Farmers happy with moisture from snow

From Staff and Wire Reports

A cold front that dumped a foot or more of snow in the Texas Panhandle left Hereford with a 10-inch blanket by Saturday morning and the National Weather Service warned that more was to come late Saturday and through Sunday.

Farmers in the area were pleased with the storm, which is the area's first significant moisture since Dec. 13.

Travelers advisories remained in effect for hazardous highway conditions as forecasters predicted more accumulations.

The front stretched from the Longview area southwest to near Laredo, the National Weather Service said. Skies were cloudy ahead of the front, along with a few showers over South Texas. Patches of dense fog dotted the Coastal Bend and the lower Rio Grande valley.

The winter storm produced near-blizzard conditions in sections of the Texas Panhandle, leaving trucks jackknifed and motorists stranded along highways. Winds of 15 to 20 mph produced near-blizzard conditions at Vega and many cities reported that a foot or more of snow fell Friday.

A high-pressure ridge pumped very cold air into the state behind the front and brought cloudy skies.

Early-morning temperatures dropped into the teens across the Panhandle. Hereford's overnight low on Saturday morning was 16.

Readings in the Midland-Odessa area were in the 20s while most of the rest of North and West Texas had readings in the 30s. Other temperatures ranged from the 40s in extreme East and South Central Texas to the 60s in the Rio Grande valley and Coastal Bend.

Winds were northerly at 10 to 20 mph throughout most of Texas.

It should remain cloudy and cold statewide through Sunday with chances of snow in the Panhandle and all sections of West Texas. Rain mixed with snow was expected in North Texas with rain and drizzle across South Texas and freezing drizzle possible in the Hill Country.

The Texas Department of Public Safety reported that I-40 was closed from just west of Amarillo to Albuquerque, N.M. Several trucks jackknifed 16 miles inside the Texas state line and some people had been marooned briefly, according to a DPS spokesman.

Amarillo police said many bridges in that city were partially blocked by wrecked or stalled vehicles.

Snowfall by Saturday morning included 8 to 9 inches in Pampa; 6 to 8 inches in Canadian; 8 inches in White Deer, Panhandle and Claude; and 7 inches in Miami.

Drifts reported at 4 feet

A spot-check of county residents found most roads passable on Saturday morning, but teen temperatures overnight caused slickened streets and roads.

Clint Homfeld in the northwest corner of Deaf Smith County reported the least snow, 5 inches, but wind-sculpted drifts were as deep as 4 feet.

Dawn, Summerfield, Westway and Walcott all reported from 8 to 10 inches of snow with drifts of 4 feet in Westway and Walcott.

Cuts will continue while awaiting appeal on ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders say there will be no letup in pressure to reduce the federal deficit while awaiting Supreme Court review of a ruling striking down a central provision of the new budget balancing law.

"Ultimately, the budget process may go from automatic pilot back to stick shift," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., who helped draft the law, the Gramm-Rudman Act. "But the destination will remain the same — significant deficit reductions this year."

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., who is leading the legal challenge to the measure, agreed.

"Our goal in this litigation is not to avoid tough choices," he said. "The American people won't let us ignore the deficits even if we wanted to."

A special three-judge federal court Friday declared unconstitutional the law's core provision forcing automatic spending cuts to balance the budget by 1991. The court said the separation between the executive and the legislative branches of government was violated by the act.

Supporters of Gramm-Rudman immediately announced they will appeal to the Supreme Court and some predicted a high court ruling by late spring.

Friday's ruling will not block the first $11.7 billion round of spending cuts under the law to take effect March 1. The law bars any interference with the reductions until the Supreme Court has acted.

Gramm-Rudman calls for a deeper, second round of cuts to take effect at the start of the next fiscal year Oct. 1 if the deficit — now an estimated $208 billion — exceeds $144 billion.

President Reagan this week submitted a budget that calls for a deficit under $144 billion without increasing taxes. It would slash domestic programs while increasing defense spending and has received an icy reception in Capitol Hill.

The Gramm-Rudman law calls for across-the-board cuts to be divided

Snow, Snow Everywhere

City street workers piled now in the middle of the streets before hauling it out of town in dump trucks Friday. Hereford received 10 inches of snow, which will melt to about an inch of moisture, the first significant precipitation since Dec. 13. The forecast called for snow to continue through Sunday.

Haitians celebrate Duvalier's abdication

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The new military-civilian council imposed a curfew as Haitians rejoiced over the flight of Jean-Claude Duvalier, and 10 members of the departed ruler's militia were reported slain in revenge killings.

The 2 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew was put into effect Friday after Duvalier left Haiti aboard a U.S. Air Force plane for France. The so-called president-for-life's departure ended 28 years of Duvalier family rule in this impoverished Caribbean nation.

Reporters who went to Port-au-Prince cemetery said the coffin of Duvalier's father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, who ruled with an iron fist for 14 years beginning in 1957, was pulled from its tomb and broken into by a crowd.

A skull presumably that of "Papa Doc" was held up and paraded about.

In Port-au-Prince, crowds turned on militiamen, known as Tonton Macoutes, and pelted them with fruit and vegetables. Businesses and at least one government ministry were looted.

Haitians also looted two buildings near the National Palace they said belonged to the militia. Throughout the capital, the militiamen appeared scared and confused, and shouted at each other to stick together and head to the barracks.

Foreign journalists who spoke on condition they not be identified reported 10 militiamen killed and dismembered by machete in revenge attacks. Worried about increasing violence, the five-member military-civilian council imposed the curfew, which was enforced by police and the army.

The council was recognized quickly by foreign governments. Shortly after noon Friday, 21 ambassadors, including U.S. envoy Clayton E. McManaway, Jr., were formally presented to the council at the government palace.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jeffrey Lite said, "The embassy is in touch with the members of the new government, has known these individuals previously and is looking forward to working with them."

The estimated 6,000 Americans currently in Haiti were advised to stay indoors, Lite said.

Haitians were informed of Duvalier's departure by a taped message broadcast on national television at 7:20 a.m., almost four hours after he had gone.

France has offered Duvalier, 34, only temporary refuge. A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Paris said he would be allowed to stay in France only until another country could be found to grant him sanctuary.

Duvalier was persuaded to step down in part by Jamaica and the United States, the Jamaican government said Friday.

Neville Gallimore, Jamaica's minister of social security and a special emissary of Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga, told Duvalier that "a violent conflict was imminent" if he tried to resist popular opposition to his rule, the where communist insurgents are active.

As the vote-counting proceeded, there were continuing charges of irregularities stemming from reports of voter intimidation, vote-buying and ballot-box switching.

Sen. Richard Lugar, leader of a 20-member U.S. delegation of election observers, accused Marcos of holding back vote results from Manila, where Mrs. Aquino is strongest, in order to "shape the returns."

"My own political judgment is that the government concluded the results from Manila would not be good," said Lugar, R-Ind.

(See ELECTION, Page 2A)

Jamaican government said in a statement.

U.S. Ambassador McManaway participated with Gallimore in the secret talks, Jamaica said. There was no immediate confirmation from U.S. Embassy officials.

Duvalier's departure before dawn set off a wild celebration in the streets of Port-au-Prince. "He flew away, he flew away," crowds chanted in front of the gleaming white National Palace, where the council was installed to a 21-gun salute.

"Long live the army, down with the Macoutes," shouted thousands who danced and waved the pre-Duvalier blue-and-red Haitian flags. They also carried branches, which in Haiti are believed to banish evil spirits from the body.

Army chief of staff Gen. Henri Namphy, who heads the new national council, appealed on television for "calm and serenity."

New Orleans prepares for 'big block party'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Three days before Fat Tuesday, tourists were already flooding into town, merchants were checking their stocks of liquor to make sure they have enough and police were readying the long arms of the law.

Roll up, roll up for the greatest free show on Earth — Mardi Gras is back in town.

"I'm going to be partying like crazy like everyone else," said Geoffrey Warner, a 27-year-old toolmaker who came from Adelaide, Australia, for what he hopes will be the wildest few days of his life.

Warner is among more than a million people expected to jam the streets of New Orleans and its suburbs for the world's biggest block party Tuesday, the day that gives its name in French — Mardi Gras, or Fat Tuesday — to the whole kit and caboodle.

Tuesday is the last day before Ash Wednesday and the religious season of Lent, which commemorates the 40 days of fasting that Jesus spent in the wilderness.

There's a little something for everyone — contests for best-costumed families to the naughty, but popular Gay Beauty Pageant in the heart of the French Quarter.

For once each year, the jugglers, clowns, magicians and musicians are forced off the most heavily traveled of the quarter's streets.

In their place, a sea of humanity takes over.

Aquino leading, final election results not expected for days

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Corazon Aquino edged ahead of President Ferdinand E. Marcos in the government's own election tally Saturday, and said she would call upon Marcos for an "orderly transfer" of the power he has held for 20 years.

The Commission on Elections said its latest count at 2:30 p.m. (1:30 a.m. EST) showed the 53-year-old widow of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino ahead of Marcos with a 51.39 percent lead.

The nine-member elections body known as Comelec, whose members are appointed by Marcos, said the early count totaled 4.16 percent of the approximately 26 million votes cast in Friday's election, the first really two-sided Philippines presidential race in years.

Critics cautioned, however, that the lead for Mrs. Aquino could evaporate as the slow-moving and confused tabulations continue. In addition to the official tally, by Comelec, non-governmental organizations were counting votes and coming up with widely varying figures.

There are more than 80,000 voting stations across this island nation of 55 million, and final figures are not expected for days.

Authorities said at least 30 people were killed in Friday election day unrest, including nine national police officers on the island of Mindanao

WALL STREET'S WORST DAYS

The stock market began the new year with the steepest drop in points by the Dow Jones Industrial Average since the start of the Depression. In percentage, though, the Jan. 8 drop was much smaller than the big plunge of 1929.

RULING

equally between domestic and military spending.

Politicians from both parties, along with Reagan, were unanimous in their resolve to cut spending, regardless of the Gramm-Rudman ruling.

Reagan said the decision "does not invalidate" the law "nor does it diminish the determination of this administration — or the responsibility of Congress" to meet the deficit reduction targets.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "I don't believe this lets anybody off the hook. The politics would dictate we make the hard choices."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia agreed.

"Three cheers for the federal court system," added Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass. "Now Congress can turn its attention to sensible ways of reducing the deficit based on our national priorities rather than arbitrary formulas."

The three-judge court eliminated the automatic deficit-reduction feature of Gramm-Rudman on grounds it violates constitutionally mandated separation of powers between the president and Congress.

The ruling on that issue was a victory for the Reagan administration. But the court rejected the administration argument that individual members of Congress lack legal standing to challenge the law.

The court left intact a "fallback" provision of Gramm-Rudman that requires Congress itself to vote "yes" or "no" annually on a spending-cut target.

The panel said it is unconstitutional to delegate the task of ordering deficit reduction to the comptroller general, who heads Congress' watchdog agency, the General Accounting Office.

In TWU dormitory

Young family adjusts to life

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Rolling up his shirt sleeves, Donald Fiser prepares to scramble two eggs for his daughter, Carmella Marie, in the doll-size apartment kitchen. Carmella Faye, his wife, sits inches away and tries to steal a few more minutes to study before her first class.

Mrs. Fiser puts her book down to help get the 3-and-a-half-year-old bundled up for the morning drizzle. Then the family packs up their necessities for the start of a new day, pass out three-way good-bye kisses and leave to take care of their responsibilities.

The Fisers' morning activities may be typical for many families going to work and school each morning. Their living arrangement at Mary Hufford Hall, a Texas Woman's University dormitory, is anything but typical.

The family housing program, a program designed to house married or single parents, was one of the reasons Mrs. Fiser, an occupational therapy graduate student, chose TWU.

"When I wrote to the college asking about the OT program, they informed me of the family dorm," Mrs. Fiser said. "I really like it. There are other children for Carmella to play with, and I can watch her on the playground from the window when I'm here studying. We pay $275 a month and the utilities are paid. It's hard to beat that."

Fiser, a sales counselor for the Racquetball and Health Resorts International, agrees the rent is desirable even if the cramped living area isn't. "The smallest of the apartment is the most difficult thing to get used to. You're always bumping into something, and you have to move one thing to get to something else," he said.

Moving from Little Rock, Ark., the Fisers have had this arrangement since September. "I should graduate in '87, and I plan to stay here until then," Mrs. Fiser said. "If there had not been a dorm like this, I guess I would have come as a traditional student."

As far as the university policies are concerned, Mrs. Fiser is a traditional student, even if she is a 27-year-old wife and mother.

"We can't have liquor in the room. We have to have our rooms inspected every month. We have to sign our guests in and out, and male visitors have to leave their IDs at the front desk," Mrs. Fiser said. "Some of the residents are fighting it, mostly the single parents. My courses are too demanding for me to spend the time fighting it."

Because there are traditional students living in a facility with married couples and single moms, a few problems can arise. "The complaints work both ways," said Les Anne Dant, a graduate resident director at the dorm. "The traditional students complain about the kids making too much noise sometimes, and the parents complain that the traditional students get too noisy at night and awaken the children, but that's not too often."

Another problem at the dorm is the toys that are sometimes left out. "Some of our residents are in wheelchairs, and it is difficult to negotiate around toys," Ms. Dant said.

"There are 20 children ranging in age from 10 months to 12 years," Ms. Dant continued. "We have about 16 families living here. The majority of the students are traditional. I think there is a good relationship between the traditional and the non-traditional students. Some of the students are like big brothers and big sisters to the kids. The biggest problem is trying to mix such a variety.

"The kids seem to enjoy it though. On Saturday mornings, they're out early. They come over with a bowl of cereal and watch TV here in the living room. They have TVs in their rooms, but they just want to come over here," she said.

When bad weather puts a stop to outside play on the teeter-totter or the swing set, an inside play area makes a good substitute.

"We've tried to make things work for everyone. I know the rules and regulations are hard for the older students to live with, but they have to be the same for everyone," Ms. Dant said.

"Traditional students want these policies changed, too. I am presently a chairperson on a committee to study the needs of the population. Thirty percent of the students that go to TWU are family people. In order to accommodate, we're going to have to change as we grow."

Nancy Murphy-Chadwick, director of housing at TWU, said there are "still a lot of kinks" in the program. "This is our third year now. Our goal is to convert the entire building to apartments," Ms. Chadwick said. "We have a large percentage of returning students who have families, so we get a lot of requests. We have a waiting list now for people wanting apartments."

The parents are responsible for child care services and medical needs. "We're currently exploring the question of medical services for the kids. The commuters are interested in this, too, but right now, we don't have a pedi (pediatric) nurse," Ms. Chadwick explained. "We can handle some minor emergencies."

"I really think it is a positive program. There was a great need for something like this, and we had to sell that need," she said.

At the end of the day, Fiser picks his daughter up from the TWU child care center and returns to the apartment for dinner before going back to work.

The small round table is set for three as Mrs. Fiser prepares the evening meal. "I never lived in a dorm when I went to college," Fiser said. "The rules are hard to get used to, and living in this apartment, I have no place to actually hide or wind down before going to bed."

But it is home, for now anyway. And Mrs. Fiser believes the situation is a great benefit for students going to school. "I think the most beneficial part of this program is the fact that we're all together," she said.

Clements receives DAR Good Citizen

Brett Clements, a Hereford High School senior, has been chosen by the HHS faculty as the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizen for 1985-86.

He is the son of Don and Adelle Clements of Hereford.

Sponsor of the annual recognition is the Los Ciboleros Chapter of the DAR. The chapter will honor Clements at a reception on April 20 and he will receive recognition at the high school awards assembly in May.

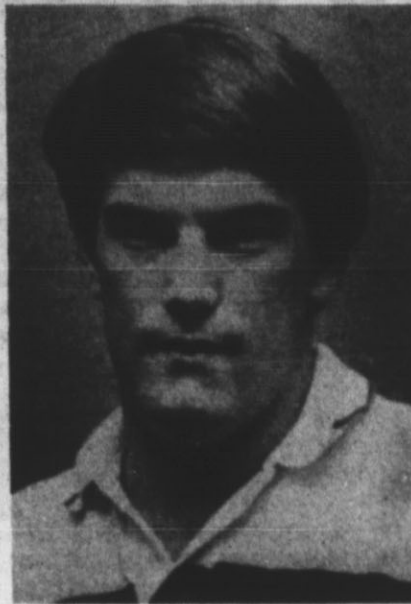

Through his high school career Clements has been involved in Student Council and has been a varsity center on the Whiteface football team. He also has been action on the track and basketball squads.

He has won recognition for continuing excellence on the school math and science teams.

Clements has served as board member and as president of the HHS Key Club and as president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes during his junior year. He is a member of the National Honor Society.

"H" awards for academic excellence have been awarded to Clements in math, accounting, chemistry, government and for selection for participation in the Texas Science Symposium.

Clements is active in the Church of the Nazarene Youth Council and has been chosen to play on the church's four-state region basketball team.

The senior is active with the Senior Citizens, the American Heart Association, the Lung Association, and Big Brothers-Big Sisters.

Clements plans to attend Texas A&M to pursue a pre-med curriculum.

His hobbies include hunting, fishing and snow and water skiing.

Also recognized by the chapter was Jill Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Smith of Dimmitt.

Czech 'mole' to be traded for Shcharansky

WASHINGTON (AP) — An alleged Czech spy, one of only two "moles" ever caught after infiltrating the CIA, is expected to be traded Tuesday in a multi-nation prisoner swap to free Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky, administration sources say.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified by name, said Friday that Karl F. Koecher, 52, pleaded no contest to espionage charges at a secret federal court proceeding recently in New York City.

Under the one count of conspiracy to spy for Czechoslovakia in his indictment, he could have received up to life in prison, but he was sentenced to time served since his arrest Nov. 27, 1984, on condition he is successfully swapped for Shcharansky, the sources said.

They said the swap also will include Koecher's wife, Hana, 42.

This is the third time since June that foreigners accused or convicted of spying against the United States have been swapped back to foreign countries.

Four East Bloc spies were swapped in Berlin on June 11 for 25 alleged Western agents and their relatives. On Nov. 28, a relative of Ghana's military leader was swapped back to that country for eight accused U.S. agents and their families.

Koecher worked on contract as a translator and consultant to the CIA from February 1973 to August 1975. The government has said in court he was trained by the Czech intelligence service from 1963 to 1965 and sent here in 1965 with his wife as a so-called "illegal," or spy operating without diplomatic cover.

The government said Koecher was taught how to penetrate U.S. intelligence agencies before he began his 19-year spying career inside the United States. He was charged with passing defense documents to the Czechs and "virtually any classified or other material, information assessments and CIA personnel identifications which he obtained" while working for the CIA.

As an agent allegedly trained to infiltrate the CIA, he is considered a "mole," a term which can be applied to only two of the six one-time CIA employees ever charged with spying. Three of the others began spying after leaving the CIA, according to government charges. The fourth, Sharon Scranage, was recruited by Ghana after she began working for the CIA.

The other alleged "mole," Larry Wu-Tai Chin, was convicted Friday for passing CIA secrets to China during an 18-year career with the U.S. government.

Mrs. Koecher was arrested as a material witness along with Koecher as they left their fashionable New York City apartment for a flight to Switzerland. They had sold the apartment for $280,000 and were moving to Austria at the time of the arrests.

In Berlin on Friday, U.S. and West German sources said a top Soviet spy arrested in South Africa, Dieter Gerhardt, possibly along with his wife, Ruth, will be among the communist agents traded for the Soviet dissident and other prisoners in the East bloc.

Gerhardt, 50, was sentenced to life in prison in 1984 for providing information on British fleet movements in the 1962 Falklands War to the Soviets.

Shcharansky, a prominent Soviet human rights activist, has been imprisoned since the late 1970s. There is a strong possibility that after the exchange, Shcharansky will fly to Frankfurt and then board a flight for Tel Aviv, the sources said.

Warner and some backpack buddies were caught up Friday night in the Krewe of Hermes' parade — one of 61 scheduled by the city's masked marching clubs in the 12 days before Ash Wednesday.

Loud, raucous behavior is usually indulged — some say encouraged — this time of year. But police are beefing up patrols to haul off anyone who gets too boisterous or disorderly.

"We start getting our largest crowds this weekend," said Sgt. Juan Quinton. On Friday night, he had about 100 officers in the French Quarter, where a Texas visitor was stabbed to death in his hotel Friday morning.

