Concentrating on computers

Judy Wall, standing, helps a student with a problem as other students consider questions on computers at the Access Learning Center at Hereford Junior High School. The program is provided by the Hereford public schools to help adults learn to help better their lives.

Computers help 'hungry' students

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The students at the Access Learning Center at Hereford Junior High School are atypical of the "student" you think of when you talk about a junior high. Walk into the Access Learning Center, and you see young adults grappling with problems in reading, spelling, vocabulary and math. The 10 students working with computers on Wednesday afternoon were young adults. None of them had a high school diploma. Most were working toward getting a general equivalency diploma. Some lacked only a semester or year of getting their high school diploma, but quit school for various reasons.

Others have a third, fourth or fifth grade education. Or less. One student, 31 years old, never went further than the third grade. Her parents sent her to Texas from Mexico to live here with other family members with whom she worked year-round. She tired of that life and married when she was 13. She's married again since, and has realized she needs an education. "These students are hungrier than 'regular' school students," said Judy Wall, who, with Micah Noland, supervises the nightly courses. "These students have been out in the world and have come back to school because they have found they need more education." (See COMPUTERS, Page 8A)

Months of work pays off for Love, 'Risen to Reign'

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

This Easter, many churches across the country will be performing special productions focusing on Christ's crucifixion and resurrection, but the one being performed this weekend by the Church of the Nazarene in Hereford has a little different bent. While it celebrates the resurrection, it also focuses on many of the people Jesus encountered during his final days and after His resurrection. It was also written by the church's music director, Jeff Love, and will soon be published for nationwide distribution. The project includes 13 songs with which Love toiled for over a year to come up with a semi-finished product. "I would start with ideas and just worked on them for months," Love said. "I decided to write it about a year and a half ago. I had a trip to Nashville planned, so I had to work with it 24 hours a day for a few days to get it finished." He was going to talk to Frank House Publishing, and had tried to get together with David Mattox, one of the "hottest" arrangers in Christian music, to work on the project. "I had called and tried to get together with him, but we couldn't get together," Love said. "Then I went to the publisher's office and he was on the phone with David. I finally got together with him. "If it weren't for David, it wouldn't be published. No, it would have been published, but I would have been putting money into it. I think the Lord ordained it, or it wouldn't have come together like this." Love has been writing musicals like this since he was a teenager, "but I'd just keep getting those little rejection notices from them. This has really been a lifetime project." Some of the songs are a little different. "One of the unique ones is the children's song, 'Born In A Manger.' It's a 'reggae' song," Love said. Another song, "Centurions Cry," is about the centurion who crucified Christ. He realized at the end that he crucified God's son, Love said. Love didn't do all of the writing. "We were going through McDonald's and my wife was listening to one of them, and she said it was boring. So I told her to change it, and she's the co-writer on the song." Many of the songs were developed in the car. "when I'm in my car I'm alone and don't have a lot of distractions," Love said. "Then I'd (See RISEN, Page 2A)

Abe Martin's Circus

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

It's not often that a childhood dream outlives its dreamer. Back in the 1930s, Abe Martin created an exception to that norm.

Today, nearly 60 years after it was begun, the miniature circus which he built from scraps of wood, cloth and human hair, is a living dream. All who visit Abe Martin's circus on permanent display in the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum can experience his childhood fascination with the excitement and color of the circus.

As a young man, Martin began construction of his circus. It continued to be a source of pleasure for him until his death in 1978. The circus was placed on permanent display at the museum in 1985.

Although its creator is gone, the circus continues to be a source of pleasure. "He had something going all the time... fun things," said Lonidene Edmonson of Abe Martin, her father.

Each year Edmonson, a teacher at Tierra Blanca School, takes members of her second grade class to view the circus. The wooden animals, people, props and wagons which she once enjoyed as a child continue to entertain a young audience.

Despite its small size, the circus retains the larger than life feel of a real circus. The care and attention to detail make it easy to imagine Martin as a child, working at odd jobs to earn admission to the circus.

Miniature, hand-carved circus still drawing crowd

Wagon of laughs

A cart load of clowns is only a small part of Abe Martin's circus on permanent display at the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum.

His fascination continued after he grew to adulthood and became a father himself.

"Even when I was little, he'd get up early to watch the circus unload," Mrs. Edmonson said.

Martin was one of Hereford's pioneer barbers. He established the original City Barber Shop in 1922 when Hereford's population was only 1,500.

When the Depression arrived, Martin had time on his hands. During a period when money was tight, a hair cut was a service which could be provided at home, for free.

Not one to be daunted by a lack of money in providing his own entertainment, Martin began carving a circus. Using scraps from orange crates with the slats of wood nailed together three deep, he carved and built. For nine years he worked at recreating the show world which had intrigued him as a child. His wife, the late Alma Martin, helped him make costumes for the figures.

Martin's project was not an expensive hobby. The total cost of the circus and a Marionette show he also created was estimated at $10. He used scraps of rejected bits including human hair gleaned from his barber shop floor.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Easter Sunday, March 26, the 85th day of 1989. There are 280 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 26, 1982, groundbreaking ceremonies took place in Washington D.C., for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, two 200-foot black granite walls bearing the names of Americans killed or missing in the war.

On this date:

In 1804, the Louisiana Purchase was divided into the Territory of Orleans and the District of Louisiana.

In 1827, composer Ludwig van Beethoven died in Vienna.

In 1875, poet Robert Frost was born in San Francisco.

In 1885, the Eastman Dry Plate and Film Company of Rochester, N.Y., manufactured the first commercial motion picture film.

In 1892, poet Walt Whitman died in Camden, N.J.

In 1911, playwright Tennessee Williams was born in Columbus, Miss.

In 1937, a 6-foot concrete statue of the cartoon character "Popeye" was unveiled during the Second Annual Spinach Festival in Crystal City, Texas.

In 1958, the U.S. Army launched America's third successful satellite, "Explorer Three."

In 1962, the U.S. Supreme Court gave federal courts the power to order reapportionment of seats in a state legislature, a decision that eventually led to the "one man, one vote" doctrine.

In 1971, East Pakistan proclaimed its independence, taking the name Bangladesh.

In 1987, Jessica Hahn, who admitted to a sexual encounter with former PTL head Jim Bakker, told reporters she had not tried to blackmail Bakker, and expressed concern about "innocent bystanders who have been hurt."

Ten years ago: The Camp David peace treaty was signed by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat during a White House ceremony, with President Jimmy Carter signing as a witness.

Five years ago: The four men convicted in connection with the Big Dan's barroom rape case in New Bedford, Mass., received prison sentences of up to 12 years.

One year ago: Jesse Jackson stunned fellow Democrats by soundly defeating Michael S. Dukakis in Michigan's Democratic presidential caucuses.

Today's Birthdays: Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland is 75. Comedian Bob Elliott is 66. Conductor Pierre Boulez is 64. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor is 59. Actor-director Leonard Nimoy is 58. Actor Alan Arkin is 55. Actor James Caan is 49. Author Erica Jong is 47. Journalist Bob Woodward is 46. Singer Diana Ross is 45. Rock singer Steve Tyler is 41. Actress Vicki Lawrence Shultz is 40. Singer Teddy Pendergrass is 39.

Thought for Today: "The great Easter truth is not that we are to live newly after death - that is not the great thing - but that we are to be here and now by the power of the resurrection; not so much that we are to live forever as that we are to, and may, live nobly now because we are to live forever." - Phillips Brooks, American religious leader (1835-1893).

Rivera gets viewers--and scrutinizers

EDITOR'S NOTE - Geraldo Rivera figures he's the most scrutinized person on national TV, and he may be right. He likes to think of himself as an innovator, and he's certainly that. Whatever one thinks of the controversial talk show host, "Geraldo" has a growing following, capitalizing on an age-old fascination with criminals, deviants and misfits.

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - We come to you today from the stage at Times Square Studios in Manhattan, where we'll be bringing you one of the most provocative pop culture phenomena of our time.

Geraldo Rivera has been called the "P.T. Barnum of talk show hosts" and "the Peck's Bad Boy of television news."

"People" magazine called him "insufferable." The Washington Post denounced his last special as "teleporn." Los Angeles Times critic Howard Rosenberg says he doesn't believe a thing he sees Geraldo do.

Tell us briefly, Geraldo, in your own words: What is it about you that so affronts so many in your profession?

"I think envy and jealousy plays a part. There's a feeling that I somehow gypped my way to the top. I've gone too far, gotten too big. I've defied all their notions. I should've failed a dozen times by now."

He should have failed, but in the 19 years since his television debut, he has earned more than 150 prizes, including three Emmys and a Peabody, and his popularity with viewers has never flagged.

"The thing about Geraldo is that he's passionate about what he does," says Suzanne Falter-Barns, a freelance writer in the audience during a recent studio taping of his syndicated daily talk show, "Geraldo."

"There's no passion on TV anymore. Everything is canned, processed, fake entertainment. Geraldo's show is kind of fascinatingly morbid."

Not so, says critic Tom Shales of The Washington Post. "He's an emotional cheerleader who tries to sway audiences in a very facile and sleazy way. I call him The Great Panderer because he keeps searching for cheaper, more sordid, more sensational topics. At best he is embarrassing."

Despite the reviews, the Investigative News Group he formed in 1986 with his wife, brother and one employee has grown to 30 people. With Tribune Entertainment, it produces his live specials and his talk show. The fastest-growing program in syndication, "Geraldo" jumped 67 percent in the national Nielsen ratings over the past year, capitalizing on an age-old fascination with criminals, deviants and misfits.

Geraldo also is developing a weekly series, "The Investigators," and has just announced plans to buy up TV stations with five other prominent Hispanics.

was still very young at the time, she can remember her father working on the project. He sat near the outside, kitchen door as he carved. The location was convenient for clearing away the stacks of wood shavings.

The fun didn't end when Martin finished building his circus. For many years, local residents were treated to public displays of his tiny show. Frequently, during Pioneer Days or the county fair, Martin would set up his circus as a display in downtown Hereford. Nor was the circus his only display of showmanship.

If there was a local talent show, Martin was there, playing away at his one man band. He was always ready for a show. His daughter recalls that on Sunday afternoons, he'd begin playing music over a sound system. The music drew spectators like flies to honey as the neighbors came to see the show. Martin enjoyed entertaining his friends and neighbors, especially the children. The building of his circus was a part of that desire to entertain.

"That's what it (the circus) was for... enjoyment... for the kids," Mrs. Edmonson said.

Yet he remains the punch line to an industry joke: Heard about the Geraldo Rivera Home Game? A life-size cardboard cutout of Geraldo and a folding chair.

Marty Berman, executive producer of "Geraldo." They met at New York's WABC-TV, which persuaded Geraldo to trade poverty law for the "Eyewitness News."

Geraldo's law degree has proven invaluable. Much of his career has been spent defending himself against charges of distorting the news; of using drugs; of denying his heritage by calling himself "Jerry Rivers" or, conversely, of changing his name to Geraldo Rivera to cash in on ethnic hiring trends.

He pleads innocent to all counts. "I'm the most scrutinized person on national TV. Everything I say, everything I do, is X-rayed nine ways to Sunday."

"No story is worth a career. Not only is my own honor at stake but it's the knowledge that everything I do is examined."

He's convinced that the fuss concerns style, not substance, and that one day, "some biographer - probably someone not yet born - will show me as a person who brought innovation to television."

The Geraldo style - explosive, confrontational, the antithesis of the detached professional - mirrors his off-camera personality. Long after the guests have gone home, Geraldo is still "Geraldo," a Hispanic Dudley Do-Right, a real-life Equalizer. Other men walk the dog. Geraldo "patrols the bowels of Central Park" with a black Labrador named Spike.

"These are not postures," he says. He wishes he could wear a sincerity meter.

"It was always there - the self-assuredness, the cockiness," says but are house-hunting upstate. They started after a pregnant doctor was murdered at Bellevue Hospital. "I said, this is too much."

Of course, the "Geraldo" show, with its lineup of neo-Nazis, hookers, and adolescent murderers, isn't exactly a romp in the park.

"Geraldo is good people, but I don't know how long I'll be able to do this," says Alexander Johnson, a thoughtful young producer who's screening hours of kiddie porn for an upcoming show.

Geraldo understands. Too many seamy stories and "the world becomes a place held together with wire hangers, spit and chewing gum. That's not an accurate view of the world. But some of it sticks to you, even after the shower."

He makes no apology for crying on camera, a habit that dates back to his early days at WABC where, less than two years into the job there, he tackled the biggest story of his life. He shed many tears before he was done.

It began with a call from Dr. Michael Wilkins, an acquaintance who had just been fired by Willowbrook State School on Staten Island, then the nation's largest institution for the mentally retarded.

"He had a key. He knew what time the guards changed, when I could get inside. I asked what I would find. He said, 'Children being abused.'"

That night, Wilkins accompanied Geraldo and a cameraman to Willowbrook, where they filmed five minutes inside one of the 30-odd buildings. Then the cameraman went outside and threw up.

"Geraldo said, 'I am not going to give this up. I am going to come back and come back and come back until this is cleaned up,'" Wilkins recalls.

Fifteen years and countless stories later, Willowbrook closed.

Geraldo's reporting on Willowbrook won him the George Foster Peabody Award and catapulted him to the ABC network. He joined the entertainment division, then the staff of "20/20."

