

Bad Recession Could Force Tax Cut

Social Security Reduction Also Said Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) - A top Carter administration official is indicating the president will propose a tax cut if a recession this year is worse than expected.

"We are sensitive...to the fact that in the coming months economic conditions may change more substantially than we now anticipate," Budget Director James T. McIntyre said today in testimony prepared the Senate Budget Committee.

If that happens, he said, "we will modify the tax and the budgetary recommendations that we make to the Congress...."

Considerable support for a tax cut to ease the impact of a recession and high inflation has surfaced in Congress in recent weeks, although opinion is divided over whether the cut should be primarily for businesses, or for businesses and individuals.

It is thought that Carter might propose a reduction in Social Security taxes next year, although he wants to avoid a reduction in individual income taxes if at all possible. A major tax cut would likely force a delay in balancing the federal budget in 1981, a top Carter priority.

McIntyre told the Senate committee that the administration hopes to keep a lid on spending. "Although we believe that a mild recession this year is likely, we also believe that we should not abandon budgetary restraint," he said.

Nevertheless, some increase in federal expenditures over earlier estimates will occur automatically to counter the impact of the high inflation, the budget office said Thursday. These include unemployment benefits, up $1.4 billion in 1980; food stamps, up $1.7 billion, and Social Security benefits, up $1.5 billion.

The administration stopped insisting Thursday that there will not be a recession, conceding a mild slowdown in the economy of 0.5 percent this year may already be under way. It blamed the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which has raised world oil prices 60 percent this year.

In its mid-year update on the economy, the administration also said inflation and unemployment will be worse than thought previously. Consumer prices will increase 10.6 percent while joblessness will rise to 6.6 percent this year and 6.9 percent in 1980.

President Carter, who has been conducting a domestic summit at Camp David for more than a week, may have more to say about economic problems and oil prices when he delivers a nationwide address Sunday.

Carter economic adviser Lyle E. Gramley told reporters Thursday that the economy probably began slowing in the year's second quarter and may continue its downturn in the third.

"We think the recession that is implied by our forecast will be relatively mild and short-lived," said Gramley, a member of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

But some private forecasters are saying the recession will be serious. One, Michael K. Evans of Evans Economics, Inc., of Washington, believes unemployment will peak at 8.6 percent next year.

THE NEW SUSAN B. Anthony dollar coin has not been well received by the general public, but it is probably here to stay. The Treasury Department distributed 500 million of the coins this month, and the government is spending money to promote the circulation of the coin.

Our office received a promotional packet from the Bureau of the Mint which includes the story of Susan Anthony and extols the advantages of the new coin. If the public uses the coin in place of the $1 bill, there could be a big savings. The $1 bill costs almost 2 cents to produce and lasts only 18 months in circulation. The coin will cost 3 cents to produce and will last 15 years or more.

Other benefits of the new coin, according to our "Uncle": Saves time and reduces errors at the cash register, easier to handle than bills, easy to separate by size, easy to use in vending machines, easy to recognize because of the woman and the 11-sided inner border, easy to carry--the new coin weighs 1/2 as much as four quarters.

Production of the coins is scheduled at 80 million a month, or at a rate needed to meet the demand. It appears we'd better get used to the idea of using the new coin.

OUR SYSTEM of electing Congressmen has become geared to re-election, according to many political observers, and this is one reason why many citizens are becoming interested in limited terms.

Last year taxpayers shelled out almost $50 million for postage alone for Representatives and Senators. The mailing frank is only one of numerous tools supplied by taxpayers that incumbents used to keep themselves in office.

"The advantages of incumbency have become overwhelming," says Fred Wertheimer, vice president of the public-interest lobbying group, Common Cause. "In effect, Congressional seats are owned by incumbents until they decide to give them up."

Many examples of the way Congressmen use the mailing frank to perpetuate their jobs are explained in a recent Reader's Digest article, "A Politician Shouldn't Own His Job." The (See BULL, Page 2)

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter disappeared into the darkness, his whereabouts for several hours a mystery, as he sought the advice of steelworkers and other blue-collar laborers in a back porch give-and-take laced with lemonade.

The advice is heard Thursday night in Carnegie, Pa., was for a speech just 72 hours away. That national television appearance could make or break his political future.

"I told him I thought the country was in a downhill spiral right now - inflation, the gas shortage, all the good stuff. He thinks the country's in a downhill spiral, too," said William Fisher, the president's 29-year-old host.

Carter described the conversation, around a picnic table, as "interesting and informative," said presidential spokesman Rex Granum. He revealed the president's whereabouts after Carter returned to Camp David, Md., for more work on the speech he will deliver Sunday at 10 p.m. EDT.

The president was having lunch at the mountaintop retreat today with several journalists, including Frank Reynolds of ABC, Walter Cronkite of CBS and some newspaper and magazine political columnists.

They were among the last outsiders with whom Carter arranged to consult as he concluded his domestic summit meeting at Camp David on a wide range of domestic ills. His wife, Rosalynn, a summit participant, said there are "no quick fixes."

Mrs. Carter and two White House aides, press secretary Jody Powell and appointments secretary Phil Wise, accompanied Carter by helicopter and small jet to the Pittsburgh suburb for the 90-minute roundtable.

They left Camp David at 6 p.m. EDT and returned at 10:23 p.m., said Granum, the deputy White House press secretary.

The president's plans were kept a secret from Fisher and his wife, Bette, 25, until about one hour before he arrived at their two-story house. The group had been assembled by a White House staff member for a discussion of "what was wrong with the country," Fisher said.

Carter Takes 'Lemonade Break' 3 Days Before Energy Speech

Leaders Skeptical about Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some congressional leaders are voicing skepticism toward President Carter's planned Sunday speech, wondering what new initiatives he might propose and asking whether they'll be dramatic enough to grab the nation's attention.

And as Congress waits, it is giving priority treatment to many of the same energy programs the president is reportedly considering espousing.

These include standby energy-conservation measures, government subsidies for synthetic fuels and formation of a national energy mobilization board to cut through federal red tape.

But Carter's speech, if it is to be successful, will have to include more than a recitation of support for such measures, says House Democratic Whip John Brademas of Indiana.

"He has to be lucid, he has to be clear, he has to be understandable, he has to be concrete; he must distinguish between the short and long run and he has to be rigorously straightforward," Brademas said.

"I don't want to hear a phony note," he added.

A top House energy leader who has been floor manager for many of the president's past energy proposals said, "There's not a hell of a lot now he can do."

"I don't think the president understands yet what he has to do to bring his house in order," said the lawmaker, who declined to be identified.

"By canceling the speech the first time and going to Camp David, he raised the ante by several orders of magnitude. It will be very hard for him to deliver," the lawmaker said.

Congressional energy leaders contend that Congress, long sluggish on energy issues, is finally rallying around a number of key proposals.

The Senate Energy Committee, for instance, was holding a hearing today on a proposal by its chairman, Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., to establish a National Energy Mobilization Board.

The unit would be modeled on the War Production Board of World War II and, according to Jackson, "is designed to break the regulatory logjam holding back energy development" by giving speedy approval to major projects.

Jackson has vowed to bring it and a package of other major energy proposals - including one to subsidize synthetic fuels - to the Senate floor before the August recess.

Administration sources have said Carter may endorse this type of board in the energy speech that follows his retreat to Camp David.

There are also considerable indications that the president will call for a crash program to develop synthetic fuels as a replacement for imported oil.

Commission Approves 40-Year Home Loans

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Homebuyers who borrow from state-chartered savings and loan associations received a new option for holding down their monthly payments Thursday.

The Savings and Loan Section of the State Finance Commission voted unanimously to increase the maximum possible term of home loans from 30 to 40 years.

Another action taken by the savings and loan regulators gives a host of new protections to borrowers confronted with a lender's offer of a variable interest loan, whose interest rate fluctuates with the money market.

Section members, representing both the savings and loan industry and the general public, also increased from $20,000 to $40,000 the maximum home improvement loan a state-chartered association can make.

In Texas, 250 savings and loans are chartered by the state and 72 by the federal government.

Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff announced the "floating ceiling" on mortgage rates, which takes effect Aug. 27, will be 11 percent but probably would drop to 10 1/2 percent on Sept. 1. Under a law passed this year, the usury ceiling will be two percentage points above the average monthly interest rate on U.S. Treasury bills and notes, up to a maximum of 12 percent.