ELECTION

Even before taking the lead, Mrs. Mrs. Aquino said through a spokesman that she was planning in "the next few days" to call on Marcos to "arrange an orderly transfer of power."

But Marcos, 68, told an interviewer on the Cable News Network that he was ahead 13 million to 11 million votes, according to polls by pro-Marcos news media.

None of the tabulations was reporting anywhere near that total of votes counted, and the supervisor of Comelec's ballot-tallying operation, Dr. Pedro Baraoidan, said, "I am not in a position to know where he got his figures."

S.O.S. meeting planned

The Older Workers Program (O.W.P.), of Panhandle Community Services, will be holding an open meeting program called "Senior Opportunity Search, or S.O.S." Tuesday, Feb. 11 at 10:30 a.m. in the game room of the Hereford Community Center.

The purpose of the meeting is to assist those men and women in the community and area who are fifty-five years of age and older, who wish assistance in locating full or part-time work. The meeting will be designed to inform the older workers on the purpose of the program along with encouraging older citizens to return to the work force. The meeting will also include answering any questions, determining eligibility, set appointments to enroll qualified applicants and to introduce instructors for up-coming pre-employment classes.

In order to qualify for this program an applicant must meet the following criteria:

- They must be able to document citizenship or residency status.
- Document place of birth and date. (This could be birth certificate, baptismal record, military discharge papers, family bible or other suitable documents.)
- Must present a Social Security Card.
- Must be 55 or over.
- Must want to work and need assistance in finding either a full or part-time job.
- Must meet income requirements designed to assist low income individuals.
- Applicants must not have made more than $2,625 in the past six months prior to the date of application. This amount does not include any government benefits or child support payments, inheritance, or veterans benefits.
- Those who qualify will be given a two week, 60-hour, pre-employment training seminar designed to increase their knowledge and job-seeking skills. The classes will begin on Feb. 17 through 28. Classes will be held on weekdays from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. One class will be in Spanish and the other will be in English.
- The instruction in the classes will include resumes, application skills, interviewing skills, vocational testing and assessment, counseling and other items of interest to this age group including Social Security and money management. There is no cost for any service provided by this program.

Louder promoted to executive assistant

Steve Louder, engineer with Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, Inc., Hereford has been promoted to the position of Executive Assistant to the cooperative utility.

Louder's duties will consist of work with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the Texas Public Utility Commission, wholesale and retail rates related thereto, and engineering work pertaining to the cooperative. In addition to the above, Mr. Louder will act as assistant to the president and other administrative officials, as well as assist the board of directors.

Louder and his wife Pam moved to Hereford and began his employment with Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative, Inc., in July 1974 after his graduation from Texas Tech University. They are members of the Community Church and have three children, Jantzen, age 5; Erin, age 3;

Houston computer company a big success

HOUSTON (AP) — Three-year-old Compaq Computer Corp. is a success story in its purest form, perhaps the biggest success story in the grand history of Houston business.

In 1983 the manufacturer of transportable personal computers became the fastest start-up in the annals of American business. This year, after nearly four years of operations, its roughly $500 million in revenue has probably earned it a spot on the Fortune listing of the 500 largest U.S. firms — one of the quickest moves to that listing of any U.S. firm.

It had little to do with luck, says Rod Canion, 40, president and co-founder.

"Every product we do is driven by what the market needs," says Canion. "If you're market-driven, there's no luck. You will be able to design successful products."

Compaq has certainly been able to design successful products, from the moment its four founders conceived a portable computer compatible with IBM's best-selling PC over dinner at the House of Pies. Today, it is the second-largest manufacturer of personal computers in the world, after International Business Machines.

Because it doesn't get starry-eyed about technology, Compaq has also sidestepped the dangerous shoals of producing technologically feasible items that no one wants to buy.

Tens of computer manufacturers have fallen to their deaths in the fast-paced world of technology products by introducing such things as the lap-top computer, which was touted as the next wave of portable computer products.

Since Compaq is the world leader in portable computers, Canion said, it would have on the surface made sense for it to move rapidly into production of lap-top computers, which are best exemplified by Radio Shack's TRS-80.

But when the firm did its customary intensive market studies, it found people didn't want to buy lap-top computers that could only do what today's technology could provide. So Compaq opted to concentrate on other products instead, introducing in 1985 a powerful desktop computer called the Deskpro 286, as well as a telephone-computer combination called the Telecompaq.

"We're still monitoring the lap-top computer," says Canion. "But none of the companies that has come out with one has been successful."

Compaq is also trying to improve the technology required to make the lap-top computer a more sophisticated product — one that the Compaq marketing department said people might want to buy. The firm, which is finishing a set of new buildings in the woods off Farm Road 149 north of Farm Road 1960, spent $15 million on research and development in 1985.

That amount would be relatively small, as a percentage of sales, if Compaq were a company that concentrated on developing cutting-edge technology. But it's not. It spent $1 million on market research in 1985.

"Typically, our R&D funds are spent on making the best product, when we've already determined a clear market need," said Compaq spokesman Jeff Stives.

Compaq's strategy has been to make IBM clones that are better than IBM originals and sell them as cheaply.

The lure of IBM-compatibility is that the majority of independent software products are first written for IBM, which has become the accepted industry standard. Compaq's portable computer outsells IBM's portable by a 10-to-1 margin, according to Future Computing, an industry research firm.

"They (Compaq) know when to meet the competition head-on and when to get out of the way," said James D. Edwards, head of AT&T's fledgling computer efforts, earlier this year.

Even though Compaq emulated IBM's computer architecture, it didn't try to copy Big Blue's corporate structure — it pioneered its own.

"Compaq is a pace car leader of high-tech organization," said Deborah Bright, author of "Gearing Up for the Fast Lane," a new book about managing in the fast-moving world of high-technology products.

Compaq emphasizes thoroughness and communication, Canion said. Even as the number of workers at Compaq, now at 1,800, edges higher, Canion thinks that his firm can continue to communicate with them.

"In our culture, it is important that people know not only what is going on, but also that it makes good sense," says Canion. "In a bureaucracy, decisions are made and never explained. Here, there always needs to be a good reason for (what is done)."

This culture helps Compaq avoid the mistakes that have crippled other computer makers.

"We're creating an environment that says mistakes are OK as long as they are caught as early as possible," Canion said.

Aside from having a management formula that effects success, Compaq is what futurists point to as the classic company of the future — a manufacturer of computer products that sells in 24 overseas markets, including the People's Republic of China, Greece and Israel.

John Naisbitt, for instance, points out in his book "Megatrends" that the United States is changing rapidly from an industrial to what he calls an information economy that is becoming inextricably linked to the global economy.

Compaq also commands a huge amount of space with U.S. retailers, appearing on the shelves of 65 percent of U.S. computer stores, according to an article published in "The Economist." It is in fewer stores than IBM (which is in 80 percent of the stores), but appears in the same percentage of stores as the much larger and older Apple.

Canion attributes this success with retailers to Compaq's not competing with them by having its own internal direct sales force. The company has roughly 2,700 dealers worldwide.

Compaq offers dealers not only higher margins than most other personal computer manufacturers, but also a price stability not often found in the whiplash world of computer retailing.

While revenues seem unstoppable, profits and stock price have just begun to take off.

The stock, which came out at 11 in December 1983, and then dwindled to 4, is near its all-time high of 14%. In 1985 the stock moved from the over-the-counter market to the New York Stock Exchange, trading near the symbol CPQ.

In the first nine months of 1985, the company netted $16.6 million, or 61 cents per share, compared to $6 million, or 6 cents per share, in the first three quarters of last year. Revenues for the first nine months of 1984 were $216.4 million, growing to $347.6 million for the similar period of 1985. While profits are not phenomenal, given the firm's sales, they defy the general downward trend of the personal computer industry.

Although it cannot hope to match the explosive growth of its first three years, Compaq expects 15 to 30 percent annual growth throughout this decade. Canion says he cannot plan more than five years in advance because of the pace of technology.

"One of the things we're committed to is growing faster than the market," said Canion.

With its new headquarters-manufacturing complex, Compaq also has a commitment to Houston as a headquarters and manufacturing site, but plans to open other assembly and manufacturing plants elsewhere, perhaps overseas.

In 1985, Compaq established a telecommunications subsidiary, located in Dallas because the firm believed that the "critical resources" for software and hardware design and marketing were there.

Canion said that while there is enough "critical talent" in Houston to staff the manufacturing and headquarters functions, to have added the telecommunications firms already, including Collins Radio and a major branch of Northern Telecom.

A big advantage to being a high-tech firm in Houston is that a more stable company can be built here because talented employees are "not constantly being sought after by someone down the street," as they are in major high-tech areas in California and on the East Coast.

Looking back to 1983, Canion says he and his colleagues from Texas Instruments had no idea that Compaq would grow as quickly as it has.

"If we had a dream of its being this big, we probably would have done something wrong," he said.

Background checks requested

By FRANK BAJAK Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A private investigator says more and more prospective spouses are requesting background checks of their intendeds, apparently indicating that people considering marriage are leading with their heads rather than their hearts.

"I think people are a little smarter today. They don't get involved with people they know little or nothing about," says Arnold M. Jones, a private detective. "Today, people are learning not to accept what they are told."

Although some in Jones' profession say pre-nuptial investigations account for a negligible portion of their business, if any, Jones says he has been conducting many in the past five years.

The probes, for which his 14-investigator Fort Lee, N.J., agency charges an average of $300, comprise 15 percent to 20 percent of his business, he says.

"Even people in the courting stages, before they've really gotten involved, are asking for this service," says Jones, who has been an investigator for 32 years.

A typical client would be a father suspicious of a prospective son-in-law who hasn't revealed enough about his past or his financial assets, Jones says. But clients most often are middle-aged women considering remarriage, many of whom "have been burned," he says.

"I think when you have a woman who has been married and divorced and they meet some gentleman, they say I can't see a man 40 years old being a bachelor," he says. "They want to find out if these men are supporting wives and children."

Jones, 61, says one case his agency investigated at the request of a young woman's family found more than just a man seeing old girlfriends or burdened with alimony obligations.

Ignace Paderewski became Poland's first prime minister in 1922.

Equal treatment

Being in the newspaper business is usually fun and rewarding. It's a business which puts a person in the unique position of knowing many people and much of what is going on in the community.

It is satisfying to publish good things that happen to citizens in the community. One can look back over a year's editions and see literally thousands of articles and photographs that reflect the good news in our town. It's fun to report the accomplishments of school students, the graduations, the engagements and weddings, features on individuals who are helping build the community or have unique hobbies, the anniversaries and other special honors.

But it's not all fun and games. There is also the job of reporting unpleasant happenings—accidents and deaths, law suits and criminal charges, closings of big industries and other bad news.

We've yet to be called and asked not to report that someone's child has received special recognition, or that someone has received a promotion, or that some couple is observing a 50th wedding anniversary.

The calls are someone usually asking us not to publish some part of the court reports, police reports or a photo of a wreck. Such calls serve only to make the caller angry, in many cases, for the answer is, "I'm sorry, we treat everyone the same. If it is something we publish under our basic policies, then it will be in the paper."

There have been many rumors floating around about people involved in the recent drug bust. We did not have a single call from anyone asking us to withhold their names. We published the names of all those arrested and reported on the list from the district attorney's office.

Please remember: We don't make the news, we just report it.

As the years turn

1 YEAR AGO

Bobby Owen was named "Citizen of the Year"; the Hereford ambulance personnel received plaques for distinguished community service; and a banquet crowd of almost 600 heard a motivational and humorous speech by Dr. W.C. Newberry and inspirational songs by Johnny Ray Watson as highlights of the annual Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce banquet Thursday night at the Bull Barn. Texas Gov. Mark White, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and a U.S. Department of Energy official are expected to testify at U.S. Senate hearings Monday in Hereford.

10 YEARS AGO

The Hereford School Board of Trustees decided in regular session Tuesday evening to rescind its earlier change in the Hereford High School final exam exemption policy and institute the original policy, approved a bilingual education and parent notification policy, approved the election of central office personnel, principals and athletic director, and heard a lengthy discussion of the county wide re-appraisal project.

Hereford will host the annual West Texas Vegetable Conference Feb. 17 at the Bull Barn. Improved methods of growing potatoes, onions, carrots, peppers and tomatoes will be spotlighted. Producers will join with industry leaders, research scientists and specialists to review vegetable research highlights and production techniques.

25 YEARS AGO

Preliminary school census figures released this week showed there are 3,142 children of scholastic age within Hereford Rural High School District who will be between six and 18 years old as of Sept. 1, 1961.

Continuous growth of this area's wheat and milo industries once again will be earmarked sometime in May or June, when a new grain elevator company casts its shadow upon Deaf Smith County to be located southeast of the Highway 60-Brumley Road intersection, the first unit of construction was started last month and is expected to be completed by the last of May.

50 YEARS AGO

Followed by the lowest temperature of the season, snow blanketed the Hereford area yesterday in the most beneficial fall of the year. Estimated at better than four inches in Hereford, the white flakes fell almost straight down and remained where they hit, doing little or no drifting.

Despite adverse weather conditions which reduced the crowds to some extent, Hereford's Birthday Ball for the President last Thursday night was acclaimed a success and provided substantially for the care of infantile paralysis victims in this country.

Work on the WPA Central School project was believed to be another step nearer, with the receipt this week of information concerning the advance grant of 15 percent of the total cost of the remodeling project.

75 YEARS AGO

There is not the least doubt but that the Hereford soil, water and sunshine are adapted to the successful culture of sugar beets. Colorado has about 200,000 acres in beets with a yield of an average of 9 1/4 tons per acre. California comes next with about 65,000 acres with a yield of 10 tons. Idaho, Michigan, Utah and Wisconsin each have a small area in beets. The percent of sugar in the Panhandle beets compares favorably with Colorado and other states.

There were 175 carloads of strawberries shipped to northern and eastern markets from Texas during the season of 1910, according to late government reports, which brought $175,000. Texas can keep strawberries in the market the entire year.

THE COUPLE

There was a ruckus going on at the airport security check. A young couple who evidently had never flown before were trying to get themselves and two kids through the X-ray. One of the children was not about to let Security have his bag. He immediately began to fight and scream. His screams had an eerie sound, like some threatened animal.

When they finally cleared security they stood beside me while I was waiting for a boarding pass. I have tried hard all of my life to not be prejudiced. I do pretty well in some areas. One area I do very badly in is body odor. I just can't get my nose converted. Somehow my nose is hot wired to my stomach. One whiff and I am ready to throw up my socks. This couple had the worst case of B.O. I can remember. While they stood there they had another confrontation with the child and the screams were on again.

When they walked away I remarked to a lady in the line with me that since the couple smoked I was going to ride in the front of the plane. The lady said she had intended to ride in the back of the plane since the Dallas crash had proven the back of the plane to be the safest. I told her the plane would have to be a whole lot safer to get me in the back with that group. I told you I was prejudiced.

The flight to Dallas was punctuated with screams and yells from the back of the plane. The child had one fit after another. I felt as if I was seeing the next Night Stalker while he was still a child.

Paul Harvey

Are our priorities inverted?

Many churches set aside a specific percentage of the church budget for "foreign missions." As high as 50 percent. My own church 11 percent.

Then, once a month the collection plate is passed an extra time for the "benevolence offering;" that is money to be kept available for needy homefolks.

Are our priorities inverted? Historically, traditionally, Americans were taught that "charity begins at home." First we take care of our own — then our neighbors next door. After these, if we have resources left over, we assist more distant neighbors.

But they come last, not first.

It has always seemed to me that we preach a hypocritical sermon to the rest of the world if we neglect our own.

So it was gratifying for me to see last Super Bowl Sunday that Kenny Rogers and Juice Newton and Diana Ross and Cathy Lee Crosby and Michael McDonald and scores of other celebrity entertainers were in the tiny town of Taft, California, launching a charity program of "caring and sharing" among Americans. And next May 25 the same pro-

When we reached Dallas I did not need to change planes so I sat still while everyone else deplaned (that's airplane language for they got off the thing). When the lady who had decided to sit in the back came by me she punched me and let me know it wasn't pleasant in the back. When the couple came by they left a trail that kicked me in the stomach.

When the plane was empty a flight attendant sat across from me in sheer exhaustion. She said they had been afraid the child would pull the doors to the plane open. She said that was the only thing he had missed. When the plane landed the child was sitting in the middle of the aisle with no seat belt. That broke the rules but they were not going to stir him up again.

The flight attendant said the couple were on their way to Connecticut by bus. Things had gotten so bad that the bus driver had stopped in the middle of nowhere and put them off the bus.

Well, I had mixed emotions. The airline said they would haul them no further. The bus line had put them off. How were they going to get home? On the other hand the airline had to protect the other passengers and, after all, people should at least bathe.

When I got home I heard the preacher say, "In as much as you have done it unto one of the least of these you have done it unto me." I've got to get my nose baptized.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek takes another look at space exploration this week.

Dear editor:

As I understand it, space exploration is necessary because space is man's last frontier, and the purpose of a frontier is to get itself explored.

This is not always useful. In the early days of this country the pioneers and frontiersmen along the east coast kept pushing out till they pushed their way to the west coast, and what happened? Los Angeles. Smog. Traffic. Movies. They should have stopped somewhere around Arizona.

Now it's true man has landed on the moon and returned. And what are the results? A sackful of moon rocks and a nation deeper in debt.

A more interesting and safer exploration of space has been achieved by Voyager II, that small, unmanned spacecraft that, after eight years of flight, is two billion miles from Earth and is sending back radio signals that, don't ask me how, scientists can translate into pictures.

A few weeks ago it photographed Uranus, a planet four times as large as Earth with none of its problems. It has, the returning photographs reveal, 15 moons. If Uranus were inhabited, have you thought what a complex task poets and love-sick song writers would have trying to get all 15 moons into one outpouring?

Moreover, it has been discovered that a day on Uranus is only 16 hours long. This means that if you lived there, after you'd worked eight hours and slept eight hours it'd be time to get up and go to work again.

We need to stay clear of that place.
Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Letters to the Editor

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

As a part of our observance of National OEA Week, the Office Education Association (the youth leadership organization for students enrolled in Vocational Office Education) would like to take this opportunity to thank the citizens of Hereford who have supported VOE-OEA so faithfully for many years.

In particular, we want to thank those local business people who employ VOE students in their offices. We gain valuable work experience while attending school. For this training, we thank you.

A special thanks, also, to our teachers, school administrators, parents, and friends for supporting our fund raising and other activities.

Without people who are dedicated to support of school programs, we would not have the opportunities afforded us by O.E.A. You are helping to provide experiences that will be valuable for a lifetime. Again, thank you.

At the same time, a national charity based in Chicago called SECOND HARVEST is accepting rejected food from food producers and processors—and rerouting it to 78 food banks across the country.

It may be a truckload of yogurt approaching the end of its shelf life or 37 freight cars filled with a discontinued line of cereal or five million pounds of "offcolor" grapefruit juice. Two-hundred fifty national companies donate such.

SECOND HARVEST distributed 100 million pounds of food last year to homefolks.

For the 150 years that the United States led the world, we did it by minding our own business so well that we were an example worthy of emulation. Who knows; maybe we can be that again.

Beggs may leave NSA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials insist they are not trying to force the resignation of indicted NASA chief James M. Beggs, but there is growing speculation he will quit, and names of potential successors are emerging.

The lack of a permanent NASA administrator — Beggs is on leave — was brought into sharp focus by the space shuttle Challenger disaster that killed its five-man, two-woman crew.

Rumors of Beggs' possible resignation were fueled Friday when White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the administrator "has apparently told some people — members of Congress and others — that he is considering stepping aside, and may do so."

Speakes added, "We are exploring whether we want to look for a permanent replacement." He said it was up to Beggs whether he should quit.

By openly discussing the possibility that Beggs may resign, the White House spokesman seemed to be signaling the wishes of key administration officials.

Names of potential successors quickly emerged on Capitol Hill and at the White House, including William Graham, the agency's acting director; former NASA administrators James C. Fletcher and Thomas O. Paine; another former NASA official, Hans Mark; former astronaut Frank Borman, currently board chairman of Eastern Airlines, and former astronaut and one-time GOP Sen. Harrison Schmitt.

Another White House official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Beggs' plans were unclear. The official said no one in the White House had suggested directly or indirectly to Beggs that he should resign, and that President Reagan "would be supportive of Mr. Beggs whatever he decides to do."

