

Legion Auxiliary Hears Mrs. Ott

"Community Service is a service rendered to make life more pleasant for the people who live in your community," Mrs. Ira Ott told members of the American Legion Auxiliary Tuesday night at a meeting in the Rock club in Veterans Park.

March is community service month for the Auxiliary and each member is being asked to perform some community service for this month.

Mrs. Hazel Sparks, vice president, was in charge of the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. C. A. Sauley. The group voted to send a letter of endorsement for Mrs. Kathryn Pitt to district convention. Mrs. Pitt is a candidate for department vice president 5th division. The 18th District convention will be held in Memphis April 12 and 13.

Vega will be host to members in Zone I Tuesday night, March 11. Dinner will be served beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Members present were Mesdames Hazel Sparks, Ella Kropff, Lurline Smith, Edna Smith, Alice Gilliland, Artie Frost, Pet Ott, Nellie Fay Gilliland, Florence Wilkins, and one visitor, Mrs. Charlie McGee from Vernon.

She spoke briefly on coordinating the interior with the architecture of the exterior and explained the importance of coordination of colors. She also showed samples of drapery and upholstery materials and distributed booklets on how to select furniture.

Members of the club attending the meeting were Mesdames Joe Story, Preston Hagans, C. R. Higgins, Don Martin, Ira Scott, Lloyd Sharp, Delmo Williams, Glenn Williams, Jim Wood, Don Steele and the hostess.

PROVES POINT

STERLING, Colo. (AP) — Sheriff Vernon Hastings Jr. was voted the best dog-caller in the Sterling Lions Club and wasted no time proving to the other members he deserved the honor. One by one, the members demonstrated their ability at calling dogs. When Hastings whistled, his dog appeared out of nowhere.

SMART GIRL

BELL ISLAND, N.D. (AP) — What might have been a serious fire in the St. Kevin's Boys School was averted by a passing nine-year-old girl. Isabelle Rossiter telephoned the fire department when she spotted smoke coming from a coal chute. Firemen found discarded Christmas trees on fire in the basement.

PLAN BACKFIRES

CHANDLER, Okla. (AP) — Frank B. Seaton, federal Alcohol Tax Unit agent, ran into an enterprising moonshiner who set up his operations in the middle of an island in Deep Fork River bottoms.

Seaton said the idea was that the moonshiner could spot ATU agents before they got to him. However, one thing went wrong. Agents got to the island while the moonshiner was gone and they easily spotted him when he returned.

New Brush-Killing Chemical Available

COLLEGE STATION — A new chemical is available that has proved its worth for controlling brush. It is fenuron, says G. O. Hoffman, extension range specialist.

Fenuron is made up similar to fertilizer pellets, says Hoffman. It can be used early in the growing season to control post oak, black-jack oak and winged elm growing on sandy soils.

Fenuron is applied in the pellet form and is dissolved by rain. It is taken up by the roots and kills the brush plants, he says.

The pellets are easy to apply and there is very little danger of their drifting onto susceptible crops, such as cotton and truck crops. Another advantage of the new chemical is that it can be applied before the trees leaf out. It takes rainfall to make it work. Too, it kills only post oak, blackjack oak, and winged elm growing on sandy soils.

But it also has its disadvantages, Hoffman points out. For example, it does not kill brush growing on clay soils and it does not kill all kinds of brush, such as greenbrier, haws, yaupon, gums, hickory and other hardwoods. Too, fenuron kills pine trees, therefore it can't be used as a chemical for timber stand improvement.

Make a Gay Toy Clown

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

EVERY YOUNGSTER loves to collect pillows, stuffed toys and dolls to decorate the bedroom. In fact, plenty of college girls still treasure the toys they loved as babies.

Since dolls with just the right personality are sometimes hard to find, local sewing center experts suggest you whip one up on your sewing machine. Here, for example, is an appealing clown, 14 inches tall and a perfect bedtime companion.

The toy clown is made from a standard pattern and requires only a half yard of white fabric for the body, three-eighths yard each of solid red and red and white fabric for his suit and one-eighth yard bright blue cotton for the ruffle around his neck. A magic blue transfer in the pattern envelope takes care of his face.

He may be stuffed with shredded foam rubber, or with cotton batting. Use scraps of black felt or plastic for his shoes and bits of yarn from the knitting bag for his pom pom button set, his hair and his shoe laces.

The embroidery on his face may be done with an automatic sewing machine. Simply dial a narrow satin stitch for his eyebrows and use the stitch of your choice to apply his red mouth.

