OPEC Prices To Soar

GENEVA. Switzerland (AP) - The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries today raised the base price of its crude oil to a range of $18 to $23.50 a barrel.

The 13-nation oil cartel set its new base price at $18, up from $14.55. It also said members could add surcharges of as much as $2 a barrel as market conditions permit, but set the maximum price of a barrel of OPEC oil, including allowances for quality, at $23.50 a barrel.

Experts calculate that the rise in OPEC prices probably will add about 4 cents a gallon to prices of gasoline and heating oil in the United States.

It is the biggest boost in OPEC prices in five years.

The decision leaves OPEC with a two-tiered price structure, much like the one the cartel had in the first half of 1977.

Saudi Arabia, which had held out for a low price. Qatar and the United Arab Emirates will be the only countries actually charging $18 a barrel. Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani told a news conference

The agreement was worked out late Wednesday night, prolonging the meeting into a third day, after moderate and radical members "narrowed the gap gradually until they got where they are." said Cyrus Ebrahimzadeh of the Iranian delegation:

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. today asked the Texas Public Utility Commission for rate increases that would raise monthly bills for household telephones by $1.55.

The commission is expected to begin hearings on the Bell request in September.

Bell's rate increase package, which also includes higher prices for PBX equipment. Centrex service, key telephones and installation service. would raise the company's revenue by $145.2 million a year.

.Of the total, $105 million would come from raising the price of local service that is, basic rates for home and business telephones.

"Continuing growth and inflation leave us no choice but to ask for increased rates," said Doyle Rogers, the company's vice president for Texas.

Rogers said Bell really needs $242.9 million in new revenue but held down its request because of President Carter's price guidelines.

He said the request would provide Bell a 6.09 percent average statewide increase in Bell's Texas revenue.

Consumers, however, would feel a greater percentage increase than that. The $1.55 requested hike in one-party residential telephone rates would amount to 19.4 percent in Houston, 20.6 percent in Dallas, 22.1 percent in Fort Worth and San Antonio, 23.8 percent in Austin, 25.8 percent in Lubbock, Amarillo, Corpus Christi, Beaumont, Waco and Edinburg: and 26.9 percent in Abilene, Texas City. In the smallest class of cities - such places as Brackettville. Cameron, Marfa, San Diego and Refugio - the $1.55 increase would amount to a 32.6 percent increase.

WASHINGTON (AP) : Demonstrating grain farmers lobbied Congress from their tractors in early 1978 when wheat prices were far below $3 a bushel and again last winter when they were. a dollar higher

Now, with wheat futures prices well above the $4 mark, the bakers are in town.

They are complaining to Congress and raising one of the most emotional issues surrounding food and farm policy: the price of

Futures prices, higher than wheat farmers actually get, rose 27 percent, or $1.02 a bushel, in the first three weeks of this month in response to reports of a poor Soviet grain crop and a chance of problems with U.S. crops this season.

Cereal and bakery product prices before that hike had risen 9.5 percent in a year, the Labor Department says.

The bakers were also pleading their case in Washington in 1973 after bad crops in Russia and elsewhere, a drop in protein-rich fish catches and a series of other economic problems led to a run on huge U.S. grain stockpiles. Phey returned in early 1975, after a poor U.S. corn crop and renewed Soviet purchases led to higher prices for all grains and wheat hit its record price of over $5 a bushel.

One of their leaders both times raised the specter of $1 a loaf bread and was immediately denounced by then-Agriculture. Secretary Earl L. Butz and farm groups.

They pointed out that Americans can consume only 39 percent of the wheat their farmers grow and the growers need the export markets. The issue invariably arose any time the protesters spoke this year.

Food-price increases that eventually came to 14.5 percent a year for both 1973 and 1974 were one result of the first boom.

But at the peak of wheat prices, Agriculture Department calculations show, the farmer got 6 cents for the grain in a one-pound loaf of white bread. That share later was below 4 cents for about two years.

The normal size loaf consumers buy is one pound, six ounces. George Rosenthal, an official of the Independent Bakers Association, told reporters Wednesday; "The bottom line for consumers is that the recent $1.02 increase in wheat prices has raised flour costs over 2 cents per pound and has added 2 cents to the cost of a one-pound loaf. We don't want to see the farmer go out of business," he said, but present prices will add about $513 million to consumer food bills each year That's about $2.31 a person and less than what taxpayers have paid in lean years to keep grain growers' incomes at the targets

If the trend continues, prices could rise another 2 cents a pound by December, he said for a new average near 80 cents. Asked why the bakers were not complaining about gasoline and operating fuel prices that have risen as much or more this year. Rosenthal said, "Fuel costs have increased but not to the extent that flour has. Bakers are the seventh-largest energy users in the nation, others in the group said.

'Increases in fuel costs can gradually strangle us," said David Stroman of Williamsport, Pa., "but a rise in flour prices can slit The organization called for no increase in grain target prices, which are now below market prices for the first time in three years anyway. They also called for full production next season. Government acreage controls have been in effect the last two years because of a backlog of unsold grain.

The independents also want a guarantee that the Russians will be allowed to buy no more than the 15 million tons of grain the Carter administration has approved for the year ending Sept. 30. Finally, they want Congress to set up a system under which USDA would have to clear any grain or soybean exports "to

Carter Can't Tell

Success of Summitt

TOKYO (AP) - The first session of the seven-nation economic summit ended today with President Carter reporting "it's too early to tell" whether agreement can be reached on fixing country-bycountry targets to limit oil imports.