Beggs could not be reached by telephone for comment. He has been on indefinite paid leave since his indictment Dec. 2 for allegedly trying to hide cost overruns on a federal defense contract while he was executive vice president of General Dynamics Corp.

As Beggs' future was being discussed at the White House, a presidential commission investigating the Jan. 28 shuttle explosion met in closed session next door in the Old Executive Office Building and heard testimony about classified information, spokesman Mark Weinberg said.

It was the panel's second meeting in two days.

Sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the commission heard about the Defense Department's participation in the shuttle program, which has involved deployment of several Pentagon payloads.

One of the teachers of religion who was standing there listening to the discussion realized that Jesus had answered well. So he asked, "Of all the commandments, which is the most important?"

Jesus replied, "The one that says, 'Hear, O Israel! The Lord our God is the one and only God.'

And you must love Him with all your heart and soul and mind and strength.'

The second is: 'You must love others as much as yourself.' No other commandments are greater than these."

The teacher of religion replied, "Sir, You have spoken a true word in saying that there is only one God and no other."

In YMCA high school basketball league

Top half beats bottom half

1986 MAVERICK NATIONALS

National Champion

Fred Green, who competes in tournaments with the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA Wrestling Club, won a national title in the recent Amarillo Maverick Club National Wrestling Tournament.

Place First In Tournament

Drew Redford, a member of the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA Wrestling Club, won his weight class in the Lubbock Wrestling Tournament recently.

The top half of the YMCA high school boys' basketball league defeated the bottom half in games played Thursday night.

The league leading Bacwapt Wolverines scored a 39-24 victory over the Ko Ya's, and remained undefeated at 4-0.

Two other teams stayed one game behind the Bacwapt Wolverines by winning games Thursday. The Roman Catholics beat the Silver Bullet Bandits, 58-33, and the Bandito Bombers defeated the Woodworkers, 49-28.

The Roman Catholics and the Bandito Bombers both have 3-1 records. The Ko Ya's and the Woodworkers are both 1-3, and the Silver Bullet Bandits are 0-4.

This week on Thursday, the Silver Bullet Bandits play the Woodworkers at 5 p.m., the Ko Ya's meet the Bandito Bombers at 6 p.m., and the Bacwapt Wolverines go against the Roman Catholics at 7 p.m.

Philip Webster and Patrick Phibbs each totaled 11 points to power the Bacwapt Wolverines to their 39-24 win over the Ko Ya's. Brett Clements added six points for the Wolverines, who led 17-10 at halftime.

Leading scorers for the Ko Ya's were Jerry Gauthreaux with seven points and Rodney Torribiates with six points.

Three players scored in double figures to lead the Roman Catholics over the Silver Bullet Bandits, 58-33. Arthur Valdez scored 21 points, and Nathan Flood and Walter Brockman each had 11 points.

Keith Anderson scored nine points for the Roman Catholics, who led 25-18 at halftime and 42-29 after three quarters of play.

Kelby Hager scored 10 points for the Silver Bullet Bandits, and Darren Jones scored six points.

Derrell Page scored 13 points, and Tommy Ramirez and James Hernandez each scored 10 points for the Bandito Bombers in their 49-28 victory over the Woodworkers. Ramirez scored all his points in the second quarter.

The Bandito Bombers led at halftime, 26-11 at halftime. Robby Collier and Johnny Beltran each added six points for the Bandito Bombers.

For the Woodworkers, Bobby Martinez scored 11 points, and Allen Dudding and Darrelle Hill each scored six points.

KO YA'S: Jerry Gauthreaux 3 1-1 7; Rodney Torribiates 3 0-0 6; Dean Murphy 1 1-2 3; Larry Backus 1 0-2 2; Chris Alexander 1 0-0 2; John Simnacher 1 0-0 2; Juan Cordova 1 0-1 2. Totals: 11 24 24.

HHS-Palo Duro

games not played

Friday night's high school basketball games between Hereford High School and Palo Duro High School, which were scheduled in Amarillo, were not played.

Hereford High School principal Terry Russell reports that the games will "probably" not be rescheduled, noting that no definite decision had been made whether to attempt to play the games.

For the HHS girls' basketball teams, Friday's games were to have been the final contests of the season.

The Whiteface boys' basketball teams have one more week of games remaining on their schedule, including home games against Tascosa High School Tuesday night.

Next Friday, Hereford is scheduled to play at Lubbock High School. Game times both nights are 6 p.m. for the junior varsity boys and 7:45 p.m. for the varsity boys.

But now plays guard for 76ers

Julius Erving voted as all-star forward

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Julius Erving, a starting guard for the Philadelphia 76ers since mid-December, makes his 10th consecutive start as a forward Sunday in the 36th National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

The 76ers were struggling with a 12-11 record when Erving was inserted as a starting guard on Dec. 14. After that, they won 19 of 25 games.

Boston Celtics Coach K.C. Jones will make the lineup decisions for the Eastern Conference team after Erving, forward Larry Bird of Boston, center Moses Malone of Philadelphia and guards Sidney Moncrief of Milwaukee and Detroit's Isiah Thomas.

"I was picked as a forward and I expect to play forward extensively," Erving said. "They picked four other guards. K.C. will make the final decision, but there has been no discussion about playing guard."

But Houston Coach Bill Fitch said if Jones wants to use Erving in the backcourt, "He has a guard out there that no other guard in the league can post up."

"The switch to guard has not been that difficult for me," said Erving, an All-Star Most Valuable Player in 1977 and 1983. "When (Andrew) Toney comes back from injury, I'll probably divide my time between guard and forward."

Dallas will play host for the All-Star Game for the first time since the Mavericks joined the league in 1980. It was chosen as part of the 150th anniversary celebration of Texas independence.

The game at Reunion Arena — site of next month's NCAA Final Four — is an advance sellout, but the crowd of 16,573 will be some 500 short of the normal capacity to accommodate the media.

Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers will coach the West team, which includes three members of the defending NBA champions in the starting lineup. Forward Ralph Sampson of Houston and guard Alvin Robertson of San Antonio join Lakers Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, James Worthy and Magic Johnson as starters.

Eastern Conference substitutes are Robert Parish of Boston and Patrick Ewing of New York at center; Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, Kevin McHale of Boston and Buck Williams of New Jersey at forward; and Maurice Cheeks of Philadelphia and Jeff Malone of Washington at

The actor who portrayed Babe Ruth in the 1948 movie, "The Babe Ruth Story," was William Bendix.

There are two outs in a baseball inning, with the bases loaded. The batter hits a home run. The runner from second base is called out on an appeal for missing third base. The umpire would be correct in not allowing any runs.

pulling his tie around his own neck.

ARKANSAS: New Coach Nolan Richardson's frustration of following Eddie Sutton finally exploded in a circus-like show in Dallas. Throwing his coat and curse words with abandon, Richardson was hit with three technicals and ejected from a game for the first time in his 22-year career. The preseason favorite Razorbacks' collapse rates as the biggest mystery of the year.

BAYLOR: The Bears told on themselves, and after the NCAA got through taking away scholarships and inflicting other sanctions the SWC added one final swift kick. The NCAA said the Bears were eligible for the post-season SWC Tournament. Then the SWC took away the only incentive Coach Gene Iba had by saying the Bears were ineligible. It was the final straw for Iba who had to play with only six players at one point during the season.

TEXAS TECH: The defending champions won their first four games, three on last second shots at the buzzer, then lost four in a row. The play that started the slide will forever be known in SWC lore as the "dumb dunk." Dwayne Chism's breakaway dunk was flubbed and the Aggies scored on a three-point play to win the game in the last five seconds to beat the Raiders in Lubbock.

HOUSTON: Cougar veteran Coach Guy Lewis suddenly retired effective the end of the season. His inspired team then knocked off the Aggies, prompting Lewis to joke "I guess everyone is expecting me to unretire now."

RICE: The only Owl victory in the first half of the SWC season came in the Houston Cougars' Hofheinz Pavilion where Rice had never won a game.

TCU: Won every game it played in Daniel Meyer Coliseum.

SMU: Defeated Arkansas twice in one season for the first time in 15 years.

The Texas Tech student body receives a special award for team support. One student had an idea of holding up a nearly nude photograph of an actress behind the goal while opponents shot free throws.

It was a wonderful concentration buster.

SWC is 'crazy' basketball league

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Since the Southwest Conference doesn't have a basketball team of national stature, it is giving fans a heavy dose of daffy doings in the 1985-86 season.

Here are some of the crazy happenings from school to school in the SWC over the first half of the season:

TEXAS A&M: Mike Clifford set the tone for the season when he chased down a player who had knocked out two of his front teeth and spit blood on him. The Aggies are surprisingly leading the league although guards Don Marbury and Todd Holloway have a late March date in court in Calvert on misdemeanor marijuana possession charges.

TEXAS: Longhorn Coach Bob Weltlich's detractors call him "Kaiser Bob" because of his rough practice sessions. However, the normally taciturn Weltlich loosened up so much the other night he gave the old "hangman" sign to a referee by Shooting Stars play here on February 19

Meadowlark Lemon, known as "The Clown Prince of Basketball," returns to Hereford on Feb. 19 when his team, the Shooting Stars, play the California Lasers.

The game is set for 8 p.m. at the La Plata Junior High School gym. The game is sponsored by Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Hereford.

Organizers for the Shooting Stars tour, who visited Hereford Friday, said that "Meadowlark Lemon is an all-American tradition," and that "the Shooting Stars are his funniest basketball team of the century."

Alva Lee Peeler, executive director of Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Hereford, notes that ticket prices are $7 for adults and $5 for children under the age of 12.

Tickets may be purchased at the Big Brothers-Big Sisters office located in the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA building, or at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office.

Meadowlark Lemon played with the Harlem Globetrotters for 22 years, leaving that team eight years ago. He was then in a movie, "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh," and performed in a television series called, "Hello Larry."

In 1979 Lemon organized his own team, the Bucketeers, and now plays for the Shooting Stars team. The Bucketeers team played in Hereford on March 8, 1983.

Lemon's teammates on the Shooting Stars, who will play in the game in Hereford, are these: Larry "Gator" Rivers, who is 6-0 and also formerly played with the Harlem Globetrotters; Jerry "Love Bug" Venable, still another former Globetrotter who is 6-6 and who played at Kansas State University;

Brent "BJ" Johnson, a 6-4 athlete who was all-conference and captain of his team when he played at East Tennessee State University; Cliff Pruitt, 6-8, attended UCLA and the University of Alabama-Birmingham, played in the NCAA playoffs, was all-conference, and played in European and Swiss leagues;

Lee Stephens, a former All-American at Indiana State University; Eddie Brown, 6-6, played for California Polytechnic University in Pomona, Calif., and was all-conference and an All-American;

Ernest Aughburns, 6-8, played at Tulane University; Fred Gilliam, 6-8, a leading rebounder in the Atlantic Coast Conference during his days at Clemson University; and Phil Hopson, a 6-6 player.

Members of the California Lasers who will play in Hereford are: Laser team captain Steve Flint, 6-7, who played at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas; Tim Arnwine, 6-3½, former Cal-Poly Pomona player; Sherwin "Baby Magic" Durham, who is six feet tall;

David McGuire, the tallest member of the Lasers at seven feet even and a former Brigham Young University basketball team member; Kenny Owens, 6-1, who played with the Athletes in Action;

Willie Patterson, 6-3, who received all-California honors in high school and was named to the McDonald's high school All-American team; and Emory Wells, 6-9, who played the the University of South Alabama.

In recent interviews, Gator Rivers, a former member of the Harlem Globetrotters, expressed his feelings on the changes in the organization of the Globetrotters.

Rivers, who played 13 years with the Globetrotters, said he is ashamed of the Globetrotters.

"What they are putting on the floor now is a disservice to basketball and a mockery to the game. The Globetrotters figure they can put anyone in a uniform and they can be a Globetrotter," Rivers said.

"When I first began with the Globetrotters, they were a great basketball team. They went out to get good talent," he continues.

"Now, they would get anybody big enough and old enough to be a billboard. There went the talent search," Rivers adds.

When Rivers tried out for the Globetrotters, Meadowlark Lemon and Marques Haynes were coaching the team.

River made the team, but decided to finish his collegiate basketball career at Missouri Western. But the next year, the Globetrotters' tryouts were a greater challenge because 41 players were invited.

Just two players, one of them Rivers, were selected for the team. Rivers saw some time as coach of the Globetrotters, until September 1985 when he refused to sign a new contract with the Globetrotters.

Rivers watched the first Globetrotters' performance of the 1985-86 season in December, and did not agree with what he saw.

"I went to the Los Angeles Forum to see them play and it broke my heart. Any good college team could beat them," Rivers declared.

"They even had Mishu the Midget out there in a Globetrotter uniform.

He came out as 'The World's Smallest Globetrotter.' That was it for me," he said.

Rivers also does not agree with the Globetrotters signing a woman, Lynette Woodard, to play with them.

"It really hurt to see them take a great name (like Woodard) and slap people in the face. I don't see any sense to putting one woman on a man's basketball team.

"It does nothing to promote women's basketball. They did it for financial reasons," Rivers states.

About he and his Shooting Stars teammates, Rivers said, "We believe the Lord gave us our talents not to be billboards but to be real models to the kids and a credit to basketball.

"I feel the Shooting Stars is a last resort, the last hope if we are going to save entertaining basketball."

Rivers had something else to say about the Harlem Globetrotters: "We're praying hard for the Harlem Globetrotters because that's been my life. I'll never be bitter towards the Globetrotters."

Wilkins works to be complete NBA all-star

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

DALLAS (AP) — While Dominique Wilkins' reputation as a dunker is well established, his reputation as a National Basketball Association All-Star is in its infancy.

This weekend, he has a chance to add to his reputation on both counts.

Wilkins' happiness over winning the NBA slam-dunk title last year was tempered by his failure to make the All-Star team despite a 27.4 point average, sixth best in the NBA, and scoring in double figures in every game for the Atlanta Hawks.

"When I won the slam-dunk championship last year, I set my ultimate goal to be in both events this year: the slam-dunk and the All-Star game," Wilkins said Friday. "To be in the All-Star game, you have to prove you're a complete player, not just a dunker."

Wilkins was chosen for Sunday's 36th All-Star game by Eastern Conference coaches who were impressed not only with his 28.4 average, third-best in the league, but also his improved rebounding and leadership ability.

"I've broadened my game this season," the 6-foot-7 Wilkins said. "I'm playing better defense, rebounding better and taking a leadership role. Playing with all these great athletes will be a treat, the ultimate vindication for me as a player."

Sunday's All-Star game starts for the East are Julius Erving and Moses Malone of Philadelphia, Bird, Sidney Moncrief of Milwaukee and Isiah Thomas of Detroit.

Concerning AIDS

Should death certificates be made public?

By MATT MYGATT Associated Press Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It sounded routine to the funeral home workers sent to a house to pick up a body. It was routine until they heard the word AIDS.

The death certificate said the man died of pneumonia. It made no mention of AIDS — Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — which disarms a person's immune system, leaving him susceptible to all kinds of deadly infections.

"No one bothered to tell us," said Sandra Strong, owner of the Albuquerque funeral home.

"Our people kind of picked up that something was going on," she said. "They asked the people (in the home) directly if this was a communicable disease. They were told no."

The body was placed in a vehicle "and someone in the house came out and mentioned that he did have AIDS," said Ms. Strong, who then contacted the office of the medical investigator for confirmation of the disease.

Dr. John Smialek, state medical investigator, said he found out the underlying cause of death was AIDS.

"The death certificate information that was given here did not specifically identify that individual as an AIDS patient," Smialek said.

The death certificate said the cause of death was a specific type of pneumonia. It also listed a couple of other diagnoses.

"Doctors are very cautious about the information they release," Smialek said. "They're very protective of their patients and the privacy of the family."

But he said, "A problem arises if that interferes with the information that needs to be given to people who are going to be involved with that body."

"Funeral home personnel routinely come in contact with blood and other body fluids in the course of embalming a deceased person."

"Pathologists and their assistants are similarly exposed to this type of material in performing autopsies on potential AIDS victims," Smialek said.

"We just owe it to those people to make them aware of that situation so they can take protective measures," he said. "We don't want to cause any paranoia among people — we just want to know about it."

Ms. Strong also said she is concerned by the increasing number of AIDS cases and the possibility of unknowingly handling bodies with the disease because AIDS was not listed on death certificates.

"I think it's certainly going to be a topic of discussion among those in the funeral service nationwide because it is a concern," she said.

"We are charged with taking care of the dead and I think that as an industry, funeral service practitioners are more than willing to do so," Ms. Strong said.

"But we feel we should be informed not only when there is a death by AIDS, but by any other infectious disease," she said. "We just pray for people to be candid with us..."

The increasing numbers of AIDS cases, combined with the confidentiality of medical records, also has brought into question whether laws should be changed to make death certificates public so people know when they come in contact with an AIDS victim.

"I think it's a very significant philosophical question," Smialek said.

"It's something that the community needs to look at and decide what is the responsibility of public officials and physicians to public health in terms of saying does the individual right of privacy outweigh the community's right to know," he said.

"I think there should be some way to obtain that information if people specifically sought it," Smialek said. "I'm not sure I would want to see an AIDS list published in the newspaper every day. I don't think that's a responsible way to handle it."

Dr. Harry Hull, state epidemiologist and chairman of the Governor's Task Force on AIDS, said the case Ms. Strong contacted Smialek's office about had been reported to the state Health and Environment Department.

"There was just some confusion in filling out the death certificate," he said.

"Medical records are protected by law and we only release the names if there is an urgent need to protect the public health," he said.

A department attorney said the only people who can obtain copies of birth or death certificates are those with a tangible and direct interest.

Those people include immediate family, legal guardians or legal representatives, which include an attorney, physician, funeral director "or authorized agent acting on behalf of the registrant or his or her family," the attorney said.

The records might be released if public health officials could not determine the contacts made by a patient who suffered from pneumonic plague, which can be transmitted person-to-person by a mere cough, Hull said.

But records should be kept under wraps for victims of AIDS, a disease with a long incubation period primarily transmitted via intimate sexual contact or dirty hypodermic needles, he said.

"It's not an extremely contagious disease," Hull said. "You're not going to get it through casual contact."

"Mandatory disclosure would not protect the public health," Hull said. "In those instances, we feel that the privacy of the individual is protected."

But Smialek said, "There's so little we know about AIDS now."

"I certainly don't want to tell my people or people that work for a mortuary that they don't have to worry about contaminating themselves when I can't be 100 percent sure when they are in danger of having that (AIDS) transmitted," he said.

Hull said the incubation period for AIDS is two to five years. And some people who carry the AIDS virus don't contract the malady.

"AIDS is only the tip of the iceberg," Hull said. "Most people who are infected with the virus don't have AIDS."

"We believe it would be useful for people who are infected with the virus to refer their partners for evaluation," he said.

"There is the potential of errors as far as complete reporting of cases," he said.

Hull said he believed most AIDS cases are reported "because AIDS is an extremely serious infection or disease that requires hospitalization or specialized care."

"We work closely with physicians and with most hospitals in the state who are likely to have AIDS patients," he said.

Smialek said he knows "of a couple of cases where the information that was initially included on the death certificate might not have included the information specifically that it was AIDS if our office hadn't intervened."

He said his office made sure the doctors listed AIDS on the death certificate.

The doctors might not have been aware of their responsibility of listing AIDS on the certificate, Smialek said.

"The problem is in identifying (an AIDS death) for the benefit of people who are going to be in contact with the body," he said.

AIDS has contributed to 13 deaths in New Mexico since the first case was reported in 1981, and five of those people have died since Jan. 1, Hull said.

The state has had 22 confirmed cases of AIDS since 1981, and 21 of the cases occurred in homosexual or bisexual males and one case involved a male hemophiliac, he said.

Hull said in a report he released Jan. 16 that in a worst-case scenario, the number of AIDS cases in the state could jump to 1,200 by the end of 1988.

Up to $24.7 million of state money might be needed for in-hospital care of AIDS patients by 1988, he said in the report.

"I think there are people who say this is not my problem," Hull said later. "It's clear from testimony that I presented to the Legislature ... that it is a problem that is going to affect everyone."

Hull and Smialek said more AIDS cases will mean state and local governments will be asked to deal with a higher burden placed on health care systems.