The clown may be dressed to blend with the bedroom decor — in pink and white, for example, or yellow and green.

This same pattern envelope contains directions for the clown's older brother — a big fellow 27 inches tall, designed to be hung on a door to use as a laundry or pajama bag.

Tips on Springtime Painting

AP Newsfeatures

Springtime is refurbishing time for most homes. One way the man of the house can keep the little woman happy is to agree that a room needs a new coat of paint or that the furniture should be moved into new positions. It's a toss of the coin then to see who gets the job.

Women like to paint. The roller has made it less of a chore, and gayer colors have added inspiration.

But sometimes they buy the paint. And not having mastered their chemistry, they may be overwhelmed by such high-sounding lines as butadiene-styrene, oleoresins, alkyds, and polyvinyl acetates.

Here are pointers from experts to make it easy to select the paint that will do the job you want:

Consider paint on the basis of sheen or gloss and you have three types of paint: gloss, semi-gloss and flat.

Gloss paints, generally referred to as enamels, are most often used on woodwork likely to come in contact with hands and on kitchen and bathroom walls. They resist abrasion, are less likely to collect dirt and fingerprints, and repel moisture from entering the walls. Glosses are easiest to clean.

Flat paints are applied to walls and ceilings and are chosen where absorption is the number one consideration. These paints have greater covering power than glosses, do not glare and conceal surface irregularities, rush marks and scratches. They do mark and show fingerprints.

Semi-gloss paints have some advantages of the other two types. Gloss and semi-gloss paints are thinned with turpentine or mineral spirits. Newer paints have an odorless solvent.

Flat paints are solvent-thinned or wanter - thinned. Water - thinned paints such as calcimine and casein paints are familiar, but newer ones were developed within the past 10 years. They are described as latex paints. Some manufacturers call latex paints rubberized, plastic, butadiene-styrene, vinyl or polyvinyl-acetate or acrylic.

Latex paints dry quickly, are odorless and the rush or roller may be cleaned in warm water. Dripings must be cleaned off immediately. These paints are good where damp walls or new plaster must be painted and where fast drying is desired. Most latex paints are meant for interior use only. Check the label.

Solvent-thinned flat paints are superior to latexes in covering power, washability, water spotting and resistance to scrubbing, the experts advise.

The newest developments are gelled paints, self-spraying paints, multi-color paints, and rubber-based paints. Gels are made with a vehicle which stays solid in can or tube and is of the consistency of aspic on the brush. They liquify under pressure of brush or roller against the surface being painted. The chief advantages are that gels won't drip and won't spill if the can is overturned. They give a smooth, lap free coating. They're splendid for use on ceilings.

LONDON, Ont. (AP) — Stumped by the problem of stump removal, London Public Utilities Commission is trying a new approach. It is studying use of a vertical saw which cuts a stump into kindling without any need of digging into the earth.

"Smart Clothes for Smart Women"

Hereford's Museum in a Living Room

By BOB HAMILTON

THE GENERAL PUBLIC is well aware that the Indian race is truly "vanishing American," but little thought is given to the fact that the Indian culture is vanishing even faster.

As the western frontier continually goes under the plow blade and areas where agriculture is not practical succumb to erosion, Indian culture vanishes each year and only the few relic collectors and museums have the original remains of the Americas original inhabitants.

One of the most complete collections of Indian relics in this part of the country can be found in a living room right here in Hereford. No where in the room can one look without seeing history.

The house at 104 West 6th truly has a museumed living room the likes of which cannot be found, probably, anywhere else in the world.

JOE GREEN, one of Hereford's pioneers, and his family moved here in 1901, lives in the house along with his youngest sister, Nettie Lee.

Joe and Harry Lomas have been collecting Indian relics together since about 1931, when Harry married Joe's sister.

Joe, whose remaining hair is speckled with grey and black, has been a substitute rural mail carrier in Deaf Smith since 1930. It, along with his Social Security and sales of cut and polished stone jewelry, are his only income — and he is as happy as any man could be in any other circumstance.

Should Joe want to, and could find the right party, he could very possibly sell his collection for anywhere between $20,000 to $40,000. You couldn't actually set a value to the collection, Joe honestly says. "When you consider all the thousands of miles we have traveled to ruin sites, the expenses, tires, gasoline and all over the years, well, you just couldn't set a price to get the money back."

