Final Carter Selections Better Received

Mosquitoes are like little children-the moment they stop making noises you know they're getting into something.

WE RAN ACROSS a column by another editor and felt it was too good not to pass along to our readers. It was written by James Roberts, publisher of The Andrews County News, a writer who has used his sharp wit to whittle on more than one bureaucratic agency. The column follows:

Congressman Kent Hance 19th District House Office Building Washington, D.C.

Dear Congressman:

We would urge for your consideration immediate legislation to create a Department of Caffeine--DOC.

As you well know, coffee prices are going through the ceiling because of a shortfall in production in all of the major coffee producing countries of the world.

Unless immediate action is taken, the poor people of this nation will no longer be able to obtain coffee—at least at a price they can afford.

And the time is ripe! With all the indecision and uncertainty following President Carter's summit speech and the takeover of power by the Georgia mafia along with the firing of what the Wall Street Journal calls all "the brain people" in the Cabinet. Congress should move swiftly into this temporary power vacuum with a new agency-the Department of Caffeine--DOC.

The new agency could be modeled after the highly successful Department of Energy-DOE. The problems are the same and the solutions sought are the same objectives as for DOE.

Since coffee is every bit as important to the well-being of this nation as gasoline. DOC should be established with the same budget and number of personnel as DOE. namely: $10 billion and 20.000

DOC should immediately regulate the price of coffee from the coffee tree to the gullet. Perhaps through massive regulations. DOC could control the price of old coffee before 1974, old coffee after 1974 but before 1978, new coffee from trees growing below 6,000 feet altitude, and new coffee grown above a certain elevation. And provisions should be made to control prices of any coffee grown domestically in the future.

Similar to the actions of DOE, DOC should immediately set up a series of (See BULL, Page 2)

Lovers Get Big Lift In Wedding

By PAUL SIMS

It wasn't because he doesn't like churches, tradition or the usual that Mike Wheeler of Little Valley, N.Y. got married atop the ferris wheel at the Hereford Lions Club Carnival Friday evening. He was simply following his dad's footsteps.

"My father got married at the very top of a ferris wheel," said the carney who was part of the Gene Ledel Show at the Bull Barn this past week. "And my brother plans to get married at the top of a ferris wheel. I guess it's just family tradition."

Justice of the Peace O.K. Neal, sitting in a seat which had been turned around by carnival workers so he could face Wheeler and his bride-to-be Linda Groves, of Pittsburgh, Penn., performed the ceremony. He charged $20 for the event.

"That's my standard ferris wheel rate." joked Neal. "If they had wanted to get married in the Loop or the Hammer, it would have been a lot more."

The JP and the two carnival workers rose to the top of the giant wheel in the 6 o'clock ceremony, attended by other employees of the Gene Ledel Show and several Lions, who had received hand-written invitations on 3 by 5 index cards.

Both the groom and bride acted in typical about-to-be-married fashion-smiling and trembling. Neal trembled, too, be suse, as he put it, "I don't likhigh places."

Wheeler, wearing a light blue tuxedo, and Miss Groves, in a blue dress, exchanged rings said "they do" and kissed-50 feet in the air. When the ceremony was completed, Neal looked at the couple and said, "I've heard of getting high at weddings but this is ridiculous."

As the foursome (a Brand reporter had been sitting next to the nervous JP) returned to earth, it was off to a carnival picture booth for wedding portraits. A reception followed in the Little Bull Barn and wedding night was spent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's final two selections for his revamped Cabinet are drawing praise on Capitol Hill as the Senate hastens to confirm some of the earlier nominees before its August recess.

Patricia Roberts Harris became the first to win Senate approval, being confirmed Friday as secretary of health, education and welfare. Mrs. Harris, former secretary of housing and urban development, replaces Joseph A. Califano Jr., who was fired as HEW secretary last week.

Also confirmed Friday was W. Graham Claytor to be deputy defense secretary, a spot vacated by Charles W. Duncan Jr., Carter's choice to become energy secretary. Since last week, Claytor has been serving as acting transportation secretary.

Elsewhere, the Senate Finance Committee conducted hearings on G. William Miller's nomination to be treasury secretary and the Senate Judiciary Committee completed three days of hearings on Carter's nomination of Benjamin R. Civilitti to be attorney for one-month break.

Both nominations are expected to go to the Senate floor next week in time for action before Congress recesses Aug. 3

Meanwhile, Carter completed filling the vacancies left by last week's Cabinet purge as he appointed former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu as secretary of HUD and Portland, Ore., Mayor Neil Goldschmidt as secretary of transportation.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, chairman of the House Committee on Banking. Finance and Urban Affairs, termed Landrieu's nomination a a "good appointment."

"Mayor Landrieu knows housing and cities, is widely respected as a successful mayor and is well known to our committee through his frequent appearances before us," the Wisconsin Democrat said.

Landrieu, former president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors and now employed by a large commercial development firm in New Orleans, also drew support from Sen. Russell Long, DLa., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

But Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, said he will wait to hear testimony before deciding whether to support Landrieu's nomination.

Sen. Bob Packwood, ranking Republican on the Senate Commerce Committee, praised the choice of Goldschmidt, a fellow Oregonian, to replace ousted Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

Packwood said he was "looking forward to working with the mayor as secretary of transportation for the benefit of Oregon and the nation." Goldschmidt had been mentioned as a potential Democratic challenger for Packwood's Senate seat next year.

Claudette Gone, Ruin Remains

HOUSTON (AP) — Tropical storm Claudette is gone, but it has left behind a legacy of destruction surpassing that of Hurricane Carla in 1961.

The low pressure system that dumped up to 30 inches of rain over Southeast Texas has moved into Oklahoma, and the National Weather Service said Friday — Tropical storm night only light rain was falling in the flooded area.

But residents in one Beaumont subdivision were sandbagging homes and preparing to evacuate as runoff in the Pine Island Bayou finally spilled out of its banks and threatened to flood.

Elsewhere, however, water began to recede Friday, and the first of the displaced residents began returning to about 15,000 water-logged homes from school and church Red Cross shelters.

Gov. Bill Clements said the heavy rain and flooding has caused at least $750 million in losses, including undetermined damage to the state's vast petrochemical refining complex. Clements said he is prepared to assign National Guardsmen to the area if needed in evacuation efforts.

"The petrochemical refining complex has been severely curtailed and a good many of these installations have shut down because of high water," Clements said Friday. Texas produces 27 percent of American-refined gasoline.

The governor asked President Carter to declare as a major disaster area those counties hardest hit by flooding — Brazoria, Harris, Liberty, Fort Bend, Galveston, Chambers, Hardin, Orange and Jefferson.

The number of flood-related deaths grew to six Friday when five persons drowned near Centerville, about 120 miles northwest of Houston. Their church bus was swept into a swollen creek when it was hit by a truck at a flooded bridge.

Southwestern Bell officials said 50,000 customers were without phones, and 3,000 area residents still had no power.

Houston Mayor Jim McConn, after an inspection by boat, described the situation a as a "tremendous disaster."

"A lot of people have lost everything, their homes, their cars," McConn said.

Probations Revoked For 3 Hereford Men

State District Judge Wes Gulley Friday revoked the probations of three Hereford men. sentencing two of them to prison terms and delaying pronouncement on the third for 10 days.

Frank Garcia, who was serving a 10-year probated sentence for possession of heroin, had his probation revoked after Gulley heard testimony that Garcia had been arrested for allegedly driving while intoxicated last year in Randall County.

Garcia also violated the terms of his probation for consuming alcoholic beverages in Randall County last year and in Deaf Smith County in June of this year, according to assistant district attorney Jerry Smith. Gulley agreed that Garcia violated the terms of his probation on both of those counts.

Garcia's probation began following his trial in 1971 and would have expired in two years. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison Friday.

Greg Hooser was sentenced to five years in prison for violating the terms of his probation by driving while intoxicated in Clovis. N.M.. drinking alcoholic beverages and leaving the State of Texas without the permission of either his probation officer or the district court.

Hooser was on five years probation following three convictions for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Guadalupe Uvalle, serving a sevenyear probated sentence for indecency with a child, exercised his right to delay formal sentencing for 10 days.

Gulley stated that Uvalle violated the terms of his probation because he visited his wife and children without the permission of his probation officer or the court and was intoxicated in a public place on Jan. 25.

Those were the only revocation hearings held Friday. There are 36 cases set for 222nd District Court next week, including the aggravated assault trials of George Garcia and Inez Galan.

Deaf Smith County Grand Jury last week indicted 14 persons, including two who are still at-large.

Indicted were Mario Coronado, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon; Robert Ramon, burglary of a building; Valentin Sristaita, burglary of a building Ray Martinez, possession of marijuana; Aida Martinez, possession of marijuana; Larry James Toddy, possession of marijuana; Andrew Garcia, armed robbery and robbery (two charges). Antonio Zepeda, driving while intoxicated; Arnulfo Barrientes, attempted murder; Robert Barrientes, attempted murder; and Daniel Villarreal, attempted murder.

Six Vacancies Still To Go

New Principal Filling Hereford High Spots

by PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

Hereford High Principal Ronald Geyer has seen his first few weeks on the job virtually consumed by interviewing and recruiting and has only five positions yet to fill on the HHS teaching staff.

In announcing last week's additions of a tennis coach and Patsy Giles as junior counselor. Geyer said things are beginning to "shape up" for next month's start of classes.

"We're pleased with all the people we've hired in the last few weeks, but I would very much like to hire these positions, get our staff set and begin concentrating on other areas by the earliest date possible," Geyer said.

Needed are teachers for mathematics, migrant math, social studies, Spanish-English and English-speech. Geyer said all the positions should be easily filled with the exception of the mathematics job.

"We're having a little trouble finding a math teacher. We haven't had any applications."

The position became available with the

The position became available with the recent resignation of tennis coach Lawrence Skimbo. Hired last week to replace Skimbo was Lubbock Junior high coach Robert Cox, whose school and classes have not been set by the district.

Mrs. Giles fills a counseling vacancy created by the resignation of Tom Templeton, who has moved to Junction to become elementary school principal. Mrs. Giles had taught math at Stanton Junior High, where she also was cheerleader sponsor.

"She's very highly thought of in the district. Mr. McCarley (Stanton Principal Bill McCarley) gave her an excellent recommendation. She did her counseling internship last spring at the high school so she has had secondary experience. And she seems to relate very well to the students," Geyer said.

Mark Elms of Waxahachie was hired by athletic director Don Cumpton and Geyer to coach sophomore football and basketball and teach mathematics. Teachers who were promoted from Stanton to fill vacancies include Dan Giliuson, who will be first assistant varsity basketball coach, and Larry Sowers, who will become head coach of the girls' basketball team, replacing Roy Shipp.

Johnny Taylor of Olton was hired as varsity line coach in football and assistant track coach.

Giliuson, Sowers and Taylor will teach social studies, an area in which Geyer said he has an overabundance of instructors.