"The impact on the health system

— that's a serious question," Smialek said. "I don't think that there's any question but that we have already started to act."

"We already have the task force and programs are in place to develop effective mechanisms to identify AIDS victims and carriers," he said. "How well it's working, I don't know."

Hull said that as the number of AIDS cases increase, "we will find more and more people who will find somebody that they know is affected."

"I think that the cost for caring for these people will increase. It's going to be a very expensive proposition," he said.

"We need to take action now to prevent as many cases as we can," Hull said.

Long before no-pass, no-play, there were home teachers

By VALERIE CULP WILKERSON
Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — The cat under Louvena Anderson's chair ate with great relish, crunching the little bones of the still-warm rat in a self-satisfied way.

Mrs. Anderson said she just kept talking to the parent she was visiting; it was all in a day's work.

Neither roaches nor rain nor rattle-eating cats keep Mrs. Anderson or Sue Dietz from making their appointed rounds as home visitors for the Lufkin Independent School District. Both women accept conditions as they find them and try to never appear judgmental. They serve as a liaison between Lufkin homes and all the schools — from elementary to high school — in the district.

Both women have been on the job since 1966, when their positions were created. Both say that things have changed in the nearly 20 years since they began.

"Many parents were not very school-minded in the 1960s," said Mrs. Dietz. "We feel that they are more school-minded today."

One reason parents weren't "school-minded," they feel, was because the 1960s were in an era when parents routinely kept their children home during inclement weather.

"Paul Avenue was a dirt road then. In wet weather it was almost impossible to get up and down it. If the little children walked in the mud, their little shoes would come completely apart by the time they got to school, because they were cheap shoes, like cardboard," Mrs. Dietz said.

Also in the '60s, parents didn't seem to realize the importance of their children being in school every day.

"They thought that since their children were going to school more than they had gone, they were doing pretty good," said Mrs. Anderson. "Sometimes the older children would have to stay home to babysit the younger children so that the mother could work outside the home."

Social progress has brought about paved roads, more daycare centers, and a greater understanding of the value of an education.

The women also have more specific success stories.

Mrs. Dietz said, "I visited a particular child a lot for poor attendance. I noticed that she would answer me when she could see me, but otherwise not. I said, 'Is there something wrong with her ears?' Her mother said, 'No, she is mentally retarded.'"

Mrs. Dietz didn't accept that because she had noticed that the girl answered intelligently when she did answer.

"I took her to get her ears tested. She was totally deaf in one ear and had a little bit of hearing in the other. With a hearing aid, it took her just a little while to come up to grade level."

Mrs. Anderson shared a similar story. They were called in because a girl was having problems in school. When they suspected an ear problem and had her examined, they learned that she had a 95 percent hearing loss in one ear because it was so infected and the other ear was infected to a lesser extent. They were able to arrange for surgery on both ears.

"She had been antagonistic with other children because her ears hurt. With them corrected, she became an acceptable person and a productive student. She graduated from high school and went on to college," Mrs. Anderson said.

Two sisters open store selling teaching material

By RUBEN VILLEGAS
El Paso Times

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Sisters Cynthia Huereque and Mary Elizabeth Castillo displayed a twinge of nervousness, mixed with excitement.

At their Eraser Dust office, housed in a comfortable and partly hidden corner of the Mesa Norte Shopping Center, the sisters and their families were busy arranging furniture. Their children stocked the shelves, husbands lifted the heavy materials, and the sisters, well, they just organized and supervised.

It was May, and they were hoping for the best.

Now, more than a semester into the school year, the venture appears to be a success.

Eraser Dust was Mrs. Castillo's brainchild. She and her sister, Mrs. Huereque, said they hope they can fill a need that has been neglected in El Paso.

"We're talking of the need of having educational materials available locally to make the teacher's job easier," Mrs. Castillo said. "These materials haven't been available locally."

What Mrs. Castillo and Mrs. Huereque offer is a store stacked with teaching supplements on history or science topics, bilingual kits, special reading materials, visual aids and posters.

"If the teachers need something special, we can order it," Mrs. Huereque said. "We have catalogs the teachers can look at when they come in."

But the offerings don't stop there. Mrs. Huereque and Mrs. Castillo are optimistic. Their hopes stem from more than just intuition, since both are teachers. And teaching is what they most enjoy.

"I'll have been teaching 17 years this year," said Mrs. Huereque, 38. "I've been at Tornillo High most recently, although I've been involved in all levels of teaching including special ed. I also taught my kids for two years at a Christian school."

Mrs. Castillo, 27, graduated from Austin High School 11 years after Mrs. Huereque, obtained her bachelor's degree in education with a certification in reading from the University of Texas at El Paso, and has taught second, third and seventh grade.

"Father encouraged us all to go into some area of education," Mrs. Castillo said, "so we have a family of teachers. Our oldest sister, Dee Murphy, taught in El Paso and our other sister, Irma Esconturias, taught in Midland and El Paso."

With the support of their husbands and a boost from the children, they opened their store in June, although it coincided with the close of the school year.

Mrs. Castillo and Mrs. Huereque

Another student was intelligent, but she never smiled and she wouldn't open her mouth wide enough to speak clearly. She had bad teeth. When Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Dietz were able to secure dental work for her, the girl's personality brightened and she finished school and became a successful secretary.

Mrs. Dietz still gets a laugh out of the surprised exclamation that came from the grandmother of a little boy she was able to help. She was visiting in the home of a fourth grader who couldn't read when the little boy crawled into her lap. She asked him his name, but he could not say it. She was told, "He can't talk."

She spoke his name syllable by syllable and he was able to mimic her. Before long, he was able to get out a pretty good rendition of his name. The grandmother heard him and called out, "Sister, sister, come in here quick! This lady's done stirred this baby's mouth up."

Mrs. Dietz said the boy had a slight speech impediment and nobody had ever taken the time to work with him on syllables and diction. They worked with him every week, and Mrs. Dietz said, "He is a precious young man now."

Some of the students they help do remember to thank the ladies who have helped them become "precious young men."

Mrs. Dietz shared a cherished memory of the school "tough guy" who telephoned her at home after his high school graduation. "He called and he was in tears. He said, 'Mrs. Dietz, I would not have graduated without your help.'"

They had been helping him since he was in the third grade, sometimes buying school supplies, sometimes helping in other ways. They had supplied dress clothes for him to wear to graduation because his family could not.

"Tough guy?" Mrs. Dietz said. "No. He had just had to act tough to survive."

Another young man screeched his brakes and backed up this past summer when he passed the women in their mobile library that they operate during the summer months. "You mean you are still doing this?" he said. "I checked out books from you when I was a little boy and I loved it."

Another young man had even higher praise for their summer program, which they call the Shade Tree Library. "He said reading had no real meaning for him until he learned to love to read in the Shade Tree Library," Mrs. Anderson said. He is now an attorney in Houston.

Successes like these are what keep the pair making their rounds, semester after semester. Their faces lit up in unison when they named the greatest reward of the job: "When we feel like we've actually helped someone," they said.

50 more arrests needed in case

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In comments marking Friday's anniversary of the abduction of American drug agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said at least 50 people involved in his kidnap, torture and murder remain at large.

"We have seen some progress in the prosecution of the case," the ambassador said at a news conference Thursday. "Until, however, all of the authors of this crime, actual and intellectual, are brought before the bar of justice, we cannot rest."

Gavin noted that 47 people, including reputed drug kingpins Rafael Caro Quintero and Ernesto Fonseca, have been jailed in the case.

"We know that there are at least another 50 involved," he said, describing them as "deeply implicated."

"I earnestly pray that by the time we come to the second anniversary of this heinous crime that the case will be completely resolved," he said.

Gavin called for vigorous prosecution of the case by the Mexican government and the bringing to justice of all involved, "whether officials or not."

On Feb. 7, 1985, Camarena, 37, of Calexico, Calif., was kidnapped within sight of the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city 360 miles northwest of the capital.

His brutally beaten body and that of Mexican pilot Alfredo Zavala Avelar, who had worked with the anti-drug program, were found on March 5 on a ranch 60 miles southeast of Guadalajara.

"Our level of tolerance has been exceeded by these events," U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said at the time.

Initial charges by U.S. officials that Mexican officials were slow to respond to the report of Camarena's abduction caused serious strains in U.S.-Mexican relations, including inspections of vehicles coming into the United States from Mexico that backed up traffic along the heavily traveled border for miles.

There also were widespread allegations by U.S. officials that the power, wealth, corrupting influence and prominence of drug traffickers in Mexico had gotten out of hand.

Although U.S. officials now say

Mexican has given increased attention to the anti-drug fight and improved its performance in the past year, they also believe that the drug traffickers have become increasingly effective at plying their trade.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III and his Mexican counterpart, Sergio Garcia Ramirez, have held regular meetings about the anti-drug campaign since the Camarena murder.

American statistics show that a third of the cocaine arriving in the United States now comes through Mexico, compared to none three years ago; nearly 40 percent of the marijuana arriving from abroad now is produced in Mexico, up from 30 percent, while the percentage of heroin also has increased to about 38 percent and the product itself is more highly refined.

U.S. officials here believe that Camarena was kidnapped for information he had learned about the lucrative cocaine trade.

Among the 47 people jailed in the case were six Guadalajara policemen and a former officer. Caro Quintero and Fonseca, alleged to be among the top four drug barons in Mexico, are charged with murder and a variety of other crimes and jailed in Mexico City's Northern Prison.

It was Gavin who announced the positive identification last March of Camarena's body.

"We call on responsible authorities in the government of the Republic of Mexico to join us in intensifying the search for and the apprehension of these detestable criminal elements so that they may be brought to the bar of justice," Gavin said at the time.

"We shall not be intimidated by this atrocity. We are in a war and we cannot accept that Enrique Camarena died in vain."

Throughout the year, Mexican officials have been anxious to point out their efforts in the war against the international drug trade, in response to the American charges of ineffectiveness and corruption.

Caro Quintero's confession after his arrest April 4 in Costa Rica said he paid $300,000 to Armando Pavon Reyes, commander of the federal Judicial Police in Guadalajara, so he could leave the city Feb. 9 in his private jet despite U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration officials' requests to detain him.

Pavon Reyes later was fired and arrested.

Most recently the Attorney General's Office here labeled as a lie a report by U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel, D-NY, that Caro Quintero was seen outside of prison dining at some of Mexico City's finest restaurants.

Rangel, chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, said after visiting Mexico that he had been told that the prisoner was seen at a lavish birthday party in his honor at a hotel, as well as dining in fancy restaurants.

Romantic style wedding gowns back in fashion

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

If the wide range of bridal fashions for spring could be summarized in a sentence, it would probably contain the word "romantic."

Brides in the coming season will not only be swathed in romantic tulle, lace and organza, but will also look fetching in silhouettes that are softly draped, tucked or shirred.

Expect to see more sparkle in the coming season as well, says Marilyn Spiegel, director of advertising and public relations at Alfred Angelo Originals, manufacturers of wedding dresses. She says that many gowns are of tissue satin or crystal organza; there is also lots of silk floss embroidery as well as pearl, rhinestone and sequin embellishments.

Other details that indicate a return to tradition include soft tucking and shirring. However, a bolder look with plunging necklines, off-the-shoulder and one-shoulder sleeves and even strapless dresses makes it clear that there is no wholesale return to the past.

Another trend that Spiegel and fashion editors of bridal magazines notice is a greater coordination of clothing style and color with the rest of the wedding decor. Bridesmaids and ushers are likely to be color coordinated. As a result, men's jackets are being shown in sherbet colors such as pale yellow and in such brilliant tones as hot pink, royal blue and purple.

Grooms are still likely to appear in the traditional black, gray or white jacket, but other members of the party, such as the mothers of the bride and groom are opting for more fashionable wear than the long pastel dresses they once chose. Taffetas in tea or street lengths, lots of lace and dresses that have what the fashion industry refers to as hip interest are turning up more often on today's more fashion-conscious mothers.

Jackie McCord Leo, fashion and beauty editor for Modern Bride, notes that designers of bridal gowns, influenced by fashion leaders such as Donna Karan and Azzedine Alaia, "have rediscovered the body with shapely jerseys and tight-fitting bodices. There are lots of '50s elements in bridal dresses. What this means for brides is shapely, sexy, slouchy jerseys with sensuous lean lines or with a body hugging bodice and a full skirt."

Bridal styles vary to fit many different income and taste levels, Spiegel notes. The Alfred Angelo firm, for example, has eight divisions, each of which caters to a different bride. At the top of the cost scale, dresses that retail for between $1,000 and $2,000 come in limited editions, are traditionally opulent and very formal with long trains, lots of lace and beading. Next comes the company's Piccione Couture line with prices ranging between $600 and $1,000. The dresses here are more "fashion forward," in Spiegel's words. Various models include such details as strapless dresses with matching cape or detachable sleeves; lengths vary from short to long.

The price point between $400 to $700 offers something for everyone. Lower priced dresses between $200 and $350 "are for a younger bride who likes lots of lace, ribbons and bows and what we call a 'top of the wedding cake' look," she adds.

One of the most noticeable trends is toward a "pulled together" bride who chooses accessories to match the look and feeling of the bridal dress, says Maria Mellinger McBride, an associate fashion editor at Bride's Magazine. Even the hose are coordinated and gloves, jewelry, purse and wrap are often purchased with an eye toward the total look, she says.

Isle of Man

The Isle of Man, which has an area of 227 square miles and a population of 61,000 people, is in the Irish Sea, 20 miles from Scotland and 30 miles from Cumberland. The island is rich in lead and iron. Its capital is Douglas. Farming, fishing and tourism are its main occupations. The Isle of Man is famous for the Manx tail-less cat.

Long before no-pass, no-play, there were home teachers

By VALERIE CULP WILKERSON
Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — The cat under Louvena Anderson's chair ate with great relish, crunching the little bones of the still-warm rat in a self-satisfied way.

Mrs. Anderson said she just kept talking to the parent she was visiting; it was all in a day's work.

Neither roaches nor rain nor rattle-eating cats keep Mrs. Anderson or Sue Dietz from making their appointed rounds as home visitors for the Lufkin Independent School District. Both women accept conditions as they find them and try to never appear judgmental. They serve as a liaison between Lufkin homes and all the schools — from elementary to high school — in the district.

Both women have been on the job since 1966, when their positions were created. Both say that things have changed in the nearly 20 years since they began.

"Many parents were not very school-minded in the 1960s," said Mrs. Dietz. "We feel that they are more school-minded today."

One reason parents weren't "school-minded," they feel, was because the 1960s were in an era when parents routinely kept their children home during inclement weather.

"Paul Avenue was a dirt road then. In wet weather it was almost impossible to get up and down it. If the little children walked in the mud, their little shoes would come completely apart by the time they got to school, because they were cheap shoes, like cardboard," Mrs. Dietz said.

Also in the '60s, parents didn't seem to realize the importance of their children being in school every day.

"They thought that since their children were going to school more than they had gone, they were doing pretty good," said Mrs. Anderson. "Sometimes the older children would have to stay home to babysit the younger children so that the mother could work outside the home."

Social progress has brought about paved roads, more daycare centers, and a greater understanding of the value of an education.

The women also have more specific success stories.

Mrs. Dietz said, "I visited a particular child a lot for poor attendance. I noticed that she would answer me when she could see me, but otherwise not. I said, 'Is there something wrong with her ears?' Her mother said, 'No, she is mentally retarded.'"

Mrs. Dietz didn't accept that because she had noticed that the girl answered intelligently when she did answer.

"I took her to get her ears tested. She was totally deaf in one ear and had a little bit of hearing in the other. With a hearing aid, it took her just a little while to come up to grade level."

Mrs. Anderson shared a similar story. They were called in because a girl was having problems in school. When they suspected an ear problem and had her examined, they learned that she had a 95 percent hearing loss in one ear because it was so infected and the other ear was infected to a lesser extent. They were able to arrange for surgery on both ears.

"She had been antagonistic with other children because her ears hurt. With them corrected, she became an acceptable person and a productive student. She graduated from high school and went on to college," Mrs. Anderson said.

Two sisters open store selling teaching material

By RUBEN VILLEGAS
El Paso Times

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Sisters Cynthia Huereque and Mary Elizabeth Castillo displayed a twinge of nervousness, mixed with excitement.

At their Eraser Dust office, housed in a comfortable and partly hidden corner of the Mesa Norte Shopping Center, the sisters and their families were busy arranging furniture. Their children stocked the shelves, husbands lifted the heavy materials, and the sisters, well, they just organized and supervised.

It was May, and they were hoping for the best.

Now, more than a semester into the school year, the venture appears to be a success.

Eraser Dust was Mrs. Castillo's brainchild. She and her sister, Mrs. Huereque, said they hope they can fill a need that has been neglected in El Paso.

"We're talking of the need of having educational materials available locally to make the teacher's job easier," Mrs. Castillo said. "These materials haven't been available locally."

What Mrs. Castillo and Mrs. Huereque offer is a store stacked with teaching supplements on history or science topics, bilingual kits, special reading materials, visual aids and posters.

"If the teachers need something special, we can order it," Mrs. Huereque said. "We have catalogs the teachers can look at when they come in."

But the offerings don't stop there. Mrs. Huereque and Mrs. Castillo are optimistic. Their hopes stem from more than just intuition, since both are teachers. And teaching is what they most enjoy.

"I'll have been teaching 17 years this year," said Mrs. Huereque, 38. "I've been at Tornillo High most recently, although I've been involved in all levels of teaching including special ed. I also taught my kids for two years at a Christian school."

Mrs. Castillo, 27, graduated from Austin High School 11 years after Mrs. Huereque, obtained her bachelor's degree in education with a certification in reading from the University of Texas at El Paso, and has taught second, third and seventh grade.

"Father encouraged us all to go into some area of education," Mrs. Castillo said, "so we have a family of teachers. Our oldest sister, Dee Murphy, taught in El Paso and our other sister, Irma Esconturias, taught in Midland and El Paso."

With the support of their husbands and a boost from the children, they opened their store in June, although it coincided with the close of the school year.

Mrs. Castillo and Mrs. Huereque

Another student was intelligent, but she never smiled and she wouldn't open her mouth wide enough to speak clearly. She had bad teeth. When Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Dietz were able to secure dental work for her, the girl's personality brightened and she finished school and became a successful secretary.

Mrs. Dietz still gets a laugh out of the surprised exclamation that came from the grandmother of a little boy

she was able to help. She was visiting in the home of a fourth grader who couldn't read when the little boy crawled into her lap. She asked him his name, but he could not say it. She was told, "He can't talk."

She spoke his name syllable by syllable and he was able to mimic her. Before long, he was able to get out a pretty good rendition of his name. The grandmother heard him and called out, "Sister, sister, come in here quick! This lady's done stirred this baby's mouth up."

Mrs. Dietz said the boy had a slight speech impediment and nobody had ever taken the time to work with him on syllables and diction. They worked with him every week, and Mrs. Dietz said, "He is a precious young man now."

Some of the students they help do remember to thank the ladies who have helped them become "precious young men."

Mrs. Dietz shared a cherished memory of the school "tough guy" who telephoned her at home after his high school graduation. "He called and he was in tears. He said, 'Mrs. Dietz, I would not have graduated without your help.'"

They had been helping him since he was in the third grade, sometimes buying school supplies, sometimes helping in other ways. They had supplied dress clothes for him to wear to graduation because his family could not.

"Tough guy?" Mrs. Dietz said. "No. He had just had to act tough to survive."

Another young man screeched his brakes and backed up this past summer when he passed the women in their mobile library that they operate during the summer months. "You mean you are still doing this?" he said. "I checked out books from you when I was a little boy and I loved it."

Another young man had even higher praise for their summer program, which they call the Shade Tree Library. "He said reading had no real meaning for him until he learned to love to read in the Shade Tree Library," Mrs. Anderson said. He is now an attorney in Houston.

Successes like these are what keep the pair making their rounds, semester after semester. Their faces lit up in unison when they named the greatest reward of the job: "When we feel like we've actually helped someone," they said.

50 more arrests needed in case

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In comments marking Friday's anniversary of the abduction of American drug agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said at least 50 people involved in his kidnap, torture and murder remain at large.

"We have seen some progress in the prosecution of the case," the ambassador said at a news conference Thursday. "Until, however, all of the authors of this crime, actual and intellectual, are brought before the bar of justice, we cannot rest."