In 1985, Roone Arledge pulled a "20/20" segment on Marilyn Monroe's relationship with the Kennedys, and Geraldo threw a tantrum. A less impulsive man might have stopped to consider that he had not yet signed his new contract before publicly mouthing off at the boss.

"I died of massive, mostly self-inflicted wounds," he wrote in the April 1986 issue of "Esquire."

His obituary was premature. He soon attempted a comeback as a freelancer with "The Mystery of Al Capone's Vault."

The gangster's vault, opened with much fanfare on live television, came up empty. Mortified, Geraldo went into hiding, setting off on what was to be an epic voyage aboard his 44-foot sloop, the "New Wave."

He came ashore in a hurry after learning that "Al Capone's Vault" was the highest-rated nationally syndicated show of all time.

He grew up in a blue-collar section of Long Island, "a social politician." His compulsion to prove himself is rooted in childhood: "When I fought, I was proving myself to the street kids. When I did well in school, I was proving myself to the smart kids."

He's now a proud father himself, of a 9-year-old son by his third marriage. Gabriel Rivera lives in California with his mother. He and Geraldo spend every other weekend and all summer together.

Geraldo hopes to have another child. He and C.C. live in Manhattan had more hands-on play with the puppets than the circus. The circus was more of a display than a toy.

"I recall how proud I was of it and how cute I thought the animals, especially the elephants, were," Edmonson said.

Martin's circus was more than just a hobby. In its own way, it made an important contribution to the community.

Perhaps the museum plaque which explains the circus display said it best.

"His talent, lovingly shared, brought hours of joy, entertain-

"One way to see if it's singable or has a good hook is to sing it around my daughter. If she hears it a few times and then I hear her singing it, then I know it's good. Usually, if kids will sing it, anyone will."

"Some of my friends have had my songs tested on them, too."

"One very important thing is that none of this would have been possible without the people of Hereford and the church being so great and encouraging. I couldn't ment and laughter to many residents--young and old--in Hereford," the plaque reads.

Homeowners' policies may cover college students' possessions

Cathy Coed equips herself for dorm life in style: Gucci watch, diamond stud earrings, stereo, home computer and a beautiful designer wardrobe. She lugs to campus enough material goods to impress her Kappa sorority sisters thoroughly.

Unfortunately, one night in a rush for a "can't miss" party, Ms. Coed leaves her room unlocked and her room is completely ransacked. Everything is stolen. Will her parents' homeowners' insurance provide coverage for all her stolen belongings?

Many people will be happily surprised to know that their homeowners' policies likely will provide adequate coverage for most college students' belongings, with the possible exception of the personal computer, less the deductible. They should call their insurance agent to be sure.

Typically, coverage of property stolen away from home is limited to 10 percent of the personal-property insurance. For example, if a home is insured for $50,000, their personal property is covered for $25,000. The items a child takes to college are covered for $2,500, minus the policy's deductible.

There are several ways to handle additional coverage on the items a student takes to school if they are worth more than the 10 percent off-premises coverage provided as part of the homeowner's policy.

For a student who is under the limit, except for a few valuable items, one may add a personal articles floater to the policy. This enables the consumer to insure specific items named in the floater to their full value. This is a good option if the student is protected by the parents' policy, with the exception of specific valuables such as jewelry, camera equipment or furs. For the student who lives in an apartment and has a whole household of goods, the simplest way to take care of covering all articles is to get additional coverage—"personal property in a secondary residence endorsement."

That's a long name for a short addition to the homeowner's policy. It gives one the ability to go beyond the 10 percent limit stated in the policy.

Insurance Information Institute publishes a free pamphlet, Taking Inventory, which helps consumers keep track of their belongings.

SHOULDER PAIN

If you're suffering from shoulder pain and can't recall any injury that could be causing it, the source of the problem may be in your pelvic girdle.

Three bones make up the pelvic girdle, the two hip bones and a triangular shaped bone called the sacrum. When this structure is out of alignment, it can cause strain throughout the body, including the shoulder area.

When the pelvic girdle is out of balance and not supporting your body the way it should, the body tries to adapt as best it can. But this adaptation only causes more problems. What causes the pelvic girdle to get out of balance? Poor posture may be one cause. A spinal column out of alignment may be another. Only a full examination can get to the cause of the problem.

A well-balanced body on a proper foundation is important to your physical health. Your shoulder pain may be directly related to a structural imbalance that needs to be corrected before the pain will go away.

USDA now allows meat processors to substitute water for fat to reduce the fat in hot dogs, bologna and other cooked sausages, providing there is no loss of nutritional value. The change of regulations reflects USDA's desire to facilitate the marketing of lower fat products.

These products can be labeled with the terms "lite", "light" or "lower fat" if they contain at least 25 percent less fat than similar cooked sausage products. The labels, however, must include a comparison that explains the term. For example, the label for lower fat hot dogs might state: "This product contains 20 percent fat in meat hot dogs."

Current inspection regulations for cooked sausages restrict fat to 30 percent and added water to 10 percent. Under the new rule, the combination of fat and added water cannot exceed 40 percent of the product weight. Maximum fat content will continue to be limited to 30 percent. However, the water restriction will be removed so that processors can substitute some of the water for fat to produce a lower fat product. Protein content will remain unchanged.

Amazing future

Many people have visions of the future and we ran across an article recently that takes a look at some amazing predictions for things to come. Dr. Lowell Catlett, a New Mexico State University professor, sees a future for this country in which most work is done by robots, genetic engineering will change the face of agriculture and other changes in the next 20 years that are more drastic than in the last 100.

He talks of machines that can move through the field and analyze all the plants as frierid or foe; of a computer chip that can be placed behind the ear of a cow and provide information on her metabolic rate, dietary needs, pregnancy data, and even where she is in the pasture.

Within two decades, says the professor, humans will be able to communicate with the five smart animal species. These include whales, dolphins, apes, pigs and cats. These animals seem to be able to communicate with one another and, with the aid of super intelligent computers and micro chips, we humans will one day be able to talk to them, says the professor.

The big breakthrough in science will be in superconductivity. Electricity will flow without resistance and will change everything mechanical.

Magnetic levitation will keep cars, trucks and trains floating. Superconductivity creates a magnetic field that allows objects to float. The Germans and Japanese are making great strides in the application of this field. Congress has before it an application for funds for building a supercollider, superconductor center in Texas.

In the study of waste control, microbes are being developed that will eat away poisons and clean up toxic waste dumps. Science is just entering the field of genetic engineering which some day will produce plants able to produce their own insecticides, pesticides and fertilizer. Food and fiber will be produced by means unknown today, predicts the professor.

It all adds up to a thought-provoking look into the future, although some may think is is a frightening view of the unknown.

What we know is that change is inevitable and will take place whether we are ready for it or not. We must march into this kind of new world and be prepared for a new way of life. Scientific progress dictates it.

Tax oversimplification

This is the time of the year when the average wage earner has to think about filing an income tax return and when confronted with the mass of forms and figures, most taxpayers wonder if there is not a better way to finance the United States government.

The form 1040 has become complicated for a lot taxpayers and while an attempt was made in 1986 to simplify it, the net result seems to be that the government merely took away deductions, lowered the rate a little bit, and most of us wind up paying as much as ever.

A couple of congressmen named Hall and Rabushka have come up with a nifty little solution to this, one that will allow every American to compute his or her income tax obligation without much fuss or bother.

The Hall-Rabushka plan would do away with all deductions, leaving only a $5,500 per person exemption. In order to figure what you owe under this system, you add up all your income from every source, deduct $11,000 if filing jointly or $5,500 if filing singly, and that is your adjusted gross income.

Then under the plan, multiply this amount by 19 percent and send it in. That's your tax. That's all there is to it. No figuring passive losses and gains, no sheltered this, no deductible that. No phased-down percentage of consumer loan interest paid. No distinction between state sales tax and state income tax. No break for giving to church or charity. No capital gains or losses. Nothing except the bare net income figure upon which the tax is paid.

This plan is too simple. It has critics and objections. For one thing, the American people are suspicious of it because Congress can up the tax rate at the flick of a wrist and bring in more money.

And a rousing objection will be raised by the army of accountants, tax attorneys, estate planning experts and the others who make a living from helping people with their income tax problems.

The plan is good, but too simple. We Americans will never buy it.

Editorial opinion from around Texas

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around Texas:

U.S. Mustn't Miss Out On New TV Technology

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is worried about HDTV's and so should you. The acronym stands for high definition television, which is supposed to dramatically improve picture quality.

It is also expected to revolutionize the electronics industry much like color television did in the 1950s. A lot could be riding on this revolution.

In 20 years, industry analysts expect sales of HDTV's to reach an astounding $40 billion worldwide and as much as $11 billion in this country alone.

The figures sound promising until you consider that Germany and Japan have the lead in developing this new technology. Unless this country can catch up, "the lid could very well be nailed shut on America's $370-billion-a-year electronics industry and the 2.54 million jobs it creates," Bentsen said.

... A group of 16 American electronics firms recently got together and announced plans to cooperate in research to develop the HDTV. That's good news. And Bentsen proposes that Congress find ways to help the electronics industry help itself ... If American electronics firms in the past had devoted more energy to research and less to short-term market share, and if the government had found ways to encourage that research with tax incentives, this country wouldn't be worried about trade imbalance and loss of American jobs today ...

Surveillance and Good Sense

The FBI, under pressure from civil libertarians and with sound advice from a panel of computer professionals, has backed away from a proposal to add to its National Crime Information Center computer the names of people under investigation but not charged with any crime. It was the right decision.

As critics pointed out, putting raw data about anyone even suspected of a serious crime into a pool of information available to every law enforcement agency in the country would have created a vast surveillance network subject to abuse. Such "investigative files" with information that's often unsubstantiated, out of date or just plain wrong are best contained within the agencies initiating them until such time as an arrest warrant is issued.

New Demo worry: trickle-down GOP

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - One Democrat calls it "trickle-down Republicanism." Another warns of the "McDonaldization" of American politics, which is a mouthful.

Their message is the same: the assumption that Democrats can count on remaining a powerful party out of power is shortsighted politics. After losing four out of five presidential elections, the party could see the trend trickle down and threaten Democratic dominance in Congress, too.

Sen. Bob Graham of Florida used the McDonald's analogy. He said people are getting political messages the same way they hear about hamburger chains, on television. Graham said that goes double for people who move from one state to another - with the Sun Belt trend taking most of them toward Republican areas.

In that situation, he said, the notion that there can be two Democratic parties, one of presidential losers and the other of congressional winners, is one that can't last forever.

William A. Galston, a University of Maryland political scientist and an adviser to former Vice President Walter F. Mondale in the landslide Democratic defeat of 1984, supplied the theory of trickle-down GOP strength.

He said that is more likely than a permanent, split-level realignment in which there's a congressional party and a presidential party. Galston pointed to Texas as an example of what could happen nationally - rising Republican strength beginning at the presidential level and gradually spreading down the ballot.

Galston said that "could well turn out to be the harbinger of our party's national fate." It would have to be a very early harbinger - Democrats dominate the House 258 to 174.

Whatever the pull of party, the power of incumbency is greater, and the overwhelming majority of members who run for re-election win it. So any significant change in political alignment probably would take years.

In the Senate, Democratic 55 to 45, change could come more rapidly, not in the next election but possibly in 1992, according to Galston.

Those arguments got a sympathetic hearing at the Democratic Leadership Council, a moderate-to-conservative counterforce to the party's liberal wing. The prevailing view there is that Democrats must move to the middle in order to field a presidential candidate who can win.

When that group met recently in Philadelphia, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, the chairman, said some Democrats find solace for national defeat in congressional dominance.

"But a congressional majority cannot set the nation's agenda; only a president can do that," Nunn said. "Until we regain the White House, we will be able to block, modify and amend, but not to challenge, inspire and lead."

"We will be the mechanics of national policy, but not the architects of national purpose," he said.

Nunn also said it was nothing personal - "I have no plans nor any inclination to run for president in 1992."

Galston warned that "...the continuation of presidential failure will relentlessly threaten every bastion we still possess."

He said reapportionment will shift 18 House seats in 1992, and most of them will move from Democratic to Republican states. Galston said Republican candidates won nearly two-thirds of the open seats - contests with no incumbent running - the last time reapportionment took effect in a presidential election year. "It could well happen again," he said.

Galston said the Democratic outlook is riskier in the Senate in 1992, suggesting that a weak presidential ticket could cost the party the control it regained from Republicans in 1986. The terms of 20 Democrats and 14 Republicans will expire with the 1992 elections. Eleven of the Democrats are freshmen first elected in 1986, five of them by razor margins.

Nor is the Democratic outlook promising in 1992 electoral votes, he said. Galston figures that reapportionment will add 12 electoral votes to states that have become the Republican base in presidential elections, bringing the strength of those states to 231 of the 270 electoral votes it takes to elect a president.

Unless the Democrats have policies and a nominee who can compete everywhere and crack that GOP base, Galston said, the odds against them will be overwhelming. In poker terms: "The Republican nominee would start with two pairs while his Democratic counterpart would be drawing to an inside straight."

BUY BROCCOLI

Somewhere in this world there is an absolute marketing genius. I have no idea who or where the person is but somebody had to be behind the idea of broccoli.