"We're overloaded in the social studies department. Ten out of 12 coaches last year here taught social studies. I'm trying to more evenly distribute that load, which had thrown all of the social studies classes in the morning." he said.

Geyer hired Leota Kelso, of Hereford.

as migrant-English teacher.

Ronnie Wood, high school biology instructor and past president of Hereford Classroom Teachers Association, has been named activities director. Geyer announced.

"He'll be responsible for the student council. morning announcements. student marquis, student parking, coordination of club activities and other areas. His position will help to take a lot of those responsibilities away from Alex (Glass, assistant principal) and myself." Geyer said. Superinendent Harrell Holder said Friday he was pleased with Geyer's hirings and the filling of other positions throughout the school district.

"I feel like we are hiring some people capable of excelling. Because of that. I am looking forward to the 1979-80 school year." Holder said.

Farm Bloc Leader To Head India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - Conservative farm bloc leader Charan Singh was sworn in as India's fifth prime minister Saturday but his coalition was already coming apart.

Singh and eight Cabinet members took the oath of office from President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy in the Presidential Palace. But six others named earlier did not.

The holdouts belong to the Congress Party, one of three groups in the coalition government, India's first.

A Congress source said they did not take the oath because of differences over the distribution of portfolios.

Only one Congress member, the party's leader - former Foreign Minister Y.B. Chavan - was sworn in during the brief ceremony at the Palace's ornate Ashoka Hall.

No posts were announced and some of the new ministers questioned said they did not know what their eventual positions would be.

Foreigners To Earn

'Reasonable' Penalties

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says his department "will be reasonable" in carrying out penalties against foreigners who do not report their U.S. holdings of farmland by the Aug. 1 deadline.

Under a law passed by Congress last year, foreign owners of land used for agriculture, forestry or timber production in the last five years must report their holdings by that deadline.

Foreigners who bought land recently have 90 days from the date of purchase to

Owners of less than one acre that produces less than $1,000 in annual farm sales are exempt.

The law says failure to report land ownership can lead to penalties of up to 25 percent of the land's fair market value.

Bergland said Friday some foreign owners of small tracts of U.S. farmland "have had difficulty in obtaining information and forms on the reporting

Those who fail to report by the deadline are technically in violation of the law, he said. However, Bergland added, "The AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The federal flood insurance program might be hit with as much as $300 million in claims from homeowners swamped by rains from Tropical. Stoom Claudette, an insurance industry spokesman estimates.

Frank Lewis of Dallas, regional manager of Property Claims Services of the American Insurance Association. made the assessment after checking Brazoria, Galveston, Hardin, Harris, Jefferson and Orange counties.

He estimated privately insured damage at $11.4 million.

"This is just for the insured flood losses to vehicles, mobile homes and the wind losses to dwellings and commercial structures. It does not include any of the losses insured under the National Flood Insurance Program, where losses may be 30 times as great." Lewis said.

The federal program opened a claims office in the Alvin City Hall on Friday and expected to open other offices elsewhere.

Criswell Influence Overwhelming in Baptist Church

DALLAS (AP) — A chorus of 200 voices backed by a full orchestra swells to an explosive finish. The audience bursts into applause punctuated by "Amens" and "Praise the Lords."

The man in white stands. There is silence. He strides to a pulpit flanked by microphones and beams into the four television cameras trained on his unlined face. He bows his head and 2,500 members of the congregation follow suit.

Dr. W.A. Criswell—pastor of the largest Southern Baptist Church in the world, spearhead of admittedly ultra-conservative Bible teachings, commander of a multi-million-dollar religious empire, overwhelming influence on the spiritual lives of more than 20,000 worshippers—is completely at home.

The Criswell dynasty at First Baptist Church of Dallas is leg-

The membership roster at First Baptist Church of Dallas is sprinkled with the famous, in both the religious and secular worlds. Evangelist Billy Graham has been a member since 1953. After converting from Catholicism, Dallas Cowboys place kicker Rafael Septien became the church's 20,000th member earlier this year. That same night, commentator Paul Harvey became the 20,001st member.

At the age of 70 and on the eve of his 35th anniversary at the helm of the church — his 51st year as a preacher — Criswell shows no signs of slowing down. In fact, he is being touted as a candidate for the presidency of the Baptist World Alliance ("The only feather he does not have in his cap," said one local Baptist) and says he is going stronger than ever.

Perhaps that is why speculation abounds in the Southern Baptist Convention that Criswell will never retire, and will die in the pulpit. It is speculation Criswell does not deny.

"I believe in what I try to do. I want to do what I do all my life, I have just loved doing it," he said, repeating a phrase he has used often from the pulpit. "I would rather do what I do for nothing, than do what anybody else does for money."

In keeping with that philosophy, and his uncanny flair for publicity, Criswell announced five years ago that he will give back "every penny" he has ever earned at First Baptist — a figure he estimates is in excess of $600,000. He said he has been plowing his salary back into the church since that time, and has "consummated my pledge in my will."

Income in the six-figure realm may sound like a lot to a country preacher, even to the pastor of a large urban church. But for First Baptist, it is a mere pittance.

Business director Gene Clowe said the church already has gone over its $5 million budget for 1979, and projects the budget will exceed $6 million next year. In the latest of a series of building projects, the church is about to construct a parking garage with a price tag between $5 million and $6 million.

With the kind of money First Baptist commands, it is not unexpected that its ministry is vast and varied. That ministry follows precisely the thinking of Criswell, known to everyone as "The Pastor."

Under Criswell's leadership, the church has become an almost all-encompassing force in the lives of many members.

The 15 grades of Sunday School classes have an enrollment of more than 11,000. The classes are set up so that theoretically, an expectant mother could enroll her unborn child in a Cradle Roll class, and that child could continue study through the Senior Adult, or over-65 level.

There are special classes for Japanese members and the Chinese, Koreans, the underprivileged and the deaf have their own pastors. There are special classes for the mentally handicapped and for doctors, nurses and other medical personnel. There is even a special silent paging system in the sanctuary for doctors and each service is interpreted into sign language for deaf member

A complicated radio-television hook-up broadcasts services to overflow congregations via closed-circuit television and local stations have aired the Sunday services for years. Two specially-built control booths and four cameras are operated by volunteers.

The church sponsors a full-time music director who coordinates an orchestra, a group that plays handbells, and more than 15 choirs. He also directs a lavish "Family Night" program at the State Fair Music Hall each fall.

The high school choir has traveled around the world and the music division cuts several records each year. Music director Gary Moore said he can robe "something like" 16,000 singers. There are more than 100 pianos in various Sunday School rooms in the vast First Baptist complex.

For recreation, the church owns two gymnasiums, an indoor track, a sauna, steam bath, whirlpool, racquetball courts and a bowling alley. Movies occasionally play in church auditoriums.

But all that is not enough for Criswell, who would like the church "to consume the interest of every individual in the church."

"My idea of a church is one that reaches all aspects of a family ... all the interests, avocations in their life (would be) the church "he said

"You can't do that without a tremendous outlay. To have a program for reaching these people, and there are thousands of them, is an enormous expenditure."

First Baptist is unique, even when compared with other big business churches, in that it is located in the heart of downtown Dallas. In fact, the church is one of downtown's largest property owners, holding the title on about six blocks of prime land and multi-story buildings, including its first sanctuary, which has been declared a historic landmark by the state of Texas.

"On the books, the total church property is worth about $18 million," Clowe said, "But in reality, it is worth between $25 million and $50 million."

Because of the tax-exempt status afforded churches, First Baptist paid only $150,000 in property taxes last year on the few spaces it rents to businesses and a local university.

The two schools started by Criswell, the First Baptist Academy and the Criswell Center for Biblical Studies, pay no rent for the space they occupy in church-owned buildings. While the schools teach what Criswell calls bedrock Southern Baptist fundamentalism and are populated heavily with its members, they are operated separately from the church itself.

First Baptist is funded entirely by contributions from its 20,000-plus members, who give to the church in a spectacular service every spring. Contributions have far exceeded the budget every single year since Criswell came to Dallas from Oklahoma.

"This year, the gifts, including tithing, the building fund and special gifts, will total close to $7 million," Clowe said. He added that more than 5,000 church members are true tithers, turning 10 percent of their gross income over to the church.

"The rank-and-file give well over 80 percent of the financial strength of the church. It's not that elite group that most people seem to think we depend on."

Even so, the church is $4.7 million in debt, and that figure will more than double when construction begins on the parking garage.

"Some of the businessmen shudder," said church administrator Charles Bristow. "Yes, it's a large financial obligation.

But I feel this way: look at $5 million debt in this particular space in downtown."

First Baptist does count some of Dallas' moneyed elite among its members. The late billionaire, H.L. Hunt, belonged. So does Mary Crowley, founder and president of Home Interiors and Gifts.

Two years ago, Mrs. Crowley gave the church $750,000 asking church members to match her gift for a new building. The congregation pitched in $1.85 million in one Sunday night service and the Mary C Building was dedicated debt-free.

"The people rally more than an individual," Bristow said.
"The Mary Crowleys are the cream, but the backbone is the people. She is a generous woman, but there are people who also have given unselfishly and sacrificially. They give to get this thing done. (We can) call the people together to undergird a cause or a need.

"Anytime you lean on one individual, I personally think you're flirting with trouble."

The Criswell Foundation, a group of church board members who handle large gifts to Criswell, recently shelled out a reported $750,000 for the old downtown YMCA building for the Criswell Center for Biblical Studies. The funds came from a one-shot gift of $800,000.

"It (the foundation) was not set up as a tax dodge," Clowe said. "It can do things for the Criswell Center that the church

Criswell carries enough clout to have sold his board members on all his building projects but one. After years of trying to sell the business-minded board on a multi-million dollar senior citizen apartment complex, Criswell has admitted defeat. Part of that complex would have included a contract from the church promising to care for the residents for the rest of their lives.

"My men (the board) said they just didn't know what inflation would do to that," Criswell said, shaking his head.

Criswell is not without his detractors. While no one can deny that he has almost single-handedly accelerated the growth of what was once a dying downtown church, some think his flamboyant personality and penchant for speaking out on secular issues do not work to the advantage of the church or the denomination.

"His deep convictions may be the the greatest contribution he can make," said C.R. Daley, editor of the Western Recorder, a Southern Baptist publication in Louisville, Ky. "But he sometimes talks without reflecting on what he is saying.

"He is the king in the court of his church, so overpowering is his personality. But he is not a tyrant," Daley said. "He is human enough to let his vanity lead to let things be named for him. He is almost a god.

"But our set-up is perfect for that sort of thing. There is far too much emphasis placed on the pastor and First Church is a prime example of that."

John Heard, past editor of the Baptist Standard in Dallas, credits Criswell's "strong leadership, I'd almost call it a dictatorship," with building a "strong downtown church."

But Heard, too, feels that Criswell sometimes oversteps the bounds of good taste in his public comments.

