Teachers honored at banquet

Employees of the Hereford Independent School District received service awards Tuesday at the annual Teacher Appreciation Banquet at the Community Center.

Also honored were Gene Brock, Bill McDowell, Billie McDowell, Ruby Williams and Betty Volkman, who are retiring from the school system. New officers for Hereford Educators Association and the Classroom Teachers Association were installed at the event.

Volkman taught for 34 years, including 11 years in Hereford. Williams has by an HISD employee for 26 years.

"You have the greatest gift given anyone, the gift to teach children," Superintendent Charles Greenawalt told the teachers, administrators and others. "You are all involved in rewarding jobs. Our jobs are going to become more difficult, but I have no doubt we have the kind of people who can handle the challenges. You are simply fantastic people."

New officers for the two professional organizations were installed by Rose Mary Shook, media specialist at Shirley School. She compared each office to different types of apples in her installation.

New officers for HEA include Jane Gulley, president; David Briggs, president-elect; Dee Ann Matthews, secretary; and Dolores Foster, treasurer.

New CTA officers are Catherine Cortez, president; Laurel Horton, president-elect; Yolanda Govina, secretary; and Gaye MacLasky, treasurer.

Groups focus on fixing problems

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A study group met Tuesday at the Bull Barn in Hereford to help identify critical issues in Hereford and Deaf Smith County over the next four years.

The meeting is held once every four years by the Deaf Smith County Extension Service Office to help form long-range plans and goals for Extension programs.

About 50 persons heard about environmental, social and economic concerns, and education was the underlying factor in all of the presentations.

County Judge Tom Simons said the average education of the persons he sees in his county court is fifth grade, and that 90 percent of the cases stem from drug or alcohol abuse.

"They may be theft by check or driving while license suspended or some other problem, but the root cause is almost always drug or alcohol abuse," Simons said. He explained that substance abuse programs are made part of most of the probation terms of offenders in his court.

Simons said the county is also having problems because the state and federal governments have pushed social programs they once funded onto cities and counties.

Simons said there was also plenty of good in the county.

"We have an excellent school system, and they have programs in place to prevent dropouts and re-attract dropouts to school," Simons said. "The city and school are working together on the DARE program in the sixth grade to prevent drug and alcohol abuse, and there are other good programs in place in the schools and the community."

Mike Carr, executive vice president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, said the county should look at maintaining a balanced growth. He pointed out that the two biggest population growth areas in the county are under 16 and over 55.

"This can be beneficial to a degree, but it would be better if we could put a stronger emphasis on the middle age bracket, from 29 to 46," Carr said.

He pointed to needs for larger incomes to support larger families; stronger demand for recreation and youth-oriented activities; stronger community awareness of the objectives of and the work done by governmental entities; more involvement by the general public in day-to-day activities; and the need for a very strong health care facility.

Carr pointed out the county has a potential for $105 million a year in retail sales, but the county is losing $27 million to $30 million a year to the outside.

He said the average household income was up a little in 1988, but total income in the county dropped about $2 million.

Bob Perry, executive director of the Soil Conservation Service office in Hereford, explained how land use figures in the county have changed in the last five years with the Conservation Reserve Program and how that will continue to impact Deaf Smith County.

Perry focused on the 1985 Food and Security Act and how a similar farm bill could impact here, and how water concerns have switched from quantity to more emphasis on quality.

Perry said the biggest quality concerns in the county will deal with potential water problems from feedlots and dairies. Perry emphasized that most feedlots have a pollution abatement system in place, but state and federal officials will likely require more testing and monitoring to ensure ground and surface waters are not being polluted.

The overall group broke into four separate focus groups to determine needs in community development, youth, home economics and agriculture.

The main issues determined by those groups included:

YOUTH--substance abuse programs to combat driving and drinking, vandalism, availability of alcohol and other ramifications of substance abuse; mental health programs to help deal with depression, family problems, and student-assistance programs to work 24 hours a day, seven days a week; building self-esteem through respect for self, others and other people's property, teen pregnancy, and helping overcome weak parental family relationships.

AGRICULTURE--Water issues including chemical, feedyard wastes and petroleum contamination; employee concerns including safety education with chemicals and machinery; agricultural chemicals including proper disposal of containers, safe handling, food quality and residues; animal rights concerns; and developing leadership in agriculture, including how to go to Washington and Austin and make requests properly.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT--City beautification, including improving the appearance of buildings and roadsides along U.S. Highway 60, less vandalism and graffiti, more building inspections with demolition or improvement of buildings, and continued improvement of parks and recreation areas and activities; improving available health care, which is a key point in "selling" the community to a growing population of senior citizens; and increasing parental involvement in their children's activities.

HOME ECONOMICS--Education; improving the quality of life; home economy more concern for the elderly; alcohol and drug abuse programs; support of the entire "community" of Deaf Smith County; giving more credit when and where credit is due; and teen pregnancy.

These issues will be presented to other standing Extension committees and worked into various Extension Service programs.

Retiring teachers honored

Gene Brock and Ruby Williams will be retiring this year and were honored at the banquet. Employees with 10, 20, 25 and 30 years of service received service pins. The event was sponsored by the Hereford Educators Association.

Six file for May election

Six persons had filed for a spot on the May 5 ballot for the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors as of 10 a.m. today.

The deadline for filing is 5 p.m. today, and more petitions were still out for potential candidates.

Incumbent director Craig Smith has been joined by Valerie Fellhauer, Donita Rule, John Perrin, Boyd Foster and Diane Hoelscher in filing for the board. Incumbents Frank Zinser and Margie Ford had not filed for reelection this morning but had petitions. At least four other persons also had petitions.

Persons filing for the election must have a petition signed by 25 registered county voters. The seats of Smith, Ford, Zinser and a new position on the board are up for election next month.

Absentee voting continues through Friday for the April 12 run-off election in the Democratic and Republican primaries at the county clerk's office.

Persons must vote in the same party's run-off election as they voted in the March primary. If you voted Republican then, you may only vote in the Republican run-off, and if you voted Democratic in March, you may only vote in the Democratic run-off.

There are no local elections in either party's run-off. The Democratic ballot is highlighted by the race between Jim Mattox and Ann Richards for the gubernatorial nomination. The Republican ballot features a contest for ag commissioner to challenge Democratic incumbent Jim Hightower in November.

Richards offers no apologies to White

AUSTIN (AP) - Ann Richards' campaign is offering no apologies for its tactics after former Gov. Mark White accused the Democratic gubernatorial hopeful of waging a dirty campaign and likened her behavior to that of the head of the Nazi Gestapo.

Stopping short of endorsing Attorney General Jim Mattox over Ms. Richards in the Democratic runoff for governor, White said he would be voting in that race but not for Ms. Richards.

"I will never endorse Ann Richards. I will never support Ann Richards. And I will never vote for Ann Richards," said White, who finished a distant third in last month's Democratic primary.

Recycling meeting is Thursday

The Hereford Recycling Coalition will hold a public meeting Thursday at 7:30 at the Community Center.

The meeting's purpose is to get community input as well as to discuss practical ways to recycle.

A representative from Wastewatchers in Lubbock will be featured and Amanda McMeen will give a method demonstration on garbage generation as well as practical ways to recycle a family's trash. Anyone interested in recycling is invited.

"I've always thought he (Mattox) was one of the toughest campaigners I've ever seen, but what Ann Richards has done would make Himmler blush," White said, an apparent reference to the Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler.

During a campaign stop Tuesday in San Benito, Ms. Richards said, "Well, that's too bad... I really don't think that it's like Mark White to call anyone a Nazi."

Her campaign manager, Glenn Smith, said the campaign stands by television commercials it aired which were critical of White.

"Ann Richards fulfilled the pledge she made when she announced her candidacy - she said she would run a positive campaign until she was attacked - and she was, by both her opponents," Smith said.

"Like all of us, Mr. White should support any candidate he chooses, and I'm sure he'll let his conscience be his guide," Smith said.

White said his no-vote policy will apply in the general election, should Ms. Richards win the nomination to challenge Republican Clayton Williams, he said.

"If she gets the nomination it will be without my help. And I think if she's able to be elected, she'll have it in the same fashion," White said.

Williams had courted White, hoping to win the ex-governor's endorsement. But the Republican is pleased with the outcome, said press secretary Bill Kenyon.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, April 4, the 94th day of 1990. There are 271 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 4, 1968, civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Junior was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone to support a strike by sanitation workers. He was 39.

On this date:

In 1818, Congress decided the flag of the United States should consist of 13 red and white stripes and 20 stars, with a new star added for every new state of the Union.

