

Commissioners get bad news on TDC quotas

By KAY PECK
Staff Writer

Concerns about meeting the needs of the Texas Department of Corrections and those of Deaf Smith County dominated much of the county commissioners court meeting on Monday.

Deaf Smith County has already filled its quota of 39 prisoners which it is allowed to send to the Texas Department of Corrections this year, County Judge Tom Simons reported. Last year, the county sent 63 prisoners to state prisons.

Judge Simons paused thoughtfully for several moments as he attempted to phrase his reaction to the TDC quota system.

"Gentlemen, the quota sucks," Judge Simons said.

A TDC edict says that 39 is the maximum number of prisoners which Deaf Smith County will be allowed to send to the state prison system. The prisoners are to be sent in installments of three at a time with each group of three transferred to the state system at specified times.

If the TDC system is full on one of those specified days, Deaf Smith County loses that number of prisoners in the yearly quota. In other words, 39 is the maximum number of prisoners that can be sent. If, hypothetically, the TDC system happened to be full on every one of the allotted days in which the county can transport prisoners to the system, the county would not be allowed to send any prisoners to the TDC.

"We're going to have their people staying in our jails," said Commissioner Johnny Latham.

In the quota system developed by the TDC, 20 of Texas' 240 counties have been allocated 70 percent of the state's prison space.

"We need to let them (state officials) know what this is going to do to us," Judge Simons said.

Juvenile Probation Officer Colleen Duffy was present at Monday's meeting to discuss another aspect of the Texas corrections system. A bill currently under consideration by the Texas legislature would make funds available to counties using alternatives to the Texas Youth Commission for housing juvenile offenders.

At present, Deaf Smith County has a contract with the Lubbock County Youth Center for housing juveniles. If Senate Bill 894 passes, the state may help in funding this contract.

"If I had my druthers, I'd rather send them to Lubbock instead of the Texas Youth Commission," Duffy said.

Three of the commissioners voted in favor of a resolution expressing their support of Senate Bill 894. One member abstained.

Insurance to protect commissioners from possible liability was discussed during the meeting.

"We have some exposure here and have had for some time. We need to seriously consider eliminating as much (of it) as possible," Judge Simons said.

"We dropped our's (commission liability insurance) when it got so high," Commissioner Troy Don Moore said.

Rates have dropped since that time. A quote from the Texas Association of Counties indicated that, with a $1,000 deductible, cost to the county would be $4,494 a year to obtain this insurance.

"I don't know if this is the coverage we want, but we need to look into getting some type of coverage... budgeted or not budgeted," said Commissioner John Stribling.

The commission voted to advertise for bids for the public officials liability coverage.

Confusion about a lease agreement on the telephone system in the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office also concerned the commissioners. They believed that the county was lease-purchasing the system over a five-year period. At the end of that period, county officials thought that the system belonged to the county.

Master Lease, the company holding that lease agreement, says otherwise. Judge Simons indicated that the county had received notification that it was past due in its payments for the phone system.

"In all honesty, I can't find any documentation that will hold Master Lease's feet to the fire," Simons said.

According to the leasing company, the county would need to pay an additional $5,800 to purchase the system.

"I remember when we were buying the system that it was a lease-purchase," Moore said.

Commissioners suggested that additional inquiries be made to AT&T to see if they might be able to provide documentation stating terms of the original agreement.

In other telephone related business, the commission voted to designate AT&T as the county's long distance company. Part of that agreement will include a five percent commission to be paid to the county on pay phones located in the courthouse.

Funds totalling $10,582.50 were allocated to the Panhandle Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center by county commissioners.

"We're using the facility a lot," Simons said in response to the center's request for funds.

A request for funds from the High Plains Food Bank was also approved by commissioners. The food bank will be receiving $1,000 from Deaf Smith County.

In other business, commissioners approved a request to cross a county road with a gas line.

Crowd speaks out on basketball

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Almost 100 persons gathered Monday night at the Hereford High School cafeteria for a public hearing held by the Hereford school board concerning the Hereford basketball program.

Only a few persons in the crowd formally addressed the board, but most were unanimous in one thing: they want to develop a winning, competitive basketball program in Hereford.

The comments centered on the 1988-89 junior high basketball programs. During the past season, the first for Hereford Junior High after the merging of LaPlata and Stanton junior high schools, the program had four "equal" teams in the seventh grade, and two "A" and two "B" teams in the eighth grade.

"Our original plan was to do it the same way in the seventh grade as we did it in the eighth grade," said Hereford athletic director Don Cumpton, "but we were voted down in the district."

The junior high district, which includes Borger, Pampa, Dumas, Valley View and Canyon, decided to divide the seventh grade teams "equally," Cumpton said.

"The other schools didn't divide equally," someone in the crowd blurted out.

Charlene Sanders said she saw both good and bad this year.

"My daughter is a freshman, and the volleyball and basketball (two equal ninth grade teams in each sport) worked out great for her. She played a lot and developed her skills."

"My son is in the seventh grade, and he is a pretty good athlete. I think his skills really went downhill because he became more of a ball hog. Two or three players on each team did most of the work."

