Teachers Welcomed At Banquet

Fifty-seven new teachers to the Hereford Independent School District, St. Anthony's Catholic School, and Walcott School were guests of honor at the annual New Teacher Welcome Banquet Tuesday night at the Community Center.

The annual event, sponsored by Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, drew 173 teachers, guests and sponsors. Local business sponsors were seated with the new teachers and spouses.

Highlight of the program was a presentation of various aspects of community life by four speakers--Mike Carr, John Fuston, Mike Patrick, and Ruth McBride. The four gave an overview of Hereford's business and social makeup, and each invited newcomers to become involved in making the city and county a better place to live, work and Carr, executive vice president of the C of C, served as master of ceremonies and recognized special guests from the school system, county and city government. He also introduced C of C president Ken Rogers, who offered a special welcome to the teachers.

Carr introduced each of the new teachers with a brief report on their teaching assignment, names of family members and place of former residence.

Special entertainment at the banquet was provided by The Chamber Singers, under the direction of Bill Devers. The group closed the evenings program with three musical selections.

In a drawing from all the teachers' names, four Community Concert memberships were presented to the lucky winners, and the CowBelles also

The invocation was worded by Helen Eades, chairperson of the chamber's Culture committee, which made banquet arrangements.

MEXICO CITY (AP) - An official of Mexico's national oil company has conceded Pemex might pay for damage done to Texas coast by a runaway oil well in the Bay of Campeche.

However, Reynaldo Jauregio Zentella, newly named manager of public relations for Pemex, cautioned "we'll do our best not to pay when we're not supposed to. They'll have to prove it was oil from Ixtoc I" that stained Texas beaches during its peak tourist season.

Zentella was interviewed by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

A federal task force has worked for months to keep oil off U.S. shores and to clean up the oil that has damaged Texas beaches and threatened its marine breeding grounds.

scoffed at suggestions that Mexico be held responsible for damages. Zentella was put in charge of public relations for Pemex six weeks ago. Prior to that he was executive assistant to Pemex Director Jorge Dias Serrano, who at one time was head of the Mexican firm drilling the well for Pemex.

Zentella explained that, according to Pemex contracts on the well, while the Mexican drilling contractor Permargo is responsible for damages caused by negligence, a special clause stipulates that "responsibilty in case of loss of circulation falls on Pemex."

If indeed it turns out that the well blew out because Pemex workers failed to act properly to control the oil pressure, then 'full responsibility' falls on Pemex, he said.

Zentella noted, however, that the company has yet to discover the cause of the blowout that eventually about 2.7 million barrels of oil into the Gulf of Mexico about 500 miles south of Texas.

"Of course, we want to find out if some operator was asleep" when the well blew, he said. But he added, accidents happen. We had tremendous un expected pressure from the oil and gas being tapped by the lxtoc development well during drilling.'

Zentella dismissed allegations by SEDCO, the Dallas-based company which leased the drilling rig to Permargo, that Pemex officials on the Ixtoc I site refused to take the advice of SEDCO employees.

"You've heard of Monday night football coaches,' Zentella said.

In the meantime Pemex defended its response to the blowout, saying they did all they could to control the well.

"We had the reaction in proportion to the problem," Zentella said.

Efforts to contain the well were delayed by damage to a derrick caused by high winds and heavy seas from two recent hurricanes. Engineers for Pemex said they noticed the damage Monday as they were lowering a 310-ton steel cone toward the WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter says he will report to the nation probably within a week - on American attempts to get the Soviet Union to "eliminate the combat capability" of its brigade in Cuba, a nation he says has become a "puppet" of Moscow.

Of negotiations with the Russians, Carter said: "I don't know whether we will be successful. If we do not succeed, we will take appropriate action to change the status quo.

Carter, addressing a "town meeting" in New York City on Tuesday, disputed Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's curt dismissal of American statements that the Russian troops in Cuba represent combat forces.