And he's right. Taking into consideration daily, weekly, monthly and annual trips ranging from just around here in the county to all the way to Arizona, a lot of miles have been covered since about 1900. But, a man will do a lot with a hobby, just like a hunter or fisherman.

When asked how he happened to get started collecting Indian relics, Joe replied, "I found three points in my dad's staple bucket one-day and asked my mother if I could have them and she gave them to me. I was about eight years old then and I've been collecting them ever since."

From those three points, they were arrow heads, Joe's collection now stands well over 2,000, and he says he has traded off more than that through the years.

JOE EXPLAINS this area is one

Mrs. J. B. Wigginton, 110 Kibbe. Patients Dismissed Mrs. Marie Perkins, 3-6; C. R. Smith, 3-7; David Downey, 3-6; Roger, 3-6; Billy Frank Wall, 3-7; Dusty Dobbs, 3-7; Dennis Sargent, 3-7; Mrs. Jesus Castaneda, 3-6; Mary Castaneda, 3-6.

of the best places in the world, or was, for hunting arrow heads because it had a plentiful supply of wild life for hunting by the Indians in the centuries before the white man came.

"We lived out on the prairie when we came here," said Joe, "didn't have anything to do, found where they (the old Indian encampments) were, walked for miles and miles to different camps and collected them. They were laying on the top of the ground then."

Joe and his brother James started collecting together, until the latter moved away from home in 1910.

Most of the flint used for points came from around Borger. The Indians would mine it who lived in that area, then trade with other tribes for food and other goods.

"Lots of people lived here for 15,000 to 20,000 years," says Joe. "Some of the points are that old."

It didn't take Joe long to discover the secret of finding an old Indian camp ground. "You will notice," he explains, "on the south side of every old lake in this part of the country there is a slight bluff. That's where the Indians camped. The bluffs were made centuries ago when the winds used to come from the northwest, building the bluffs where they are. The Indians liked the location for some reason or another. You can still find remains of them, if you look carefully enough."

He has two points which were dug from the bottom of a lake between Clovis and Portales a few years ago which are estimated by authorities to be between 18,000 and 19,000 years old. They are called "Clovis Points."

"They were found in the bottom of an ancient lake which was the watering hole for buffalo, elephant, camel, tiny horses and other animals."

WHEN ENTERING Joe's private (but not so small) museum, one's eyes are immediately drawn to the full north wall devoted to stone points set in frames along the upper parts and a regular display case on the lower.

On the west wall are a case and shelves containing some of his polished stones in bracelets and necklaces, pottery and several books.

The south wall has an old fashion glass case of relics ranging in age from 100 to 300 years. There is also a gun rack with four old rifles and samples of four or five types of the first barbed wire ever made.

All around the walls, just below the ceiling, are pictures of Indians painted by the famous Santa Fe artist C. M. Couese. The pictures are all but nine of the 37 Santa Fe Railway calendars. "If I had the other nine, I could have me a new car on a trade," said Joe.

Not all of Joe's collection is strictly Indian stone points, hammer heads, knives, scrapers, grinders, axes, pipes, beads, etc.

One of his prize possessions is a Stone Age axe head brought to Joe from Europe. The two types of axe heads, American and European, differ in both stone and style. The European head has a hole bored through the center for the handle, "making it very fragile," Joe says. The American type has grooves on the sides, where a split handle is laced, and is more durable.

A METAL SPEAR point was found south of here by a friend of Joe's and given to him. The 17-inch point has inscribed on it "FOR MY REY," which is Spanish for "For My King." It is believed the point belonged to one of Coronado's soldiers and was lost while crossing the plains in this area long before Texas was ever thought of.

He has a collection of bells, animal and school teacher, guns, shell molds, old shells found where Indian battles had been fought with white men, several various denominations and aged paper money, one of which is a $50 Texas bill printed in Houston, and another $1 bill with Government of Trinidad and Tobacco printed on it.

One very interesting article in his glass case along the south wall is a pair of bifocal glasses. They are some of the first type ever made, with two separate lenses encased in a tiny pair of metal rims.

In his front window is a collection of glass articles, ink wells and the sort, which are older than 40 years. The clear glass changes its appearance into a purplish hue.

Joe has almost all of his Indian relics cataloged. He knows the history, when and where he found almost each. Such as one point he spoke of during the interview which he found in Charley Sowell's chicken yard just outside town. It was stuck in the jaw of a human skull, and the only one he ever found actually sticking in a human bone.

