drought is set to begin operating on Oct. 3.

President Reagan signed the Disaster Assistance Act on Aug. 11, and the Agriculture Department has been working since then to put the necessary regulations into effect and get county offices ready to accept applications.

The top 10 states accounted for 54 percent of total U.S. net farm income in 1987, compared with 54.5 percent in 1986.

The new preliminary state estimates for 1987 showed net farm income nationally at $46.3 billion, up more than 23 percent from calendar 1986.

Economists said the largest percentage increases were in Wyoming, South Carolina, Maine, Louisiana, Mississippi and Nevada.

"The Wyoming and Nevada gains were due largely to increased value of livestock product marketings," the report said. Higher cattle prices and livestock inventory reductions contributed.

Improved farm income in South Carolina, Maine, Louisiana and Mississippi resulted from increased production and higher prices for tobacco, potatoes, cotton and cottonseed. Generally, production increased from a relatively poor year in 1986.

Net farm income is the difference between gross farm income and total expenses during a calendar year and measures the profit or loss associated with production in a given year.

Additions to inventories are treated as income, and allowances are made for "non-money" items such as depreciation, the consumption of farm-grown food and the net rental value of dwellings.

The agency also uses a method of accounting for "net cash income," which is the difference between gross cash income and cash expenses. Current sales from inventories produced in other years are counted as gross income.

Net cash income is often preferred by some economists since it shows how much actual money farmers have to spend during a year. In 1987, net cash income was estimated at a record $57.1 billion, compared with the net income of $46.3 billion.

Brown attends fire conference

Ninety conferees from all over Texas set goals and formulated action plans to wrap up the three-day Governor's Conference on Rural/Suburban interface fire problems recently in Austin. The effort, labeled "Wildfire Strikes Home in Texas," included a number of speakers, a tour of homes built in the hills around Austin, and numerous brain-storming sessions.

Ernest Brown represented the Walcott Fire Department at the meeting.

The meeting was organized to outline problems of homes built in areas near vegetation, which has a high fire danger especially in times of drought, and address other statewide fire problems as well.

Participants set numerous goals to be reached by 1995, a primary one being to educate urban/rural dwellers to understand the rural fire problem and have positive attitudes toward fire safety.

Another goal was the development of broad-based support for statewide building, fire and development standards, which conferees feel are needed to help deal with urban/rural fire problems.

Conferees want to see fire protection provided with reasonable response times by properly funded, trained and equipped fire service personnel. They plan to develop a coordinated statewide standard cross-training system and work to have funding available for training and equipment for all fire departments based on need.

The USDA has forecast 1988 net farm income may be in the range of $38 billion to $43 billion and that net cash income could be $55 billion to $60 billion.

"Net farm income is typically much more volatile than net cash income because weather often causes sharp changes in production that lead to swings in inventory values," the report said.

In old Scotland it was believed if February 12-14th were stormy, there would be good weather the rest of the year.

Meeting on water future in October

The future of Texas hinges on adequate supplies of clean, safe water, and an upcoming conference will focus on water issues.

"Managing Texas' Waters: Stewardship in a Regulatory Environment" will be the theme of the 22nd Water for Texas Conference set for Oct. 19-21 in League city, just south of Houston. Conference site is the South Shore Harbour Resort and Conference Center on the shore of Clear Lake.

The conference is a joint effort of the Texas Water Resources Institute, a unit of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station; Texas A&M University at Galveston; Texas A&M's Sea Grant Program; and the Harris-Galveston Coastal Subsidence District.

"It is the responsibility of every resident to help assure that adequate supplies of clean, safe water will continue to be available to support the continued prosperity of our state," said Dr. Wayne Jordan, director of the Texas Water Resources Institute and conference chairman. "But before we can exercise this responsibility, we must be informed on the major water issues facing Texas. This conference will highlight these issues and will illustrate the roles for private citizens and local, federal and state governments in each area.

"We have an outstanding program of more than 50 national and state experts to discuss both short and long term water problems facing Texas," Jordan said. "For example, Dr. William Kellogg of the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo., will point out the likely problems Texans will face as a result of an unexpected global climate change during the next three decades. Dr. Julian Andelman of the University of Pittsburgh will discuss human exposure to and risk from water contaminants, a topic that continues to receive national attention in the press and one that may be the subject of new federal legislation."

Jordan said that a substantial portion of the conference program will deal with agricultural water issues. In Texas agriculture consumes the largest quantity of water, and the industry is accused of being a major contributor to surface and groundwater contamination, he said.

Dr. Wes Oneth, state conservationist with the USDA's Soil Conservation Service, will describe beneficial impacts of the 1985 Food Security Act on reducing erosion and sediment loads in surface waters. Nancy Cox with the Texas Department of Agriculture will discuss groundwater and agricultural chemicals and will present data from recent well surveys. Texas Agricultural Experiment Station soil scientist Dr. Kirk Brown will discuss environmental dangers associated with pesticides used in rice production, and TAES weed researcher, Dr. John Abernathy will describe what is currently known about the fate and movement of agricultural chemicals through soils. Minimum standards for groundwater districts and management of both surface and groundwater in the Edwards Aquifer will also be discussed.

Other discussions will deal with managing in-stream flows and freshwater inflows to maintain the attractiveness and productivity of bays and estuaries, current status and plans for wetlands protection, groundwater management and protection, opportunities to get more surface water from current watershed and reservoir systems, the Texas Water Plan, and water research needs, Jordan said. Also, a panel of Texas legislators will discuss possible legislative action to implement needed changes in the way Texas develops, protects and manages its water resources.

Conference preregistration will continue until Oct. 1. For more information contact the Texas Water Resources Institute, 301 Scoates Hall, Texas A&M University.

0/92 available for 1989

The "0/92" provisions are available for the 1989 wheat and feed grain programs. Some producers are debating whether or not to plant winter wheat because of the dry soil conditions. This reminder may assist them in making this management decision ASCS official Ted Peabody said.

The "0/92" provisions gives wheat and feed grain producers the option to devote all or a portion of their permitted acreage to conserving uses and receive deficiency payments on the acreage. The maximum acres for deficiency payments under this provision is 92 percent of the permitted acreage.

Peabody pointed out that the sign up dates and the projected deficiency rates for the 1989 wheat and feed grain crops have not been announced. However, Peabody said that the "0/92" provisions will be available for these crops.

HIDDEN CLOUT

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — If you are one of the 50 million Americans with company retirement benefits, your pension fund gives you economic clout in corporate boardrooms and the stock market, says Clifford W. Smith.

Smith, a professor of finance at the University of Rochester, says pension funds and other institutional investors vote more actively than individuals on antitakeover amendments and management proposals that would harm shareholder interest.

Pension funds with assets of over $2 trillion also account for about 40 percent of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

"Your average large fund holds some of nearly all securities traded in U.S. capital markets," Smith says.