Gavin noted that 47 people, including reputed drug kingpins Rafael Caro Quintero and Ernesto Fonseca, have been jailed in the case.

"We know that there are at least another 50 involved," he said, describing them as "deeply implicated."

"I earnestly pray that by the time we come to the second anniversary of this heinous crime that the case will be completely resolved," he said.

Gavin called for vigorous prosecution of the case by the Mexican government and the bringing to justice of all involved, "whether officials or not."

On Feb. 7, 1985, Camarena, 37, of Calexico, Calif., was kidnapped within sight of the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city 360 miles northwest of the capital.

His brutally beaten body and that of Mexican pilot Alfredo Zavala Avelar, who had worked with the anti-drug program, were found on March 5 on a ranch 60 miles southeast of Guadalajara.

"Our level of tolerance has been exceeded by these events," U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said at the time.

Initial charges by U.S. officials that Mexican officials were slow to respond to the report of Camarena's abduction caused serious strains in U.S.-Mexican relations, including inspections of vehicles coming into the United States from Mexico that backed up traffic along the heavily traveled border for miles.

There also were widespread allegations by U.S. officials that the power, wealth, corrupting influence and prominence of drug traffickers in Mexico had gotten out of hand.

Although U.S. officials now say

Mexican has given increased attention to the anti-drug fight and improved its performance in the past year, they also believe that the drug traffickers have become increasingly effective at plying their trade.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III and his Mexican counterpart, Sergio Garcia Ramirez, have held regular meetings about the anti-drug campaign since the Camarena murder.

American statistics show that a third of the cocaine arriving in the United States now comes through Mexico, compared to none three years ago; nearly 40 percent of the marijuana arriving from abroad now is produced in Mexico, up from 30 percent, while the percentage of heroin also has increased to about 38 percent and the product itself is more highly refined.

U.S. officials here believe that Camarena was kidnapped for information he had learned about the lucrative cocaine trade.

Among the 47 people jailed in the case were six Guadalajara policemen and a former officer. Caro Quintero and Fonseca, alleged to be among the top four drug barons in Mexico, are charged with murder and a variety of other crimes and jailed in Mexico City's Northern Prison.

It was Gavin who announced the positive identification last March of Camarena's body.

"We call on responsible authorities in the government of the Republic of Mexico to join us in intensifying the search for and the apprehension of these detestable criminal elements so that they may be brought to the bar of justice," Gavin said at the time.

"We shall not be intimidated by this atrocity. We are in a war and we cannot accept that Enrique Camarena died in vain."

Throughout the year, Mexican officials have been anxious to point out their efforts in the war against the international drug trade, in response to the American charges of ineffectiveness and corruption.

Caro Quintero's confession after his arrest April 4 in Costa Rica said he paid $300,000 to Armando Pavon Reyes, commander of the federal Judicial Police in Guadalajara, so he could leave the city Feb. 9 in his private jet despite U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration officials' requests to detain him.

Pavon Reyes later was fired and arrested.

Most recently the Attorney General's Office here labeled as a lie a report by U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel, D-NY, that Caro Quintero was seen outside of prison dining at some of Mexico City's finest restaurants.

Rangel, chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, said after visiting Mexico that he had been told that the prisoner was seen at a lavish birthday party in his honor at a hotel, as well as dining in fancy restaurants.

Romantic style wedding gowns back in fashion

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

If the wide range of bridal fashions for spring could be summarized in a sentence, it would probably contain the word "romantic."

Brides in the coming season will not only be swathed in romantic tulle, lace and organza, but will also look fetching in silhouettes that are softly draped, tucked or shirred.

Expect to see more sparkle in the coming season as well, says Marilyn Spiegel, director of advertising and public relations at Alfred Angelo Originals, manufacturers of wedding dresses. She says that many gowns are of tissue satin or crystal organza; there is also lots of silk floss embroidery as well as pearl, rhinestone and sequin embellishments.

Other details that indicate a return to tradition include soft tucking and shirring. However, a barer look with plunging necklines, off-the-shoulder and one-shoulder sleeves and even strapless dresses makes it clear that there is no wholesale return to the past.

Another trend that Spiegel and fashion editors of bridal magazines notice is a greater coordination of clothing style and color with the rest of the wedding decor. Bridesmaids and ushers are likely to be color coordinated. As a result, men's jackets are being shown in sherbet colors such as pale yellow and in such brilliant tones as hot pink, royal blue and purple.

Grooms are still likely to appear in the traditional black, gray or white jacket, but other members of the party, such as the mothers of the bride and groom are opting for more fashionable wear than the long pastel dresses they once chose. Taffetas in tea or street lengths, lots of lace and dresses that have what the fashion industry refers to as hip interest are turning up more often on today's more fashion-conscious mothers.

Jackie McCord Leo, fashion and beauty editor for Modern Bride, notes that designers of bridal gowns, influenced by fashion leaders such as Donna Karan and Azzedine Alaia, "have rediscovered the body with shapely jerseys and tight-fitting bodices. There are lots of '50s elements in bridal dresses. What this means for brides is shapely, sexy, slouchy jerseys with sensuous lean lines or with a body hugging bodice and a full skirt."

Bridal styles vary to fit many different income and taste levels, Spiegel notes. The Alfred Angelo firm, for example, has eight divisions, each of which caters to a different bride. At the top of the cost scale, dresses that retail for between $1,000 and $2,000 come in limited editions, are traditionally opulent and very formal with long trains, lots of lace and beading. Next comes the company's Piccione Couture line with prices ranging between $600 and $1,000. The dresses here are more "fashion forward," in Spiegel's words. Various models include such details as strapless dresses with matching cape or detachable sleeves; lengths vary from short to long.

The price point between $400 to $700 offers something for everyone. Lower priced dresses between $200 and $350 "are for a younger bride who likes lots of lace, ribbons and bows and what we call a 'top of the wedding cake' look," she adds.

One of the most noticeable trends is toward a "pulled together" bride who chooses accessories to match the look and feeling of the bridal dress, says Maria Mellinger McBride, an associate fashion editor at Bride's Magazine. Even the hose are coordinated and gloves, jewelry, purse and wrap are often purchased with an eye toward the total look, she says.

Wedding planning guides suggested

By The Associated Press
 Authorities say that planning a formal wedding takes a minimum of six months. In large cities and around popular marriage dates like the month of June, they often suggest planning down the date and location for the ceremony and reception as much as a year ahead of time.
 But, what do you do when the wedding date will be only a month or two away and some form of wedding with guests is contemplated?

It can be done, but the immediacy of the deadline calls for faster footwork, less shopping around, more decisiveness and a willingness to settle for what is available in the way of reception hall, wedding dress and the like. Musts, besides a date and a place, include a guest list, invitations, something to wear, something to eat and drink. Other chores vary depending on plans, but are likely to include planning a wedding trip, selecting household furnishings or arranging the logistics of consolidating two households into one.

By making some compromises, delegating jobs and working fast you may find it amazing how fast the wedding and reception plans come together. For example, though it generally takes several months to get the dress you order, most bridal salons have a choice of dresses in a variety of sizes and styles which can be sold as is, according to Suzanne Kresse, publisher-editor of Bridal Guide. That means delivery can be virtually immediate except for any alterations which may need to be done.

Restaurants with private rooms also are generally able to provide an attractive setting for a wedding party, provided you can be flexible about dates.

Some ideas put forward by Ms. Kresse to save time and money start with the invitations. She suggests purchasing paper and writing out your invitations yourself. You could also have a calligrapher write the invitation and then have it reproduced using a photographic offset process. Look for an instant-printer shop to obtain fast service.

Instead of having the ceremony at a church and the reception at a public place, choose to be married at home. Rent chairs, china, glasses and whatever else you need; you may do more preparation but it can be done without regard to somebody else's timetable, she said. Furthermore, she adds, besides saving time it offers a particularly lovely ambience. If your own home is too small, you may be able to borrow a friend's or family member's place.

Other ideas for saving time and money include: using silk flowers for bouquets and decorations; the groom can opt to wear a suit rather than renting formal wear; time the ceremony for the morning and serve a wedding breakfast, which is considerably less expensive and less time-consuming than a wedding dinner. Finally, she suggests, cut the guest list; the fewer the number of people, the less time it will take to plan the event.

Stambough honored on birthday

Mrs. Elvin Stambough was honored on her 88th birthday Tuesday evening before the regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Members of the American Legion and Auxiliary were invited to the hall at 6:30 p.m. where they were served a chili supper followed by ice cream and cake. The cake was decorated with pink roses with numbers "88" in the center.

After the birthday party, Pet Ott introduced Naoma Spann who gave the program on Texas wildflowers. Her husband Joe accompanied her to the meeting.

Spann said, "Soil preparation is not necessary since most wildflowers can be broadcast over undisturbed soil, although some delay in germination may result. "If you feel a need to prepare a seed bed, do not till deep. Two to three inches of light tilling is sufficient. Water well to firm bed."

Spann presented the group a pound of wildflower seeds. They will be planted in selected spots around the Legion Hall.

The Legion and Auxiliary went into separate groups for the business meetings. Betty Jo Carlson, vice-president, conducted the auxiliary meeting. Reports were heard from hospital, community service, americanism, membership and Girl State committees.

The special pin to be worn during the Sesquicentennial year have been received and were distributed during the social hour. The treasurer was instructed to reorder the pins.

The group will host recreation parties at the Veterans Medical Center and at King's Manor in Hereford next week.

The next meeting will be March 4. Argen Draper will present the program entitled "Sam Houston's Wife."

Annual recital scheduled

WTSU — On Friday night, Feb. 21, West Texas State University's department of music will present its annual Faculty Grand Recital in Northern Recital Hall.

Early arrivers may browse the Formal Art Gallery and some faculty art exhibits in the atrium while enjoying light refreshments. The recital itself will begin at 8 p.m. Then, following the recital, there will be a buffet reception in the atrium of Northern Hall. All of this is offered without charge to the public.

The recital will feature the talents of the Harrington String Quartet, a faculty woodwind ensemble, a brass quintet, vocal soloists, pianists, harpsichordists, and percussionists in pieces ranging from classical to jazz.

Deaf Smith 4-H'ers participate

Thirteen 4-H'ers from Deaf Smith County participated in the 90th Annual Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show at Ft. Worth the last week in January.

Patrick Newton faired well in the junior barrow show placing his heavy weigh crossbred pig at first place in a large class of 62. Patrick also placed his medium wool lamb third competing with around 160 other lambs.

Cory Newton exhibited his heavy spotted poland China in a fourth place hole and middle weight york at 15th in a class of 35.

The Wells bunch did very well in the chester barrow show with their "home grown pork". Kelly placed eighth in the medium weight class while Shannon stood a close 10th. Kristi Wells placed her light weight chester at 12th competing against 35 barrows. Donna Grotegut placed her medium wool lamb 11th in a class of 155. Monica Grotegut also showed a medium wool lamb while Kristie Wells stood 28th in a large class medium wool lambs.

The steer show began Jan. 30 with a tough Hereford show. Donna Grotegut stood fourth in a class of 38 medium weight Hereford steers. The European cross steers show began Friday with six county 4-H'ers participating.

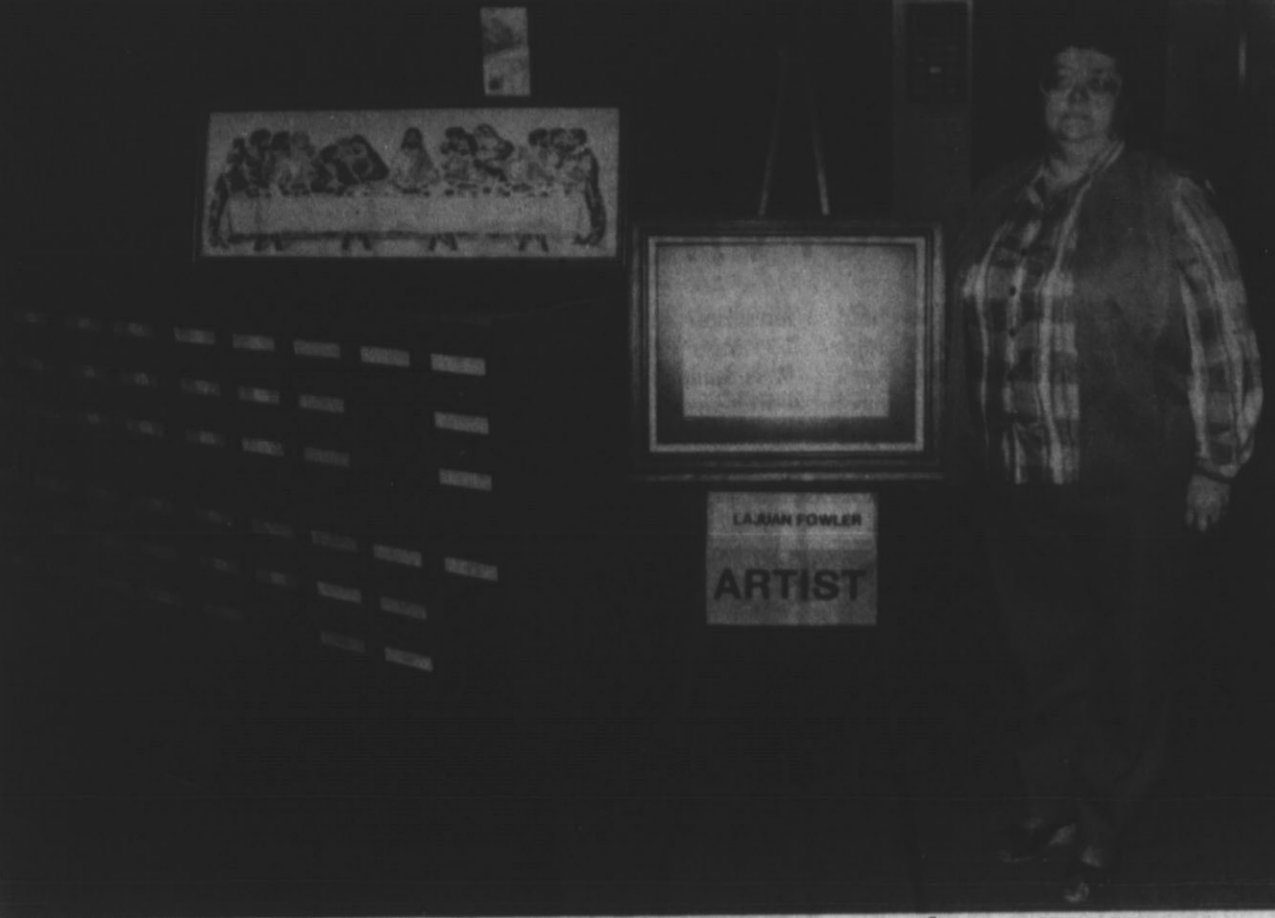

Rickie Vogel exhibited the second place heavy weight steer after standing tough in the first hole for most of the class time. Jeremy Myers exhibited his heavy light weight steer to a 10th place while Chris Grotegut placed a close 13th. Myers also placed his heavyweight steer at 14th. Greg Urbanczyk stood 22nd in a tough class of light heavy weights while Angela Brumley placed 28th in the heavy medium weight European Cross steers. Each of the European classes had 78 steers competing.

All of the 4-H'ers who placed 20th are better received premium money and sale honors.

Between the Covers

By DIANNE PIERSON
Library Director

Two bestselling novels are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. They are "Lie Down With Lions" by Ken Follett and "Pargeters" by Norah Lofts.

"Lie Down With Lions" by Ken Follett is set in a valley in Afghanistan ringed with wild mountains called the Valley of Five Lions, a place of ancient legend where men and custom haven't changed since the beginning of time. It is a story of espionage, intrigue, and dangerous loves.

A young Englishwoman, a French physician, and a roving American each have their reasons for arriving in Afghanistan where the mountain-bred natives wage a guerrilla war against the invading Russians. Jean-Pierre brings medical relief to the Afghans, his pregnant wife, Jane, aids and advises the native women, and Ellis, the American, bears a message for Masud. Ellis first has to find the legendary leader of the Afghan guerillas, for the Russians want Masud too...alive or dead.

Death comes down from hidden aeries, while a cold-eyes Russian commander plots to use his own secret weapon. Below in the Valley of Five Lions, a brave and beautiful woman stumbles upon a treachery that forces her to make a terrifying decision.

Follett builds a menace as only he can do, setting a hunted pair with a babe in arms in flight across an impassable mountain, clambering over ice-covered crags, pursued by enemy helicopters—as he leads us to a confrontation that echoes all our nightmares. Follett is also the author of "The Eye Of The Needle," "The Key To Rebecca" and "Triple."

"Pargeters" is Norah Lofts final historical novel. In "Pargeters" she presents a colorful and compelling tale of a very special house and the men and women who lived in it during England's Civil War in the seventeenth century.

Pargeting is a skilled trade, and Adam Woodley created such beautiful plaster designs for John Mercer's new house at Minsham that Mercer named the house Pargeters in honor of the craftsman. When Mercer's daughter Penelope fell in love and married Woodley, little did both realize just how strongly their families would be united in that fine house during the turbulent years of battle and bloodshed which lay ahead.

In the next generation, however, Adam's spirited daughter, Sarah would realize it. As her brother John valiantly fought for the King under the reckless Prince Rupert and the tenant farmers ran off to join Cromwell's Roundheads, Sarah desperately struggled to keep Pargeters running. When Sarah saved a badly wounded young man who had a Puritan prince on his head, she knew if she were caught, they both would surely hang. But Sarah would let neither war nor tyranny take away this man she loved or the house she so proudly possessed. "Pargeters" is a story you will read with relish and remember for years to come.

Medication

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a woman, 26 years old. I attempted suicide twice last year after having spent several months in a psychiatric hospital.

I wanted to end my life because I felt isolated, unloved, unsure of myself, and I was tired of being rejected.

A friend told me about a suicide prevention network hotline. He said it was staffed with experts and urged me to give it a try.

I called and got a recording saying, "All the counselors are busy. Please try again." I called five minutes later and the line was still busy. After four more attempts I felt deeply depressed and more frustrated than ever. I became extremely agitated and worst of all, I felt rejected. Six busy signals in a row, from an agency that was supposed to help me! What better evidence that no one cared if I lived or died?

I had the pills in my hand when I received a call from a friend who said he had arranged an appointment for the following day with a psychiatrist who specializes in bipolar disorders. I decided to hold the pills until after I had seen the doctor.

That one visit saved my life. I was put on medication that performed a miracle. I now know that manic-depressives need not live forever in hell.

But the point of my letter should not be lost because of my good fortune. It is this: Hotlines that are supposed to help people should do just that. If my friend hadn't called, I would have been a goner.—MRS. X FROM THE DEPTHS OF DESPAIR and recruiting additional volunteers. Second, your experience with the doctor was well worth repeating. I frequently suggest to deeply depressed people that they seek professional help. Medication can change the lives of manic-depressives. Your letter was a splendid testimonial and I am grateful to you for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was delighted to see your answer to "Apoplectic in Dayton." You told her to MYOB.

I too, live in a pigsty and my family doesn't seem to mind. I work full-time and pay 50 percent of the bills. I found out years ago that it was impossible to clean the house up as fast as they could mess it up. So I decided if they can stand to live in a place that looks like a cyclone hit it, I can stand it, too. I saw no point in being a short-order cook and providing round-the-clock maid service for a bunch of slob. (My husband is the No. 1 offender).

I confess I talked to myself a lot before I was able to come to terms with what I perceived as an insoluble problem. I had to choose between acceptance and migraines. I chose acceptance and have been a lot happier ever since. Please tell those Crazy Clean women out there to join the sisterhood.—PEACE OF MIND IN TEXAS AND LOVING IT

DEAR P.O.M.: It's a clear-cut case of mind over matter. If nobody minds it doesn't matter. Thanks for the short course.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex—Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

DEAR MRS. X: I am glad you wrote for several reasons. First, I've received many complaints about busy signals on hotlines. I checked them myself and found those complaints to be valid. Something should be done about installing more lines

Pancake supper set Tuesday

The congregation at St. Thomas Episcopal Church invites the public to their annual Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper set from 5-8 p.m. Tuesday at the church, 601 W. Park Ave.

Tickets for the all-you-can-eat meal are priced at $3 for adults and $1.50 for children 10 years of age and under.

Shrove Tuesday is celebrated the day before Ash Wednesday. The idea of the observance is to cleanse the house of all fat, meat, and other animal products in preparation for the Lenten fast.