"That would be my major criticism of him," Heard said. "The 'Amen' from the crowd makes him go farther than he intends to

In 1885, George Westinghouse developed a transformer which allowed high-voltage alternating electrical current to be transmitted over great distances at relatively low cost, says IPO Inc., a group dedicated to preserving the patent system as an incentive to innovation and creativity.

Criswell's uncompromising, unswerving embrace of fundamental Baptist theology has catapulted him to the forefront of what some have called the Southern Baptist swing to the right.

"We find our church leading a conservative, fundamentalist appeal in the Southern Baptist Church," Criswell said. "Our church is already ultra-conservative and ultra-fundamentalist, but it only appears more that way against a background of liberalism."

Others in the Southern Baptist Convention, however, feel Criswell's strict, literal interpretations do not reflect prevailing attitudes in the SBC. Each Southern Baptist church sets it own standards and the SBC is only a loose affiliation with no governing power over the churches.

"I assure you, that is not the mainstream of Southern Baptists," Daley said. "Young preachers do not look to Criswell as a role model.

Palm Oil Imports Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imports of palm oil, which compete with domestic soybean oil in the U.S. market, may be the smallest in eight years, according to the Agriculture Department Officials said Thursday palm oil imports for the year ending Sept. 30 may drop to about 300 million pounds from 361 million in the 1977-78 market year.

According to USDA records, that would be the lowest level of imports since 207 million pounds entered the U.S. market in 1970-71.

Palm oil imports, mainly from Malaysia, have been a sore point with American soybean producers for some years. Imports increased sharply seven years ago and rose to a record peak of 933 million pounds in 1975-76.

Simple Is Best

By PAUL SIMS Managing Editor

Simplicity is what gives Deaf Smith County an advantage over a lot of places around the state.

We've tried to avoid becoming too complex here, and, as a result, the pressures of big-city life just haven't shown up.

For a lot of this good ol' Hereford life, we can thank our local government, which, through simplicity, has avoided a lot of the turmoils and problems faced by leaders in other parts of the state.

On the close-to-home front, one can look at the childish bickering and continuing differences of philosophy in Amarillo politics to appreciate the sensible and usually uncontroversial approach taken by Hereford government.

Because of that approach, it's often a dull life here for a newspaper editor. But, that kind of duliness I

It was a dull meeting last week, the one in which officials from the Hereford and Walcott school districts, the City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County got together to discuss the implementation of a single tax-appraisal district in the county.

The officials calmly discussed the effects of the single district, decided what entities should be represented on the new board of directors and set an election for Aug. 20.

It was easy for me to appreciate the unselfishness of the representatives. You see, an entity as small Walcott Independent School District will have as much say on the district's board of directors as the Hereford ISD and Deaf Smith County.

It doesn't have to be that way. HISD and the county have more votes, many more, than any of the other entities and could overload the board with their own, representatives.

And for the entities to include the Deaf Smith County Hospital District on the board was another outstanding gesture. The Tax Relief Amendment doesn't permit hospital districts to have any votes in the election of directors, but states that all entities in a county must share in the cost.

The board will be comprised of one representative from HISD, Walcott, the county, the city and the hospital district. It's that simple.

But things won't be that simple in big cities. For example, in Harris County (Houston), there will be 61 political entities battling for representation on the board, which will likely have only a handful of directors.

And, it will be interesting to see how Amarillo and Potter County, with their numerous smaller subdivisions, handle the election.

"It's going to be ridiculous in your big cities. You're lucky," said tax attorney Jim Blair of Amarillo at last week's joint meeting. We certainly are.

WATER-GUN THERAPY

You know the kind of thinking that says, "If one aspirin will help, think what a dozen will do?" I got caught doing that kind of thinking.

A friend of mine has been experiencing some serious marital problems (Don't we all?) I urged him to seek professional help and he did so.

He must have chosen well. The counselor was able to cut through a great deal of the garbage and get the couple to see the real issue. My friend's wife was torn between two loves but was finally able to say, "If you must leave part of your heart somewhere, leave the smallest part and go with the biggest." She decided the biggest part was her husband and

When my friend called he shared with me that the counselor told them they were both too serious. Spontaneity and fun were not part of their lives. They had forgotten how to play. His prescription was that they were to both buy a water-gun. The guns were to be carried for them for a week. The guns must be loaded at all times. At any time they had the urge to do so, they were to fire away.

He said they had done exactly what the counselor said. Their guns were at their side, their house was a wet wreck but they had experienced fun for the first time in years. The fun had lead to spontaneity in other areas. They went out for breakfast at one o'clock in the morning.

Remember the old aspirin thinking? Well, I reasoned if a water-gun would help a bad marriage, think what it would do to a good one. So, I got me a water-gun. I loaded the thing up and stalked my wife very carefully. I got her just as she came out of the shower..BAAM!

Principle Worth Living

WASHINGTON - One of the remarked: "If a principle is age-old criticisms of the National Chamber is that we have become too predictable. Our response has been that any large organization, by definition, is predictable. It is a competent management's responsibility to define, shape and carry out its organization's mission. Who is surprised, for example, when George Meany asks for more money for his members, or when the Joint Chiefs of Staff argue for increased defense spending when their mission is to protect the nation?

But this question of predictability is especially true in the case of the Chamber. For our mission: "To advance human progress through an economic, political and social system based on individual freedom, incentive, initiative, opportunity and responsibility," is really a restatement of those principles conceived by the Founding Fathers as the basis of our American society. Our predictability is another way of saying that we intend to be dependable; we intend to honor our birthright.

good for anything it is worth living up to." I happen to believe that America's record speaks for itself. In this country, a fraction of the world's population with no monopoly on natural resources has created more new wealth--and given more away--than any other country in history. Just consider for a moment what America produces and contributes: An agricultural system that feeds and sustains millions of the world's hungry; miraculous medical breakthroughs that reduce pain and eliminate crippling disease, and universities, industries and research centers that continue to attract the world's finest minds and produce technological discoveries that free us from drudgery and shower us all with the most abundant assortment of foods and consumer goods the world has ever known.

But how did it all happen? Was this unprecedented prosperity legislated from Washington...was it handed down by edict from HUD, ICC, FTC, DOT, or any of the other countless departments, bureaus, agencies and commissions that make up the growing network of roots of Big Brother's family tree? Heavens no! Washington itself is a creation of our affluence. The seeds of that affluence were planted some 200 years ago in our revolutionary experiment in self-government. The whole idea was to protect the freedoms of individuals, not just from outsiders, but from insiders as well--and especially from those

And that's the only idea that has ever worked. For as Irving Kristol has observed: "Where people are given the freedom to engage in economic activities for the purpose of bettering their condition, and most important, where the entrepreneur is given the freedom to innovate, then you get economic growth. Where such freedoms are restricted by government, you get relatively slow or not economic growth." ing principles, people and

The same people, for example, who spent, taxed and regulated us into our present dilemma of soaring prices and energy shortages now say that only a massive new federal commitment can provide solutions. But how? Will we be saved by the Department of Energy which spends $10 billion in taxes each year without producing a drop of oil, and which cannot even deliver its own mail? DOE estimates it loses at least 126,000 pieces of mail every year (a stack more than twice as high as the Washington Monument) and it needs more than two days just to deliver one letter between offices in the same town.

Compare that performance with the voluntary activities during the past two years of a somewhat smaller organization. the Wilkes Chamber of Commerce in North Wilkesboro. North Carolina. With the help of its members' profits (that's right, profits), that one Chamber, working with its Foundation and the downtown North Wilkesboro Association, accomplished the following for its neighbors: Sponsored sickle cell anemia clinics; provided thousands of dollars to a community college for scholarships and physical additions; spent thousands to upgrade the county's medical delivery system including the recruitment of doctors; secured industries and professions to provide new jobs. and acted as a local sponsor, providing the matching funds for hot meals for the elderly

No Easy Way

We Americans have a passion for freedom. Unfortunately, we also have had a passion for "the impossible - immediately."

These passions don't mix well. The latter, if given full play, could do in the first one. There is now developing a trend against excessive governmental intervention into economic affairs. Governments in Australia, France, Britain and Canada have already changed in reflection of this trend. People have found reliance upon government frustrating.

So there is a turnaround and a trend to look again toward the private sector for the fulfillment of expectations. But, too often, it seems to be accompanied with a stern warning from the politicians. The implication is tht private business will have one more turn at bat, but with the expectancy that unless it hits a home run, i.e., unless it can produce the impossible immediately, it may be benched permanently. Unfortunately, no such expectancy can be realized. Neither government nor private business - nor any other instrumentality - could achieve it.

Even worse, the foundation on which the private sector is now being asked to build is full of cracks - due in the main to prior abuse by government. Repairing those cracks will be an enormous task, but necessary, before any constructive new building can take place.

So business must be willing. J.A. at real risk to its credibility and popularity, to sound dissonant notes of reality. It must be prepared to explain both to the press and to the public that what can be expected from a conservative trend will be better than government would have done under the circumstances - but still not the impossible and not immediately.

The effects of government intervention in the past - i.e., its contribution to present energy shortages, its contribution to the inadequacy of past capital replacement - have brought us to a point at which a return to greater reliance on private enterprise could not have been better timed, if the purpose were to discredit the system!

This is the case because there simply is no way that any politico-economic system, whether motivated by government or by the private sector, could validate, for the immediate future, our past expectations for annual growth in average real income There is simply inadequate energy sufficient to power the economy, and an inadequate flow of capital sufficiently to improve its efficiency.

Hence, we face a number of vears in which the past pattern of political promises based on past growth experience the kind of promises made by both political leaders and by Plabor leaders - cannot be validated. What that may do to the fabric of a democratic nation remains to be seen.

The territory embraced in the Hereford Independent school district includes a total of 72 sections of land and last year had an assessed valuation of $3,845,170. For this year the valuation is expected to exceed $4,000,000. The present school tax rate is $1 on each $100 valuation. Funds from this tax supports the Hereford high school and the ward schools.

With the embargo on wheat declared last week at Houston by all of the railroads serving the city, wheat shipments from Hereford have dropped sharply, averaging now only about 15 cars daily, with two to three cars daily being shipped from similar communities in the territory.

Building work in Hereford, which took a tremendous leap upward last year with the beginning of the new Hereford High School, seems headed for another record year in 1954 as the parochial school and elevator construction add heavily to total construction values. Construction began in June is valued at approximately $698,000, including $175,000 for the parochial school. This makes construction values for the one month higher than total construction work begun in either 1951 or 1952. In 1951, permits were issued on $504,259 worth of construction, while the following year the total was up to $623,000, a sizeable increase but nothing to compare with the present boom.

The Hereford City Council, in regular meeting, initiated proceedings to annex 49.29 acres of land into the City of Hereford, the third such action this year. When completed. the annexation will give the City of Hereford a total acreage of 3161.73. Tracts to be annexed are located in South Hereford and includes some 12.84 acres of city property.

Groundbreaking ceremonies are slated at the First Baptist Church on the east side of the auditorium building in their $248,000 construction expansion program.