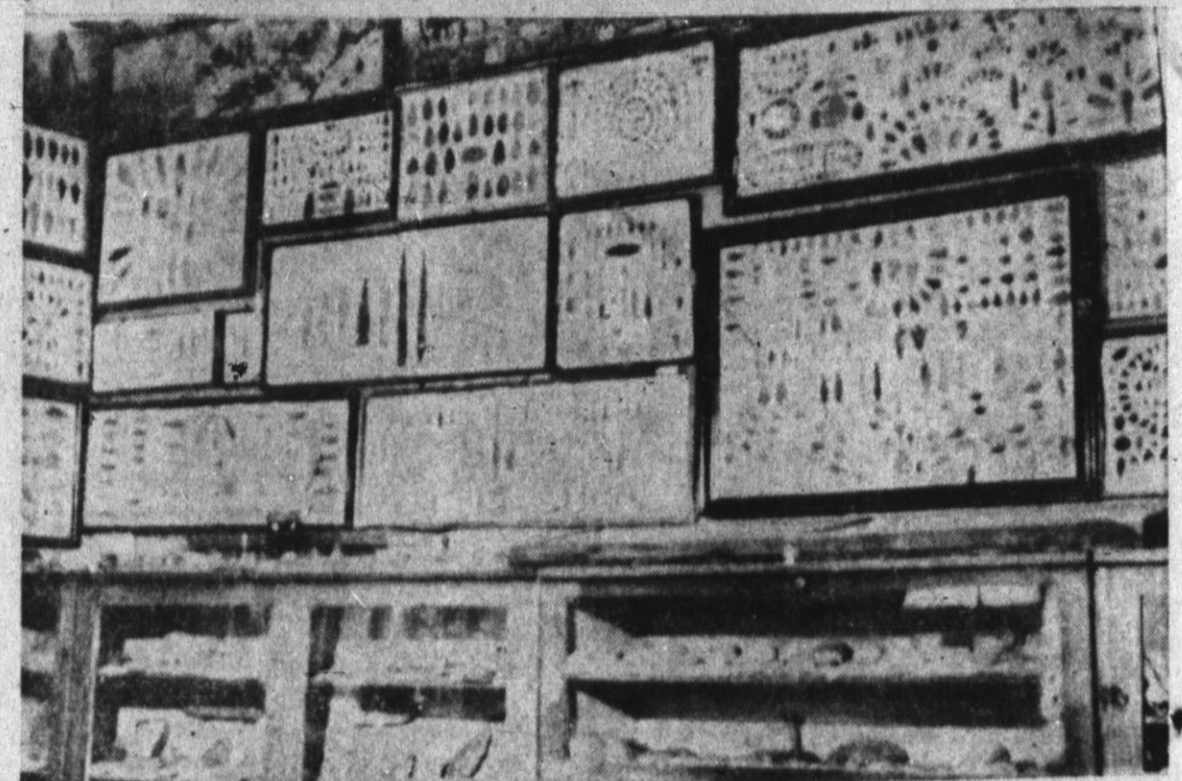

ANOTHER HOBBY of the collector's is stone cutting and polishing. Naturally, while looking for Indian remains, Joe finds many beautiful stones and fossils. He picks them up, stores them at home, and one day gets them out and starts to work.

He first started working with stones about 1935. "My first attempt to cut rocks was with an emery stone wheel, but the wheel wore out before the stone did, and I had to wait for a few more years until I could locate a good outfit from a company that delt in that sort of thing."

