Sheriff, commissioner races highlight primaries

Yes, there are contested races on Tuesday's ballot, Democratic and Republican.

There just aren't many. In a rare presidential year, Deaf Smith County residents have uncontested incumbents for the state house, state senate and U.S. House of Representatives. John Smithee, Teel Bivins and Larry Combest won't have opponents in November, either.

The only local contested races, all in the Democratic primary, include:

--Sheriff, where incumbent Joe Brown is challenged by Mike Morrison.
--County commissioner Precinct 1, where Tony Castillo will face incumbent John Stribling.
--County commissioner Precinct 3, with incumbent Troy Don Moore challenged by Roy Dale Messer and Paul Hamilton. The winner will face Republican candidate Mike Miller in November.

The ballots are headed by the presidential preference races. George Bush is challenged by Pat Buchanan, David Duke and two others, and there is a place for "uncommitted" on the GOP ballot. An 11-man field is featured on the Democratic ballot.

There is a huge field of judicial candidates, and the race for railroad commissioner. The GOP ballot includes a referendum for a constitutional amendment for term limitations.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. throughout the county on Tuesday. Early voting ended Friday, with 650 persons casting ballots in the Democratic primary and 85 in the GOP primary as of noon Friday. The number of early voters was not expected to increase significantly

Friday afternoon.

County Clerk David Ruland said Friday afternoon that voters in the GOP primary may be forced to go to different boxes than are usually used. No one from the party has turned in a list of election officials for the primary. All election workers in the county were supposed to go to a special school Thursday, but only five from the GOP attended.

Sheriff's race

Brown vs. Morrison only big local race

BROWN

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Only one race of countywide interest is on the ballot in Deaf Smith County on Tuesday, with incumbent Sheriff Joe Brown challenged by Mike Morrison in the Democratic primary.

Morrison is a native of Deaf Smith County, graduating Hereford High School in 1975. He received his basic and intermediate law enforcement certificates from Amarillo College. He worked four years with the Hereford Police Department before going into private business. He is now an employee of Oglesby Equipment and has been a volunteer reserve deputy with the sheriff's department for six years.

During his time with the HPD, Morrison was a patrolman and moved up through the ranks. When he left the department, he was involved in training of new officers.

Brown was appointed to the sheriff's post in 1983 to replace Travis McPherson. Brown won a full term in 1984 and was re-elected in 1988.

Brown was with the Hereford Police Department for 12 years before earning the sheriff's appointment. He was a patrolman for eight years, a patrol sergeant for 18 months, and served 30 months as a detective at HPD. Brown is a graduate of Potect High School and graduated from the Amarillo College Law Enforcement Academy. He has an additional 46 college hours at Amarillo College and has continuing education hours in many areas.

The candidates were asked three identical questions and were allowed up to 50 words in their answers. They were asked to address the questions as if the elections were over and they were about to take office.

Question No. 1: One of the issues raised during the campaign has been the reserve force. Do you plan any changes in the reserve force? How do you plan to implement changes while adhering to county commission-imposed limits on the size and work of the reserve force?

MORRISON: I would propose to remove from the taxpayers the burden of funding the unit by returning it to a self-supporting status. Train reserves, adequately, to fill in for full-time deputies when needed. This will enable the department to have as many volunteers as needed, at no cost to taxpayers.

BROWN: Commissioners limited the number of reserves to 20, due to liability cost. Texas requires 145 hours of training before a reserve can begin working (See SHERIFF, Page 2A)

Presidential preferences top ballots

Super Tuesday is a big day for all politicians.

Of course, no where is the prize as big as it is in Texas.

Politicians have been criss-crossing the state hoping for shares of the huge delegations Texas will send to the national conventions this summer, and there are races going on for Congress in most areas outside the 19th District. Hereford's congressman, Larry Combest, has no opponent in either party.

In the wake of the 1990 census that showed a population surge, Texas was awarded three more U.S. House seats, for a total of 30.

Those nominees will be chosen Tuesday, along with nominees for all 31 state Senate seats, the state House, one spot on the Railroad Commission and three places each on the two highest courts - the Texas Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Nominees also will be selected for the 15-member State Board of Education, but by individual districts across the state.

At the top of the ballot is the presidential preference vote. In the GOP, George Bush (who calls Texas home) is facing a bit of a challenge from Pat Buchanan. Bush may capture all of Texas' 121 GOP delegates.

There are 214 Democratic delegates at stake in Texas. That's 10 percent of the total needed to win the party's nomination.

Saturday fire rips old house

A Hereford landmark house burned early Saturday in a fire that started in an electrical panel.

The house was at 310 McKinley, at the corner of McKinley and Fourth.

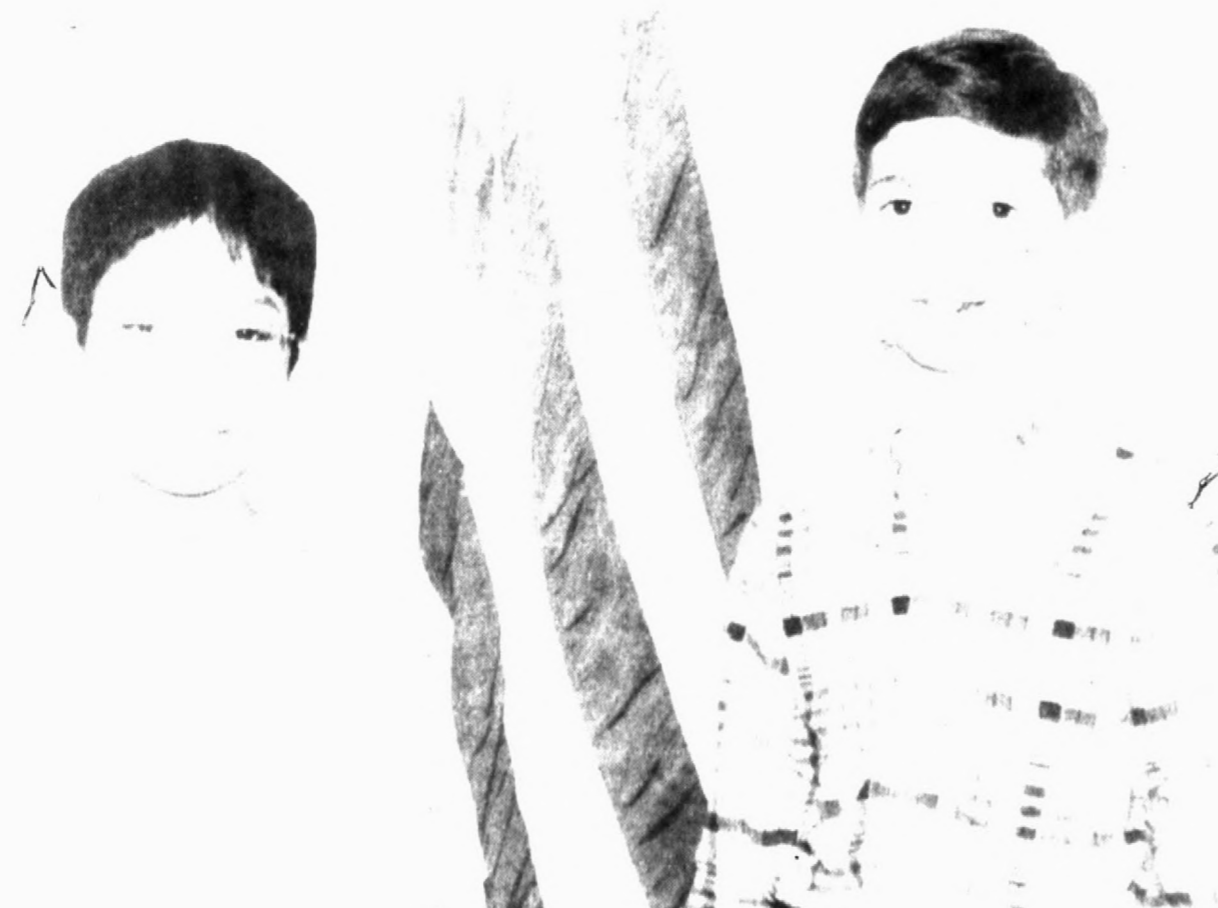

Fire Marshall Jay Spain said the house was "70 or 80" years old and was totally wood.

"It had wooden floors, wooden ceiling, wooden everything and ship lap siding," Spain said. "When it burned, as old as it was it was just like kindling."

The house had been the scene of several fires, according to Spain. "That's at least four that I've been to there, but the others were just piddling things. There won't be any more fires."

Spain said firefighters received the call at 3:45 a.m. Saturday. Volunteers remained on the scene until 8:30 a.m. Since virtually every volunteer firefighter was at the fire, the Bootleg Volunteer Fire Department was called in as backup in case of another fire in Hereford.

Spain said the family living in the house was awakened by their dog and escaped injury.

Measles outbreak prompts warning

Unvaccinated persons urged not to travel to South Texas

AUSTIN (AP) - A large outbreak of measles in Corpus Christi and other parts of South Texas poses a health threat not only to residents but to people traveling through, the Texas Department of Health warned Friday.

Its warning said unvaccinated young adults and parents with unvaccinated children shouldn't travel to the South Texas area.

Unless a person already has had measles, or has been vaccinated against the illness, he or she is susceptible to the highly contagious disease and should ask a doctor about immunizations, the health department said.

Robert Crider, director of the department's immunization division, said that more than 300 cases of measles have been reported in Corpus Christi and surrounding counties since late 1991.

"Measles, also known as rubeola, red measles or seven-day measles, is a serious illness, especially in infants and adults," he said. "Severe cases can lead to pneumonia, bronchitis, deafness, brain damage and death."

Records show that from 1988 through 1990 in Texas, 11 people 16 years old or older died from complications associated with measles. During the same period, measles caused the deaths of 12 children under the age of four.

The outbreak has particularly affected pre-schoolers, officials said. To ensure adequate protection from measles, certain age groups already should have received two doses of measles vaccine, administered at least one month apart, the agency said.

Officials also are concerned that unimmunized high school and college students expected to visit the outbreak area may contract the disease and take it back to their campuses.

Corpus Christi and neighboring Padre Island traditionally attract thousands of students during spring break, and the locale is popular during Easter.

Crider said that although no deaths yet have been reported due to the current measles outbreak, many have required hospitalization. Most of the patients have been children.

"Of the first 136 cases reported, 104 - 76 percent - have been in children younger than 5. However, all age groups, including high school and university students, have been affected," he said.

HOSPITALS

In San Antonio, the school district took up one chain's offer for free counselors. Once inside the schools, the counselors scanned student files, without parental permission, to look for children who would make good customers.

Once revealed, the practice was stopped. But as a result, the attorney general's office asked 24 school districts to provide information concerning the schools' psychiatric services.

One hospital at the forefront of the state's investigation - Psychiatric Institute of Fort Worth - was given a 30-day ultimatum Feb. 25 by the state, following an unannounced visit by MHMR officials. A plan to improve conditions was submitted to the state Monday and remains under consideration.

Among other things, the hospital says it has not used "trust development" therapy since June, and the treatment will not be resumed without MHMR approval.

Under the treatment, sometimes called "rage therapy," adolescents and children are restrained in chairs, endure unnecessary strip searches, and other methods that resulted in injuries.

The plan also includes revisions in policy and procedures to make them comply with the Mental Health Code and follow state guidelines on patient rights.

Training sessions have been held with PI-Fort Worth staff to tell them of the changes.

If the PI-Fort Worth does not improve conditions within that time, the hospital will lose its license.

A lawsuit filed by Morales against PIA and its Fort Worth hospital also claims the firm defrauded the crime victims fund by paying a referral agency - Recovery Line Inc. of Stephenville - $155,000 a month to recruit patients, particularly crime victims.

The fund pays up to $25,000 in medical and psychiatric care for crime victims.

"We allege that the contract may be legal on face, but there's an underlying agreement," said Mark Chouteau, the leading prosecutor handling the state's case against PIA.

The state claims the "underlying agreement" is deceptive because psychiatric care is being based not on medical need, but on financial issues.

Olson says profits are not being affected by PIA's reduced patient census. He declined to comment on whether the company was considering closing any of its 12 Texas hospitals.

"We're not losing money," Olson said.

However, the company is looking at reducing its staff.

"We've had to make adjustments in our staffing levels, yes," Olson said. "It might include layoffs. I think there have been occasional layoffs at some hospitals."

Five other states - New Jersey, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and California - have launched similar probes.

Laser working miracles

EDITOR'S NOTE - When Theodore Harold Maiman turned on his laser one day in May 1960, he had no idea what miracles his invention would perform. The laser is the most versatile of all the wondrous inventions of the 20th century, but Maiman is most proud of its contributions to healing.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Poof! It vaporizes dental decay. SSSS! It erases a birthmark from a baby's face. Zap! It guides a smart bomb to its desert target. Treck! It records the price of a box of breakfast cereal at the checkout counter.