"It is a combat unit," the president

He said intelligence reports indicate the brigade numbers about 2,500 troops with about 40 tanks and "some field pieces." But there are no indications, the president emphasized, that the troops possess any weapons that could threaten the United States.

Gromyko, while not specifically mentioning the troops, told the U.N. General Assembly earlier in the day that "all sorts of falsehoods are being piled up concerning the policies of Cuba and the Soviet Union. It is high time that you honestly admit that this whole matter is artificial and proclaim it to be closed."

The Soviet Union, he said, "shall not allow anybody to meddle in our internal affairs." Neither his nation nor the Cubans, he said, has ever "threatened anybody.'

Carter's view of the Cubans differed. He said Cuba is dependent on Russian aid and "acts, in effect, as a Soviet surrogate in areas around the world." The senators blasted Gromyko's speech. -Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., labeled as a "baldfaced lie" Gromyko's dismissal of the U.S. charges. Jackson said "hard evidence" of a Soviet combat brigade has placed the proposed strategic arms limitation treaty "on ice for an indefinite period.'

-Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, called Gromyko's denials "unacceptable" and recommended the panel delay voting on the SALT II treaty until the troops controversy is resolved.

Both Church and Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., the committee's ranking Republican, said the treaty cannot receive the 67 votes needed for ratification while the Cuban situation remains deadlocked.

"As far as I am concerned." Church said, "the matter can be 'closed' only when President Carter is able to certify to the Senate his conclusion based on our independent intelligence assessment, that these Soviet combat forces are no longer present in Cuba."

-Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said he was "astonished" at Gromyko's statement that the United States, in complaining. about a Soviet combat presence in Cuba. was waging a propaganda campaign "based on falsehoods."

Baker called on the president to quickly make public the reconnaissance and satellite evidence which he said has convinced all who have seen it that there is in fact a brigade of Russian fighting men in

U.S. officials said privately they found no merit in Baker's proposal. One official, who requested anonymity, said such an action "could blow our entire intelligence operation."

But Baker, who has made it clear he will seek the 1980 GOP presidential nomination, said Carter "simply can't remain silent, ... Before long it will look like the United States doesn't have the will to do anything."

Several senators recalled that it was Gromyko who in 1962 told President John F. Kennedy there were no Soviet missiles in Cuba.

House Sends Senate Congressional Pay Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) - A 5.5 percent pay raise for members of Congress and top-level bureaucrats appears headed for quick action in the Senate now that the House has finally passed the legislation.

The Senate Appropriations Committee scheduled a session today to mark up the legislation for action by the full Senate.

Quick action is necessary because the bill to which the pay raise is attached contains funds to keep the government running after Oct. 1, the start of a new fiscal year.

The emergency money is needed because Congress has not passed regular legislation to finance operations of many major federal agencies.

House passage of the cost-of-living pay raise, which would increase the salary of congressmen from the current $57,500 to $60,700 on Oct. 1, reversed three previous votes in which members defeated pay proposals. Passage came on a 208-203 roll call vote.

Congress' last pay raise was a 29 percent increase in February 1977.

A key to the bill's passage appeared to be the last-minute addition to it of one of Congress's f favorite pets - a $10 billion water project appropriation.

Congress earlier had passed that water legislation, which contains funds for the controversial Tellico Dam as well as for other water projects. President Carter had not signed the water bill at the time of the pay raise vote and there were reports he might veto it.

However, the White House announced Tuesday night that Carter had signed the [See RAISES, Page 2]

The court, Ms. Veazey said, is not a place where she wants to take a personal involvement. "I'd just as soon not get into anybody's businesss, see any of the personal part of it."

Reading verdicts is a small part of her job as district clerk but it's a part she wants to do right. She knows that accidentally reading the wrong verdict--the option which is not signed by the jury foreman--might tamper tempers with the emotions of the defendant and those of his family and friends.

"I've never read the wrong verdict. I always read it over once before I read it aloud to be sure I get it right. If I read the wrong verdict, it would be very embarrassing." Ms. Veazey said.