Carter said he and the others meeting here hope to come up with a formula. But American officials emphasized that "a great deal of work remains to be done. particularly on short-term commitments, European participants in the summit have been pressing for a freeze on oil imports through 1985, while Carter favors emphasis on import curbs that would focus more directly on the next 18 months.

The meeting began with an outward display of harmony despite evident friction over the specifics of an energy plan for the industrialized non-communist nations.

Consumer Asked

WASHINGTON (AP) - Consumers are being urged to strike for one day this fall to protest the government's failure to dampen inflation, which has skyrocketed to an annual rate of 13.4 percent.

"Unless consumers stand up in an organized manner...they will never be able to deal with the deterioriating and fast crumbling" economy, consumer advocate Ralph Nader told a coalition of 70 consumer, labor, religious and senior citizen groups here Wednesday.

The coalition - Consumers Opposed to Inflation in the Necessities - launched what its leaders hope will be a series of teach-ins reminiscent of the grassroots protest of U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

The group, calling itself COIN, unveiled a 100-page anti-inflation program, highlighted by immediate calls to reimpose oil price controls, place a clamp on health care costs, subsidize consumers' food bills and lower mortgage

All but the health-care proposal came under strong criticism from Alfred Kahn, the Carter administration's chief inflation fighter, who participated in one of the many sessions during the day-long

Treasury Department Ups Profit Estimate

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Treasury Department has increased by nearly 50 percent its estimate of gross oil company revenues that will result front oil price decontrol.

It now says the companies will reap an additional $94 billion over five years because ceilings are being lifted on domestic oil prices.

The new Treasury estimate came to light Wednesday on the eve of House debate on a proposed "windfall profits" tax designed to reclaim some of those oil company revenues.

Earlier, Treasury officials had estimated that oil companies would take in an additional $65 billion in gross revenues between 1980 and 1984 because of decontrol.

A ranking Treasury official conceded Wednesday the 194 billion figure was more realistic because it used more likely estimates for imported oil costs and future inflation rates.

Hereford firemen pour a spray of water on an oxygen bottle to cool it off after being summoned to a barn at the Virgil Owens farm east of Hereford Wednesday morning. only $18, but that amounts to a 24 percent

The 10 other nations will be able to add surcharges to the benchmark price to bring it to as much as $20. As always, additional surcharges could be tacked on to take into account differences in the quality of their oils.

The increases in the base price are the largest since 1974, when prices quadrupled during the Arab oil embargo. Analysts estimate that retail prices of gasoline and heating oil in the United States rise a penny per gallon for each 5 percent rise in the base price of crude oil. But because the surcharges in the past three months have raised the average price of OPEC oil to $17, experts say the rise at the gas pump and on heating bills will work out to about 4 cents a gallon.

The new price structure would be effective July 1. Sources said the ministers would meet again in Geneva in late September to consider changes.

U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said on Wednesday that if OPEC raised its base price to $20 a barrel, the U.S. bill for imported oil next year would be $65 billion to $70 billion. The U.S. Treasury Department estimated earlier this year that the United States, although it was the second largest producer of oil in the world in 1978, would spend more than $50 billion on imported oil this year, compared with $42 billion in 1978 and $5 billion in 1972.

Brand Hosts Sales Personnel

"Sales people are the producers of the greatest standard of living in the world." Capone proclaimed at the beginning of the seminar. "You people here are the ones who make things happen in Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

The sales and marketing consultant pointed out the tremendous strides made in salable products in the past 20 years, due in part to the electronic technology. "You have more to sell and it is to your benefit to keep your customer dollars at home. The sales tax dollars come back to your city, benefitting you and everyone in the community.

Rather than emphasizing sales techniques, which Capone said most businesses provide to employees, the seminar dealt with individual attitude, enthusiasm and person-to-person relations. "This is a people business and each person can win customers for his firm.

The speaker said a recent banking survey revealed that many persons switch banks because of deficiencies in human relations and personal services. "We do business with people we like. The most important factor in winning customers is you...each of you in this room," said Capone. He told his audience that

NEW YORK (AP) - A weekly newspaper that unabashadly advocates the business viewpoint and a prime-time television news and interview show are expected to be launched soon by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The moves are part of an aggressive attitude taken in the past few years by the Chamber, which feels that in other years the business view hasn't been expressed forcefully or designed to reach a broad audience.

Planned also are $2.5 million of studios at the Chamber's Washington headquarters, where among other things, business people may learn how to testify before Congress and respond to media interviews.

Some people felt the Chamber was too strongly identified with big business, which many independent business people will tell you is as much an enemy as big government or big unions

Since 1975, when Richard Lesher became chief operating officer, the image has changed. Membership, 52,000 in 1975, is now more than 80,000. A recent

The Chamber has also become decidely outspoken and controversial on political and social issues. Its lobbying efforts have become forceful and, more important, says Lesher, more credible.

Lesher, a former professor and assistant administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency, immediately gave the Chamber the impact that in years gone by it sometimes sought, but sometimes also feared.

Tuesday, June 25, at approximately midnight, person or persons unknown, did with malice destroy by fire the training tower at the fire training field on city property at the west end of town.