WHITEFACE AVIATION CORP.

When working on the farm, it's a good idea to keep the air you breathe clean. It has long been accepted that persons working around toxic industrial chemicals should take precautions with air masks or air-supplying devices. This is also true for farmers working around grain, moldy hay and storage bins. One or two times may not cause any problems but constant exposure to mold and dust fragments will make a person much more sensitive to adverse reactions. Experts advise keeping buildings, rooms and confined places well ventilated. Wear a respirator in these areas and when working around operating grinders and sanders. Respirators and gas masks will protect where there are no toxic gases and plenty of fresh oxygen. However, when working in silos or pits, experts stress the use of clean air-supplying airpumps or hose-masks, supplied with new filters and cartridges.

 Atlanta, GA 30345.

FEATURE HOMES

© By W. D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

Entrance is to an extraordinary great room which flows to the country kitchen which includes extra cabinet space, terrace access, and adjacent separate laundry room. Garage access is through the laundry room and covered walk.

The master bedroom suite is full depth of the plan, the bath being appointed by two lavatories, garden tub, and separate shower. The two remaining bedrooms are on the opposite side of the plan, and the rooms and closets are in duplicate. These two bedrooms share a central full bath.

The plan is drawn to include a basement, the stair to which is handy to the family room, but between this room and the master bedroom, affording better sound-proofing for the master bedroom.

The country exterior incorporates porch with wood rail and columns, horizontal exterior siding, and gable roof design. Notice that the master bath is recessed into a window area.

The plan number is 682-A. It includes 1,694 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. This is a computer plan. Some changes may be made from the plan stored in the CADD memory at less cost to you. Direct inquiries about CADD plan changes to the following address.

AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have an old piece of furniture which I plan to refinish by taking off the old finish and putting on a completely new one. But I do not know whether the old finish is varnish, shellac or whatever. Is there some way of finding this out?

A. — If you plan to use a varnish remover, the chances are it will work whether the old finish is varnish, lacquer or shellac. You would have to worry about the nature of the old finishing material only if you were going to leave it on and apply the new finish over it. Once the varnish remover has done its work and you have taken off all traces of the old finish, it won't make any difference what it was. Just be sure you follow the remover directions on how to wash off the residue. Should the result be unsatisfactory, you may have to bleach the wood to get it all one shade. The new finish should then be applied over a sealer. As for telling what the old finish is, rub a section with denatured alcohol. It will not affect lacquer or varnish, but will cause the shellac to become cloudy or sticky. To test for lacquer, do the same thing with lacquer thinner. If neither the denatured alcohol or the thinner has any effect, the chances are the finish is varnish. However, lacquer thinner sometimes will cause a varnish finish to crinkle a little. If it does, that's another way to know that the finish probably is varnish. But, as we said, it isn't vital you know what the exact finish was, since you will be removing it.

Q. — I am having our kitchen renovated and expect to do some of the work myself. I intend to use two base cabinets without putting backs on them. Is this feasible and is there anything I should know about it?

A. — Yes. It is a fairly common practice. But you must first install wooden cleats on the wall. One bit of advice that applies to all cabinets that are to be attached to a wall. Make sure the cabinets are perfect before they are screwed into place. See that everything is level and that all doors and other equipment work properly. If you don't and there is even a slight adjustment necessary later, it will be much more difficult to make corrections after the cabinet is attached.

chances are any defects can be fixed. Fill any gaps with patching plaster. Be sure to wash down the walls to remove any grease or dirt on them. This is especially important in a bathroom or kitchen. The test is whether the old walls afford a solid base for the tiles.

Q. — I am planning a project which calls for crisscross joints at certain points. I can guess as to what crisscross joints are but I want to be sure.

A. — A crisscross joint is the simple placement of a piece of wood over another piece of wood so that they cross in the shape of an X. Attachment can be with nails, screws, glue or anything you want. In fact, many crisscross joints are held together with bolts.

Q. — I want to redo an old bureau. Its varnish is in fair condition but I want to remove it and apply a lacquer finish. Can the lacquer be applied right over the varnish?

A. — A frequently asked question, which always has the same reply: no. Lacquer tends to act as a varnish softener. If you want to refinish the cabinet with lacquer, you will have to remove the old finish.

Q. — We get mildew on the siding on one side of our house. A landscaper told us it was caused by a large tree that is too close to the house and should be removed. Will this be necessary?

A. — The landscaper gave you sound advice. When a large tree is next to the house, it not only keeps the sun's rays from hitting the house, it retains moisture and prevents the circulation of air. These are all conditions that cause mildew. The only way you can save the tree is to find some way of allowing the sun's rays to reach the house. You might try experimenting by cutting off some of the branches but the odds are not in your favor.

Q. — We have plaster walls in a bathroom which I plan to cover partially with ceramic tiles. Can the tiles be attached to any kind of wall or must it be in excellent condition? Our walls are fairly sound, but starting to look a bit seedy.

A. — You will have to be the judge of whether the walls are in good enough shape or whether new gypsum walls are necessary. It is assumed you mean the old-fashioned solid plaster walls. In that event, the

Experiment first with pumice stone

Pumice stone in the form of powder is a material that assures a smooth, satiny finish on a wood surface that has been varnished, lacquered or shellacked.

When you see an advertisement for furniture that includes the phrase "a hand-rubbed finish," the chances are pumice powder was used as the rubbing compound. If finished properly, the wood will be free of irregularities, have a slick surface and be silky rather than highly glossed.

If you find wood finishing an engrossing hobby, you should experiment with pumice stone and either oil or water even if you are satisfied with the results you have been achieving. It will supply a new dimension to your skills and provide an interesting addition to your list of finishing techniques.

You will have no trouble achieving good results even if you have only a limited amount of knowledge regarding the refinements possible with wood finishes. One thing you will discover is that pumice powder does not leave scratches and is, in fact, a good way of getting rid of them if left over from any previous finishing operation. Used with a felt pad, pumice powder and oil cuts quickly and with little effort. It cuts even faster with water, which is why beginners should get used to the pumice-oil combination before trying the pumice with water. When oil is used, there is a slight tendency toward stickiness, requiring wiping off. One other thing. Pumice powder and water can be used on varnish or lacquer, but not on shellac.

To use pumice powder and oil, dip the felt pad lightly into the liquid, then rub without much pressure. What kind of oil? Almost any kind. It can be crude oil, a light mineral oil, paraffin oil or even ordinary household oil used mostly on sewing machines. You can avoid trouble if you examine the pumice powder carefully to be certain no foreign ingredient has fallen into it. Even an almost invisible speck in the powder can cause the wood to be marred. Many professional wood finishers sift the powder each time through a piece of cheesecloth. The rubbing should be with the grain, stroking lightly and carefully. While you can make your own felt pad from material you have on hand, such as a piece of felt from an old hat, it is better to purchase a felt pad ready-made. It can be obtained in different thickness and textures. Get used to using a pad of medium thickness and texture. When you have acquired the knack of using pumice powder and a liquid, you can try other kinds of rubbing pads. When the oil residue must be wiped off, be sure the cloth you use has no visible seams or anything else that can damage the finish.