Anyone that would try to market something that tastes this bad has to be crazy. Anyone who could pull it off has to be a genius.

And boy did it get pulled off. I am writing this while sitting on an airplane. I just finished breakfast. The meal was an omelet with cheese and, you will never believe it, broccoli.

At lunch yesterday I was served a chicken breast and broccoli soup. The night before at a very nice restaurant I was served broccoli and cheese sauce. Doesn't anyone eat real food anymore?

My advice to all investors is to forget the Dow and buy broccoli. As much as we eat the price must be soaring. I'll bet they sell it on the futures market along with pork bellies.

My advice to farmers in our area is forget potatoes and corn, let's get into broccoli. I guess the stuff grows. No one would manufacture anything that smells and taste like that on purpose. I have never seen a broccoli plant. Maybe it is a fungus. It must come from California. That is where they grow artichokes, so why not broccoli.

Maybe a better plan than growing the stuff would be for us to find the person who sold it to the world. If we could hire this person we could sell careless weeds. We would need a new name. No one would buy a weed. I wonder what broccoli was called before the marketers got hold of it? Stink weed perhaps?

Twenty-five percent of Texas credit unions offer loan services exclusively. Young said. Many offer share draft services, which are similar to checking accounts, with no fees attached and low or no minimum balances required, he said.

"That's the beauty of the credit union," Baker said, explaining that a few years ago when S&Ls were paying a higher rate of interest, members of the Amarillo Postal Credit Union kept their deposits in the credit union out of loyalty. "We're a pretty close-knit group," Baker said of the credit union.

Members can get home improvement loans and new car loans at lowest rates lower than those of banks or savings and loan associations -- loans that the members often don't get elsewhere, lending a loyalty to the credit union among members, he said.

Incaviglia says goals, pennant within reach

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) - Pete Incaviglia says his 1989 goals are to hit .300 and drive in 100 runs and that if he reaches them, the Texas Rangers could win the American League West.

"I don't care how many home runs I hit," Incaviglia said. "I'm going to hit homers. I'll hit 25 by accident. But I want to hit .300 and drive in 100 runs because I know we'll be very, very close to winning (the division) if I do and that's important to me."

Incaviglia has made drastic changes in a swing that has produced three-year averages of .257, 26 home runs, 74 RBI and 169 strikeouts.

Manager Bobby Valentine said Incaviglia shortened his stride from 36 to 16 inches, allowing him to keep his head still, pick up the ball quicker and see it longer.

"He looks like a legitimate, nice, pure hitter," Valentine said. "He's not there, but he's getting closer every day."

"The way he hit before, I thought was one of the most remarkable athletic feats - when he hit the ball. He did so many things. He had a 36-inch stride. His head moved half that distance forward and down. To still be able to hit the ball like that was remarkable."

Incaviglia's best average was .271 in 1987. His best power figures were 30 homers and 88 RBI in his rookie season.

Last year, he slipped to .249 with 22 homers and 54 RBI in 116 games, many of which he played with lower back pain. Despite missing 46 games, he still managed to tie Milwaukee's Rob Deer for the league strikeout lead with 153.

After three years of resisting change, Incaviglia finally succumbed last winter. Beginning just after the holidays, he worked on the adjustments almost daily with Valentine.

"I went to Bobby and said, 'This ain't gonna work anymore,'"

Incaviglia said. "I'll always be able to hit 30 homers and drive in 80 runs, but I want to hit 40 and drive in 120."

"Bobby said, 'Why not cut down the stride, cut down the swing, see the ball better and cut down strikeouts?' Basically, overstriding caused me to see the ball too late. Now, I'm seeing the ball a lot longer."

"I put too much (emphasis) on hitting home runs. I never thought about (hitting) .300, or any of the little things like hitting the ball the other way with a man on third."

Tuesday, Incaviglia hit his second homer in three days, his first round-trippers of the spring. His 1-for-4 day left him at .250 for the exhibition season in 44 spring at-bats. He's also produced key singles and doubles.

Valentine said Incaviglia has been getting "very quality at-bats, quality swings, quality takes. He's doing the things he's supposed to be doing. It (.300) is realistic."

Retired Turner still scoring

HOUSTON (AP) - For 13 years, Cecil Turner has been running down drug smugglers as a Drug Enforcement Administration agent with the same quickness that earned him fame on the football field with the Chicago Bears.

In 1945, Americans ate an average of 402 eggs a year; by 1985 that was down to 255 eggs.

The albatross drinks sea water. It has a special desalination apparatus that strains out excess salt.

Turner is a football star turned undercover narcotics agent who managed to keep his cover throughout his second career.

On Tuesday, as he prepared to take on a recruiter's position at the DEA, he talked about his days as an undercover officer.

"I've seen it all," he told the Houston Post. "I've seen the good side, I've seen the bad side."

After leaving football in 1973, Turner spent two years as a high school history teacher in Houston before he being hired by the DEA's enforcement division.

For 13 years he portrayed a drug buyer, meeting with traffickers in seedy restaurants and hotel rooms, packing a gun and sometimes being "wired" with a microphone. During a 3-year assignment in Miami, Turner was involved in several busts a day, usually of Colombian drug organizations the DEA had infiltrated.

Many colleagues at the Houston DEA didn't know the 44-year-old agent was a Bears standout in the early 1970s, or that he still shares the record for most kickoffs returned for

TD INTERCEPTIONS

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston failed to win the Southwest Conference football title in 1987 but it did post a couple of glittering individual records.

In its 60-40 victory over Texas, a blazing pigskin shootout, Houston defensive backs returned intercepted passes for four touchdowns. Rodney Thornton had one and Johnny Jackson had three. Jackson's feat was an NCAA record and Thornton's touchdown interception added the one which made for another NCAA mark with a team total of four.

touchdowns in a season (four in 1970).

But Turner never left football entirely behind, conceiving of busts in terms of football plays and sometimes sprinting after drug dealers.

"There've been situations where I've jumped out of cars and run and arrested people before they could even get started," Turner said. "There are times when they're trying to get away and I just run right up beside them like they're walking ... and I'll tap them."

His biggest heroin bust came in Houston, a deal in which Turner played the buyer and negotiated with traffickers before participating in the 10-kilo bust.

"In football, a receiver knows when he's got to catch that ball, where he's got to be," Turner said of such operations. "Well, I know when it's about to go down, which signals are gonna be called. Same deal, same principle."

Turner's strength, fellow agents said, is his ability to keep cool under pressure.

"The whole thing in undercover work is to be as everyday as you can be," said agent Charles Mathis. "Turner has the innate ability to walk into (an undercover) situation and be as relaxed and down-to-earth as he is in the office."

As a recruiter for the DEA, Turner plans to tour the region's colleges and reach out to minority recruits.

Penders, UT made SWC season fun

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - The Southwest Conference once again fell short of NCAA basketball's "Sweet 16," but it was a run-and-gun season thanks to Texas' Tom Penders.

When Texas 3-point-bombed the Atlantic Coast Conference's Georgia Tech 76-70 in the first round of the NCAA playoffs, it was a look at SWC basketball in the 1990s.

Arkansas, of course, has played an up-tempo style of basketball since Nolan Richardson arrived. His ability to recruit talented athletes ensures Razorback fans of title contenders for years to come.

Loyola-Marymount of Los Angeles, which has set NCAA scoring records, got burned 120-101 when it played Arkansas in the first round of the NCAA playoffs. That's the kind of firepower the Hogs can muster.

Texas was a sad sack excuse for a basketball program under Bob Weltlich. Fans abandoned the Special Events Center in droves except when Jody Conradt's Lady Longhorns were playing their national championship brand of basketball.

The Longhorns made the "Super Drum" a good place to take a nap with their slow-down, pattern offense under the disciplinarian Weltlich.

Finally, athletic director DeLoss Dodds had to sack the man he hired. Then Dodds hit a homer by hiring Penders, who had just engineered NCAA playoff upsets of Syracuse and Missouri. Penders brought his bubbling personality and Gatlin-gun offense to Austin from Rhode Island.

He opened up practice to the fans who had been banned under Weltlich's dictatorial rule. (Remember how Weltlich had his players practice taking charges?)

Penders quickly made friends with all the alienated alumni groups. He dug Jerry Jeff Walker's country music and Tex-Mex at El Rancho's and stuffed jalapenos.

Penders built up the confidence of his players.

The only time he chewed one out was if he passed up an open shot.

He installed a pressing defense which churned out turnovers to feed his offense.

"It was a shock to some guys on this team who had been used to playing slow-down ball for so long," said guard Joey Wright. "Some of them never could adjust."

Penders paid dividends for the 'Horns both on and off the court.

The cash registers are still ringing. Texas will have to split some of the $250,000 it earned for being in the NCAA's first round with SWC brethren.

But the 'Horns averaged almost 5,000 fans per game more than they had under Weltlich.

The bottom line could come close to $500,000 more earned under Penders than Weltlich.

CBS-TV did a five minute feature before the 108-89 loss to Missouri, praising the upswing in Texas basketball. It would be difficult to put a money tag on that kind of free advertisement.

The season record of 25-9 is the third best in school history.

Texas had four players - Wright, Travis Mays, Alvin Heggs and Lance Blanks - who scored more than 500 points in one season - a first.

The 'Horns established a school record by scoring 100 or more points in 10 games.

They set an SWC record in points per game and were fifth in the nation with a 95 point average.

points, a school record for one season.

From a 16-13 team in 1988 under Weltlich, the Longhorns jumped to 25 wins and their first NCAA playoff appearance in a decade.

All that's missing for Texas is big inside men who can run, and Penders is working on it.

Newcomers next year include 6-8 forward center Gerrard Houston of Atlanta plus Benford Williams, a 6-5 kid who can jump like he's 6-9. Corey Lockridge, a 6-9 player from Abilene, also could help.

"It was the most fun season I've ever had in basketball," said Heggs. "Coach Penders makes the game fun and you win. I wish I was a freshman starting out again under him."

It was fun. Even Shelby Metcalf at Texas A&M put in a little run-and-gun.

The SWC may never be the same again with Penders in the league.

It certainly will be more entertaining.

McMullen wants respect, fun

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) - All Houston Astros owner John J. McMullen wants is a little respect and a chance to preserve the game of baseball for the average fan.

McMullen says he has never gotten the credit he deserves for rescuing the Astros from financial ruin.

Now, after 10 years of owning the club, McMullen also is concerned that escalating player salaries may eventually price the average fan out of the ballpark.

"Basically, I think it's un-American to be paying this kind of money (to players) for six months of work," McMullen said. "It's not even work. It's a very difficult thing to explain."

"The basic responsibility of ownership in baseball is to preserve the game for the future."

"Baseball is a working man's game. We have to look ahead and make sure this sport continues to be as attractive to the American people as it is today."

McMullen has been fighting to win a world championship and provide economic sanity since he purchased the Astros.

The team was foundering before a long line of creditors when McMullen bought the club in 1979.

One of McMullen's early moves was to make Nolan Ryan the first pitcher to earn $1 million per year.

McMullen upgraded the team's salary structure from one of the lowest in the league to among the highest.

He engineered needed improvements in the Astrodome and moved his club out of the dilapidated training facility at Cocoa, Fla. to a state-of-the-art plant here.

The Astros have won two National League Western Division titles during McMullen's ownership, but he fears future successes may be won in front of empty seats in the Astrodome.

"In Houston, we are in a secondary market; we sell at our best year ever 10,000 season tickets," McMullen said. "The Mets, the Dodgers, they stop the sale at 30,000."

"Yet, we have to compete on the same basis and it's not easy."

While McMullen complains of salaries spiraling upward, he is angered by suggestions he is trying to hold the line with salaries on his own team.

"We've been in the top five salary figures a long time and yet the media keeps talking about me cutting," McMullen said. "It's outrageous."

The Astros lost popular pitcher Ryan to the Texas Rangers in a free agent bidding war.

The Astros made an opening offer of $800,000 to Ryan and eventually increased the bid to $1.3 million, but Ryan signed with the Rangers for a guaranteed $2 million package.

McMullen countered by signing free agent pitcher Jim Clancy to a three-year, $3.4 million contract, and he gave pitcher Rick Rhoden $900,000.

McMullen said the Ryan negotiations were another example of the media centering on negative aspects of the organization.

"That's another subject I don't wish to discuss because it's such an unfair and emotional subject," McMullen said. "It's impossible to explain it."

"It's not a question of holding the line, it's pay for value received. But they (media) are still talking about Jose Cruz and Dickie Thon."

The Astros released Cruz and Thon, two popular former players. Cruz did not want to accept a backup role and Thon never recovered fully from a beaming incident.

McMullen often has been at odds with the media and fans and even minority ownership of the Astros.

But McMullen points out that he came to the rescue when the team was at its lowest point.

"I've had a number of people tell me they could have bought the Astros back and I ask them why didn't they?" McMullen said. "I don't think there would be baseball in Houston today if I hadn't taken over the club."

But now the threat becomes making the game available for the working man, McMullen said.

"We have to be able to attract the big group of working people in the United States," he said.

"We can't price this game so they can't afford to take their family out for an afternoon at the ball game on $50. It's that simple."

JV gets 7-3 win

The Hereford JV baseball team picked up a 7-3 win over the Dumas JV on Friday at Whiteface Field.

Winning pitcher Jesse Barrera held Dumas to one run for six innings before giving up a pair of runs in the seventh.