ASTRONOMY
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Myth and astronomy were probably taken into account when the ancient Aztec Indians built their capital city and major temple in what is now Mexico City.

Measurements made of the ruins of the Templo Mayor, the chief Aztec temple, indicated the Aztecs aligned their temple in order to accurately measure the equinoxes — the times when night and day are of equal length.

Other work by Edward Calnek of the University of Rochester and colleagues indicate the temple and the surrounding street grid of the capital city were located and oriented on the basis of sightings to surrounding mountains that figured prominently in Aztec myth.

Beef, chicken fajitas served at luncheon

Members of Draper Extension Homemakers Club met at noon Wednesday in the home of Brenda Pagett.

A beef and chicken fajita's program was given by Johnnie Messer and Sherrie Blackwell with each member taking part in preparing the food. The history of fajitas was discussed while the food was being prepared.

The meeting was called to order after lunch by President Blackwell. The T.E.H.A. prayer was said and plans were made to purchase Texas and United States flags.

The opening exercise was a reading by Pagett called "Something Good About You."

Visitors included Argen Draper, Lori Boyett and Sandra Walker. Plans were made for the Appreciation Luncheon set for noon Feb. 24 at the Bull Barn. Members were advised of their responsibility for council's first fund raiser of the year-the Camp Fire's annual meeting Feb. 18.

Members present included Pagett, Messer, Blackwell, Carmen Rickman, Vickie Higgins and Toni Vaughn.

The next meeting will be March 5 at the home of Carmen Rickman. Dennis Newton, county extension agent, will give a program on house plants.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Pretty plants pretty lethal

DEAR POLLY — I know that many plants are poisonous to children but don't know which ones. Can you give me a list of those that are dangerous?

— JANET
DEAR JANET — Here are a few of the most common plants, along with the part of the plant, that are poisonous:

Amaryllis (bulb), azalea (all), autumn crocus (all), bleeding heart (all), boxwood (all), buttercup (all), caladium (all), Christmas pepper (leaves and berries), daffodil (bulb), delphinium (all), dieffenbachia (all), philodendron (all), English ivy (all), foxglove (all), holly (berries), horse chestnut (nut), hyacinth (bulb), hydrangea (all), iris (bulb), jack-in-the-pulpit (all), jasmine (all), Jerusalem cherry (all), lily-of-the-valley (all), morning glory (seeds), mountain laurel (all), narcissus (bulb), potato (green parts, sprouts), privet (all), rhododendron (all), rhusbarb (leaves), sweet pea (seed), tomato (leaves), yew (all).

Some of these plants are more deadly than others, but all are capable of making a young child sick. There are others, too. For a longer listing of poisonous plants in your area of the country, contact your local poison center.

If you can't find the phone number in your phone book, ask your doctor or local hospital for the number of the nearest poison center.

By the way, while I'm on the subject of poisoning, here's an important point to keep in mind. The poison center recommends keeping a bottle of syrup of ipecac in the house if you have young children. If a child eats something poisonous and vomiting needs to be induced (only on the instruction of the poison center, of course), syrup of ipecac will do the job. However, be sure to check the expiration date on your bottle. After expiration, the ipecac becomes less effective and might not work as quickly as necessary — or at all! Make a point of checking the expiration date and buy a new bottle when necessary, even if you've never used the old bottle. — POLLY

Local OEA chapter schedules activities

Vocational business and office education students at Hereford High School will join Office Education Association members across the nation in activities to make the community aware of the importance of vocational student organizations during OEA Week, Feb. 10-16, 1986. OEA Week is being observed concurrently with Vocational Education Week.

The purpose of this celebration is to inform the public of the meaning and objectives of OEA and the importance of vocational education. By doing this, the community will be aware of the important part that OEA plays in local school and community. Many of the activities planned by the Hereford OEA chapter evolve around this year's national theme, "OEA: A Score Of Excellence."

The Office Education Association, with a membership of more than 76,000 students, is designed to develop leadership abilities in the American business world, and competency in office occupations. Through its professional, financial, civic, service, and social activities and projects, OEA is developing leaders of tomorrow, today.

The Office Education Association was established in 1966 and it promotes leadership, cooperation and citizenship among high school and post-secondary students. Vocational business and office education prepares students for clerical, secretarial, accounting, and data processing careers.

Hereford High School OEA chapter members have planned several activities during OEA Week which include: a Teacher Appreciation Day, Employer Appreciation Day, and a pizza party.

For more information about the Office Education Association or vocational education, contact Joyce Wartes at 364-4456.

Abused, neglected children discussed

Members of La Afflatus Estudio Club met Tuesday afternoon with Lucile Hughes and Alleen Montgomery hosting the affair in the home of Mary Herring.

Refreshments were served by Herring and Lemons.

Emily Suggs, program chairman for the day, introduced Sharon Pennington who presented the program. Her topic was abused and neglected children. She said child abuse has more than doubled in the last 18 months, more than 20 cases are reported to the law enforcement officers each month.

She also said that 74 percent of abused children are under five years of age, most under two. Parents who abuse their children may be helped by joining Parents United or Parents Anonamuse.

The next meeting will be Feb. 18 in Pet Ott's home. Eunice Petersen will give the program on Christian art.

Others attending were Opal Elliston, Eva Gilliland, Tresa Hale, Alberta Higgins, Lydia Hopson, Bea Hutson, Lola Jewell, Allyne Johnson, Ott, Jennie B. Terrell, Mary Williamson, Louise Kinsey and Virginia Beasley.

Henry L. Stimson was a secretary of state for Herbert Hoover and secretary of war in Franklin D. Roosevelt's cabinet.

Women breaking from traditional employment

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico women are turning to higher education and non-traditional work to help them sever the economic chains that have shackled them to lower wages and higher poverty rates than men.

"Women are breaking out of the traditional jobs," said Judy Ricci, administrative assistant for the state Commission on the Status of Women. "We're seeing it a little, not enough; but the trend is there."

A report by the state Employment Security Department looks at women in the labor force in New Mexico, detailing the number employed and their jobs, education and earnings.

The report, "Women Workers in New Mexico," found more women entering non-traditional fields and going to college.

But it also found women with four years of college making about the same salaries as men with an eighth-grade education in New Mexico. And it said that more women heads-of-household live below the poverty level.

Susan Dickson, an ESD analyst who wrote the report, said the disparity in salaries comes largely because women work in lower-paying fields.

"The main problem there, I think, is that women with four years of college in the past have majored in traditionally women's fields, teaching, nursing, the kinds of fields that don't pay very well," she said.

But Dickson's report also found women slowly moving into traditionally male-dominated fields and taking advantage of higher education.

In 1940, only 5 percent of all New Mexico women age 25 and older had graduated from college; by 1980, the figure had increased to 14 percent. In addition, 31 percent of all women 25 and older in the New Mexico had completed a year of college in 1980, compared with 22 percent a decade earlier.

"We see the gaps closing," Ricci said.

Still, women working full time in New Mexico make an average of 59 cents for every dollar male workers receive, the report said.

The greatest disparity in wages came in the insurance business, where women were paid 46 cents for every dollar paid to men, and in the financial industries, where women — who made up more than half the labor force — received 49 cents for every dollar received by men.

The smallest gap came in elementary and secondary schools, where women earned 89 cents for every dollar earned by men.

The gap in school wages improved substantially over a decade ago, when women in education earned 63 percent of what men earned. But Dickson said little progress was made in other occupations between 1970 and 1980.

She said the difference between earnings of men and women in New Mexico has hovered around 60 cents for 30 years.

In 1980, women who worked full time in New Mexico were twice as likely as men to earn less than $10,000 a year, while men were eight times as likely to earn more than $20,000 a year.

"The industrial and occupational concentration of female workers in a few so-called women's jobs is the biggest problem facing women in the labor market today," Dickson said.

For example, 79 percent of the clerical workers in the state are women, while only 4 percent of the engineers are women.

The report, issued Oct. 29, said the difference between wages usually is explained by the fact women enter and leave the workforce more often, that women's skills and education are not equal to those of men and that male and female workers are concentrated in different occupations which pay differently.

However, the report said, those explanations cannot account for all of the disparity and some of the difference in salaries "is attributed to sex discrimination."

The report said that while jobs performed by women may be equal to those performed by men in skills, effort and responsibility, the work itself often is different.

The report said one proposal to address the problem is comparable worth, under which workers would earn comparable pay for work of equal value. The report said, however, the concept has drawn a lot of opposition because of increased labor costs, the difficulty of deciding the value of a job and the belief that the free market system is the best way to determine wages.

Women's wages have an implication for the state's economy.

In 1984, 64 percent of New Mexico women of childbearing age, 20 to 44, were working or looking for work.

Nearly 82,000 more women were employed in the civilian workforce in 1980 than in 1970. By the end of 1984, 58,000 more women had joined workers' ranks, accounting for 59 percent of the growth in the four-year period. And in 1984, New Mexico's unemployment rate for women dropped below that of men for the first time in many years.

The report also said women's low income and the growing number of households headed by women have combined to increase the poverty rate among women and children. Ten percent of all New Mexico households were headed by women in 1980, and 37 percent of those lived below the poverty level, compared with 12 percent for married couple families.

"Poverty will continue to be a serious problem among women because of the growing number of female heads of household in both the state and the nation," the report said. "Better income for women through entrance into high-paying, non-traditional careers and comparable wages are important factors in countering this problem."

Ricci said she was concerned by the number of women in poverty.

"That was the most dismal thing of the whole report," she said. "Nationally, they talk about the feminization of poverty ... that kept popping into my head."

The report found women workers were making gains, "but I think the economic situation is taking hold of people faster than they can get out of their situation," she said. "And in light of our state's deficit, you wonder what kind of resources will be out there to help these people."

Ricci said a lot of women who are seeking jobs or better jobs contact the commission, but that many of them don't have the money or time to go to school before getting a job — they need a job now.

"Divorce rates are increasing," Ricci said. "I don't see any sign of women doing better after divorce. Men tend to do better after a divorce. Women are pressed for child care, they don't have the skills to go out and work, and if they do have the skills, they are in the traditional, low-paying jobs."

DR. GOTT Bruising may be sign of illness

DEAR DR. GOTT — Lately I've been bruising really easily, and it takes a long time for the bruises to disappear. I'm a college student and, needless to say, I don't eat very well. Could I be missing something important in my diet?

DEAR READER — You bet. Go to the student health service and get a checkup. Easy bruising is not normal and may reflect a dietary deficiency or a problem with your coagulation system. Bruising is sometimes an early sign of monoclonosis. Have you been feeling unusually run-down lately?

DEAR DR. GOTT — How would you treat me if I had classical migraine, Meniere's disease, chronic back strain, hypotension and nervous disorders? I'm a male, 36.

DEAR READER — I would send you to a neurologist. Migraine can be prevented by using beta-blockers. Meniere's disease may be helped by anti-motion-sickness medicine. Chronic back strain may require special exercises. Hypotension, if it exists as an ailment, doesn't require treatment. Nervous disorders tend to make everything worse. So it's off to the neurologist to see if your panoply of complaints has a common origin.

DEAR DR. GOTT — After my friend's children are in the pool they go into her air-conditioned house. Couldn't they get sick?

DEAR READER — Yes, but not from the air conditioner. Colds are caused by viruses. You don't catch a cold by getting cold, unless that exposure is prolonged and upsets your resistance to disease. I doubt that the change from pool to house is likely to affect healthy children. However, they could get sick from being exposed to a contagious disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 74 and have osteoporosis. Everything I read about this bone disease tells how to prevent it. I'm interested in knowing some measures I can take to prevent broken bones. I take Indocin and calcium.

DEAR READER — I am sorry to tell you that at age 74, you can do little to prevent broken bones — except to avoid having accidents or falling. The use of calcium and vitamin D may help to arrest mineral loss from your bones, but what is gone is gone. The purpose of treatment is really to prevent further calcium loss. Had you maintained a high calcium intake since your reproductive years, you might have been able to avoid some osteoporosis, but doctors did not commonly recommend calcium supplements years ago. In my opinion, the most appropriate approach is to see a metabolism specialist (endocrinologist), who may wish to alter your dose of calcium and vitamin D, consider estrogen, add a thiazide diuretic, use fluoride or try calcitonin (a new drug therapy).

DEAR DR. GOTT — What are the symptoms of having a tapeworm? I can't gain any weight, my nose itches constantly and at times it seems that something is choking me. I have very little strength.

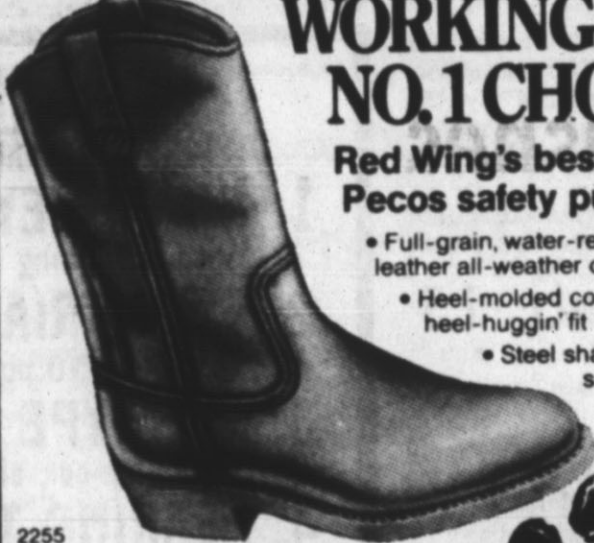

DEAR READER — Most people with tapeworm don't realize they have it unless they pass segments of the worm or have massive infestation that causes bowel problems, weakness, weight loss and anemia. I believe that your symptoms probably result from another source. However, a stool examination for tapeworm can easily be performed by most hospital laboratories. Ask your doctor about it, but request a full physical examination first. The place to start is in a doctor's office.

Giving Valentines

that students made to give to patients in Amarillo Veterans Hospital. Principal of Bluebonnet Elementary School, Howard Birdwell, left, and fifth grade student, Dusty Saul, grin as they wade through red and white valentines.

Duncan, Trowbridge serve as hostesses

Members of Wyche Extension Homemakers Club met recently in the home of Virgie Duncan with Clara Trowbridge serving as co-hostess.

President Audrey Rusher conducted the meeting and Virgie Duncan gave the opening exercise entitled "Holy Bread."

Corine Smith was welcomed as a visitor.

Roll call was answered with "say something nice about the person on your right."

Volunteers to make pies for the Camp Fire Dinner scheduled Feb. 18 were Carol Odom, Louise Packard and Trowbridge. Wyche club members will furnish potato salad.

Argen Draper reported on the sequicentennial chili supper planned March 1 and club members, Pet Ott, Ethel Logan, Wynema Wheeler, Louise Axe and Louise Packard, volunteered to make cobbles.

TEHA chairman requested an exhibit of handicrafts to be featured at the Appreciation Luncheon planned at noon Feb. 24. Club Woman of the Year will be announced at that time.

Ethel Lotan gave a program on making fajitas. She showed members how to marinate and cook the meat and julienne vegetables. The dishes were then served to those present.

Other refreshments included fresh vegetables and dip, cheese and crackers, bran muffins and pumpkin bread.

A small heart box of candy was given as a door prize to Novella Hewitt.

Other members present were Gene Holden and Lorena Ward.

Toujours Amis Study Club tours hospital

Members of Toujours Amis Study Club gathered Tuesday night at Deaf Smith General Hospital for a tour of the newly remodeled facility.

Donna Lauderback and Donna Tidmore, both hospital personnel, guided the tour and explained the operation of the equipment and the various health care services available to the community.

Nena Veazey, club president, conducted a brief business meeting. Several projects were discussed and tabled for further consideration. Reports were given by the treasurer and social chairman and the meeting was adjourned.

Banana split pie was served by co-hostesses, Shannon Hagar and Leisa Lewis. Valentine treats were presented from secret pals.

Other members present included Elaine McNutt, Cindy Black, Rhonda Nieman, Kathy Carthel, Patti

Brown, Becky Reinart, Ange Lauderback, Debbie Donaldson, Pam Perrin, Karen Keeling, Terri Laing, Melissa Richardson, Marsha Winget, Tricia Workman, Camille Williamson and Kim Bigham.

PAINTING WITH ARTHRITIS

ATLANTA (AP) — Pierre Auguste Renoir, the French Impressionist painter, was born Feb. 25, 1841, and this year marks the 145th anniversary of his birth.

Few people realize that Renoir painted some of his most important works with hands that were badly crippled with arthritis. In his later works, Renoir seemed to focus on dexterity and the use of the hands.

"Jean Renoir, the Artist's Son," painted in 1900, shows a young boy doing needlework. The year before his death in 1919, Renoir painted "Woman Tying Her Shoe."

Today, as in Renoir's day, there is no cure for most kinds of arthritis, says the Arthritis Foundation.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Lumpy batter is pancake secret

DEAR POLLY — Why do pancake recipes say that a few lumps should be left in the batter? Won't that create raw pockets of flour in the finished pancakes? — SUSAN

DEAR SUSAN — The ideal pancake is a light and tender creation. Overbeating the batter will develop the gluten in the flour, making the pancake tough. Therefore, most recipes instruct that a few lumps can remain in the batter.

The batter should be mixed only until the dry ingredients are thoroughly moistened. Any lumps will dissolve when the pancake is cooked. Treat the pancake batter gently and it will reward you with meltily tender pancakes. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Everytime I make stuffing for a turkey or chicken, I dread facing the dirty frying pans, spills on the gas range, etc., that occur when sauteing the celery, onions and sausage meat for the stuffing.

I think I've finally solved the problem. After I dice my celery and onions, I take the sausage out of the casing. I put margarine called for in the recipe into a large roasting pan. I then place all the rest of the ingredients that need to be precooked into this pan and bake it in a 350-degree oven for about 30 minutes. The mixture is perfectly cooked with no mess. I just add the seasoning and bread cubes to this same pan, toss and stuff the turkey or chicken. — MRS. T.W.L.

DEAR MRS. T.W.L. — This certainly is an easy way to prepare stuffing. Just be sure to keep an eye on it so the vegetables don't burn and also thoroughly cook the sausage. Your helpful pointers earn you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1001 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My mother said you have a recipe for a cleaner for wood paneling. Could you reprint it, please? — CHRIS

DEAR CHRIS — This is a handy wash for wood paneling. It does a good job of removing dust and grease without ruining the finish. I think it's time to run this one again:

Mix one tablespoon white vinegar, one tablespoon olive oil and one quart warm water. Dip a cloth in the warm solution, wring it out well, then use it to rub down the paneling. Dry by wiping down with a soft clean cloth. For extra protection after washing and drying, apply a thin coat of paste wax, buffing well with a soft clean cloth.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Homemade Soaps and Cleaners," which has this formula as well as formulas for homemade furniture polish, household cleaners, a heavy-duty laundry presoak, homemade soap and more. Others who would like this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Make a pretty box for treasures or toys by covering a cardboard box with pieces of scrap material.

Use a heavy cardboard box, such as those used to pack apples or oranges. Select a variety of colors and shapes of fabric to cover the box.

Kids can ask an adult to help cut out squares or other shapes with pinking shears. About 60 squares of 5-by-5-inch material are needed to cover an average size carton.

Mix white glue with an equal amount of water. Start with half a cup of white glue and half a cup of water. Use a small paint brush to paint watered glue onto the area of the box where a fabric piece will be smoothed into place.

Overlap the pieces to completely cover the box. Allow the box to dry. Finally, paint over the fabric with a final coat of the glue and water mixture to reduce fraying of the fabric. — NICKI

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peavee or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Symptoms may be caused by digestive tract disorder

LUBBOCK — A group of digestive tract disease types recognized only in the past 10 years may be responsible for some abnormalities previously diagnosed as eating or emotional disorders.

Sinn Anuras, M.D., new chief of gastroenterology at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, is a pioneer in studies of familial visceral myopathies — muscle diseases of the internal organs. Those diseases appear to occur more often in members of the same family.

Anuras began eight years ago researching degenerative diseases that damage the smooth muscles lining the digestive tract. Those muscles must contract to move food through the digestive system.

Patients referred to Anuras with symptoms of digestive tract blockage had received a variety of diagnoses from other physicians. Symptoms include bloating, pain after eating, bowel obstruction, nausea and vomiting, and inability to eat. Previous diagnoses have ranged from neurosis to anorexia, but Anuras thinks the diseases he is studying instead may be responsible.