If there has been one invention in the invention-rich 20th century that has delivered more than it promised, it is the laser.

Surely, the century has seen the birth of the telephone, the radio, instant photography, television, wonder drugs, the atomic clock, the transistor, the H-bomb, and the development of the modern automobile and airplane. Thousands of other inventions.

But, unlike the laser, they only do one thing.

They fly, they transport, they communicate over great distances, they cure a few specific diseases, they keep more accurate time than man has ever known, they remember, they destroy.

But not one of them is as versatile as the laser.

It has become an extension of the human being, guiding robot hands, seeing with robot eyes, even feeling with robot touch. There is promise they will expand and accelerate the reasoning abilities of robot minds.

"It's endless," says physicist Robert Bartolini. "We've seen the electronics revolution...But light, it's the ultimate source of energy and we're just starting to use it."

Silently, the laser carries millions of voices and pictures over slender cables, snakes its way into a heart attack victim's artery and blasts away a blockage in pieces the size of a blood cell. It changes a film of carbon into a diamond film. It detects lobsters prowling the darkened ocean floor. It blows away tattoos, corrects the lens of the eye, removes cataracts, reattaches retinas, clears up vision, blows away cancers.

It clocks a speeder in spite of his radar detector. It created three dimensional pictures of museum artifacts in glass so authentic that thieves thought they were the real thing.

But two of the laser's lesser exploits deserve special mention. It sorts blueberries. It peels potatoes.

It has been almost 32 years since mankind invented the laser, following ancient rules of energy and matter laid out by physicists James Maxwell in the 1800s and Albert Einstein in the early 1900s.

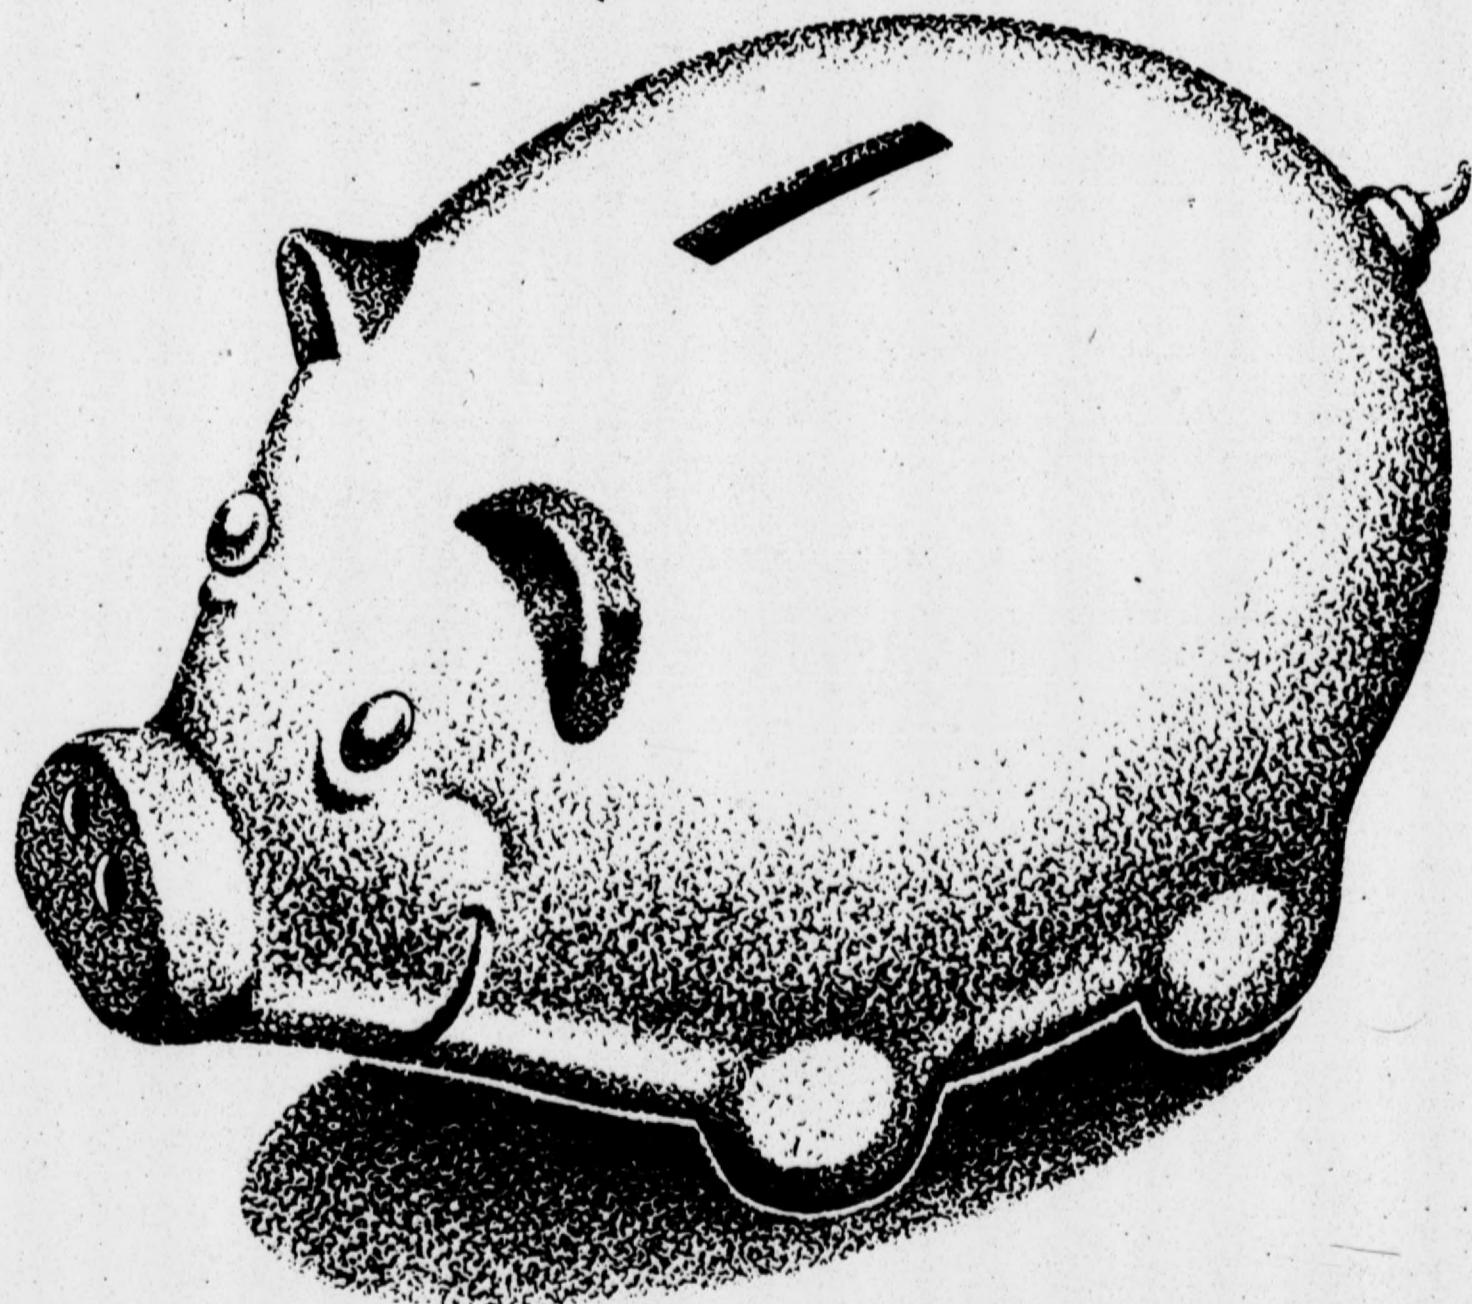

Thomas Edison recognized that if you pass electrical energy through a tungsten filament, you create light, spontaneous light, photons or light particles flying off in random directions. But Einstein recognized that matter can give off light in another way. By stimulating matter he surmised that the matter would give off coherent light, pure light, a disciplined march of photons.

He actually laid out the mathematics of the laser. In analogy, it is as if the crystal or gas of a laser were a stadium full of people. As game time approaches and the energy level rises the people become excited. And then one cheerleader enters the scene and soon the entire stadium is ignited, joined in one singular voice, echoing

Panhandle earns finals spot

AUSTIN (AP) - Angie Ogletree scored 21 points, despite 20 missed shots, to lead Panhandle past Lovelady 57-43 Friday in a Class 2A state high school girls basketball semifinal game.

Panhandle earned a spot in Saturday's Class 2A championship game at the 42nd annual University Interscholastic League tournament. They will face the winner of Friday's game between Marion and Dublin.

Panhandle, which made the final game in its only other state appearance in 1980, improves to 30-5.

Lovelady, in its first trip to the final four, ends the year 32-6.

Ogletree connected on only 5-of-25 shots from the floor, including seven missed 3-point attempts, but she made 11-of-14 free throws.

Teammate Gina McGill added 13 points and 12 boards.

Jennifer Stone led Lovelady with 10.

Panhandle, which knocked out defending champion Abernathy in the regional finals, broke open the game just before halftime with an 11-point run.

All five Panhandle players scored to build a 29-18 halftime lead.

Lovelady closed to within six with 3:56 left in the third quarter behind two straight baskets by Stacie Stewart, but Panhandle countered and outscored the Lady Lions 20-8 over the next seven minutes for its biggest lead of the morning 51-35.

Ogletree, who averaged 19 points coming in, had nine points in the final quarter.

Duncanville wallops Plainview

AUSTIN (AP) - Nikki Sanders' 15 points led Duncanville, which broke a fourth-quarter tie with a 17-6 run over the final 5:27 Friday to down Plainview 51-40 in a girls Class 5A state high school semifinal.

Duncanville (38-1) will try for its record-tying fifth Class 5A title Saturday against San Marcos at the 42nd annual University Interscholastic League tournament.

Plainview (27-8) never led Friday, but mounted an aggressive second-half comeback to tie the game at 34-all on a 3-pointer by Jennifer Jeffress with 5:27 remaining. Her bucket culminated a 13-5 run.

But a foul under the basket after the shot gave Duncanville's Christy Lake a pair of free throws, which she sank for a 36-34 lead.

Duncanville hit 11 foul shots down the stretch to widen the lead and hold off Plainview.

Duncanville's Martha McClelland hauled in a game-high nine rebounds despite foul trouble. Lake also had seven steals.

Amy Lane paced Plainview with 14 points.

Duncanville led 9-6 after a sloppy first quarter, but erupted in the second period. By halftime, Plainview faced a 27-15 deficit.

Duncanville is playing its tournament record-tying fifth straight championship. This is the school's 16th tournament appearance.

Dawson lucky to be alive

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Carroll Dawson sees life differently now.

He once viewed himself as NBA head coaching material but when his opportunity came, he had to watch as someone else took the job of interim head coach of the Houston Rockets - a job that was first offered to him.

Dawson, in his 12th season as a Rockets assistant coach, declined for health reasons and owner Charlie Thomas gave the job to Rockets assistant Rudy Tomjanovich.

Dawson's medical history has taken some scary swings in recent years.

He was blind for eight days last summer while recovering from one of five surgical attempts to save his eyesight, threatened by a freak golfing accident last summer and a stroke. He is now blind in his left eye and has 20-70 vision in his right eye.

"Nobody realizes how lucky they are, what a gift (vision) is," Dawson said. "I'd sit around when my vision started coming back with my eyes closed and say 'if this is what it's like, how could I deal with it?'"

"I don't know that I could and I'm glad I didn't have to."

Dawson also was struck by lightning on the golf course in 1989 and he suffers from high blood pressure, a condition hardly conducive to a head coaching position in the NBA.

Dawson escaped the lightning incident with only a burn on his palm; medication helps keep his blood pressure in check.

But a golf outing last summer was a life-altering experience.

Dawson, a 3-handicapper, tried to pull a putter from his bag but it stuck.

He pulled harder and another club shot out of the bag and hit Dawson's left eye, causing a detached retina.

After surgery on his left eye, the retina in his right eye also detached for no obvious reason.

"There was no trauma," Dawson said. "I don't know that getting struck by lightning had anything to do with it."

Added Worry

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - At moments of emergency, odd things sometimes pop into peoples' minds.

Chicago White Sox pitcher Charlie Hough remembers it well. The team was flying to a game in a chartered plane when one of the two engines blew out. The plane had to set down for an emergency landing at the Des Moines airport and made it.

"I thought we were going to die," Hough said. "I was really annoyed because it was only two days shy of payday."

West Better

ATLANTA (AP) - The victory for the Atlanta Braves over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League Championship Series last October increased the lead for the Western Division teams over the Eastern in the National circuit.