In 1949, 12 nations, including the United States, signed the North Atlantic Treaty, which laid the groundwork for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Thought for today: "Tell me what you feel in your room when the full moon is shining in upon you and your lamp is dying out, and I will tell you how old you are, and I shall know if you are happy." - Henri-Frederic Amiel, Swiss critic (1821-1881).

Mattox allows no cap on attorney's fees

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said a cap on attorneys fees in workers' compensation cases that was approved last year is unreasonable and declared the rule invalid.

Implementation of the cap, approved by the Industrial Accident Board, had already been stalled by a state district court order.

The new board that administers the workers' comp system - the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission - repealed the cap at its first meeting. Susan Butterick, legal examiner for the board, said Tuesday.

In December 1989, the IAB passed a rule that said an attorney could receive no more than 15 percent of the claimant's recovery. Under certain conditions, the IAB rule stated it could approve up to 25 percent.

But Mattox said, in an opinion released Tuesday, that the cap was unreasonable because it did not take into account the attorneys' competence, expertise or how much money was at stake.

The new board is now operating under the old law which allows an attorney to recover 25 percent, Ms. Butterick said.

Cases filed after Jan. 1, 1991, will be under the workers' comp reform law that sets a 25 percent cap, but also allows the board to consider a list of factors in approving the fee.

Attorneys fees were a controversial issue during the nearly yearlong fight over workers' comp reform that forced two special legislative sessions and ended in December.

Businesses favored a cap, saying that attorneys were making too much money in suing for awards for injured workers.

But plaintiff's attorneys said the cap would make it more difficult for injured workers to find an attorney to take their case.

US-Soviet talks focus on Lithuania, cruise missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State James A. Baker III is seeking a Soviet plan for a peaceful settlement in Lithuania and a date for the next superpower summit during three days of talks with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

Baker also hopes to work out limits to be placed on nuclear-tipped cruise missiles in a treaty designated for signing at the summit by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

Also on the agenda is the war in Angola between the Soviet-armed government and U.S.-aided rebels. Baker is trying for a cease-fire but insists on a commitment from the Luanda government that it will share power with the UNITA guerrillas led by Jonas Savimbi.

Before the opening round beginning late this afternoon, U.S. officials had no word on whether Shevardnadze brought a reply from Gorbachev to Bush's letter last week reiterating U.S. hopes for a peaceful settlement in Lithuania.

But the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they hoped Gorbachev and Shevardnadze would spell out how the Soviets plan to come to grips with the secessionist movement in the Baltic republic.

Shevardnadze told Baker last month at a meeting in Namibia, the newly independent African country, that the Soviets would not use force against the Lithuanians. Without challenging that pledge, U.S. officials said no clear picture has emerged from Moscow on Gorbachev's long-range plan.

The Soviets have demanded that the Lithuanians annul a March 11 declaration of independence, which the secessionists are unwilling to do.

Still, U.S. officials hope for a settlement to pave the way for Lithuanian self-determination, a right some Soviet officials have acknowledged.

Arriving here Tuesday, Shevardnadze likened events in Lithuania to an earthquake, but he also pledged to engage in "honest dialogue" with the independence movement.

While the foreign minister's remarks had a conciliatory ring, he also emphasized the importance of the Kremlin attaches to the Soviet Constitution and Soviet laws.

"You must understand the importance of that question for the Soviet Union and the Soviet people," Shevardnadze said.

Bush and Baker have no intention of scrapping plans for the summit over Lithuania, officials said. The selection of a precise date in June depends on the Soviets scheduling a People's Congress in Moscow the same month.

Bush and Gorbachev hope during the summit to sign an accord to limit their long-range nuclear missiles, bombers and submarines. However, claims that the overall cutback would amount to 50 percent came under challenge on Tuesday.

A senior administration official, declining to be identified, told The Associated Press the United States would wind up with only slightly fewer deployed warheads than in the current arsenal. When warheads kept in storage are taken into account, he said, the U.S. total actually would exceed the current level.

The official said that from the U.S. standpoint the principal virtue of the treaty would be to force a reduction in long-range Soviet SS-18 missiles.

Meanwhile, State Department spokeswoman Margaret D. Tutwiler said the treaty would cut the SS-18 force in half and also reduce the total of deployed Soviet missiles by about half.

"The treaty is based on equality," she said, reading from a statement. "Since Soviet force levels exceed our own in the most dangerous and destabilizing systems, their reductions will be somewhat larger."

House, Senate disagree about giving aid to Central America

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush is turning up pressure on Congress to quickly enact his aid request for Panama and Nicaragua, as the House-approved measure faces delay in the Senate.

The House voted 362-59 Tuesday for a $2.4 billion spending bill that provides $720 million for the two new Central American democracies. The measure includes nearly $1.7 billion in other spending, most of it for domestic programs such as disaster relief, food stamps and Forest Service firefighting.

The bill is partly funded by a $1.8 billion cut from the Pentagon budget that amounts to the first use of a "peace dividend" from lessened East-West military tensions.

Bush called his appeal a "laser-like request to help Panama and Nicaragua," and State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said failure to pass the package quickly would threaten the fledgling democracies and be like "playing with dynamite."

But while the Senate prepares to consider a companion bill authorizing aid programs for the two countries, it seems in no rush to take up the money bill itself.

"We have a problem lighting a fire under the Senate to move the bill," said a senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "There is an alarming lack of enthusiasm to get this through the Senate."

An aide to Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate

Appropriations Committee, said the senator believes the administration is sending too much money to Panama and Nicaragua and not enough to emerging democracies in Eastern Europe.

In Nicaragua, President-elect Violeta Chamorro will take office April 25 faced by a litany of immediate problems, Ms. Tutwiler said.

In the House, the supplemental money bill for the balance of fiscal 1990 easily survived attempts to strike out or trim foreign aid sections. But the attempts drew derision from the bill's supporters.

The House bill includes Bush's full $300 million request for Nicaragua. But it trims $80 million from the $500 million he sought for Panama,

Q. Is there some way to keep the bathroom mirror from getting all fogged up? I leave the door open, but then the bathroom gets cold. What else can I do? — Mrs. E.J. Best, Longview, Texas

A. If you take a tub bath, run just cold water for the first inch or so, then add the hot water. Or put a little shampoo on a dry cloth and wipe the mirror with it before you bathe.

STORING CLOTHES

Q. I'm getting my winter clothes ready for storing and need help. Last year I put them in boxes and stored them in the basement, but some of them had spots and mildew when I unpacked them. What can I do to keep this from happening this year? — Joyce Durning, Daly City, Calif.

A. First and most important, the clothes must be completely clean. Spots and stains must be thoroughly removed before storing because they will only get worse with time.

Instead of placing the clothes in boxes, try using sealable plastic bags to keep out the moisture and store them in plastic garbage cans with tight-fitting lids.

Place a fabric-softener sheet or potpourri sachet in with the clothes to keep them from getting a musty smell. Don't put them in direct contact with the clothes, though, since the oils can cause spots. Taping them to the inside of the lid is an easy way.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please let me tell your readers that people who indulge in gay bashing hurt not only gays but another group of people as well, and they number in the millions.

I am a member of your church choir, your neighbor across the street, your daughter's Sunday school teacher, the butcher who slices your meat, and the cop on the beat. My son is gay.

He doesn't have pink hair, and he doesn't wear mascara. He is an excellent water skier and an avid Chicago Bears fan. He is intelligent and hardworking, and he has a terrific sense of humor. He is extremely handsome, and girls have been chasing him since sixth grade. Your daughter would be crazy about him, and you would think he's a marvelous catch. You would never know that he was gay unless he told you.

Your stereotype of gay men is not accurate. The vast majority have no visible signs. About one of 10 men is gay, so you must know a few. And I'll bet you have dealings with some who you would swear are straight. Many are extremely skillful at concealing their sexual identity, because they would prefer to live a lie rather than risk the hostility and humiliation.

We parents suffer more than you can imagine. We may have spent months, even years, learning to accept them. We support them through their depressions, and our own, as we try to face the fact that we shall never see them in the traditional roles of husbands and father.

My son did not choose to be gay. Please understand this, and remember that it could have been your son. — A Parent

That any friend could say. Perhaps you were not there at all. Just thought of us that day. Whatever you did to console our hearts, We thank you so much, whatever the part.

I don't want to add to a grieving person's burden, but when you knock yourself out telephoning, cooking for relatives, consoling the children, driving kin to the funeral and the cemetery, you don't appreciate a message saying, "Perhaps you did something, but I'm not sure of what it was."

I consider this pretty shabby treatment. What do you think? — A.H., Fort Worth

DEAR A.H.: I agree. In my opinion, those all-purpose cards should be abolished.