Barrera was aided by good defense behind him. "We made some great plays, and our infield turned a really good double play in the first inning that really got us going," said coach Bill Bridge.

In the second, Matt Bromlow and Roy Cantu scored to give the Herd a 2-0 lead. In the fourth, Barrera and Chad Brummett scored to give the Herd a 4-0 lead.

Hereford extended its lead to 7-1 when Bromlow, Cody Page and Barrera crossed the plate.

Bear patches awarded

Eddie Evans and Regie Martinez of Cub Scout Den 2, Pack 55 received their Bear patches and gold and silver arrow points for their achievements at the March 21 Blue and Gold Banquet. With the help of their leader, Sally Walker, the youngsters made a totem pole, Indian head bands, and numerous other projects.

COMPUTERS

"I think they learn faster because they want to learn, not because they have to learn."

When the students enter the program, which for many also includes classes with Wall during the morning at the Stanton Special Programs Center, they are tested to assess what level they are on in various areas.

Leafing through the results of those tests, you can see the variety. Some of the students are on a third grade level in some areas, a ninth grade level in others. Some are at "12.9+," which means they are at the top.

No matter where they are in the knowledge, they can learn quickly, thanks to a computer system obtained through the Hereford schools, Amarillo College and the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

The lessons include textbooks the students read when they're not in class, then the computer presents problems in various areas.

One lesson I took was in third grade arithmetic. It was basic addition and subtraction. Sometimes you just add or subtract two numbers-stacked one atop the other. Sometimes multiple numbers are listed horizontally, other times vertically.

Other problems included determining which of two lines were longer or shorter, and others had you count the number of times a certain letter appeared among a list of letters.

I answered 36 of the 38 problems correctly. It seemed easy.

Then Wall assigned me an eighth grade level math test. That was a little harder.

It dealt with algebraic problems. The computer constantly reminded me that you had to multiply first, then do your addition and subtraction.

There were also problems that included exponents and other items I had not dealt with in 15 years.

"It shakes the cobwebs loose, doesn't it?" Wall asked. Another assignment was fifth-grade language arts. It targeted vocabulary and comprehension skills.

"It's pretty thorough," Wall said. "Some of these students are just in here for a GED, and we now offer a high school diploma with a course of study.

"Some of the girls are here because they want to get their GED and then go to nursing school. They want to have their skills as sharp as possible for that."

Farm and Ranch

Chemigation meet planned

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Deaf Smith County Extension crops Committee are sponsoring a chemigation workshop on Wednesday at the Bull Barn in Hereford. The workshop will be from 8 a.m. until noon.

The program will begin with a presentation by Levon Harmon, Pesticide Specialist with the Texas Department of Agriculture, concerning the Texas Agricultural Hazard Communications Act which was passed by the legislature in 1988. Harmon will review the law as it applies to producers and discuss the requirements that the producers must meet to comply.

Dr. Steve Amosson, Agricultural

Economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will discuss the economics of chemigation and how producers can evaluate this technique of applying chemicals for their individual farming operations.

Dr. Micheal Hickey, soil chemist and manager of the TAEX Soil Testing Laboratory in Lubbock, will present information on the application of fertilizer and micro-nutrients through irrigation systems.

Dr. Brent Bean, Extension agronomist, will give an overview of the application of herbicides through sprinklers to various crops.

Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension Entomologist, will provide information on the application of insecticides and the safety requirements and laws that govern chemigation.

Leon New, Extension Irrigation Specialist, will discuss irrigation and chemigation equipment and calibration techniques.

The workshop will conclude with a producer panel discussing ways that chemigation can be used in various farming situations.

The program is free and open to all persons interested in obtaining more information on the use of chemigation.

For more information about the workshop, contact the Deaf Smith County Extension office.

Erosion hits 4.7 million acres

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fierce winds have eroded nearly 4.7 million acres of land in the Great Plains this winter, one of the most extensive losses on record, according to an Agriculture Department survey.

"Much of this damage is due to the drought," Wilson Scaling, chief of the department's Soil Conservation Service, said Thursday. "We went into the wind erosion season with poor cover in much of the Great Plains because of the drought. Then this winter, we've had a combination of no snow cover and high-velocity winds in many areas."

Scaling said 88 percent of the acreage damaged was cropland, with rangeland accounting for most of the remainder.

The SCS surveys Great Plains damage annually from Nov. 1 through the following May 31, a seven-month period when winds are highest and soils are driest. The damage to 4.7 million acres was through February.

Scaling said the northern plains were hard hit, with Montana showing damage to nearly 1.4 million acres, about 30 percent of the 10-state total. Losses in Montana and Wyoming have been greater than at any time since SCS began the regular surveys in 1955.

Agency records go back to the mid-1930s, but figures for some of those years were obtained from other sources.

The worst damage was done to about 16 million acres in 1954-55, although the old Dust Bowl probably exceeded that in the early 1930s before annual figures were compiled.

But the 1987-88 season was bad, too, with more than 13 million acres damaged in the region. Another was in 1980-81 when the agency reported 12.5 million acres.

Land is considered wind-damaged when the effects of wind are apparent to the eye. By that time, according to conservationists, the erosion rate has reached about 15 tons per acre a year, usually at least three times faster than is "tolerable," or naturally replaceable.

A loss of five tons per acre translates into a layer of soil about the thickness of a dime spread over one acre.

Scaling said farmers used emergency tillage on more than a million acres to help reduce the blowing by roughing the surface exposed to wind. Texas accounted for 80 percent of the emergency tillage, about 880,000 acres.

In addition to the land damaged during the four-month period, Scaling said more than 22.5 million acres were "in condition to blow" as of March 1, the most in 32 years. Highest on the list are Kansas, North Dakota and Texas, he said.

Farm Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The American Farm Bureau Federation says legislation to raise federal minimum wage levels would eliminate jobs, increase unemployment and raise the cost of food to consumers.

Federation president Dean Kleckner said last week in a letter to Congress that the proposed wage increase would "inevitably produce upward pressure on all wages paid and that will increase prices of agricultural products."

House and Senate labor committees have approved similar versions, raising the federal minimum wage to $4.65 per hour from $3.35 currently. The House bill would raise the minimum in 40-cent increments over two years, beginning on Jan. 1, 1990. The Senate version would raise it over three years.

Kleckner said the higher minimum would have a "serious impact" on agricultural employment, where four-fifths of the hired workers are in seasonal jobs and were the piece-rate system of wages is common.

If piece rates have to be increased substantially to make it possible for less-skilled, less-experienced workers to earn the new minimum, farmers will seek to find workers with greater skills and experience, and reduce the number of workers hired, he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Catfish farmers continue to boost production above year-earlier levels, according to the Agriculture Department.

HHS voice students

Several Hereford High School voice students participated in the March 4 UIL contest held at West Texas State University. Participants included, from left, Orlando Lopez, Chona Silva, Wesley Taylor, Venessa Lewis, Scott Devers, Krista Rakes, and Brandi Hutson. Lewis and Devers earned a 'I' (superior) rating as did Chelli Cummings and Mary Varner, who are not pictured. Varner and Devers earned the rating in their Class I solo which entitles them to compete at the Texas State Solo and Ensemble Contest set in June at the University of Texas in Austin. Ratings of 'II' (excellent) were received by Hutson, Lopez, Rakes, and Poppi Parker, who is not pictured. Taylor, Silva, and Corina Lucio (not pictured) earned 'III' ratings.

Author to speak Monday

The Amarillo College Distinguished Lecture Series will present Marlene Sanders, author of the book, Waiting For Prime Time: The Women of Television News, Monday. There will be a brown bag seminar at 12:15 p.m. in the west dining room of the College Union building; and at 7:30 p.m. a lecture in Ordway auditorium on 22nd St. and Washington.

Sanders was the first female to anchor a network newscast when, in 1964, she filled in for Ron Cochran who had lost his voice. In 1966, she was the first television newswoman to cover the Vietnam War. She was named vice president for ABC news in 1976 and became the first female network vice president.

Also, a former CBS news correspondent and award-winning producer, Sanders currently hosts Metro Week in Review for WNET-TV, New York's public television station.

Sanders presentation is open to the public free of charge.

Finalizing Panhellenic tea

College-bound senior girls can learn about sorority life during a tea set Sunday, April 2 at 3 p.m. in the parlor of First Baptist Church. Hosting the annual tea will be Hereford Panhellenic Association, (HPA), which is comprised of sorority women representing various colleges and sororities. Senior girls, their mothers, HPA members, and prospective Panhellenic members are cordially invited to attend the event. Among HPA officers planning the tea are, from left, Ange Lauderback and Melinda Bridge. HPA members will meet prior to the tea at 2:30 p.m.

Self-concept topic of seminar Wednesday

Diana Ayers, counselor for Family Guidance Center, will present a program on "Self-Concept: How I Know Who I Am" at the Amarillo College Brown-Bag Seminar, March 29, at noon in the Oak/Acorn room of the College Union building on the Washington

St. campus. The program will deal with: what is self-concept?; where does it come from?; how does it affect our behavior. A realistic self-concept and positive self-esteem and crucial to healthy emotional growth. The seminar is open to the public and is sponsored by the Amarillo College Counseling Center, Adult Students and Women's Services. Coffee and tea will be served. For more information call (806) 371-5447.

April 7 deadline set for Miss Hereford pageant

"The Times of Your Life" will be the theme of the 1989 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday, April 22 in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Sponsored by the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, the pageant is open to girls age 16-20. Each contestant will participate in an interview by judges, talent competition, and evening gown competition.

A Coke party held Thursday night acquainted potential entrants with pageant information and rules. Applications were distributed at the party, but applications are also available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, 701 N. Main.

Applications should be returned to the Chamber office by Friday, April 7.

According to Lanette Leasure and Betty Drake, co-chairmen of the pageant's steering committee, contestants will receive goodie bags composed of items from local merchants. Prizes and scholarship money will be offered to the winner and two runners-up will be chosen at the pageant.

While freshman girls cannot compete in the pageant, they may help with the production backstage. They may participate in the pageant's dance numbers; boys are also needed for the opening number.

For more information, contact Leasure at 364-5045 or Drake at 364-3263.

Toastmasters assemble

Doc Adams presided over the Thursday morning meeting of Hereford Toastmasters held in Ranch House Restaurant.

The invocation was said by Clark Andrews and Chuck Danley led the pledge. During the brief business meeting, it was noted that dues are payable.

It was decided to send Gwen Guyan of Plainview to District Conference as proxy. The Area Contest will be held March 30 in Amarillo.

Wordmaster was Tom Weemes and the featured word was "procrastinate." Adams was parliamentarian and Andrews served as grammarian and table topic master. General evaluator was Rocky Lee; timer was Joe Weaver; and Cook served as toastmaster.

Bruce Hernandez spoke on "The Ideal Man," a comparison between "Mr. America" and "Joe Average." Weemes spoke on "Electrical Safety", a discourse on safety in dealing with electricity.

Table topics included "Gun Control" by Danley; "Retirement" by Adams, "See a Doctor?" by Rocky Lee, "Airline Deregulation" by Joe Walters, and "Ma Bell" by Weaver.

Best table topics speaker was Doc Adams and best program was Bruce Hernandez. Best evaluator was Danley.

Couple united in marriage in First Christian Church

Solidad Soliz-Idiaquez of Plainview became the bride of Patrick Edward Mercer of Hale Center during a mid-afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday in First Christian Church.

The ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Mack McCarter of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Esperanza Idiaquez and Col. Benjamin Soliz, Ret. of La Paz, Bolivia South America. The bridegroom is the son of Betty Mercer of Hereford and the late Fred E. Mercer, Jr.

The altar was decorated by banks of Easter lilies and arched candelabra entwined with greenery. The unity candle was encircled with a garland of pink roses and pews were marked by white satin bows.

Mrs. Fred Drew, Jr., of Halfway served as matron of honor and best man was Brent Lively of Mustang, Okla.

Chuan Lin Chang of Lubbock was bridesmaid and groomsmen was Danny Jones of Pringle.

Guests were escorted by Jeff Mercer, the groom's brother; Tony and Zane Ricketts of Canyon, the groom's cousins; and Kent Buchanan of Claude.

Candles were lit by Tony and Zane Ricketts.

Mrs. Bill Bradley, organist, accompanied Steve Wright as he vocalized "The Lord's Prayer". Fred Drew, Jr. of Halfway sang "I've Waited a Lifetime" to the accompaniment of a tape.

Presented in marriage by Jeff Mercer, the bride wore a white romantic gown of organza featuring a beaded schiffli lace yoke and collar. It was styled with a basque waistline and fitted chantilly lace sleeves with ruffles at the wrists. The full skirt with a chapel-length train was highlighted with chantilly lace and organza ruffles.

The bride's Victorian style hat had a chantilly lace brim and a side flower trim. The fingertip-length veil with pof and satin streamers was edged in lace.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses interspersed with pink and yellow roses.

Her jewelry consisted of earrings given to her from the matron of honor and she carried a Bible that belonged to the groom's great-great-grandmother.

Bridal attendants wore cream colored satin overlaid dresses with yellow lace which were fashioned by the bride. They carried arm bouquets of pink roses.

Janet Hill of Canyon invited guests to register at the reception held in the church parlor.