The West has won 13 times to 10 for the East since the inception of the League Championship Series in 1969. The Los Angeles Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds lead in victories, with five each.

Only seven players in the history of the National League have hit 50 homers or more in one season.

Hereford JV leads suspended game

The junior varsity baseball game between Hereford and Canyon was suspended in the sixth inning Friday because of darkness at Whiteface Field.

Hereford was leading 10-8 at the time of the suspension, but Canyon was scoring quickly as fielders struggled to see the ball. The game was suspended with no outs in the top of the inning with Canyon runners on first and third. Canyon had scored twice in the inning.

The Eagles shot out to a 5-0 lead in the top of the first inning on a pair of singles, a pair of walks, a two-run single and a two-run double. After the first inning, Hereford starter Ray Hastings settled down and gave up only one run in his next three innings. John Nava pitched a scoreless fifth and was on the hill when play was suspended.

Hereford got its first runs in the second, when Nava and Michael Melendrez had back-to-back doubles. Melendrez came around on two wild pitches to make the score 5-2.

Canyon had more trouble with wild pitches in the fourth, when Hereford scored six runs and took an 8-6 lead. Nava, Andrew Tijerina and J.J. Rico scored on three of the innings' five wild pitches, and Jason Cole came home on a bases-loaded passed ball. Earlier, Hayden Andrews scored on Cole's single.

Hereford got two more runs in the bottom of the fifth. Tijerina led off with a double and later came home on a wild pitch. Andrews also scored on another RBI single by Cole.

The game might be finished April 3, when Canyon is scheduled to visit Hereford again.

Cornelius hired by Randall

Alan Cornelius, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Cornelius, has been hired as the head football coach at Randall High School.

Cornelius, a 1973 graduate of Hereford High School, was the coach at Denver City, a Class 3A school, for the past seven years, where he was 58-20-1 and made the playoffs five times.

Cornelius and Mike Wartes, the athletic director for the Canyon schools, have worked together before. Cornelius was an assistant coach under Wartes for six years at Muleshoe and Denver City. Cornelius took over for Wartes at Denver City in 1985.

Cornelius replaces Stocky Lamberson, who became coach at Berger after leading Randall to a second-place finish in District 1-4A.

Blazers overcome Kings

By The Associated Press

The Portland Trail Blazers stole Sacramento's chance for a rare road victory.

The Kings, who set an NBA record with 43 consecutive road losses and are 4-27 away from home this season, led the Pacific Division-leading Blazers 73-61 in the third quarter at Portland.

But the Blazers had eight of their season-high 17 steals in the third period, ending the quarter with a 25-4 run for an 86-77 advantage. Portland went on to win 114-106 and take a one-game lead over Golden State in the division.

Clyde Drexler helped the Blazers come back, scoring 13 points in the third quarter. He finished with 34.

Wayman Tisdale led Sacramento with 23 points.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 117, LA Clippers 100; Philadelphia 88, Dallas 86; Indiana 115, Atlanta 113 in overtime; Chicago 123, Miami 81; Milwaukee 124, Orlando 102; Detroit 106, Denver 91; and Utah 117, New Jersey 96.

Bulls 123, Heat 81

Michael Jordan scored 27 points, Horace Grant 23 and Scottie Pippen 21 as Chicago beat Miami. The win improved the Bulls' overall record to 50-12.

The Heat lost its fifth straight game. Kevin Edwards led the Heat with 21 points.

Celtics 117, Clippers 100

Larry Bird scored 19 points as Boston defeated Los Angeles.

The Clippers, who got 22 points from Danny Manning and 18 from Ron Harper, took a 28-26 lead after one period before a 14-4 run lifted the Celtics to a 58-52 halftime advantage.

Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN (AP) - When the University of Texas began searching for a head football coach in December, feelers were sent out across the country to the sport's biggest names. One of those men was black.

But Texas, like the 16 other schools with head coaching vacancies at the end of the 1991 season, stayed status quo and chose a white for the job. Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said he was, indeed, seriously interested in talking to Dennis Green. But the Stanford coach, who is black, was not that receptive.

"I think he was a little frustrated with his position," Dodds said. "I think he thought that maybe people were contacting him to satisfy a need rather than really being interested (in hiring him). I think he got very protective of his position at Stanford."

Today, there are no black head coaches among the 106 schools in Division I, although about 40 percent of the players are minorities and 17 schools recently had opportunities to hire a black.

After John Mackovic was selected at Texas, he brought with him Cleve Bryant, who three years ago was among four black head coaches in Division I. As for Green, who frequently said he was tired of seeing his name used as "cannon fodder" at schools who wanted to appear progressive, he left Stanford to become the head coach for the NFL's Minnesota Vikings.

The only other black head coaches in Division I also disappeared from the scene. Northwestern's Francis Peay was forced to resign, and Long Beach State eliminated its program, leaving Willie Brown without a job.

Dick Schultz, the NCAA executive director, termed the lack of black head coaches a "major concern." On a more local level, Southwest Conference officials have encouraged schools to hire more minorities.

But it's the schools that do the hiring.

Ron Dickerson, defensive coordinator at Clemson and president of the National Black Coaches Association, interviewed for one of those 17 vacancies at the end of the 1991 season. He said there are at least a dozen more black men, including Bryant, who are ready and qualified to become head coaches.

Dickerson later was informed the school where he interviewed had hired a more experienced man, a former head coach who also was white. He's become accustomed to the conversation. It's been phrased differently in the past - the message, however, is the same.

"We hear all the different reasons why they're not choosing minorities," said Dickerson, who spent eight seasons working with Penn State's Joe Paterno and also served as assistant head coach under Colorado's Bill McCartney. "We've heard them all. We're tired of it. That's a harsh statement to make. It's a sad commentary on 1992, that despite 30 to 40 percent of the players being black, there are no black head coaches."

"I'm going to write a book called 'Not Qualified.' We always get the same answers. It frustrates you for a moment. But thank goodness I'm a competitive person, who keeps plugging away, because it's going to happen. My goal is to be the first black head coach to win a national championship."

There are several reasons mentioned why there is a lack of minorities at the highest ranks of the collegiate level. Dickerson suggested the alums who donate so much money to programs aren't ready for the schools to hire a black. Dodds believes that the pool of black assistants to choose from is growing, but still is not large enough mainly because schools like Texas did not have a black play for them until the late 1960s. Those black players who got into coaching are just now approaching the age and experience level usually needed to qualify for a head coaching job.

The NFL, where about 40 percent of the assistants are black, also is a factor. It's considered more prestigious by some to be an assistant in the pros rather than on the collegiate level. And the money in most cases is better. NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue also has stressed minority hiring.

Bryant, who was hired by John Mackovic to coach his wide receivers, used to be in charge of Division I Ohio University, his alma mater, after serving stints with the New England Patriots and for such college programs as North Carolina and Miami of Ohio.

But Bryant, despite having more players with 3,000 grade-point averages than any other school in the country, was fired after six seasons because he didn't win enough games.

He said he learned from his experience and still would consider a head coaching job, if he had support from the president of the school as well as the athletic director. In the meantime, it's more important to him to teach his players and to help them graduate, realizing "there is life after football."

"As a black human being, yes, I am concerned about the lack of black coaches," Bryant said. "There should be some, but it doesn't have to be Cleve Bryant. On a college level, every school in the country goes after the best athletes available. If we used just half that effort to hire coaches, then surely some of them would be black."

Under Mackovic, Texas has reached a milestone of sorts, because the new coach has hired two black assistants - Bryant and running backs coach Mike Godbolt. The past three Texas head coaches combined hired five full-time black assistants and two part-time ones. There never was more than one black assistant on staff for any season.

Godbolt, after playing for Boston

College in the 1970s, coached there, then joined Mackovic's staff at Illinois in 1986. At 36, he believes he's "still going through the ranks." He's also content with his new job, because although he grew up on the East Coast, Godbolt always dreamed of coaching running backs at Southern California or with the Longhorns, thanks to the reputation of Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell.

"I've never seen myself as a Division I head coach," he said. "I always wanted to be a coach in pro football. (Texas) is a great opportunity I couldn't pass up."

Dodds said he is trying to encourage coaches at Texas to hire more minorities. Within the administration, Dodds has hired blacks to serve as a career counselor and academic adviser during the past two years. He also recently hired Donnie Little, Texas' first black quarterback, to work with the Longhorn Foundation. Coincidentally, Little left his job as a head coach on the high school level to join the Texas administrative staff.

Dickerson said the overall lack of minorities could be corrected by the presidents of the schools who have influence over hirings and firings. It's those same presidents who recently have been so vocal about shaking up college athletics.

"The presidents need to be ashamed of this," Dickerson said. "They've said they're ashamed of the cheating. They said they're ashamed of the academic performance. Well, they also need to be ashamed of this."

"A black head coach can be just as well received in a white kid's living room as in a black kid's," he said. "He can sell the parents on the school, he can sell the brothers and sisters. He can go to the alumni and speak to them and be accepted just as well as a white coach."

"We're out there; you just have to hire us. I think the opportunity will come not just for the Ron Dickersons but for the other dozen or so who are ready. But it's going to take some guts and some grits from the higher-ups who have to say 'we're going to do it.'"

Karl Malone scored 25 points and John Stockton had 17 points and 16 assists for the Jazz. Derrick Coleman led the Nets with 18 points and 10 rebounds.

Pistons 106, Nuggets 91

Joe Dumars scored 10 of his 30 points in the decisive third quarter at Denver, and Detroit hit 80 percent of its shots in the period to hand the Nuggets their eighth consecutive loss.

Detroit took a 43-40 lead into the second half, then outscored the Nuggets 37-24 in the third quarter behind 16-for-20 shooting, taking an 80-64 advantage into the final 12 minutes.

Greg Anderson led Denver with 26 points, while Reggie Williams scored 22.

Pacers 115, Hawks 113, OT

Chuck Person's off-balance 15-foot jumper with 0.4 seconds left in overtime gave Indiana the victory at Atlanta.

Person got seven of his 22 points in the final 2:08 as the Pacers outscored the Hawks 8-2 to end a five-game losing streak at the Omni.

Alexander Volkov scored 21 points for the Hawks.

Jay Humphries scored 22 points, including 17 in the third quarter, for the Bucks against visiting Orlando.

Rookie Brian Williams led the Magic with 20 points.

76ers 88, Mavericks 86

Charles Barkley scored the decisive basket on a driving layup with 10 seconds left as Philadelphia beat Dallas.

Barkley had 24 points and 15 rebounds for the 76ers and Armon Gilliam finished with 20 points.

Rolando Blackman, who scored 22 points, made two free throws with 49 seconds remaining, putting Dallas ahead 86-84.

Gilliam made one of two foul shots for Philadelphia with 38 seconds to go, and with 17 seconds left, Barkley forced a jump ball that gave the 76ers possession for Barkley's winning basket.

From 1936 to 1945, covering 10 seasons, the Phillies finished last in the National League eight times and next-to-last twice.

Border baseball offers opportunity, danger

By MIKE WAGNER
Laredo Morning Times
LAREDO, Texas (AP) - When people love baseball and love to play it they will flock to wherever it is available.

Along the United States-Mexico border that often happens to be on the south side of the line where vast numbers of diamonds are carved out of mesquite fields and vacant lots.

But paranoia is permeating the United States borderlands just north of the seemingly friendly Mexican baseball fields.

The proximity of the illegal drug trade to the thriving Mexican semipro circuits is gaining notice.

Thoughts of pistoleros, pot and pine boxes mix with those of breaking pitches, dirt fields, competitive play and traditions in such border cities as Laredo, El Paso, Douglas, Ariz., and Imperial, Calif.

"There's a lot of it going around, unfortunately," Texan Richard Sandate, a former Mexican League pitcher, says of illegal drugs. "I saw it and just stayed away from it. 'Don't bother me and I won't bother you.'"

In Laredo, a spotlight was put on the potential for trouble when a Border Patrol search found a bag containing almost 40 pounds of marijuana among equipment belonging to the Laredo Junior College baseball team last October.

"In all border towns it's the same thing," said Manny Acosta, a former assistant coach at Laredo Nixon, now at Tempe High in Tempe, Ariz. "Laredo is a bigger port of entry and there is a lot of attention to it, but Douglas (his Arizona hometown on the border) is famous for the tunnel."

He referred to a tunnel from Agua Prieta, Mexico, to Douglas that served a Mexican drug smuggler well until it was discovered.

Like Laredo and some other U.S. border towns, Douglas has no organized summer leagues for its young men (16-18 or over). Thus, those in love with the game are forced to cross the line and play among sometimes undesirable elements.

"Douglas had Babe Ruth (League baseball) when I was there but it died out," Acosta said. "There is no baseball except 'across,' and a lot go."