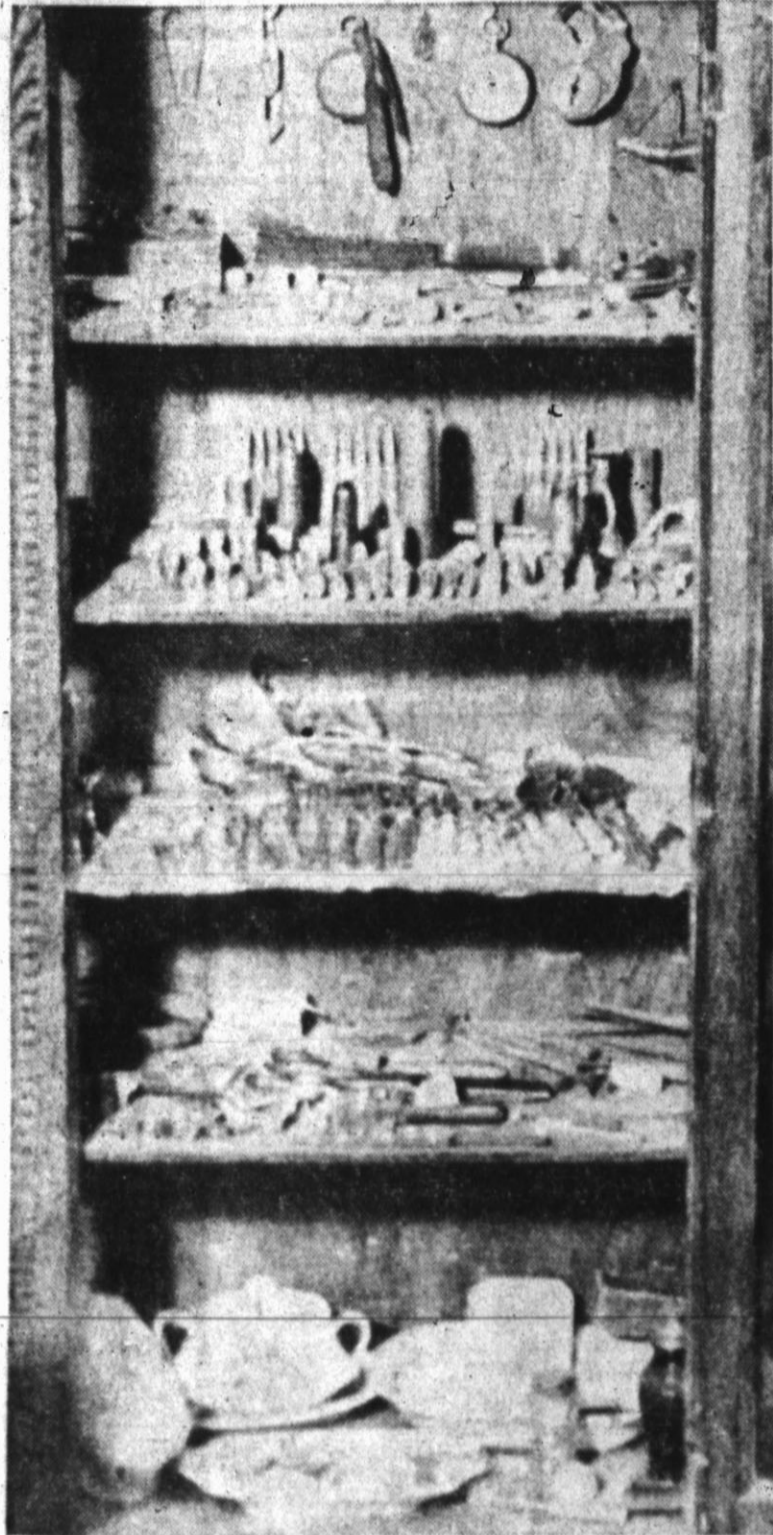

Joe has in the center of his show room a glass-top table which he uses for part of his polished stone display. He sells very little of his hobby results, but only because very few people know of its existance and beauty.

Others besides Harry have helped Joe on his hunting excursions: R. T. and B. R., his brothers, R. T.'s son James, Bill Hacker, nephew, Dennis Lomas, and George Millard.

Millard and Jim Cox, both of Hereford, have good collections. Millard has been a bug of the hob-

FROM THE PAST—Relics displayed here range all the way from China to a one-pound bullet from the Spanish-American War. Mrs. Lawrence Reis said the money, her husband's entire weekly pay, was not missed until the driver returned it.

Bay View Club Has Program on Russian Culture

The second of two programs on "Russia" was presented at the Bay View Study Club meeting held in the home of Mrs. Howard Gault Thursday afternoon.

Built around the quotation from Tolstoi, "Art is a human activity having for its purpose the transmission to others of the highest and best feelings to which men have risen." Thursday's program dealt with fine arts in Russia with Mrs. Eugene Naugle dealing mainly with the art of painting in Russia.

She traced the development of painting from the time when Russia was a group of loosely federated states, through the Byzantine painters to a true Russian style evolved from that of other countries.

She told of Russian architecture and sculpture and then of a new form of art developed after Peter the Great accepted western influence, called Realism, and how artists preached communism through their works. "In later years a few of the modern painters have opened a new field largely unknown, showing an artistic consciousness developed by the individual," she concluded.

Mrs. Francis Hardwick told of "Music of Russia" describing how the Russian ballet came into being stressing the use of tunics and draperies. Then the ballet died away and was little known until 1909 when the Russian ballet was taken to France and Anna Pavlova danced her way through Paris and London. Then in 1919 the ballet came to a standstill and has only recently been revived with a new star.