Mrs. Fred Drew, Jr. and Kandra Acker of Lubbock served the groom's cake and Mrs. Kurt Wales of Dimmitt, the groom's cousin, ladled punch and Janet Hill of Canyon served coffee from the groom's table.

Others assisting in the houseparty included Mmes. Clyde Russell, C.D. Fitzgerald, Jr., O.H. Culpepper, John Shaw, Lynn Jones, Roy Blevins, Charles Bell and Doris Neely.

The refreshment table, which was covered with a pink cloth and white lace overlay, was centered with the bride's bouquet and appointed with silver and crystal which were heirlooms from the groom's family. The table was further enhanced by crystal candelabra with pink tapers and the three-tiered wedding cake which was topped with Precious Moments figurines and adorned with pink roses and candy swans. The cake also featured a fountain.

MRS. PATRICK EDWARD MERCER
...nee Solidad Soliz-Idiaquez

The groom's table was covered with a pink cloth and a lace overlay crocheted by the groom's grandmother and great-grandmother. The focal point of the table was the groom's chocolate cake made in the shape of Texas. Accenting the table was a basket centerpiece with blue and pink spring flowers.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Santa Fe, N.M. They will make their home after March 28 at Hale Center where Mercer is assistant administrator of High Plains Clinic and Nursing Home.

The bride attended Universidad

Mayor de San Anders and Universidad San Xavier De Chuguisaca Medical School, both in La Paz, Bolivia. She graduated from the Hispanic Baptist Seminary in San Antonio and also attended Wayland University.

The groom, a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School, graduated from West Texas State University in 1986 with a degree in accounting. He was a member of Alpha Kappa Psi Business Fraternity, W.T. Student Foundation and the Recreation Club.

Out-of-town guests represented Canyon, Amarillo, Dalhart, Hale Center, Halfway, Plainview, Lubbock, Dimmitt, Claude, and Clovis and Melrose, N.M., Guymon and Sayre, Okla. and Atlanta, Ga.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bell in their home.

Know limitations before processing

Processing homegrown fruits for sale may be more involved than the average person imagines.

"The small processor should be more concerned with jellies, and possibly dehydrated fruit," said Dr. Alfred Wagner, food technologist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Canning fruit is a fairly elaborate system and is not easily adapted to the small producer," Wagner said at a recent fruit growers conference here.

"However, if a producer is interested in expanding into a specialty market for his fruit stand, mail orders or to local independent merchants, processing some of the fruit crop may be a successful alternative."

Wagner said these products cannot be processed in your own home kitchen. A processing facility that is registered with the Texas Department of Health is required, along with a registration fee. Some producers make arrangements with other processors to use their facility during off-hours.

"Don't go into processing if you think all you will utilize is unsalable fruit," Wagner said. "Plan at the beginning of the year the amount of fruit needed to obtain the desired amount of finished product. Almost any producer can process jellies or jellies if they have access to a commercial facility."

One of the basic regulations pertains to the information which must be on the label. Wagner said that the name of the product, net weight, a list of ingredients in order of predominance, and the name of the company, town, state and zip code are required on the label. Other information also may be included.

"It is a good idea to design the label and then take it to the Texas Department of Health for their scrutiny," Wagner said. "they will make certain the label meets all requirements, including type size."

for persons seriously interested in processing some of their fruit production, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service has published a "Food Processors' Handbook." The loose-leaf notebook describes various types of processing, including canning to freezing, jams to jellies, rules to regulations, recalls, special codes and a directory of supplies.

Interested persons can obtain information on ordering the handbook from their local county extension service office.

On the average, the human body has twenty square feet of skin, nine thousand taste buds, five million hairs, and 13 billion nerve cells.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Today, the Minneapolis paper ran an ad from the Humane Society urging people not to wear furs. The ad said it is cruel to kill an animal for its pelt.

Recently I was shopping downtown in 20-below-zero weather. A stranger walked up to me and said, "I wonder how many beautiful rabbits died so you could have that coat?" I noticed that she was wearing a down coat, so I asked if the geese they got the down from to make her coat were still alive. She looked surprised. Obviously she had never given it a thought.

If people are so upset about cruelty to animals, why don't they go after the folks who refuse to spend the money to have their pets neutered and spayed? Thousands of dogs are put to death every year because the animal pounds can't feed and house them. Talk about cruelty to animals, that's the best example there is.

Please tell me what to say if I'm approached again, Ann. -- BABY IT'S COLD OUTSIDE

DEAR BABY: Judging from the quick response you gave the woman in the down coat, you don't need any help from me.

I did a bit of homework, however, and this is what I learned:

More than 75 percent of the fur produced in North America is raised on family farms. There are about 3,700 mink and fox farms on this continent. Also bred are lynx, bobcat, rabbit and chinchilla. Most of the fur farms in the United States are located in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Utah. In Canada, the majority of the mink farms are in Ontario and Quebec. Sable comes from Asia, the Soviet Union and Canada.

Furs such as raccoon and beaver do not need to be produced on farms, since there is overpopulation among these animals and trapping is not only legal but essential for their survival. It is illegal to make coats from endangered species such as leopard and ocelot.

In my opinion it is no more cruel to kill animals for their fur than it is to kill them for their hide or for food. I wonder if those folks who don't want us to wear fur are willing to give up their shoes, belts, handbags, saddles and luggage? And what did they have for dinner last night?

Dear Ann Landers: I shuddered when I read the letter from the mother who interceded and made her daughter, who was unwed and addicted to drugs and booze, keep her baby. (The girl conked out for three days at a time and paid very little attention to the baby.) The mother complained that the responsibility for the child has fallen on her and that she resents it.

I wonder how many times well-intentioned but out-of-touch relatives, like the mother who wrote, have prevented babies from being put up for adoption, thus sentencing these children to lives of hardship and neglect.

Today welfare programs make it easier for single mothers to keep their babies. This is a tragedy for childless couples who are aching to have a little one in the nursery.

Please, Ann, invite letters from these couples who long to have a baby and could provide a loving (and comfortable) home for an out-of-wedlock child. Perhaps it will help some pregnant girls decide that adoption is a noble and unselfish way to go. -- LOVING MOTHER IN HUNTINGTON WOODS, MICH.

DEAR LOVING MOTHER: I have printed such letters over the years, and you have just provided me with another one. Thank you. Is that special Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age and impossible to read? Or perhaps a column once touched your heart and you failed to clip it. Ann Landers receives thousands of requests for reprints. In response she has compiled a booklet, "Gems," the most frequently requested poems and essays. For your copy send $4 plus a self-addressed stamped business-size envelope (65 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

YOUR EYES

NO TWO PEOPLE SEE ALIKE

Your eyes generally function differently from anyone else's. If they function within "a normal range", that's fine. When they are outside this range, however, seeing may be unclear or uncomfortable. Professional help is indicated.

The most common eye malfunction is myopia or nearsightedness. But the degree of nearsightedness varies amongst individuals. Some of us see clearly at a distance of ten feet; others at two or three feet. The norm is twenty feet.

Hyperopia or farsightedness usually causes difficulty in seeing near objects clearly, but individual variations from the norm are extensive. In some people, large amounts of farsightedness may affect distance vision, too.

Astigmatism, in which the cornea is abnormally shaped, causes objects to appear blurry at any distance and is a prime cause of eye strain.

Many people whose eyes function outside the normal range may even require a different correction in each eye, so that their eyes can work as a team to see all distances clearly and comfortably.

Young performers entertain La Madre Mia Study Club

La Madre Mia Study Club met Thursday in Kinsey Parlor of First Baptist Church.

Sharon Hodges served as hostess and Gladys Merritt and Betty Lady were co-hostesses. A short business meeting was conducted by President Merritt. It was announced that the nominating committee for new officers will consist of Judy Williams, chairman, and Ruth Black, Hodges, and Joyce Allred.

Scholarship committee will consist of Tricia Sims, chairman, Lavon Nieman and Mysedia Smith.

Hodges introduced Susan Shaw and a trio of her voice students, Heather Hodges, Candi Pankey, and Kristi Beville. The girls sang two numbers, as did the duet of Stacy White and Scott Devers. Stephanie Walsh, piano student of Barbara Manning, played two selections. Mark Watson performed two guitar selections and Taylor Sublett played her violin.

New member Maureen Self was welcomed, as were guests Tina Watson and Markay White.

Members present were Allred, Bromlow, Clark, Hodges, Merritt, Owen, Rogers, Sims, Sparks, Taylor, Watson, White, and Manning.

The next meeting will be held April 13 in the home of Micki Baulch.

Bell elected to presidency of Xi Epsilon Alpha chapter

The Reddy Room of Southwestern Public Service Co. was the site of Thursday night's meeting of Xi Epsilon Alpha chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

Louis Cardinal, a trooper with the Department of Public Safety, addressed the group on "Personal Safety." He cited basic survival techniques and answered questions concerning aspects of self-defense.

President Peggy Hyer conducted the business meeting, noting that the state convention will be held June 23-25 in Fort Worth. She read correspondence from Big Brothers/Big Sisters and Hereford Volunteer Board. Members decided to collect children's items as books, coloring books, crayons, etc. for the Hereford Volunteer Board.

Thank yous were expressed to Secret Sisters by Connie Matthews, Gaye Reily, Marge Bell, Pene Coplen, and Linda Arellano.

Committee reports were given. Coplen said that Founders' Day will be held Tuesday, April 18 at 7 p.m. at K-Bob's Steakhouse.

Service committee chairman Susan Cardinal accepted donations of aluminum cans to benefit the Hereford Satellite Center and baby food for Operation Good Shepherd.

Program chairman Bell said the next meeting will be held April 4 in the home of Holly Bixler. Members of Alpha Iota Mu who qualify to progress will be invited to the ice cream social.

Social chairman Matthews said the couples' party will be held April 8 at 8 p.m. in the home of Denise Hafliager. The costume party will feature the theme of "A Night with the Stars."

Hyer said that letters nominating who should be Girl of the Year will be due at the April 4 meeting.

Election of officers for 1989-90 was held. New officer include Bell, president; Hafliager, vice president; Reily, recording secretary; Melinda Whitfill, corresponding secretary; and Deann Harris, treasurer.

Beta Sigma Phi City Council representatives will be Hyer, Bell, Hafliager, and Matthews with Whitfill serving as alternate.

The meeting adjourned and a baby shower honored Deann Harris. Special guests present during the event were three-month-old Robert, Matthew Harris and his father, Mike. A keepsake quilt, created by chapter members and sewn together by Hafliager, was presented to the family as a surprise gift.

Members present were Arellano, Bell, Bixler, Cardinal, Coplen, Danell Culp, Hafliager, Harris, Hyer, Matthews, Reily, Carol Kelley, Susan Shaw, Whitfill, and Kay Williams.

A brunch honoring this year's Volunteer of the Year will be held Saturday, April 1, 9:30-11:30 a.m., at the Red Cross office. All volunteers and their families are invited to attend. Nominations for the honor are being taken at the Red Cross office.

A work day will be held at the Red Cross office Thursday, March 30, beginning at 9 a.m. It will conclude about 2 p.m. A salad lunch will be held at noon.

The Uniformed Volunteers regular luncheon meeting will be held at noon Thursday, April 13.

The disaster committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. April 6 at the Red Cross office.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way agency.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia is among the performers lined up for 10 benefit concerts to help fight AIDS.

"We're frustrated and we want to do something," Garcia told reporters Tuesday at the Fillmore Auditorium.

Other performers getting set for the concerts May 21-28 include Grammy winner Tracy Chapman, Los Lobos, Tower of Power and guitarist Joe Satriani. Organizers hope to raise $3 million to fight the deadly disease.

Northwest School librarian Wanda Nall, second from left, accepted a video cassette recorder from the Northwest PTA recently. Fundraisers conducted by the PTA made the purchase possible; the group's next fundraiser will be a popcorn sale April 6 with proceeds benefitting the Ronald McDonald House. The House is for terminally ill children and is sponsored through McDonalds, who participates with Northwest School in the Adopt-a-School program. The school is also planning a book fair for May 8-12.

Between the Covers

BY REBECCA WALLS

For the first time, Shirley Temple Black, child star of the 30s and 40s, tells in her own words the colorful story of her life as an actress.

Born in 1928 in Southern California, Shirley Temple was extraordinary from the start. At the age of three she began acting in the explosive films known by the name of Baby Burlesks in which Shirley was one of the featured stars. Because of Shirley's talent and perseverance, a fruitful relationship was soon developed with Twentieth Century Fox, at which time she began to appear with all the top stars, such as Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard, Lionel Barrymore, Ginger Rogers, Gary Grant and Bill "Bojangles" Robinson. The magical quality of Shirley's performances cheered the soul of America during the darkest days of the depression.

For four years in a row Shirley was the number one movie star of the nation from 1935-1938. In the 40s such classics as Stand Up and Cheer, Bright Eyes, (in which she sang "On the Good Ship Lollipop") Curly Top, and The Littlest Rebel charmed the hearts of President Roosevelt and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, as well as the rest of the world. Shirley's marriage to Jack Agar-divorce-and later marriage to Charles Black, motherhood and serving as U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of Ghana are other areas of her life covered in the book Child Star by Shirley Temple Black.