If you complete the pumice-oil process and find the finish is smooth and satiny but not quite glossy enough, you can obtain a gloss with rottenstone powder and either oil or water. This also is rubbed on the finish with a felt pad. Check every few minutes to see whether the desired degree of gloss has been obtained. The same caution is necessary as with pumice powder. If water is used as the lubricant, it's fine for varnish and lacquer, but not for shellac. Some professionals apply a paste wax to the rubbed finish, some do not.

THIS BIRD'S A FRIEND

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Like many folks, Pee Wee likes to ride in a pickup truck.

Pee Wee, though, is a robin. And riding in a pickup truck is only one of the surprises Terry Culler has discovered since he took in the starving young robin recently.

Culler, a production worker for R.J. Reynolds Co., rescued the bird from the middle of a street. Originally, he gave it little chance of survival but that was before it ate 22 worms in five hours.

Culler helped the bird take its first flight, expecting it would fly away. Instead, the bird arrives at his back door daily, chirping to be let in. She perches on the kitchen table for crumbs, bathes in the kitchen sink and goes for rides in Culler's pickup.

Serving on committee

Ruth Newsom, at left, served as this year's local chairman of the Constitution Week Committee of Los Ciboleros Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Constitution Week, which concluded Saturday, was observed by Hereford residents including school age children. DAR chapter members distributed posters depicting the flag of the United States of America and the signing of the Constitution to schools, nursing homes, day care centers, Deaf Smith County Library, YMCA, Hereford Senior Citizens Center, King's Manor Retirement Home and Deaf Smith General Hospital. Assisting on the special projects during the week were committee members Mildred Drake and Mary Williamson, at right.

DAR members observe special week

Members of Los Ciboleros Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met recently in the Hereford Community Center lounge with Mildred Drake and Kathryn Ruga serving as co-hostesses.

Chapter women discussed Constitution Week which concluded Saturday in Hereford. In conjunction with the annual observance, Ruth Newsom, chairman of the Bicentennial of the Constitution of the United States of America committee for the local DAR chapter, presented a program on the Constitution. She distributed a quiz to members to test their knowledge about the origins of the Constitution as well as the constitution of the document. The program emphasized the circumstances that led to the formation of the Constitution as well as a background of the people and the way they lived in that era.

Regent Violet Reinauer led the opening ritual assisted by the chaplain, Lois Gilliland. The group recited the Pledge of Allegiance led by Mary Williamson followed by singing in unison "The Star Spangled Banner." Helen Rose led recitation of the American Creed and the Preamble to the Constitution.

The President General's Message was read by Ruth Fish and Helen Rose reviewed DAR resolutions that were passed at the Continental Congress in Washington, D.C. earlier this year. This national defense program was given to emphasize each member's rededication to the national causes set forth at the Continental Congress.

Minutes of the May 1988 meeting were approved and, due to the absence of the treasurer, no financial report was given. Also, the 1988-89 yearbooks were distributed to the assembled membership.

Mary Williamson introduced her guest, Jeane Drury from Florida.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "The Star-Spangled Banner" should never have been designated as our national anthem. Very few people have the voice range to handle it. It's an octave and a fifth. We should ditch that dog and go for "America the Beautiful."—Wm. T.G., Oakland

DEAR OAK: Lots of folks hold the same view and have written to their congressmen about it. I am among those who would prefer "America the Beautiful." Somehow, "amber waves of grain" and "purple mountain's majesty" sound more like the country I love than "the rockets' red glare" and "bombs bursting in air."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You are right when you say an awful lot of folks don't know the words to "The Star-Spangled Banner." You were referring to the first verse, no doubt. I'll bet not one person in 1,000 knows the second and third verses which, in my opinion, are much more stirring.—Little Rock

DEAR LITTLE ROCK: The odds are worse than that. I'd put them at one in 10,000. And by the way, there are four verses.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I was a kid (60-plus years ago) we stood at attention when the national anthem was played. Men took off their hats and those in uniform saluted. Today nobody pays the least bit of attention. They keep right on jabbering away, chewing gum, smoking cigarettes and drinking beer. It's a damned disgrace.—Indianapolis

DEAR INDY: Guess I'm an old square like you. It's disgusting.

From Neosho, Mo.: During World War II a British wit noted that American soldiers could barely stumble through the first few lines of "The Star-Spangled Banner" but they knew all the words to "Pistol Packin' Mama." I didn't consider that an insult because "Pistol Packin' Mama" is a much better song.

From Augusta, Ga.: "The Star-Spangled Banner" became our national anthem in 1931. Why they picked that lemon is a mystery to me. Francis Scott Key wrote it to immortalize an insignificant battle of a minor war (War of 1812).

From Russellville, Ala.: You are mistaken when you assume that people don't know the words to our national anthem merely because they move their lips a little and don't sing. The problem is that it is written in G major, which means it has an F sharp that few people can reach. If it were played in the key of B flat major, even I could sing it.

From Brunswick, Me.: When I was in grammar school (1911) we had to memorize all four verses of "The Star-Spangled Banner." I am 87 years old and am writing the words from memory. Sorry I can't recall the third verse, Ann, but here are the first, second and fourth verses. You may print my name if you want to. I'd like that.—Marie Baxter White

DEAR MARIE: With pleasure! What a remarkable great lady you are! And your penmanship is much better than mine, dear.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm so glad you printed the words to our national anthem. I was one of those kids who never learned them when I was in school and have been embarrassed about it ever since. Thanks a heap, doll.—Lake Forest, Ill.

DEAR LAKE: You and a few million others. Read on:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "The Star-Spangled Banner" is a stupid song. The words don't make sense to the average person. For example, how many people know what a rampart is? See what I mean?—Lenny in Lima, Ohio

DEAR LENNIE: A rampart is...uh...just a minute while I go look it up.

Explorer Ponce de Leon claimed Florida for Spain in 1513.

YOUR EYES

TRAVEL TIPS FOR CONTACT LENS WEARERS

When contact lens wearers go on vacation, they should be sure to carry an adequate supply of disinfection and cleansing solutions. In some foreign places, these solutions can be expensive and not always readily available. Without them, of course, it is impossible to keep your contacts perfectly clean and comfortably wearable.

If a heat disinfection system proves cumbersome, you can temporarily switch to an oxidation system that is not dependent on electricity or electrical adaptors.

It is always safer to take along a spare pair of contacts. No need to spoil a vacation or a business trip because of a ripped or lost lens.