Researchers at first thought that only one type of the disease existed. In that type, Anuras said, the victim suffers food blockage in the duodenum, the first section of the small intestine. The duodenum enlarges up to three times its size because of the blockage and an enlarged bladder also results.

"It was originally thought that this was the only hope of smooth muscle disease, but patient referrals later have shown that there may be as many as three different types," Anuras

In the second type, X-ray examinations show multiple pockets, or diverticula, in the small bowel, he said. Diverticular disease commonly has been seen in the colons of elderly people, but now is being recognized as a disease of the small bowel.

In Type III, the patient has a dilatation or expansion from the esophagus that may affect the entire digestive tract. The esophagus is responsible for carrying swallowed foods and liquids from the mouth to the stomach.

"I believe these diseases are common, but people just do not know they exist," Anuras said.

He is following the diseases in six families from the East Coast and the Midwest. These families chose to continue their medical consultation with Anuras after he brought his work to Texas Tech from the University of Iowa. He expects soon to add a seventh family from New York.

Anuras' goals are to continue following developments of the families and to chart natural histories of the disease types.

Anuras said certain contractile proteins, such as actin and myosin, are involved in making smooth muscle contractions possible.

Anuras is looking at the contractile protein genes from smooth muscle in patients' digestive tracts to determine if abnormal genes might be the cause of the disease.

His research is being funded by a three-year grant of almost $400,000 from the National Institutes of Health.

Inspiring Open House

On Jan. 25, 1982, High Plains Laboratory exploded due to a gas leak. Recently, exactly four years to date, High Plains Laboratory celebrated its' first open house in a new building which took a lot of patience and inspiration to rebuild. "Don't give up," says owner, Foster Yeager, se-

Texas Honey Queen keeps bees

ECTOR, Texas (AP) — Newly-crowned Texas Honey Queen Cindy Neal knows exactly why she became interested in beekeeping — she loves eating all kinds of food made with honey.

The 19-year-old Bells High School graduate and Texas Woman's University physical therapy student began her beekeeping hobby four years ago when she received a hive as a present. From that small beginning, Cindy soon started attending beekeeping workshops, reading books and talking to people to learn more about apiculture, the raising of bees.

The results of her dedicated work is truly a sweet story — she now sells her own honey under the label "Cindy's Pure Honey" and tours Texas promoting the use of honey instead of sugar. In addition to speaking engagements, the cute 5-footer also performs demonstrations at gatherings, including the State Fair of Texas.

"What happened to get it all started was I received a beehive as a present. It just kind of snowballed from there. I found out if I sold my honey I could get enough money to pay for this and that," she said.

"I just really got interested — it is a fascinating hobby."

Now with two hives and more than 150,000 bees, Cindy produces around 200 pounds of honey annually, depending on weather conditions. All of her honey comes from clover, which bees make into a light-colored, sweeter honey.

"I like the lighter ones. They usually have a lighter taste. Usually the darker honeys will have a distinctive honey taste and the lighter ones will be a little sweeter."

For the newcomer to beekeeping, Cindy advises to "go somewhere, a library or anywhere, do a bit of reading and attend a local beekeepers' meeting."

"You do not have to own any bees to attend a meeting — we have some (in the Texoma Beekeepers group) who do not own a hive, and we have some who own hundreds. Anyone's more than welcome to just come and listen."

Besides a minimal amount of work (a hive can be handled with just 10 hours of work a year), beekeeping and honey-making does not require a great amount of equipment.

Cindy said the Texas Honey Queen contest it is not a beauty contest, but a promotion for the honey industry — "the main way the Texas beekeepers have of advertising their product to get people to learn and know about honey."

"The best thing I have gotten from the entire Honey Queen program and working with bees is getting to meet so many wonderful people. I do not know if it is that beekeepers are so sweet or what, but they are always willing to help you."

"That is really the part that really attracted me the most, I think, is being with the people. You get to travel a lot, and being from a small town I like to travel. I like to look at it as a professional public relations person who has a lot of fun doing what she does."

But all PR aside, Cindy says she really does use honey every day in the kitchen. "Honey is a simple natural sweetener. Unlike other refined sweeteners, I find it easy to cook with. It makes your food more moist, with better flavor and texture. Also, it is composed of simple sugars which go straight into your blood stream instead of having to be broken down first."

15-year-old Southwest Airlines grows up

DALLAS (AP) — After beginning 15 years ago as a flashy commuter carrier spouting themes of love and dressing stewardesses in hot pants, Southwest Airlines is outgrowing adolescence and facing maturity.

In color newspaper ads that mentioned the word "love" at least 18 times, Southwest heralded the maiden flights of its three Boeing 737s in 1971.

It was only the beginning of a love affair with fast growth and fat profits for investors in the company that today serves 26 airports with 56 airplanes. But analysts say those high-flying years are past, and the carrier now faces questions of where and how to continue its growth.

Herb Kelleher, the airline's ebullient chain-smoking chief executive officer, says Southwest has grown accustomed to beating back challenges in the industry.

"I like the competition," Kelleher says. "The airline business is the closest thing to war in peacetime."

By his own admission, Kelleher eats and sleeps Southwest, saying, "It's been my diet since 1967."

That was the year he and businessman Rollin King first began planning the airline, which didn't get off the ground until four years later.

In the beginning, he was Southwest's legal counsel — a job of major magnitude as the fledgling company fought off a string of challenges from other airlines.

As the lawsuits dwindled and Southwest began to thrive, Kelleher became chairman of the board and three years later, in 1981, took over as president and chief executive officer as well.

Lamar Muse, Southwest's president from 1978-81, started his own airline, Muse Air, that year. Muse countered with the same low fares coupled with a more sophisticated approach, offering assigned leather seating and a no-smoking policy. But Muse Air never made a profit and was acquired by Southwest four years later, now operating as a subsidiary.

It was Muse who helped create Southwest's flamboyant early image with slogans like "Loving you is what we do" and by dressing the stewardesses in hot pants.

Howard Putnam, Southwest's chairman and chief executive officer from 1978-81, said it perplexed him for a long time why Southwest's stewardesses always seemed so happy and bubbly.

"Then one day I just asked them how many were baton twirlers or cheerleaders, and over 50 percent were," Putnam recalled. "They knew they'd look good in those outfits. They were in show business."

It also was Muse who concocted the scheme of having the sexily clad flight attendants hand out fifths of liquor to fend off a price war with Braniff, which offered a $13 Dallas-Houston flight.

In its 10th anniversary in-flight magazine, Southwest reported the liquor didn't cost the airline $13, of course, "but a businessman could put the $26 fare on his expense report and take the liquor home free."

These days, there are no more free bottles of booze and the stewardesses are dressed quite businesslike, a result of management realizing that "what we thought was sexy was sexist," Kelleher jokes.

Now, he touts the company's award from the National Women's Forum for promoting women in management and boasts that 36 percent of the airline's managerial positions are filled by women.

Some Southwest traditions, never have fallen by the wayside, though. The airline never has assigned seats, never cooked a meal and still hands out easy-to-lose tickets that look like cash register receipts. After 1984's record $50 million in earnings, Southwest ended 1985 with a 5 percent drop in profits and a fourth quarter in which earnings fell 47.5 percent.

The airline also faces a renewed challenge to its monopoly at Dallas' Love Field, a mostly commuter airport near downtown. Continental Airlines plans to begin service at Love around May 1, less than a year after Southwest swallowed up its last competitor, Muse Air.

Southwest has faced problems in Dallas because of complaints from some residents about noise and because of a 6-year-old law limiting flights from Love Field to cities in Texas or its four border states. The law was created for the benefit of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

"One of the frustrations in being headquartered in Dallas has been the love-hate relationship with the city and the marketplace," said Sam Coats, a former top executive with Southwest who left in 1984 to head Muse Air.

Coats also noted that the city of Dallas is holding up $21 million in promised road and parking improvements at Love Field until further questions about noise and airline competition are resolved.

Kelleher contends Continental will struggle because of limited gate space and restrictions on Continental's advertising at Love by the Department of Transportation, which granted the airline's request to serve the Dallas airport.

He says he doesn't plan any changes in Southwest's basic winning strategy of low-fare flights with a 10-minute turnaround.

"We'll do pretty much the same thing we've always done," he said.

"We're not trying to compete with the long-haul carriers of the world."

The change may be that the growth of Southwest now is tied not to Dallas, but to Houston, where the only new routes added by the airline last year originate.

In a recent speech to a Dallas civic club, Kelleher said Houston is the place where the airline "can grow as fast as we think we can afford it."

Analysts say the challenges facing Southwest are cause for worry for the airline, which serves 11 Texas airports. Other cities it flies to include Chicago, Denver, Kansas City, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, New Orleans, San Francisco and St. Louis.

Timothy Petree of L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin in New York said he believes as much as 25 percent of Southwest's profits are generated at Dallas' Love Field.

And Kevin Murphy, an analyst with Morgan Stanley in New York, believes Love Field's contribution to the airline's profits is even greater. He says Southwest "can't keep growing forever" and labeled the 47 percent drop in its fourth-quarter income even lower than he expected.

"What I thought would happen a year from now is happening sooner," he said.

Southwest's stock, already down due to the Continental threat, immediately fell 2 1/2 points the day earnings were announced and dropped another 1 1/2 the next day. It now hovers around $24 a share.

Murphy also worries that Southwest, which relies heavily on business travelers, will be affected by the oil slump and points out its debt-equity ratio has jumped from 25 percent to 43 percent because of its acquisition of Muse.

Still, he calls Southwest "one of the best in the business."

And Coats says, "Southwest has done more for the urbanization of Texas than any other factor in the last 20 years."

Fitness classes scheduled

A six-week session of fitness classes for women will begin at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA Feb. 17.

Pre-registration will net participants a 10 percent discount on the class price.

Non-Y members are welcome to attend. Babysitting will be provided for a small cost during the class.

Frostbite occurs when blood vessels near the surface of the skin are frozen, says the American Heart Association, which warns that rubbing the afflicted area with snow is not an acceptable first-aid treatment. Instead, it says, frostbitten skin should be immersed in warm water until all tissues become soft and red and feeling returns. Medical attention is always necessary.

Shivering is part of our body's natural mechanism to keep warm. Shivering, doctors say, increases the body's metabolism, so that more heat energy is generated and warmed blood is pumped more quickly to extremities.

Vocational Week observed

La Plata Junior High School FHA Chapter and two FHA/HERO Chapters join in a nationwide celebration of FHA/HERO Week, February 9-15. Observed within Vocational Education Week, this annual event gives members an opportunity to show their background in home economics along with their participation in Future Homemakers of America prepares them for their future.

The theme for this year's National FHA/HERO Week is "Future Homemakers of America: A Choice with a Future." During FHA/HERO

Week students have the opportunity to expand on their organizational, management, and communication skills.

La Plata Junior High FHA Chapter activities include attending church on Sunday with families. Monday will be red-and-white day when all chapter members wear the colors to promote chapter recognition, signs will be placed on members' lockers and valentines will be sent to community supporters. Chapter awareness day will be emphasized on Tuesday when FHA purposes are discussed in home economics classes. Members will show appreciation to teachers on Wednesday by placing apples along with messages in teachers' boxes at school.

Thursday and Friday will be devoted to a fund raising activity to benefit cancer research and Save the Lady project. On Saturday, members have planned activities to benefit younger children in their families.

Other FHA projects promoted this school year include Students Against Drunk Driving, Self Improvement, and Student Body Nutrition Project. Buryl Burelsmith, La Plata home economics teacher, serves as chapter advisor.

La Plata Junior High FHA/HERO Chapter members have set up a small business, Project Valentine, wherein they bake, decorate, take orders and fill them for merchandising. This activity will continue through February 14. From this project members will learn cost and price considerations necessary for making a profit, techniques necessary for producing a quality product, and assuming responsibility for taking, filling and delivering orders. Louise Witkowski CVAE - Production Management Services, home economics teacher at La Plata Junior High, serves as FHA/HERO Chapter advisor.

The FHA/HERO-VEH Production Management & Service Chapter of La Plata are planning activities around one of our Student Body Projects on Nutrition and Fitness. Student Body is a national peer education program of Future Homemakers of America, Inc. that teaches teens to eat right, be fit and feel good about themselves.

This Chapter's success is due to the combined efforts of a community that makes vocational education available to students so that they can have "A choice with a future." Community businesses that help students develop work skills for life and a community that gives of its time and talents to support projects on Elderly Care, Teen Pregnancy, Child Safety, Drug and Alcohol Abuse and Leadership Skills. Cathy Brock, VEH Production Management & Services home economics teacher, serves as chapter advisor.

Future Homemakers of America is a national vocational student organization of 325,000 members, with two kind of chapters. FHA chapters emphasize consumer homemaking education; HERO emphasizes home economics related occupations.

Both kinds of chapters encourage personal growth, leadership development, family/community involvement, and understanding the dual roles of men and women as wage earners and homemakers. Since 1945, Future Homemakers of America has been relevant to youth as a place to belong-where they grow, achieve and develop leadership "skills for life."

The combined FHA membership at La Plata Junior High is 135 with 44 male members.

Members from the three chapters will be attending the FHA/HERO Region I Youth Leadership Meeting being held in Lubbock Friday and Saturday, February 7-8.

Vocational Education Week

La Plata Junior High School FHA Chapter and two FHA-HERO Chapters join in a nationwide celebration of FHA-HERO Week, Feb. 9-15. The annual event observed during Vocational Education Week gives members an opportunity to demonstrate how FHA has prepared them for the future. Mayor Wes Fisher signs the proclamation as Lucy Garcia, president of FHA Chapter III, Maria Segovia, secretary of FHA-HERO Chapter for CVAE, and Becky Parks, member of FHA-HERO Chapter for VEH look on.

Alumni accepting nominations

WTSU - The Alumni Association of West Texas State University is currently accepting nominations for its annual Faculty Excellence and Distinguished Alumnus awards.

Nominations will be accepted in the Alumni Association office through March 28, with the winners to be announced at the Phoenix Club banquet on May 10. Applications for scholarships from WTSU's Alumni Association are also available.

Eligibility for the Faculty Excellence Award is based on a minimum of three years with the WTSU faculty, administration or staff. Winners must be currently employed and not past recipients of the award.

To be considered for the Distinguished Alumnus Award, WTSU graduates should have attained prominence through their professional endeavors or service to the community. They must have remained interested in, and supportive of, WTSU activities.

For nomination forms or scholarship applications, call (806)656-3421 or write: WTSU Alumni Association, WT Box 2833, Canyon Tx. 79016.

Swimsuits sell

NEW YORK (AP) — Sports Illustrated's 23rd swimsuit issue is on the newsstands, and the magazine says it expects to sell eight times the usual number of copies.

This year's cover, called the sexiest yet by editor Mark Mulvoy, features Elle Macpherson modeling a deep-V suspender back tank suit on a beach in the south Pacific island of Bora-Bora.

Appearances on the swimsuit cover are thought to have enhanced the careers of Christie Brinkley and Cheryl Tiegs, both three-time swimsuit cover models.

Office Education Week

With officers of the Hereford High School Office Education Association (OEA) observing, Mayor Wes Fisher signed a proclamation recently declaring Feb. 10-16 as OEA Week. The local OEA chapter plans to have Teacher Appreciation Day, Employer Appreciation Day,

THIN IS IN

MARIN, Switzerland (AP) — When it comes to watches, bigger isn't always better.

In fact, Swiss watchmakers continuously search for ways to make thinner watches without increasing the cost to consumers. One solution is to use plastic instead of metal as a support for other components. According to a watch maker here, one sort of engineering plastic eliminates about 50 cutting operations that metal supports require.

A Flair for Design

When mixing elements from various styles, the "Eclectic" treatment discussed last week, it is a must to keep in mind the "mood" of the room or space. While both a beautifully made quilt and a hand knotted Oriental rug may qualify as tasteful and well designed, they may not be suitable for the same room. The formal or informal nature of an individual item should fit the mood of the room in which it will be used.

For example, you can mix classic French armchairs with an equally classic Chippendale Camelback sofa, and dress the window in a modern day classic, Vertical Blinds.

FINISHING TOUCHES offers a complete design service, from the drawingboard stage, to the final placement of accessories. Call 364-5870, or come to 501 East Park Monday thru Friday.

National Salute

Mayor Wes Fisher signs a proclamation declaring the upcoming week as a "National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans' Week." Ladies of VFW Auxiliary will be visiting veterans in all hospitals in observance of the national salute. Overlooking the mayors' shoulder are, from left, Mable Yocum, Sadie Shaw, and sitting is Betty Boggs.

Texans, South Australians join in year-long celebration

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas and South Australia have joined in numerous exchanges, including traveling delegations and schoolchildren's letters, to celebrate their 150th anniversaries.

More than 140 cities in Texas are paired with a like number of South Australian towns, and more than 400 elementary and secondary schools in Texas are exchanging letters, slide-tape shows, scrapbooks and art work with Australian students.

Delegations will be traveling each way during 1986, and several travel agencies are planning special package tours as part of the observances.

For example, 30 students in the choir at Morialta High School in Campbellton, South Australia, will arrive in Texas soon for a month-long tour, including visits to Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Austin, according to the Texas Tourist Development Agency.

The agency sketched other goings-on in a release Thursday.

The George Winters Chamber Orchestra, composed of members of the San Antonio Symphony Orchestra, will visit San Antonio's sister city, Glenelg.

A group from San Marcos carried a proclamation of friendship from Texas Gov. Mark White to South Australia's Proclamation Day activities on Dec. 28.

Five Australian beauty queens will visit Texas, and Reg Lindsay, Australian country and western singer, will give concerts in Texas for most of the year.

Orange has scheduled commemorative events and has invited the mayor of its sister city, Port Lincoln, to participate. Similar arrangements are under way between Boerne and Angaston, South Australia.

Hahndorf in South Australia is hosting a series of reunions of families of German settlers and, nothing the larger number of Germans who came as pioneers to Texas, has invited Texans to these reunions.

A group from Abilene is going to its sister city, Elizabeth, and delegations from Plano, Austin and El Paso also are headed for South Australia.

Texas' sesquicentennial marks 150 years since it won its independence from Mexico. South Australia, according to the Tourist Development Agency, was first proclaimed a province in 1836, and is now an Australian state. Its celebration is called Jubilee 150.

The tourist agency said the Australian state has perhaps one-tenth of Texas' 15 million population but the two states have similarities.

For example, the agency said, both are in the south central states of their countries. The Lofty Ranges in Australia are similar to the Texas Hill Country, and the Aussie's Flinders Ranges have been compared with Texas' rugged Big Bend country.

PLASTIC BUTTERFLY

DOWNERS GROVE, Ill. (AP) — A new kind of butterfly has been created by engineers at Rockwell International's telephone switching systems division.

This one doesn't fly. It's made of an engineering plastic used to strengthen printed circuit boards. The part was named the "butterfly" because its series of triangular sections interconnect at a central hub which gives it a striking resemblance to the insect.

TEST MARKETS

NEW YORK (AP) — Test markets are cities that represent smaller versions of the United States in terms of average age, income, number and size of ethnic populations, and other demographic features.

An advertising agency here maintains a list of 42 of the best test markets. They are used to try out new products.

Doing nothing safest course

By ROBERT BARR Associated Press Writer

Poets are the unacknowledged legislators of the world, Shelley thought, but nowadays a few are acknowledged by state legislators.

The laurels usually rest easy. Few of the states which appoint a poet laureate require any work from the honoree, and the pay is commensurate with the duties.

When Pulitzer Prize-winning poet James Merrill was named Connecticut's first poet laureate last month, he more or less insisted on a do-nothing post.

"I didn't want to be writing a birthday ode to the governor every year," the 59-year-old author explained. Assured that he would not have to do that, or anything else, he accepted the honor.

"You're free to do what you think is best when you're not paid," says Gwendolyn Brooks, who has been poet laureate of Illinois since 1968.

Doing nothing can be the safest course.

Louisiana's poet laureate, Jean McGivney Boese, was savaged by scholars last year after writing a proposed state poem, which began:

"I love Louisiana with its cotton fields and trees

"And the Spanish moss that flutters with the slightest bit of breeze.

"I love the fields of sugar cane, the grazing cattle herds,

"The sweet scented magnolias filled with brightly colored birds..."