Vandygriff said he would publish the ceiling for September on Aug. 20.

Abe Katz of Corpus Christi, a public member and chairman of the section, asked whether 40-year home mortgages were "for the benefit of the industry or the people."

"They could possibly reduce the (See LOANS, Page 2)

U.S. Grain Situation

'To Tighten'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sales of wheat and corn to the Soviet Union continue to help push up total U.S. grain export prospects for the coming year, according to the Agriculture Department.

That means "the U.S. grain situation is expected to tighten" during 1979-80, the department said Thursday. It also will mean the nation's grain reserves may decline by about 30 percent from their current levels.

The department said the Soviet Union bought another 775,000 metric tons of U.S. grain, boosting its total purchases to near the limit of 15 million metric tons set for this year.

Officials said the latest sales included 225,000 metric tons of wheat and 550,000 metric tons of corn. That boosted total Soviet purchases to about 14.7 million metric tons of grain for delivery in the 1978-79 year that will end on Sept. 30.

The orders include about 11.3 million metric tons of corn and almost 3.4 million of wheat.

Under a five-year agreement, Russia is committed to buy at least six million metric tons of wheat and corn annually. It can buy a total of eight million without further discussions with the United States, according to the pact.

But for 1978-79, as it did last year, the United States told the Soviet Union it could buy up to 15 million metric tons of (See EXPORTS, Page 2)

The Branding Iron November 9th Eventful Date in New Principal's Life

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

Friday the 13th is an appropriate day for Ron Geyer to remember November the 19th.

The 13th, which is today in case you haven't noticed, doesn't even compare in badness to that date which the new Hereford High School principal so shudderingly remembers as providing him more than his share of miserable luck.

Take Nov. 19, 1965. Geyer, a teenager then, was driving his car on a San Antonio street when a lady ran a stop sign. The cars collided, and the lady's car continued onward into a house. Geyer, uninjured, was--to say the least--shaken up.

Nov. 19, 1966. Geyer, now graduated from high school, was riding his motorcycle on a San Antonio street when a car pulled in front of him. Geyer's cycle struck the car, throwing him into the air. Minor cuts and bruises followed.

Nov. 19, 1967. Geyer had driven from San Antonio to Kingsville to watch his Southwest Texas State University (of San Marcos) play host Texas A&I in basketball. Coming home, his car broke down, and Geyer walked seven miles to his house.

Nov. 19, 1969--the granddaddy of 'em all. Geyer, a first-year teacher and assistant football and basketball coach at Sam Houston High School in San Antonio, got drafted.

"My principal sent in a request that I be allowed to finish out the school year. It was granted, with the provision that I get into a National Guard unit," Geyer said.

If the principal's desire to keep Geyer wasn't for his mathematics teaching prowess, it may have been for his coaching talents. Geyer, who never played football (he was a walk-on basketball standout at San Antonio College, where he attended before Southwest Texas State), was part of a staff which directed Sam Houston to a 7-3 record.

Geyer, in the summer of 1970, reported to Army basic training--a requirement of National Guard service--at Ft. Jackson in Columbia. He took his Advanced Individual Training--another requirement of the Guard--at Ft. Gordon in Augusta, Georgia, and wasn't able to return to San Antonio until February, 1971.

If that didn't make it bad enough for a guy who'd rather teach than Guard, he was required to report to his Guard unit one weekend per month for the next six years.

"When I returned from my leave of absence in February, I was placed at San Antonio Breckenridge. It was a match position--a very poor situation. A man had just walked off the job and said he was not coming back. He had no control, no discipline in his classroom," Geyer said. "It was a definite challenge for me."

"These students were very 'low achievers.' They were behind in math. The teacher had just given up on them a long time before I got there. He had had 75 failures out of 150 kids at the semester before I took over."

Gas Profit Margins Could Be Raised

By The Associated Press
Prodded by angry gasoline dealers, officials say the government is readying new rules that would raise profit margins and change allocations in a way that might discourage new stations.

Despite the promise of dealer relief, however, drivers in three Mid-Atlantic states faced closed stations this weekend because of an independent dealer's strike.

Elsewhere, the outlook for gas supplies was better than it had been for weeks and even Secretary of Energy James R. Schlesinger expressed optimism for the rest of the summer.

The strike in Pennsylvania and Delaware and a strike threat in New Jersey lost some steam Thursday when government officials indicated that they might meet some of the dealers' demands and a New Jersey judge issued an injunction against a shutdown in his state.

Meanwhile, a House subcommittee approved a measure that would give President Carter the power to ration gasoline and to order motorists to leave their cars home one day a week.

3rd Child Dies

In Rabies Outbreak

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - An 8-year-old boy's 35-day struggle for life has come to an end. Gerardo Castano has become the third victim of a rabies outbreak in the Southwest Texas border area where he lived.

Castano, a Mexican who was living in Eagle Pass, died Thursday of a cardiac arrest, said Jack Finger, spokesman at Santa Rosa Medical Center in San Antonio.

"There will be no autopsy," Finger said. "His doctor is convinced the cause of death was rabies."

Finger said the boy's body has been returned to Piedras Negras at his family's request.

The young Castano, who was bitten on the right hand by his father's pet dog in Piedras Negras, Mexico, had been hospitalized since June 8. Finger said the boy had been "in a deep coma" almost during his entire hospital stay.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed his ailment as rabies on June 29.

Marianita Garza, 8, last week became the first Texan to die of rabies contacted in the state in a decade. The child, who was bitten by a rabid dog May 31 in Eagle Pass, had completed the painful 21-shot rabies vaccination series in late June.

Court To Consider

Marine-Death Suit

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - A federal appellate court has agreed to consider whether to revive a $3.5 million wrongful death suit charging the government illegally recruited a Marine who died after a training drill.

Lynn McClure, 20, of Lufkin, Texas, died March 13, 1976, four months after he was struck in the head during a pugil-stick training drill at the Marine Corps Recruiting Depot in San Diego.

McClure - whose family contends he was mentally retarded - was assigned to the Motivational Platoon, a non-defunct unit designed to help recruits adjust to training. On Dec. 6, 1975, McClure refused to join the mock bayonet drills.

McClure was fatally injured when drill instructors sent a succession of recruits against him, investigators said.

McClure's family first filed the wrongful death suit against the government in 1976. In 1977, U.S. District Judge William Enright dismissed the case before trial, citing a 1950 court ruling that held servicemen cannot sue the government for active duty injuries.

Attorney J. Warren Beall argued before the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals here Thursday that the case should be sent back for trial because McClure was illegally recruited.

Clements Expect More

Fuel This Weekend

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements says his special gasoline allocation program for service stations that stay open on weekends will result in more available fuel this weekend for some Texas drivers.

Clements, who appeared on statewide public television Thursday night, said half of all filling stations in the 16 counties affected by his odd-even rationing plan will sell gasoline this weekend.

But when told that his original weekend allocation announcement applied only to Harris, Dallas and Tarrant counties, Clements said he would double-check and clarify his answer at his news conference today.

The governor also said he had still not decided when to call a special legislative session.

Clements said his initiative and referendum proposal will be the primary purpose, but not the only subject of such a session.

"It won't be the only topic," he said. "They also will have up to consider the issue of electronic surveillance so we can attack the drug problem. And we will probably have the issue of tax relief."

Exports

wheat and corn.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland told a meeting of reporters as the new sales were announced that this year's Soviet crop prospects have been hurt by bad weather but that he is unsure about Moscow's future needs.

On Wednesday, the department estimated this year's Soviet total grain harvest at about 185 million metric tons, down 22 percent from the 1978 record yield of 237.2 million.

Following that report, the department's chief economist, Howard Hjort, said it was possible the Soviet Union might buy as much as 20 million metric tons of grain from the United States for delivery in 1979-80 to help make up its shortfall in this year's harvest.

Bergland, however, said this was by no means certain.

"What we do not know is whether the Russians will buy enough to compensate for that bad crop or whether they'll destroy livestock, which they did the last time they had a bad crop in 1975," Bergland said.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Wheat Growers asked Bergland for "an immediate increase in the amount of wheat that can be purchased by the Soviet Union in the fourth year" of the agreement that will begin on Oct. 1.

Winston Wilson, president of the association, said there is plenty of U.S.

wheat to enable Russia to buy additional supplies now for delivery in 1979-80.

Also on Wednesday, the USDA estimated this year's wheat harvest at 2.1 billion bushels, the third largest on record and 17 percent larger than 1978 production.