"There's a problem there that people need to realize," Acosta said. "Something needs to be done."

Conversations about semipro baseball just across the Mexican border bring immediate hesitation in speech and a pensive look. Many borderlanders will talk, but few will go on the record about the dark side that involves betting and drug money.

"Lots of drug traffickers are sponsors of those teams there," James Kuykendall, a former DEA agent, said. "About four years ago we arrested a guy from here that was taking 20 or 30 pounds to a warehouse in Dallas and that led us to the baseball thing."

Butch Campa, a recreation center director in El Paso's Parks and Recreation Department, is familiar with the semipro baseball found in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. He and countless other El Pasoans have played there.

"Throughout the years some people around here have been involved (in baseball) and dealing in drugs. And if they have money they might be a sponsor but my experience is that it might have been, at best, one out of three individuals," Campa said. "It has not been on a large scale."

"I played in Juarez many years and with a lot of good people," he said. "Heck, there were a lot of good people and legitimately good sponsors. One sponsor was from the government. In Juarez a lot of federal officers were involved. Luckily, some were good government people that were involved."

Many Laredo players, alongside others from both sides of the border, have honed their skills in Sunday afternoon and Thursday night action in Nuevo Laredo.

"I played across," said David Chisum, a second baseman in the Cleveland Indians organization who was a first-team junior college All-American at center field for LJC last year. Chisum spoke in a telephone interview from his home in Eagle Pass, across the border from Piedras Negras, Mexico, where he was born.

"It's the same thing: The people, the fields, the umpires. Everything is the same. I just go across to play, but I really don't like to go over and play. There are fights and bad language in the dugouts. I just go over to play. Some friends call and I go."

Chisum does credit playing in Mexico with teaching him how to hit the curveball. Fastballs are much rarer in Mexican play than in the United States.

Freddie Benavides, a utility infielder for the Cincinnati Reds and Laredo's first major leaguer, spent very little time across the Rio Grande.

"Maybe one game with a friend," the former Laredo Nixon and Texas Christian University star said. "I just played other sports, basketball, football. Back then there was no winter ball. When my sport was in that's all I would play."

He was able to play baseball in the summer, on this side, thanks to a then existing local Big League circuit, and he says he would like to see such an organization come back to benefit other young people.

Benavides and Chism have promoted an anti-drug message to border youth. Last month Chisum was among those participating in Eagle Pass' second annual "Say No to Drugs" Baseball Campaign and Clinic. About 400 youngsters attended from both sides of the border. Benavides, at his instructional camp in Laredo in January, also stressed avoiding drugs.

Concerns other than drugs also focus on border baseball. There are potential conflicts with the rules of the University Interscholastic League that governs high school sports in Texas. And some worry about the safety of Mexican facilities.

"The quality is not always that good," Laredo United South coach Danny Martinez said of baseball on the other side. "They don't use batting helmets and there are some bad kids. You can get pitches thrown at you and they'll slide into you."

Laredo St. Augustine coach Enrique Mejia played in a number of games in Nuevo Laredo when he was young but shudders at the thought of any of his players participating there now.

"None of our kids play across. Not for any reason," he said. "I'm sure there are some good things to it but supervision is not one of them. If they want to they have to ask me first, so they usually don't."

Hodie Garcia, Del Rio High School baseball coach and the school's athletic director, has put playing baseball across the Rio Grande in Ciudad Acuna off limits to his players.

"There is money involved," he said staring and shaking his head. "We don't have that problem in Del Rio. I won't let them play because money is involved. Too many things can happen when you cross that river."

The money Garcia refers to is that which is paid to players in Mexican semipro baseball, a practice forbidden by the UIL.

"To my knowledge we haven't had a team penalized or a situation where that was even alleged," Bill Farney, UIL athletic director for Texas high schools, said. "We've had some around the state that may have been paid or had tried out for a college team."

"The baseball (across the Rio Grande) probably won't hurt 'em but we don't want to hurt kids by being around drug dealers. If we can save one kid it'd be worth it."

Junior college athletics on the border could offer more chances for mishap. The still unsolved case involving the Laredo Junior College baseball team at a U.S. Border Patrol check point en route to San Antonio last Oct. 26 points to the problems.

The team was using private vehicles because the school van's keys had been misplaced. A Border Patrol dog picked up the scent of something in a pickup owned and driven by one of the team's players. A bag of almost 40 pounds of marijuana was discovered but none of the three people in the truck was arrested.

Troy Van Brunt, LJC head baseball coach, has said repeatedly that such an incident will not happen again. He might go so far as to call the Border Patrol to request a dog-sniffing inspection each time his team goes out of town, he says.

"We haven't had many problems like that, but sure as shooting it's there," Dave Drury, Imperial Valley College coach, said by telephone from California.

"I think we've been lucky, but I think you can see if an athlete is on drugs. A lot of drugs move across the border. I remember a few years ago I saw a special on TV that called (nearby) Calexico 'Little Heroin USA.'"

Arnie Alvarez, coach at Texas

Southmost College in Brownville, sees little wrong with players going across to play.

"There's nothing wrong with it," he said, "(just) as long as they play, don't take any money or anything, and as long as they better their skills."

"I think we live in a hypocritical society. I think the most abused drug is alcohol. You can abuse it legally."

Alvarez gives his players a word or two on the subject when they join his program.

"I tell mine that 'you know what it is all about,'" he said. "It's all over the country, not just up and down the border. I know of some cases like with a judge that had laundered some money and that money was put into a Little League program."

"We live in a hypocritical society. We push beer and alcohol with the big-time athletes. In prohibition there were people called bootleggers and now we hear of pushers. I'm not justifying that, but as a society we've got to see the whole picture."

Many have gone to the Mexican baseball fields for years and never have had any problems.

Mexican baseball gave Eloy Rendon, 43, a chance to recapture as a young man the beloved baseball he had to forego at age 12 to help support his five younger siblings.

"I've played summer ball and winter ball in Liga Mayor or semi-pro two or three times a week and I've played in two leagues (simultaneously)," Rendon said. "There are three different leagues (in Nuevo Laredo) and close to 40 teams and each team has about 20 guys. There is a lot of baseball enthusiasm in Mexico so a lot of guys go there."

Playing "across" has also allowed Rendon and his son, also named Eloy, to share the game as teammates.

"It's an experience," the younger Eloy said. "He's someone who taught me as a kid, now I get to share it with him."

Even though baseball across the river has been very, very good to Rendon, he would still like to see his son's games take place on this side.

"We have a lack of people to organize here," he said. "It gets hard. You can't have a team environment. In this side there is the nightlife, football, track and participating in other sports."

"In Nuevo Laredo you can play year round. Here, just in the summer."

Danny Martinez of Laredo United South grew up in the border town of Zapata and played in a handful of games across in Guerrero and Nuevo Laredo. He also sees the need for some kind of organized baseball for high school age boys on this side of the river.

"We have senior leagues for boys 13 through 15 and after that a Big League but it hasn't been well-structured and it's hard to get coaches," Martinez said. "We played four or five games last year but that was it. The UIL says you can't coach six or more of your own (on any one team)."

Floyd "Cowboy" Scrimshire, Cigarroa's head baseball coach, and in his profession for 26 years, sees a very serious need for organized baseball for the 16-18 crowd here. Enthusiasm for the game is high on the Southside and Mexico can be seen without much difficulty from the front door at Cigarroa, or United South.

"We need it, really," he said. "In the summer everyone else is so far away and there is too much (expense) money and travel involved."

"I wish we (coaches) could help. I think we could get enough together to give us something to look forward to in going out of town. The chances for injuries would not be as bad and there would be a better crowd of people and competition."

Active leagues for those in the 16-18 group are available through the Babe Ruth, American Legion and Connie Mack baseball organizations in Eagle Pass, Del Rio, Carrizo Springs, the South Texas Brush Country and Corpus Christi.

TAMU, TCFA cooperate in manure study

TULIA -- Texas crop producers and feedlot operators are forging a new link in the food production chain with a keen eye on cooperative protection of the environment. Using information from a project conducted by the Texas A&M University-TCFA research project at Etter, north of Amarillo. "In the past, we've primarily looked at manure from a fertilization standpoint," said Thomas Marek, agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. "This study is looking at water quality effects and cropping procedures" which match the manure nitrification process with use of the nutrients by the crop, he said.

The project is investigating the impacts of applying over 20 tons of feedlot waste per acre every three years, compared to equally high rates of inorganic nitrogen and phosphorus. Preliminary results indicate that feedlot waste increased the intake of preplant irrigation about 10 percent; irrigation runoff water on feedlot waste has almost double the salt concentration with the initial preplant irrigation, but is the same with subsequent irrigations; runoff water from feedlot waste tends to have lower nitrate nitrogen concentration; and isolated "high salt" spots were observed within a month after plant emergency in feedlot waste treatments, resulting in some plant damage.

"Good management is the key," Marek said. "It would appear that 20 tons an acre (of manure) every three years is an acceptable level of application in an irrigated crop, if proper management practices are followed." Particular attention must be paid to how the manure is applied, he stressed. "An even distribution of the manure is critical," he said.

The teaming up of farmers and feeders, applying manure to cropland for fertilizer, is providing benefits for both, says Dr. John Sweeten, agricultural engineer and waste management specialist with the Extension Service.

Feedyards are a major market for feedgrain producers. Cropland can use the manure from the feedlots for fertilizer to replenish and often improve the soil. With proper management, land application of manure uses feedyard wastes and complies with environmental regulations.

A third, and important, member of the team is the contractor who collects the manure at the feedyard, delivers and distributes it on the farmland for a fee, Sweeten said. A 1989 survey showed that 12 contractors serving 45 High Plains feedlots handle about 60 percent of the feedlot capacity in Texas.

"It takes about 4,500 acres of dryland or 2,250 acres of irrigated cropland for the manure from every 10,000 head of cattle," Sweeten said. Texas feedyards annually feed some 5 million head of cattle. Feedyards in Swisher and four adjoining counties feed about 1.3 million head a year, said Tom McDonald of TCFA.

"There's not an oversupply of manure," Sweeten said. Only about 135,000 irrigated acres, or 270,000 dryland acres, would handle the manure produced in Swisher and those four surrounding counties, he said.

Since the 1950s, cattle feeding has been a major agricultural industry in the High Plains and some other part of Texas where production of grains and other feedstuffs is abundant. In the Texas Panhandle, growers produce grain on four million irrigated acres.

Feedlots operate under state permits and must meet very strict regulation on manure handling and land application, Sweeten noted.

"If the feedlot's going to be there to buy your grain, sufficient crop acreage must be available to apply manure," Sweeten told almost 200 growers and feedlot operators at a meeting here. It was one of several being conducted by TCFA and the Extension Service to explain the economics and management of manure as a fertilizer.

Farmers close to the feedlots can realize a saving in transportation costs, which must be considered in the manure price, explained Dr. Steve Amosson, Extension Service economist and management specialist. The average price of manure to the farmer is $2.14 a ton plus 12 cents a mile per ton for hauling, he said. Price resistance for manure, compared to inorganic (commercial) fertilizers, comes when the cost reaches $3 a ton, the economist said.

In addition to nitrogen, feedlot manure offers other benefits, said Dr. Michael Hickey, Extension Service soil chemist. It increases organic matter and improves soil structure, improves moisture retention in sandy soils, provides higher levels of carbon dioxide in the crop canopy, and improves the availability and movement of micronutrient such as iron and zinc.

"Micronutrient may be one of our primary benefits" from manure as a fertilizer, Hickey said. Commercial fertilizers can be blended to exactly meet the needs of a particular crop, but the price increases with each additional element.

A soil test is necessary to determine which nutrients are needed for the planned crop and yield, and the application rate of manure. The nutrient makeup of manure will vary slightly depending on the ration fed the cattle and the manure handling practices of the feedyard. But Hickey said a typical nutrient analysis should be available from each feedyard.

"The real advantage of manure for me is the nutrient content," said Randy Darnell, who farms corn and wheat at Canyon. "The second thing I like about manure is the cost of those nutrients," he said. He said he bases applications on results of soil sample analysis.

Other advantages Darnell listed include improvement of his soil and the slow release of nutrients by the manure. He said disadvantages are soil compaction, debris in the manure, and timing of applications.

"With manure, we're achieving 200 bushels (an acre) yield on corn, which is our primary crop," Darnell said.

Bob Birkenfeld, who with his brothers farms 3,000 acres and operates a manure composting business at Nazareth, said composting "takes manure one step further, breaking down the elements and making them readily available to the plant." He explained the process of inoculating the manure with aerobic bacteria to break down the elements, mechanically turning the compost piles to maintain uniform temperatures which kill weed seed in the manure, and removing debris.