For the aviation lovers there is a new novel of Air Force and aerial combat written by a retired, decorated Air Force officer. The Warbirds by Richard Herman, Jr., tells the thrilling account of an attempt of Libyan planes to shoot down an American C-130 that has been authorized to overfly its territory on a mercy mission. The U.S. Air Force responds with F-4E Phantoms destroying a Libyan M.G. As an international crisis erupts the 45th Tactical Fighter Wing is relocated from the ne base in Egypt to an RAF base in England. In anticipation of a major conflict brewing in the Middle East, Colonel Anthony "Muddy" Waters must find a way to revitalize the wing and ready it for combat. As the wing begins to show some of its fighter capabilities the Ayatollah dies. The new government even more radical, and backed by the U.S.S.R. launches an attack into the oil rich heartland of the Prussian golf. Now ready or not the 45th Tactical Fighter Wing is called into action.

On a little different note Phyllis A. Whitney's new book Rainbow in the Mist is ready for checkout. Haunted by the unwanted gift of clairvoyance Christy Loren flees to the peace and safety of the foothills of Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains and to the reassuring presence of her aunt. The visions of murder victims, throughout the city would soon quit enveloping her without warning or so she thought. As she arrives at the haven of safety Christy senses secrets locked in the heart of Deirdre's tormented husband. The threatening mysteries surrounding a writer's recent death and the disappearance of Deirdre, disturb Christy even more as she feels herself becoming more emotionally involved with Deirdre's husband and son. Caught in an ominous web, Christy must come to terms with her psychic powers as she is drawn into the search for Deirdre. With increasing clarity she sees that the mysteries have a connection with the blood-chilling dream that haunts her. In trying to escape her fate, Christy has unwittingly embraced it.

Know pearl facts before purchase

While a rose by any other name may smell as sweet, a pearl by any other name has no value. According to the Gemological Institute of America, only natural or cultured pearls can be considered the real McCoy's. Imitation pearls, no matter how expensive, are not considered fine jewelry and have absolutely no intrinsic value.

The U.S. Federal Trade Commission states that it is not fair trade practice to advertise imitation pearls without including the word "imitation" or "simulated" in the advertisement. Even so, many manufacturers of imitation pearls choose to omit such wording in order to confuse the consumer about the true substance and value of their products.

Imitation pearls go by many names. Some are used to deceive or mislead consumers. The words fashion, faux, designer, simulated, Mallorca or Majorica are all terms that are currently being applied to imitation pearls.

However, aside from labels, the differences between pearls and their fake counterparts are numerous.

How pearls are formed
Both natural and cultured pearls are grown by oysters. They are formed when a foreign object enters the body of a pearl oyster. The oyster secretes a protective coating called nacre around the object in order to make the intruding object smooth and less irritating. It is this protective coating, when applied to the object over a period of years, that produces a beautiful and lustrous pearl.

Imitation pearls, on the other hand, are man made by mechanical processes. Better imitation pearls are made from beads of glass, ceramic, shell or plastic which then are coated in a varnish often consisting of lacquer and ground fish scales to simulate the lustre and color of a pearl.

WILLOWS, Calif. (AP) - Car lot celebrity Cal Worthington testified that for years he alternated between living with his spouse and the woman who became his second wife.

Worthington, whose television commercials feature him and a variety of exotic animals, said that during much of the 1970s he moved between the home he shared with his then wife, Barbara, and the apartment of former actress and model Susan Henning, whom he married in 1979.

Due to sophisticated manufacturing and polishing techniques, it may be difficult for the average consumer to distinguish a natural or cultured pearl from a good imitation by sight alone. However, short of renting a fluoroscope, the easiest way is the "tooth" test.

A strand of imitation pearls slowly rubbed across the front teeth will feel smooth. A strand of natural or cultured pearls will feel a little gritty. This is because nacre is composed of microscopic crystals layered in cellular plates, irregular in formation, around the nucleus of a pearl.

A special feeling
"There are some good-looking imitations on the market today," says Freddy Kohn, president of the Cultured Pearl Association of America. "But what's really important is how the woman feels when she is wearing them."

"When a woman wears a strand of cultured pearls, she knows that she is wearing something of true beauty and value. She feels elegant and assured. That's what natural or cultured pearls do for a woman. With an imitation, it can never feel the same. Even though others may be fooled, she'll always know that she's wearing a fake."

Volunteers, kids' literature needed by local board

The Hereford Volunteer Board needs children's literature and volunteers.

The board works with the Department of Human Services to identify and assist with the problems of poverty, mental, and emotional needs of families, children, the elderly, and the handicapped in the community. The local board assists the DHS with the recruitment of volunteers and sponsors various projects that aid the department in its mission and goals.

Volunteers are needed to work with the various DHS departments available. Training is provided.

Children's literature in the form of books, magazines, etc. are needed as are coloring books and crayons. This material will be placed in the various DHS offices within Hereford for use by children of low income assistance families.

For more information about volunteering or donating children's literature, call Lanny Wheeler, chairman of the board, at 364-0661 or Claudia McBrayer at 364-2377.

Free brochure on selecting fine jewelry available

Spring is around the corner, and with it comes Mother's Day, Father's Day, anniversaries and graduations. It's a time when confusing promotions court consumers.

Because more money is spent per gift item in spring than at any other time of year, including Christmas. Jewelers of America, the national association whose consumer information campaign provides tips and guidelines about fine jewelry, offers the following checklist for choosing the right jeweler for that special gift.

-How long has the firm you are dealing with been in business?

-What is its reputation? Check with your Better Business Bureau, and ask people in your community.

-Will they clean, size, engrave, check the string, and re-mount pieces after they are purchased?

-If they advertise "discounts" of 40 percent or more, was the merchandise ever sold at the "regular" price? For how long?

Was the "retail" or "reference" price purposely inflated and then lowered to lure you into thinking you're getting a "bargain"?

-Do they have an expert available to answer technical questions? Are they a certified appraiser, gemologist?

-Do they carry a wide selection of the type of jewelry you are looking for?

-Do they provide you with information, such as booklets or brochures, that will teach you about fine jewelry and how to care for it?

-Are they part of an association that reinforces their professionalism?

Jewelry is a gift whose beauty lasts from generation to generation. That's why it is important to ask the questions that will assure you of buying from a jeweler who offers quality, integrity and service.

For free brochures with more information about fine jewelry that will help you ask the right questions of your jeweler, write to Jewelers of America, 1271 Sixth Ave., New York, NY 10020, Dept., PSAC.

Manning to speak at seminar

No community or region is immune to conflict, but more and more people are looking for creative, healthy ways to resolve the conflicts which often impede progress.

To provide this area with a forum for exploring some of the more creative ideas for resolving disagreements, several professional, civic and service organizations have joined forces to sponsor a one-day seminar at the Kingston Hotel (the former Hilton Inn) on I-40 East in Amarillo.

The seminar, titled "Creative Ways to Resolve Conflict", will be April 1 from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Cost will be $25 a person, lunch included. Call 354-9540 for reservations.

The seminar is a community-based, educational event and will spotlight two renowned and well-qualified speakers: Edith Primm and Doug Manning. Both Manning and Primm have lectured nationally on subject matter close to the workshop theme. Each speaker will present a keynote address during the day's activities.

Primm is executive director of the Justice Center of Atlanta and is an attorney in Georgia. She has conducted training seminars across the U.S. and Canada in mediation and has been instrumental in establishing conflict resolution centers in several cities. Primm manages a paid staff of 10 and more than 100 trained volunteer mediators and arbitrators.

Manning is a well-known humorist, communicator and author from Hereford. Among his successful books are "Don't Take My Grief Away" and "When Love Gets Tough: The Nursing Home Decision."

Manning was a Baptist minister for 30 years and has been a family and individual counselor. He has addressed numerous professional groups in his nationwide travels and is currently working on a new book, "The Quiet Touch: Caring for Families in Crisis".

A number of small group, breakout sessions will be offered to introduce specific techniques for dealing with conflict in healthy ways. These

Olney Savings

You're probably fed up with bad economic news about Texas and our financial institutions, so how about a little good news for a change.

Under the Southwest Plan, several savings institutions have been combined to form single institutions with assets in the billions of dollars. Olney Savings is one of those vital organizations with assets of over 4.5 billion dollars. Olney is owned and operated by Texans, successful Texans, with a desire to see Texas and its people succeed.

It was important to fix those problems created by a puny economy, and now that it's done, it's time for everybody to get back to business. This is why we are writing this letter -- because we appreciate your business and pledge to provide the products and services you need to make your lives simpler and more secure.

We are paying extremely competitive rates on your deposits, and we're making loans. Try doing business with Olney Savings. We'll make it worth your while.

Sincerely,

Country Kitchen on the Front

ISOLATED MASTER BEDROOM PLAN FOR ECONOMY

© By W. D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

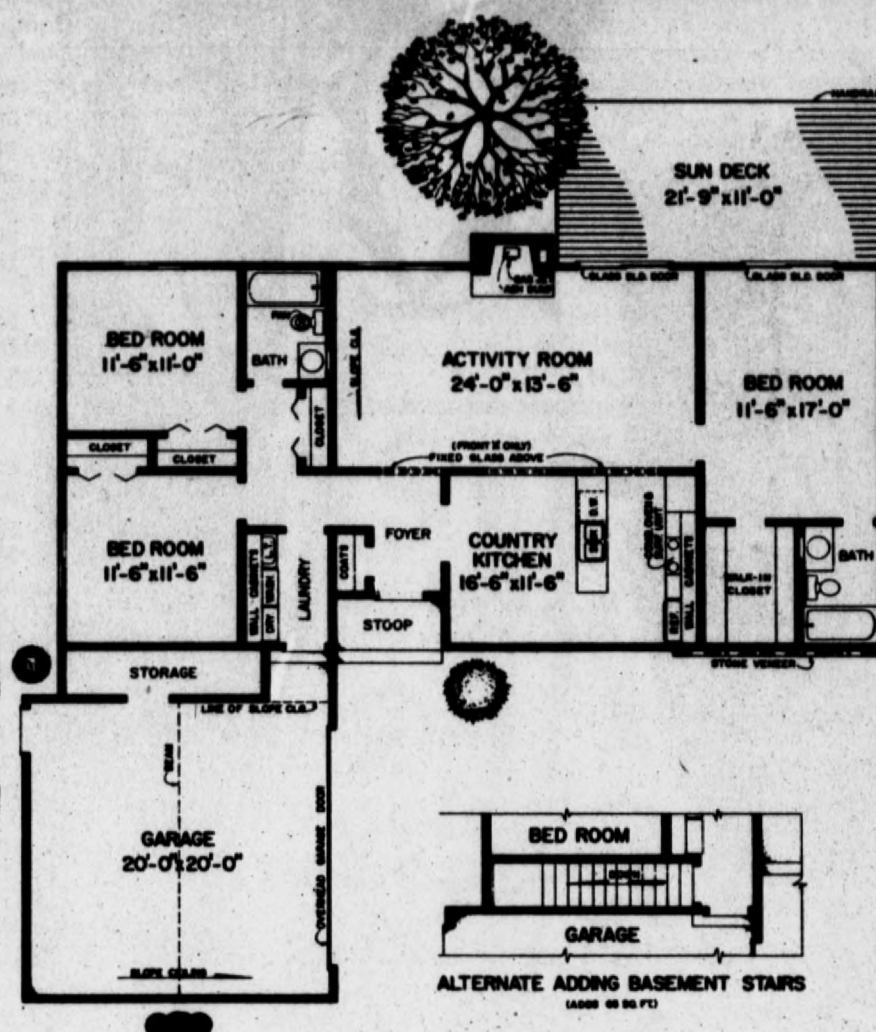

The front foyer allows access to the country kitchen or the activity room areas. The rear activity room is suitably sized for a large group and features deck access, fireplace and slope ceiling. Clear story windows are shown in this activity area. The country kitchen is shown with an island sink cabinet.

There are two full baths, one exclusive to the master bedroom and surplus closets. Laundry facilities are included in the corridor from the double garage.

The exterior style is contemporary, enhanced by pyramid-style siding, single pane windows and high pitched roof. Note: there are also three other contemporary front styles available for this plan. Front wall changes necessary to create the D front pictured are shown on the actual working drawings.

The plan number is 453D and includes 1,433 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet all FHA and VA requirements. For further information on plan number 453D write, W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Search new homes for hidden value

A new home is not only the biggest investment most people will ever make, it also can be the most profitable if the purchase is made wisely. Many riches of a new home are plain to see—fresh paint and carpet, new appliances, an extra bedroom and master suite. But, the quality of the features you don't see can mean the difference between a home you call a castle and a handyman's dream.

"The way a new home is constructed," says Michael Krach, vice president of Owens-Corning Fiberglas, a leading building materials manufacturer, "is a major factor in the success of the investment. But, often overlooked are basic important construction details that can lead to trouble after the deal is closed."

The key to buying the best home you can afford is to find out as much as possible about the house before you purchase it. Mr. Krach provides 10 tips on what to look for and what to ask about a newly built home.

1. Once you've selected a location and found a house that's both affordable and has a floor plan that meets your family's needs, check the builder's reputation. It is the best way to determine the quality of the construction and if the builder will be responsive to your needs after the sale.

Speak to several people who have bought his or her homes and lived in them for at least six months. You also can call the Better Business Bureau or other consumer groups in your area for a recommendation.