Occasionally, she hears, sobs from the courtroom when she reads the verdict of the punishment. And, occasionally, the crying causes her to look up, but blames her actions on "instinct."

Ms. Veazey said that not looking at the defendant has become "a habit" with her. One reason for that, she explained, is that most defendants in jury trials are found guilty.

key measures of public attitudes, is rising again. The rate of inflation remains near 13 percent; even if it begins to recede by yearend, as many predict, it might not be soon

Interest rates too are on a similar course. A scattering of analysts now declare the turnabout may be near, but even they do not foresee a decline much below double-digit rates until mid-1980 at the earliest. These indicators - jobs, prices and interest rates - are among the best understood economic signals, measuring not abstract monetary or fiscal activities, but events that immediately affect pocketbooks.

But voters weigh abstractions too. Perhaps not one in 100 understands the technical sophistications of monetary policy, but they know the dollar has fallen internationally and that it means weakness.

There are clearcut reminders of this everywhere. There is no secret, for example, behind the price rise in various published products from fine prints to old comic books. They are in limited supply. Dollars, meanwhile, speed off the printing presses in unlimited quantities.

Buying power has fallen, or barely held its own, through most months this year. Paychecks grow, but the bag of groceries doesn't. And money that is saved shrinks instead of grows, as in theory it should. Studies show that for the first Americans they do not expect the future to be better. Even during the Great Depression of the 1930s, it is claimed. Americans held to the notion.

Problems such as these provoked Business Week magazine recently to declare that Kennedy's qualification - that the economy improve substantially - is "a clear demand that Jimmy Carter walk on water."

Even if the economy improves, it may be painful. Most economists seem to think that as interest rates fall, and price increases diminish, the unemployment rate, now at 6 percent. will rise by at least a point.

With the civilian labor forced now exceeding 100 million, an increase of just one percentage point would mean one million more idle workers. Some economists foresee this as the minimum impact of a slowdown.

Whether the economy continues toward greater inflation and higher interest rates, or a slowing of prices increases along with falling borrowing costs, there is likely to be unhappiness from some sector.

"Firm" Diplomacy

COMMENTARY Donald F. Graff

There are some things you can't give away, but ordinarily money isn't among them.

Except in the case of new coins and currency. The publi often shows an aversion to the unfamiliar for reasons of size or shape or denomination or who knows? The Treasury certainly doesn't or it wouldn't be in the fix it's in.

It happened to the $2 bill, which the Treasury, bowing to the realities of inflation, resurrected a few years back to take the load off the familiar $1.

Now it is happening to the Susan B. Anthony dollar coin, introduced for essentially the same reason.

It can't be for lack of publicity. Starting with the lengthy and sex-focused debate over the personage it was to honor, the Anthony dollar has had more coverage than virtually anything in the coinage line since Judas' 30 pieces of silver.

And it can't be for lack of supply. The Mint has already stamped out more than half a billion and plans to have 1.3 billion in circulation.

It takes people to accomplish that and so far the people who receive and hand on coins and bills have made it clear that for the most part they'd prefer to skip the Anthony dollar.

Major retailers report little traffic in the coin across their counters and overstocked banks have stopped ordering supplies from the Mint.

A major complaint appears to be that the new dollar, smaller than the long-familiar Liberty Head series or the more recent Eisenhower, is easily mistaken for a quarter.

There may be some point to that as concerns size, but not in shape and feel, Mint officials counter. The Anthony has the well-publicited and purposed for an American coin raised and well-publicized and unusual, for an American coin, raised and broken-line border and is heavier. There is greater differentiation between it and a quarter than between the existing quarter and nickel. And confusion between the latter two has never threatened to become a public issue.

There has been some talk of enhancing distinctiveness by making the Anthony even heavier - there being already a bill to that effect in Congress. But one of the major objections to the Anthony's predecessor, the Eisenhower dollar which likewise went nowhere, was that it was too heavy.