Members of the Hereford American Legion. Post 192. voted unanimously to accept the bid submitted by the City of Hereford for the purchase of land in Veterans Memorial Park and the transfer of an additional 67 acres to the city for development into a municipal park.

Hereford members of the Communication Workers of America took a secret ballot to determine if they want to accept Bell Telephone Co. contract proposals or strike. Results of the ballot will not be announced until later.

Deaf Smith County Commissioners have issued a statement explaining why they believe a county auditor as proposed is unnecessary. The statement reads as follows: "We, you County Commissioners are responsible to you the people for the financial condition of this County. As such, each of us feels that we must answer the questions raised concerning the County Auditor. First of all each of us want the people of Deaf Smith County to know that the County is in excellent financial shape. It is one of the soundest counties in this state."

They all have their own goals and specific reasons for existing. Each one serves a purpose and each one is very important in its own right in making our city a better place to live. Since it is the American way to organize committees, clubs and professional groups, I must say that we are fortunate to have some of the

There is one organization in Hereford that I would like to talk about in particular today. In fact, I'd like to just brag a little on this fine group of people. If you've lived here for a while you are aware of their importance and if you're a new resident to Hereford, then you'll be most happy to know more about them. The organization I am speaking of is the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department.

Our city is very fortunate that we have the fire department that we have. The Hereford Volunteer Fire Department is a very professionally-run organization. We should be thankful for the excellence that the entire department exemplifies. There are a few basic but so very important reasons that Hereford, Texas has a successfully run volunteer fire department. These are the people involved, professional management and area cooperation.

In order to get a better view of one of the most important reasons, I would like to further discuss the people that make up the fire department. Who are these people? What type of person serves on our fire Department: What does it involve? It is important that you know the answers to these questions.

The Hereford Volunteer Fire Department is made up of professional people from all walks of life. They are your neighbors, fellow businessmen and, most important, your friends. All of them are known for expertise in various areas of fire work. This expertise came about after many hours, months and years of service. The time required to have the fire departent that we have, takes dedication and commitment. We have what we do because the men that serve on the department are dedicated to making it work the way it should.

Describing these men as dedicated is probably a little inadequate. They are much more than this. They all have made a commitment to make Hereford a safe and better place to live. Each has to continually make personal sacrifices to maintain the high standards that we should all be so proud of. These standards did not just happen - they came about because of each man's total dedication.

The people of Hereford can be thankful for each person that makes our fire department what it is. Let us always remember them and express our gratitude to them. They not only deserve our support and cooperation, but they also deserve our thanks. If you haven't had the opportunity to visit our Fire Department, then take time to drop by and get to know a group of people that Hereford is very fortunate and proud to have.

To each and everyone of the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department, I offer our sincere thanks for your excellence in

The Road Back

By MARC HERRING Brand Sports Editor

Just before midnight, May 3, 1979, a car wreck changed the life of Brent Allen from that of a typical 18 year old student-athlete to that of a paraplegic, paralyzed from the waist down.

The term paraplegic is not a kind sounding word, its harsh enunciation giving visions of helplessness and a pathetic attitude. But less and less helpless, Allen is on the road to becoming self sufficient, spending up to seven hours a day in therapy at the Bivens Rehabilitation Center of High Plains Baptist Hospital to once again be able to live an independant life.

As for pathetic attitudes, he feels that some of his visitors are in a more pathetic state than he is. New challenges are presented each day and each day some are conquered.

"Most people would not think much of my challenges, such as learning to sit up without falling," Allen said. "But without certain muscles, being able to balance oneself becomes quite difficult.'

Weight training, learning to walk in full length leg braces and using a wheelchair are other areas of learning that Allen is faced with as he starts his new

> We Believe In Ability, Not Disability... Judy Phillips

The therapy is broken down into three general areas, physical, occupational and group sessions. Each section deals with specific ideals on the road to recovery.

"I guess the stuff that we do is important, but some of these things seem so ridiculous," Allen said. "The occupational stuff are things to help me get along by myself and to also learn basic rehabilitation procedures, such as balance.

"I guess my iavorite form of therapy is the wheelchair basketball games we play." Allen said. "It's a change from the routine of the other exercises and besides its a lot of fun.'

Things such as the basketball are in use by the rehab center because of the tediousness of the day-in-day-out routines that the patient faces. Judy Phillips, director of nursing in the rehabilitation program states that like in Brent's case, basketball is an excellent form of therapy.

"We try to focus on abilities, not disabilities, Ms. Phillips said. "So in Brent's instance, if basketball can be used to help him learn to cope in everyday life then so much the better."

A typical day begins at 7:30 a.m. for Allen with the chance to eat breakfast.

"I usually skip breakfast, Allen said. "This gives me the chance to sleep just a little bit more, and besides, not eating one of these hospital meals is worth getting hungry later on in the morning.

After the first meal, therapy begins, with 3 to 31/2 hours spent working on balance, weights, and using the

To walk, Allen must use his upper body to hold him up, with his standing entirely up to the strength in his arms and upper body.

When the first round of therapy is over, lunch is served and then the hour of basketball begins before going back to the therapy sessions. Mixed in with the physical and occupational therapy is a time called group therapy, or as Allen calls it, "bull sessions."

"We go to this thing once a day and just talk, Allen said. "If we have any gripes or troubles this is supposed to be the time to get it off of our mind."

Nurse Phillips states that the group times are very beneficial, even if the patient can not see the immediate

"That time is just another facet of recovery," Ms, Phillips said. "Along with the physical recovery, comes the mental recovery, which is just as important."

A return downstairs for another round of therapy finishes off the required regiman for the day, with the evenings as well as the weekends left for the individual to do as he pleases.

"It's during these times that not much is happening that bordom becomes a problem," Allen said. "But then again the extra time gives me a chance to visit with friends and my parents."

Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Allen first heard of the accident from a friend that happened to drive by the scene soon after it happened.

"Bill Devers came to our door sometime around midnight and told us that Brent had been in a wreck, but he didn't know how bad the situation was," Allen said. "So we reached the hospital about the same time the ambulance did."

"The shock of the accident did not really hit us for a while," Allen said. "But really I guess that it never has. We have had to make some changes in our lifestyle, but everyone does that, its just that our circumstances are different."

Allen said that the reality of the accident and what it meant to everyone involved led to a discussion between him and his son four or five days later.

"We sat and talked in his room and hashed over all the possibilities and problems that had to be faced, Allen said. "We just talked father to son for about 21/2 hours early one morning. From that time on, we both have been able to handle it much better.

"We're just thankful that it is not any worse," Allen said. "Brent's upper body is perfectly healthy and he is capable of handling the situation.

"All of us have to be realistic about the situation. A miracle would be nice and the human body could make a complete recovery, but for now that wheelchair is for real and we have to face that fact," he said.

"Our faith in God and the fullness of life both physically and mentally has helped us to get through this and we are secure in this knowledge. He is not punishing us or Brent. God gave us our body and mind and what we do with these miracles is our responsibility."

A look back at the accident is unclear what happened. Allen remembers seeing a telephone pole right before it happened and the next thing he knew was "seeing a bunch of doctors gathered around me."

"There is a blank spot that lasted I guess for about 21/2 days," Allen said. "During this time I was in intensive care and for awhile it just seemed like a

"After that I started remembering and becoming aware of the situation at hand. One thing I do know was that I stayed in intensive care too long. That was the worst time for me, everything there seemed so temporary, including life.

"Those first few days were not too bad, it seemed sort of like a dream, but after awhile, I was ready for the dream to come to an end. It was at this point that I started facing the reality of the situation.'

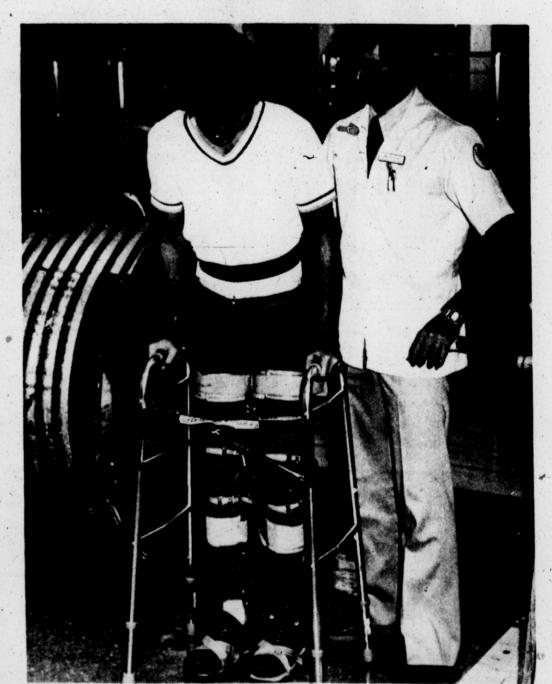

A two-year starter in basketball for the Whitefaces, Allen's sudden change of activity to immobilization took some adjusting.

"I never used to watch television much, but now I can tell you about every show and what's happening in the news," Allen said. "I used to listen to the radio some, but I haven't for awhile because you just get tired of it after so much."

Allen thinks the accident a simply unfortunate

"I think that all of us make mistakes, it just so appens that I got caught. There is no one to blame for it but myself. I guess at times I wish I could, but I didn't have to be out messing around that night."

Sports Festival Begins With Swimming, Shooting

AP) - A tired but happy Cynthia Woodhead buried her grin in a pair of long-stemmed vellow roses moments after making the National Sports Festival swimming competition her own by capturing gold medals in two of her "off" events.

'Many people don't understand that you can't set a world record each time out," said the 15-year-old world record holder in the women's 200-meter freestyle. She passed up that event Friday to compete in what. her coach, Jon Urbanchek, calls her "off" events.

"I don't swim my good events nuch." said the Riverside, Calif., native. "I don't like to vear them out.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. wore out the competition Friday, sweeping gold medals in the 200 butterfly, the 400 individual medley and a comefrom-behind anchor leg in the 800 freestyle relay.

Her times were not spectacular - 2 minutes, 17.42 seconds in the butterfly and 5:07.33 in the individual medley - but Woodhead was coming off her recent five gold-medal performance at the Pan American Games and the elevation here is a lung-burning 7,250 feet.

Competition at the six-day Festival, which attracted more than 2,300 athletes in 31 sports, heats up today with track and field events.

Woodhead, too, heats up again - swimming the 100 and 400 freestyles and legs in two relays - giving her a crack at bettering her Pan Am gold

Woodhead says her main goal is to make the 1980 Olympic squad. And her rivals take note: "I don't set goals I won't be able to achieve."

In all, 14 swimming finals were decided Friday

In men's 10-meter platform diving, Brian Bungum of Austin, Texas, posted a 537.15 point total to take the gold medal. Chris Seufert of Ambler, Mich., won the women's 13-meter springboard diving with 445.60

Friday night, world champions Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner took the lead in the

South Whips North; Reynold's One Of MVP's

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH (AP) - Sensational Claude Riley of Crockett will delight Southwest Conference basketball fans this winter with his tremendous inside play, but gunner George Turner of Hitchcock won't be sinking one of his 30-foot bombs for at least a year in the SWC.