"I think we need two top teams and then other players, and play them as much as we can. We should split our good players up between two 'A' teams.

"We need to develop a winning attitude. If you get to lose every time out you don't try as hard. You have to start in the seventh grade and have teams learn to play together. Winning may not be everything, but it helps."

"In theory, everything sounded good about our program," said Royce Spies, a junior high coach. "Everyone had a chance but we didn't compete well. We divided the seventh grade players up evenly. We took the top eight girls and divided them up between the four teams, and we came up with ball-hogs."

"But most of those girls had been to volleyball and basketball camps, and they were more skilled than the others. How do you tell them to share with others? They became ball-hogs because they wanted to win. Some were not competitive because that wasn't their nature."

Spies said the teams competed very well when they were combined for tournaments. "I know they could compete well if they were together all of the time."

One option brought up during the meeting was to make the girls' athletic period strictly basketball, with other sports practicing after school.

"I don't think you should have to pick (one sport over another)," said Brienna Townsend, who played basketball last season. "I think it will hurt basketball because some of us are good at volleyball."

"We should have someone build the program and stay for a while. The new person we get will have nothing to build on, and he or she needs to stay here and build our program."

"I think seventh period basketball (only) would take away from basketball, not the other programs," said Libby Kosub, who starred on

Seed stores in danger of ruin

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) - Thousands of irreplaceable crop seeds are dead or dying in an antiquated, underfunded federal seed bank, imperiling the future of U.S. agriculture.

Furthermore, the United States is jeopardizing access to new seed samples by banning seed trade with six countries it considers adversaries.

These are principal findings of a three-month Associated Press investigation of U.S. policies affecting germplasm, the plant genetic material needed to breed heartier crops able to resist drought, pests, disease and the global warming trend called the greenhouse effect.

American farmers are reaping four times the corn and potatoes per acre that they could 50 years ago. Wheat and rice yields have doubled. At least half of these gains come from higher-yielding crop varieties bred with germplasm from around the world.

Germplasm is "as important as air food, or water," said Henry L. Shands, national leader of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's germplasm program.

The National Seed Storage Laboratory, housed in a three-story yellow building on the Colorado State University campus in Fort Collins, is the world's largest seed bank. Its nine concrete, subterranean storage vaults bulge with 232,210 seed samples in paper and aluminum packets.

But the AP found that in tests conducted within the last five years, only 28 percent of the samples, or 64,036, met a government standard that 66 percent of the seeds in a sample will sprout.

Fully 72 percent, 168,174 samples, either haven't been tested in at least five years, contain too few seeds to risk testing, or failed to meet the 66 percent standard.

"I would maintain that these seed banks are seed morgues. What goes in isn't going to come out alive," said Major Goodman, a crop geneticist at the University of North Carolina.

Many untested samples are certainly dead or dying, either because of improper storage or failure to regrow them quickly enough, said Garrison Wilkes, a crop scientist at the University of Massachusetts in Boston.

And efforts to replenish the collection are being jeopardized by U.S. foreign policy, an AP examination of hundreds of pages of government documents revealed.

Despite an official policy supporting the free flow of germplasm among all nations, the United States has quietly banned germplasm trade with six countries it considers unfriendly: North Korea, Cuba, Cambodia, Vietnam, Nicaragua and Libya.

Some USDA officials have fought the embargoes, fearing a backlash in which other Third World countries would deny germplasm to the United States. Developing countries are the last season's playoff volleyball team and also played basketball.

"As a high school coach, you love those big numbers in junior high," said varsity volleyball coach Brenda Reeh, who also coach junior high girls' basketball. "Plus, you never know who might develop later on."

"We need to teach our kids to win, to be very competitive, and let everyone know that they can contribute. Without winning, you run the risk of losing your top skilled people. You lose good kids because they are not getting a chance to win a lot. You have to have an element of fun, and some didn't have fun this year."

Whatever "solution" is made to the basketball programs won't be decided until new head coaches are hired.

"We want the new coaches to have input on this," Cumpton said.

"We want a better basketball program, and we want a better school system. We want to go to state in every sport," said school board President John Fuston. "We have tremendous teachers, coaches and administrators. We want better for our kids."

In other business, the board accepted the resignations of Mary Dzuik, a teacher at Bluebonnet;

Jamie Hernandez, and teacher at Northwest; and Donna Ratliff, a teacher at Tierra Blanca; accepted a recommendation for non-renewal on the contract of one teacher, and renewed contracts on other teachers considered.

The board also accepted a $10,400 grant from the Texas Department of Human Resources for the identification of school-age students who are not in school because they are caring for children.

The money will be used to hire a person to identify the former students, look at their needs, and make recommendations to the school board.

If you don't believe a proper ZIP Code is important, then consider this: We received our agenda for the Walcott school board meeting in Monday's mail.

On the outside of the envelop was stamped "Delayed because of incorrect ZIP Code."

Someone had transposed the first two numbers of the ZIP Code. "97405" must be somewhere up northwest, because the envelope had a Portland, Oregon postmark on it. The delay was only eight days.