Easter bake sale scheduled

The Deaf Smith Hospital Auxiliary met recently in the hospital board room to make plans for the Easter bake sale.

The bake sale will be held at Deaf Smith General Hospital on Friday, April 13. Proceeds will go to buy recliners for the hospital rooms. Three chairs were purchased in January.

The auxiliary members volunteer their time to operate the gift shop in the hospital lobby. The members purchase and distribute baby books to mothers of newborn babies at the hospital. They make Care Bears to give to the small children who are hospitalized. Thirty-six baby books and six Care Bears were given in March.

The auxiliary welcomes new members. If interested, contact one of the auxiliary members or come by the gift shop.

After the meeting, members stuffed packets for the Deaf Smith County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Members present were Mary Jane Burris, Grace Covington, Alice Koenig, Baxter London, Irene Reinart, Mary Lou Spinhome, Anna Stindt, and Quintina Waits.

Cruciferous Vegetables

Cruciferous vegetables are often referred to as cabbage-family or mustard-family vegetables. Their name comes from a four-leaf pattern that resembles a cross. Other than cabbage and mustard greens, cruciferous vegetables include broccoli, brussels sprouts, kohlrabi, and cauliflower, all of which may help prevent certain cancers from developing. For more information, contact your local American Cancer Society or call 1-800-ACS-2345.

Herd drops 10-5 decision at Frenship

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

The Frenship Tigers used six unearned runs Tuesday to take a 10-5 win over the Hereford Whitefaces in a District 1-4A game at Wolfforth.

Frenship built a 4-0 lead in the first two innings off Herd starter Max Mungia (0-3). Mungia, who went the distance for the second game in a row, gave up nine hits, including three doubles and a triple, while walking three and striking out three.

Chris Boudy pitched four innings for the win, allowing four runs on two hits with five walks and five strikeouts. Storm Murry finished for the Tigers, giving up one run on one hit with four walks and three strikeouts.

The Tigers jumped on Mungia early as the first three batters of the game reached base and scored. Chris Matthews walked to start and Brad Cade and Jarred Griffin followed with back-to-back doubles. Griffin, who finished with four RBI, drove in Matthews and Cade and scored on Michael McKelvey's single.

Griffin picked up his third RBI in the second with a triple to bring in Matthews.

The Herd got on in the third when Boudy lost the strike zone after having retired the first six batters he faced. Jim Andrews and Jim Anima walked on nine pitches and Tab Hathaway loaded the bases with an infield single. Matt Bromlow walked to force in a run and Chad Brummett lifted a sacrifice fly to center. Boudy then uncorked a wild pitch to score Hathaway before getting out of the inning.

Andrews tied the score with his first home run of the season in the fourth, but the Herd defense committed three errors over the last three innings to give the Tigers six runs.

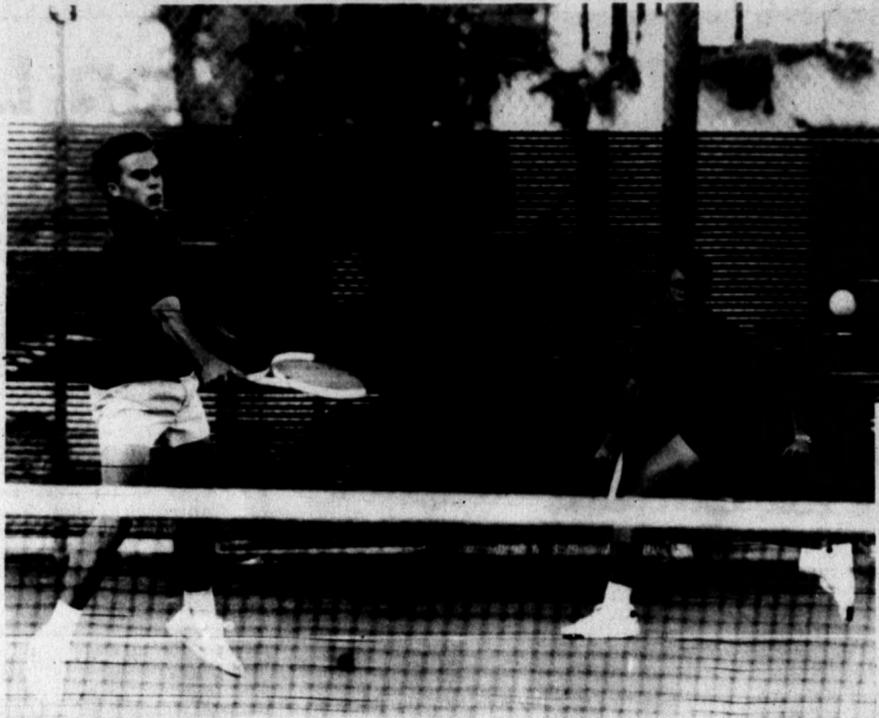

In the bottom of the fourth, with runners on second and third with two out, Griffin rolled a grounder to second, but Louis Mungia's throw to first was off line, allowing both runs to score.

Hereford cut the margin to 6-5 in the fifth when Brummett led off with a walk and scored when, with the bases loaded, Matthews booted a grounder from Andrews. The Herd failed to capitalize on the opportunity when Jason Walterscheid struck out to end the inning.

Frenship put the game away in the sixth with four unearned runs. Matthews reached on an error by Vince Castillo and Cade and Griffin followed with singles with Matthews scoring on Griffin's hit. Bromlow then dropped Brad Douglas' fly ball in center for another two-run error.

The loss drops the Herd to 2-4 in district play and 3-10 on the season. Frenship moves to 3-5 in league action and 6-10 on the year.

The Herd will host Randall at 4:30 p.m. at Whiteface Field in a makeup of Saturday's postponement before the district-leading Estacado Matadors visit for a 2 p.m. contest Saturday.

Netters edge AHS on tiebreaker

The Hereford Whiteface tennis team Tuesday edged the Amarillo High Sandies with a 20-18 advantage in sets won in a dual match at Whiteface Courts.

The teams split the matches with nine wins apiece, as Hereford swept the girls' competition while the Sandies did the same in boys' play.

Hereford's Kristie Allison, Brenna Reinauer, Gina Alley, Misty Reed, Lori Sanders and Teresa Baker combined for nine straight-set wins in singles and doubles. The Herd gained the tie breaker when Greg Coplen in boys' singles and the boys' doubles team of Randy Robbins and Jeff Eades pushed their matches to three sets.

Robbins and Eades won the first set of their match with James Nickerson and Joe Hair and reached match point as the second set went to a tie breaker. But the Amarillo pair came back to win the set and then the match.

Coplen's match with Shandy Elliot went down to the wire with Elliot taking the tie breaker in the third set.

The Herd netters will compete in the Amarillo Relays tournament Friday and Saturday before next week's District 1-4A tournament at Levelland.

Settlement may be likely in Valvano case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A financial settlement appears to be the only peaceful way for North Carolina State to end its relationship with basketball coach Jim Valvano, according to his lawyer.

"I don't know that it's fair to say that we've given up," Woody Webb, Valvano's lawyer, said. "It appears that the option of him staying on as coach is no longer available."

Webb met on Tuesday with Raleigh lawyer Howard Manning and chief deputy attorney general Andy Vancore, both representing N.C. State.

Manning and Vancore have declined comment on the negotiations, but Webb said the university board of trustees apparently won't discuss extending Valvano's contract.

Webb said a lawsuit would be "the only way I know of" to keep Valvano's job, but the coach would "rather be on the basketball court than in court."

"He just said, 'If it's impossible for me to stay on here, then I guess we'll have to focus on a financial settlement,'" Webb said. "He's talking with his financial people to come up with figures that might be agreeable."

Valvano was in his office Tuesday but would not take phone calls from reporters, said his secretary, Beverly Sparks.

Asked whether N.C. State had increased a $100,000 offer made several weeks ago, Webb said, "They have not, in essence, but they have indicated a softening of posture."

The sticking point remains a $500,000 buyout clause the school must pay Valvano if he is fired without cause. The contract also calls for Valvano to pay the school $500,000 if he leaves to take another professional or NCAA Division I coaching job.

The University of North Carolina system Board of Governors voted unanimously on Monday to give N.C. State permission to sue Valvano for breach of contract, if necessary. Webb said that authorization might not be used.

"It is less likely than last night that they'll sue; at least, that's the way I read it," he said.

Webb said he was frustrated by N.C. State's position, saying the lawyers seemed to believe they had the final word on Valvano's future. The N.C. State board of trustees voted 9-3 to ask Manning and Vancore to find a way to terminate Valvano's contract. But interim chancellor Larry Monteith has said he would have the final word.

Another sticking point is N.C. State's refusal to hear from Valvano himself, Webb said.