She told how the folk music was traced to pagan times depicting savage strength, or profound melancholy, and outlined the development.

Friendship Night Is Observed by La Plata Members

The sentiment of friendship — that fine feeling of good-will among club members — was emphasized in the La Plata Study Club annual Friendship Night program held in the home of Mrs. Urlin Streu Tuesday night.

It was a time for pause to remember each other in a dozen little ways and for the presentation of gifts each member had made for another.

Mrs. J. R. Johnson directed the program, introducing Urlin Streu who gave a sketch of the "Progress of Recorded Sound" from the time Edison tested out his phonograph by singing "Mary Had a Little Lamb." He demonstrated a 1929 record player explaining how sound was produced, which resulted satisfactorily loud but left nothing else to be treasured.

In comparison, he presented music played on one of the latest hi-fi models, explaining today's high-fidelity music system which in many instances has been found a satisfactory substitute for concerts.

A delightfully arranged course of salads and coffee was served with a friendly talk-fest providing further diversion.

Members present were Mesdames M. C. Adams, F. L. Alexander, Lenoy Aven, N. D. Bartlett Jr., Chris Clark, Clint Formby, J. R. Johnson, Don Little, Ansel McDowell, Elmer Patterson, Frank Prowell, A. J. Schroeter, T. E. Selgier Jr., Raymond White, Liston Wilson, Louis Woodford, and the hostess.

Mrs. Will S. Kerr gave the yearbook of prayer.

A "Texas Day" program was presented by Mesdames Emmett Hale and B. A. Reddell.

Mrs. Hale gave a brief history of the growth and development of Texas industries and natural resources leading up to the present educational system and government policies.

Mrs. Reddell told of her trip through the Big Ben country last summer showing films of that section of Texas. She also showed films of a trip through the northwest, pointing out comparisons between the two sections of the United States.

Members attending the meeting were Mesdames C. E. Beauford, Gordon Elliott, Altus Higgins, A. N. Hopson, Joe Johnson, Jim Loving, B. A. Reddell, G. D. Caison and the hostess.

Hereford At The Houston Fat Stock Show

The Sunday Brand

Hereford, Texas
Sunday, March 9, 1958

NO PRIZE WINNERS, BUT—

Boys Compete in State's Largest Fat Stock Event

Three Hereford youths competed in the Houston Fat Stock Show, Feb. 19-Mar. 2. Two, Wayne Bomar and Wayne Johnson, were representing the Hereford High FFA organization and the third, Jerys Rowland, was a member of the Abilene Christian College Junior livestock judging team.

Bomar entered his middle-weight junior show calf and Johnson had five commercial calves. The two high school students were accompanied by instructor Jess Robinson and Johnson's brother Bill, who drove the truck and took all the pictures on this page with the exception of the ACC team, which was taken by an Abilene Reporter News staff photographer.

Johnson's steers sold for 26 and 28 cents a pound. They were purchased by the Dixon Packing Co. of Houston.

BOMAR PLACED 40th in a field of well over 150 entries. Judging was not held strictly to the animals in his category, however, with records being taken into consideration.

Grand champion of the show sold for more than $10,000, which was some $4,000 higher than the Ft. Worth Fat Stock Show, denoting the class of competition the local youths were in.

The ACC junior livestock judging team placed second in the contest. Rowland, animal husbandry major, led the way for the group as he scored 643 points out of a possible 700 to become the high individual of the contest.

Bob Bradley, Dimmitt, followed with 637 points.

The team placed second to Louisiana State University by only 23 points. Eighteen teams were entered in the junior classification. Rowland placed third high in swine judging, fourth in beef cattle and fifth in sheep. Bradley was high man in swine judging.

THE HEREFORD HIGH 1957 graduate, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Rowland, 811 Lee St., placed 10th at Ft. Worth in February. He is a member of the Aggie Club and Rodeo Club.

Bomar is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Bomar, Rt. 1, Friona, and the Johnson boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Johnson, Westway.

Better Methods Needed For Cover Crop Planting

By MAX SCHRADER

The need for better methods in the planting of cover crops has become quite apparent in recent months. This past year has seen an unusually large number of cover crops fail. The reasons for these failures are many but the most is perhaps that due to the late planting and growth. The other reasons, for failing to get a good cover crop in which to seed grass this spring, are due to various other factors related to the matter of close planting.