Suzanne Baca, daughter of Audie and Elizabeth Baca and a second grader at St. Anthony's School here, received a pleasant surprise the other day. She found a mass of balloons out in her yard, between here and Dimmitt on U.S. Highway 385.

The balloons had flown several hundred miles from a school in Mesa, Arizona.

I suppose the balloons pretty much followed U.S. Highway 60. Highway 60 is the old main east-west street in Mesa (the Superstition Freeway now carries a lion's share of the east-west through traffic), which is on the east side of the Greater Phoenix Area. Of course, 60 cuts right through the south side of Hereford.

Looking on the map, I figure it's about 554 air miles between here and there. If you've ever been from here to Phoenix on 60, however, you know it doesn't go straight through from here to there. You go southwesterly, and then southerly, and then northwesterly, then southerly, and then west, and it's about 700 miles by road.

Suzanne will also be glad to know at least one teacher, who I won't name, is kinda jealous.

"What were those balloons made of?" this teacher asked when I told her about it. "We send off balloons all of the time, and we never hear anything back from them."

Suzanne said she would respond to her new-found friends in Mesa.

I was waiting in a parking lot for a funeral procession to make its way by on Park Avenue when it dawned on me that thanks are due to the Hereford Police Department.

Some police departments no longer provide escort service for funeral processions. In some towns, you can't get a police escort even if you pay for it.

Not only is it a nice thing to do, but it adds an element of safety. I've went to a funeral a couple of years ago in one nearby large city where the police did not offer an escort. Although all of the cars had their lights on, we had to stop for a couple of traffic lights because when the others had the green light, they pulled into the intersection, expecting us to stop.

I would hope that this local service by the police department will always be available.

Littlefield artists give demonstration

A demonstration and display of "Sculpture in Steel" was presented by artists, Cliff and Carolyn Rogers of Littlefield, when members of Hereford Fine Arts Association met recently.

The couple, who have travelled throughout the United States, create and design steel art sculptures from plow discs. Most of the pieces are shaped into western scenes, animals and birds. They have two "limited editions", one of an owl and the other a pheasant. Only 50 of the pieces will be produced with some overlaid with copper or brass. The pieces range in size from 17 to 32 inches in diameter. They have 225 "original designs" or will make specially requested pieces. Carolyn Rogers is listed in "Who's Who of American Artists." Pieces of the couple's art work have been sent to West Berlin in an art exchange program with Germany.

The recipient of the dinner-out certificate was Suzy Wall.

The next meeting is planned at 7 p.m. April 11 in the art room of the Hereford Community Center. Angeline Shockley will present the program on China painting. Visitors are welcome to attend.

Co-hostesses, Dorothy Mayfield and Wall, served refreshments from a table decorated with an Easter theme. Members present included Linda Minchew, Jolene Bledsoe, Bobbie Wilson, Wall, Vinita Wear, Melba Dillard and Zelma Dillard.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I sympathize with the frustration expressed by the woman who wrote that she has tried to get off welfare.

Living on welfare is lousy. But it doesn't have to be that way, at least not in Massachusetts, where for the last six years we have had the Employment and Training (ET) Program. ET has placed more than 55,000 welfare recipients in jobs, and 75 percent of them are off welfare.

The philosophy behind ET is simple—provide a woman with day care, health care and transportation and offer her choices of education, training and, eventually, a job, and she will find her way out of poverty.

Here is one of our success stories: Mary Hotz is 32 years old. Ten years ago Mary was divorced and she was left with a year-old daughter to support. She moved in with her parents and worked part-time. But she could never make enough to get off welfare. She was on welfare for nine years and then one day she saw a notice about a training program that would teach her high-tech secretarial skills.

Because we could offer her day care, she grabbed the opportunity. Today, Mary Hotz is an administrative secretary at the Heller School for Social Welfare at Brandeis University. She earns nearly $21,000 a year and can now provide for her 11-year-old daughter. "ET turned my life around," she said.

There are thousands of stories like Mary's in Massachusetts. I am convinced that with the Family Security Act of 1988 about to take effect, every state in the nation will have programs like ET to give welfare recipients a chance to build an independent life. —MICHAEL S. DUKAKIS

DEAR GOV. DUKAKIS: Thank you for an excellent letter.

Several states have a similar program now, and it is wonderful to know that soon this set-up will be available in all 50. (Thanks, Washington, for finally coming through!)

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to you in the hope of helping someone who is wrestling with the decision of leaving his or her spouse for a new love.

I am a 37-year-old man, who, last spring, fell deeply in love with a volunteer at the church where I was a minister. We both agreed to leave our spouses. I resigned from the church and moved out of the house.

The following day, the woman of my dreams called to say she had changed her mind. One week later she wrote to say she had made a terrible mistake trying to stay in an unworkable marriage and begged me to take her back. In the end, she attempted to leave her husband four times, and went back to him every time.

My wife fell in love with someone else and will marry as soon as our divorce is final. I now live alone and work in our family business. A love affair that didn't work out has cost me my marriage, my children, my career, my house, my car, my boat, my self-respect, my reputation and endless grief.

I have no one to blame but myself. Through prayer and counseling, I hope to be able to rebuild what I have destroyed.