Riley scored 17 points and muscled down seven rebounds and Turner scored 23 points Friday night to lead the South to a record-smashing 114-88 victory over the North All-Stars in the Texas High School Coaches Texas Tech Coach Gerald

While Riley will be playing for the Aggies, it was a case of what might have been for the University of Texas.

Turner signed a national letter-of-intent with Southern University, but said later he wished he had gone to Texas.

The 114 points established a new scoring record for one team. The old record of 109 was posted by the North last year.

The North now leads the series 18-17.

Other impressive players included Baylor-bound Kenneth Perkins of Beaumont-Charlton Pollard, who scored 14 points and had seven rebounds; Ricebound Robert Shaw of Deer Park, who scored 12 points; and John Grammer of Rice (Altair) who scored 16 points.

Brawl Highlights Action

While the New York Yankees were getting angry, Cecil Cooper was getting the Milwaukee Brewers even ... and then some.

Every time the Yankees scored, it seemed the ubiquitous Cooper was there to get the Brewers back in the game. At the end, he was there to win it for his team with a dramatic, two-out homer in the ninth.

"It was just one of those nights when I felt really good," said Cooper after his three 15th. home runs led the Brewers to a 6-5 victory over the two-time World Champions. "After I hit the first one out tonight I said I was going to hit two because I was just seeing the ball so good up there."

While Cooper was seeing the ball "good," the Yankees were seeing red. Manager Billy Martin was angry because the umpires ejected Reggie Jackson after a fight with Milwaukee starter Mike Caldwell.

Caldwell knocked down Jackson with a pitch in the fourth. Caldwell insisted it wasn't intentional, but you couldn't tell Jackson that. After popping out, he charged the mound and began choking Caldwell.

Both benches emptied and players swarmed to the infield.

"I felt the ump (John Shulock) prompted the fight by not warning Caldwell (about throwing at the batter)," Martin said. "That ump didn't control the game.'

Said Caldwell:

"It was just an accident looking for a place to happen. I don't throw at people, and that pitch just got away from me, but in the heat of the game I can understand what he did."

Elsewhere in the American League, the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Kansas City Royals 8-0; the Texas Rangers routed the Boston Red Sox 11-2; the Minnesota Twins posted a 3-1 decision over the California Angels; the Cleveland Indians turned back the Chicago White Sox 7-2; the Detroit Tigers whipped the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3 in 11 innings and the Seattle Mariners beat the Oakland A's Pat Putnam's two-run double in the first inning triggered an 18-hit attack by Texas that buried Boston behind Steve Comer's five-hitter.

Comer, 11-6, struck out six and walked five. The Rangers staked him to a big lead in the first two innings, blasting Bob Stanley, 11-7, and reliever Joel Finch for nine runs on 10 hits.

Buddy Bell, Al Oliver and Richie Zisk followed with RBI doubles in the second against Stanley and reliever Joel Finch, and by the time the dust cleared, Texas had a 9-0 lead.

"It's always good to jump out in the first couple of innings. It puts a lot of pressure on the other team," said Putnam, a left-handed first baseman the Rangers are touting for rookie of the year. "I've always - in the minor leagues and back in college been an RBI man. I like to come only four singles - to Fred Lynn in the first, Carl Yastrzemski in the second. Stan Papi in the seventh and Dwight Evans in the ninth.

Oliver ran far to pull down a couple of drives near the wall in left center. He robbed Yastrzemski of extra bases in the fourth and Watson in the sixth.

Boston's Jim Rice hit a shot down the third base line in the first inning that might have gone for extra bases. But Bell dived to his right to knock the ball down, then made an offbalance, one-hop throw to first for the out, retiring the side.

Bell makes a diving stop on what was going to be probably a run-scoring double, and after that our guys get four runs in the first and five more in the second, and it's all over," said Comer, who struck out six and walked five.

"I threw pretty well from the first inning on. It was one of my better games. I just threw strikes and let them try to hit it. I had my changeup going well early, and that set up my fast ball later."

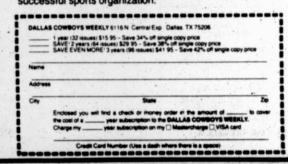

The series continues tonight with Dennis Eckersley, 11-5, pitching for Boston against Ferguson Jenkins, 10-7.

Dodger Club Astros Despite Comeback

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Los Angeles pitcher Charlie Hough has been plagued recently by a tooth infection but the Houston Astros will agree the veteran reliever put some bite in the Dodger pitching staff Friday

Hough, taking medication to help heal a root canal problem, held the Astros to eight hits through seven innings Friday night before needing relief assistance to dispatch the Houston Astros 11-7 in his third major league start.

"The tooth has bothered me since about mid-June," said Hough, forced into the starting rotation by LA pitching injuries. "I've been taking medication

Hough departed after yielding a single and double to open Houston's six-run eighthinning but helped the Dodgers win for the eighth time in nine games to trim Houston's National League Western Division lead to three games over second place Cincinnati.

Lerrin LaGrow relieved Hough in the eighth inning but yielded four earned runs before David Patterson came on to finish the game and extend LA's winning streak to six in a row. Hough admitted he tired in the eighth but said he wanted to finish the game.

"I wanted to finish the game and pitch when I was tired," Hough said. "I know that I'll have to do that."

"I think we've found ourselves an outstanding starting pitcher," LA Manager Tommy LaSorda said. "We've wanted to start him for sometime now but this was our first opportunity to give him a try."

Hough says he's enjoying the luxury of a starting assignment. "The big thing about starting makes a difference in how you pitch. You don't try to throw a no-hitter."

The Dodgers pelted six Astros pitchers for 15 hits, including a three run homer by Dusty Baker in the sixth inning. They scored three runs off loser Joe Niekro, 14-6, in the second inning and chased the Astros knuckleball pitcher with five more runs in the third. Baker's three-run shot, his 13th of the season, expanded LA's lead to 11-0 before the Astros broke up Hough's shutout with one run in the seventh and six more in the eighth.

A pair of two-run singles by

Terry Puhl and pinchhitter Jesus Alou highlighted the Astros' eighth inning show. The rally fell short but it supported Manager Bill Virdon's feeling about his team. "They (Astros) don't quit," Virdon said. "I'm not concerned about that. Any major league club should be able to come back. It's not likely that you'll come back from an 11-run deficit but it can happen."

Oilers Looking To New Defense

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) -The Houston Oilers, disciples of Bum Phillips' innovative 3-4 defense, have "discovered" a new wrinkle--the four man rush.

As Oiler defensive coordinator in 1974, Phillips first preached the virtures of the three-man front and it has remained one of the toughest in pro football against the run.

But starting Thursday night with the Oilers' exhibition opener against St. Louis, current defensive coordinator Ed Biles likely will be sending four linemen into the game on passing situations.

"We now feel that we have the defensive linemen to get a better rush than with a linebacker." Biles said.

The Oilers always have had the equivalent of a four man rush but the fourth rusher usually was a linebacker.

"Bringing the linebacker always gave us an element of surprise because the offense didn't know which one it would be." Biles said. "But we think now we can put good pressure on the quarterback with four linemen.

That's not to say the Oiler defense will completely backslide from Phillips' early sermons.

"We're still going to play the three-man front as our basic defense." Biles said. "That's still the best. What you are able to do depends on your personnel and your depth and we feel we've reached that stage with our defensive line."

After sitting in the wings while Houston drafted offensive players the past two years, Biles got back into the act last May when the Oilers chose defensive linemen Mike Stensrud of lowa State and Jesse Baker of Jacksonville State in the second

"Jesse has done everything we've asked of him and he's so intense," Biles said. "He made eight tackles and seven assists in our first scrimmage. He's not as big as Stensrud but he's quicker." Stensrud reported to training camp late because of a contract squabble and was overweight at 302 when he arrived on the Angelo State campus.

But Biles says Stensrud will be ready this season. "The best thing he did that first day was keep going," Biles said. "He's very strong and is very quick with his feet. He's going to be all right."

Scribbles & Scratches

By Kerrie Steiert

There are those rare occasions when we learn something profound, even staggering. However, like the average person, the bulk of information which filters our direction is your run-of-the-mill "You don't say" stuff.

We'll leave it up to the reader to decide how the following should be classified:

This week, we received a letter and brochure from Dow Chemical Co., whose main intent was to slap our editorial wrists for incorrect usage of the term "Styrofoam." The company's public relations director enclosed a copy of our column dated June 3, 1979 in which we wrongfully used the aforesaid term without benefit of capitalization, italics or quotations.

It seems that incorrect usage of a trademark product's name turns it into a generic word, thus nullifying its patented value. Such was the fate of nylon, aspirin and cellophane, once trademark words which lost that distinction through widespread, and uncorrected misuse. This is a costly occurrence fought by a company's legal department.

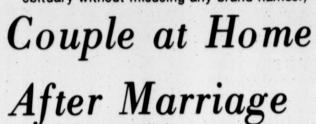

Dow's concern is understandable, although we were slightly amazed that their watchdogs managed to find the obscure error of an obscure editor in a small Texas town. But since they DID hunt us down, we're warning all of you out there that you should be very careful with the use of the word "Styrofoam." If the product doesn't carry the specific trademark of Dow, it is suggested that you use one of the following terms: plastic foam insulation, plastic foam flotation, mastic, mastic adhesive or foamed plastic billets. (What on earth is a billet?)

It's a faux pas to refer to Styrofoam cups, egg cartons, wig forms or picnic coolers because none of these products are made under the Styrofoam brand. The brochure from Dow did not say how to ask a clerk for one of the above articles without using the Styrofoam name, so we guess it's up to individual improvisation.

This was news to us because we shared the mistaken conception of Styrofoam as a product. rather than a brand name. Dow isn't the only company to have this problem: i.e. Coca-Cola, Xerox, Band-Aid adhesive bandages, Scotch Brand transparent tape, etc. All of us have been guilty of asking for Scotch tape when we didn't really care what the brand was, just as long as it stuck two things together. And it is an absolute No-No to say you've "had something Xeroxed" because a brand name is not supposed to be juxtaposed as a verb.

It's doubtful that Dow will write you a letter of correction if you call your neighbor and ask if she has any Styrofoam egg cartons that you can use to make a Christmas tree. (However, if they found me out, you probably should't feel too confident about your own anonymity.) But now, at least, you will be flaunting the trademark rules with full knowledge of your sins.

Of course, journalists are supposed to know better and henceforth, we're going to watch our P's and Q's, not to mention our capital letters. This might be our only verbal warning from Dow. One more goof-up could mean a severe pelting with foamed plastic billets while bound with mastic adhesive. (We-used the generic terms so that our successor would know how to write our obituary without misusing any brand names.)