Climate changes can sometimes affect your contact lenses. Within a day or so, however, your lenses and your eyes should adjust to changes in temperature and humidity. Airplane travel, too, sometimes temporarily affects contact lens wear. But once you've landed, any visual discomfort caused by dry cabin air should clear up.

Walterscheid, Strader vows exchanged Saturday evening

Soft candlelight illuminated the church altar as Kari Diane Walterscheid and Patrick Leslie Strader, both of Houston, exchanged nuptials Saturday evening in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The marriage was officiated by Msgr. Orville R. Blum of the church.

The bride's parents are Leonard and Opel Walterscheid of 222 Elm and the bridegroom's parents are John and Erin Strader of Houston.

The main church altar was decorated with a blend of white silk mums, carnations, dogwood, stephanotis, roses and baby's breath arranged in brass urns. Each side of the altar was flanked by spiral 15-votive candelabra accented with greenery. Live green plants decorated the side altars and each side of the front altar. The front three pews were enhanced with markers of pink roses, white stephanotis, baby's breath and white satin ribbon.

Michelle Richburg of Temple served as maid of honor and James Dunn of Houston was best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sister, Lori Walterscheid, and Holly

Veigel, both of Hereford; Allyson Thomas of San Antonio, and Amy Griffin and Brooke Taylor, both of Dallas. Serving as groomsmen were the groom's brother, Kelly Strader of Houston; Scott Waughtal of Bedford; the bride's brother, Doug Walterscheid of Amarillo; John Clanton of Lockhart; and Bobby Horton of College Station.

Ring bearers were the bride's nephews, Brandon Tidmore, son of Donna Tidmore, and Tyson Yosten, son of Gregg and Lindy Yosten.

Ralph Detten vocalized "God, A Woman and A Man", "The Wedding Song", "Hymne", and "Thee Our Father". He was accompanied by Sharon Cramer playing the organ and Manda Lytal playing the trumpet. Other wedding selections performed were "Trumpet Voluntary" and "March" by Shelly.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose to wear an exquisite designer formal-length gown of white silk taffeta, designed with a sweetheart neckline accented by Alencon lace. The full-length fitted sleeves were of sheer organza and silk taffeta adorned with dainty lace appliques which were accented with seed pearls and sequins and tapered to pointed cuffs of Alencon lace over the hands.

The closely-fitted bodice tapered into a drop waistline and the full silk taffeta skirt, accented with Alencon lace appliques with seed pearls and sequins, cascaded into a cathedral-length train bordered with Alencon lace appliques, tiny seed pearls and sequins.

To compliment her designer gown, the bride wore a waterfall bandeau of pearls, crystals and lace which held a fingertip bridal veil.

In keeping with bridal tradition, the bride wore her maternal great-grandmother's garnet and pearl engagement ring as something old; her wedding gown, something new; a three-strand pearl necklace from the groom's paternal grandmother, something borrowed; and her garter, something blue. In her shoe, the bride placed a sixpence which was borrowed from her paternal grandmother.

The bride carried a bouquet of cascading white roses, white mini-carnations and stephanotis with accents of green English ivy and baby's breath. The bouquet was further adorned with white lace streamers tied with love knots.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids were attired in identical tea-length gowns of royal blue silk taffeta featuring sweetheart necklines and dropwaists similar to the bride's gown. Their ensembles also featured elbow-length fitted sleeves.

The maid of honor carried three long-stemmed pink roses with baby's breath and greenery with white lace streamers. Bridesmaids carried two long-stemmed pink roses with baby's breath and greenery with white lace streamers.

The bride's sister, Lindy Yosten of Hereford, invited guests to register at the reception held at the Hereford Country Club.

Brenda Walterscheid of Hereford, the bride's sister, and Lori L. Walterscheid of Amarillo, the bride's sister-in-law, served the three-tiered cake decorated with hand-molded pink roses and carnations cascading down the sides.

Donna Tidmore of Hereford, the bride's sister, poured punch and coffee for wedding guests.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico, the bride wore, as her going away attire, a two-piece ensemble of royal blue accented in turquoise. Her jewelry consisted of gold accents.

The couple will make their home after Oct. 1 in Houston.

The bride, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, graduated with a B.B.S. degree in finance from Texas A&M University in 1987. She is presently employed at Texas Commerce Bank in Houston.

The bridegroom graduated with a B.S. degree in engineering technology from Texas A&M University in 1984. He is currently employed at Houston Shell and Concrete in Houston.

Out-of-town wedding guests included his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Blakely Smith Jr. of Richmond and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Parker of Kerrville; and Mr. and Mrs. Barkley of Houston and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Roach of Helotes, Texas, his aunts and uncles.

A special jest included the bride's grandmother, Mrs. F.J. Walterscheid of Hereford.

Other towns represented included Muenster, Austin, Stratford, Amarillo, and Yukon, Okla.

Red Cross Update

Hurricane Gilbert caused extensive damage even though the storm was not as strong as expected. In Texas, 643 homes were damaged and 174 shelters housed 184,000 residents. Those residents were fed an estimated 52,000 meals.

The most damage from the storm was in the Yucatan peninsula where more than 1,000 homes were destroyed. The Isle of De Mujeres suffered major damage. An estimated 20,000 homes were destroyed. A dozen people were killed and that many are still missing.

In Monteray, Mexico 100 persons were killed and 4,500 left homeless.

MR. AND MRS. RODNEY LACY

Marriage vows unite DeLaCruz, Lacy

Trinidad (Trinie) DeLaCruz of Hereford became the bride of Rodney Dale Lacy of Phoenix, Ariz. during an afternoon wedding held Sept. 18 in the Little Bull Barn of Hereford. Officiant was Johnnie Turrentine, Justice of the Peace.

The bride is the daughter of Juan and Ester DeLaCruz of 207 Jackson, Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Gary Lacy and Mrs. Edith Kirkland of Amarillo.

The wedding site was decorated with an arch of entwined greenery and large white mums and baby blue roses, further enhanced by white and blue bows. Immediately in front of the arch, at its base, were two white birdbaths decorated by large blue bows, white mums and baby blue roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Dalia Contreras of Canyon, sister of the bride. Best man was Jason Trolinder of Phoenix, Ariz.

Bridesmaids included Connie Jackson, Maria Rodriguez, and Melissa Vasquez of Canyon. Groomsmen were Mike Blanchard of Amarillo; Berry Phipps of Canyon, and Angel DeLaCruz, brother of the bride stationed with the Marines at Twentynine Palms, Calif.

The bride's cousin, Nicole Delgado of Lubbock, served as junior bridesmaid. Nathan Contreras of Canyon, nephew of the bride was junior groomsmen. Flower girl was Maribel Delgado of Lubbock, cousin of the bride. She carried a basket filled with baby blue rose petals and is the daughter of Cruz and Aurora Delgado of Lubbock. Ring bearer was David Joel Contreras, nephew of the bride. He is the son of David and Dalia Contreras of Canyon.