"I once again renewed our request for Jim or some representative of Jim to appear before the board of trustees," he said. "While they politely jotted down my request, as far as I could tell there was no desire to have him do that."

Valvano, who has coached the team 10 years and led the Wolfpack to the 1983 NCAA title, hasn't been implicated in wrongdoing. But he has been under pressure to resign since N.C. State was placed on two years' probation because players sold basketball shoes and complimentary tickets.

Valvano also came under increasing pressure when former player Charles Shackelford, now with the New Jersey Nets, admitted accepting loans while playing at N.C. State - an NCAA violation that could cost N.C. State up to $1 million in postseason revenue.

NCAA changes hoop rules

DENVER (AP) - Fouling a shooter attempting a 3-point shot will result in three free throws next season, the NCAA basketball rules committee has decided. There will also be a crackdown on player misconduct.

The 3-point ruling is certain to further popularize long shots by giving a team the possibility of three points even if the shooter misses. But the NCAA decided against moving the 3-point line beyond its current distance of 19 feet, 9 inches.

There had been some sentiment for pushing the line back to 20 feet, 6 inches, the line used in international play. Conferences will be allowed to experiment with the international line next season, however.

"Why fool around with something that's been extremely successful?" asked Edward Steitz, secretary of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee. "We never say never, but we have a great game. To me, the game has never been better."

Steitz noted that shooting accuracy from 3-point range has fallen from 38.6 percent to 36.6 percent over the past three years, and that 30 games in this year's NCAA tournament were decided by five points or fewer.

The National Association of Basketball Coaches last week said it would recommend to the committee that the line be moved back to 20-6 to correspond with the international line.

Steitz predicted that no conferences would adopt the experimental 20-6 line, used in the Olympics and other international competition.

"We had it as an experimental rule two years ago and we had no takers," he said. "I don't see many conferences opting to use it this time."

New rules designed to control the conduct of players on the court call for technical fouls to be assessed for taunting or swearing at opponents. Suspension for his team's next game will be the automatic penalty for taking part in a fight, and a second fight means suspension for the rest of the season.

"The stuff that has been going on has been totally undesirable," Steitz said. "We just don't think this should be part of the college game."

Coaches or players given two technical fouls will now be ejected from games, and the head coach will be ejected after three bench technicals have been called on his team.

In an effort to speed up the game, players will be given two free throws instead of a 1-and-1 after the opposing team's 10th foul of each half and timeouts will be cut from four to three for each team in televised contests.

"We want to minimize the time it takes to play the last few minutes of the ballgame," Steitz said. "We felt this was a gradual approach toward doing that."

The committee also decided to allow conferences to experiment with a "no-foul-out" rule. A player wouldn't be disqualified by a fifth foul, but each subsequent foul would award an opponent three chances to make two free throws.

The rule replaces an experimental six-fouls-and-out rule used by three conferences this season, that Steitz said was dropped after a poll of coaches showed only 21 percent supported it.

"I do think we'll have some conferences that will opt for the no-foul-out rule," he said.

Other changes approved by the committee:

- A player will be assessed a technical if he grasps or hangs on the rim unless he is fouled or is trying to avoid an obvious injury to himself or another player.

- The 45-second clock will not be reset when a blocked shot goes out of bounds.

- Only four players from each team may line up on the lane during free throws.

- Teams will be allowed to use an NBA-style ball that has deeper channels to allow better handling and shooting.

Shur-Gro blends tasty tidbits, supplements for nation's Beef Belt

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Shur-Gro is Hereford's gourmet of the feedbunks—producers of livestock supplements, appetizers and tasty tidbits for the nation's Beef Belt.

In a Texas-size kitchen sometimes called a factory, Shur-Gro blends some of the finest feedstuff in the industry, servicing a vital niche of the billion-dollar cattle feeding business.

Commonly known as livestock supplements in cattle feeding circles, finished products from Shur-Gro are specialty blends developed by professional livestock nutritionists. There's no such thing as a pinch of this or a dash of that around this Hereford operation—every smidgen of nutrients in their refined recipes is calculated to the fraction of an ounce. Or, as the old adage goes, good things frequently come in small packages.

Backstopped with a staff of dedicated workers, Z.A. McCasland and Jerry Skaggs are the head honchos of Shur-Gro Liquid Feed, Inc., a livestock feed supplement factory that services the livestock industry from the arid lands of Arizona to the blue waters of Nebraska. The big end of the business is geared to commercial cattle feeding, but following close is the range cattle liquid feed business. Shur-Gro also blends various ration supplements for the dairies, sheep industry and other segments of the livestock business on request.

"We have a 6,000-gallon blending tank where we can mix any where from three tons to 30 tons of livestock supplements at one time," said Skaggs, who is president of Shur-Gro Liquid Feed. "We pump the individual ingredients into a pretty sophisticated mixing vat which contains two 18-inch stainless-steel propeller blades which are set at various angles on the shafts to induce proper mixing for each blend. This gives us a maximum in homogeneous blending."

Skaggs, who heads up day-to-day operations at the feed manufacturing plant on the west edge of Hereford, pointed out that many of their supplement formulas are finished in a homogenized quality equal to such grocery items as Grade A Milk or peanut butter. Even in feed blends which do not require homogenization, high-quality suspension agents are added to prevent a settling effect. This saves the customers time and labor (money) in added mixing during on-site feeding runs.

"The professional nutritionists bring in a chart showing exactly what they want in a specific formula," Skaggs added. "Then, we take the recipe, or 'mix sheet' and mix it into a finished feed exactly as written. Some of this formulation is done by computer and some is done by pure old brain work. Either way, it all comes down to the individual formulating the ingredients and the individual blending the ingredients—it's an exacting business from beginning to end."

In addition to much computerized formulations, Skaggs said Shur-Gro blenders are equipped with electronic digital scales which can weigh out ingredients to the fraction of an ounce. When the blending is finished, the liquid feedstuff is pumped directly into a Shur-Gro company truck for direct delivery to a farm, ranch or feedyard.

"There are occasions when customers furnish their own trucks," said Skaggs. "And, if a customer so desires, we have storage facilities where we can hold a finished product for future delivery."

Shur-Gro delivery trucks have 5,000-gallon tanker capacity which weighs out at between 20 and 24 tons per load, depending on the type of liquid feed being hauled. In addition to servicing the Greater Hereford area, the feed factory makes regular runs to every point of the High Plains Beef Belt that stretches from the North Platte of Nebraska to San Angelo. Range runs take in all parts of Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and the eastern edge of Arizona. In recent years, liquid feed supplements have become quite common on Southwestern ranching operations which regard Shur-Gro blends as sort of icing on the cake.

As Skaggs pointed out, nutritionists have found that a blade of grass or a bale of hay does not necessarily contain adequate nutrients for top performance of livestock. Thus, "supplements" for want of a better word, in the form of special blends are offered free-choice to range livestock. However, in the finishing feedyards where hourly performance of livestock can either make or break a feeder, supplements are added direct to the daily rations for absolute consumption.

Though many supplement ingredients are the end product of high-tech development from nutritionist laboratories, Shur-Gro is a heavy consumer of by-products in the wide world of agribusiness—from molasses of the sugar factories to feathermeal of poultry producers...trimmings from the fructose mills at Dimmitt, grain alcohol refineries of Eastern New Mexico and cotton gins of the South Plains.

In showing the widespread sources of by-products, such as feathermeal from Pilgrim's Poultry at Mt. Pleasant, Tx., he said much of their molasses come from sugarcane processing factories of the South. "We nearly got a deal going where we'd get out molasses direct from processors in Brazil, but a few things didn't go quite right," said Skaggs, as he recalled some international product negotiations a few years back.

Shur-Gro Liquid Feed blended its first batch of livestock supplement on Jan. 17, 1964, following the completion of a spanking new factory on the turnrows of a grain field. As industry expanded on the western edge of Hereford during the 1960s, the Shur-Gro factory site eventually became known as Kingwood Street. At this point in time, Holly Sugar was moving skyward with a new factory a short distance farther to the west, paving the way for additional industries that would become headquartered on Holly Sugar Road.

"We picked this site purposely so as to be close to the sugar plant because our intentions were to build a pipeline to have a direct flow of molasses from Holly to our feed factory," said Skaggs. "But after we got our plant built, the idea didn't work out."

Since the opening on that January day in 1964, Shur-Gro has continuously expanded operations, making the firm the largest locally-owned supplement feed factory of the High Plains. In 1985, the company built a sophisticated "suspension plant"—a unit that can manufacture complete suspension feed supplements. This type of feed processing keeps the ingredients in a "suspended" state while in storage, rather than blends that "settle" and have to be churned prior to being added to a livestock ration.