Project Range Care begins five-year effort this month

By EDITH CHENAULT
 UVALDE--The Texas Agricultural Extension Service in March is launching Project Range Care, a five-year statewide 882Xeducational effort aimed at helping ranchers improve their rangelands.

The program seeks ways to improve the management of livestock stocking rates to ensure ranch success and range sustainability.

"Ranchers do not intentionally overgraze their ranges and decrease their productivity," said Dr. Larry White, range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Rangelands in Texas were severely overgrazed near the turn of the century. Range conditions continue to improve but many areas still need careful management, White said.

Finances, extended drought, arid environments, over-optimism, or year-long grazing programs that do not allow pastures to "rest" may contribute to the problem, he said.

For example, in the more humid areas of the state that average 30 to 40 inches of rain annually, ranges may improve from fair to good condition to two to three years with proper grazing management. In arid West Texas, with an average rainfall of 10 inches, that same increase may take 5 to 10 years, he said. With drought, recovery is often slower, he said.

Two-thirds of the state--or nearly 170 million acres--are rangeland, or non-cultivated land that produces native vegetation for grazing. Much of the agricultural income and food for Texans is produced by more than 20 million grazing animals. Additionally, wildlife supported by rangeland provides income and pleasure.

However, less than 20 percent of Texas ranchers closely monitor the impact of stocking rates on their range resources, according to a statewide survey conducted by the Extension Service.

"The animal stocking rate is the most important ranch decision," White said. "Ranchers are not in the business of growing livestock--they are in the business of growing grass, or forage, to support that livestock, while conserving the other resources of the range. Forage serves as the foundation."

The first regional Project Range Care session will be an all-day workshop March 10 at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station near Sonora.

S&WCD accepting tree order

Orders are being taken through mid-March for windbreak trees by the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District.

The trees will come from the forest services in Texas and Colorado.

Evergreen species include Austrian pine, Colorado blue spruce, Eastern red cedar, Ponderosa pine, Rocky Mountain juniper, Scotch pine and Pinon pine.

Hardwood species include bur oak, desert willow, honey locust, ash, Chinese elm, cottonwood, golden willow, hackberry, poplar and Russian olive.

Shrubs will include carogona, chokeberry, lilac, native plum, sumac, sand cherry, Nanking cherry and sage.

Tree seedlings will be 10-12 inches tall; evergreens are available in containers or bare-rooted. Hardwoods and shrubs come bare-rooted only.

Orders may be made at the SCS office at 315 W. Third in Hereford.

YOUR EYES

GOOD VISION PRACTICES

There are probably more myths than scientific studies about eyes and glasses, but your optometrist can steer you between them to good eyesight and visual comfort. Contrary to old-wives' tales, reading too much or in poor light won't actually weaken your eyesight, nor will holding a book too close while reading it really cause your eyes to cross. But these practices will produce visual stress and strain the muscles of the eye-- and visual stress can alter the way you see temporarily, even permanently. Wearing your glasses does not make your eyes get worse. Actually, what happens is that you get used to seeing properly and become more aware of the difference when you take your glasses off. What about wearing someone else's glasses? Definitely not a good idea. Good vision care calls for regular examinations by your eye professional and, if correction is needed, eyeglasses fitted especially for your eyes.

Over the past several weeks I have tried to visit with as many of the voters of Deaf Smith County as possible. I appreciate the opportunities I have had to speak to individuals and groups. Because of my responsibilities as Sheriff I have not been able to see everyone and I wish to take this opportunity to ask for your vote and support. I will continue to operate an efficient and effective Sheriff's Department, with integrity; and provide adequate law enforcement, to the utmost degree, to all citizens of Deaf Smith County.

back and forth, back and forth, growing in amplitude.

In the laser the voice is light, all of the atoms in the crystal or gas emitting photons of the same wavelength, reflecting them back and forth between mirrors until they are amplified and emitted as straight-line beams of light of sometimes great intensity.

When Theodore Harold Maiman turned on his ruby laser one day in May 1960, he sent out a beam of red coherent light, the product of excited chromium atoms, that illuminated the century.

"In science, there is what is called the existence principle," says Bartolini, laser physicist with the David Sarnoff Research Center in Princeton, N.J. "That is, once somebody has done something, all of a sudden it makes every other scientist smarter. Because up to that point, in the backs of their minds is the thought that maybe it can't be done."

All of a sudden, lasers were everywhere.

"First was the helium neon laser. It's the neon (the same gas that has been flashing 'Eat At Joe's' for decades) that does the lasing. It's the helium that pumps up the energy level. But gas lasers suddenly popped up all over the place. Neon, argon, krypton all from a certain place in the periodic table."

And the carbon dioxide laser. LASER stands for Light Amplification by the Stimulated Emission of Radiation. But, as Bartolini explains, the amplification is really an oscillation. "The old joke goes that if you called it a light oscillator, the acronym would come out LOSER. And nobody would have worked on it. Who would ever work on a project called loser."

Only two years after Maiman said let there be coherent light, and there was coherent light, came the semiconductor diode laser, reducing the light source to the size of a transistor. What silicon did for electronic transistors, a compound called gallium arsenide did for photonics.

"So a little tiny speck you couldn't see with the naked eye," says Bartolini, "is the laser that is in the compact disc player, in your fiber-optic transmissions."

Maiman, who produced the laser almost against the will of the management at Hughes Research in Malibu, Calif., and later went on to run laser research at TRW, is now a consultant working out of Santa Barbara. One of his pet projects is advising a firm that carries the laser message into hospitals, showing surgeons how the laser can enhance their work.

First of all, laser surgery is bloodless, cauterizing as it cuts. It is self-sterilizing and because it is so limited in its focus, it does less damage to bodily tissues, so there is a shorter recovery time.

In February the Food and Drug Administration approved the first laser to clear clogged arteries by literally vaporizing the blockage. Approval came after clinical studies of 685 patients showed a 91 percent success rate.

One doctor who specializes in urology told Maiman that one procedure to remove a urinary tract cancer used to require two days in the hospital.

"Now he tells his patients not to put more than 25 cents in the parking meter," Maiman says. "You come in and it's a little 15-minute deal and you go back to your car and drive away."

In some cases, Maiman says, surgery can be avoided altogether. A bleeding ulcer can be cauterized by snaking a fiber-optic laser beam to the spot via the esophagus. The same goes for the intestine and colon, a 30-minute procedure, a bit of discomfort, but no incision.

The laser is proving its worth in gall bladder surgery and a number of cancers, including the prostate. But one of the most dramatic, if still experimental, procedures is photodynamic therapy, or PDT.

"You inject a patient with a certain dye," Maiman says. "The dye circulates in the body and in about 48 hours it tends to accumulate preferentially in cancer cells. One of the properties of the dye is its instability."

Under a laser light the dye decomposes rapidly, emitting as it does a very reactive form of oxygen which kills the cancer cells.

There is one transitory side effect. Because it accumulates in the skin, the patient becomes sensitive to sunlight and has to avoid it for a couple of weeks to avoid sunburn. A new dye may eliminate even that inconvenience.

But the same affinity for skin makes it especially effective in skin cancers. Maiman has seen the results. A nose that would have had to be amputated emerged from the procedure totally cancer-free and normal. An ear that would have required drastic surgery was relieved of its cancer and is totally normal.

"It's sort of like a magic bullet," Maiman says, "because you end up killing only the cancer cells because that is the only place the dye is..."

"Now they've used it successfully in the bladder, which they can get to with a scope, and more recently certain types of lung cancer, particularly in the bronchial tubes which they can reach with a bronchoscope. It's exciting..."

"It's been used to treat a certain type of brain tumor. You have to open up the skull in those cases but nevertheless with regular surgical techniques, you would do too much damage to the brain or call it inoperable."

Maiman emphasizes that the procedure is experimental and has not been approved by the Food and Drug Administration. And because it is only a procedure, it can't be patented and so has no profit appeal to drug companies who have to spend millions to obtain federal approval. Nevertheless, "in medicine you have many procedures coming along. It's really mushroomed in the last 10 years and producing an amazing revolution in therapy...For a while we talked about the laser being a solution looking for a problem. I did a talk some years back and I titled it 'Problems Found.'"

Almost anything the transistor can do, the laser can do better, if not always cheaper, says Anthony Demaria, physicist with United Technologies. In the wings is a laser disc for home television, more sharp and pure and reliable than the TV tapes. In fact, the laser has been put to work to repair the integrated transistor circuits built by the electronics industry.

Wherever one turns there is a laser waiting. In the clothing industry, says Bartolini, manufacturers learned that lasers could lay out the patterns for clothes on the carefully stacked textiles. Now they not only lay out the pattern, but they cut them to precision as well.

In Canada, dental surgeons are using lasers to do root canal work virtually pain free. The red-lit probe deftly destroys the nerves and sterilizes as it goes.

The laser speeds up the laying of sewer pipe and does it more accurately. The pitch at which the pipe is laid is crucial. If it is too steep, the water will flow too fast to carry its burden of solids. No longer do pipe teams have to dig extensive trenches so the surveyors can set up their transits to define the pitch. Now they can use a portable laser to sight the proper pitch and dig a trench only big enough to accept the length of pipe. Now one team digs a short trench, another lays the pipe along the laser beam and a third fills in while a new short trench is dug.

Then, of course, the laser's great shortcoming was both predictable and obvious. It failed as a death ray. One can build a laser that will kill even kill a ballistic missile. But despite Star Wars, practicalities dictate that such a high-powered laser be limited.

The perfect environment for such a weapon is space, where the atmosphere of oxygen and nitrogen and hydrogen atoms will not impede and attenuate the beam.

So all one has to do is send such a power source, which now occupies several buildings on Earth, into space. And not just one power source, but many.

It was human nature in the Cold War to visualize using the laser to

Annual Junior Music Festival set Monday

The Annual Junior Music Festival, sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs, is planned from 8:15 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Monday in First Baptist Church.

There are 103 entrants in the festival representing students from Hereford, Dimmitt, Friona and Lazbuddie. The students will be judged in piano solos, hymns, duets and vocal solos.

Piano and voice teachers participating locally are Evelyn Hacker, Susan Shaw, Barbara Manning, Cheryl Betzen, Francis Parker, Lesley Woodard, all of Hereford, and Johnnie Walters of Friona.

Serving as this year's judges are Mark Stallings, Patricia Harris, Celia McKay and Mary Lou Stockdale, all of Amarillo, and Elaine Damron of Muleshoe.

Following the festival, judges and music club members will be served a luncheon at the church.

The following resumes were submitted by the festival judges for publication.

Celia Rosenwald McKay was born in Amarillo. She attended Tascosa High School and Amarillo College. She was inducted into the Tascosa Hall of Fame in 1985. She graduated from Trinity College of Music in London, England, and also graduated from the Royal Opera School in London and from the International Opera Center in Geneva, Switzerland. She is a mezzo-soprano soloist in all the major concert halls in London. She established the private Voice and Piano Studio in Amarillo in 1980 and is an Amarillo representative for Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Mary Lou Stockdale has been a private piano teacher in Amarillo since 1958. She graduated from the Friends University in Wichita, Kan. and is past president of the Amarillo Music Teacher Association. She was elected Music Teacher of the Year in 1987 by the A.M.T.A. She is currently serving as president of MacDowell Music Club in Amarillo and is also serving as historian of District I of T.F.M.C. She has served as church organist for many years.

Elaine Damron received a B.A. degree from the University of Texas in Austin. She has taught piano and organ in Muleshoe for approximately 36 years. Her students have done well in both applied music and theory activities at the University of Central Florida in Orlando. He has previously served churches at Wesley United Methodist and Christ Congregational in Miami, Trinity United Methodist in Lighthouse Point, and Winter Park's First United Methodist.

and won auditions and medals on the local, district and state levels.

Mrs. Damron, along with her students, has served as organist for the First United Methodist Church of Muleshoe for many years. She was largely responsible in helping to secure the large Roiter pipe organ for the Methodist sanctuary there.

Mrs. Damron has been a member of the National Guild of Piano Teachers and the Texas and National Music Teachers Associations for many years. She was one of the founders of the Muleshoe Music Teachers Association and has served as adjudicator for many competitions throughout the years.

Patricia Harris received a bachelor of arts degree in music education from the University of Texas with extensive graduate work in music history, research and performance with emphasis in piano, organ and harpsichord. She has had a private teaching studio since 1966. She teaches piano, organ, harpsichord, clarinet and music theory.