Bergland said the Russians "have not requested a conference to discuss the issue" of possibly seeking more wheat and corn in 1979-80 than the lid of eight million metric tons specified by the agreement. A regular semi-annual conference on the pact is scheduled for October.

By then, Bergland said, the United States will have a better idea on its total 1979 grain output - including a bumper corn harvest of nearly 6.7 billion bushels now indicated.

"I suppose the Russians will have some ideas of what their needs are going to be like" by the October meeting, he said.

In any event, another report issued by USDA on Thursday forecast wheat exports in the coming year at a record of 1.3 billion bushels, compared to less than 1.2 billion in the wheat marketing year that ended on June 30.

"The increased export demand is due to a reduction in production in most major wheat-producing areas, particularly the Soviet Union, and shipping and transportation constraints in major wheat competitor countries," it said.

Although the 1979 corn harvest was forecast as of July 1 to be down 6 percent from last year's record of 7.1 billion bushels, the report said it is stacking up as the next largest.

Corn exports in the next marketing year that will begin on Oct. 1 were projected at a record of about 2.4 billion bushels, compared to 2.1 billion indicated in the current year, also because of heavy demand from Russia and other countries.

On a tonnage basis, total exports of all grains in 1979-80 were forecast at a record of 109.1 million metric tons against 95.8 million indicated for this year.

That includes 35.4 million metric tons of wheat and 61 million of corn plus other grains.

Based on current projections, total U.S. grain output this year will be about 266.2 million metric tons, down from 273.3 million last year.

Counting leftover stocks, the total U.S. grain supply in 1979-80 was put at 340.4 million metric tons, compared to 348.1 million in 1978-79.

Thus, according to the analysis, exports of 109.1 million metric tons - plus domestic uses - will result in a reserve left over next year, when 1980 crops are ready, of about 52.5 million metric tons, compared to the reserve carried forward at the end of this year of 74 million metric tons.

For example, the wheat reserve left over in 1980 was projected at around 736 million bushels, down by almost half from more than 1.3 billion bushels expected to be in reserve this fall.

conversation with a group of citizens who could tell him what they think."

During his seven days of conferences at Camp David, Carter sought advice on such diverse subjects as inflation, employment, energy policy and national morality.

The day after his Sunday night speech, he will travel to Kansas City, Mo., and Detroit, where he will reveal "additional specifics" of his energy proposals, a White House press office announcement said.

He will follow that trip with meetings later in the week with congressional leaders, the Cabinet and top White House aides.

Mrs. Carter told a White House gathering Thursday she had been present for most of the Camp David meetings and that there had been nearly unanimous agreement the nation faces a wide range of problems that have been years in the making.

"I believe and Jimmy believes that the people of our country have faith in the strength we have as Americans," said Mrs. Carter, who has more influence on her husband's decisions than any recent presidential wife.

"We can solve our problems...not overnight, but we can solve our problems," she said at a White House lawn party for the Women's National Democratic Club.

During the Camp David meetings, Carter talked about what he sees as national moral decay, according to some participants. They said Carter cited family breakups and complained that he must go back to the 1950s to find motion pictures suitable for his 11-year-old daughter, Amy.

the three months he had the class. Only about 20 failed the course.

In the fall of 1971, Geyer transferred back to Sam Houston. He taught math and coached. That year, Sam Houston won its first nine games and the district championship. Powerful Seguin spoiled their dreams in the playoffs with a 14-7 win.

In 1972-73 Geyer continued to teach upper-level math classes at Sam Houston. But there was a hitch—Geyer, who had been teaching on an emergency certificate, was about to be out of a job because his certification was to expire in 1973.

"I needed to pick up math courses because when I had gotten out of college in 1969, I didn't have a single education course," Geyer said.

His occasional stints with the Guard prevented him from picking up the courses. "So, I looked for things outside the school district," Geyer said.

But Geyer had problems finding a non-education position which suited him. He decided to substitute teach at San Antonio Highlands High School for six weeks. After that during the 1973-74 school year, Geyer substituted throughout the school district.

"While I was substituting, I had several job offers, but I didn't want to get into sales or insurance. I wanted to get into federal law enforcement, with the FBI or the DEA (Drug Enforcement Agency). So I applied with the DEA and, while I was teaching, I waited for notification from them that I was going to go to the school in Washington D.C.," Geyer said.

"But I never heard from the San Antonio board, even though they had assured me there was no problem. So, I went to the regional people in Dallas, but I never got into it."

Geyer would have rather taught. "I missed education. Substituting's not the same thing as teaching. You don't have the same interaction with the kids. I decided I needed to get back full-time into the classroom—teaching and coaching. So I talked to people—administrators.

"They asked if I'd ever thought about administration."

He did, and in 1974 took over as special programs director in the Title I office of the San Antonio Independent School District. Geyer was in charge of several million dollars worth of inventory and equipment used in Title I programs in the school district.

Somehow, he was able to pick up the courses he needed for teacher's certification at the same time.

Geyer then applied for the Foundations in Education Administration program at the University of Texas at Austin. He was one of 20 persons in the state selected for the program, which is geared to aspiring school administrators.

The first semester was study, the second in an interim school situation. Officials from prestigious Highland Park High School in Dallas interviewed the 20 administrators in the program, seeking a man they could groom as assistant high school principal.

Geyer was chosen. "At first I was upset because I had wanted to get back to San Antonio. My wife was there. But then I felt honored. Highland Park is one of the best situations anywhere."

He spent three years as assistant principal—from 1976 until the end of this past school year. He was hired at Hereford High following the resignation of Jerry Don George.

"This is a completely different type of situation than Highland Park. There, it's a pressure situation. Highland Park is a very rich, affluent community. It's 98 percent Anglo, and made up of people like doctors, lawyers, company presidents and chairmen of the board. It's a very well-disciplined, traditional school. We fought many battles over inconsequential things.

"I definitely like it here at Hereford.

Hereford enjoys a fine reputation and the opportunity here is good. And, most of all, I like the people."

His wife Jacque and daughter Ashley live in Highland Park. They will move when Geyer's house is sold. He now lives in a garage apartment, although he has purchased a house at 547 Willow.

Geyer said he plans to rely heavily on Hereford High's staff in the next few months.

"I plan to learn a lot about school here from people like Alex Glass (assistant principal) and the counselors and department chairpersons. The first thing you do in a new situation is evaluate the community. The philosophies of the community and school district here are different than at Highland Park."

He says he won't turn Hereford High into another Highland Park. "If I did, I'd be the most unpopular man in town. Right now, I'm just looking forward to the school year and meeting the students," Geyer said.

"As far as the students are concerned, I set high standards for both their academics and behavior. I believe in firm, consistent and fair punishment for those who can't conform to the standards of the school. But I also believe the school should not be like a prison. Students must enjoy coming to school. I believe strongly in reward.

"We are trying to prepare students for a world outside of school, so we will try to advance them during the high school years."

Geyer's interests include pool-shooting (he owns a valuable 1930 table) and reading.

Geyer has come a long way in his 31 years. "I guess, in spite of the unlucky things that have happened, I've been lucky. To be successful, you have to have a little luck. But you also have to have some personal skills and be visible."

To further prove that things are going his way, Geyer's daughter was born on Nov. 19 last year.

that "there is a possibility our forecast may underestimate" the extent of the downturn.

Budget Director James T. McIntyre also sounded a note of caution Thursday, saying that while he hopes Carter can propose a balanced budget for fiscal 1981. "I think we'll just have to wait and see with the uncertainty we face in the economy...."

However, McIntyre insisted, "Inflation is still the major threat to the American economy and we continue to believe that movement toward a balanced budget remains appropriate to keep cool the fires of inflation."

Rudy Oswald, chief economist for the AFL-CIO, said he fears the economy will be "predominantly worse" than the president believes and urged the administration to prepare for a more serious downturn.

Paul Sims, 701 Grand, reported the theft of a $150 lawnmower Thursday, and Mrs. Tommy Murphy, 501 Ave. K, complained that her mower, valued at $219 also was stolen.

Ruben Marry, Blue Water Garden Apts., No. 111, told police that his windshield had been smashed last night.

A Mexican-American male was charged with public intoxication following his arrest Thursday night.

Police issued 12 traffic citations Thursday for various violations.