In addition to the weighty facts, reason is also on the side of the Anthony. It's somewhat more expensive to produce than the $1 bill - three cents per unit as compared to two cents but the durability of a coin keeps it in circulation 10 times longer. The overall savings for the government are immense.

But don't try to sell the public with reason. If it doesn't want to pocket a coin, it doesn't - and isn't in the case of the

The Treasury isn't giving up, however. It is planning a new publicity blitz this fall, heavy on the television, to convince the public that the Anthony is the coinage wave of the future. And if that doesn't work, it may create its own wave by commencing to withdraw from circulation the $1 bill. But that could create its own public relations problem. If the Treasury meets resistance in introducing something unfamiliar, just wait till it tries to take away something as familiar as those Washington portraits.

There are something like three billion in circulation. And if millions of Americans should decide they would rather hoard George than switch to Susan, it could turn out to be a very long withdrawal

Susan's popularity problem

If at first you don't succeed, at least reserve the option of trying again. That appears to be the government's latest position in its efforts to prevent publication of details on construction of a hydrogen bomb. Now that a newspaper, The Press Connection of Madison, Wis., has published the allegedly secret details, the Justice Department has called off its slow-motion case against a magazine, The Progressive, likewise Wisconsin based, to prevent it from doing the same.

The department warns, however, that a fast fold in this instance is not to be construed as a cessation of efforts to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons information. On the contrary, it is now looking into possible violations of the law by the newspaper. The alacrity with which Justice acted once the nuclear beans were spilled suggests it knew an out when it saw one and grabbed it. If so, understandably. This case has been a immer from the start. The authors of both articles claim their information came totally from publications in the public domain, including an encyclopedia entry written by one of the fathers of the Hbomb, Dr. Edward Teller.

The government contends that some of the relevant documents were inadvertently made public and subsequently clas-sified. And anyway, its case is based on the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, which applies a blanket restriction to dissemination of data dealing with the "design, manufacture or utiliza-tion of atomic weapons" and "the production of special nuclear material. While this has placed the government in the unsympathetic position of seeking to censor the press, the press itself has risen somewhat reluctantly to the challenge.

The primary concern has been the precedent the case might set for government intrusion in the information-gathering process rather than approval of the dissemination of the information in this particular case. For many publications, the lethal potential of the information at issue introduced an element of irresponsibility that was difficult to justify in the cause of freedom of expression.

It is noteworthy that several publications with access to the identical material that The Press Connection eventually published declined to do so themselves, an explanation among others being that it was too technical for a newspaper story.

Maybe, but it certainly put The Press Connection in the news. The pro-publication argument that there really are no basic nuclear secrets because anyone with the technical qualifications and willingness to research publicly accessible sources could acquire the requisite information is probably true as far as it goes. After all, nuclear weapons have been reinvented several times since the World War II Manhattan Project and not only by great powers. Most recently India has gone nuclear and coming up, it appears, is Pakistan.

But should the process be made any easier for the Pakistans of the world community? True, the actual construction of nuclear devices requires not only know-how but great material and technical resources. But there are out there nations some of the oil-rich variety come immediately to mind - that possess or can acquire same and whose possession of nuclear potential would make no one but their own rulers sleep better.

Angels Win West; Astros Still in Race

California Will Face Baltimore

ANAHEIM. Calif. (AP) -Brian Downing rapped a pair of run-scoring singles and Frank Tanana fired a five-hitter Tuesday night as the California Angels clinched the American League's West Division championship with a 4-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

The title was the first of any kind for the Angels in their 19year history. California will face the East Division champion Baltimore Orioles in the best-offive AL playoffs, which start at Baltimore next Wednesday

Kansas City, the AL West champion the past three seasons, was eliminated from contention with its loss to the Angels and Minnesota dropped out of the race by being beaten by the Chicago White Sox 9-3 earlier Tuesday night.

Downing singled in the game's first run in the second inning, when the Angels scored three times to knock out loser Craig Chamberlain, 4-4. The California catcher singled in another run in the fifth for the final run of the night.