McDaniel Couple Continue Duties

Peggy (Bumpass) McDaniel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.L. Bumpass, and her husband James G. McDaniel continue to work in the Lake Arrowhead Community Association as chairman and director. McDaniel was re-elected chairman July 19 while his wife has one remaining year to serve of a two year term as director of the association. Both have served as officer or director of that association since it was formed in 1977.

The McDaniels have lived at Lake Arrowhead for eight years. They have two children James Jr., who is 20 years old, and LorriAnne, who is 11.

Lake Arrowhead is located approximately 20 miles southeast of Wichita Falls. The lake residents will be getting water through the efforts of the association and Red River Authority of Texas. That completion date has been set for March 1, 1980.

Other projects have been completed or are being worked upon through special committees. Some of those are better road conditions, continued land fill sites for both sides of the lake, churches in the lake area, and the moving of a community building to a chosen site within the next two months.

The association had 102 members last year with a projected membership of 200 this year. The lake community has grown in permanent residents especially since the April 10th tornado in Wichita

Former Residents Married Recently

At Wits End BY ERMA BOMBECK

It isn't one of those earthshaking problems. I mean, I don't stay up nights worrying about it, but every once in awhile, I sense that our civilization is near its end.

Its demise is not by fire, flood, or earthquake, but a slow, insidious extinction...death by over-communication.

I think about the billboards dotting the countryside, two papers at your doorstep each day, 13 magazines a month on your coffee table, radios that play as you sleep and travel, television that desensitizes you, piped-in music at work, CBs in your car, transistors in your pocket, letters stacked at your mailbox, telephones that follow you everywhere, Dial-a-Prayer, Dial-a-Joke, Dial-a-Ride, and Dial-a-Plumber. Intercoms throughout your house, singing telegrams, group therapy, talk shows and newsletters.

All we seem to be doing is communicating. No one listens

Well, I needn't have worried. The problem has solved itself. It is becoming so expensive to communicate it will only be a matter of time before we are back to runners and drums. used to call my sister on her birthday to tell her a letter was on the way. The letter revealed there was a box to follow and if the box didn't arrive on Wednesday to be sure and call

That transaction today would cost enough to make us share a birthday. I'm not sorry to see all this communication go by the boards. Death by listening can be exhausting. Some days I get to the point where I know too much about too little.

The other night I dropped into a chair and was struck by something very strange. The silence. No radios, TV, phone conversations, stereos, nothing. I smiled and thought, "So this is the way it's going to be."

My daughter walked in and said, "If you don't want me in the room, just say so, but don't use that tone with me." "What tone?" I asked. "I didn't say anything."

"You didn't have to," she said. "I read body English." If I had known my body was going to be the last means of communication on earth, I'd have taken better care of it.

Hearing of a job opening in Hereford, Ms. Giles moved to Deaf Smith County in Jan. of 1969 and taught kindergarden for a semester while attending school at night. In September she received a teaching position with Stanton Junior High and has taught algebra there for 10 years.

In 1970, after much schooling Ms. Giles received her Master's degree in education with a minor in math.

Eight years later, the young educator decided to go back to WTSU to work toward a counselors certificate. On August 16, she will have finished this course and will be using her skills at the Hereford High School as one of three counse-

Every consumer in America looking for ways to help cut down on costs at the grocery store without having to sacrifice quality or good nutrition. It's not easy. Many traditional foods that we have depended on to provide us with good nutrition have risen dramatically in price. Take beef, for example. The rise in beef prices in 1979 can be attributed to a shortage of cattle caused by the largest cow herd reduction ever recorded. The slow process of herd rebuilding has begun, but it will be several years before we see any relief in the marketplace.

More and more meat packers and retailers are trying to respond to the problems of higher beef prices by using more boxed beef to help the consumer cut down on meat

Boxed beef is beef that has been delivered to the retailer already cut into primal or subprimal cuts at the packing house. Primal cuts refer to sections of the carcass such as the chuck, rib, short loin and sirloin, and round. Subprimal cuts are divisions of primal cuts such as the loin strip from the loin primals or the top round from the round primal. These primal or subprimal cuts are vacuumed-packed in cry-o-vac film and then packed into boxes ready for the retailer to cut into the usual retail cuts or sell the entire subprimal in the meat

Shipping boxed beef to the retailer instead of beef carcasses eliminates additail level. This allows the retailer to offer these larger cuts at lower prices to the consumer. The savings of purchasing beef this way varies, but generally, the consumer can save from 10 to 20 percent by purchasing subprimals that range in weight from eight to 16 pounds or more.

The usage of boxed beef varies, depending on what part of the country you're in, but it currently represents about 60 percent of the total fresh beef received at the supermarket.

heatstroke or sunstroke during hot Texas months, cautions Carla Shearer, a health education specialist.

Ms. Shearer is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University

The combined effects of sun. exercise, heat and excessive perspiration which result in loss of fluids and salts can produce these serious conditions.

HEAT EXHAUSTION

The body's normal reaction to high temperatures is to pool blood near the surface of the skin so that seat is formed and then evaporated into the air releasing heat.

However, when a person is exposed to high temperatures-especially combined with high humidity--for a long period of time, the vessels deep in the body may lack sufficient blood resulting in heat exhaustion.

Some symptoms of heat exhaustion include muscle cramps and weakness, and although the victim's temperature may be near normal, the pulse is often very weak. The skin is usually cool but very pale and moist.

Treatment consists of getting the person out of the sun immediately. Slowly sipping cool--not cold--water will help cool down the body

SUNSTROKE, HEATSTROKE Heatstroke, or sunstroke, is exhaustion. It's often a medical

Heat Cause of Exhaustion

A breakdown of the cooling system of the body which causes the body temperature to rise uncontrollably causes heatstroke, the specialist explains.

Because of the sweating mechanism is not working, there is very little perspiration.

One symptom of heatstroke is dry, red, hot skin and a fast, strong pulse. The victim may also be nauseated and have a headache. There is also a possibility of the person collapsing.

As in the case of heat exhaustion, the important thing is to get the victim out of the sun and to lower the temperature.

Sponge the person with water, especially around the head. Avoid giving the victim stimulants such as tea or coffee because of the possibility of complications such as increased blood pressure. If the person is unconscious, give no fluids at all, Ms. Shearer

PREVENT SUNSTROKE. HEATSTROKE

To prevent sunstroke or heatstroke, avoid being in the sun and heat for a long period of time, drink a sufficient amount of liquids and wear loose-fitting clothing such as cotton T-shirts which help to retain perspiration and keep the body cool.

System, stresses. What would you say to your child who asks, "When will Grandpa wake up?" not long after Grandpa has died?

For some parents this is not a more serious than heat difficult question, Ms. Lamson

"It is important to answer honestly and use language and ideas that the child will understand.

'Parents need to help their children cope with death -regardless of age level -because it is fundamental to developmental growth," she explains.

CHILDREN'S VIEWS Most studies reveal that children think of death within the limits of their own experiences.

They also accept the reality of death in several stages based on their social and emotional development, Ms. Lamson says.

From birth until four years of age, most children sense loss, but they cannot grasp the realities of birth or death.

And while the winter of 1978-79 is now long past, the corn crop is realizing benefits from a prolonged period of frigid weather in that time span

Cold temperatures helped reduce the number of overwintering southwestern corn borers to their lowest level in years, and as a result, the emergence of the pest in corn fields has been late this summer.

Also reduced in number in winter wheat fields were spider mites, the indestructible nemesis of corn here over the past two growing seasons.

Vastly reduced numbers of mites and greater numbers of beneficial insects combined with favorable corn growing weather thus far this summer, plus prospects for relatively good prices give growers more reason for optimism than they have seen in the past two seasons.

According to Deaf Smith County ASCS Executive Director John Fuston, irrigated grain sorghum is also making impressive growth, and some farmers here are only now in the process of putting their first summer irrigation on the crop.

"Some of the boys put on a pre-plant irrigation, and some of them got by without even that. A lot of the mile is only now getting its first summer water, I would hope that local farmers won't be looking at an awful lot of expense in the milo crop," commented Fuston.

The local ASCS executive was also impressed with the current status of the soybean crop here. but pointed out that despite good growth in recent weeks, the weather-delayed cotton crop will be hard pressed to produce well prior to the freeze date

"Even if we could push thefrost date back into early November, the cotton crop would be crowded. And since we nearly always have frost by late October, the cotton crop may be a long shot now," he continued.

The area sugar beet crop also continues to show strong midsummer growth with minimal insect and disease problems with growers applying fungicide treatments to avoid disease infestations.

Although local vegetable packing sheds managed to avoid the immediate effects of a trucker's strike, the economic backlash from that strike is apparently having an impact on the local produce market now.

Tasseling Out

Corn in Deaf Smith County is posting good growth this year, thanks to timely rainfall and better irrigation management made possible by a cutback in overall corn acreage. Although hot, dry conditions and spider mites have combined to wreak havoc on corn yields during the past two years, things are looking up for the 1979 corn crop here at this stage of the growing season. Most farmers have managed to stay on schedule with irrigations, and spider mite numbers have been negligible to this point. Corn is now entering the critical pollination stage that will have a major bearing on yields realized this fall. [Brand photo

Pest Report

Corn Borer Infestations Late

Area Entomologist

GENERAL CONDITIONS

infestations are very light throughout the Panhandle. Western corn rootworm activity noted. Small colonies of greenbugs have been reported in area sorghum. Be watchful for the sunflower moth. White grub treatment in lawns is due. treatment is needed. Methyl Now is an excellent time to control cattle grubs. CORN

First generation southwestern corn borer infestations are very light and very late throughout the Panhandle. Egg laying activity for the second generation will be 10-14 days later than last year. The lateness of this second generation should be an important aspect of any control decisions.

Spider mite infestations currently are very light. Producers need to watch this pest during the period of pollination and grain-filling. Do not let corn become water

A western corn rootworm adult infestation of 1.5 per plant was observed in western Carson County. These adult rootworms were feeding on the silk but at the level indicated were not interfering with pollination. But the infestation level indicated is very important from another aspect. In a continuous corn situation when adult beetles average one or more per plant, the potential next season for economic damage by larvae feeding on the roots is very high. In a situation like this, a systemic insecticide applied in-furrow at planting would be recommended. In a good rotation program this would not be the case. So those producers growing corn on the same ground year after year need to be checking for these beetles to get an indication of what they should do next growing season.

SORGHUM Small colonies of greenbugs on sorghum have been reports. These small colonies can develop to damaging infestations rather rapidly so producers Southwestern corn borer need to frequently check for this

SUNFLOWERS The sunflower moth is silver to buff-gray and about one half inch long. If one of these moths is seen in your sunflower field as it begins to bloom an insecticide parathion, Supracide, or Thiodan applied at twenty percent bloom is the recommended control practice. During bloom additional treatments at five day

LAWNS White grub control in lawns is due. This is the time of year that white grubs are easiest to control. They are very small and feeding actively. ### Bentsen Approves Defeat Of Hide Export Controls

WASHINGTON, D.C. -Senator Lloyd Bentsen says the Senate acted wisely in defeating legislation to limit the export of cattle hides. Bentsen, who actively opposed the legislation during Senate debate, said the proposal would have been harmful to consumers and cattlemen alike.