Music was provided by Lisa Galan of Amarillo.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's satin and imported lace traditional wedding gown. The gown was fashioned with a boat neckline scalloped with imported lace which also decorated the fitted bodice and long fitted sleeves. The full skirt, attached to a natural waistline, consisted of multi-tiers of bridal illusion accented by delicate rose lace appliques.

The 12-foot long veil of bridal illusion adorned by matching rose lace appliques, was attached to a picture hat. The veil was carried by Nahan Contreras, the bride's nephew, and Nicole Delgado, the bride's cousin.

The bride carried a cascading arrangement of white and blue roses made by Esperanza Garcia. The flowers were nestled on a lace base and enhanced by white and blue ribbon streamers featuring love knots. She wore a three-strand pearl necklace borrowed from her sister, Polia Contreras.

Bridal attendants wore knee-length gowns of baby blue oranza topped with baby blue rose-embroidered lace. They were styled with a V-shaped back and accented at the waistline with a bow. The attendants carried bouquets of white roses and baby blue rosebuds enhanced by baby blue and white ribbon.

A reception followed at the wedding site as Monica Arsola registered guests. Cake was served by Maria Rodriguez and Nancy Parter of Amarillo while punch and coffee was poured by Rosie Valdez. Others assisting were Rosa Correa and Brenda Fuentes, who served food.

The serving table was topped with a blue satin cloth which was covered by lace-looped, blue satin ribbon. The three-tiered white wedding cake was decorated with baby blue roses and a water fountain completed it.

Dressed in a two-piece suit given to her by her aunt, Oralia Romos of Mission, the bride left with the groom for a wedding trip to Clearington.

The couple will make their home in Phoenix.

A 1988 graduate of Canyon High School, the bride attended West Texas State University. She was employed by Wal-Mart in Canyon. She was duchess of Fiesta Patrias 1987 and participated on the television show "Discovery." She is a former vocalist for Carria Band and Savor Latino Band.

The word "laser" is an acronym for Light Amplification by Stimulated Emission of Radiation.

The bridegroom also graduated this year from Canyon High School. He is presently attending Phoenix Institute of Technology and is employed by Payless Cashways in Phoenix.

Other out-of-town relatives attending the wedding included Marrie Lacey of Amarillo and Mr. and Mrs. David Parter of Amarillo.

Conference to focus on home, church problems

Sometimes things tend to "come apart at the seams," as the expression goes. When that happens, conflicts arise and resources must be brought together to resolve them.

That's the focus of this year's Town and Country Church Conference at Texas A&M University Oct. 3-4.

"Bringing It Together When Everything in the Home, Church and Community Seems to Be Coming Apart" is the theme of the annual conference, which brings together clergy and lay church leaders in rural and small town ministries.

"A major part of this year's conference will be devoted to an open forum at which participants can talk about 'what is coming apart in our homes, churches and communities,'" said Dr. Dave Ruesink, program chairman. Ruesink is a sociologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Representatives of different agencies will be on hand to react to these concerns and to offer assistance as appropriate. Included will be representatives from the Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station as well as state departments of agriculture, commerce, health and human resources.

"Of special importance is to have these agency representatives on hand to react with ministers and church leaders and to do some networking related to problem solving and crisis management," Ruesink said.

Keynote speakers will talk about "putting the bits and pieces of our lives back together," as in the case of a quilt, which can be a thing of beauty created from scraps of clothing.

Among these will be Dr. Charles Arntzen, deputy chancellor and dean of agriculture at Texas A&M; Gary Farley, Southern Baptist Convention, Atlanta, Ga.; and Alfred Smith, Progressive National Baptist Convention, Oakland, Calif.

"Ministers often have a hand in pulling things back together, and some of their work in this effort will also be highlighted at the conference," Ruesink said. "Special recognition will be given to a number of such ministers, including the presentation of Minister of the Year Award."

Details about the annual conference are available from Ruesink, Special Service Building, Room 217, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843.

Oktoberfest set in Amarillo

Oktoberfest, the Alamo Catholic School fundraiser here will be from 6:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. Sat., Oct. 8 at the Amarillo Civic Center, downtown.

The evening of fun will include authentic German food, music and dancing. The menu will consist of Bratwurst, potato salad, dark bread, apple strudel, a variety of cheeses, and beverages.

There is advance ticket sales only, $20 per person. Tickets for children aged 7-12 are $13 per person. Tickets may be purchased at Alamo Catholic School, 1800 N. Spring, Amarillo; the Civic Center Box Office, and the Big Texan.

Tickets by mail may be ordered from Alamo Catholic School, P.O. Box 5684, Amarillo, Texas 79117. Additional ticket information may be obtained by calling 383-2241.

"We are planning to make Oktoberfest an annual affair and we encourage one and all to come out for an evening of fun and entertainment to help boost and support Alamo," said Meg Parsons, Alamo School Board member and one of the Oktoberfest coordinators.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Red Eye by Richard Allen is the story of twin brothers each being unaware of the other's existence.

One is a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and the other is a professional assassin. Journalist Paul Stafford has written a collection of dream-inspired murder stories only to learn from CIA operatives arriving at his office that these stories are factual recountings of real-life murders of American intelligence agents. Following an hypnosis session Stafford is convinced he is dreaming the real life experiences of his twin brother, Karl Alexander.

Karl, surviving a horribly deprived childhood, is conscripted by East German intelligence as their number-one assassin. Evading the CIA Stafford goes to Germany in search of his brother. Relying on his highly refined "sixth sense" Stafford finds Karl with unanticipated results. Ultimately Stafford realizes he is the one person capable of stopping Karl from making the U.S. appear to be the assassins of the Soviet General Secretary. This book comes highly recommended, so please don't let it slip by unnoticed.

Another book that many of you have been waiting for is Charn School by Nelson Demille, the author of Word of Honor. Deep within the Russian forest lies "The Charn School" operating without the knowledge of any foreign power.

One day a young American tourist lost on a dark Russian road, in his sleek Trans Am, spots a man in distress. The man turns out to be an American Air Force Colonel, POW, who has been missing in action for over a decade. The information passed on to the young American tourist must reach the U.S. authorities at all cost.

The young man calls the American embassy as soon as he arrives in Moscow, but by the time help arrives at his motel, he is nowhere to be found. According to the Russians, the young man never checked in. What follows is an explosive journey through the landscape of dangerous deception and illusion.