Tanana, 7-5, was making his fifth start since being reactivated three weeks ago after missing a nearly three months because of tendinitis in his pitching shoulder.

Norman's Bat Leads Rangers To Victory

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -Nelson Norman has won games for the Texas Rangers on defense before, but it's seldom that his prowess with a bat has contributed much.

Norman hit three singles, all from the "strange" left side of the plate in leading Texas to a 5-3 victory over the Oakland A's Tuesday night.

As a right-handed hitter, he is only .199 for the season and for much of the year he held the dubious honor of having the worst batting average in the American League, but since being persuaded to become a switch hitter, Norman has gotten better and better.

He is .266 for the year as a left-hander and has hit .290 for the last 30 days.

"I was taking a big cut from the right side, from the left side I'd just been trying to pop the bat," said the young shortstop from the Dominican Republic. Oakland greeted Texas starter Doc Medich with two singles and a double for two runs before he got his first out in the first

Jeff Newman, who had three singles for Oakland, tied the score in the seventh. Medich had retired 16 of his last 18 batters to that point and Texas manager Pat Corrales yanked him after he walked catcher Jim Essian to put the tying run in scoring position.

Wayne Gross promptly singled off reliever Jim Kern to tie the game.

Two costly mistakes by Kingman let Texas score what proved to be the winning run in the bottom of the seventh. Norman led off with an infield His 100th Game single, but was out at second on Rivers' sacrifice attempt.

Moments later, however, Kingman threw wildly trying to pick off Rivers at first, and the Texas centerfielder went all the way to third base.

DALLAS (AP) - Tom Landry should have figured it would happen on a Monday night.

He lost his 100th National Football League game Monday fer not to be in a stadium. He has said Monday night football is good for pro football and entertaining for the fans but it is heck for players and coaches particularly when you have to Kern got the win in relief, travel to spots like Cleveland and get home at dawn.

Monday night football is one of the few things Landry is .500 at. He's 7-7 with one more to go Nov. 12 against the Philadelphia Eagles in Texas Stadium.

"Those road Monday night games a are tough," he says. 'That's the price you have to pay for being successful."

The Cowboys were whipped 26-7 by Cleveland Monday night. Landry grabbed a few hours sleep before a thorough film review to find out just why.

His defense lacked a pass rush and his secondary was a step slow.

Offensively, his team turned ball over five times and blocked several grades below

'We defeated ourselves," Landry said.

'You don't win many games after you lose the ball five times," said Landry, who has won 164 National Football League jousts, fifth best on the All-time list. He refused to place the defeat

"Cleveland executed very well and every move it made in the first quarter was the right one," said Landry. "I thought

Landry said the Cowboy defense, hurt by the injury to strong safety Charlie Waters and the retirements of end Ed (Too Tall) Jones and tackle Jethro Pugh, was still trying to find itself.

We are regrouping and that takes time" said Landry. Landry added "right now our defense needs confidence."

The Cowboys are currently ranked seventh against the run and eighth against the pass in the NFC.

ATLANTA (AP) - J.R. Richard gave Houston a needed boost Tuesday night and the Astros returned to the National League West pennant chase after a near fatal collapse the previous night.

The 6-foot-8 Richard put the skids to a three-game Astros' losing streak with a powerful 13strikeout peformance and Houston's bats exploded for a season-high 19 hits in an 8-0 route o of the Atlanta Braves.

The victory, coupled with Cincinnati's 8-2 loss to San Diego, left the Astros only 11/4 games behind the first place Reds. Houston has four games remaining while Cincinnati has

"I wasn't concerned about last night," said Richard of Atlanta's 5-4 and 8-1 sweep of a doubleheader, dampening Houston's pennant hopes. "That was past history. This was a new day and I went out to do my job and did it."

Indeed, he did, scattering only four hits while surpassing the 300-strikeout mark for the second consecutive season and coming within one strikeout of the NL record of 303 for righthanders he set last year.