Some of the ingredients used in Shur-Gro supplements include cane molasses and natural proteins, such as proteins from corn-steep liquor from the fructose factory at Dimmitt. They also use distiller solubles from an alcohol plant near Portales, N.M., and various forms of calcium, potassium, sulphur from ammonia-sulphate, urea protein—"We homogenized our true liquid supplements, but these special supplements formulas for some of the commercial cattle feeders are what we call "suspension" blends which come out of our plant similar in texture to such people formulas as say Kaopectate."

Shur-Gro does much more than blend—the company also formulates on a least-cost basis from a given mix-list.

"In some cases, a feedyard nutritionist will give us an analysis, either on an as-is or dry matter basis, it doesn't matter to us, or he will tell us the individual ingredients and how much he wants in a ton of feed," said Skaggs. "If we get just the analysis that the nutritionist wants, then we feed this into our computer and do a least-cost formulation for a given supplement, which in turn tells us to an Nth degree what parts per-million on trace minerals and other ingredients to blend."

"This leaves as little as possible human error in blending the required formulas. We have some feedyards which will use a truckload of product a day while some will use less. A 30,000-head feedyard will use about a truckload of supplement every day."

Shur-Gro is also a supplier of many liquid feeding blends which may not be classed as the so-called "supplement" mixing in the truest sense of the word. These simple blends, as an example, may be nothing more than cane molasses and distiller solubles from Portales or corn-steep liquor from Dimmitt. "We sell very little of a single, straight product, such as molasses," said Skaggs. "We're not in the molasses business...we're in the blending and feed supplement business."

Skaggs noted that in the event a nutritionist doesn't have a strong preference of using a given product, Shur-Gro may suggest or recommend various product lines available at a given time. Frequently, this type of cooperation between the nutritionist and the factory can add up to big savings for the consumers since Shur-Gro stays abreast of day-to-day marketings of all available livestock feed commodities...seasonal surplus savings may reach all the way to the feedbunks for Shur-Gro customers.

Shur-Gro now has a fleet of five, 5,000-gallon delivery trucks that funnels liquid feed out of Hereford on a daily basis, with a staff of 12 handling the company operations. Skaggs' wife, Virginia, is office manager. They have two daughters, Susan & Sharon.

McCasland, a New Mexico cattleman who decided to get into agribusiness production some 30 years ago, is chairman of the board of Shur-Gro Liquid Feed. Though McCasland can generally be found at his Shur-Gro office about sunup

Z.A. McCasland

Jerry Skaggs

every morning, he leaves the daily workload to Skaggs, a company partner of nearly 28 years.

Skaggs' son-in-law, Jim Bodkin, operates a related factory adjacent to Shur-Gro, called The Pump House, a division of Panhandle Fluid Processing.

Bodkin saw the need for a locally-base pump factory a few years ago and has expanded sales and service to the entire High Plains region. Launched initially to handle the pumping end of the liquid feed business, Bodkin gradually developed his operation to service all phases of the pump business—all types of centrifugal pumping units and specialty items such as chemical meters.

Other specialty divisions of Shur-Gro Liquid Feed includes the processing of a new type of grain conditioner that's marketed under the trade-name of Shur-Flake. This special grain conditioning formula, as described by Skaggs, is applied to such feedstuff as milo or corn in an effort to break-down kernel crusts prior to flaking. The conditioner adds greatly to the gelatinization of a processed grain kernels and at the same time, eliminating much of the feed bunk "fines" frequently found in non-conditioned rations. The conditioner also adds to the digestibility of the flaked grains.

One of the newest related services offered by Shur-Gro is a boiler treatment process that is handled under Hydro-Therm Industries. In this phase of the business, Hydro-Therm manufacturers boiler treatment chemicals, handle boiler consulting and cooling tower work.

"Hopefully, one of these days we'll be big enough to handle such units as the large cooling towers of Southwestern Public Service Co, but right now, we're operating on a smaller level," said Skaggs.

Born and reared at Gorman, a peanut farming community about 70 miles southeast of Abilene, Skaggs attended Tarleton State College at Stephenville and later graduated from Texas Tech University at Lubbock in 1957. After graduating from Tech, Skaggs joined the U.S. Armed Forces for two years, serving in the postwar years of military surveillance in South Korea.

In 1959, he joined a chemical company in Dallas, Van Waters & Rogers, an agribusiness-industrial firm which transferred Skaggs to Lubbock in 1960.

On Oct. 1, 1963, Skaggs joined Shur-Gro operations and moved to Hereford—"There's was so much going on in Hereford during that time that you couldn't hardly find a bedroom to rent, let alone a house."

During those early years out on Kingwood, there were no improved roads or pavement and when rain or snow came, Skaggs said they had to pull their delivery trucks in and out of the plant with tractors..." Actually we were located right in the turnrows of a field."

Shur-Gro company actually had its beginning in the late 1950s when Z.A. "Z" McCasland and Bob Schilling formed a partnership in the commercial fertilizer business out on the north edge of Clovis, N.M. From the commercial fertilizer beginning, the two Clovis men gradually edged into the liquid feed business in 1959, and from this business springboard, there came the Panhandle's first major overhead irrigation sprinkler distributorship—the Shur-Gro Irrigation Co., a four-state franchised distributor of Valley sprinklers.

"We kept seeing all the ditch water running down the bar-ditches into tailwater pits so we thought what this country needed were the sprinklers, so we cut a deal with the Nebraska company to sell their sprinklers in the Southwest," recalled McCasland. "I'll always remember that Jim Witherspoon (Hereford) wrote us a lengthy letter, commending us on bringing the sprinkler business to Texas—we framed his letter and it hung on the office all the time we were in Clovis."

With big commercial feedyards on the boom in the Hereford-Clovis region and Holly Sugar Processing plant under construction, the two Clovis men decided to expand with a new liquid feed factory in Hereford in the fall of 1963—and they did it right in the middle of a Deaf Smith County wheat field.

"Jerry Skaggs had been calling on us for that company out of Lubbock, so when we decided to move our feed business to Hereford, we went after him for our manager," said McCasland. Skaggs later was brought in as a partner and the Skaggs and McCaslands now own Shur-Gro.

"I'm telling you those were real boom days for Hereford," said McCasland. "But the boom in agribusiness didn't just happen. There were a few men who spent a lot of their own money and time to bring it in—some went after the cattle feeding business in California and Arizona and others were pulling every political string in the book to bring the sugar beet industry to Texas and New Mexico...Jim Witherspoon, Henry Sears, Lee Benefield. There were others who helped but Jim and Henry were always at the head of the pack. Without those two men we would have never had a sugar factory in Hereford."

McCasland was also in the middle of the Hereford promotional pack, in and out of Washington, D.C., like it was neighborhood shopping center. As a matter of record, none of the above men ever received one cent of expense money from the tax-payers' till while promoting the High Plains agribusiness during those years of the 1960s—they paid their own way, along with that of many others. The end result was the coming of the biggest cattle feeding center ever known on Earth and the finest sugar plants in America.

McCasland, among other things, served on the Feed and Grain Advisory Board of the U.S. Department of Agriculture during the 1960s and received a special citation for promoting agriculture from Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman. McCasland, being heavily involved in the cattle business during those years, was one of the initial workers who eventually got a bill through Congress to control foreign imports of beef, working hand-in-hand with Jay Taylor of Amarillo.

McCasland's father, Frank A. McCasland, was also honored by the USDA in Washington for his advisory support in forming and writing the Agricultural Adjustment Act (AAA) of 1933, a legislative move that changed American agriculture forever.

Now in retirement in a sprawling ranch-style home overlooking Tierra Blanca Creek, McCasland and his wife, Alina, travel extensively throughout the world, but in recent times, the two have frequently reflected on a lifetime of work...and pleasant moments here and there.

The McCasland's luxurious home is somewhat removed from their beginning in a one-room wooden shack on a dryland farm out west of Grady, N.M. And for extra room for hired hands or company, the young New Mexico couple boasted a single-wall wooden room connected to their living quarters with a makeshift walk-way. This was the farm life-style of Eastern New Mexico in the Great Depression of the 1930s.