At first glance, this does not seem to be such a horrible thing. But let's take another look. This four-story wooden tower was erected by the 40 men on the volunteer fire department to the tune of approximately 2,000 man hours. This is then transposed into roughly one work week each for these men who all hold full-time jobs. This work week had to come out of their off time, time they could have been spending with their wives, kids, friends, hobbies or sit down time.

Put it another way, if it had been contracted out at the current going wage of one carpenter's helper at $6.30 per hour and one master carpenter at $10.30 per hour, this means $33,200 in labor costs. And assuming that these two men worked a 4-hour week, it would have taken them 50 weeks to

As for material costs, this is the short end of the mated at about $2,000 plus all the donated materials given to these men by members of our community eager to help anyone who is trying to help (Re: Jaws

Now let's look at the REAL COST of this act of pyrotechnics. I can feel reasonably sure that most of you people do not realize that the presence of their fire training tower here in our city was responsible for giving each and every one of you citizens owning property that you have to insure against fire a credit of TWO CENTS PER HUNDRED DOLLAR VALUA-TION. Or, stated in generalities, it cost the owner of a $30,000 home about $60 a year. You can go to the fire marshall's offices or the city manager's office and get the total city evaluation for the nitty-gritty for facts. But each of you can tell from a glance what it will cost you out of your pocket. The loss of this tower is the same as if we were to lose one of the fire department's big pumper truckes, at the cost of about $85,000 taxpayers' money plus the loss of the same two cents per $100 valuation. I believe I have made my point as to cost to you businessmen, homeowners and retired people -- all of you who pay fire insurance each year. What are you going to do about something about vandalism. They passed an ordinance stating that any juvenile caught performing any act of vandalism, and proven, their PAR-ENTS would be held responsible for the damages. Needless to say, any adult would stand for the consequences. At least; this what I read in the newspapers. Why can't a check be made to find out if it is a legal ordinance and if it will hold up in Texas, attempt to approach our commission for some similar enactment.

It is the considered opinion of the fire department investigators that it was the act of sub-adult vandals.

Wimbledon Coverage To Be Seen Live For First Time

By CHRISTY BARBEE AP Sports Writer

Devotees of Daffy Duck, Buford and The Galloping Ghost and The Jetsons may suffer a little, but it's all in the name of television history and one man's belief in the sanctity of Wimbledon. .

NBC will defy the Saturday late-sleeping habits of tennis fans and the cartoon-viewing regimen of millions when it telecasts live coverage of the men's tennis final at Wimbledon July 7 at 9 a.m. EDT.

It will be the first time Wimbledon action will be seen in America as it happens. Because of the time difference between continents, diehards for years have had to hide out from radios and early afternoon newspapers in order to avoid learning the results from Wimbledon before the afternoon telecast.

NBC will provide 101/4 hours of coverage, starting with the telecast this Saturday from 5 to 6:30 p.m. EDT. Highlights of 15. minutes will be telecast each week day next week at 11:30 p.m. EDT. Viewers in the Pacific and Mountain zones should check local listing for possible time differences.

The live final is a real gamble. "I really have no feeling yet for whether this will be a huge success or a miserable failure,' says Jeff Mason, the network's vice president for European productions and the enthusiastic producer for Wimbledon.

'But we feel that's the way the event should be treated. This is Wimbledon, one of the most prestigious sporting events in the world; a class

And, he says, Wimbledon is the single event for which he could see troubled NBC do battle to its last breath should another network loosen its 11-year-hold on it.

"I think the guy at home really likes class acts." He acknowledges, though, that were he to be in the States on July 7 he might well sleep until 10 a.m., figuring that he might not miss too much in the first outrageously early hour.

"But I hope there aren't too many of those types around," he says, "and I hope they'll make an exception in this case.

The probability for dismal ratings would seem high. Add to the unusual hour the fact that tennis telecasts generally draw small audiences, smaller than those for golf.

But Wimbledon, which started last Monday; does boast some eye-opening attractions this year. The rivalries that could come to the fore are more interesting than they've been in recent years. And NBC has as embled a fine team for the coverage.

Bud Collins and Donald Dell are the best, and really the only experienced tennis commentators on TV. Billie Jean King. who is playing singles and doubles here and vying for a record 20th Wimbledon title (singles and doubles included). will provide commentary on the women's action. And Dick Enberg, doing Wimbledon for the first time, will provide continuity.

John McEnroe, the 20-yearold American left-hander, has a real shot at the final, which would prevent a third consecutive Bjorn Borg-Jimmy Connors

And Borg could achieve a mark not reached since 1913. He could win a fourth consecutive Wimbledon crown, becoming the first man since New Zealand's Tony Wilding to do

Connors gave organizers a big scare. He nearly passed up the hallowed event to be with his pregnant wife in the States, but doctors said she probably would not deliver until later in July.

His chances seem slimmer than ever, given his inconsistent play so far this year, Borg's domination at Wimbledon and McEnroe's constantly growing Victor Pecci, the tall dark man with the diamond earpin, will be a big story. From relative obscurity, he stunned the field at the French championships early this month, beating Connors and three other top players before bowing to Borg in the final. He made it to the final, weekend before last at a London grass court event, then yielded to McEnroe.