Another title I found intriguing was Winning With Kids: How to Negotiate With Your Baby Sully, Kid Tyrant, Loner, Saint Underdog or Winner So They Love Themselves and You, Too. Written by Tessa Albert Warschaw, Ph.D., and Victoria Secunda, the authors pooled their professional expertise to furnish the parent with tools needed for negotiation. Here is an approach to family communication and discipline that identifies the child's unique assets and liabilities, and the best way to deal with them. Here a parent is shown how to use negotiating skills to solve current problems, prevent future ones and to build stronger, more loving bridges between you and your child.

Other titles of interest are: Ministry of Greed: The Inside Story of the Televangelists and Their Holy Wars: by Larry Martz; Survivors an autobiography of Christina Crawford, the author of Mommie Dearest; Prelude to Foundations by Isaac Asimov; and Getting Up When Your Feeling Low by Harriet B. Braiker.

The U.S. Congress approved a declaration of war against Germany April 6, 1917.

Abundant Life

PLEASING OTHERS
 By Bob Wear

Some people are hard to please, and some are totally implacable; but most people can be pleased. We can do reasonably well in pleasing others, and this is good for them and for us.

This does not mean that we grovel before them, because this does not please others. Flattery is not recommended either because it is soon seen for what it is; and few people appreciate it.

Pleasing others does not require us to compromise any of our wisely conceived principles of life behavior. In fact, we will not make any real progress in pleasing others by compromising matters of right and wrong. Most people do not expect this, and are disappointed if it occurs. Those who do expect it are never going to be pleased, regardless of what we do.

We must understand others, if we wish to please them and this is the mature view. We may not understand everything about any one person, but we can understand most people well enough to relate ourselves to them and relate to them in the ways that will please them. This is not too much effort, and it does not mean that we lose anything. In fact, we will gain, because we will have been functioning at our best.

"If you wish to please people, you must begin by understanding them." Reade.

We can go too far in our efforts to please others, but there is not reason for doing this. We can know when we have reached the limit of justified effort. This is essential in maintaining our own self-respect, and in managing ourselves so others will respect us. Some people cannot be pleased. I have, however, known only one person who said, "I don't intend to be pleased."

Don't try too hard to please. To do so is being unfair to ourselves. If we try too hard to please we may arouse in others such feelings as suspicion, or contempt, or disgust. In the process of pleasing others, we must be sure to preserve our own integrity and our credibility.

Reasonable and sensible efforts to please others will add significant dimensions of maturity and well-being to our own life structure.

MR. AND MRS. G. WINTHON JONES

Wedding vows spoken by Hereford couple

During an intimate wedding ceremony, Carolyn Killough and G. Winthon Jones, both of Hereford, were married early Saturday afternoon in Kinsey Parlor of First Baptist Church.

The marriage was officiated by Dr. Ron Cook, pastor.

Mrs. Allen Doan served her sister as matron of honor and Kevin Lea, the groom's nephew, was best man.

Mrs. Jack Rogers played several piano selections during the ceremony.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white miniature carnations, white roses and baby's breath centered with a single red rose. The floral arrangement was accented with white lace, a royal blue bow and streamers.

Guests were invited to register at the reception held in Kinsey Parlor by Brandi Norvel of Farwell, Casey Martin, and Tana Sandlin of Lamesa.

Mrs. Russ Murph served the three-tiered wedding cake decorated with royal blue bells and topped with two wedding bells. Punch and coffee were poured by Mrs. Greg Hernandez and Kelly Wells.

The couple will make their home at 142 Ranger following a wedding trip to Utah and other points of interest.

The bride is employed at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce and the groom is employed at Poarch Brothers.

Wedding guests represented Lubbock, Lamesa, Amarillo, Littlefield, Tulia, College Station and Longview.

Former resident marries in Dallas

MRS. STANLEY SCOTT SIMMONS
...Kimberly Katherine Lawley

Former Hereford resident Stanley Scott Simmons of Houston, and Kimberley Katherine Lawley of Plano were united in marriage Saturday evening, Sept. 17, in Prestonwood Baptist Church in Dallas.

The ceremony was officiated by Dr. Bill Weber.

The bride, who was presented in marriage by her father, is the daughter of Bill and Gayle Lawley of Plano and the bridegroom is the son of former Hereford resident Stanley and Carrell Ann Simmons of Hickory Creek.

The bride's father, Karin Lawley, served as maid of honor and best man was the groom's father.

Serving as bridesmaids were Stacia Black Duggan, Janna Lummus, Cyndi Payne, Kell Manner and Ellen McKay. Groomsmen were Kelly Cassels, Paul Jorde, Don Ryan, Rodney Neumayer and Mike Logan.

Guests were escorted by Kelly O'Neal, Pat Schott, Robert Ray, Bobby Collins, Rick Hoover and Ernie Cochran. Candles were lit by Shannon Sealy and Kathie Kinsella. The bride's cousin, Ryane Frazee, was flower girl and ring bearer was the bride's brother, William Lawley II.

Musical selections were performed by Dr. Bill Hanson, Ansel Hatfield and David Payne.

Shelly Simmons, the groom's sister, served as registry table hostess.

Immediately following the wedding ceremony, a reception was held in Glen Eagles Country Club.

The bridal couple will make their home in Houston following a wedding trip to points of interest in California including San Francisco, Carmel and Monterey.

Both the bride and groom graduated from the University of North Texas and the groom is currently employed at Chrysler Credit Corporation in Houston.

Hereford wedding guests included Roland and Sandra Saul, Joan McPherson and Randy Laing.

"There should be no embarrassment whatsoever about asking about prices for a funeral service."

"When you're my age, you usually have had to make funeral arrangements for someone who is near and dear to you. And I can tell you it's never an easy thing to do.

"You have so many decisions to make... the funeral services are involved in some of them. And most of the time you really aren't prepared to make those decisions, especially if it's an unexpected loss. In fact it's best to have a pre-need plan before you require these services."

The personnel at Rix can arrange the kind of service that you feel you can afford either at time of need or by having a Pre-need Plan before the inevitable happens.

Give Rix your ideas in this instance, ask for a price list and an explanation of services, then stay within the budget you set by selecting the services you want.

Pre-planning takes much of the pressure off you at the time when death does come to a member of your family. Let our professional counselors give you the experience that comes with years of service.

For more information on Pre-need funeral plans call us or fill in the coupon printed below and we'll be glad to answer any questions you may have.

Please send me information about your Pre-need funeral plans. I think this might be the answer of how to arrange a memorial service which would be in keeping with my personal desires.

Amy Grant finds pop and gospel success

Amy Grant, best known of the singers whose music is termed pop gospel, recently was interviewed by two men on the same day. She says one told her that "Lead Me On," her new album, her 11th, is her biggest attempt at the pop market and the other told her it's the most gospel she has ever done.

So that both pop and gospel fans know about it, "Lead Me On" was released simultaneously by a religious label, Myrrh Records, part of Word Inc., and by A & M Records. She says, "As far as I know, I'm the only person signed to two record companies for a single project."