Anyone who is contemplating leaving a wife and family for an exciting new love should think twice about crossing that line from best friends to lovers. I wish I had. —BURNED TO THE BONE IN THE MIDWEST

Alaskan trip subject of program given to study club

Aileen Montgomery highlighted her trip to Alaska taken in July of 1988 when members of La Afflatus Estudio Club met recently in the Deaf Smith County Library Heritage Room.

Montgomery and a relative took the Alaska Historical Tour beginning by flight in Amarillo to Fairbanks, Alaska and then taking a train to Anchorage, Alaska. They reached their final destination to Juneau, Alaska by boat.

The speaker remarked, "the Alaskan people are born to live by the clock, not by the sun." She also mentioned the numerous heat meters found on parking lots used to avoid motors from freezing.

Montgomery spoke of the permafrost, the beautiful flowers and the large cabbage heads which are found in Alaska and noted that there are 400,000 permanent residents in Alaska with one-half of them residing in Anchorage.

During the business meeting conducted by Mary Williamson, Virginia Beasley read the minutes of the previous meeting and the correspondence. Members were reminded that the next meeting will be held at Something Special at 3 p.m. April 4 with Opal Elliston serving as Tuesday, March 28th.

Brown's homers lead Herd over Loboes

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

It may be easier to list the things Keith Brown did not do in the fifth inning of the Hereford baseball team's 10-2 win over Levelland last Saturday. He didn't sell Cokes in the concession stand, and he didn't help the crew resurfacing the track at Whiteface Stadium.

He did make about a 40-yard sprint to catch a fly ball in right field for the third out in the top of the inning. Then, in the bottom of the inning, with a man on, he hit a two-run homer that broke open a close game.

Brown wasn't finished. He homered again in the sixth to finish Hereford's scoring.

"I've been coaching baseball for 13 years, and I've never had anyone hit two home runs in one game," said Hereford coach T.R. Sartor. "Keith had a pretty good day. It looks like he is finally rounding into the form we had been hoping for all year."

Also having a good day was Hereford pitcher Jason Scott, who struck out 11 and scattered six hits to improve his season's record to 5-0.

"That's almost two strikeouts an inning," Sartor said. "That is pretty good pitching."

"I thought Jason spotted his pitches very well. He spotted his curve very well."

His fourth pitch of the game, however, was spotted going over the left field fence, as Levelland leadoff hitter Steven Ochoa timed a 2-1 pitch to give Levelland a 1-0 lead.

Hereford came back to score two in the bottom of the second to take the lead for good, and Scott, who saw four of Levelland's six hits go for extra bases, gave up just one more run the rest of the way.

In the second, Brown and Clint Cotten walked to open the inning, and Stuart Miits' sacrifice bunt moved them along. Jared Victor then singled to center, scoring both runners for a 2-1 lead.

The teams went down in order in the third, then Levelland threatened in the fourth when Jay Fortner doubled to center and went to third on a throwing error. Then Brown made his long running catch to rob Dennis Mata and end the inning, came in, grabbed a bat, and knocked the second pitch from Tim Prado over the fence in right to extend Hereford's lead to 3-1.

Hereford struck for two more runs in the fourth. Cotten singled to right, but was forced at second on a fielder's choice by Miits. Victor stroked a ground rule double that bounced over the fence in left, moving Miits to third.

After Scott struck out, Glenn Parker singled to left, scoring Miits and Victor to give Hereford a 5-1 lead.

Levelland scratched out a run in the fifth on a double and single to close the lead to 5-2, but Hereford scored twice in the bottom of the fifth to extend its lead.

Russell Backus knocked a one-out double to center, then Brown hit his second homer, again going to right field, giving Hereford a 7-2 lead.

In the top of the sixth, Hereford overcame an error to throw out a runner during a bizarre inning.

base. However, Fortner was called out for batter interference for stepping out of the box and in front of catcher Kyle Andrews as he attempted the throw to second. That sent Wiley back to first.

Mancias then hit a ball down the first base line that was speared by McCracken. The ball was ruled foul, and Wiley, after a short demonstration, retreated to first.

Two pitches later, Wiley stole second as the throw from Andrews bounced into left field after hitting the sliding Wiley. He went to third as shortstop Backus ran down the ball. Wiley tried to score, but Backus hit Andrews with a one-bounce throw to the plate for the out.

In the bottom of the sixth, Hereford scored three times after two were out to put the game completely out of reach.

Andrews worked Prado for a walk, then McCracken got his second intentional walk of the game. Backus singled to center, scoring Andrews and moving McCracken to third.

Brown then singled, scoring McCracken and moving Backus to third. Backus scored on a single to center by Cotten to give Hereford a 10-2 lead.

In the seventh, Ledesma popped up to Backus, then Scott struck out the last two batters for his fifth win of the year and 54 strikeouts in 35 innings.

"We didn't have any fielding errors today," Sartor said. "We came real close to concentrating on defense for seven innings."