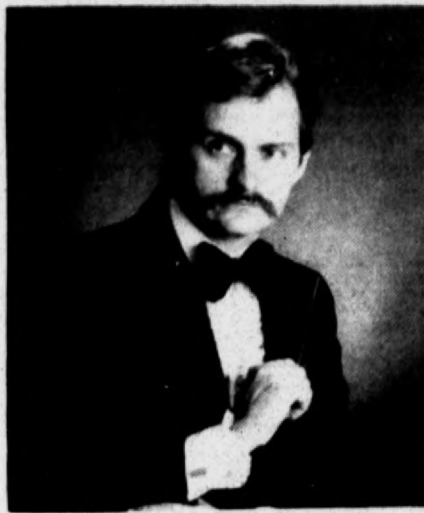

Harris taught piano at Odessa College and the University of Texas Permian Basin from 1982-88. She has lived in Amarillo since 1988. She maintains a large teaching studio and is also assistant music director and organist at Saint Stephen United Methodist Church in Amarillo. She is a member of Amarillo and Texas Music Teachers Association, Music Teacher National Association and McDowell Music Study Club.

Dr. Mark E. Stallings is the minister of music at Saint Stephen United Methodist Church of Amarillo where he oversees a program of 14 choirs for all ages. He holds a doctor of musical arts degree in choral music from the University of Miami in Florida and his doctoral work under Lee Kjelson was devoted to the choral music of Bostonian composer Daniel Pinkham.

Dr. Stallings has appeared frequently as baritone soloist in the South but he is better known as a minister of music. Academically, he was named to Omicron Delta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi and Pi Kappa Lambda. He is also listed in Outstanding Young Men of America 1987 and Who's Who in Religion in 1985 and 1992. He holds a master and undergraduate degrees in music education.

Prior to coming to the Panhandle, Dr. Stallings served as director of choral

American beef goes south

Aggressive marketing by the U.S. cattle industry is helping U.S. producers get a jump on growing export opportunities in a very price-sensitive market-Mexico.

As recently as 1989, supermarket chains in northern Mexico bought only domestic beef carcasses. Today, thanks to producer dollars from the national beef check off as much as 70 percent of one supermarket's beef sales come from U.S. boxed beef.

That's one success story from a series of training seminars conducted by the U.S. Meat Export Federation (USMEF) with cattle producers' check off funds. The seminars have taught meat department managers, meat buyers and store managers of major supermarket chains in Mexico how to use U.S. boxed beef to their company's advantage.

The seminars show Mexican retailers can make more money with U.S. boxed beef products-Mexican labor costs for boning the beef are expensive. U.S. beef arrives boxed and boneless. Also, retailers only have to buy the cuts the want and don't have to worry about selling unwanted parts of a carcass.

"We Care"

Goals, both large and small, give our lives meaning and are the accomplishments toward which we direct ourselves. The time that one takes to stand back and look at life, in its full perspective, is time well spent. It affords the opportunity to set one's life direction, discover what is worthy of dreams and take the satisfaction in realizing them. Such a course of action lends purpose to life. Oliver Wendell Holmes once observed, "I find that great things in this world are not so much where we stand, as in what direction we are moving. To reach the port of heaven, we must sail sometimes against it, but we must sail and not drift, nor lie at anchor."

Brigance speaks to Rebekahs

Janet Brigance, R.N., spoke to members of the Hereford Rebekah Lodge #228 prior to the regular meeting Tuesday evening. The availability and purpose of home health care in Hereford and surrounding areas was explained.

Noble Grand Shirley Brown presided at the business session. Twenty-seven visits to the sick, 51 cheer cards, 32 dishes of food and four flowers were reported.

Susie Curtsinger and Jo Iribek were elected as representative and alternate, respectively, to the Panhandle Association of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs which will meet April 25-26 in Borger.

Practice of the Rebekah Funeral Team was held in preparation for competition at P.H.A. Anna Conklin is captain. Leona Sowell was recommended to be honored at P.H.A. as an outstanding Rebekah.

CPR class scheduled Monday

Dalene Burns will instruct an eight-hour CPR class beginning at 7 p.m. Monday at First United Methodist Church.

Those interested in the class may register by calling the church office or the Red Cross office.

Musical performance tonight

The public is invited to attend the musical performance of "Let's Go to the Rock" at 7 p.m. today, Sunday, in the auditorium of the Stanton Special Programs Center. There is no charge to the presentation which will feature the First Baptist Church Youth Choir as they sing and dance to music from the 1950s. Steve Paul, minister of music and education at the church, is director. Rehearsing for the event are cast members, (kneeling, from left) Wendy Peabody, Misty Peabody, Taylor Sublett, Terri Reiter, (standing, from left) Scott Burkhalter, Ted Peabody, Tim Burkhalter and Wes Chumley.

Girl Scout Council recognizes Henson

In conjunction with the observance of the 80th birthday of Girl Scouts this week, Melinda Henson is being given special recognition by the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council.

Henson, who has been named the service unit director for Hereford, is responsible for the development, extension and maintenance of girl and adult membership and for ensuring that girls and Girl Scout leaders receive the services they need. She has served as Girl Scout troop leader for two years and recently completed leadership training.

The life-long Hereford resident is married to Kenny Henson and has two daughters, Ashley, 9, and Stephanie, 7. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Matthews and is a 1976 graduate of Hereford High School. She attended Texas Tech University for two years.

Henson is an active member First United Methodist Church where she serves as a Sunday school teacher and an Acolyte Mother. She is also a member of several church committees. She is a three-year member of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority where she is recording secretary and serves on the ways and means and the scrapbook committees. She is also the past president of the Hereford Young Homemakers.

She is the secretary at Newton Trucking, Inc. Her hobbies include cross stitching, music, sewing, cooking and participating in family activities.

As the Girl Scout service unit director, Henson plans for and directs the delivery of services to girls and adults. She recruits and directs the work of those who assist her in organizing troops, maintaining a high quality program for girls, and in providing support to Girl Scout leaders and other adults who guide girls through program activities.

No service unit director works alone. Henson has a service team composed of local leaders who help with the dissemination of information among the adult volunteers so that service unit decisions reflect the opinions of the majority. She also receives direction and support from a member of the council's staff who is called a field executive.

Texas Plains Girl Scout Council, whose council office is located in Amarillo, is comprised of 14 service units in Deaf Smith, Swisher, Randall, Carson, Oldham, Potter and Moore counties. A total of 2,100 girls are being served in the council, with 95 of those being in the Hereford service unit. To support these girls, there are 500 adult volunteers involved in the council, with seven of these being in the Hereford service unit.

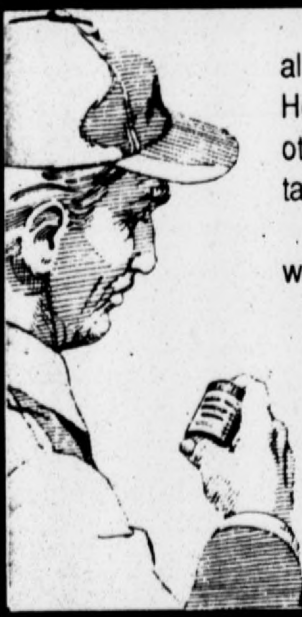

The service unit director is a volunteer position selected by the field executive and is usually held by a person that also is a troop leader. That means she gives service above and beyond the troop level of involvement. Without these unselfish volunteers, the delivery system used by GSUSA would fall short of its goal of helping as many girls as possible to reach their full self-potential, develop their personal values, learn how to contribute to society, and find ways of relating to others in a positive way. As service unit directors execute their responsibilities, girls and communities both become beneficiaries.

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Fruits and vegetables are an important part of a varied diet. Many fruits and vegetables are low in calories and fat and high in fiber, vitamins and minerals.

The new Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommends increasing your fruit and vegetable consumption to a minimum of five servings each day, two fruits and three vegetables.

A few simple steps can help preserve the nutrients in produce and improve the taste, texture and appearance. Select produce that is not damaged, bruised or wilted, since rough handling leads to vitamin loss. Choose dark green, orange and yellow fruits and vegetables. They are highest in beta-carotene (a precursor of vitamin A) which has been associated with lower cancer risk.

Fresh fruits and vegetables should be sun-ripened, then chilled immediately to preserve the content of vitamin A, vitamin C, folate and other nutrients. Also, don't wash produce until just before eating to conserve C and B vitamins. Wash without soaking to prevent drawing out nutrients into the water. Don't peel your fruits and vegetables since many nutrients are contained in the skin. Rinse and brush thoroughly instead. Skins also contribute dietary fiber--an added bonus.

Prepare fruits and vegetables as close to serving or cooking time as possible to minimize exposure to air and light. Steam, stir-fry or microwave vegetables, since these cooking methods preserve the most vitamins. Cook vegetables until just tender-crisp. Overcooking destroys vitamins. If you must boil, use as little water as possible. Boiling, soaking or canning draws water soluble vitamins such as C and Bs, and minerals such as selenium and potassium, from the food into the pot.

After boiling, save the vitamins and minerals by using the remaining water in soups, stews or sauces. If you eat and enjoy plenty of fruits and vegetables, you can't help but eat right, America.

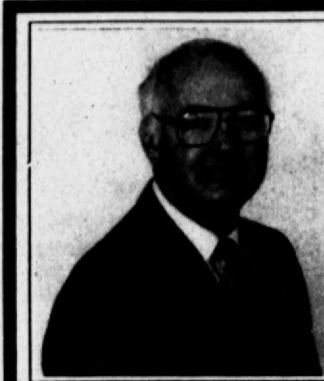

A Galago is a tree-dwelling African animal known for its ability to leap great distances—as much as 15 feet—among branches.

Collection day planned

Local Girl Scout members have several activities planned this week in conjunction with the observance of the organization's 80th birthday celebration. The troops have scheduled a plastics recycling day March 14 on the West Texas State University campus. Locally, No. 1 and 2 plastics will be collected from 8:30-11 a.m. March 14 at the office of the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross. This is a one-day collection only. Additional information may be obtained by calling the Girl Scout service unit director, Melinda Henson, at 364-0222 after 5:30 p.m. Those participating in the recycling effort are Girl Scout members, Dondie Carter, Jasemais Morris, Patricia Salazar, Veronica De La Cruz, April Martinez, Stephanie Henson, Kerrie Flood, Jennifer Romero, Mellesa Romero, Cassie Morris, Patricia De La Cerda, Janna Linker and Jackie Burns.

Sorority chapter elects officers at recent meeting

New officers were elected when members of Alpha Alpha Preceptor Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met recently in the home of Brenda Thomas. Alene Tindal served as co-hostess.

Serving as president will be Gerry Taylor; vice president, Barbara Burkhalter; recording secretary, Rosemarie Robinson; treasurer, Lillie Shipman; corresponding secretary, Virginia Jackson; and city council, Taylor, Thomas and Nan Gauthreaux. Alternate is Karren Ruland.

Taylor called the meeting to order. It was announced that rituals will be held April 16 at the Hereford Community Center instead of April 21 as originally planned. The women will meet next for a rush party in the Taylor home.

It was noted by chapter members that City Council Las Vegas Night had been changed from March 14 to March 28.

Opal Blakely exhibited an assortment of porcelain dolls she had made as the program for the meeting.

Refreshments were served to Gauthreaux, Ruland, Taylor, Phyllis Neil, Shipman, Murlene Streun, Jackson, Thomas, Lynda Brown and Beverly Redelsperger.

JILL ALEXANDER, J. SAVOINI

Couple to wed

Jill Alexander of Hereford and J. Clint Savoini of Amarillo plan to exchange wedding vows May 2 in the Central Christian Church in Lampasas.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Alexander of Lampasas and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. James Savoini of Prescott, Ariz.

Miss Alexander received a bachelor of science degree from Texas A&M University and is employed by the Cattle Finance Company in Friona. She is a member of Texas A&M University Association of Former Students and Alpha Iota Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

Savoini received a bachelor of science degree from Colorado State University. He is employed by Syntex Animal Health. He is a member of the Colorado State University Alumni Association. While attending the university, he was a four-year letterman on the baseball team and served as team captain. He was also chosen Most Valuable Player in 1987.

Lori Hopson presents program
Lori Hopson, granddaughter of Lydia Hopson, gave a program on "The Adventures of Being A Woman" when the La Afflatus Estudio Club met Tuesday in the home of Mary Herring.

Miss Hopson, who graduated from Hereford High School, is employed by an Amarillo law firm and is a member of Toastmasters #211.

President Emily Suggs opened the business meeting and the club collect was led by Alberta Higgins. Roll was answered by members relating a news story, a quip or joke.

The next meeting will be held March 17 in the home of Mrs. Hopson with Aileen Montgomery giving the program.

Montgomery served as hostess to those present: Della Stagner, Virginia Beasley, Marie Harris, Opal Elliston, Annie DeLozier, Louise Kinsey, Pet Ott, Mary Williamson, Suggs, Lydia Hopson, Higgins and Lori Hopson.

Baby care hints

What kind of crib toys should I offer my six-month old?

Choose crib toys that are safe, interesting and not too stimulating. The crib environment should be one which facilitates sleep and rest.