The Senate turned down the legislation, proposed as an amendment to the Export Control Act, 38-46.

"Those favoring controls on cattle hide exports claim it will benefit consumers, but if the price of hides dropped by 40-50 percent that would result in a savings of only 2 percent on a pair of shoes. You could buy a $20 pair of shoes for $19.60; that is, if the retailer did not take the markup for himself." Bentsen said.

"One of the reasons we have a problem with hide prices today is that we have had artificial controls on the price of beef which resulted in liquidation of herds and increasing prices."

"Meatpackers operate on a high-volume, thin-margin basis. They sell the whole cow after they buy it and, if we reduce the market for hides in a deliberate effort to depress their price, that means the price of beef will go

"Export controls on hides would increase the price of beef to the consumers but not to the farmer, a price the American housewife already thinks is too

"I am concerned about the problems of the shoe industry in America, but restricting hide exports is not the answer. The problems of the shoe industry

El Paso Taking Action To Solve Water Problem

help solve a water supply sources through the year 2030. that the project will receive 85 problem took the first step last However, the potential of the week when the Texas Water Bolson to provide for the peak Development Board, at its monthly meeting July 17, approved the City of El Paso's 2000. The only practical plan to build a sewage alternative to stabilizing the treatment plant which will treat wastewater to drinking water still permit withdrawals for standards and inject it into the Hueco Bolson aquifer.

Because the city needs a new treatment plant, and because it faces a severe water shortage in the years ahead, city officials have put together a plan to construct a 10 million gallon per day (MGD) plant which will solve the treatment problem, and go a long way toward solution to a water shortage in the years ahead.

The plan is a first in Texas reclaimed water are considered and only one similar facility is known to exist in the nation, in California, according to the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Two MGD of the treated wastewater will be sold to the city's electric powerplant to be used as cooling water, and eight MGD will go into the aquifer.

The Hueco Bolson aquifer covers an area of about 150 square miles in Texas with saturated thicknesses of about 200 feet or more. From it water is drawn for the city, the Fort Bliss Military Reservation, and for some industries and other

It has been estimated that, though water in the aquifer will not be depleted until about 2030, the ability to obtain water from it efficiently will begin to be affected as early as 1990 when El Paso's population is projected to be more than half a

Two other sources of supply are available to the city. Presently it is permitted to take 9,800 acre feet of water per year from the Rio Grande River. That source is limited, however, since the U.S. Supreme Court. in 1956, held that all of the water allocated to Texas in the Rio Grande belongs to the True. Jr. of Plainview, Homer farmers, including wastewater M. Gibbs of Dallas, Jimmy discharged to the river by El Taylor of Big Spring, Clark Bolt Paso, and it is unlikely that the of Waco, J.D. "Jim" Sartwelle, city will, at any time in the future, be able to obtain additional water from the river.

A well field, the Canutillo, also supplies water to the city, but presently it is being used almost to full capacity.

So added conservation measures are clearly indicated if the city is to be able to provide sufficient water in the years ahead for its growing popula-

After exploring a number of alternative plans to dispose of wastewater from a proposed new treatment plant, the city, working with the Texas Department of Water Resources and the Environmental Protection Agency, in addition to its own consulting engineers. developed the plan for injection into the aquifer as a possible means of both disposal and conservation.

In a written report to the board, John T. Hickerson, general manager of the El Paso Water Utilities Public Service Board, stated that the Hueco Bolson aquifer 'has a sufficient volume of stored fresh water

AUSTIN — Bold action to reserves to supplement (other) water requirements of the city will be reached before the year water levels in the aquifer and peaking purposes is to use effluent to recharge the Bolson. Reclaiming all of the effluent would permit annual withdrawals of about 50 percent of the water requirements without causing a decline in the water table.'

Capital expenditure for the new plant is set at $28,165,000. However, the injection plan still is considered best of several alternatives when benefits of percent financing under the federal construction grant program as an innovative and/or alternative project.

Added benefits include a solution to existing wastewater problems; reclaimed wastewater with eventual reuse in the city's water system; and recycling of wastewater which would provide more than one-fourth of El Paso's water needs over the next 70 years.

The project has been reviewed and approved by the Texas Department of Health: population projections and water use predictions have been reviewed by the TDWR which also has confirmed that recoverable potable water in the Hueco Bolson aquifer will be other water sources are not developed.

Pending approval of federal funding, the city hopes to have the plant design funded by October of this year, with June of 1980 as a projected date for receipt of the "Step III" grant which provides for actual construction. If that schedule can be maintained, construction could begin during the first quarter of 1981 with completion in mid 1983.

"Those dates are very tentative at this time," a TDWR spokesman said. "However, approval of the plan by the Water Development Board was the first step and we will try to assist the city in getting approval of federal agencies at

Farm Income Tax Year-Round Consideration

COLLEGE STATION -'Income tax consequences of farm and ranch decisions should be weighed year-round," contends Dr. Ashley Lovell.

Cash-basis taxpayes tend to think of tax management taxable year, notes Lovell, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Texas A&M University System. However, unless tax-saving moves can be completed before the year's end, many tax management strategies become inappropriate after Dec. 31.

'Solutions to business management problems should contribute to maximizing aftertax income and net worth of the business" contends the economist. "When profit opportunities are limited, sufficient taxable income should be generated to equal the manager's zero bracket amount in the appropriate tax table or schedule.

Successful farm income tax management requires an awareness of tax provisions applicable to farming and ranching and of the particular accounting system used.

If you can discern it by no other means, it shouldn't be hard to look at the muddy rubber boots kicked off at the front porch of untold farmsteads across the area and figure out that it is the peak of the summer irrigation season here.

The irrigation farm has many of its own: trademarks, but at this time of year I'd say about the most common one is mud .--- Plain old mud, spattered on the shirt, up and down the bluejeans, spread generously along the length of the pickup that is the "water changing wagon" and in the floorboard of the same.

Until the days of gated pipe, I don't guess there was ever a way to stay "clean" while changing

And of course, "clean" is a relative thing in the irrigation business anyway.

I never met an irrigation tube that wasn't muddy, at least when it was time to pick the thing up and move it for another set.

And by the time an irrigator has picked up 25 or 30 tubes to move them on down the ditch, you don't meet too many of these fellows who aren't imbibed with the good earth in a semi-solid state

Like I said, gated pipe is some better, but you can even get mired down lugging it if you really

And then, there is the fancy footwork sometimes involved in changing a set, or moving up the end of the field to figure out why row number ten of the second set just won't seem to run out.

Loaded down with tubes, shovel and apron, or busy consulting the notepad on the rowcount for the third time, it is not unheard of to wander into a

"My own research is concentrated on nesting. I'm in the first summer of what will be a two year study, so I have no conclusions now, but I hope to have an efficient report on nesting phenology by the end of the research period." stated Taylor, enjoying a fresh breeze that temporarily lifted the late

The Fort Worth researcher began his study of pheasant nesting in April of this year, with funding for the study provided by a grant from the Clayburgh Research Foundation of the famed King Ranch.

July heat.

"I've spent most of my time checking nests, comparing density per vegetative type, nest predation and other and fisheries science, and a factors," stated Taylor.

> "In our work, we find and mark nests, and I take one egg from each nest to determine the hatching date and other data. In this manner, we will be able to date the earliest and latest nesting activities. Right now, it looks like nesting will range from April until up in August, but next spring. I may find that there is nesting activity in March," he continued.

Asked about the purpose of the nesting research. Taylor responded with a question of his own of sorts.

"We're in no position at this time to say what's the best management for pheasants in the Texas Panhandle. Through work in the field this summer and next, and other work during the fall and winter, perhaps we can discover the most favorable nesting conditions. Dr. Guthery hopes that after about ten years of research, someday we can come in with a program outline to show what forms of farmer and the game." he

Although continued research will have to bear them out, Taylor has already made some surprising findings that show low productivity among nesting pheasants, and a high loss of clutches to predators.

Members of a research team sweep through wheat and weeds comprising pheasant nesting cover on property owned by David Smith of Hart. The Smith farm is one of three on which studies of pheasant ecology are underway this summer. The researchers are working with the Texas Tech Department of Range and Wildlife Management, hoping to discover important facts concerning the

The productive clutches are real small, 8-10 eggs. There's a management will benefit the large degree of abandonment of nests, and I've found "dump nests" filled with as many as 28 eggs." he pointed out. Predation of nests has been a particular concern.

'On the Smith place," said Taylor, nodding toward the overgrown lake to the southwest of the house. "we see the "So far. The researcher reported that many nests are also crushed by farm machinery, and eggs. broods and hens are destroyed in hay fields harvested during nesting.

"If this destruction occurs early in the year, the pheasant are prolific and will move on to another area and renest." stated Taylor.

According to his statistics. Taylor reports that 1.5 days are required to lay each egg in the clutch, but development does after the brooding period.

"Hens really stay close to the nest in the last period of the incubation, and the pips leave the nest immediately after hatching and follow the hen." he related. Taylor reports that his research to date indicates that hayfields, particularly alfalfa are a preferred nesting area for pheasants here, but death losses from farm operations in these fields are high as well. "The researcher has found nests in virtually every form of vegetation, but highest nesting levels have been found in alfalfa, wheat, roadside vegetation and playa lakes.

"Roadsides really take a toll of nests, yet, I notice lots of production out of them. Playas would probably be the most productive nesting areas, but in this year's research at least. almost every nest in the three lakes I'm studying has been flooded out by high water." he

According to Taylor, the pheasant research team is becoming better known by farmers in the study area, and many have offered to go around study nests with their farm machinery or otherwise alter routine farming procedures to spare nest sites.

of these individuals, and their willingness to cooperate, but what we're after right now as researchers is an accurate set of data. For that reason, we don't want the farmers to alter anything, but simply to go ahead with their standard procedures. We want to see how the pheasant would make out as if we weren't even keeping score. The only way we can' learn is to watch their environment now, without any changes, and if crop cultivation maintained.

'We're working for the farmers, really. When we come up with solid data, perhaps we can make recommendations for altered production methods that can improve pheasant production and open up the leasing of hunting rights on these farms." he added.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

MEMBER

TEXAS OUTDOOR WRITERS ASSOCIATION

I had the opportunity to visit this past week with three of a number of young men who are currently conducting wildlife research projects in our own immediate area under the direction of the Texas Tech Department of Range and Wildlife Management.

The fellows I met were studying various aspects of the pheasant life cycle and habitat requirements down in my old stomping grounds. They are concentrating on particularly suitable research topics for our own area.

The Panhandle has a vast cross section of wildlife species to offer, and a lot of folks will tell you how getting game used to make the difference in putting food on their table in this area.

However, despite an apparent wealth of wildlife species, it is only in the last few years that serious attention has been given to the Panhandle as an important area of wildlife habitat.