Delayed farming on the Great Plains has always been a hit and miss proposition. Much of this land is certainly good cropland and is best used as such. There are certain types that are also best suited for planting to grass. It has long been recognized and advocated that a program be developed to return the unstable land to grass. Under grassland management this land would provide the economic return it has failed to do under cultivation.

The Conservation Reserve program provides the answer to the problem that has been a chronic one for years. The possible effect of a long-range program was that of reducing the inherent damage due to wind erosion and put back into yearly production land that produced only occasionally.

At the very best, using proven methods, the seeding of grass is a ticklish proposition involving the unknown quality of our weather. The methods used have to be the ones that have proven successful the greatest number of times. None of them will be successful every year on the Great Plains. The better the safeguards used by those planting grass the greater the chance for success. Good measures to begin with will do much to offset adverse weather conditions. This past year has provided many good lessons in the art of providing cover for a grass seeding operation. It has shown a need for controlling several details that were previously thought not too important.

A good cover crop must be one that is given time to develop. In other words one that is planted early enough to develop to maturity. One of the lessons involved planting so late that a hardy stalk is not able to develop. We all realize that much of the leaves will disintegrate and be of little value unless the surface of the stalk remains to keep the wind away from the surface of the soil. The stalk is the mainstay of a cover crop. It must be allowed to fully develop. Planting late in the summer will often develop what appears to be an adequate cover. Close examination will show the stalks to be fragile and easily broken or loosened. Early planting will involve moving the cover to prevent maturing of the seed. Planting late isn't any insurance against seed development. This depends a great deal on the weather and length of season. This past year has shown that it isn't worth taking a chance on late planting and then failing to get a cover. Planting early, as you would other grain sorghums, will give the best long-time results. This puts us in the best-moisture and growing period.

Another factor that has influenced the number of failures is the use of regular width rows. Many plantings made last summer would have been adequate had the crop been close-drilled. The type of cover planted will also make a difference. Crops that are capable of producing large amounts of forage are best. Among these are cane, hog and sudan. Grain sorghums can be used but are not as satisfactory. Millet has proven too fragile and light to remain in good shape during an average winter. Any deviation from accepted methods injects an unknown factor into something that is already risky. Planting at any time other than June appears to be very risky and will certainly influence the kind of stand developed. It also means the loss of the best-rainfall months.

A good cover crop is just good insurance. This cover helps make possible the best use of our moisture by retarding both run-off and evaporation. It also checks the development of weeds.

Grass is a perennial plant and by nature is much slower in developing. Competition from weeds and from crops where the seed is allowed to mature makes the establishment more difficult. Once established, grass seedlings are normally able to take care of themselves in competition with weeds, but not both weeds and growing crops. The annuals are bound to be up and growing before a grass seedling even gets started. Grass seed has to be planted shallow. Moisture taken by competitive plants will leave the grass seedling stranded in the dry crust of the soil as the moisture is being drawn from below them. The seedling is then a set up for killing by even a short dry period.

If we are to get the desired conversion of cropland to grass that this program provides for we must use the best possible methods. Anything short of these will make for lost time and lessen the over effect of the program.

Farmers Warned On Leptospirosis

COLLEGE STATION — A livestock loss of 100 million dollars a year is now caused by leptospirosis — a disease which causes cattle and swine to lose their unborn calves or pigs.

With the early baby pig season in full swing, farmers should be especially cautious with regard to this disease, warns C. M. Patterson, extension veterinarian. In swine, when the infection strikes during mid-pregnancy, it usually causes loss of pigs, or the birth of weak ones, he adds.

Hogs can also become hidden carriers of the disease, says the veterinarian. This poses a continuing threat, especially where hogs and cattle come in contact. Swine can be carriers of the disease for as long as a year, but a veterinarian can vaccinate against this condition. This method is widely used in many areas, he says.

Leptospirosis may also be spread through drinking water that is contaminated by waste material from infected animals, cautions Patterson.

A good safety measure against the disease is to quarantine all newly-purchased hogs and have them blood-tested before allowing them to run with the herd, he advises. If the tests show that leptospirosis is present, the proper treatment and precautions can be used to prevent its spread to the original of the herd.

"Remember, an ounce of prevention is often worth a pound of cure," concluded Patterson.

Woman Runs Van Freight Agency

VAN, Tex. (AP) — Strangers to Van get quite a jolt when they first meet the railroad freight agent. Instead of a man as burly as the locomotives that rumble through here, the agent is blue-eyed Pauline Barton.