Also new in the life of Amy Grant and husband Gary Chapman, who plays bass, is son Matt, born Sept. 25, 1987. "Lead Me On" is dedicated to Matthew Garrison Chapman by "Momma."

Miss Grant doesn't find her album either more or less gospel in tone than her earlier LPs. "I guess for me it's the most complete expression of my life I've ever put on tape; that feels really comfortable. I think it's going to be an easy album to live with.

"It's the closest-to-the-bone experience I've ever had making a record. It was a really healthy experience for me."

One song she might mean is "Faithless Heart," which she co-wrote with Michael W. Smith. It's a "get-thee-behind-me Satan" song about a wife with straying thoughts.

"I co-wrote nine of the 12 songs. I almost always have help with the music, usually by people I know," she says. "Jimmy Webb sent a song, 'If These Walls Could Speak.' Janis Ian and Kye Fleming wrote 'What About the Love?' I know Kye from Nashville. It's not that I wouldn't accept a song from somebody I don't know, it's just, how do you connect?"

Instead of coming off stage while touring and writing a song for the next album, still full of energy from performing, Miss Grant prepared for "Lead Me On" at home. She says, "I think in the high-energy environment of touring, I have tended to write songs that were a little more high-energy.

"This album is a little more conversational and vulnerable. It isn't void of energy, it's just a different kind of energy. I think, without knowing it when I was writing it, it's probably the broadest thing I've ever done. I'm really crazy about these songs."

The album was recorded last September. She sang the scratch vocal on the title song the day before her son was born, was back recording three days later, with recording gear moved to the Chapmans' living room.

Her first album came out 10 years ago, when she was 17 and a senior in high school. "I sort of quietly made an album over the course of a year and it sort of quietly slipped out. During college years, I started singing and performing more. Once I got out of school, I was on the road. I never had that much time at home before."

After an 18-month tour for her last album, "Unguarded," ended in September 1986, the Chapmans went to a farm they'd bought near Nashville. "We wanted to start a family," Miss Grant says.

"I've always wanted to be a mother from the time I was a little girl. I had a miscarriage early on. Then I got pregnant with Matt. When I had Matt and even when I was carrying him before he was born, I just felt something settling down in me. I guess everybody goes through it. I think I anticipated it for so long and having miscarried before I had him, everything heightened the anticipation.

"You tend to want something more when you can't have it. There have been big blocks of my life where I've obligated myself 18 months in advance. I couldn't get pregnant in the middle of a tour.

"I'd love to have a girl after the next tour."

The next, 13-month tour will be through America, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and England. When it starts in September, the singer will have enjoyed two years at home. "I'm sort of a homebody," she says, "who likes to write and sing."

Asked how she and her husband met, Miss Grant explains that Chapman wrote a song, "Father's Eyes," that she recorded for her second album, "My Father's Eyes."

"At the album release party, someone introduced me to Gary. We struck up a friendship and wrote songs together for a couple of years and eventually fell in love. We got married six years ago — a long time ago."

Chapman has a new country album, "Everyday Man," on RCA Records.

While Miss Grant was making "Unguarded" in 1985, Word signed an agreement with A & M to advertise and distribute the album in the pop music market, while Word handled the gospel market. A & M also signed to distribute all of Miss Grant's past records. In 1987 she resigned with Word and personally signed with A & M.

As far as she knows, signing with a secular label hasn't lost her any contemporary gospel fans. She says, "If I were to judge from the letters I get, I would say it's half gospel and half pop (fans). Some people write, 'I don't necessarily buy into what you believe, but I like your music.'

"In October 1986, I did a duet with Peter Cetera on his album of a love song, 'The Next Time I Fall.' It went to No. 1 on contemporary hit radio. I would have thought that would have brought, if anything, a quiet murmur (from gospel fans). I felt a lot of support. I guess it was a comfortable enough transition that people knew I had not gone off the deep end. It sure was fun to do.

"I feel that what my audience demands of me is to be one person: Don't be something on a record that is compromising to whom I want to be in private."

'Sweet Hearts' has family theme

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer

Television sitcoms have always known about it. Presidential politicians recently embraced it. Now the movies are rediscovering the potent appeal of The Family.

"Sweet Hearts Dance" is the latest variation on the family theme, and it is an unexpected winner. No movie has so touched the heart since "Terms of Endearment."

Of course you might expect "Sweet Hearts Dance" to be impressive when you note that the writer is Ernest Thompson. His play and movie of "On Golden Pond" were exquisite depictions of the joys and sorrows of old age. Now he focuses on a younger generation of marrieds and about-to-be marrieds, contributing an equal portion of humanity and understanding.

Susan Sarandon and Don Johnson have been married long enough for boredom to set in. She tolerates his macho pastimes, he largely ignores her womanly longings. He is a builder, and their life in a Norman Rockwell New England town is comfortable, familiar and dull.

Johnson's best buddy has always been Jeff Daniels. He is a school principal, a bit dull but by no means dumb. A devout bachelor, he is attracted to the new teacher in town, Elizabeth Perkins, but is wary of commitment.

The story is told in seasons, each one framed like an oldtime calendar.

HEALTHY ADDITIONS TO YOUR FOOD
PREPARATION

You can multiply the health benefits of foods you prepare without spending one more minute in the kitchen.

It's as simple as adding three canisters to your countertop set—fill one with nonfat dry milk, one with whole-wheat flour and one with oatmeal. Then whenever you can, add them to foods to enhance nutritional value.

For example, mix nonfat milk into yogurt or a glass of skim milk for extra calcium. Or you can add a few tablespoons to biscuits, corn bread or pancake mix. Also, try reducing the amount of sugar in a baked goods recipe and add back that amount in dry milk powder for extra calcium, protein and riboflavin.

Substitute whole-wheat flour for half or more of the white flour you normally use in any dish. It will add fiber and more vitamins.

Oatmeal can go in many recipes, from muffins and cookies to meat loaf. It adds fiber and will help lower blood cholesterol.

Adding nutrition to your diet can be a matter of simply having the right ingredients easily available to use as you cook.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Bride-elect honored

A bridal shower feted Katie Rudder of Bedford, at a coffee Wednesday morning in the home of Mrs. Ed Barrett, 329 Barrett. The honoree and Bruce Dahlquist plan to exchange nuptials Oct. 1 in St.

Katie Rudder honored

Katie Rudder of Bedford, Oct. 1 bride-elect of Bruce Dahlquist, was honored with a bridal shower-coffee Wednesday morning in the home of Mrs. Ed Barrett, 329 Douglas. The bridal couple plans to exchange vows in St. Luke's Methodist Church in Lubbock.

Guests registered at a table accented by a large fall arrangement of multi-colored mums.