"The strikeouts are definitely an accomplishment but the win was more important than the strikeouts," said the 29-yearold Richard, now 17-13 after his fourth shutout of the season. He will make his final start against Los Angeles Saturday.

"It's definitely not over yet but I do feel we can't lose any more games. If we win the rest, we have a darn good chance of winning it," he said. Richard said the Astros were "more relaxed and calm tonight," than Monday and erupted for the 19 hits which "was the most I can ever remember us getting."

Four Astros had three hits apiece, including Enos Cabell, Rafael Landestoy, Denny Walling and Terry Puhl while Landestoy and Luis Pujols drove in three runs apiece and Cabell

"J.R. was outstanding. He can't pitch much better than that," said Houston Manager Bill Virdon. "Now the race might get interesting. J.R. gave us alift and I feel like we can go ahead now with a break or two and a little help from San Diego and the Braves.'

Cincinnati hosts San Diego today and Thursday and closes out the season with a weekend three-game series against Atlanta. Houston faces the Braves today with Joe Niekro, already a 20-game winner, meeting brother Phil, gunning for his 20th. The Astros close out the season with a three-game series in Los Angeles.

"I still think it's going to take a lot of help," conceded Virdon. It will still be somewhat of a miracle if we go on to win it but stranger things have happened has caused your fractures but it's certainly true that older As The Health Letter I'm sending you points out, increasing the calcium in your people and women after the menopause tend to develop dissolving bones, called osteo-porosis. These are particulardiet won't necessarily correct the disorder once it has occurred but it's an important ly prone to fractures. That's measure in helping to prevent why a lot of older people have fractured hips and other fracprogression of the disease.

There is also some evidence tures with minor falls. At a younger age the bones wouldn't have fractured.

that providing female hormones to women after the menopause will help to slow down or delay the onset of such problems.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I would like to ask if a woman has a lump in her breast and the doctor tells her the lump is suspicious, what does he mean? Should the breast be removed if it is suspicious? If it's not malignant, is there any other treatment to save the breast?

DEAR READER - Suspicious means the doctor doesn't know for sure what the lump is. He's concerned that it might be malignant but he can't tell. The truth is in most instances doctors have to guess what the lump is as long as all they can do is feel it through the skin. The obvious solution whenever there is a lump in the breast, and you can't be absolutely certain what if is, is to remove the lump. Then it can be examined under a micro-scope, to tell whether it's malignant or benign. If it's benign, no further treatment is indicated. Many women have benign lumps removed from their breast and it doesn't interfere with the appearance of their breast or require further treatment.

Women with lumps in their breast or a tendency to having lumps in the breast should be particularly careful about using female hormones at the time of the menopause and afterward

DEAR DR. LAMB . Please comment on the pros and cons of starting to jog if you have varying degrees of varicose veins. I've heard conflicting medical comment. Some say don't jog if you have varicose veins, other say start gradually and work up slowly over a period of time and then you'll be O.K. What do you

DEAR READER - I say it depends on the results of your examination. Specifically, which veins in your legs are involved.

You have two major sets of veins in the legs. The superficial ones are those you see underneath the skin. The deep ones are inside the muscles and you can't see those at all. The superficial ones are connected to the deep veins. The big deep veins have lit-tle valves in them and as your muscles contract with just plain walking or jogging, they squeeze these veins and push the blood up toward your heart. The blood can't run backward because the little valves flap shut.

As the blood is passed from the deep veins up to the heart, the superficial veins empty and the pressure decreases inside the veins in the legs. So just plain walking will decrease the pressure in the veins in the legs of a normal person. If you stand still, the pressure will gradually increase under the influenceof gravity. That's why standing is hard on your veins.

Now if you have superficial varicose veins, those deep veins are still working and when you walk or jog the superficial veins will empty into the deep veins and the deep veins will drain toward your heart. As a result, the walking actually helps to empty those dilated superficial varicose veins. In those conditions, walking and jogg-ing are perfectly all right.