The story in the women's draw will be whether Chris Evert Lloyd. a two-time Wimbledon winner but a listless loser the last two years, can stir herself to challenge Martina Navratilova. She beat Martina last week at Eastbourne, a traditional Wimbledon grass reunited with her mother for the first time since the player's defection from Czechoslovakia four years ago, is more than ever a natural as the leading lady of the Wimbledon drama.

A renewed Evonne Goolagong Cawley, who made it to the semis against Navratilova last year before limping out on a severely damaged heel, has an excellent shot at the final.

And maybe NBC will get some help in appeasing certain young viewers from a certain 16-year-old. Tracy Austin has some big titles to her credit now. She is very likely to make the semis, and is not an unlikely

The women's final will be played Friday, July 6. Taped highlights will be shown that night, and big portion of it will be aired after the men's final Saturday. Mason hopes that if the men's live final is successful, then the women could go on live next year.

Steve Comer, 7-6, allowed only four hits in out-dueling Ryan, 9-5. The win allowed Texas and Kansas City to move one percentage point ahead of. California, which had been its right now. I'm just going up first since June 4.

HOUSTON (AP) - Sarcasm still was a part of Houston Astros fandom in early May despite a fast start that had the Astros in first place in the National League's Western Division. One yarn supposedly went like this.

"Dad, have the Astros ever been in first place before?" a child asked his father as they watched a game.
"Sure son," the father replied patronizingly, "but never this late in the season.' Well, look again, Dad.

Even the most confirmed cynic is finding it difficult to ignore the surprising Astros, who still are perched atop the standings in the final days of

They've never been in first place this late in the season either and the baseball experts who predicted a typical second-division finish for the Astros this season are putting this strange phenomenon up for laboratory analysis.

It might begin with saliva tests for the Astros pitching staff, which has survived on few runs and key hits and a team earned run average that likely would be leading the league except for a pair of blowouts.

"Any discussion of our pitching staff," Astros Manager Bill Virdon said. "We've had some injuries but we've been able to overcome them and still get the job done."

Astros Cynics Growing

Fewer As Team Wins

Ken Forsch got the pitching staff off to a rocking start with a no-hitter in the second game of the season. Forsch later became one of four Astros pitchers to spend time on the 21-day disabled list along with startes Vern Ruhle and Frank Riccelli and reliever Tom Dixon.

Randy Niemann and Rick Williams were summoned from the minor leagues to fill the injury gaps and air-tight relief by Joe Sambito has kept the Astros aloft despite lack of Niemann has a 2-0 record and 2.18 ERA while Williams is 2-3 with a 2.53 ERA and both victori: Jy shutouts. Sambito yielded a grand slam home run to St. Louis' Roger Freed on May 1 and has since appeared in 17 games and pitched 28% innings without allowing an earned run.

Knuckleball pitcher Joe Niekro became the first pitcher in the major leagues to win 11 games this season in a string that included a team record nine victories in a row.

"I used to get nervous about success has to start with the everything, but now I block everything out and it's only me and the better," said Sambito. "Then when the game is over I can sit back and relax and look at what I've done and say

> The Astros have not been shelling opposing pitchers. They are getting fewer hits than a year ago and rank near the bottom of the National League in team hitting. But the hits have been timely, and Walling has been the most punctual of all. He started this week with 10 pinch hits in 18 tries for the

"I'm elated about this whole team," said Walling, who ended last week hitting .556 as a pinch hitter this season. "I'm happy that I can contribute coming off the bench and I'm happy that we are coming together as a team. We were 14 games out of it by this time last .

The Astros made key off-season acquitions in obtaining shortstop Craig Reynolds and catcher Alan Ashby and both have been factors in Houston's rise. "This is a different lineup "It's not just Reynolds and Ashby, we've got Cesar Cedeno back in the lineup from his injury and we got a young bench that's doing the job."

Another new face is rightfielder Jeff Leonard, who was good enough to allow Virdon to move Cedeno from centerfield to first base and send Bob Watson to the trading block.

Despite their success, Virdon and the Astros have remained

"The time to talk about streaks is when they are over, said Walling. "I try not to get too high when I get a hit or too low when I don't get a hit. I'm just delighted to be contributing and I'm learning something everytime I go to the plate."

Virdon says he'll get excited if the Astros still are leading the league in September.

"The really good teams are the ones that are consistent. Virdon said. "They don't let a little losing streak bother them. They come right back. We have a long way to go to Setember."

And the Astros have never been in first place in September

North Lead Giants Past Houston, 6-3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Hopefully," said San Francisco Giants' leadoff batter Bill North, "this will be a turning point Psychologically, you have been nine-and-a-half games behind." noted North, whose two-run single helped the Giants score six runs in the eighth inning for a dramatic 6-3 victory over the division-leading Houston Astros Wednesday

North, who leads the national league with 52 walks and is second in runs scored with 56, tied the game with his single off reliever Tom Dixon, 1-2, and then scored the go-ahead run on Willie McCovey's bases-loaded single off Joe Sambito.

Houston right-hander Ken Forsch, making his first appearance since May 17 after coming off the disabled list. sailed into the eighth with a three-hitter and a 3-0 lead.