2. Most new homes have a one-year warranty that covers major damage and any necessary reconstruction. Be sure you understand what type of damages your warranty will cover and the extent of the builder's liability.

Many builders participate in the national Home Owners' Warranty (HOW) program which provides 10-year warranty/insurance protection to new homebuyers. Your builder also should provide you with warranties for all appliances, and building products that carry them, such as roofing shingles.

3. Water damage is costly and difficult to repair. If you're looking at a new house with a basement, make sure it isn't leaky. Look for water stains on the basement floor and walls. They may appear only as shadows on

Homebuyer's Checklist: Shop for a Home's Hidden Value

SHOP SMART—A new home may be the largest investment you ever make. Make sure it's a profitable one by carefully assessing often-overlooked construction details before you buy. Pay special attention to energy efficiency features, foundation protection and roofing materials to ensure value, comfort and easy maintenance.

HOMES

a finished wall, so check carefully under a good light.

Ask the builder if the basement has been waterproofed, not merely dampproofed, and what product he used. Tuff-N-Dri, a basement has been waterproofed, not merely dampproofed, and what product is used. Tuff-N-Dri, a basement waterproofing and insulation system from Owens-Corning, is the only product backed by a 10-year limited warranty.

4. While you're in the basement, check for insulation. According to Owens-Corning, once adequate wall and attic insulation has been installed, up to 75 percent of a home's remaining heat loss is through the basement. New government recommendations for residential insulation include higher levels for basements. Ask your builder what your state requires.

Some types of insulation can be installed and left exposed until you're ready to finish the basement. And, it can be more cost effective to include insulation in the purchase of your home than to have it added later.

Check behind wall board for insulation in a finished basement. And, if the house is built on a concrete slab check the slab's perimeter and in crawl spaces.

5. Don't overlook the roof. Ask the builder what type of shingles he used and whether you have a choice in the style for your home. Fiber glass shingles carry a Class A Fire rating form Underwriters Laboratories and a Wind Resistance rating as well.

Laminated or architectural fiber glass shingles carry warranties of up to 30 years. Not only do they enhance the curb appeal of a home, the longer warranty can be passed on at resale time.

6. Ask the builder if his homes have been rated for energy performance. Owens-Corning's Thermal Crafted home program estimates annual heating and cooling costs for a home before it's built and can help builders comply with building codes.

Other systems the builder might use are the National Association of Homebuilder's Thermal Performance Guidelines and the Suburban Maryland home Builder Association's E-7 program.

Mortgage lenders frequently recognize the value of home energy efficiency. Some even offer buyers of energy-efficient homes higher debt-to-income ratios, allowing purchase of a more expensive home. Ask your builder or local banker for more information.

7. Proper insulation is a primary contributor to a home's energy efficiency. Key areas to look at are the attic, sidewalls and basement. Proper wall insulation includes a combination of batt insulation in interior walls and insulated sheathing, such as fiber glass, applied to exteriors. You won't be able to see either one if your home has been finished, so ask your builder what he used and what the code requirements are in your area.

According to upgraded energy recommendations from the U.S. Department of Energy (D.O.E.) homes should have R-values of at least R-19 in extreme southern regions to R-49 in severe northern climates. (To receive more information about the new D.O.E. insulation recommendations send for a free copy of "The Homeowners' Guide to Insulation and Energy Savings" by writing to M.M.S.U. Mecks, Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp., Fiberglass Tower, Toledo, OH 43659.)

R-values measure energy savings potential—higher values mean greater insulating power. glass fiber insulation is very popular because of its excellent thermal protection, and because it will not absorb moisture and will not rot.

8. Reducing air infiltration is another key component of an energy-efficient house. Check to see that all possible infiltration areas, such as windows, doors and electrical outlets, have been properly caulked and sealed. Insulated doors and double-paned or low-E (low emissivity) windows aren't always standard, so make sure to ask your builder what he uses and what options you have.

9. Check the HVAC (heating, ventilating and air conditioning) equipment to be sure its efficient. Manufacturers are required to provide information on a heating and cooling system's efficiency. If you don't see a bright yellow label with a printed SEER rating, ask your builder for more information on performance.

10. Last but not least, guard against moving into an incomplete home. Make your own list of the "little things" left undone. Obtain from the builder a pre-inspection list of items that need to be finished, and agree on a reasonable time for all items to be completed. Get this list before you move in.

Your home's future
The benefits of a well-built home are two-fold: First, you're assured of a comfortable home with low maintenance costs now and, second, your house will appreciate in value as housing [prices continue to rise. The better the house from the ground up, the greater your return on investment.

One play could run you clear of home buying interference.

Financing, Down Payments, Price negotiations. Inspections. All obstacles that could block you from buying a home.

But one move could get you right through that red tape. A call to an experienced real estate agent.

An expert agent can coach you smoothly through the entire home buying process. From using the sophisticated multiple listing service to find the home that fits your needs and your budget. To tackling financing options. Setting up and monitoring inspections. Negotiating price. And even maneuvering you through closing.

So when you need a skilled teammate, get someone who really knows the housing field—a real estate agent.

Read The Hereford Brand for more information about qualified agents. Every day, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And on Sundays the housing section examines the latest market trends and home buying opportunities.

Getting the right coaching now could mean the difference between confusion and closing.

Woman's Health

WHEN LABOR STARTS TOO SOON

Near the end of pregnancy, some women feel as if their 40-week pregnancy has really been 400 weeks. But give or take a week or two, this length of time is what nature requires for a baby to develop completely.

Nature doesn't always wait those 40 weeks, though. Five percent of pregnant women go into labor prematurely--before 37 weeks. Premature birth is still a very serious problem for babies, but infants born prematurely today have a better chance than ever of surviving and growing into healthy children.

There are certain things that make a woman likely to go into labor early, such as carrying more than one baby, infection, hypertension, a weak cervix (opening to the uterus), problems with the placenta (the organ that filters oxygen and nutrients to the baby), a history of premature labor, and smoking. There are many women who start labor prematurely and have none of these conditions.

A major problem with premature labor is that it may not be apparent to the woman until it's too late, because the signs are often painless. When symptoms are obvious, they may include cramps similar to menstrual cramps, low backache, increase in pelvic pressure, change in vaginal discharge, and diarrhea.

If your doctor confirms early enough that you have started labor too soon, and your bag or waters surrounding the baby has not broken, he or she may be able to stop the labor with medication. However, not all pregnant women can take these drugs, and they do not always work.

Whether or not your doctor can stop your labor, he or she may also give you drugs that will speed up the development of your baby's lungs; underdeveloped lungs are a serious problem for premature babies.

If you are at risk for going into labor early, your doctor has probably told you how to recognize signs of premature labor. If you notice any signs or symptoms of labor before your time is due, call your doctor immediately. Even though at times it seems your pregnancy might never end, those 40 weeks are usually best for your baby.

DENISE PARR-SCANLIN

Junior Music Festival March 30

The annual Junior Music Festival, sponsored by the Hereford Music Study Club, is planned from 6-10 p.m. Thursday, March 30, in First Baptist Church.

Voice and piano students from Hereford and Friona will be participating.

Judging the event will be Archie Coplen of Hereford, who is currently serving as music director of First Baptist Church; former Hereford resident, Carlie Burdett of Amarillo; and Denise Parr-Scanlin, also of Amarillo.

Coplen, a native of Woodville, Texas, received his bachelor of music degree from Texas Wesleyan College and his master of church music from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. He has studied voice under Walter Lynn and Dr. Charles Williamson. He has judged various vocal, choral and handbell festivals in both Texas and Louisiana.

Coplen has resided in Hereford with his wife, Pene, and son, Paul, since August 1985. Before moving to Hereford, he served as music director at Ridglea Baptist Church, Forest Hill First Baptist Church and New Hope Baptist Church, all in Fort Worth, and Trinity Heights Baptist Church in Shreveport, La.

Former Hereford resident, Carlie Burdett, now residing in Amarillo, is the wife of attorney, Tom Burdett, and the mother of three children. Before moving to Amarillo, they lived in Hereford from 1967-1985.

Carlie Burdett grew up in Kerrville and attended Abilene Christian University and the University of Texas at Austin where she studied piano under Helen Haupt before marrying. During her years in Hereford, she taught private piano and music theory classes while continuing to study piano with the late Margaret Heiny of Amarillo, as well as voice with Kathlee Palmer of Hereford.

Burdett's interest in composing music led her to study music theory and composition with Dr. Norman Nelson at West Texas State University where she also studied piano under Stanley Potter. She received her bachelor of music degree in theory and composition in 1984. Since that time, she has continued to compose music for piano, voice and chorus. Burdett is actively teaching piano and music theory classes in Amarillo and is a member of the Amarillo Music Teachers' Association.

Denise Parr-Scanlin received the bachelor of music and master of fine arts degrees in piano from the University of Georgia where she studied with Despy Karlas. She also studied with Nadia Boulanger at the Fontainebleau Conservatory and with Yvonne Loriod in Paris, France. Her appearances as soloist and in chamber ensemble include performances at a number of colleges and universities including Clemson, Southern Illinois, and Rice Universities, the American Church and Fondation des Etats-Unis in Paris, and recitals in Atlanta where she has been heard on the Public Broadcasting affiliate WABE-FM. She has been an artist for Young Audiences of Houston for the last three years.

Parr-Scanlin taught on the music faculties of North Georgia College and Mercer University Atlanta. She currently has a private studio in Amarillo and is the pianist with the chamber music ensemble "Yun."

The bicycle was invented by Kirkpatrick Macmillan, a blacksmith in 1839. It weighed 57 pounds and had a curved wood frame.

Couple to celebrate

A celebration is planned for Saturday, April 8, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Pablo Sanchez who are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary.

The event will be held at San Jose Catholic Church with Father Joe Bixenman conducting Mass at 2 p.m.

Hosts for the occasion will be the couple's children: Beatrice Macias, Carlos, Richard, Pablo, Jr., Dolores, and Isabel. The couple also has five grandchildren: Susie and Stephanie Macias, Eric, Ely and Matthew Sanchez.

Hereford residents since 1960, the couple married on May 23, 1964, at St. Joseph's Mission. She is the former Gabriela Leon and is a housewife; he is employed at Holly Sugar. The couple belongs to San Jose Catholic Church.

CLASSIFIED ADS

Classified advertising rates are based on 14 cents a word for first insertion ($2.80 minimum), and 10 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN.
1 day per word	.14	2.80
2 days per word	.24	4.80
3 days per word	.34	6.80
4 days per word	.44	8.80

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY

Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $3.95 per column inch; $3.25 an inch for additional insertions.

LEGALIS

Ad rates for legal notices are 14 cents per word first insertion, 10 cents per word for additional insertions.

ERRORS

Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

JESUS IS RISEN FROM THE DEAD

Grave in the Garden Reported Empty

Man of Galilee Influenced Many

Last Friday Jesus of Nazareth was put to death by crucifixion. Today the population of this capitol city was rocked by the startling news that he is alive! Who is this man who has made such an impact on the whole city and country?

Born in the city of Bethlehem about 33 years ago, Jesus spent most of his childhood and youth in Nazareth. He lived with his parents, Joseph and Mary, attending the regular Jewish schools and assisting his father in the carpenter shop.

It is reported that the popular preacher had an intense interest in people. On one of his trips to Jerusalem ten men afflicted with leprosy came to him for help. He directed them to report to the priests for inspection. It was on their way to the temple that they were healed.

Certainly a person who can heal a disease such as leprosy would be considered a desirable member of society.

While he and his disciples were resting in the plains near Bethsaida, over five thousand people came out to see and hear him. We are told that Jesus fed the whole group with five loaves of bread and two fish. It is no surprise that they wanted to proclaim him king at this point in his ministry.

When the daughter of Jairus died, we are told, she was restored to life by the words: "Damsel, I say to you, arise." Some of his followers tell us that even though his friend Lazarus had been dead four days, he called him back to life with the words "Lazarus, come forth." It is not surprising that someone who apparently has power over life and death should be heralded as the Son of God.

Although his ministry was marked with concern and compassion for the masses, he nevertheless did take exception to many of the pronouncements and the activities of the leaders of the church. Because of this attitude, the church leaders refused to accept him.

Religious lawyers sought to discredit him in the eyes of the public. When this failed, they plotted his death. Persuading one of Jesus' own followers, Judas Iscariot, to betray him, they succeeded in a conspiracy which ultimately ended in his death.

But did they really succeed? Today it seems that even death could not silence Jesus of Nazareth. While opposition leaders are vigorously seeking to silence the startling reports of his resurrection, there are many others who now are certain that Jesus of Nazareth was not only sent from God, but that he is God Himself.

From The Editor's Desk

We had a different editorial prepared for today's issue. But the news of the events of yesterday changed our plans.

With great interest we had followed the capture, trial and crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth. After He was buried on Friday, we turned to other things. But early yesterday morning, word came to us that this Jesus had returned to life.

What the events of the past weekend will mean to the world is rather difficult to ascertain on the day after Christ's resurrection. From this vantage point, it appears that we can expect great things. Some of the faithful followers of Christ remember the many prophecies concerning the Messiah's coming. Yesterday's events, according to reliable reports, indicate that the Messiah is none other than the risen Christ.

We are told that over four thousand years ago, the Lord reminded Abraham that the members of the Lord's church would be as numerous as sands upon the seashore. Does this mean that the message of the Messiah would cover the whole earth? It is reported that on last Thursday night as Christ met privately with His disciples in the upper room, He prayed to God, saying, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their word."