Babies love peek-a-boo toys and busy boxes which can be attached to the side of the crib. Other favorites are soft creatures they can "talk" to in their cribs. Always check for small or loose parts so they won't find their way into your baby's mouth.

Like all play materials, crib toys should be re-evaluated periodically throughout your child's development.

For example, by six months of age, it is time to put away the crib mobile because it can pose a risk now that your baby is reaching and grasping.

What are "fillers" in baby food and why are they used?
"Filler" is a generic term found in labels for contents like tapioca, corn starch and other starches.

Fillers are used to expand a food product or add to its texture.

Babies don't need fillers or additives of any kind in their food.

Celebration set for today

The public is invited to attend the 25th anniversary celebration of the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum located at 400 Sampson St. The event is scheduled from 1:30-4 p.m. today, Sunday, at the museum. Judge Tom Simons will serve as master of ceremonies for the special occasion. In preparation for the celebration, Paula Edwards puts the finishing touches on a display mannequin depicting the 1960s.

Public invited to special celebration

The Historical Society board of directors will serve as hosts during the Deaf Smith County Historical Museum's 25th anniversary celebration. The public is invited to attend the special event from 1:30-4 p.m. today at the museum located at 400 Sampson St.

Judge Tom Simons will serve as master of ceremonies for the afternoon's festivities. Also, board members will serve as guides for tours.

On March 8, 1967, the museum opened its doors to the public for the first time. The structure was originally the site of St. Anthony's Catholic School and was later purchased by the county. Through the dedication of its original board of directors and the concern of others to preserve the community's past, the museum stands today.

When it opened to the public, the museum was housed on the main floor of the building. Now, museum collections are located in the building's basement, back yard and barn. A special attraction is the railroad caboose as well as the dugout cabin which are filled with interesting items from the past.

The rooms in the museum have been specially decorated for the 25th anniversary. There is the wedding chapel, which has been the scene of numerous weddings each year; room vignettes, depicting life in the Panhandle around the turn of the century; and a country store and a haberdasher shop. In the changing display located in the basement, there are exhibits of clothing from the 1960s including prom dresses, evening wear and dress clothing, all belonging to Hereford area residents. The mannequins are sporting 1960s hairstyles.

Harder gives Veleda Study Club program

Deaf Smith County Extension Agent Beverly Harder presented a program Feb. 24 to Veleda Study Club members when the women met in the home of DeAun Sisson.

Harder asked the question, "Who cares for elderly parents, relatives and friends in this turbulent world?" She cited the many problems people face including unstable marriages, finances, health, children who live away from parents, etc. She said, "We must assume responsibility for changes in supporting our elderly. Many are on fixed incomes and due to nursing home costs, we must assume more personal care of this most important group."

Harder left the challenge with the women, "We must have more family appreciation commitment, spend time together, deal with each loved one in a positive manner and develop good communication patterns. It is so important that we be good listeners...develop patience and accept the fact they need love and understanding."

Bettie Dickson led the group in the reading of the club collect and members answered roll call with "my first experience with cooking or sewing."

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and corrected and the treasurer's report was given.

Norma Walden read a letter from Deaf Smith General Hospital announcing the future programs of the Women's Division to be held at the Hereford Community Center.

Members present were Marcella Bradley, Juanita Brown, Dickson, Mary Dzuik, Bettie Gilbert, Della Hutchins, Betty Roberts, Sisson, Walden and Margret Zinser.

The next meeting will be held March 9 with Ruth Fisher as hostess.

Accent on Health

In more than 18 years since it became one of the first state programs of its kind in the U.S., the Kidney Health Program of the Texas Department of Health (TDH) has offered financial help to more than 30,000 of the state's kidney disease patients.

While the number of patients served may seem small, compared to some more general TDH programs benefiting millions, the end-stage renal dialysis, kidney transplant do the services the program pass for often determine a client's survival.

Manuel Zapata, director of the Kidney Health Program, explained that the program provides financial assistance for medical care for kidney disease patients who have no insurance and who do not qualify for Medicare or Medicaid. "For most of these clients, we offer the only alternative to certain deteriorating and death from kidney disease," he said. Additionally, the program helps all program participants with transportation and medication.

The most common cause of kidney failure requiring dialysis or surgical transplantation are diabetes, hypertension (high blood pressure) and glomerulonephritis.

Most of the program's clients are adults, with nearly one-third age 65 or older.

Having undergone a kidney transplant in 1989, Zapata knows first-hand the suffering and expense resulting from kidney disease. "Fortunately for me, I had adequate insurance to pay the costs of surgery and treatment," he said. "but anyone, regardless of age and resources, can develop kidney disease. When that happens, it is an emergency. Our program is meant to ensure that lack of money does not further compound a patient's health emergency."

Zapata said that in his own case he had to undergo dialysis for 15 months before receiving his transplant. The dialysis and surgery were costly enough, he explained, but the expense did not stop there. After

Breast Cancer Screening set April 24

The Breast Cancer Screening Program of the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center and High Plains Baptist Hospital of Amarillo will continue community outreach clinics for early detection of breast cancer.

A clinic will be held in Hereford of Friday, April 24, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the South Plains Health Care Providers, Inc., 603 East Park. Exams are done by appointment only. MOM-O-GRAMS are also available for gifts for remembering someone special for Mother's Day For more information or to make an appointment, please call the Harrington Cancer Center at our toll free number, 1-800-377-HOPE (4673).

Funding is available through the Texas Department of Health for screening mammography for Texas residents qualifying for financial assistance.

Early detection of breast cancer is the major goal of cancer control for each woman seen in the clinic. The clinic provides low cost screening which includes a breast exam by a Registered Nurse trained in breast cancer detection, teaching of breast self examination, and a mammogram.

Currently, the most effective method known to win the battle against breast cancer is early detection. Early detection is best done by following the guidelines recommended by the American Cancer Society for breast cancer screening for women who have no signs or symptoms of breast cancer. The guidelines are:

1. Learn and perform breast self examination every month.
2. Have a physical examination every year.

3. Have a mammogram according to the recommendations by age.

One baseline mammogram is needed for women 35 to 40; mammogram every 1 to 2 years for women 40 to 50; and yearly mammogram for women over 50.

James Madison was the puniest of American Presidents: at five feet, four inches tall and weighing just 100 pounds, he was dwarfed even by his wife Dolly.

Thank You

The family of Dick Oakes wishes to express their heartfelt thanks for all the smiles, thoughtful words and deeds, tears, prayers, memorials, food, flowers, cards, phone calls and visits from our wonderful family, friends and neighbors. Special thanks to all the members of St. Anthony's parish family, to all Auxiliary & VFW members of post 4818, for the wonderful support from Deaf Smith General Hospital & EMS staff, to Gary Phipps & staff and to all the medical team who assisted Dick during his illness, especially Dr. Mimms. Your acts of kindness & love will help us through these most difficult days ahead. God bless you all.

By JOE WEAVER
HAPPY BIRTHDAY GIRL SCOUTS! Don't let their looks fool you - some of those little cookie sellers are eighty years old!!!

Sorry, my mistake...the organization is eighty years old this year and local troops are providing this month's library displays. One part of the display includes uniforms and paraphernalia spanning three generations. (For more information about the Girl Scouts, call Melinda Henson at 364-0222).

March is also the time to begin or renew your membership in The Friends of the Library. I'll tell you more about this worthwhile organization next week, but for now, mark your calendars for March 16 (7 PM), and plan to attend our Open House - Annual Meeting.

This week's selection of new books demonstrates a lot of variety. Lillian Jackson Braun returns with The Cat Who Moved A Mountain. After five years of legal formalities, Jim Qwilleran has inherited a fortune and his freedom, and heads for the mountains with his Siamese cats. Hoping for solitude, the trio finds a mystery instead, and Qwill, Koko and Yum Yum are determined that no one will get away with murder.

In the offbeat humor department, there is (hang on for this title) The Junk-Drawer Corner-Store Front-Porch Blues. Sounds like a Lewis Grizzard title, but this is another novel by John Powers, the author of...well, I really don't have time for another title like that. It is said that no one combines nostalgia, bittersweet comedy, and deadly purpose better than Powers. A flip through the pages provided some laughs, but this book is not for the easily offended.

Fans of Robert Ludlum will be glad to hear that we now have The Road To Omaha. I confess that the author's name is more familiar to me than his work, but the jacket blurb is intriguing. Just reading the list of characters tells me this farce is a little unusual: General MacKenzie Lochinvar Hawkins, "the Hawk"; Thunder Head, chief of the Wopotamis; two small-time hoods - Desi Amaz One and Two; Little Joey the Shroud; and Sunrise Jennifer Redwing. Quite a cast!

WARNING: THE NEXT REVIEW IS FOR MEN ONLY!

Guys, I've found something here you may want to try out. It's called a "brank" and it's described in Old Time Punishments by William Andrews. Basically, it was an iron cage that fit over a woman's head, with a protrusion that went in her mouth, binding (sometimes wounding) the tongue. In olden times these things were used to punish "gossips and shrews." (Oh, for the good ol' days, eh?) There are a number of other items covered, including the ducking stool and stocks, but none as downright convenient and effective as the brank.

We are also introducing a massive biography entitled A.A. Milne: The Man Behind Winnie-the-Pooh (must have been a little guy). Author Ann Thwaite reveals that there was more to the noted children's author than appearances led contemporaries to believe. Don't look for titillating scandals, but if you want to delve into a complex, enigmatic, yet beloved man, check this out.

HEY! I just realized that it's been a while since we printed any "favorite books"! I surveyed the staff a few weeks ago, and here's what we came up with:

Rebecca - Follow The River by

Thom, and other historical fiction. LaJuan - Gone With The Wind Annie - A Message From Nam Alex - Judy Blume's The Cat Ate My Gym Suit

Veronica - Anne of Green Gables And mine? Well, someday I'll exercise my prerogative and spend a whole column on my choices!

BY THE WAY...don't forget the big 25th Anniversary Celebration this Sunday afternoon, March 8, at the Deaf Smith County Museum!

Watch for hidden enemies

What causes more damage to your home annually than all tornadoes, hurricanes, hail, floods, and wind-storms combined? Every home's potentially hidden enemy-termites.

Today, no home is completely safe from their damage. Termites can be found in virtually every state and region of the country; once in, no area of your home is safe from infestation.

Signs termites have invaded a home may include pencil-size dirt tubes form the soil into the hoe, white wings (indicating termites have swarmed) or wood weakened by termite activity.

For more information on termites, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Orkin, Termite Facts, P.O. Box 647, Atlanta, Georgia, 30301.

Donations sought for center

The Hereford Satellite Work Training Center is accepting donations to help purchase a van to transport the 18 clients to and from their jobs. The center is presently using a loaner van which is subject to recall. Anyone interested in making a contribution may call Mary Jo Hammon, the center's care manager, at 364-5861. Loading up materials to be used on their jobs are, from left, Roger Garcia, Ruth Soria and Elizabeth Delgado.

FRONT PORCH IS FIFTY FEET WIDE AND FIVE FEET DEEP

Family Home Sparkles With Country Charm

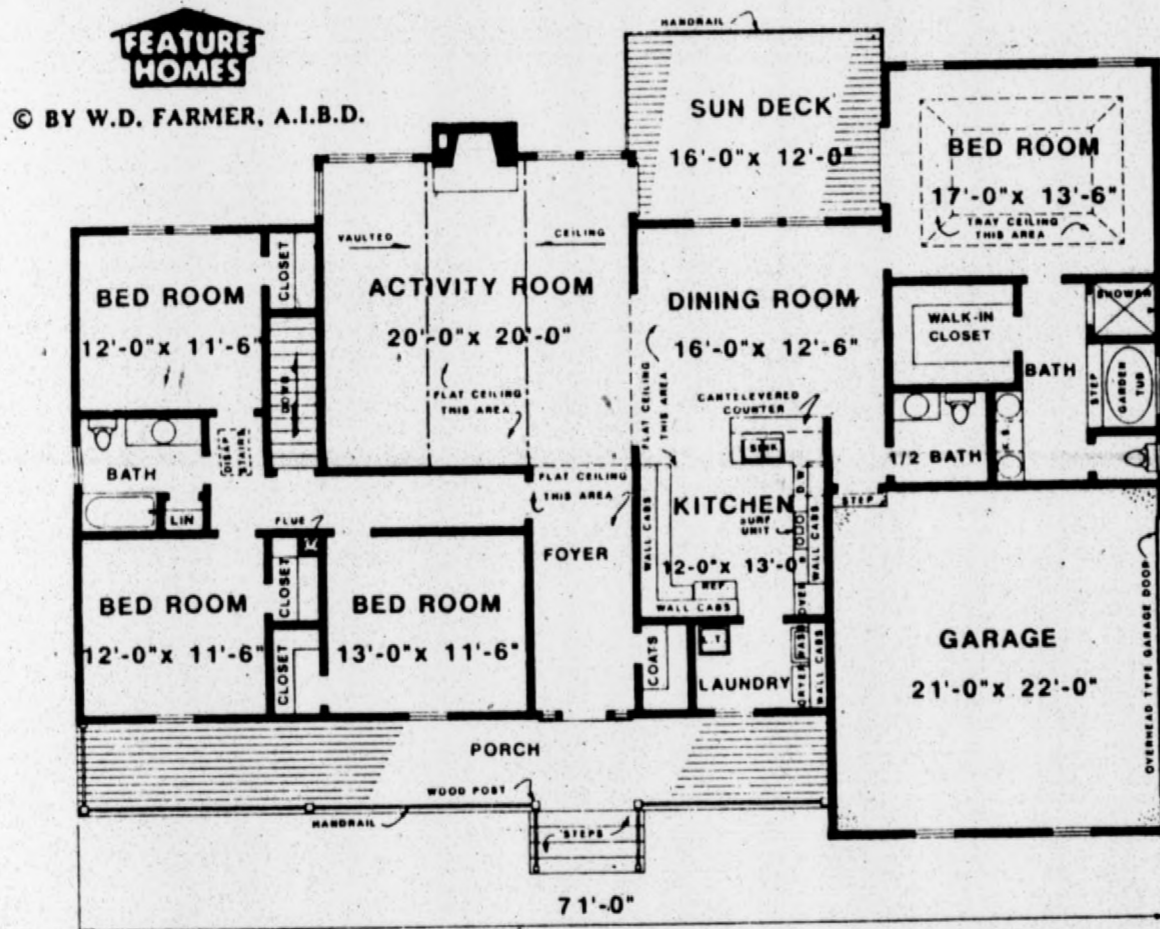

A separate foyer leads to the spacious activity room that includes a vaulted ceiling, deck access and convenience to the wide dining room.