One-out singles by Johnnie LeMaster and Marc Hill got the Giants going. Pinch-batter Mike lvie followed with a run scoring

North greeted Dixon with his two-run single, then stole second and went to third on catcher Bruce Bochy's throwing error. Terry Whitfield walked and Jack Clark slapped a grounder to third baseman Enos North was trapped between third and home, but managed to beat Boch's throw back to Cabell, leaving bases loaded.

Sambito took over and McCovey grounded an off-field single to left. Darrell Evans. added a two-run double.

North has been amazing." offered Evans. "He should be in the All-Star Game. Bill gave us an element we never had before. He's easily been our most valuable player." North shrugged off the praise, but fully realizes his value to the Giants. "I don't don't want to fall too far back. think the A's would have won If we lost this one, we would without me, but I think I'm more important to the club than I was to Oakland." McCovey, normally a pull hitter, simply went with Sambito's outside pitch on his winning hit. "When a guy is pitching away, you'd be a fool to \ fourth. Greg Minton, 1-0, was pull it." McCovey told a cluster of reporters.

All was not lost for Houston. which has won eight of its last 10 games. Forsch's successful return was a bright spot bolstering the pitching staff.

"I didn't throw that many pitches, so I felt strong," said Forsch, who had a shoulder

When I am reincarnated, I want to come back in this world as a mother who doesn't drive.

At Wits End

I have noted with some bitterness that mothers who do not drive have time to paint sunsets, knit coats, bake bread and write symphonies.

Not only that, they are fully dressed by nine in the morning, have a deep bronze tan by May 20 and somehow seem taller. Fifteen years of car pools does something to a woman. It makes her a little strange. For example, I cannot sit in a chair and delicately cross my legs at the ankles like other women. Instinctively, my right foot extends in an accelerator position and remains there until I stand up. Also, I mumble a lot. That comes from spending years on the telephone trying to figure out that if Mary Jane's husband goes to the doctor's office on Wednesday, she will have to bundle the baby up and take him to work and trade with Martha who is having a cyst removed. On the other hand if Peter was really exposed to measles that means he will have them by Wednesday and Ada, who already exchanged with Charlotte because Charlotte had trouble starting (the car, not Charlotte), would have to trade with Muriel because she has the convertible with the top that is stuck and it is her hair appointment day. (She also cannot drive on rainy days.) Probably the most disconcerting hazard of being a :"listed parent in a car pool is that intellectually. I have become stagnant. My vocabulary at the moment is down to four basic sentences: "Fill it up with regular." "Lock the door." "Keep your feet on the floor," and "Didn't you go before you left

The other night at a party I was standing alone holding my handbag in front of me like a steering wheel when a handsome man approached me and said, "You look like you could use a drink. What'll it be?"

I handed him my Shell card and said. "Fill it up with regular." He laughed and steered me toward the kitchen where the bar was set up.

"Lack the door," I said mechanically, "and keep your feet on the floor. He looked around nervously. "Listen." he said, "I just CUMBERLAND, Md. (NEA) - A community of love and concern tucked into the western Maryland hills is combining wild boys with wild horses and finding that both come out of the experience a little more tame and a lot more able to get along with others.

The horses are tough. They come from environments where survival for the next half-hour means outmuscling the other horse or at least making it think you can. All else failing, sinewy leg muscles, capable of speeds up to 50 mph, remove them from danger.

They horses must also contend with encroachment by man. The ranges have shrunk." The sightings of humans have become more frequent.

The herds of wild horses have moved to the more inaccessible corners of the Western landscape, taking refuge in the desolate deserts of Oregon, Utah, Nevada and Idaho.

The boys are also tough. They come from environments where survival for the next half-hour means outmuscling the other per-son or at least making him think you can.

They never realized there was another way to live. Not until they arrived at Long Stretch Youth Home.

The home was founded in 1972 when Bill Platter left a state job as a social worker at a boys' forestry camp to begin his private, non-profit rehabilitation effort.

Platter also owned and operated a recreational horseback-riding outfit in the hills jammed between Pennsylvania on the north and West Virginia on the south. Most people are con-

"It wasn't long before the business of the youngsters became foremost and the recreation with the horses was secondary," Platter recalls. "We kept growing, and now we have 36 boys and a staff of 21." The boys range in age from 13 to 18.

We get kids that can't go many other places," Platter says. "In fact, we won't take a boy unless he is expelled from school."

When a boy goes to live, work, play and grow at Long Stretch, he gets 24-hour care, an education and surrogate parents. The statelicensed home offers three vocational programs -- agriculture, auto mechanics and horsemanship.

Especially popular is the horsemanship program, us-ing the wild Western steeds that Platter obtains from the federal Bureau of Land Management.

The number of horses owned by the home hovers at around 20, varying because graduates take their horses with them. The home also offers horses for adoption by the public.

Broom Making Craft Still Alive Today

For it is where Joe Farrell makes brooms - by hand. He is continuing a business his grandfather started many years ago. 'He was a farmer who wasn't satisfied just sitting around in the winter," says Farrell. "So he began mak-ing brooms. He was also a coopersmith." (Farrell explains that coopering is bar-rel making, a craft nearly extinct today.)

Farrell learned some of the broom-making trade by working with his grandfather. He also worked as an apprentice with Amish broom makers in and around Lancaster, Pa.

Though his business is of necessity limited in scope, Farrell offers a variety of

He makes household brooms with both crude birch-bough handles and smooth dowel handles. He also makes whisk brooms and fireplace-hearth brooms with rawhide or wire bind-

Just recently he began producing brooms of Irish heather.