Could it be that the news of Christ's resurrection will be proclaimed throughout the world? Will the message of Jesus Christ invade the powerful strongholds of Greece and Rome? Is it possible that the risen Christ will become more important than the god Jupiter, or that Socrates and Plato will fade before this One who said, "I am the Son of God?"

It might be well that we all heed the words of the angel, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here; He is arisen! Remember how He spake unto you when He was yet in Galilee, saying, 'The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.'"

Highlights of Jesus' Trial

Early Friday morning Jesus of Nazareth was brought by church-officials in Jerusalem to Governor Pontius Pilate for trial. Five days before, great multitudes of Passover-pilgrims and common people had welcomed Jesus of Nazareth to Jerusalem as the Christ, the King of Israel.

Church authorities expressed fear that such a popular acclaim might easily lead to insurrection and bloodshed. High priest Calaphas suggested that it would be better for one man to die than for the Jewish people to perish.

The charge brought by the church leaders before Pilate, was that Jesus was stirring up rebellion against the Roman Government by claiming to be Christ, a King. When examined by the Governor, Jesus said: 'My kingdom is not of this world....Everyone that is of the truth heareth My voice.'

Pilate ruled that teaching truth is no crime against civil government. King Herod, who was in Jerusalem at the time, agreed that Jesus of Nazareth was not guilty of organizing rebellion against civil authorities.

The Governor invoked the custom of pardoning a prisoner at the Passover-feast. When given a choice the people called for the release of Barabbas and demanded the crucifixion of Jesus. To pacify the Jewish leaders Pilate had Jesus scourged and crowned with thorns, but to no avail. The church-leaders threatened to accuse Pilate of disloyalty to the Roman Emperor, if he failed to sentence Jesus to be crucified. Pilate agreed to do so after symbolically washing his hands to disavow any responsibility of the matter. Thereupon, the accusers expressed willingness to assume the blame by saying: "His blood be on us."

As the procession of the condemned made its way through the crowds on the way to Calvary, Jesus faltered under the weight of his cross. The soldiers drafted the services of a Passover pilgrim, Simon of Cyrene, to carry Jesus' cross. Of this man little is known except that he has two sons, Rufus and Alexander.

Only once did Jesus pause to speak. He then said, "Daughters of Jerusalem! Weep not for me, weep for yourselves and for your children." Briefly he spoke to them of the destruction which He said would come to the holy city of Jerusalem.

Reaching Calvary four soldiers then crucified Jesus and cast lots for His clothing. At the direction of Pilate the soldiers placed the superscription on his cross: JESUS OF NAZARETH, KING OF THE JEWS.

Eyewitnesses Testify To Resurrection

Early yesterday morning several women set out for Joseph's garden to complete the task of anointing Christ's body. They kept asking each other, "Who shall roll away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?"

When they came to the grave they saw that the stone was rolled away. They could hardly believe their eyes, for on the stone was a most unusual person. He was dressed in a pure white garment and his face was as brilliant as lightning.

It is reported that this was an angel and that he told the women, "Fear not, for I know that you seek Jesus who was crucified. He is not here; for He is risen as He said. Come see the place where you and the others put His body. Now go quickly and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead, and He will meet you in Galilee." The women left the grave and as they returned to the city they were met by the risen Jesus whom they immediately recognized.

Another follower of Jesus, Mary Magdalene, also came to the grave early yesterday. Mary remained at the grave and was very dejected over the absence of Christ's body. She even accused a man, whom she thought was the local gardener, of stealing the body. To her utter surprise, this man was none other than the risen Christ who identified Himself by calling her by her name.

Last evening, Jesus appeared to ten of his disciples in Jerusalem. These appearances of Jesus verify that He is truly risen from the dead.

Great Excitement in Emmaus

Late Sunday afternoon a young man, Cleopas, related a strange experience he had earlier in the day.

According to Cleopas, the crucified Messiah is not only alive, but has been seen, talked to and dined with, all during the past twelve hours.

A stranger joined Cleopas and a friend as they traveled to Emmaus. This trio discussed the recent events in Jerusalem. The stranger seemed to be unaware of all the excitement of the last few days.

He asked Cleopas and his friend why they were so sad. Cleopas then explained that their sadness was because Jesus of Nazareth was put to death and even though it was reported that Jesus was alive, no one had seen Him.

When they arrived at Emmaus, they invited this stranger for supper. "It was during the act of blessing the bread that we recognized Him as the risen Christ," Cleopas claimed. "But before we could greet Him and express our joy, He was gone."

Returning to Jerusalem, Cleopas and his friend met with Jesus' disciples and reported what had happened on their trip to Emmaus.

Peter and John related their experience of that morning. They had rushed to the tomb when they heard of the possible resurrection. They found the tomb empty, but identified the grave clothes as those used to wrap Jesus' body for burial.

Suddenly Jesus Himself stood in their midst and said, "Peace be with you."

Charges Church Trial Fake

Charges were made today that the trial of Jesus of Nazareth before the Church Court last Friday was not legal. In an exclusive interview, Joseph of Arimathea, a member of the Sanhedrin, claimed that the death sentence was not unanimous and that a gross miscarriage of justice was committed.

Incensed over the action of the court and claiming an innocent man had been condemned, the eminent counselor referred to the following five improper actions of the court:

1) It is illegal to begin court action at night; yet the first appearance of Jesus before the court took place at approximately two o'clock in the morning.

2) It is illegal to hold court on Friday, the day before the Sabbath, or on the day preceding a high festival; yet Jesus was tried on Friday, the day preceding the Passover.

3) It is illegal to try a prisoner without benefit of defense; yet no witnesses were called in defense of Jesus. (The counselor claims that he called this point specifically to the attention of his fellow-jurists, but that it was denied.)

4) It is illegal to try a man and to pronounce capital punishment within one day; yet Jesus was apprehended, arraigned, tried and crucified within less than eighteen hours.

5) Finally, it is illegal to pass the death sentence on the testimony of one witness alone; yet Joseph claims that none of the witnesses for the prosecution agreed in their testimony against Jesus, and STILL the court condemned him!

The jurist claimed that he refused to vote for condemnation at the trial. Among other obvious reasons, he stated that he is convinced that Jesus of Nazareth is actually the promised Messiah, the Hope of Israel! For this reason he made the new sepulcher in his spacious garden available for the burial of the Nazarene. He also stated that for the same reason, Nicodemus, a respected teacher of religion, assisted in the final rites for Jesus in the garden late Friday afternoon.

Centurion Testifies

The centurion, who was in charge of the crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth and responsible for preserving law and order, gave what may be considered the most eloquent testimony of all in regard to the person who was crucified on Calvary's hill.

He had been a silent witness to all that happened. When questioned soon after the events of Friday, he spoke with conviction. He stated that there had been a great miscarriage of justice, since the words and actions of the man crucified were not those of a man guilty of crime.

When asked who he thought the crucified man was, he replied, "To the best of my knowledge, He was, as He Himself said, the Son of God." That this sort of testimony should come from a man trained in the rigors and discipline of the Roman army is indeed surprising. It is proof that the death of Jesus of Nazareth has had an impact on all with whom He came in contact. Could it be that this confession of the centurion will encourage other centurions to confess Jesus as Lord and Savior?

Reluctant To Condemn Jesus

Checking the transcript of the trial held last week in Pilate's court, this reporter notes that the governor was very reluctant to order the execution of Jesus of Nazareth. The flow of events proves that the Governor placed himself in an awkward position before the church leaders. It must be said nonetheless that had Pilate been more a judge and less a politician, only two men would have been crucified last Friday.

It is quite apparent that from the time of the preliminary examination until the final signing of the death warrant, Pilate was convinced that the prisoner was innocent of the charges preferred. He sensed that the charges were merely a cover-up and that it was envy that motivated the insistence upon the death sentence of Jesus.

Throughout the trial one can hear Pilate stalling "I find no fault in him at all."

It is interesting to note that the esteemed governor sought justice. Hearing that the governor of Galilee was in the city, he sent the prisoner, who was a Galilean, to Herod. However, after examining Jesus, Herod gave the verdict "Not Guilty."

It was at this time that the Governor invoked the use of the age-old Passover custom of releasing a criminal from jail. Shrewdly he selected Barabbas, a hated and dangerous killer. The governor thought that society would not want this crazed rebel and murderer back in circulation. To his distress the leaders persuaded the crowd to ask for Barabbas' freedom and Jesus' death.

Sensing that the crowd would be satisfied with nothing less than blood, the judge compromised justice and ordered the innocent prisoner scourged. Dripping with blood, disheveled and thorn-crowned, Jesus was presented to the crowd as Pilate announced: "Behold, I bring him forth unto you that you may know that I find no fault in him. Behold the Man." Again the crowd would not be pacified. The Governor finally reconciled himself to the fact that neither compromise nor reason would satisfy the mob.

It was then that the opposition took command calling out: "If you release this man, you are not the emperor's friend." Was this a veiled threat? Would Pilate's past misdeeds be reported to Caesar? Reluctantly but deliberately, he washed his hands before the mob, saying: "I am innocent of the blood of this just Person; see to it yourselves." Reluctantly he signed the death warrant for Jesus of Nazareth. Justice finally had been trampled into the dust. Pilate had sold out to the opposition.

This raises some interesting questions: Will Rome condone such action in its courts? Can Pilate continue as Governor? What, in fact, does the future hold for Pilate? Time alone will tell.

Jesus' Burial Near Calvary

Friday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. Jesus of Nazareth died.

Joseph of Arimathea requested permission from Pilate to bury the body in his new tomb which is close to Calvary. The Roman governor granted the request.

Because of the lateness in the day and the approaching Sabbath, the preparation of the body for burial was not completed.

Last Words Of Jesus Unusual

The death of Jesus of Nazareth was unlike any other death. Even the words of this dying man were extraordinary.

After Jesus was nailed to the cross and the cross was placed in an upright position, He prayed for pardon and forgiveness for His enemies. A Roman soldier remarked, "Usually we are cursed to death in hell."

A conversation took place between Jesus on the center cross and the thief who was crucified on His right. The thief apparently recognized in Jesus more than criminal traits as he asked to be remembered by Him in His kingdom. The thief received the answer, "Today you shall be with Me in paradise."

Great concern was expressed about the darkness which prevailed for three hours, from noon to three in the afternoon. Out of that darkness Jesus was heard to cry in a tone of anguish and intense suffering, "My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me?"

It became apparent that Jesus was going through more than physical suffering in His body. There appeared to be a deeper anguish and suffering that went beyond the torment of crucifixion.

A few minutes before His death he shouted, "It is finished!" That appeared to be a shout of victory. Was it a victory just to die? Or was there some other victory or accomplishment He gained through this suffering and death?

At this time analysts are trying to piece together these words of Jesus of Nazareth to determine what meaning they carry. The question being asked is, "Was Jesus giving His life in place of others rather than dying for any crimes He had committed?"

Events in Nature Cause Concern

Phenomena in nature during the past few days have caused the citizens of the area no small concern.

Friday from noon till 3:00 p.m. this city and all the region, possibly the whole world, was shrouded in darkness. Never before in the history of man, as far as can be determined, has the midday sun been completely darkened. This phenomenon was not an eclipse of the sun, since the Passover is held during the period of the full moon, thus making the eclipse impossible.

Two earth tremors of considerable intensity were reported. It seems uncanny if not ominous, that the first quake occurred precisely at the moment Jesus of Nazareth died. The time of the second tremor coincides with the time the Roman guards reported the tomb was opened and found empty.

Such happenings certainly challenge rational and scientific explanation. Can it be that history will pronounce these events "acts of God?"

Judas Iscariot Suicide Victim

Late Friday night a body was found hanging from a rope at the outskirts of Jerusalem. The dead man has been identified as Judas Iscariot, the treasurer of the disciples of Jesus of Nazareth.

Judas had contracted with the church officials to betray Jesus into their hands for thirty pieces of silver. Once the deed was done, Judas apparently was plagued with guilt feelings.

It is reported he tried to return the money to the church officials but they were totally unconcerned. This refusal to accept his offer sparked the traitor's suicide.

Secret Follower Interviewed

Nicodemus, a teacher of religion in Jerusalem, has come out openly in support of the cause of Jesus of Nazareth. One of our reporters secured an interview with the aging religious leader who is rumored to have assisted with the interment of the body of Jesus in Joseph's garden.

It was revealed that Nicodemus has had an increasing conviction that Jesus is the Messiah. On occasion the two met secretly.

In answer to our reporter's questions as to why he considered Jesus to be the promised Messiah, Nicodemus read the following words from Isaiah: "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our grief, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."

Turning from the prophecy, Nicodemus stated, "I can't help believing that these words, as well as many others in the prophecy speak of Jesus Christ. You reporters covered his trial. You were out there on Golgotha when they crucified him. You saw how they manhandled him, how they scoffed and mocked him. What do you think?"

"It may cost me my position; it may even cost me my life, but I can't keep still any longer. I'm ashamed that I haven't spoken out sooner."

"When I recall the events of his life and the words of the scriptures about the Messiah, I cannot but say that this Jesus is the promised Son of God, our Messiah!"

This page is presented with the prayer that the blessings of Easter may continue in your life.