"The offensive part is coming around, and pitching this past week has been good. If we can get our defense to concentrate for seven innings, we'll

Congratulations for Brown

Teammates prepare to congratulate Keith Brown, center, after Brown hit his second home run of the day during Hereford's baseball game against Levelland at Whiteface Field. Brown had two home runs and a two-RBI single to lead the Herd to a 10-2 win over the Loboes.

be good." Sartor singled out other days at the plate by Victor, who went 2-for-3; Parker, who went 1-for-3 with a sacrifice; and Miits, who went 2-for-3.

"If these guys produce for us all year, we'll be in good shape. And they just wouldn't pitch to Roger. He got those two intentional walks, and when you intentionally walk a guy with first base occupied, that's nothing but respect."

Today, the Herd was scheduled to play at Borger.

Boys fourth at Hobbs

The Hereford boys' track team finished fourth overall in the Hobbs, N.M. Track Meet last Saturday.

Brad Mason set a new school record for the Herd in the pole vault. Mason vaulted 14 feet, breaking the old record of 13-6 set by Craig Jones in 1986.

Mason finished second.

Earning first places were George Madrigal in the 400 meters with a time of 50.90 seconds; Pat Mercer in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles in 39.86 and Brooke Perkins with a 21.9 in the 200-meter dash.

Placing second were Mason in the pole vault and Benny Gonzales in the shot put with a toss of 53-5.

Placing third was the 1,600-meter relay team of Blas Cantu, Mercer, Perkins and Madrigal in 3:31.31 despite not having Kelvin Brown, who pulled up in the 400; and Tate Smith with a jump of 6-2 in the high jump.

"Our distance people (including Jimmy Leinen, Carl Delozier and Tim Stagner) improved a bunch this week, too," said head boys' track coach Ron Young. "For a 13-team field we did real well, and coming back from spring break like this, we did a heckuva job."

"We need to improve more this week at San Angelo. It's going to be a tough track meet."

Here are the results from last weekend's meet:

- 400: 1. George Madrigal, 50.90.
- 300 IH: 1. Pat Mercer, 39.86.
- 200: 1. Brooke Perkins, 21.9.
- 1600: 4. Carl Delozier, 4:45.37; 5. Jimmy Leinen, 4:46.23.
- 1600 medley relay: 6. (Kelvin Brown, Blas Cantu, Ricky Montelongo and Tate Smith).
- 1600 relay: 3. (Blas Cantu, Pat Mercer, Brooke Perkins and George Madrigal) 3:31.31.
- Shot: 2. Benny Gonzales, 53-4.
- High Jump: 3. Tate Smith, 6-2.
- Pole vault: Brad Mason, 14-0 (new school record, old record 13-6 by Craig Jones).

Whaddaya mean, out?

As the umpire brushes off home plate and Hereford catcher Kyle Andrews looks away, Levelland's Alonzo Wiley pleads his case after being called out on a tag play in Saturday's game. Wiley, who had just had two aborted steal attempts at second base, came around from first after Andrews' throw got away at second, but the ball was retrieved by shortstop Russell Backus, who fired to Andrews for the putout. Hereford won the game, 10-2.

Hearing begins in Carter case

AUSTIN (AP) - A legal dispute over a Dallas high school football player's grades and eligibility is more important to the state education commissioner than to the school district, an attorney in the case says.

"Obviously, the state is using this ... to further define and clarify the commissioner's role," said Don Hicks, who is representing the Dallas Independent School District against the Texas Education Agency.

Hicks said Education Commissioner William Kirby needs to know "the scope and extent of his power" under the state's no-pass no-play rule.

"Because he'll have future cases, and there's a chance for this to repeat," Hicks said Monday, after he and attorneys for the state rested their cases before State District Judge Paul Davis.

Davis will decide whether Kirby had legal authority to rule Carter High School senior running back Gary Edwards ineligible because of a grade that the school district said had been a mistake.

The case could affect education policies statewide.

"The main issue in this case is not football," Royce West, an attorney representing Edwards told Davis during Monday's proceeding. "It's local control over state control" of school districts and grading policies.

"The (state education) commissioner should not impose his will on local school districts and on elected officials," West said.

Davis' ruling could change local grading policies if they are shown to undermine reforms achieved under the no-pass no-play rule governing extracurricular activities.

"It becomes no-pass no-play," said assistant attorney general Kevin O'Hanlon, if a grade can be changed by the school district to allow a student to compete in sports.

DISD has argued that Kirby has no legal authority to interfere with the decision on Edwards or in any local grading, which is the province of local, elected school boards.

The TEA and the University Interscholastic League argued that Kirby has authority to decide grade disputes.

Davis gave both sides a week to submit other courts' rulings supporting their positions. Neither side offered testimony and DISD asked Davis to refer to evidence it submitted during a December hearing.

The controversy started in November before the state football playoffs, when an anonymous tipster urged the TEA to examine the grades of Carter senior running back Gary Edwards, who received a failing grade in algebra for the first six-weeks of the fall 1988 semester.

Under the state's no-pass no-play rules, students who receive a failing grade cannot participate in extracurricular activities until the following grading period.

School district officials said Edwards' teacher had erred in grading and that Edwards was eligible. But Kirby ruled in a December hearing that Edwards failed the course.

As a result, Carter was disqualified from the playoffs. But the school district obtained a temporary injunction allowing the team to compete and eventually win the state's Class 5A championship.