Refreshments included an assortment of breakfast rolls, fresh fruit tray, coffee and hot punch. The table was covered with an ecru crocheted cloth and centered with an ivy plant placed in a copper pot. Also, adorning the table were peach colored tapers in brass candelabra and peach napkins.

Hostesses included Millie Barrett, Dodi Brookhart and Leona Miller.

Program to be offered on mental illness Oct. 3

In conjunction with Mental Illness Awareness Week (Oct. 2-8), there will be a program entitled "Recognizing Severe Mental Illnesses." The program will be given by Mike Moon, MSW, CSW-ACP, Case Manager, with the Hereford Family Services Center. It will be offered in the Heritage Room (basement) of the Deaf Smith County Library on Monday, Oct. 3, at 7 p.m.

The program is free to the public. A twenty minute video, "When The Music Stops," will be part of Moon's presentation. Child care arrangements will not be provided. Moon can be contacted at 364-6111 for further information.

The Hereford Family Services Center is a member of the Deaf Smith County United Way.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When shopping in the grocery store I have noticed that hamburger has different labels. Some are labeled "lean," while others are labeled "ground chuck" or "ground round."

Will you please explain the difference to me? I'm trying to cut down our family's fat intake. — Vi Milton, Barrington, Ill.

Knowing what terms really mean will help you buy the best nutritional bargain for your family.

The package that is labeled "ground beef" or "hamburger" can have as much as 27 percent fat. It has the highest fat ratio, and that is why it's usually the least expensive. And, of course, it also has more calories and fat than the others.

The package that is labeled "ground chuck" can have as much as 20 percent fat. It has a slightly higher price and fewer calories than regular ground beef.

The package that is labeled "ground round" or "ground sirloin" can have as much as 15 percent fat. This is the leanest choice with the fewest calories and has a slightly higher price tag than the two mentioned above.

Celebrating 45th Anniversary

Florencio and Ramona Gonzales of 222 Ave. H celebrated their 45th Anniversary Saturday evening with a dinner hosted by their children. The couple exchanged vows on September 25, 1943 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

They reared 7 children: Jane Alvarez, Mary Gamboa, Debbie Gaitan and Florencio Gonzales Jr. all of Hereford and Bertha Hernandez, Betty Hernandez and Richard Gonzales of Duncanville. They also have 19 grandchildren and 4 great grandchildren.

In 1963, the nuclear-powered submarine USS Thresher failed to surface off Cape Cod, Mass. The disaster claimed 129 lives.

Have you wondered about the Catholic Faith? Are you interested in finding out about it? Come and see! Classes begin soon. Call St. Anthony's Rectory at 364-6150 for more information.

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION... A PROMISE I MADE TO MYSELF

The difference between a job and a career is a subtle one and yet it can make all of the difference in the world to people who depend on a project being completed professionally, knowledgeably, and right the first time! That is why any commitment I make to improve my own professional education is an important promise to me and to my clients.

I made the decision to earn the CIC (Certified Insurance Counselor) designation for three vital reasons. Firstly, I wanted to take an in-depth look at the entire insurance industry so that I could advise my clients about all of the risks to which they may be exposed. Secondly, I wanted to hear the most current and knowledgeable experts in America discussing current policies and relevant issues. Finally, I felt that the Society of Certified Insurance Counselors was right in its insistence that professional education is not something you do once and once only. The CIC designation is the only insurance designation that may not be used by anyone who has not met an annual continuing education requirement.

Being able to add the letters "CIC" to my signature was important enough to me that I attended five separate institutes concerned with Personal Lines, Commercial Property, Commercial Casualty, Life & Health, and Agency Management. I took a rigorous, written examination at each institute. After successfully completing all five institutes, I was awarded the designation. However, only with my pledge to continue to learn and grow am I allowed to retain the CIC designation.

While there are currently some 33,000 individuals participating in the CIC Program, there are only about 9,500 who have earned the CIC designation. All of them are uncommon individuals who speak a common language and share a common commitment to excellence multiplied by experience.

Marie Griffin, CIC
La Plata Agency

I am determined to provide my clients with the most current and relevant coverages available in the industry. I am proud to have made insurance my career.

THE CIC DESIGNATION... A PROMISE FULFILLED

MONDAY AND TUESDAY, Oct. 3rd and 4th
11:00 A.M. Sale time
Portales livestock Commission Company, Portales, N.M.
Expecting 2,000 Holstein Dairy Cows:
Heifers from 5 months bred to heavy springers will sell Monday. Open and short bred heifers sell Tuesday.
Early consignment for Monday sale: 50-1200 lb. heavy springer Holstein heifers; 33-1000 to 1300 lb. Holstein heavy springer heifers; 26-1000 to 1100 lb. Holstein heavy springer heifers; 40-1100 to 1250 lb. Holstein Heavy Springer Heifers; 29-1000 to 1300 lb. Holstein Heavy Springer heifers; 128-900 to 1300 lb. 5 months bred to heavy springers; expecting 600 springer heifers. Early consignments for Tuesday sale. 75-3 to 5 months bred-1000 lb. heifers; 215-750 to 900 lbs- exposed to bulls for 40 days; 165-700 to 800 lb. open heifers; 256-450 to 500 lb. open heifers; 268-150 to 450 open heifers; 43-500 lb. open heifers; 46-400 to 600 lb. open heifers; 224-190 to 400 lb. open heifers Consignments coming in daily. Remember cattle coming from Texas or most other states must be TB tested. We can have this done at the sales barn if they are here a full three days before the sale. We do appreciate your consignments. Mr. Wheat Farmer-have you considered running Holstein heifers on your wheat pasture? Presently, we feel there is greater profit potential in pasturing Holstein heifers than anything else. For example: Prices we are quoting are what we felt the market was at our auction in the last few dairy sales. Top quality 500 lb. heifers sold for 75 to 85 cents per lb. Top quality 800 lb. heifers sold from 77.50 to 82.50...very little roll back, if any; Top quality 800 lb. heifers at 80 cents equals $640; Top quality 1200 lb. springers sold at $950 to $1150 per head. No roll back and maybe some advance over 80 cents per lb. Smaller were sold at 300 lbs. bringing $95 to $110 per hundred or $310 per head. Sell at 600 lbs at 80 cents equals $480. Gain for growing 300 lbs. would be $170; We would like to remind you that there is a market for Holstein heifers, any size. We have two dairy sales every month. Please come to our sales, both Monday and Tuesday, October 3rd and 4th. For more information call 365-356-4740 ask for Dick Irwin or Tommy Bouldin

Heart disease can put you in a grave situation.

Heart disease, stroke and related disorders pose a very grave threat. In fact, they kill nearly as many Americans as all other causes combined. At the American Heart Association, we have some simple suggestions that could reduce your risk of cardiovascular disease. Don't smoke. Reduce the fat and cholesterol in your diet. And keep high blood pressure under control. To do otherwise could be a very grave mistake.