Mrs. London Attends Meeting

Margaret London, a member of the board of Family Services Center in Hereford, recently attended the Nutrition, Health and Human Behavior Symposium in Houston.

Mrs. London attended the symposium at her own expense. Family Services Center is a member of Mental Health Retardation Association, which Mrs. London represented at the symposium.

Topics discussed at the two-day affair included children's hyperactivity; schizophrenia diagnosis and treatment; additions and orthomolecular treatment; prevention of the varies of neuroglycopenia; treatment of depression; body, mind and criminal behavior; and an update on schizophrenia research.

Physicians and researchers from throughout the country participated in the symposium, which dealt in part with using nutrition to treat various mental illnesses.

ELVIRA TIJERINA

Funeral services for Mrs. Elvira Tijerina, 68, of 311 Norton St. will be conducted at 10 a.m. Saturday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church with the Rev. Paul Haefner, pastor, officiating. Interment will be in St. Anthony's Cemetery under direction of Smith & Co. Funeral Home.

Mrs. Tijerina died Wednesday afternoon in Deaf Smith General Hospital following a long illness.

Born April 19, 1911 at Ozona, she moved here in 1952 from Lamesa. She was a homemaker and a Catholic.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Erlina A. Torres of Lubbock; three brothers, Desiderio, Carlos and Ernesto Tijerina, all of Hereford; two sisters, Liorinor LaFuente of Hereford and Constanca Gomez of Cactus; and two grandchildren.

AN OPEN ROAD IS BETTER,

much better, and is important to us. We must keep it open. The fullness of life depends upon our being free and feeling free to approach and talk with everyone, and we must feel at liberty to go where we should go and be at ease in the situation. All of us have probably known the miserable feeling that comes from knowing that our foolish talk and actions have closed roads to us, and made other roads difficult to travel. One or two such experiences should be sufficient to give us the determination to be wiser, wise enough to keep all desirable roads open. We can.

HATEFUL TALK WILL

CLOSE the open road to happy human associations, and it may close more roads than any one other thing. For some people, this unwise talk forms a amount of monthly payments, which is for the benefit of the purchaser," Vandygriff said.

"Surely the consumer groups should be happy with the change because it will reduce their payments," said section member E. Michael Lallinger of Houston.

Vandygriff also said the 40-year mortgage option might benefit homebuyers who take out variable interest loans because they could extend a 20- or 30-year note to keep monthly payments from rising if interest rates went up.

With a variable interest mortgage, the homebuyer gambles that rates will drop while the savings and loan bets on higher profits from a rising mortgage market.

Key provisions of the variable interest regulations do these things:

-Require savings and loans to make a "bona fide offer" to make a home loan at a fixed interest rate before making a variable interest loan. The borrower must first reject the fixed interest loan in writing.

-The variable interest rates to the monthly average cost of money to insured savings and loan associations as published by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Vandygriff said most lenders that offer variable interest loans raise or lower the rate on a mortgage to follow the ups and downs of the Chase Manhattan Bank's prime interest rate.

-Allow lenders to adjust interest rates only once a year and by not more than one-half of 1 percent - up to a limit of 2.5 percent above the original loan rate.

-Require downward adjustments when the cost of money to lenders declines but allow savings and loans the option of increasing rates when the money market rises.

-Require 30 days' written notice before any rate adjustment.

-Give borrowers 90 days to pay off a loan without penalty in order to avoid a rise in interest and seek more favorable terms elsewhere.

-Enable a borrower faced with a rise in interest to extend his or her loan to as long as 40 years in order to keep the monthly payments from increasing.

"You'd have to take an accountant with you to make a loan - my God!" laughed

Abe Katz.

Vandygriff said the rule would be workable and would be acceptable to the savings and loan industry.

article points out that a House member is given more than $1.1 million to spend during his two-year term.

Many Congressmen insist that the real key to making Congress truly representative is to limit service to 12 years, just as we limit Presidential service to 8 years. Explains Rep. William Frenzel (R., Minn.), "The most effective Congressman is not someone who is sent to Washington at an early age and stays on to make a lifetime career of it."

"There are plenty of public-spirited citizens around who would gladly set aside a dozen years for service. And that, I believe, is what the Founding Fathers had in mind."

Ann Landers

Catalog Entries

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I got this catalog in the mail and the letter attached said even if I don't order anything, I have a chance to win a lot of money just because I sent for the catalog. (I didn't order anything.)

My husband called me a "dummy." He claims I can't win unless I buy something. According to him, my entry will go into an automatic wastebasket. His final words were, "If you don't believe me, ask Ann Landers."

So, I'm asking Ann Landers. The contest is run by Donnelly Corporation, a reputable company. I say there are laws which make them pay if your name is drawn even if you don't buy anything. Am I right or wrong? -- A Gambler At Heart

DEAR HEART: I contacted the state's attorney's office, consumer fraud division, and was told the following:

All contests and lotteries are contractual arrangements. Read the rules carefully. They are considered binding.

Some states outlaw contests altogether. Other states have strict rules that must be adhered to. There are no federal rules in regard to contests. If the rules say you don't have to buy anything in order to win -- you don't.

It might be useful to know that some people are professional contestants. It's more than a hobby -- it's a career. Through years of experience they have learned how to make their entries appealing to the judges. These people repeatedly win an astonishing number of the big prizes.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you help what seemed like an unimportant detail but has not turned into a serious in-law problem -- and I'm not even married yet.

I ordered the wedding invitations printed up and did not include my in-laws' names on them. It says, "Jane Doe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Doe...will join hands in holy matrimony with William Smith..." etc.

When my fiance's mother heard that their names were left off the invitation, she was extremely upset. Incidentally, my folks are paying all the wedding expenses. May I hear from you right away? -- Tired Of All The Nonsense

DEAR TIRED: The names of the groom's parents do not usually appear on the wedding invitations. However, according to Tish Baldrige's excellent book on etiquette, Jewish couples almost always list the names of both parents.

In recent years, some couples have wanted to give the groom's parents a more active role in the ceremony and have opted to list their names on the invitations.

DEAR ANN: We raised three children. Our youngest is now 22. Each child was extremely rebellious during the teen years. Two were in trouble with the police.

We were hard-working, honorable people and spent endless hours trying to straighten them out. We were neither too strict nor too permissive. We set up rules

WITH them so they would be acceptable. In spite of our efforts, two left home after bitter arguments. One was 16, the other 18.

They all turned out to be responsible, fine adults and have admitted they were stubborn and "impossible." They claim they grew up in the craziest of times and don't know how we tolerated them. Neither do we, but what's important is that those kids made it. Sign us -- Happy Now

DEAR HAPPY: Thanks for a letter that will bring encouragement and hope to parents who are struggling with the problems you battled a few years ago. Bless you for sharing.

Boy, you don't know what to believe anymore. Remember when tan was healthy and pale was sick? I do.

Back in Ohio, I dedicated four months out of every year of my life to getting a tan. My ultimate goal was to turn brown before Jan Reeves did. I never made it.

Jan was one of those women whom I suspect hung out all winter under a bulb in the refrigerator, greased up when she stood under a lighted theatre marquee, and turned bronze when she strung Christmas tree lights.

If I dragged out to the community pool right after Easter with a coat over my terminal goose bumps, there she'd be anointing her brown body with baby oil. She couldn't have tanned more evenly if she had been revolving on a barbecue spit. When I appeared she'd look over her large sunglasses and say, "You feeling better?" I felt like a naked chicken.

We all had a Debra Paget wish. Tans made your clothes look better, your teeth whiter, and besides, they announced to the world that you had time to lol.

I personally found being "into sweat" a bore and was relieved when it was discovered to be not only unhealthy but turned you into Dorian Gray.

People have done a complete about-face. No woman wants to admit any more that she suns herself. If you find one who is toasty brown, she'll stammer, "I got this in the garden pulling weeds," or "Can you believe I played golf on an overcast day?"

It makes me suspicious that if sun has only recently turned into a villain, maybe it's only a matter of time before someone figures out that carrots cause cavities, roaches are a status symbol, glasses make you look sexy, giving birth is good for your figure, jogging makes you fat, and small cars are gas hogs.

Somehow, I can't get used to telling people who are tan, "Gosh, you look so brown. Have you been sick? You know, you ought to set aside just a couple of hours a day to get out of the sun more."

Poppyseed Torte with Czech Custard Coffee

CZECH CUSTARD
Readers who missed the fluffy custard filling for a Czech poppyseed torte keep asking us to repeat the recipe and so here it is.