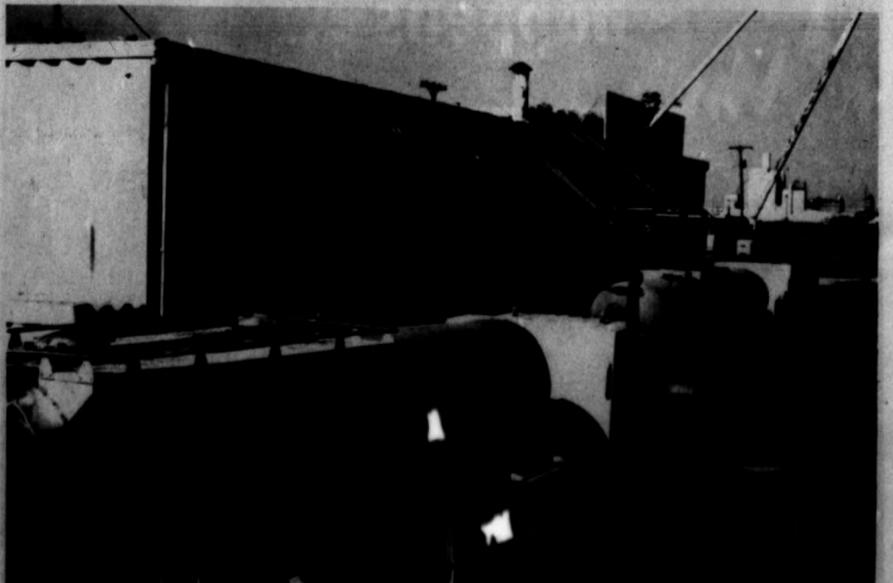

"We didn't even own a car or pickup for two years after we were married," recalled McCasland. "Alina would pull our cream and eggs to the mailbox with a small wagon where the rural mail-carrier would load up the stuff and take it in to Clovis."

McCasland grinned a bit as he recalled how the mail-carrier would also do their grocery shopping in Clovis, then the following day he would return the empty cream can, empty egg case, groceries and what money was left over—"The whole thing didn't amount to about $8, but you know what, we actually saved money during those years."

Born on a farm about 7 miles northwest of Grady in 1920, McCasland's parents were well-established in Eastern New Mexico farming circles by the time he came along. Having arrived in this neck of the woods in 1907 from Mills County, Texas, Mr. and Mrs. F.A. McCasland selected this particular area due to the supply of cedar wood in the nearby Caprock breaks.

"Dad used to gang two wagons and go to the breaks and chop wood," said McCasland. "He'd haul it to Clovis 50 miles away where he generally got $2 a load. But along with the wood he'd have a couple of dressed deer which he'd sell for about $2 apiece...that meant $8 dollars a trip."

By the 1920s, H.A. McCasland had become the largest mule producer of the Southwest, sending thousands of yearling mules to Midwest markets by rail—"I remember one time Dad weaned 99 yearling mule colts, then trailed them to San Jon for shipment to Missouri."

Born and reared in the Ruth Community out north of Clovis, Mrs. McCasland met her husband-to-be when many of the small community schools began to merge and Grady wound up with the lion's share of students. At this point in time, Mrs. McCasland's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rutherford, were known as the largest farmers in Curry County. After graduating from Grady High School in 1937, Z and Aline were married in 1937 and set up housekeeping on a 480-acre farm about a mile from his parents' old homestead.

The first years were tough--the sound of a John Deere tractor from daylight to dark and the swish of a milk cow's tail in between. On one occasion, Aline cooked three meals a day for a silage cutting crew of 25 for more than two weeks. In those days, the green fodder was first cut with a binder, then the bundles hauled by wagon to a stationary silage cutter that finally funneled the feed into a pit. The crew slept on the open ground around the farmyard--some had bedrolls, some didn't. The McCaslands, as businessmen sometimes says, "Put it together."

In 1948, the McCaslands moved to Clovis where he plunged headlong into the cattle buying and yearling business, not only expanding his Grady operation into a sizable farm/livestock unit, but also developing properties to the south of Clovis. That same year, McCasland and partners built the Ranchers and Farmers Livestock Commission Co., and auction center that became a major cattle market for the next 25 years.

The 1950s saw McCasland move into the fertilizer business and the registered Angus business, along with heavy investments in the Thoroughbred and Quarter Horse racing industry. But it was the fertilizer move that paved the way for Shur-Gro.

McCasland had bought the old Sunshine Plant Food operation at Clovis, a manure dehydrating unit, when he and Bob Schiller met by chance at a meeting in Las Cruces. "Bob wanted to know if I'd be interested in going into the liquid fertilizer business and this led to other talks," recalled McCasland. The two formed a partnership that was to last for the next 15 years.

Expansion was the name of the game for Skaggs, Schiller and McCasland in the 1960s. McCasland already had a farm south of Clovis that held seven overhead Valley sprinklers as something as a showcase for their business. Then, he had the StateLine Farms south of Lariat, Tx., where his foreman, Curly Mardis, earlier had developed the first cost-of-train feeding records on feedlot cattle in New Mexico. Mardis is still one of the key employees at Shur-Gro.

"No one had ever thought about figuring out a cost-of-gain on feeder cattle in New Mexico until Curly put that program together in around 1948," said McCasland. "We had always just fed our cattle until our feed was gone and then sold them." The New Mexico State University at Las Cruces later patterned a research program after McCasland's StateLine operation.

The Shur-Gro partnership then wrapped up the 30,000-acre Weymouth Ranch on the Canadian River north of Amarillo into a leased package, then moved into South Dakota where they eventually owned and leased around 112,000 acres on two sides of Pierre.

Then, on a snowy winter day in 1973, tragedy struck the partnership at the summit of a small hill 30 miles west of Pierre--Bob Schiller and their Dakota ranch manager, Don Fleming, were killed in a head-on car crash that also claimed the life of three women in a second car. Investigators said the west-bound women were attempting to pass a truck on the hill when they crashed into eastbound Schiller and Fleming who were returning from their Two Rivers Ranch. Schiller's wife, Polly, was awaiting for their return in a motel room in Pierre.

At this point in time, the Shur-Gro group had more than 30,000 head of stockers and feeders scattered across a half dozen states and in 28 commercial feedyards. Skaggs and McCasland gradually became accustomed to running the far-flung operations without Schiller, but it wasn't easy--the Clovis cattleman had been a dynamic force in the Shur-Gro partnership.

Though the Skaggs continue to operate Shur-Gro on the front burner, The McCaslands move in a more relaxed pace of life, reflecting on the lifestyles of their sons, Don, Billy and Lynn, and sometimes spending an evening with friends at the Hereford Country Club. Their Hereford home, purchased in 1988, is adorned with oil paintings by Aline who worked in art for many years, but never sold a painting--"I have always painted just for the pleasure of painting."

McCasland and Skaggs readily admit that the city of Hereford has had its problems in recent years, but that the area has a great future if the local people will link together in a unified move:

"You must think big things happen...and that's what we need--someone to think big."

Your Community

Why shop at home?

We hear it over and over: Shop at home. Support your local merchants. But why? Why shop here when I can drive a few miles and get better selections at lower prices? Why should I spend my money with them -- what do they do for me?

As a matter of fact, the local merchants -- your neighbors -- do a lot for you. They pay a disproportionate share of your taxes, helping educate your children, pave your streets, pay for your fire and police protection. They are the ones who serve on the councils and boards, work in the Chamber and the churches and the civic clubs, sponsor the Little League teams. Without them, a lot of the good things you enjoy about this community simply would not be here.

But they don't want your business out of a sense of duty -- they want to earn it. Before you assume that prices are better in the city, check them out. This area has stores that offer quality merchandise at prices competitive with anyone's. They can earn your business in other ways, too: through better service, a personal attention to your needs, knowing your name, treating you like a friend.

Just the fact that they're closer is worth a lot. When you drive to the city, consider all your expenses like gas, wear and tear on your car, parking, etc. The more you think about it, the better your hometown merchants begin to look.

Local businesses, like a local newspaper, help give a community its identity. Without them, you'd be driving to the city every time you need something, standing in lines, sitting in traffic, wishing you were home.

If you value your community, shop at home every chance you get. We all need each other.

Alcohol can damage fetus

Avoid alcohol if you're pregnant or planning a pregnancy, warns the Texas Medical Association. Even a small amount of alcohol in some mothers can cause mental retardation, brain damage, or other abnormalities in the baby. Ironically, fetal alcohol syndrome, the third-leading cause of mental retardation in the United States, is completely preventable.

With April designated as National Alcohol Awareness Month, TMA emphasizes the dangers of alcohol on unborn babies. "Alcohol is a neurotoxin," said Anthony Lucci, M.D., a Houston obstetrician who serves on TMA's Committee on Maternal and Child Health. That means alcohol acts as a poison on the brain and central nervous system.

It doesn't matter whether it's beer, wine, or liquor, he said. "It's the amount of alcohol in the drink." A glass of wine, a can of beer, and a mixed drink all contain about the same amount.

When a pregnant woman drinks, the alcohol goes from her stomach into her bloodstream, and passes directly to the fetus, easily crossing the placenta to the baby's bloodstream.