'Heather is what the Irishman used to use for sweeping the street," Farrell explains. "He'd go out in the field, find a small heather bush and lift it out of the earth. Then he'd tie it on a stick and that would be his broom.

"Essentially, that's what we're still doing, only in a little more sophisticated

Corn grass is the only material besides Irish heather that Farrell uses for what he calls the "business end" of the broom.

"It has nothing to do with the corn plant that we know," he says. "In fact, the plant doesn't even grow around here. It grows in the Ohio Valley in the northern tip of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and, of course, when I buy it I have to buy tons of it. The reason that I use it is because it makes a very durable broom that will last for years with reasonably good care.

"A broom should always be stood on its handle - not on the brush end. And a broom should be washed occasionally, too, and allowed to air dry.'

Farrell also makes what he calls "witches' brooms."

"People used to stand them upside down by the back door to ward off evil spirits," he says. "Now they're used for decorative purposes and for getting into tight spots, getting cobwebs out of corners, etc.

Perhaps an even greater surprise than brooms being made by hand on the fringe of New York City is the price Farrell asks for his wares. Witches' brooms sell for $3 50, regular household brooms for $4.

Criminal's Kids Aided by Preacher

By EDGAR MILLER Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) - Behind the headlines of violent crime sometimes lies an untold story — the heart-ren-ding tale of children left among the debris of their parents'

Ike Keay calls them crime's forgotten children. Keay knows. He heads what is believed to be the nation's only home devoted exclusively to caring for children of criminals.

The home is Bethel Bible School, on a peaceful 67-acre tract north of Chattanooga. The 48 children there represent some of the most tragic cases in recent Tennessee crime.

Many of the children have seen one parent murder the other. Some have been raped, otherwise sexually abused, or beaten.

Bethel was founded in 1954 by Floyd Hipp, a prison evangelist who was touched by the appeals of prisoners to do something about their children. He found the six boys of one inmate living under a tree, digging roots for something to eat. Two Chattanooga women donated a house on Signal Mountain, a juvenile judge gave him $25 for groceries and Bethel was born. The original home burned down in 1956 and was replaced by a dormitory to house 57 children. Keay, born in Scotland, spent much of his childhood in children's homes after his father committed suicide and his mother was confined to a tuberculosis sanitarium. He came to Bethel in 1964.

"I realized the kids needed more individual attention," Keay said in an interview. "The location on Signal Mountain was isolated and they needed more contact with the outside world."

In 1968, a 67-acre farm in the Hixson area was purchased and in April 1969 construction of five cottages began. Today, there are six cottages housing eight children under the supervision of houseparents, a couple hired by

Bethel to live in the cottage and make it as homelike as possible. A seventh cottage is ready for occupancy, and Keay is looking for a black couple as houseparents so black children can be brought to the school.

"This is our neighborhood," he says with a gesture toward the peaceful cottages. "We want blacks to care for black children because that's the way it would be in a normal situ-

It costs about $31,000 a month to operate Bethel, which hopes to double its capacity in the next few years.

Some of the money is raised by an annual celebrity golf and tennis tournament. Except for about $1,000 from Social Security, the rest comes from spontaneous contributions. The home, non-denominational, has no organized support from any church. Keay says contributions range from 10 cents a month from one elderly woman to a three-year pledge of $2,000 a month from a Chattanooga foundation.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - More than half of the nation's food shoppers scrutinize product labels in an attempt to avoid specific ingredients — especially sugars, salts, fats, oils and preservatives — according to a new government

The Food and Drug Administration, which reportedly is planning to propose more stringent food labeling require-ments, recently released the results of an agency-commissioned poll of almost 1,400 food buyers throughout

The survey found that relatively few people question the nutritive value of packaged food products, but large numbers of shoppers fear a proliferation of substances that might be carcinogenic or have other adverse health

One person in seven reported a concern about the health implications of the ingredients in packaged foods. Thirtyfive percent of that group worried about preservatives while 29 percent eited "additives" or "chemicals" in general.

Another 20 percent was apprehensive about sugar content, 8 percent mentioned artificial colors, 7 percent was concerned about salt content and 4 percent was worried about artificial flavorings.

Other substances frequently cited as a cause for buyer concern included artificial sweeteners, starches, seasonings, cholesterol and monosodium glutamate.

Almost two decades later, most of the Cubans are well-established members of their communities — but the federal assistance program and the government bureauc-racy that administers it continue to consume millions of taxpayer dollars.

Calling the refugee program "one of the biggest rip-offs in the federal budget," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., recently convinced the House Appropriations Committee to recommend termination of an operation that already has cost more than $1.4 billion.

"It's time to kill this turkey before it eats another load of corn," says Obey, noting that two-thirds of all Cubans now in the United States arrived more than 10 years ago and 95 percent of them have been in this country for at least five

Despite the Cubans' remarkable rate of economic and social integration, communities in Florida, California and other states continue to receive almost $50 million annually to administer the outdated program.

Officials from those communities already are lobbying to prevent the full House and the Senate from killing the refugee aid program.

labeled the world's most profligate users of scarce natural resources can rejoice at statistics recently released by the International Coffee Organization.

Despite the popularity of coffee in this country, the United States ranks a dismal eighth in per capita consumption, the London-based organization reports.