2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
3/4 cup milk
3/4 cup butter
3/4 cup superfine sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

In a small heavy saucepan gradually stir milk into flour, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and boiling. Cool until just warm to the touch -- mixture may look lumpy. In a medium bowl beat butter until creamy; gradually and thoroughly beat in sugar; add cooled mixture, salt and vanilla; beat until light and fluffy. Cut a spongecake (made with poppyseeds and baked in a 10-inch angelcake pan) in half crosswise. Spread bottom half with one-half of the custard; add top half of cake and spread with remaining custard. Chill but bring to room temperature before serving.

Amarillo Artist To Open Gallery

Mary Selfridge, Amarillo oil and water color artist, has announced the opening of her studio and gallery located at the intersection of Canyon Expressway and Hollywood Road (Amarillo) (Bell Exit).

All interested persons are invited to attend her grand opening Sunday July 15 from 3-10 p.m. She plans to be open to the public from 8-5 five days a week where she will feature her paintings and offer a few painting and framing supplies for sale.

"Art and our western heritage has always been a part of my life," says Mrs. Selfridge. "I can't remember a time when I wasn't drawing, with animals and the western theme being my subjects. I took a lot of ribbing about this when I was growing up, as girls were not supposed to like such things."

As a teen-ager, Mary helped her grandmother (adopted sister of the Santee Sioux) gather and sew clothing for the Indians in South Dakota. This gave her a closeness and understanding of the plight of the American Indian. Many of her paintings are based on the everyday life of the Plains Tribes.

Jean Marlow's Art To Be Shown Here

Jean Marlow, a well-known artist of Amarillo will be exhibiting paintings here at the Western Heritage Art Show and Sale at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center August 16-18.

Born in New York City, Mrs. Marlow came to the Texas Panhandle nearly 20 years ago. She owns and operates Jean Marlow Art Studios, and teaches community service classes in oil painting at Amarillo college. She majored in music but later, decided to pursue painting as a career. She works primarily in oil, but does some work in water color. She specializes in glazing procedures that she has developed. The glazes, she feels, are superior in color. In addition to teaching at Amarillo college she also teaches at her studio and conducts workshops at other cities. She is the wife of Ron Marlow, a Globe-News photographer. She will be present at the Western Heritage Art Show and Sale.

Mrs. Marlow exhibited five paintings at the Plains Art Show and Sale sponsored by the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame in May. At that time, she donated an oil painting, entitled "Buffalo Hunt" to the Hall of Fame for their permanent collection.

I'm sure that each of you can come up with your own list, but here is a list of a few of my special quiet people.

The neighbor who comes over and mows a widow's yard as a surprise.

The child who gives you a handful of flowers as you get home from a tiring work day.

The librarian who gives you a warm smile after you have worked on a report all afternoon.

The person who, anonymously, sends money to your favorite charity because he knows you care.

The neighbor who fixes your air conditioner because he knows you can't climb a ladder.

The woman across the street who sends over soup and salad because she knows you don't have time to cook that day.

The committee people who quietly get the job done.

The youth who stay to clean up after the party.

The teenager who takes your dog for a walk because she wants to.

These are only a few, but there are many more. Maybe we should have a special recognition week for all those people who quietly get their own jobs done well and then take the time to care for others.

Ellis Blasts Two Homers In Texas Ranger Victory

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - John Ellis is playing for the Texas Rangers this year because Pat Corrales believed in him.

And after the Rangers beat the Kansas City Royals Thursday night because of John Ellis, he and Pat Corrales were two happy fellows.

"Pat is the one who gave me the chance to play," Ellis said. The well-traveled blond batted two-run home runs in the first and third innings to carry the Rangers to a 6-2 victory.

"I was very close to not playing for Texas. But Pat believed in me."

A nine-year major league veteran, used alternately as a part-time catcher, first baseman and pinch-hitter, Ellis suffered a horrendous ankle fracture in 1976.

"His ankle was just hanging on by ligaments," said Corrales, Texas' first-year manager. "It took him two years to get right. He's really fortunate today that he can walk. I've never seen such a fracture."

When the Rangers went to spring training this year, the thinking in the organization was that John Ellis did not figure into the plans.

"When I got this job," Corrales said, "I made up my mind we were going to carry his bat because I knew he could hit. And, he's returned the confidence."

To help keep him on the team, Corrales named Ellis a player-coach, and designated him the bullpen coach.

"I'm sure that some day he's going to have to take me out of the lineup because I'm not hitting," Ellis said. "But we'll cross that bridge when we come to it. I firmly believe it was Pat's faith in me that kept me in baseball."

Ellis' two homers off Larry Gura, 5-7, were nothing new to the Royals, who are suffering through their most horrid slump since 1974. So far this year the Royals' staggering pitching staff has given up 100 of the

Pirates To Sweep Astros

HOUSTON (AP) - The Pittsburgh Pirates have tarnished the last vestige of the Houston Astros' National League Western Division supremacy--Joe Niekro.

The Pirates tagged Houston's winningest pitcher with a pair of home runs and extended the Astros losing streak to six straight games with a 5-3 victory Thursday night.

Willie Stargell's solo shot in the fourth and John Milner's two-run blast in the seventh, rallied the Pirates and kept Niekro from becoming the first 14 game winner in the National League.

"We had our chances but we didn't capitalize on them," lamented Niekro, recently named to his first 11-star slot. "We're not going to get down on ourselves at this point."

"Who would have thought we'd be in first place at this point in the season. Tomorrow is another day. We can't think about Cincinnati, we've just got to go out tomorrow and play again."

long balls, and most astonishing, 50 in the last 28 games. The loss plunged the defending American League West Champions to two games below .500, their 12th setbacks in 13 games.

Doc Medich went the distance, giving up seven hits and two earned runs in squaring his record at 3-3. Buddy Bell and four singles and Richie Zisk Niekro, 13-4, was the victim of the awesome Pirate power. Stargell batted out his 17th homer of the year in the fourth inning and Madlock clubbed a two-run homer in the seventh to rally the Pirates into a 3-2 lead.

"The only thing that has beaten Houston is the home run ball," analyzed Madlock. "They have got an excellent pitching staff and they're a good enough ball club to win the National League West."

Houston took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Cesar Cedeno singled, stole second base and scored on Jose Cruz' double. Stargell tied it with his 17th homer in the fourth.

Houston went ahead again in the fourth when Cruz walked, stole second base and scored on a line single to shallow rightfield by Enos Cabell.

The Pirates took the lead for good on Milner's two-run homer in the seventh and chased Niekro in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Omar Moreno and Tim Foli.

Bert Blyleven, 7-3, got relief help from Kent Tekulve in the seventh. The Astros scored their final run in the ninth when Art Howe doubled and scored on a grounder by pinchhitter Jeff Leonard.

"The last time we came in here we lost all of our games by one run," Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said. "This time, we had the upper hand. That's baseball. They are the same club they were before."

"They are still in first place and that's a great place to be. They've already climbed the mountain. We are in third place. We still have some climbing to do."

NEW YORK (NEA) - He was the starting American League pitcher in five of the first six All-Star baseball games. In 1933, he tossed the first pitch in game No. 1.

So, Lefty Gomez, the ex-New York Yankee ace, was one of the originals.

Recalling baseball's first All-Star game, Gomez admits: "I was nervous and excited. I was thinking, Jesus Christ, I'd better do good today."

The big game was held at the AL's Comiskey Park in Chicago -- then staging a World's Fair labeled "Century of Progress" (in spite of the Depression).

Before the contest, AL manager Connie Mack held a meeting at the Del Prado Hotel to discuss the National League lineup: Martin, 3b; Frisch, 2b; Klein, rf; P. Waner, lf; Terry, 1b; Berger, cf; Bartell, ss; Wilson, c; and Hallahan, p.

Mack, the grizzled Philadelphia A's boss, simply read down the list, warning: "Fastball hitter ... fastball hitter ... fastball hitter ..."

Notes Gomez (reminiscing about his reputation as a jokester): "I got up and said, 'Mr. Mack, what am I doing here?'"

Actually, the 23-year-old fireballer needn't have wondered.

Before 47,595 spectators, Gomez breezed three shut-out innings, allowing two hits. It was enough to give him the victory in the 4-2 AL triumph.

Oddly, Gomez -- a lifetime .147 batter -- surprised everybody when his second-inning base hit drove in the first run in All-Star history.