If Davis rules in favor of the TEA this time, Carter's title will be invalidated, said Don Hicks, DISD attorney.

Hicks said he doubted the district would appeal if it lost.

Seton Hall studies video tapes

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo has almost 25 videotapes of Duke's basketball team in action. That means only that Carlesimo gets more looks at the different problems the Blue Devils will present the Pirates on Saturday in the NCAA tournament semifinal game at Seattle.

"Duke can throw different combinations at you," Carlesimo said during an informal meeting with reporters Monday. "They can put in a small, quick, athletic team or they can bulk up with a bigger lineup. Their parts are very interchangeable."

Carlesimo said he still hasn't decided how the Pirates, making their first Final Four, will handle Duke's Danny Ferry.

"I think there will be a lot of switching on defense," Carlesimo said, adding that reserve center Anthony Avent could see a lot of action against Ferry.

"Anthony is quicker and may be more athletic than most of our big men and may play a lot," Carlesimo said. "We just want to make Ferry work for his points."

Give your lawn a head start

This is the time of the year to give lawns a little "tender loving care" so that they will green up fast once spring gets into full swing.

"Lawns need to be rejuvenated in late winter to give them a head start in greening up," said Dr. Richard Duple, a turfgrass specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. He said that scalping, fertilizing and applying a weed killer are important steps in getting a lawn off to a good start.

"Scalping is a key first step in revitalizing a lawn and promoting early spring green-up," said Duple. "Lower your lawnmower blade one-half to one inch below the normal setting. Then mow your lawn in two directions at right angles to each other. Remove the clippings after each mowing and use them for a compost or as a mulch for garden and landscape plants."

The specialist said that it's best

NEW YORK (AP) - The Hollywood that insider Carrie Fisher knows best is a place full of stereotypes where actors can't get respect.

"Hollywood is still a sexist business," the daughter of Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher says in the April issue of Cosmopolitan magazine.

"The most successful businesswomen are considered to be masculine. ... What would be regarded as good business qualities in men are put down in women."

Fisher, who played Princess Leia in the "Star Wars" movies and wrote a roman a clef about her days as a drug addict, "Postcards From the Edge," says she was amazed at how her fellow professionals were treated.

to keep the lawn mower blade at the proper setting until late spring. Raising the blade at that time will help lawns to better survive hot, dry summer conditions.

"After scalping, add a complete fertilizer to promote leaf and root growth," Duple said. "A complete fertilizer is one that contains nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, as indicated on the label, with nitrogen being the first number."

"Apply about one-and-a-half pounds of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet of lawn area. That's about 18 pounds of an 8-8-8 fertilizer (18x8 percent) or 12 pounds of a 12-12-12 fertilizer (12x12 percent). Repeat the application again in the fall."

For a dark green lawn, apply nitrogen every 50 days at about one pound per 1,000 square feet, said the specialist. Monthly applications of iron chelate or iron sulfate during the spring and summer also contribute to a healthy color in St. Augustinegrass lawns.

To keep crabgrass and other weeds from becoming a problem in lawns, apply a preemergence herbicide (weed killer) in early spring, said Duple.

"Combinations of herbicides and fertilizers are available and convenient to use but, as with all chemicals, they should be used only according to label directions," Duple said. "Be especially cautious when using herbicides around trees, shrubs and other landscape plants."

"Once these early season maintenance practices have been done, watch your lawn develop into a nice green carpet and enjoy it to the fullest," Duple said.

4-H Around the County

BY DAVY VESTAL
County
Extension Agent

4-H livestock judging practices have begun and will continue through April 20. Meetings are held from 4-6 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday. The groups meet on the parking lot of the Hereford Community Center and travel to see livestock. If your child would be interested in participating, have him/her meet with the groups.

Livestock judging provides an excellent learning experience for youth on the concept of selecting superior breeding and desirable market livestock including beef cattle, swine and sheep.

METHOD DEMONSTRATIONS

Twenty-eight 4-H'ers from the Hereford area are working diligently on preparing method demonstrations and illustrated talks. Many of these youth will be featured at local civic club meetings in the next two months. The public is invited to see all the demonstrations Thursday, April 13, at the Hereford Community Center during the County 4-H Round Up.

BUCKET CALF PROGRAM

The Summer 4-H Bucket Calf Program will begin May 1. The program is open to youth between the ages of five and 12. All calves must be on feed by May 20. If interested in the program, please contact the county extension office at 364-3573. Anyone that lives within the city limits will be eligible to keep a calf at the school project center. Don't let not having a place to put a calf be your excuse in not entering this project.

4-H SHOOTING SPORTS

The 4-H Shooting Sports Program will get underway with an introductory and sign-up meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, May 1, at the Community Center. For more information about shooting sports, call the extension office.

4-H HORSE PROGRAM

The 4-H Horse Program will get lined up in April. Carol and Guy Walker will assist with this project. Please call to sign up.

4-STEER PROJECTS

4-H steer projects are being obtained at this time. If your family is interested please get in touch with Davy Vestal at the extension office. There is still time to find a steer and room is available at the project center for a steer.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Five years after their popular "Victory" album and concert tour, members of the Jackson singing family are set to release a new album, but superstar sibling Michael will play only a minor role.