In our opinion, this consideration is long-since due, and studies of the magnitude of the Tech R&WM projects are time and effort well spent.

Pheasants grow in economic importance to this area each year as more sportsmen become aware of them. Yet, up until now, no real studies have been made on just what the Panhandle pheasant is up against, how great the nesting success of this species is, and just what management techniques can best benefit both the ringneck and the farmer who provides this bird its home.

Through talks with these researchers and Dr. Fred S. Guthery, assistant professor with the Tech

R&WM department in Lubbock and a stalwart friend of the Panhandle pheasant, we've been convinced that these studies are being carried on in an efficient manner, and that all of us who care for these gamebirds may one day benefit from what researchers are finding out on our own Panhandle farmlands.

Jim Clarke, president of the Hereford Gun Club, has indicated his willingness to assist in a fund raising turkey shoot for Ducks Unlimited, the international waterfowl conservation organization.

DU raises funds which are used for the preservation of waterfowl nesting habitat in Canada, where 70 percent of the North American waterfowl population is hatched and reared each year. These funds benefit not only ducks and geese, but nongame species, furbearers and some big game species as well, by making sure their homes are kept intact. Contributions to DU are tax

At this point, the project has been discussed only briefly, but a tentative date has been set for Sunday, Sept. 23, with turkeys and possibly some canned hams to be given as prizes.

Other items of interest may include two or three waterfowl prints, to be awarded as prizes in a

Key To Future Pheasants

Hens are an important aspect of a pheasant study currently underway in neighboring Castro County.

Sailfish Outing Bookings Underway

Bookings are currently underway for sailfish, marlin and shark fishing expeditions off the coast of Mazatlan, Mexico, according to Kenny Redin of Plainview, who is signing up sportsmen for the outings.

Redin, through his "Fin and Feather" of Plainview, is lining up sportsmen for accomodations and fishing boats in Mazatlan,

"The best months for sailfish are now through October. However, sailfishing is good year around. The best months for blue and black marlin are during the same period into October, and good numbers of these deep sea gamesters have been spotted offshore." commented Redin.

Redin indicated that all trips are being planned from Plainview, but arrangements can be made to pick up interested sportsmen. According to Redin, up to 14 fishermen can be accomodated on an outing, but smaller groups are recommended.

Interested individuals may write Redin at Box 1716. Plainview, Texas, 79072, or call 806-293-7751.

Proper Fish Pond Oxygen Vital During Hot Summer

need oxygen, just like other living things. And summer reduce nutrient loads. weather can sometimes take this oxygen away.

Dissolved oxygen is the most important water quality factor in fish ponds, believes a fish disease specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Algae, which use and release dissolved oxygen, cause the oxygen level of water to vary. They release oxygen in daylight; consequently, there is an afternoon high in oxygen and a dawn low, points out the specialist. This is why pond owners should check for surfacing fish early in the morning.

Oxygen depletion increases in a pond with heavy algae growth if normal daylight conditions change, such as several consecutive cloudy days, Johnson says.

Other factors complicate the oxygen depletion problem. For instance, wind helps oxygenate water. Also, fish feeding causes heavy nutrient loads which promote excess algae growth. Overstocking may contribute to the algae problem when fish demand too much oxygen.

Johnson believes proper pond management can prevent oxygen problems. He suggests feeding no more than 30 pounds of feed per surface acre in the summer. Also, avoid fertilizers Water testing with meters or die-off and surfacing fish. These signs call for emergency measures, emphasizes Johnson.

As far'as splash aeration of water is concerned, this works only when coupled with current production, advises the specialist. Water sprayed across a pond surface creates a current, exposing oxygenless water to surface air.

An outboard motor mounted in a fixed position serves this purpose. Johnson points out. Pumps and paddle-wheel aerators are also effective.

LOCATING A PLACE TO HUNT

LUBBOCK - The Texas sportsman that finds good places to hunt each year starts the search in the summer as nearly all of the private hunting areas are spoken for on the opening day of season.

Hunters know it is impossible to pull off the road and hunt without first getting permission from the owner. Nearly all of Texas is owned and operated by private enterprise with the exception of some federal and state lands scattered across the

If the hunter fails to get permission to hunt and goes into private property to pursue game, chances are excellent that the irate landowner will call the local game warden or county sheriff to file trespass charges against the hunter.

Finding a new place to hunt takes both time and luck. Many sportsmen spend as much time locating the landowner and getting permission to hunt as they spend in the field enjoying the hunt.

Many areas of northwest Texas are not inhabited and a sportsman can drive for hours through good hunting country without seeing anyone to ask for permission or who owns the land.

Summertime will find most landowners cultivating crops or working livestock on their property making it more convenient for the hunter to talk about hunting opportunities on their land.

Many landowners do not allow any type of hunting on their property due to bad experiences from past hunters. A few landowners will allow hunting for certain species such as ducks, geese, cranes, doves, and pheasants. However, most property owners are protective of their quail, turkeys and deer with family members or friends allowed to hunt these popular Texas species.

There are an increasing number of Texas landowners turning to lease hunting in northwest Texas. These landowners now look upon wildlife on their property as a cash crop comparable with grain and livestock. These landowners charge the hunter a fee to hunt for a day or season.

Normally, a hunting lease agreement is reached between the landowner and the hunter spelling out what species can be hunted on what property and how many hunters can participate in the hunt.

These important items should be written down prior to the hunt to eliminate a misunderstanding later in the season.

If you are looking for a place to hunt, the most logical place to start will be the game warden, soil conservation office, chamber of commerce or hunting/ shooting club in that county. These people will either know of places to hunt or who to contact r permission to hunt.

PRAIRIE CHICKEN POPULATIONS VARY

WHEELER - The combined census of lesser prairie chicken breeding populations on their natural habitat in the Texas Panhandle and Permian Basin regions indicate a slight increase of only one percent. according to a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department spokes-

"The Permian Basin (South Plains) chicken population shows the greatest gain of 26 percent over 1978," said David Sierra, wildlife technician.

"The Panhandle populations of birds, however, show a downward trend of 4.4 percent for the same period," Sierra continued.

The severe winter conditions conditions in 1978 appear to be responsible for the decline.

Good nesting conditions are being reported this year and a rise in the chicken populations is predicted.

The annual Texas lesser prairie chicken season has been set for Oct. 20 & 21.

DUCK HUNTING PROSPECTS GOOD

LUBBOCK - A recent aerial count of the waterfowl breeding populations of ducks in the prairie "Pothole" country in the Dakotas, Montana and Canada by personnel of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service indicate an overall increase this summer.

A 10-to-15 percent increase over last year has been observed with much improved habitat conditions. Many of the ducks are finding ponds with good food supplies and residual nesting cover.

Breeding populations of mallards and pintails are up about 10 percent over last year, and blue-winged teal are up 20 percent according to the report. This region of central North America furnishes most of the ducks that migrate through Texas each fall.

The U.S. Post offices in Texas now have the federal Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation stamp required of all persons 16 years of age and older who participate in a duck or goose hunt.

The $7.50 stamp helps create funds for waterfowl habitat acquisition and restoration in the U.S. The stamp became a requirement in 1934 and is also purchased by non-hunters as well as stamp collectors each year to aid in conservation work. The stamp has been increased in price from its former cost of

PANHANDLE ANTELOPE POPULATION STABLE

CANYON - The antelope and less than ideal nesting herds are monitored each year by personnel of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and a recent aerial count in the Texas Panhandle found the herd population up a little from 1978.

"Antelope are open-country animals which makes them easier to count from the air and we tallied 2,256 animals on a recent aerial survey in the Panhandle," said David Dvorak, project wildlife biologist.

'The P&WD will probably issue the same number of antelope permits to the area landowners as were issued last year, which was 353," Dvorak continued.

The wildlife biologist noted that the traditional antelope range observed during the survey was in excellent condition with plenty of forb plants available to the animals.

The survey crew also counted 142 coyotes while flying the ranches which is a marked increase over last year's count of the predators.

Museum Seeks State Materials

AUSTIN - Nineteenth-century items, particularly dating back to when Texas was an independent nation from 1836-46, are being sought by the Star of the Republic Museum located Washington-on-the-Brazos State Historical Park near Brenham.

Texas history is enshrined in various ways at this park, site of the first settlement of Austin's land grant in 1821 and the signing of Texas' Declaration of Independence in 1836.

A replica of Independence Hall and the home of Anson Jones, last president of the Republic of Texas, drew crowds annually. The museum, through both permanent and changing displays, interprets many aspects and periods of the state's history, from the time of the primitive Indians to the present day.

Donations, which are tax deductible, or loans of historical objects help preserve Texas' heritage, say museum officials. They say some people may possess things of unrealized historical value.

For further information, write the museum at P.O. Box 317. Washington, Texas 77880 or call who can make hundreds of dollars on a good night, loss of the equipment or even a fine is just an inconvenience or part of the overhead. An idea of the tremendous increase in illegal fishing can be gained from a comparison of statistics from the department's fiscal year 1978 and nine months only of the current year. In this time span, confiscated nets rose from 362,692 feet to 649,580 feet; trotlines, from 600,000 feet to 712,153 feet; fish traps were not so much in evidence, with 276 taken in 1978 and 134 so far this year. Estimated total value of confiscated equipment rose from $214,807.60 to $541,420.

Actual citations for illegal commercial fishing are running at about the same percentage this fiscal year as they did last. In 1978, these amounted to citations for all fishing viola-

The TP&WD law enforcement division, however, is planning an all-out effort especially where illegal activity is greatest. Among the hotspots are several lakes in the Dallas area, where there have been recent crackdowns. The problem has grown by leaps and bounds on the coast, where wardens have also to cope with shrimp and oyster seasons and recent new trotline regulations.

Wardens emphasize also that public awareness and cooperation is a vital tool in dealing with the illegal fishing situation. Sport and commercial fishermen who report illegal equipment or suspicious activity benefit not only themselves, but all their fellow citizens in helping protect a valuable resource.

League competition at the Hereford Gun Club is coming down to the wire, with squads to meet for their final rounds Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

First and second place squad members will receive individual trophies following Wednesday night's action, and trophies will be presented for best individual series average and high series.

Chuck Lay of Dimmitt has been leading the high series category with 50 straight, and has also been a strong contender for the high individual series average with 23.87.

Johnny Stanford of Dimmitt with an average of 21.67 and a high series of 48x50 is also a contender for top individual honors, as are HGC president Jim Clarke of Hereford and Lynn West of Dimmitt with 21.37 averages.

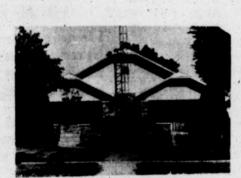

Tentative plans are now being formed for a large-scale turkey shoot to be conducted as a fund raiser for Ducks Unlimited here in late September.

The shoot will be conducted through the cooperation of the Hereford Gun Club and local members of Ducks Unlimited.