Super Team

The Kid's Inc. major league girls picked a super all-star team from teams of both leagues to play the pony league All-Stars. Members of the major league team are Cathy Bartles, Selma Gonzalez, Michelle Hughes, Stacy High, Debbie Frye,

Are Modern Athletes More Fragile?

Of players selected for next Tuesday's All-Star baseball game in Seattle, Rod Carew of the Angels, the game's best hitter, is idled by a torn ligament in his thumb, catcher Ted Simmons can't perform because of a wrist injury and Boston's Carl Yastrzemski is questionable because of an injured Achilles tendon.

What's going on, anyhow? Is the modern athlete - bigger, stronger, better fed and better attended - a more fragile athlete than his iron man predecessors of a half-century or even a quarter-century ago?

Not at all, insists Dr. James Parkes, prominent New York orthopedic surgeon who, among his other responsibilities, treats the broken bones and ripped muscles of the New York Mets.

"There has been no deterioration in the modern athlete," Dr. Parkes said. "On the contrary, today's sports competitor has a much greater physical potential than the old timers, whom we are inclined to regard as rugged individuals not easily hurt."

"Actually, in the old days, they were hurt much more than was ever revealed. The players themselves often hid ailments either because they wanted to act tough or they feared they might be sent to the minors."

"The athlete today is much more sophisticated. He realizes he is an expensive property. So he is not anxious to jeopardize his career. Doctors are now quicker to tune in on the various problems. They are also freer and more honest in revealing the nature."

The current pennant races are apt to be decided not by the talent on the field but by the skilled helpers in the infirmary.

Gomez-A True All-Star

But it took a two-run homer by Babe Ruth, his Yankee teammate, to ice the victory.

"It meant as much to me as winning an ordinary game in the league," says Gomez, now 68. He made the rounds for Gillette this season to promote the 50th All-Star game -- which is to be played on the night of July 17 in Seattle.

Sponsored for the 10th year by the razor firm, the All-Star voting (more than 12 million ballots) is America's biggest non-political election.

"It's like being in the World Series," Gomez says. "Everybody wants to be in the Hall of Fame and everybody wants to be in the All-Star game."

Kids Gomez: "But don't go by me, I'm a left-hander."

It's a hint by the Hall of Famer about the apathy toward the exhibition displayed from time to time by a handful of today's big-money stars.

His own view: "I don't believe it can be just another ballgame."

Gomez, who also started in 1934, 1935, 1937 and 1938, is the winningest pitcher in All-Star history. His record is 3-1. Only three other hurlers have as many as two All-Star wins: Don Drysdale, Juan Marichal and Bob Friend.

Sports Marriages Tough

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

There is a volatile element in the chemistry of athletes that generally doesn't mix. Marriages between sports stars often have a rocky sail and wind up on the rocks.

Not that of tiny Cathy Rigby, America's most celebrated gymnast, and big Tommy Mason, an 11-year veteran in the National Football League.

"It isn't easy. It takes a lot of patience and understanding on both sides, swallowing of personal egos," Cathy was saying here this week. "Tommy is very good about all my traveling and show business commitments. We get along wonderfully."

"When we don't, I will quickly abandon what I am doing and return home. That was my hope in the first place. Tommy talked me out of it. He has been the greatest encouragement and supporter in my career."

Cathy, a doll-like figure who stands only 4 foot 11 and weighs but 88 pounds, met the 6-2, 200-pound Mason, a graduate of Tulane, when he was with the Los Angeles Rams in 1970.

They were married Jan. 20, 1973. Mason retired from football 4½ months later after stints with the Minnesota Vikings, Rams and Washington Redskins. He took a fling at law and then went into business for himself. They now have a son, Buck, aged 4, and maintain a home in Southern California.

But Cathy is almost never there.

The United States' first international medal winner in gymnastics, an Olympic team member in 1968 and 1972 and a budding show business personality, she is on a constant merry-go-round.

She maintains a gymnastics school in Newport Beach, Calif., and a summer camp for gymnasts in Ojai, Calif. She is currently heading up a $1 million program of regional clinics, financed by Dial Soap. She is a member of the ABC broadcasting team for the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Also, she is taking singing, dancing and acting lessons. She recently made her stage debut with Donny and Marie Osmond in Columbus, Ohio.

Terry Bradshaw of the Pittsburgh Steelers is wed to ice show star JoJo Starbuck, but gossip columnists recently have hinted at a breakup - although this hasn't been confirmed by either of the principals.

The most publicized sports merger of recent times was the recent wedding of tennis stars Chris Evert and John Lloyd. They have the advantage of following the sun together - part of the time, at least - in pursuing their careers.

Rigby and Mason have no such luxury.

"I am gone quite a bit," the petite, blonde gymnast says. "I may be on the road for three weeks and back home for two. Tommy Doesn't mind. In fact, he keeps pushing me. It was he who called Roone Arledge of ABC and asked him to give me a broadcasting tryout."

And little Buck - will he be a pro griddler or a gymnast?

"Neither," said Cathy. "He loves baseball. He'll be another Joe DiMaggio."

Juantornea Beaten By U.S.'s Darden

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Coach Bobby Knight headed for municipal court today to face trial on aggravated assault charges, hours before he was to direct the United States men's basketball team on the basketball court in a gold medal showdown in the Pan American Games with Puerto Rico.

Meanwhile, United States Olympic Committee spokesman predicted the U.S. gold medal count, which stood at 93 entering today's action at this eighth edition of the hemispheric Olympics, would climb to an all-time record 125 by the close of competition here Sunday.

The Americans expected to reap a bumper crop of medals today and Saturday as sports such as freestyle wrestling, tennis, boxing, sailing and track and field wound down to conclusion.

U.S. athletes collected three of Thursday's eight gold medals, with big victories in the men's and women's 400-meter runs and singles tennis.

Dark-horse Tony Darden of Norristown, Pa., came from out of nowhere to make up 10 yards in the final strides and beat Cuban powerhouse Alberto Juantorena in the men's 400-

Darden said Juantorena's loss, his second in three days, emphasized "He's getting old. Now it's my turn..."

In the controversial women's 400, Sharon Dabney, Philadelphia, nipped Guyana's June Griffith as the two lunged headlong for the finish line. Two protests by the Guyanan, accusing Dabney of leaving her lane and disputing the interpretation of the photo finish, were turned down.

Susan Hagey, LaJolla, Calif., beat teammate Trey Lewis, San Pedro, Calif., 3-6, 6-0, 6-2 to win the women's singles gold medal.

In boxing, however, another legendary Cuban, heavyweight Teofilo Stevenson, had little trouble with his American opponent, Bubba Hadley, Camp LeJeune, N.C., lasted only until 1 minute, 39 seconds into the first round before being knocked out by the awesome Stevenson.

In other semifinal bouts, the Americans all advanced -bantamweight Jackie Beard, Jackson, Tenn., junior welterweight Lemuel Steeples, St. Louis, junior middleweight James Shuler, Philadelphia, and light heavy Tony Tucker, Grand Rapids, Mich. - into Saturday night's finals.

In basketball, Mike Woodson was switched from forward to guard to replace the injured Kyle Macy and hit for 29 points as the U.S. team trounced Brazil 106-88. It was the eighth consecutive victory in the round-robin tournament for the Americans, a record matched only by the host Puerto Ricans.

The basically unheralded Puerto Ricans rallied furiously to pull out some of their steady victories, but their steady improvement showed Thursday night in a 109-75 thrashing of Argentina. Puerto Rico trailed early, then blew the Argentinians out after taking a 63-61 lead.

The United States women bombed Brazil 111-73 in their march to a gold medal. So far the U.S. women have beaten their opponents by an average margin of 37 points.

The women meet Cuba tonight at 7 p.m., EDT, for the gold.

Knight's court appearance was set for 9 a.m., EDT, on the sixth floor of the same police building where he was originally taken after his run-in with a local policeman last Sunday.

The trial was advanced twice, from its original date of Aug. 3 to today at 10 a.m. Then, that time was scrubbed in favor of the earlier hour.

Knight filed charges of assault and battery, violation of civil rights, humiliation and unlawful incarceration against the policeman, but they were dismissed by a district attorney.

While all of the problems were going on, Knight's team seemed unaffected.