Fetal alcohol syndrome, caused by heavy drinking, is characterized by mental retardation, heart defects, facial deformities, and small body size. Studies indicate that even moderate drinking during early pregnancy can impair the child's intellectual ability. The effects of light drinking have not been proven. So far, a "safe" amount to drink during pregnancy hasn't been determined.

"We really don't know the toxic effect of alcohol on the fetal brain," observed Dr. Lucci, because setting up proper research conditions in the womb is difficult. Because the outcome is so uncertain, "it's best to eliminate alcohol entirely during pregnancy," he said. Combining alcohol with smoking, overexertion, and other stresses makes damage to the baby even more likely, Dr. Lucci added.

Not drinking is important even when planning a pregnancy. Studies indicate that alcohol may be linked to sperm count and sperm quality in the father, as well as miscarriage in the mother.

During the first weeks after conception, embryonic cells are dividing rapidly and vital organs, such as the brain, are forming. Thus, the fetus is especially vulnerable at a time when many women don't even know they are pregnant. Organ formation and neurological development in the baby continue during the middle three months of pregnancy, making that another critical period. The last three months are a less hazardous time, although not risk free.

The Texas Medical Association is a professional organization of more than 29,000 physician and medical student members. It is based in Austin and has 117 component county medical societies around the state. The Association represents more than 80 percent of the state's physicians, and its goal is to improve the health of Texans through the professional and personal development of its members.

Tips given for reading labels

NEW YORK (AP) - Confused about the nutrition information on food labels? The American Dietetic Association in Chicago offers the following tips:

BEATING FAT TRAPS
- Nutritionists suggest that no more than 30 percent of your daily calories come from fat. A fast way to calculate 30 percent fat calories: for every 100 calories, there should be no more than 3 grams of fat.

- Saturated fats are cholesterol-raising culprits often buried in an ingredient list. Check for coconut oil, palm kernel oil, palm oil, vegetable shortening, hydrogenated oils, lard, bacon, chicken fat, beef fat, tallow, butter or any animal fat.

- Don't assume that "low cholesterol" means low in fat. For example, vegetable oils have no cholesterol but have 100 percent fat calories.

- Remember with meat and dairy labeling: the percentage of fat by weight does not reflect fat calories. For example, whole milk is 96 percent fat-free by weight, but still gets 50 percent of calories from fat.

CARBOHYDRATES AND FAT
- Foods with 3 or more grams of dietary fiber per serving are good fiber sources.
- Check cereal boxes for sugar content; less than 5 grams of sucrose and related sugars is acceptable. One teaspoon is about 5 grams.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Diabetes is the leading cause of blindness in the U.S., with 6,000 new cases of severe visual impairment occurring each year. The cause of blindness, called diabetic retinopathy, is often exacerbated by pregnancy.

C.R. WALSER

C.R. Walser celebrates 102 birthday

Six generations helped C.R. Walser of Hereford celebrate his 102 birthday recently with a dinner at the American Legion Hall.

Charlie Walser was born on March 26, 1888, in Montague County, Texas. He spent part of his childhood there, moving to the Chillicothe area in 1903. He married Della Lance on Dec. 20, 1908, in Chillicothe. They were married in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Lance.

In 1917, Charlie and his brother S.L. (Fate) Walser moved their families northwest of Hereford to the Summerfield community. They moved their household goods by covered wagon and train. Charlie then returned and brought his family to their new home by Model-T-car.

Charlie was active in the community as a school board member and a deacon of the Summerfield Baptist Church which he helped build.

In 1954, Charlie and Della leased their farm and bought a home on Star St. in Hereford. Della died on Jan. 13, 1974, after a long illness. In 1978, Charlie sold his farm to Kenneth Christie of Hereford.

Charlie took his first airplane ride at the age of 100. He referred to the flight as not being any different from getting off horseback, buggy, covered wagon, model-T-cars or trains.

Today Charlie still lives in his home on Star St. along with his son, D.C. He visits the coffee shop twice a day, the Ranch House in the morning and the Dairy Queen in the afternoon.

Jessica Laruen Baird, one-month-old daughter of Shane and Lori Purcell Baird of Briscoe and the 102 direct descent of Mr. Walser, was there to help her great-great-grandfather celebrate his birthday. She is the granddaughter of Mac and Gay Purcell of Briscoe, the great-granddaughter of Gene and Bobbie (Walser) Purcell and great-great-granddaughter of Guy Walser of Summerfield.

There were 92 present for the celebration dinner, 72 which were direct descendants, including four of Charlie's children: Leatrus Clark, D.C. Walser, W.H. Walser and Guy Walser. Also, attending were Guy's children and their families, except for Dervan Baker of New York and Luke Baker of Beaver, Okla. Post-nuptial shower held for Shea Long Shea McGinty Long, bride of Gary Long, was honored with a post-nuptial shower March 31 in the home of Eloise Smith, 208 Kingwood.

Guests were welcomed by the honoree, Mrs. Pat McGinty, Ann Patterson and Marlene Long.

Susan Bell, Susan Gage and Venus Herbertson served refreshments of almond tea, coffee, assorted melons and fruit, petite sweet rolls and sausage and cheese balls.

The refreshment table was covered with an antique lace cloth and was centered by a plant which was later given to the shower honoree. Accents of cream and country blue, the bride's chosen colors, also enhanced the table decorations.

A set of Revere ware pans were given to the honoree from hostesses: Judy Mitts, Eloise Smith, Reni Mason, Shelly Moss, Becky Broadstreet, Carol Gage, Marilyn Bell, Betty Martin and Kay Redwine.

Woman's Health

Does your gynecologist ever use medical terms that you don't understand? Like other specialists, we become so familiar with our own lingo that we sometimes forget that people who don't use these words every day don't always know what they mean. Here is a list of some gynecologic terms to help you become better informed about matters relating to your personal health:

1. Endometriosis: A condition in which tissue similar to the uterine lining grows outside the uterus, usually in the ovaries, fallopian tubes, and other pelvic structures.

2. Ectopic Pregnancy: A pregnancy involving implantation and growth of the fertilized egg in a place other than in the cavity of the uterus, most often in one of the fallopian tubes. Ectopic pregnancy is dangerous and can cause abnormal bleeding and pelvic pain.

3. Speculum: An instrument that doctors use to spread the walls of the vagina to view the cervix.

4. Hysterectomy: Surgical removal of a woman's uterus.

5. Laparoscopy: A procedure to view the reproductive organs using a slender telescope-like instrument inserted through a small slit in the abdomen.

6. Fibroids (also called myomas, fibromyomas, leiomyomas or fibromas): Noncancerous growths that occur in the uterus—on the inner lining, on the outer surface, or within the uterine wall.

7. Dysplasia: Abnormal microscopic appearance of cells. Dysplasia is often used to describe a condition of abnormal cells on the surface of the cervix. If left untreated dysplasia may become more severe and could eventually progress to cancer.

8. Biopsy: Surgical removal of a small piece of tissue for microscopic examination.

9. Mammography: An X-ray examination of the breast to detect breast cancer.

10. Menarche: The first menstrual period which occurs in puberty.

11. Amenorrhea: The absence of menstrual periods.

12. Dysmenorrhea: Discomfort or pain during the menstrual period.

13. Osteoporosis: A condition in which the bones become fragile and weak because of calcium loss. Osteoporosis most often occurs among postmenopausal women.

14. Tubal Ligation: A sterilization method which involves closing off the fallopian tubes to prevent fertilization.

15. Dilation and Curettage (D and C): A procedure in which the cervix is dilated and tissue is gently scraped or suctioned from the lining of the uterus, usually to diagnose and treat abnormal vaginal bleeding or other problems with the reproductive organs.

These are just some of the gynecologic terms that you might encounter. If there are other words that you don't understand, next time you visit your doctor, be sure to ask!

Women's Division to meet

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 5, in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library.

Members and guests are encouraged to attend.

NARFE meeting scheduled

Members of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees will meet at 1 p.m. Thursday, April 5, in the Hereford Senior Citizens Center, 426 Ranger Drive.

According to Argen Draper, NARFE Chapter #1300 president, membership will review the proceedings of the District 12 Convention held in March.

Also, concerns of the state and federal association will be discussed. There is vital legislation pending that will affect civilian and military retirees.

The federal retirees, as well as those who will retire soon, are urged to attend the Thursday meeting.

Bride honored at shower

A post-nuptial shower was held for Shea McGinty Long, bride of Gary Long, March 31 in the home of Eloise Smith, 208 Kingwood. Greeting guests with Mrs. Long were, from left, Marlene Long, mother of the groom; Patsy McGinty, mother of the bride; and Ann Patterson, grandmother of the bride.