Atop the list is Sweden with 27.72 pounds of per capita consumption annually, followed by Finland, Denmark, Norway, Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland. Yearly per capita consumption in the United States is a mere 12.43 pounds.

That's the good news. The bad news is that because this country's population is far greater than that of any of the coffee addicted European nations, the United States is by far the world's largest importer of coffee.

Almost 20.96 million bags of beans are imported annually. West Germany, which ranks second in total imports, accounts for only 6.13 million bags.

Dryland Wheat Crop Proving Surprisingly Good; Harvesting of Irrigated Acreage Still Week Away

Brand Farm Editor

Harvesting of Deaf Smith County's 1979 wheat crop should get underway again today after a rain delay earlier this week

Much of the local irrigated crop is still at least a week away . from harvest, but machines are beginning to move through the sprawling dryland wheat fields in the western portion of the county at a rapid pace, and yields are proving surprisingly

Joe Artho, manager of Hereford Grain Corporation reported Wednesday afternoon that the dryland wheat crop has proven a pleasant surprise. compared to the expectations of two months ago.

Favorabe rainfall this spring helped salvage a harvestable wheat crop over much of the county's dryland acreage, and if rains had come only about two weeks earlier over the dryland country, local elevator spokesmen indicate they'd have faced moving all of the grain to town.

Added to the fact that farmers are harvesting relatively good yields of wheat here is the consideration that the cash price of wheat at local elevators has gone up about $1 per bushel in only the past three weeks.

In fact, wheat has gone up so well that as of Wednesday morning, the price was only about 14 cents away from prompting wheat to be called 'miles southeast of the city. out of the farmer-owned grain reserve Law requires that the grain be taken from the reserve once market prices pass specific levels, and farmers must then repay the loan on the stored

Those considerations aside, however, weather and ripe wheat wait for no man, and local farmers must press ahead with getting this year's crop in the Rain shut us down the first part of the week, and although the irrigated wheat crop looks excellent, it's mostly too wet to harvest yet." stated Artho.

"Dryland wheat is so much better than anticipated. It's good heavy grain this year." he continued, pointing out that test weights range from 60-65 pounds per bushel, and that the color of the grain is a dark red this year, as compared to the anemic coloration of the grainharvested here last year.

"Some of the fields farmers thought about abandoning two months ago are yielding up to 22 bushels per acre right now, and a transportation problem in dryland vields have ranged all the way from 15-49 bushels per

Northwest Grain, west of the Farmers' Corner vicinity reported receiving a few loads of dryland wheat early this week. and things should speed upconsiderably at that facility in the next few days as farmers get back into rain dampened fields to resume harvesting.

'We don't have a lot of dryland wheat right here in this area, but what there is will be good," commented a Northwest spokesman.

The spokesman added that the irrigated wheat in that vicinity may well be "the best in several years.

At Easter Grain to the south. wheat harvest is just gathering speed this week, with the big push to come this weekend.

Test weights of dryland wheat in that area have gone as high as 64, and are averaging 62. Early dryland wheat near the Dawn community is testing at 60 pounds per bushel, according to a spokeswoman for Dawn. Co-Op, and heavy rain in that area has forced a delay in full-scale harvesting activities.

"One of our customers had a 20 acre patch of dryland wheat which turned out real well, but we're just getting harvest underway on a tentative hote," stated the spokeswoman sorghum harvest this fall. There just aren't enough rail cars to go around and handle all of the grain," stated the HGC spokesman. That situation presents a particularly crucial problem for facilities such as HGC, which ship all of their grain via rail.

Asked about the effects of the trucker's strike on movement of grain, Artho indicted that his own elevator is using companyowned trucks to move grain from outlying elevators into the larger Hereford storage facilities, and that the local firm is keeping up with the task by running its trucks 15 hours per

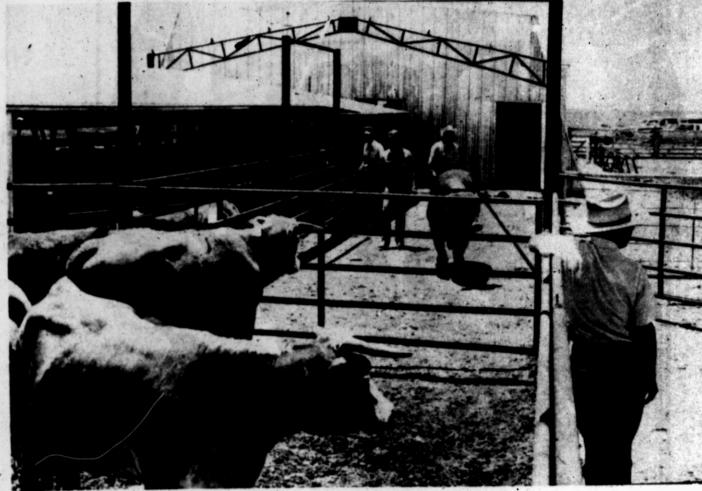

"We have the best drivers in the country, I guess," stated Artho. "They volunteered for the work," he added.

Favorable weather will remain important to local wheat farmers for at least the next two weeks as the irrigated wheat crop comes on line.