Thursday's scores involving U.S. teams included the U.S. over Colombia, 5-4, in baseball; Cuba beating the U.S., 5-0, in soccer; Argentina over the U.S., 6-1, in roller hockey, and the Americans 3-0 over Canada in men's softball.

Brazil edged the U.S. 3-2 in men's volleyball while the women's team dumped Venezuela 3-0.

The medal count showed the United States with 93 golds and 211 total, Cuba and 53 and 116 and Canada at 21-108.

Anti-Disco Night Stops White Sox Game

CHICAGO (AP) - It began as a baseball game on a sticky summer night and erupted into a melee of 7,000 rampaging fans overcome by Thursday night fever.

The ruckus at Comiskey Park forced the cancellation of the second game of a double-header between the Chicago White Sox and the Detroit Tigers. It wasn't bad pitching that incited the mob to storm the field between games. It was disco.

Thousands of people, mostly teen-agers, had been drawn to the ballpark by a White Sox-sponsored anti-disco night. Admission was reduced to 98 cents provided each fan brought a disco record.

But the "Disco Demolition Night," a gimmick dreamed up by the White Sox promotional department and a local disc jockey, Steve Dahl, who promised to blow up the records between games, backfired.

Midway in the first game, which the Tigers won 4-1, records began spinning from the stands onto the field.

Pandemonium finally broke out halfway break after Dahl performed his disco demolition ritual. Fans, some of them waving anti-disco banners, began overrunning the field, pulling up bases, setting small fires and destroying the batting cage.

"It was the sickest thing I've ever seen in my life," said White Sox pitcher Ross Baumgarten. "I didn't know people could have such little regard for other people's safety."

Police said 39 persons were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. One of those arrested was charged with aggravated assault with a knife, police said, adding that many of those in the mob were intoxicated. No serious injuries were reported.

"This is the worst night not only in my recollection, but in the recollection of other men who have been working here for 25 years," said Lt. Robert Reilly, head of the police detail that patrols outside the park during games. "It's as bad as the night the Beatles were here."

White Sox President Bill Veeck said he had anticipated a turnout of between 30,000 and 35,000. "But they just kept coming and we finally had to close the gates," he said.

Veeck estimated the crowd at 50,000 to 55,000, the largest since he took over the team in 1976. About 10,000 fans were turned away at the gate, and most of whom remained outside the park, he said.

Veeck announced that the game would be made up as part of a double-header Sunday, but Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson disagreed and said, "There will be no double-header Sunday."

The second game should have started at 8:46 p.m. but at that time the field was flooded with people running around. While banners burned in center field, Veeck went onto the field and pleaded over the public address system for the crowd to go to their seats. It didn't help.

Once the crowd had left the field, it took another hour to clear it of debris in an effort to get it in playing condition.

It was then that the umpires, headed by crew chief Dave Phillips, declared the field unplayable and the game was called.

In other AL games, Texas beat Kansas City 6-2; New York blasted Seattle 14-2 and Milwaukee took Toronto 5-3.

Second Wind

by marc herring

Baseball has sure turned to the better in Hereford lately, as the two Babe Ruth All-Star teams have continued to win against other towns in post-season competition.

David Ashby, manager of the older group of players that are in the finals of the regional tournament in Pampa feels that there are some good ballplayers around, but the test will come when they play against some of the teams that will eventually be district foes, or in other words teams from the Lubbock area.

If the team wins the tourney in Pampa they will travel to Graham where the best in the state will be represented, including the South Plains area. And in the 13 year old playoffs, Lubbock will have a team representing them in Plainview, so the chance to meet future conference foes exists much earlier for the younger team than for the 15 year old team.

As the teams continue to play, they are being supported by the community. Along with the fans that go and see them play, local merchants have been donating services and products to help meet expenses. Some of these include Pratt Chevrolet for the use of a vehicle to travel, gasoline from Alred Oil and Consumer's Fuel and money from the Kiwanis Clubs.

These donations are needed because the team is a part of Kid's Inc. which in turn is a part of the United Way, which has provided all of the money possible in just sponsoring the league. If individuals and merchants don't offer the teams services, they will have to be paid out of the teams' pockets or more likely, the teams could not continue to play.

Tonight at 7 p.m. the older group plays either Canyon or High-Plains for the championship, with Hereford the only undefeated team. Starting Monday, the 13 year old team will travel to Plainview and be involved in an afternoon contest against the representative from one of the other area winners. Go and watch some good baseball.

Dave Campbell's Texas Football Magazine reached the desk this week and Hereford is said to be better than last year. Defending district champ Plainview is picked to repeat, but according to Coach Don Cumpton they aren't going to get it without a fight, especially from the Whitefaces.

If the team looks and plays with the intensity displayed last spring in the Maroon-White game, Hereford is going to surprise a lot of teams. Don't be too surprised if the Whitefaces take all the marbles this year.

No Excuses Left For LA Dodgers

By BRUCE LOWITT, AP Sports Writer

"I've run out of excuses," Tommy Lasorda moaned. "I've used them all up."

Lasorda's misery is understandable. He's the manager of:

- (a) the National League's defending champions,
- (b) the National League's worst team, or,
- (c) both of the above.

The answer, of course, is (c). The Los Angeles Dodgers, losers of six of their last eight games and 12 of their last 15, hit a new low Thursday night, sinking 18 games under .500 under the weight of a 12-5 loss to the New York Mets, who'd had the league's worst record before the Dodgers showed up. "A rout's a rout," said Mets catcher John Stearns. "That's all there is to it."

The game was, in effect, over after one inning. At that point the Mets led 8-0. It was the biggest first inning in Mets history and the most runs scored against the Dodgers in one inning this season.

In the rest of the NL, Chicago outlasted Cincinnati 10-8. Pittsburgh beat Houston 5-3. San Francisco defeated Montreal 5-3 and Philadelphia edged San Diego 4-3.

"I couldn't feel worse if I was dead," said Lasorda. "Errors, bases on balls - you name it."

What bothered him most was the bases-loaded walk Burt Hooton issued to Mets pitcher Dock Ellis, forcing home the fourth run of the decisive first inning. That's when he yanked Hooton. "Dock Ellis couldn't hit water if he fell out of a boat," Lasorda grumbled.

Joel Youngblood greeted reliever Dennis Lewallyn with a liner to left which Von Joshua dropped for a two-run error, then Frank Taveras doubled down the third base line for two more runs.

Ellis blanked the Dodgers until the seventh inning, by which time New York led 12-0.

Drysdale Learned Game From Best

By HAL BOCK, AP Sports Writer

When he walked into the Brooklyn Dodgers' dressing room back in 1956, Don Drysdale was 19 years old and hardly ranked as one of the Boys of Summer.

"They gave me a locker between Sal Maglie and Rube Walker," he said. And that's how Don Drysdale began to learn his craft.

"We'd talk pitching all the time, Maglie from the pitcher's standpoint on one side, Walker from the catcher's on the other," Drysdale said. "When I went out to the mound, I'd be pitching to Roy Campanella, and that's not the same as pitching to some kid."

Those were the final days of the Dodgers' dynasty of the '50s, the last year in Brooklyn, and Drysdale remembers them fondly. "Being in that clubhouse was like being surrounded by walking baseball encyclopedias. Mr. Branch Rickey had put together a factory."

Drysdale feels he benefitted from being in Brooklyn. "I was 19 and that's unusual, to be coming up at that age," he said. "But I was a little farther along and that was a plus. They felt I was ready, so I came up. I was fortunate to be with a veteran club. They knew how to play and I learned plenty from them."

Drysdale pitched for 14 years in the major leagues, winning 209 games, earning the Cy Young Award in 1962, and setting a record for consecutive scoreless pitching of 582-3 innings in 1968.

Then, at age 33, it all ended quite prematurely. "I had one of the first rotator cuff injuries," he said. "Only then it was called a sore shoulder."

Sports medicine had not made the strides a decade ago that it has now and there was nothing the doctors could do for the pitcher they called Double D. His playing career was over, but his baseball career was not.

"When I first came up, I used to sit in the bullpen broadcasting games," he said. "They'd chase me out of there and I'd go to the dugout and do the same thing. Then the guys in the dugout would chase me back to the bullpen."

The phantom broadcasts paid off in 1970 when the Montreal Expos hired Drysdale to air their games. After two years in Montreal and two more in Texas, Drysdale moved to the California Angels, where he has worked the last six seasons.