Freight agenting is old hat for Mrs. Barton because she has been meeting switch engines and filing reports for seven years.

And not only has she become an old hand at railroad work, she has also been around the tracks long enough to see some mighty important changes.

"Since I've been agent here I've seen the railroads switch from 'smokers' (oil-burning locomotives) to diesels."

But just what prompted the blue-eyed, 30-year-old mother of two boys to enter railroad agenting, universally considered a "man's" job?

"Necessity, I guess," the attractive 5-foot, 7-inch tall Mrs. Barton remarked. "I was a Western Union operator before I got married. 'After I had two boys and was widowed, I had to go back to work.' She has since married Forrest Barton.

She found that the telegraph office had been moved to the train station and an operator was needed. Because she was already trained, she was readily hired.

"The freight agent's job came open here at Van, I applied and got it," she said. The job, however, is more than just freight agenting.

It is a one person job that includes station master, switch master, clerk and janitor.

"At first people were amazed at the idea of a woman being a freight agent," she laughed. "Now they're used to me."

But no less unusual than her being freight agent is the railroad for which she works — The Texas Short Line Railway Co.; a 21.48 mile long road now in its 50th year of operation.

Built in 1901 to haul coal from lignite mines near Alba, Texas, to the salt works at Grand Saline, the line originally had 13 miles of trackage.

During March of 1929 the line, now owned by Texas and Pacific, was extended to Van to meet cotton shipping demands and East Texas oil boom business.

But that was then. Now, Grand Saline salt is still the principal income for the line. However, the Van station continues to pay its own way with some 60 to 80

Royal Welcome Is Given to Hopsons

IT'S: HER POINT OF VIEW

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In the absence of Betty Babione, the regular Point of View, two of her female-type friends are sitting in this week.)

By GERTIE AND WINNIE.

WE HAVE decided that we are going to move away from Hereford. Oh not that we don't like the place, cause it is just wonderful.

but the parties given in your honor when you leave and the reception you get once you return for a visit makes moving very enticing. It doesn't matter whether you live here 6 months or 60 years, you're always greeted royally upon your return. We have always said that Hereford is the most social little city in the Panhandle.

This was most evident last week when the V. C. Hopsons, former Hereford residents now residing in Colorado Springs, Colo., returned here for a visit. Various forms of entertainment kept them hopping the short time they were here such as coffee, bowling, and bridge parties.

Finally came the time for them to leave and go to Portales and visit Dorothy's uncle and aunt the D. C. Kinsons, more former Hereford residents. Margaret and Stan Sieman and Sam and Wanda West could hardly stand to see them leave, so just escorted them to Clovis and all had Mexican food. What a sendoff. Just as much entertainment was in store for Jim and Wilma White last week when they returned to their new home in Boron such as coffee luncheons, hanky showers, and then the big send off Saturday night in the White's vacant house, hosted by members of the Beta Sigma Phi and Hereford Riders Club. Oh I guess we'll just camp here a while longer even though you do get the red carpet rolled out when you leave or return.

THIS DAMP weather may have been a boost for some of the farm sales. The farmers can't stay too busy in the fields and they can't or won't just stay at home. One farmer called another the other day and said "Where's the farm sale tomorrow?" It's a vicious circle every time our husbands return home from a sale, they have anywhere from a bucket-load of bolts, screws, grease-guns, horse collars to a truck loaded with chicken brooders and floats. Some men just can't resist a sale as a result the next sale will probably be theirs due to oversupply.

HAVE YOU tried lately to get an appointment to get your hair out, bleached, dyed, or just a plain shampoo and set? It sure should be difficult as there has been so many brunettes to blondes, Chignons to hair lines. We would be the last to deny that a new hairdo can change one's appearance, but Nadine Blanton's must have been a doozy, for sister Virginia Winget failed to recognize her down town last week.

Nicky Dameron's new silver streak is very becoming and who knows that may be why she had such a wonderful time at the recent D. A. R. convention. Speaking of streaks have you seen Gladys Cavness and Lorraine Jones they are equally beaming on them. Helen Rose was blonde one week, we heard it was very pretty, next week back to normal. What color is it this week Helen?

Usually one step at a time, but Mary Francis Lemons didn't only go from a new hair to a short hair, she also had a style and head also. Haven't seen Wilma Hill's new blonde tresses yet, but hear that it made quite a change. With her fair complexion and blue eyes, she sure looks like a blonde. We for two think that a new hairdo holds someone and are predicting there will be a lot more.