The album will feature brothers Jermaine, Jackie, Randy and Tito, with singing contributions by brothers Michael and Marlon and sisters LaToya and Janet, publicist Mitchell Schneider said Tuesday.

The expected May release of the album will be preceded by the single and video "Nothin' (That Compares 2 U)," which will draw on the Jacksons' tradition of alternating lead vocals and harmonies.

Label savvy necessary for wise food selection

LABEL SAVVY

"Light" hot dogs, "no cholesterol" peanut butter, "85 percent fat free" turkey sausage--what do they all have in common? They are loaded with fat. Are you surprised?

"You can't always judge a food by its label," says Darlene Dougherty, RD (registered dietitian), president of the American Dietetic Association (ADA), as she offers helpful label reading tips during March, ADA's celebration of National Nutrition Month. "For example, 'light' on a food label can mean anything from lighter texture to less salt. You can't assume that the product is lower in calories, which is a mistake consumers often make."

According to Dougherty, the term "no cholesterol" is also widely misunderstood. Many consumers seem to believe that if a food package says "no cholesterol" it is low on fat. "Ironically, since cholesterol is found only in foods of animal origin, many 'no cholesterol' foods such as vegetable oils, peanut butter, and margarine never had cholesterol to begin with, but are still high in fat."

Consumers can also be confused into thinking that a product is low in fat by reading its label. "Do not confuse '96 percent fat free' or '85 percent lean' with fat calories," warns Dougherty. These descriptions refer to the weight of fat in a food, not fat calories. "After all, fat by weight is light--it floats on water, but it packs double the calories of protein and carbohydrates by weight," Dougherty adds.

There are easily more than 1000 foods in the grocery store that feature health claims such as lower fat, no cholesterol, or reduced calories. But having one positive health attribute does not necessarily make a product an ideal food, according to the ADA president. "Just because a product is low in calories doesn't also mean it's low in sodium. For example, a lean frozen entree may be only 300 calories, but it's packed with a 1000 milligrams of sodium. The average American only needs 1100 to 3300 milligrams of sodium for the entire day. To put that in perspective, one teaspoon of table salt contains 2000 milligrams.

Sometimes foods are perceived as healthy and maintain this reputation regardless of the form in which it is sold. "Take plain popcorn, an excellent snack, high in fiber, low in calories and fat. However, most microwave popcorn brands have 40 to 60 percent fat calories. Most consumers would know this if they took time to read the label," Dougherty states. This also seems to apply to turkey and any of its products. Turkey hot dogs, for example, can have up to 60 percent fat calories, depending upon the brand.

The bottom line, explains Dougherty, is "never to assume, always read the label." She advises consumers to "use a food label to your advantage and inspect the ingredient list. If nutrition information is available, check the amount of fat, sodium and calories per serving."

To keep your fat intake in line (30 percent fat calories daily), ADA's Dougherty suggests some easy guidelines: "As a general rule of thumb, remember that five grams of fat is approximately equal to one teaspoon of fat. To easily figure fat calories in a food, multiply the grams of fat by nine, or round up to 10, which is much quicker when you are shopping." Then compare this with the total calories in one serving.

The American Dietetic Association, whose 57,000 members comprise the nation's largest group of nutrition professionals, is dedicated to the promotion of optimal health and nutritional status of the population.

Seeds: Few safeguards exist birthplace of most important food crops, and it is there geneticists must go to search for desirable new traits. The issue is expected to flare April 17-21 at a meeting in Rome of the Commission on Plant Genetic Resources, part of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization. Recent advances in genetic engineering have further raised the stakes. The ability to swap genes among different species will greatly reduce the time it takes to breed new crop varieties.

Jeremy Rifkin, a well-known activist who has won important court battles to regulate biotechnology, filed suit in 1987 charging the USDA with harming the environment by failing to safeguard its seed samples. A decision is expected soon. A visit to the Fort Collins lab found no guards or alarm systems protecting the seeds or costly lab equipment. The vaults are protected by a metal gate secured only with a common padlock. Campus police patrols provide the only insurance against thieves or terrorists.

Even critics acknowledge, however, that conditions have recently improved. For much of its 31-year existence, the lab operated on budgets of less than half a million dollars. Funding more than doubled in 1988 from $927,580 to $2 million. Much of the credit is given to Shands and Steve A. Eberhart, a research geneticist who became the lab's director in March 1987. Under Eberhart, staff has been increased, and vital seed data are being transferred from file cards to computers. But even Eberhart concedes it will take years, and millions more dollars, to correct the lab's failings.