Drysdale also does some play-by-play on the ABC broadcasts, simply because he enjoys that aspect of the sportscaster's job. "I don't want to be stereotyped as strictly a color man," he said.

Or strictly as a pitcher whose pitching career ended too soon,

UH Picks Dempsey

HOUSTON (AP) - Cedric Dempsey, athletic director at San Diego State for only four months, has resigned that position to accept a similar position at the University of Houston.

"My decision has not been based on any dissatisfaction here at San Diego but because of the irresistible opportunities at the University of Houston," Dempsey said in a statement Thursday.

Dempsey, 46, called the UH position a once in a lifetime opportunity and said Houston has "one of the finest athletic programs in the country."

University of Houston Central Campus Chancellor Barry Munitz was to introduce Dempsey today following a two-month search for a replacement for Harry Fouke, who is retiring after 34 years at the Southwest Conference school.

"We've gotten ourselves the man who will be the premier athletic director in the next decade," Munitz said. "We took a long time, we were thorough, but it paid off."

Dempsey said one of his first duties at UH would be to advertise for a new women's athletic director to replace Dr. Sue Garrison, who also is retiring.

Dempsey said he also wanted to hire an associate director of internal affairs to run the day to day operations of the department, a new sports information director, a promotions director and a director of student athlete affairs.

Alzado-Ali Fight Set

DENVER (AP) - Muhammad Ali and Denver Broncos' All-Pro defensive end Lyle Alzado pranced and danced, punched the air, wrestled and vowed their eight-round exhibition bout on Saturday would turn Mile High Stadium into a slaughterhouse.

The retired heavyweight champion and the eight-year National Football League veteran weighed in Thursday at a private athletic club in downtown Denver.

The 6 foot, 3 inch Alzado, who fought 44 bouts as a Golden Gloves heavyweight, weighed first. Wearing red, white and blue boxing trunks and light jogging shoes, he was recorded at 243 1/2 pounds, several pounds under his football playing weight.

The 30-year-old New York native thanked reporters, fight promoters and onlookers for "having faith in me."

"I promise that when this fight takes place on Saturday I'll give him all the hell he can handle," the bearded grid star said.

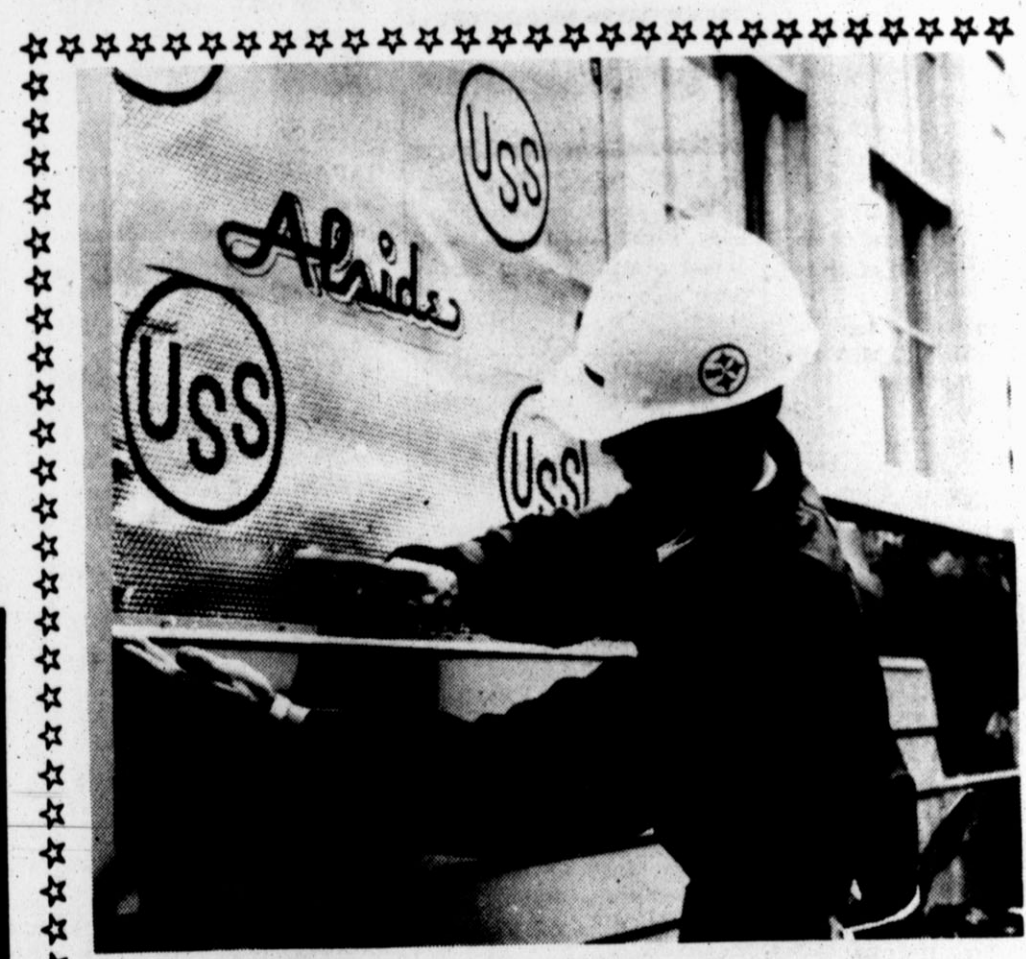

Ali entered the room about 15 minutes later in a dark business suit. He shouted insults at Alzado, calling him a "big, fat football player," proclaiming himself the greatest, and saying the promoters of the bout "gotta be crazy."

"I've beat the baddest black fighters in the world, and they're putting me in with a football player," he sneered.

The 37-year-old Ali at first refused to be weighed but later took off his suit coat, stepped on the scale, and was reported at 234 1/2.

The two swapped insults and tried to look serious for television interviewers.

The fight card is scheduled for 1 p.m. at the stadium, where the Broncos play their home games.

Stapling isn't simple

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a terrible weight problem and I want some information on surgery. I know about the bypass operation and I wouldn't have anything to do with it, but I've read about the stomach being stapled so that the patient automatically eats less but everything goes through its normal tract. What do you think about this operation?
DEAR READER — It's in its early stage of use and whenever any procedure is new, sometimes it's a good idea to wait and see what the experience really is. I gather from your remarks that you know that a lot of people have had trouble with the intestinal bypass operation. When it was first started many enthusiasts thought it was the ultimate answer to obesity. The stapling of the stomach operation you referred to is being used by some surgeons because they recognize the intestinal bypass operation can create a lot of problems. What remains to be seen is how much trouble is caused by stapling the stomach. It's not a simple operation. Any time you have to open the abdomen, it's not simple. Basically, you can think of the stomach as a large canvas bag. The surgeon puts two rows of staples near the top of the stomach. Right in the middle of the two rows he leaves a space where no staples are put. The final result is that the upper part of the stomach is a small food pouch with a small outlet to allow the food to pass on to the lower part of the stomach. The small food pouch is not able to store much solid food, so after the staple operation a person has to eat very small meals to avoid getting pain or having nausea and vomiting. It doesn't prevent a person from consuming large amounts of liquid high calorie foods. It simply prevents some people from consuming too many calories. There's no magic to it. It fits completely with the basic rule that if you decrease your calories enough, you will lose fat. Even the surgeons who have been developing the operation agree that it shouldn't be used if you can enable a person to lose fat through other means — specifically, restriction of calories and increase in calorie use by the body.

So, I'm not going to recommend the stomach stapling operation to people at this time. Since its effects are strictly through calorie control, I would much prefer to see patients achieve this without undergoing major surgery. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which is a basic diet you could use and learn to live with. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. If you have a major weight problem, I think you should certainly be under medical

FAITH DEMONSTRATES THE FUTILITY OF ENVY

If all the human emotions in our repertoire, envy is perhaps the most destructive of our happiness and spiritual well-being, and is just as unnecessary. The very time we waste in resentment over another's good fortune could be far better spent in counting our own blessings and increasing our own accomplishments. The good Lord endowed each of us with different abilities, and it is up to us to make the most of them. Wealth can evaporate and good luck reverse itself; however real peace of mind depends not on transient things but on the knowledge that God loves us equally and asks only that we do our best. Learn this at the Church of your choice, and think of the person you have envied as just an example of what you yourself can do.

Envy is a pain of mind that successful men cause their neighbors.

—Onasander (49 A.D.)

"For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish... living in malice and envy."

—Titus 3:3