Weather conditions throughout last fall and winter, and into this spring gave indications of a wheat year" for 1979, but if Mother Nature should turn fickle and unleash heavy rainfall or hailstorms now, a good crop of irrigated wheat could still go by the wayside.

Combines should be running full speed for the next week to finish off the dryland wheat harvest here, and will shift immediately into irrigated wheat as moisture content of the crop drops sufficiently to permit harvest.

Local farmers hope to put the finishing touches on this year's 'There's a rail car shortage wheat harvest by at least the right now, and it looks like it's second week of July.

Where The Action Is

The main event at the Conkwright Ranch cow herd dispersal sale Tuesday was in the auction barn shown in the background, but there was a lot of action going on in the pens behind the sale barn County 4-H helped out with the process of sorting cattle, pairing cows and calves, and keeping livestock moving through the sale ring. Low Stocking Rate Advised for Summer

chers should resist the temptation to increase stocking rates even though pastures now have abundant vegetative growth. That suggestion comes from FCIC Employees Dr. Bobby J. Ragsdale, range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Attend Training Texas A&M University System.

- According to Ragsdale, much of the current forage growth is from cool season annuals. Warm season perennials recover more slowly from drouth conditions such as those that plagued most of Texas the past few years.

Since livestock repeatedly graze good forage plants. increasing stocking rates will not allow such plants to recover from drouth damage." explains

Instead of increasing stocking rates, cattlemen should shape up herds now by reducing overall numbers or-keeping numbers constant," contends the specialist. He suggests marketing low producers, open cows, and younger calves and

'Good management can produce more pounds of product from fewer animals," notes Ragsdale.

The specialist says low stocking rates allow range conditions to improve, leading to future stocking rate increases. Improved range conditions also provide partial insurance against the next drouth.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - National Farmers Union President Tony Dechant has expressed dismay at President Carter's decision to revoke Special Rule Number 9, which permitted agricultural producers to receive needed supplies of diesel for planting and harvesting this year's

"Many agricultural producers are still in a critical energy need situation," Dechant said. "There are several significant production regions which need diesel fuel to power irrigation pumps during the summer. At the same time, harvest season is upon us and we will need diesel to get the crops out and to market points. It will have been in vain to have provided farmers with the necessary diesel to plant their crops if they don't have the ability to harvest and transport those crops to market.

"We are, however, mindful of the fact that many perishable agricultural products are rotting in the fields for lack of transportation services. Additionally, there is a need to move industry equipment and supplies if we are to avoid a serious economic disruption," Dechant acknow-

The Administration now needs to give immediate attention to establishing procedures that will put into priority position the fuel needs generated by the production and harvest cycle in the immediate weeks and months ahead.

Grain is Gold at End of Rainbow for Harvesters Following Ripening Wheat Through Great Plains

By JIM STEIERT Brand Farm Editor

Stan Kirby plopped down in he shade beneath the bed of a grain truck, screwdriver, pliers and pocketknife in hand, and began stripping wire to rework the brake lights of the rig.

Sweating in the heat of the late June afternoon, he looked out across the asphalt parking lot of the local shopping center, surveying the five grain trucks with four combines and header trailers in tow, that had pulled up for a day-long stopover. .

Water from a weekend hunderstorm was still standing in the ditch at the edge of the parking lot, and from Kirby's glances at the mud and the machines, it wasn't hard to fell that the old and familiar

> We could wait around to do the job, but the wheat is ripe up in Colorado, and we'll have to be on our way in another day," he continued.

So, for the day that had been allotted to handle a local harvesting job, Kirby pulled his heartlands of the nation's crew over to rest and attend to some of the routine maintenance that is always waiting to be done when a custom operator indicates that he and his father tried custom harvesting, and ended up liking it.

"I like the work ... Maybe that's why I do it. Meeting people is the best thing about it, I guess," he commented.

Putting a convoy of machinery on the road is an expensive undertaking for the Ansonbased harvesters, who spend up to six months out of the year following the harvest.

"Your investment varies somewhat, because we'll have corn headers and Lynch row harvesters for milo, in addition to the wheat headers, but you're looking at $75,000 on each machine," stated Kirby, eyeing , the four red Massey Fergusons perched atop their travel.

Truck expenses are in addition, and vary with how the truck is equipped, but Kirby agreed that it's an expensive enterprise that grows more costly every year to put a custom harvesting operation on the

"It's a little expensive, but it : works out a lot better for us in many respects. We oughta' have a bunch of motels paid for by now, though, although we've never been given clear title to any of 'em," he laughed.

The younger Kirby explained that one of the main concerns during he entire period of following the harvest is "fixing.

"I spend most of my time under a truck or a combine, or going over or through one, fixing one thing and another. We do our own welding and mechanic work, and fix everything we know how to. You keep all kinds of spare belts and bearings and stuff like that, because you expect things like that to break down. But a los of times, it's the little thing's you never expect to break that will give you trouble. Then, we always have flats to contend with," he commented, reaching down to pick up a nail lying in wait on the surface of the parking lot, handing it over and adding emphatically. "That's twelve dollars if you get it in a tire on one of these trucks."

"I hated to see the fuel priority taken away from agriculture, but right now, I feel like we'll have enough fuel to get the wheat crop out. A lot of farmers have stored up fuel for us, and with that fuel in storage when we get there, we shouldn't have trouble. On the road, thus far, we've been able to get fuel for our trucks all right," he