Pinky Gordon Lane, head of Southern University's English department, told a legislative committee that the laureate's work was "doggerel in the worst sense of the word."

David Madden, writer in residence at Louisiana State University, said most committee members were graduates of Louisiana schools and "if you think this is good poetry, we have failed and don't deserve any more appropriations."

Ms. Boese, 61, laughed off the attacks — "Did you ever hear of someone going to war over a poem?" — but her rhymes were rejected.

Tennessee keeps a full stable of official artists, including a state historian and an "ambassador of letters." When the state chose the raccoon as its state animal in 1955, Richard M. "Pek" Gunn of Nashville supplied the verse, concluding:

"Oh, the price that you have paid, "Oh, the contributions made "To this land, and as your due, "Tennessee now honors you."

And in 1977, Tennessee honored Gunn by appointing him poet laureate.

The True Facts About SCRAMBLING

SATELLITE TELEVISION IS ALIVE AND WELL ...AND GROWING!!!

That is a "fact" and it irritates the nation's cable companies who would like for you to believe that all TV broadcasts from the satellites will be scrambled. They infer that there won't be anything to watch if you buy a satellite system. Well, that is so far from the truth it's amazing they can expect anyone to believe it!

THE TRUE FACTS ARE...

- ★ There are 114 channels available via satellite
- ★ Of these 114 channels only seven (7) programmers have indicated their intention to scramble.
- ★ One bill (H.R. 1769) has been introduced in congress which would declare a two year moratorium on scrambling.
- ★ A second bill (H.R. 1849) has also been introduced that states if a programmer scrambles, he must make the programming available to a home satellite system owner at a fair and reasonable rate.
- ★ The following is a list of planned additional services, most of which plan to be active within the next 12 months. This list was compiled by "Television Digest" and published in their 1985 Cable & Station Coverage Atlas®.

ASID certificate awarded to Mabray

Former Hereford resident, Mary Lynn Mabray of Houston, is one of 168 interior designers in the United States and Canada to successfully pass the current National Council for Interior Design Qualification examination.

The 1966 Hereford High School graduate is the former Mary Lynn Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur D. Gibson of 122 Liveoak. She has been participating interior design for three years in the Houston area.

Mabray of M.L. Mabry Interior Design and Fine Art, of the American Society of Interior Designers, was notified that she was in the top one percent nationwide to take the NCIDQ exam and pass both parts the first time.

She graduated with honors from the Art Institute of Houston in 1983 with a degree in interior design. She is currently in business for herself specializing in the field of fine art. She represents many Houston artists as well as international artist and sculptor Wei Li Wang from the Republic of China and architectural photo-realist Vahid Mehrinfar, who is known nationally.

Mabry works with the interior design and architectural trade representing 15 different artists to help them create commission art pieces for their respective clientele.

She also offices with a Houston based custom furniture company and is their exclusive representative. Residential and commercial interior design projects are a part of her business as well.

Mabry resides in Houston with her husband, Gary, and daughter, Reagan.

Receiving Certificates

Mary Lynn Mabray of Houston, center, was among 168 interior designers in the United States and Canada to pass the current National Council For Interior Design Qualification examination. Mabray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur D. Gibson of Hereford, was presented her American Society of Interior Designers certificate and seal of professionalism at a November meeting in 1985 held in Houston.

CARLA GRACE WOOLSEY, LLOYD SMITH, JR.

Couple to wed

Carla Grace Woolsey of 400 Blevins and Lloyd Neil Smith, Jr. will marry March 8 at First Baptist Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Danna Grace Rohner of Commerce, Tx. and Robert Maurice Woolsey of Rogers, Ark. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Neil Smith, Sr. of 201

Star. Miss Woolsey graduated from Commerce High School in 1982 and is employed at Arrowhead Mills, Inc. Her fiance is a 1980 graduate of Hereford High School and is employed at Brownlow Brothers, Inc.

Sexual behavior may be affected by odors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sexual behavior of adult mammals may be determined by experiences they had in infancy, according to an animal study that claims to have found the first evidence of such a link.

Sights, sounds, smells and other environmental factors of early life need closer examination to see if they have long-term effects on behavior, said the researchers, who report their work in the Feb. 14 issue of the journal Science.

The scientists found that the odors male rat pups smell during suckling influence their sexual behavior with females as young adults.

"It is the first experiment that has manipulated an infantile experience and shown an effect on adult sexual behavior," said Dr. Thomas J. Fillion, a psychologist at Yale University. This animal work is too preliminary to draw any implications about human beings, Fillion emphasized. But the results point to the importance of studying early experiences as they might relate to later development, he said in a telephone interview.

"This work may represent a kind of principle that, if proven true, could be valuable for future research," he said. "This suckling experience, common to all mammals, could have important implications on later development."

The experiment, conducted at Johns Hopkins University by Fillion and Dr. Elliott M. Blass, showed a relationship between the smells of suckling and odors associated with sex in rats.

The scientific study of fossils is called paleontology.

Rural folk ired over budget proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal to have food and farm programs shoulder some of the heaviest cuts in his 1987 budget evoked howls of protest from rural interests and farm belt lawmakers.

"This proposal is not a realistic answer at a time when economic distress in some farming areas is the most serious in half a century," said Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

"It just means that a state that's down just gets kicked once more," said Don Avenson, a Democrat who is speaker of the House in Iowa, the state hardest hit by farming's economic woes. "I think that's an incredibly distorted set of priorities for the Midwest. I don't see any good for the state coming out of this budget."

Reagan's proposal asks for a cut of 18 percent for the year beginning Oct. 1 in programs administered by the Agriculture Department, from crop subsidies and price supports to school lunches.

It asks Congress to put department spending for the fiscal year at $44.6 billion, down from the estimated $54.2 billion in the current year. To accomplish the reduction, the administration would sharply curtail rural lending and conservation and agricultural extension services.

Crop and dairy price support programs and food programs operated by the Agriculture Department also would feel the crunch.

Administration Budget Director James C. Miller defended the agriculture cuts, saying that even with them, government is still generous to farmers.

"The 1985 farm bill is the biggest flood of money ever given to agriculture in the history of the nation," he said, adding that the administration had no intention of changing the new law's basic provisions.

Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., ranking Republican on the House Agriculture Committee, said the administration's farm proposals won't even fly with members of the president's own party.

Budget cuts will hit SCS hard

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Congress goes along with President Reagan's proposed federal budget for 1987, the Agriculture Department would lose more than 10,000 employees, nearly half of them working for the Soil Conservation Service.

Under the budget plan sent to Capitol Hill on Wednesday, the department's work force, equivalent to 108,750 employees, would be reduced to 98,500 in the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1.

The Soil Conservation Service, which weathered a similar assault last year, would have its force reduced to the equivalent of 10,000 full-time employees from 14,177 now on the rolls. The Forest Service would see its roster drop to 36,755 from 40,075 people.

According to the plan, the Farmers Home Administration would be cut to 11,000 employees from 12,400.

The Food Safety and Inspection Service, which handles meat and poultry inspections, would have its employees reduced by 57 people to 9,543 next year, and the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service would lose 282 workers, reducing the agency to 4,730 employees.

The Extension Service would go from the current level of 170 federal employees to 90 next year.

Wheat 'fingerprints' pitfall for thieves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thieves who have always had to contend with automobile serial numbers or cattle brands now have a new pitfall to avoid: wheat fingerprints.

An Agriculture Department researcher has developed a computerized bank of printlike patterns characteristic of the 88 most commonly grown varieties of domestically grown wheat.

George Lookhart, the chemist who developed the comparison process, says it's as good as fingerprints for identifying where a load of grain came from.

In one case, that of a 1983 heist of five semitrailer loads of wheat near Atchison, Kan., the procedure was accepted as evidence in court.

In a laboratory, a chemist now can put wheat protein from a suspected stolen lot through an analysis, then compare it to the unique "signatures" of the cataloged varieties.

Lookhart's computer positively identified the grain as the same variety recently missing from the Atchison River Terminal Farmers Co-Op Elevator — about $100,000 worth of wheat.

Pump irrigation likely to increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — American farmers are pumping more money than ever into irrigation — with costs growing by nearly 500 percent in the past decade — and the expansion is likely to continue, although at a slower rate, the Agriculture Department says.

shows on-farm pump irrigation grew by 27 percent from 1974 to 1983, the latest year for which figures were available.

That meant another 9.5 million acres were added to irrigated cropland, bringing the total to 44.6 million acres.

But while the acreage was growing gradually, higher energy costs sent the farmer's spending for pump power skyrocketing.

By 1983, pump energy accounted for 23 percent of all energy used on the farm for crop production. Energy bills rose from $551 million in 1974 to $2.5 billion in 1983.

Electricity remained the leading pump energy source, followed by natural gas, diesel fuel, liquefied petroleum gas and gasoline. Price increases during the period ranged from more than 100 percent for electricity to 700 percent for natural gas.

Sales from irrigated farms accounted for 30 percent of overall farm sales in 1983, up 6 percent from 1974, the department said in a report by Gordon Sloggett.

saved about $72 million in energy costs in 1983, it noted.

The outlook is for irrigation to expand by 3 million to 4 million acres in the Great Plains by the year 2020, the department said, with potential for additional gains in the eastern half of the United States.

"Soil and water resources are adequate to support an additional 18-20 million acres of irrigated land," the department said, while adding that further expansion depends on profitability of expanding production.

Strong prices in the early part of the study decade accounted for much of the expansion of irrigation, with the pace of increase slowing in later years as crop prices weakened.

Outlook poor for '86 farm year

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — More than 2,700 Texas farmers lost their businesses last year because of financial reasons beyond their control, and 1986 doesn't look any brighter, a Texas A&M University agricultural economist says.

West Texas farmers were hardest hit, followed by those in the Rolling Plains and East Texas, said Carl Anderson, an economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cotton and grain farmers suffered the most, he said.

"Many of the farmers who went out of business are clustered in the Lubbock region where the strong income base is cotton," Anderson said. "Whether or not farmers survived was related to whether they were leveraged with credit they couldn't pay back."

The weather aggravated the problems of the $33 billion-a-year Texas agricultural industry, which still suffered less than other states because of high diversification and lower land value fluctuation, Anderson said.

"We could have survived this financial crisis better if it hadn't been for the prolonged drought periods and other severe weather conditions we've been having," Anderson said.

Of the 22 farming regions in the state listed by the Texas Department of Agriculture, it was possible to recover costs on one crop in only six of those regions last year, said Leland Beatty, a department researcher.

Although many farmers went out of business, Anderson says, very little land went out of production. Instead, much of it was operated by producers who were financially stronger.

Anderson also blamed the farmer's plight on the prime interest rate implemented by the federal government which has forced rates up to 20 percent.

"That's totally incompatible with agriculture. We knew at the time agriculture could not borrow money and repay it at 20 percent interest because returns on investments in agriculture historically have been somewhere in the 3 percent level," he said.

Anderson said reducing federal borrowings that would bring lower interest rates is the first step the nation needs to take to help improve farmers.

Higher costs are making farmers take a closer look at conservation, including ways of recovering irrigation runoff and use of low-pressure center-pivot irrigation systems, the report said. Center-pivot sprinklers

FEEDING TIME FOR DAIRY COWS MAY BE WATCHED MORE CAREFULLY. Since feed costs account for 50% of the operation of a dairy business, Dr. Max Sudweeks, dairy specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says adjustments in feeding may yield big dividends. A study in New York found that cows will test better in hot weather if fed hay prior to grain feeding in the milking parlor. Though this required feeding small amounts of fresh hay prior to milking, the test results were good. Also, feeding total mixed rations has been shown to be a good method to increase the fat test. Computerized feed rations are available at most extension offices. Substituting good performing feed ingredients when prices are low saves. Finally, experts urged grouping cows according to production levels. While usually no more grain is fed, a greater percentage is fed early lactation with higher milk production and greater returns.

High performance hybrids to make the most of your irrigation program!

Water isn't cheap. So naturally, you need corn hybrids with the genetic potential to come along with you and yield the highest level your management can reach. That's why 3377 and 3186 make the perfect combination on the Plains. Plant full-season 3186 on your best land where it can express its full potential. Then round out your irrigated corn program with earlier maturing 3377. As companions, they give you a powerful combination of high yield and performance characteristics you need.

3377 Superior yielder. Outstanding heat and drought tolerance. Excellent for delayed plantings. Tall wide-leaved hybrid with good ground shading. Large, girthy ears.

3186 What a yielder! Excellent heat and drought tolerance. Tall, semi-upright leaved hybrid. Superior standability. Excellent late season plant health plus MDMV and heat smut resistance.

PRICELESS IS CLOSED!

Priceless has closed its doors forever. Saturday was our last business day and we want to thank everybody who came out to the store, shopped with us and visited for awhile. All our employees will be at the new Save'n'Gain when it opens in a few weeks, so keep an eye out for your Priceless friends!

NOW WHERE DO I SHOP?

Until the Save'n'Gain on North 25 Mile Ave. opens, we'd like to suggest that you shop at the Bag & Save. You'll find good prices and specials at Bag & Save and you won't be inconvenienced by having to drive to Amarillo or Canyon to buy groceries. We're sorry we had to close Priceless before the new store is ready, but our employees needed several weeks to train for their new positions with Save'n'Gain.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES!

To all our loyal friends, we'd like to say "Thanks" for the years you shopped at Priceless. We've been a part of Hereford for almost five years and we've made a lot of friends during that time. Hereford just plain outgrew us, so we decided to build a brand new store for the city rather than remodel or enlarge Priceless. The Save'n'Gain will have 65,000 square feet of space. Not as big as a feedlot, but big enough to serve you in style!

WATCH FOR THE SAVE'N'GAIN GRAND OPENING!

For more information about Save'n'Gain, watch for Sunday ads in The Brand. We'll be announcing our Grand Opening soon, so plan now to join in the celebration of Hereford's newest and biggest store.

It's all for you, Hereford — you deserve the best!

OPENING SOON!

SAVE'N'GAIN
THE FRESHNESS GIANT.

Our Story:
MORONEY'S SPY REPORT THAT SOMETHING IS AFOOT AT WINCHESTER, AN INVASION IS BEING PREPARED, BUT WHERE WILL IT FALL? AND WITH HOW MANY SHIPS AND MEN? MORONEY REMAINS CALM. HE DOES NOT LET KNOW ABOUT THE SNOOK.

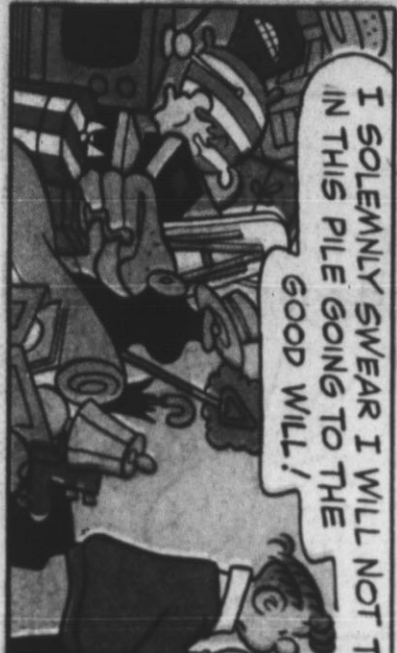

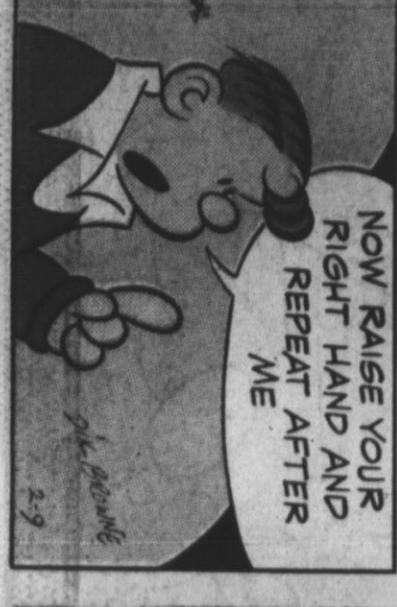

IN TULLY, THE MEN GATHERED IN KING AGULAS'S CHAMBERS TO DISCUSS THE SPY REPORTS OF A SNOOK. MORONEY SHOWS THE LAST PAGES OF THE MASTER PLAN FALL INTO PLACE.

BRINGING MORONEY FROM BRITAIN WILL BE NO EASY TASK. SIR GAWAIN AND THE KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE WILL BEACH ABOVE THE FENS AND QUICKLY RIDE SOUTH. THE SAXONS WILL LAND BELOW THE CHALK DOWN AND MARCH NORTH. KING AGULAS AND THE MEN OF TULLY WILL SAIL UP THE SEVERN AND HOLD THE FENS. THE SEVERN AND THE Humber WILL REMAIN AT SEA TO BLOCKADE THE SOUTHERN PORTS.

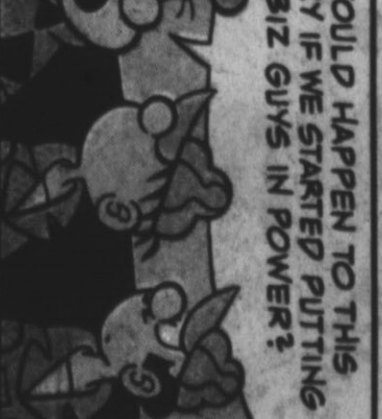

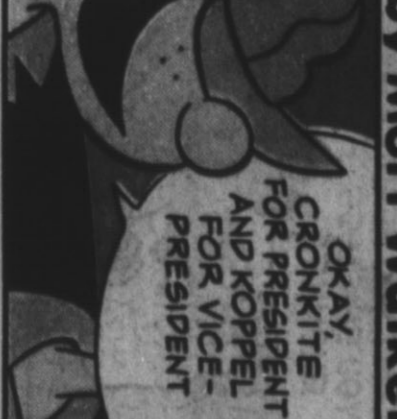

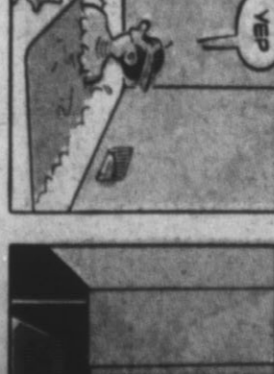

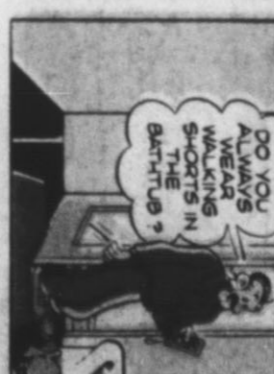

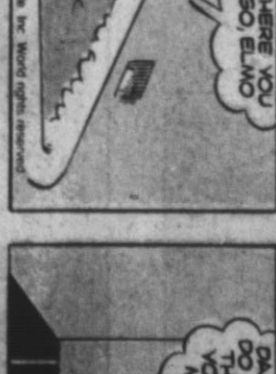

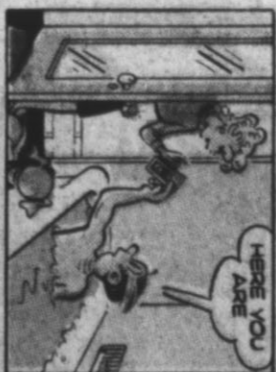

"YOUR THREE ADVERSARIES WILL MEET AT THE HILL. THE KING OF THE SAXONS, SIR GAWAIN, WHEN HE DOES CHARGE WILL BE SCOUTED AND MORONEY'S ARMY WILL BE AT THE HILL. NEXT WEEK: Goodspeed."

SUM FUN! Twenty-one multiplied by 6 equals 126, an instance in which all three digits used in the multiplication appear in the product. Now then, see if you can deduce quickly a number multiplied by three, see right, that will produce the same result — all three digits in the product.

?? x 3 = ???

LOVE NOTE TO PONDER Suppose you are the recipient of the Valentine message above. Can you make it out? That is to say, can you discover a way to read it?

Oddly enough, instructions for reading the message are contained within it. But, say you, where do I begin? For your information, the message begins with a word having a capital letter and proceeds word by word to form a timely short verse.

What does it say? Well, you'll find out on page 10 of the book you are reading. See it on page 10 of the book you are reading. See it on page 10 of the book you are reading.

HEARTY LINE! Person-to-person conversation is being carried over one of four lines above. Just which one?