April Cancer Control Month

"Although April is well-known for being the month when income taxes are due, it's also the month when residents of Deaf Smith County get important health information that may save their lives," said Nicky Walker, this year's annual American Cancer Society's Campaign Drive chairman for the DSC Unit.

The walk-a-block drive is planned from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, April 29. Numerous volunteers for the ACS will call on friends and neighbors and give them life-saving information about cancer prevention and detection.

"April is Cancer Control Month," Walser explained, adding that the ACS uses this opportunity to distribute literature and raise funds for its research, service and education programs. Assisting with the annual drive for 1990 will be members of the Hereford Pilot Club, the three Beta Sigma Phi Sorority Chapters, the Hospital Auxiliary and the La Madre Mia Study Club.

The focus of this year's educational campaign is nutrition. The Society's recommendations on how diet can affect one's cancer risk are included in a special folder which will be given to residents.

"We know that, by adding certain foods to your diet, you may help reduce your cancer risk. Good foods include those containing fiber, vitamins A and C, and especially the cabbage family—broccoli, cauliflower, and brussels sprouts," Walser said. "And, by eating less of other foods, like high-fat foods, you may reduce your risk." Walser added, though, that one of the most important steps in avoiding cancer is to stop smoking.

Pre-enrollment being held

Pre-enrollment for the 1990-91 school term at St. Anthony's School is being held. Openings are available in grades 1-5 as well as the four-years-old pre-school and five-years-old kindergarten through Tuesday, April 10.

The pre-school is a three mornings a week program and the kindergarten is a five mornings a week program.

For more information, call Ann Lueb, principal, at 364-1952 or come by the school office at 120 W. Park Ave. during office hours from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. during the week.

Writers fascinated by gardens

Gardens have fascinated great writers throughout history. They have seen them as secret, enchanted, holy, romantic and usually as being essential to man's spiritual well-being.
It is easy for us in the 20th century—especially those of us living in cities—to forget that before the industrial revolution, man was in constant contact with plants and depended on them for food, medicine, and even shelter. Each plant has hundreds, sometime thousands of years of myths and folklore in it history which, with the exception of a few famous plants such as mistletoe and hemlock, we have all but forgotten.
The nature of nature is delicate. Plants are fragile, their beauty temporary, and their predators numerous. It is no wonder gardeners fret and worry like mother hens over their seedlings or that men are preoccupied by the fear of losing what is perishable. The culmination of this fear lies in the story of the garden of Eden, in which man not only loses his floral paradise, he is cast out.
Unfortunately, man's uneasy feeling that he himself is at fault for losing his fertile green surroundings has not been abated by history, since he continues to abuse his dwindling environment to this day.
Sir William Temple said, "If we believe the scripture, we must allow that God Almighty esteemed the life of a man in a garden the happiest He could give him, or else He would not have placed Adam in that Eden."
Long ago, great rulers such as Nebuchadnezzar used the magnificence of their gardens as a measure of their powers. Louis XIV had Versailles, and, as an elementary school student whose teacher had a penchant for memorization knows: In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure-dome decree:
Where Alph, the sacred river ran
Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea

myrrh,
Lean-stalked, purple lavender;
Hides within her bosom, too,
All her sorrows, bitter rue.
If everyone is in charge of his own little plot, there is room for self-expression, as in this passage from Little Women by Louisa May Alcott.
The garden had to be put in order, and each sister had a quarter of the little plot to do what she liked with...for the girls' tastes differed as much as their character. Meg had roses and heliotrope, myrtle and a little orange tree in it. Jo's bed was never alike two seasons, for she was always trying experiments. This year it was to be a plantation of sunflowers...Beth had old-fashioned, fragrant flowers in her garden—sweet peas and mignonette, larkspur, pinks, pansies, and southernwood, with chickweed for the birds and catnip for the pussies. Amy had a bower in hers...

It is a place for fantasy, self-examination, or romance in history. But what of the modern garden? Confined to tiny pots or window boxes, few gardens have the room to express the personality, far less the spiritual grandeur of the garden-er.
Yet to our little Edens, each of us is lord, and we can recall lost arcades as F. Scott Fitzgerald captured his lost generation when he wrote of the Great Gatsby's garden:
"There was music from my neighbor's house through the summer nights. In his blue gardens, man and girl came and went like moths among the whisperings and the champagne and the stars."

Hints given for tax time

Do you toss your W-2 form into a drawer in January, then despair as the April 16 filing deadline approaches? A little organization can save you a lot of worry.
The best way to be ready for the IRS is to keep good records throughout the year. An effective method for keeping records is to use a Tax-saver envelope or Tax Record Book.
If you have not kept your records current, look for documents and records to substantiate deductions and credits you may claim. A thorough search through you check register, receipts, and documents will result in your paying the lowest amount of tax possible.
The following checklist will guide you in your search for records of income, deductions, and credits:

Remember, this represents only a partial listing of available deductions and credits. Because the Tax Reform Act of 1986 reduced the number of deductions and credits, it's more important than ever to be aware of the deductions and credits that remain.
After you have all your records and the IRS tax booklet, you are ready to begin. You may want to contact the IRS for a copy of their book, Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax. IRS also has copies of the additional schedules you may need to complete your tax return. A number of commercially published tax workbooks are available for you to buy as well. If the changing tax laws and new tax forms and schedules or your own tax situation confuses you, you may want to seek help from an experienced tax preparer.
Whether you prepare your own tax return or seek outside help, file early and avoid the last-minute rush before the April 16 deadline. You will receive your refund sooner if you're eligible for a refund. If you were required to make estimated tax payments during the year, you do not have to pay the January 15 installment if you file your return by January 31. Also, the penalty for any underpayment stops on the date of payment.
In any case, be sure to file your return or a request for an extension by the April 16 deadline. IRS generally assesses stiff penalties on taxpayers who owe taxes and file their returns late. If you cannot pay the tax due, file your return on or before April 16. You will be charged interest and possibly a penalty on the unpaid taxes, but you won't have to pay a late filing penalty.

1. You should be able to substantiate all income received during the year: income from each of your employers, as reflected on your W-2s; income from jury duty, hobbies, casual labor, unemployment compensation, or the sale of stock or other property during the year.
2. Money received from rents, royalties, pensions, prizes, and tips.
3. Interest earned on savings account investments.
4. Dividends received from money market mutual funds, stock mutual funds, and corporate securities.
5. Costs of home improvements if you sold your personal residence.
6. Records of items eligible for deductions, medical insurance premiums, other medical and dental expenses, interest paid on your home mortgage, personal loans, and credit cards.
7. Amounts paid for child care while you work (or look for work if you have some earned income), name, address, and tax identification number of the child care provider.
8. Charitable contributions and contributions to an IRA or Keogh plan.
9. Real estate and personal property taxes.
10. Union or professional dues, employment agency fees, educational expenses incurred to improve your job skills, tax preparation fees, and investment expenses.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: We lost a beautiful 18-year-old granddaughter to Addison's disease. Two years ago she was hospitalized for dehydration and flu or virus. She was so fatigued she could barely walk. The doctor said she was a very immature teenager and should see a psychiatrist. She had been a top honor student until her junior year when she didn't have the energy to get out of bed in the morning. She couldn't seem to study. She started failing and did not graduate with her class in her senior year.

We got annoyed with her because the doctors said nothing was wrong. She lost 16 pounds and weighed only 105 although she was 5 feet 5 inches.

Our son and his wife took her to live with them and finish her school. She had a physical before school started. She wrote her brother that her legs hurt and she was so tired she felt as if she were dead. Then she died in her sleep.

Her knees and knuckles were bronzed, typical of the disease and no one discovered it. What a waste. What can you tell us about this disease?

DEAR READER: It is such a shame to see a young life wasted and I feel for you.

Addison's disease is caused by disease of the adrenal cortex — the outer shell of the adrenal gland that rests over each kidney. This gland forms the adrenal steroids (corticosteroids) which are vital to life. They affect the salt and water balance of the body and glucose metabolism and form some sex hormones. Steroids have a bad public perception because of their abuse in athletics and body building, but the steroids produced by the adrenal gland are essential for life.

The loss of regulation of salt and water causes the dehydration you mentioned. That can lead to shock. Patients usually crave and use lots of salt. Fatigue is a major symptom.

As the disease progresses, the skin may become much more pigmented, as with the bronzing of the knuckles and knees you mentioned.

I have discussed what adrenal steroids do and the effects of too much (Cushing's disease) and too little in Special Issue 34-04, Your Vital Adrenal Steroids (Corticosteroids), which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send $2 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/34-04, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.