The four other seed banks where many of the Fort Collins samples are duplicated are in trouble themselves, according to figures in minutes of a September 1986 meeting of the USDA's Plant Germplasm Operations Committee. At the Ames, Iowa, seed bank, 35 percent of samples are "in critical need of regeneration," as are 25 percent at Pullman, Wash., 33 percent at Experiment, Ga., and 50 percent at Geneva, N.Y. These are the most recent figures available, said Shands. Donald Duvick, director of research for Pioneer Hi-Bred International and one of the deans of the U.S. seed industry, said:

Conformity in crops a danger

By PAUL RAEBURN and LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writers
WASHINGTON (AP) - In 1970, 15 percent of the U.S. corn crop was wiped out when a disease called southern corn leaf blight raced through the grain belt. More than $1 billion in corn was lost in a single year because the U.S. crop lacked sufficient variations in genetic material, or germplasm, according to Jack Doyle of the Environmental Policy Institute in Washington.

They all contained genes from a single corn plant with a genetic variant that simplified the production of hybrid seeds, said Don Duvick, vice-president in charge of research at Pioneer Hi-Bred International in Des Moines, Iowa, one of the nation's largest producers of seed corn. The genes from that plant also made the corn susceptible to southern corn leaf blight. If breeders had used a wider variety of germplasm to breed American corn varieties, many varieties would not have been susceptible to the blight. The catastrophic losses of 1970 would have been avoided.

As a consequence, lab officials were unable to say with any accuracy how many of their seed samples are alive. Rep. George E. Brown, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee on Operations, Research and Foreign Agriculture, called the U.S. germplasm system "lousy, measured against the importance of the problem." Each seed vault at the Fort Collins laboratory can hold 15,000 to 30,000 seed packets. Six cryogenic tanks contain wheat, barley, oats, lotus and other grains supercooled with liquid nitrogen, a process pioneered here in hopes of extending the life of seed samples indefinitely.

"Our national singularity in collecting, storing, rearing and describing the collections is inexcusable, not only in regard to our national obligations, but also in regard to our responsibility to the entire world."
Next: Playing Politics With Seeds

The blight was the closest American agriculture has come to duplicating the Irish potato famine of 1845-9, in which more than 1 million people died of starvation. In each case, the genetic uniformity of the potatoes and the corn meant that virtually the entire crop was susceptible to destruction by a single enemy. If the plants had been more genetically varied, only some would have succumbed, and the losses wouldn't have been as catastrophic.

Current American corn varieties no longer contain the genetic material that made 1970 corn susceptible to the blight. But they remain closely related genetically, and a new pest or disease that could exploit the shared genes might once again destroy a large portion of the crop, experts say. "If that is going to happen, we'd better have some genetic variation on hand to deal with it," said Peter Day, director of the Center for Agricultural Molecular Biology at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

Eight of the nine vaults are full, and the last vault is nearly so, according to the lab's annual review written in February. The USDA computer analysis found that in five years only 82,538 seed samples, or slightly more than one-third of the lab's total, had been tested to see what percentage of seeds in each sample remained alive, said Loren Wiesner, the laboratory's curator. Twenty-two percent of those tested, or 18,502 samples, were below the USDA's 66 percent standard, Eberhart said.

From Ben Franklin to the FAO

By The Associated Press
Here is a chronology of some important events in the history of plant breeding. Sources include "Biotechnology and Genetic Diversity," by Steven C. Witt, director of California Agricultural Lands Project, and material from the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization.
1770: Benjamin Franklin, then a colonial agent in England, sends home America's first soybeans.
1845-9: The Irish potato famine kills more than 1 million people and turns 2.5 million others into emigrants. Scientists cite it as one of history's prime examples of the genetic vulnerability of agricultural crops.
1898: U.S. Department of Agriculture opens its "Section of Seed and Plant Introduction."
1917: Stem rust destroys more than 2 million bushels of U.S. wheat; government orders two "wheatless days" a week.
1925: Soviet scientist Nikolai Vavilov, modern history's greatest seed hunter and plant geneticist, leads first global seed expeditions. Imprisoned by Stalin in 1940, he dies three years later.
1930: U.S. Plant Patent Act is passed, providing protection for plant cuttings of new crop varieties.
1945: The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization is founded.
1960: The National Seed Storage Laboratory opens in Fort Collins, Colo.
1970: Southern corn leaf blight, called the "genetic shot heard 'round the world," destroys U.S. corn worth $1 billion and raises world consciousness about genetic diversity and importance of preserving germplasm.
1970: Congress passes Plant Variety Protection Act, extending patent rights to new varieties propagated with seeds as well as with plant cuttings.
1973: First successful experiments with genetic engineering greatly increase potential value of plant germplasm, enabling germplasm to be spliced directly into crops, saving years of tedious breeding.
1974: International Board for Plant Genetic Resources is founded to coordinate collection of germplasm and preservation in seed banks around the world. USDA establishes the National Plant Germplasm System.
1979: Researchers publish report on the discovery of Zee diploemennia, a perennial wild relative of corn with valuable disease resistance.
1980: U.S. Supreme Court, in Diamond vs. Chakrabarty, extends patentability to genetically altered bacteria, suggesting that it's possible to patent genetically engineered plants.
1981: General Accounting Office issues report sharply critical of U.S. seed bank system.
1983: An FAO commission enacts the International Undertaking on Plant Genetic Resources, extending principle of free international flow of germplasm to patented commercial seeds.
1987: FAO commission establishes international fund to channel money from industrialized nations to training and conservation programs for germplasm in developing countries.