In the most advanced cases of varicose veins, it's essential to have a careful clinical evaluation and see if your condi-tion can't be improved with surgery. So that you'll have a better understanding of vari-cose veins and what causes them and what you can do to help protect against their complications, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You should know that running and walking will not cause varicose veins. Quite the contrary, keeping your legs active as opposed to standing still or even sitting still may help prevent them.

Houston Bond Issue Passes by Big Margin

number of Houstonians who cast ballots in the city's capital improvement bond election approved the entire $395 million package by a wide margin.

Election officials said Tuesday's voter turnout appeared to be even smaller than the 11 percent who showed up for the Aug. 11 election when the city charter was amended to change the makeup of the Houston City Council.

Returns from all but about 30 precincts showed voters approving the bonds, which will finance improvements during the next four years, by a margin of more than 2-to-1.

Mayor Jim McConn, who had urged voters to approve the bonds, said he was glad Houstonians agreed with him that the city needs the bond issues to help finance the improvements. "Honestly, I think it indicates

DEAR POLLY — When one uses paper towels to grease cake pans and cookie sheets, time and money can be saved by keeping the used towel in a covered glass jar so it can be used over and over.

Some jars that various products come in have such small necks that it is hard to get out that last little bit. My measuring spoons are flexible so I bend the smallest one and find I can get it down inside such a bottle and enjoy every bit of whatever it contains.

'Magic Triangle' Statistics Bear Out Magnitude Of Crop Losses Incurred in August Hailstorms

of a particular county's cotton crop was lost to the inclement weather, while losses of other Iomorrow crops were in many instances equally severe.

Bergland Visit May Have Impact Damaged Crops On Agri-Future of High Plains Must be Appraised

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland's visit to the Lubbock area September 20, according to Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, may well have an impact on the future of High Plains agriculture far beyond the immediate benefits expected from the trip.

The Secretary came primarily to gain first-hand knowledge of hail losses suffered by area farmers in late August. Describing the damage as "horrendous," Bergland said current FmHA loans to affected farmers could be extended, deferred or ballooned, and promised to use his authority to keep anyone from being forced out of farming by the

Johnson expressed PCG's gratitude for the Secretary's assurances, and said "I also tend to believe what Bergland saw here may give him a better understanding of the need for continuing programs that give farmers more adequate protection against such disasters."

In addition to new disaster loans and extended or deferred current loans, farmers who lost all or part of their crops will be eligible for payments under disaster provisions of the current farm law. On cotton the payment will be equal to 19.2 cents per pound times the difference between actual yield and 75 percent of the farm's ASCS-established yield. Obviously such a payment will not fully compensate farmers for losses, "but they will help," Johnson says. "But unless ongoing efforts to secure an extension of the disaster program are successful," he adds, "we won't have even that much protection for the remaining two years of the present farm law."

The Senate has passed a bill providing for an expanded Federal crop insurance plan and a two-year extension of the disaster program. But the House has yet to act on a similar but less palatable measure reported by the House Agriculture Committee. The House bill, as now written, would expand Federal crop insurance but would extend the disaster program for only one year.

The House is expected to consider the Committee bill in October, at which time an amendment will be offered to make its extension of the disaster program compatible with that passed by the Senate.

"This amendment and the bill itself are going to need all the support they can get from the Administration," Johnson believes, "and although the Secretary already has agreed to support the amendment, we're hoping his support will be somewhat more enthusiastic now that he has seen for himself the producer's dire need for protection."

Johnson was also encouraged by the Secretary's remarks on the importance or agricultural exports and the imperative nature of meeting High Plains water needs in the future.

Field Survey Of Wells is Scheduled

AUSTIN — An intensive field survey of water wells in the High Plains area will begin in October, conducted by personnel of the Texas Department of Water Resources. Purpose of the survey will be to obtain measurements on the depth to water in the aquifer from land surface, with one measurement