The isolated master bedroom suite boasts a tray ceiling, deck access, private master bath and a large walk in closet. There are three additional bedrooms at the opposite end of the plan. These bedrooms share a central bath. The basement stair is at this end of the plan.

A full laundry room is provided near the large kitchen and a cantilevered breakfast counter is at the island sink area. A powder room is isolated near the kitchen area for convenient daytime use.

The country exterior is enhanced by horizontal wood siding, wood rail front porch and gable roof design.

The plan is Number 2266. It is a computer generated plan. The total square footage of heated area is 2,270. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Question-Answer

Q: I have a problem with my forced air furnace. The cold-air return chamber is right under the unit in the front. When the heater is on and the fan is running, there is a high fan noise. Is there any way that I can dampen this noise?

A: Fan noise is generally caused by vibrations in the fan-motor assembly or, if the return is inadequately sized, by air rushing through the grille. If there is no change in the noise level, you've eliminated inadequate return size as a problem. If the noise level decreases, you will need a larger return or a grille with less air resistance to reduce it.

Next, check the fan-motor assembly. Tighten all nuts and bolts and resecure any loose mountings or duct sections. You can decrease the noise level from the fan and motor by lining the blower compartment with a matted fiberglass acoustic liner. The liner comes in 1/2-inch and 1-inch thicknesses and can be glued to the sides of the compartment. Acoustic liner is manufactured by insulation companies and is available through heating-air conditioning contractors.

You can also further reduce the noise level, if space permits, by covering the return opening with a lined duct that has an open end several feet away from the fan compartment.

If removing the louvered grille indicated that the ducts were a little small, then insulating with sound deadening acoustic liner will only aggravate the problem by reducing their size still further. However, if you decide to install larger return ducts near the furnace, it is a good idea to make them big enough so there will be ample room to put in an acoustic liner while you are at it.

Questions - Answers

Q: I want to make the correct mix of concrete for replacing a sidewalk section, but am confused by instructions that say, "mix so many parts of cement with so many parts of sand," etc. Are the parts determined by weight or volume?

A: The correct ratio of sand, cement and aggregate differs according to the way the concrete is to be used. For a sidewalk slab, the classic 1:2:3 mix is best. Ingredients are measured by volume. One bag of cement equals 1 cubic foot. Add 2 cubic feet of sand and 3 cubic feet of coarse aggregate to one bag of cement to make 4 cubic feet of concrete. Use 5 to 6 gallons of water in the mixture. Add water slowly, however, since the sand may already be wet. The consistency is right when a handful can be compacted into a ball.

fasten the subfloor rather than ring-shank or spiral-shank nails, which are less likely to pull loose. It's also possible not enough nails were used to fasten the floor to the joists. In that case, the squeaking should be reduced by re-nailing the loose sections.

According to the American Plywood Association, you should use 6d ring-shank or spiral-thread nails. Also, the nails should be spaced 6 inches on center at the panels' edges (where panels butt each other), and 10 inches on center at intermediate joists.

The first practical, quick-firing machine gun was invented by Richard Gatling in 1862.

Q: I built a stilt house that is 15 feet off the ground. I put down 3/4-inch-thick tongue-and-groove plywood floor over 2-by-12 floor joists and covered it with carpeting. The floor now squeaks in several places. How can I fix it?

A: The type of floor you have is called a single-floor system. It was developed by the plywood industry and can be used in place of the standard floor, which consists of two panels (subfloor and underlayment).

The squeaking is caused by the floor panels rubbing against one another or against the framing. It's a fairly common condition and usually results from the loosening of some of the nails holding down the subfloor because of shrinkage or warpage of the framing. This generally occurs when smooth shank nails are used to

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Jed Wrote The Book

Jed wasn't his real name. A teacher called him Jed and the name stuck. Jed was only 30 when he took over as Chief Executive Officer. He soon proved to be a clever businessman. He possessed wisdom beyond his years and pioneered many business concepts still used today.

Jed built a financial empire. His personal wealth was known around the world and his fortune would rival Fortune magazine's entire top ten.

Jed was into mergers and joint venturing long before the Wall Street barons made it popular. He built and used the regional distribution center concept years before Sam Walton opened his first Wal-Mart. Jed was an expert negotiator and a sharp trader. Many companies still use his import/export concepts today.

Yes, Jed wrote the book, but it never made the "business best seller" list. Most folks who have read his book don't even realize its business implications. However, if you will find a copy today, reading it will help you and your business.

Jed was a planner

Jed believed in making careful plans. "Planning will put money in your pocket and quick decisions will speed you to the poorhouse," he wrote in one chapter.

There is no better way to prevent mistakes than through proper planning. Planning helps us determine where we are and guides us toward where we want to go. Planning allows us to map the steps to get from where we are to where we want to be. Like a good map, planning helps us establish direction, foresee obstacles and estimate resources needed to help us arrive at our destination.

We live in an instant society. Nowhere is that more evident than among those who wish to start a business. We have counseled hundreds of individuals who can't wait to get going. They don't take time to plan, and that often leads to failure.

No Repeats

Jed was successful because he didn't repeat his mistakes. "When you make a mistake twice you're as foolish as a mongrel pup that goes back and licks up his own vomit," he wrote.

I hope you are not eating as you read this column. However, the message is so important, I couldn't leave it out. Everyone who goes into business will make mistakes, but if you make the same mistakes twice, you probably won't survive.

Someone once wrote that success comes from experience and experience from making mistakes. Therefore, if you want to be successful you must make mistakes.

Sam Walton's success with the Wal-Mart stores has come from learning from previous mistakes - not only his - but also other's. Walton's company loves to innovate. If it works, they continue doing it. If it doesn't, they note the mistake and move on to other ideas.

Personal Worth

Jed said, "You can value a man by what others say about him." This principle is absolutely true for every business. The philosophy that you're only as good as your last is correct. It is also true that your business is valued by what your customers have to say about it.

What do your customers say about your business? Do they talk about your excellent quality, outstanding service, convenient hours and great delivery? Or, do they discuss the lack of these elements.

Oh yes, I guess I should tell you a little more about Jed. Nathan the prophet - his teacher - christened him Jedidiah. He was more commonly known by his given name, Solomon. Jed is King Solomon, one of the world's wisest and richest men.

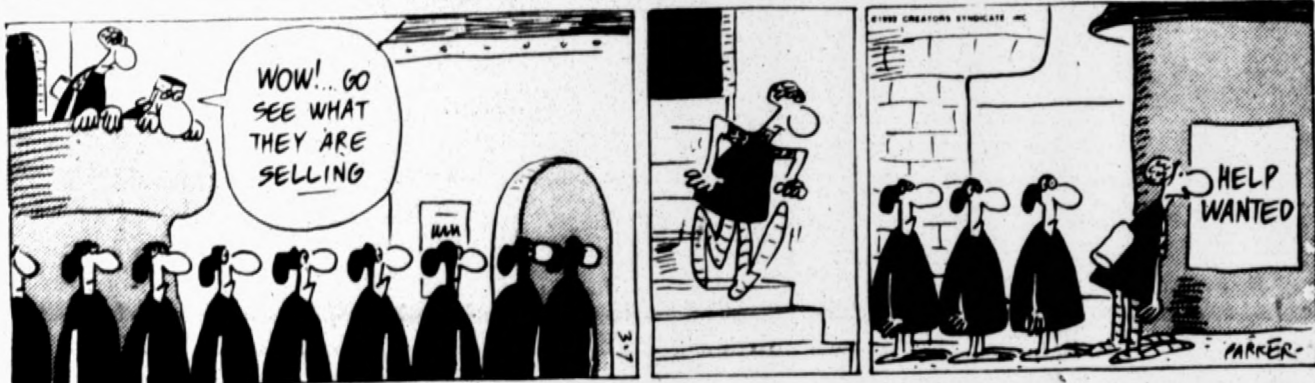

The book he wrote is Proverbs, the 20th book of the Old Testament. The quotes are from Chapters 21, 26 and 27. I paraphrased slightly from the New International Version Bible.

You may write to Don Taylor in c/o "Minding Your Own Business," P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Don Taylor is the director of West Texas University's Panhandle Small Business Development Center.

Children with diabetes can learn about controlling their disease while enjoying summer camp at no cost to their parents.

The Texas Lions Camp is looking for insulin dependent children ages 7 to 17. Priority is given to children who have never attended a camp for diabetics and who require guidance with their special health needs.

Two sessions will be held this summer. The two-week session is for children ages 7 to 12, and the one-week session is for children ages 13 to 17. In this way the concerns typical of different age groups can be addressed.

Recreational activities make camp life fun, while a medical team supervises the children's education about diabetes. Campers will be learning about their blood sugar and urine analysis, giving their own injections, controlling diet and monitoring their exercise. The individualized attention in health care encourages good control of diabetes.

An educational seminar is held for parents on the last afternoon before checkout morning of each session to update them on the information their children have learned about diabetes while at camp.

The camp and the parents' seminar are free of charge because the Lions believe in serving others. Insulin, syringes, and the testing kits are also provided free of charge.

If you would like more information or need a camp application, contact local Lions Club members, Gary Billingsley at 364-2751, or the Texas Lions Camp, P.O. Box 247, Kerrville, TX 78029-0247. Call (512) 896-8500, Fax # (512) 896-3666.

Ruth Knox gives book review to auxiliary

Ruth Knox presented a book review on The Navajo Code Talkers written by Doris Paul when members of the Unit 192 of the American Legion Auxiliary met March 3. The Legionaries joined the auxiliary for the program.

Knox explained the book is a history of the Navajo men who served as combat communications specialists in the Marines during World War II. They constructed a code using the Navajo language which was so successful the Japanese military was unable to break it, thus saving the lives of many U.S. soldiers. The code was used in the battle of Guadalcanal. In the first 48 hours of the battle for Iwo Jima, over 800 messages were sent and received. It took a phenomenal memory to make this a successful operation.

Twenty-five years later, the 22nd annual reunion of the fourth Marine Division was held in Chicago. The decision was made to include the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth Marine Divisions in the reunion to recognize these men. A transport plan was sent to Albuquerque to get the Navajo code talkers, and they were flown to Chicago. Full recognition was given to these special people. Each was presented a bronze medallion for meritorious service. One of the men said, "The American Indian always stands ready to defend America."

During the business meeting, President Clara Trowbridge reported 18 residents were at the February King's Manor bingo party. Assisting were Lester and Viola Wagner, Trowbridge and Artie Shaw.

Troyce Hanna reported Girls State will be in Seguin June 16-26. A film

Early French and English explorers wrote of the "sweet water" that the Indians drew from trees and heated to make maple products.

will be shown to prospective delegates at Hereford High School this month. The two delegates will be selected at the auxiliary's April meeting.

Betty Jo Carlson reported that the auxiliary has 69 members and two additional members are needed to reach this year's membership goal. It was also announced that Poppy Day has been scheduled May 20.

Argen Draper told the group that she is presently working on the auxiliary's scholarship guidelines. A graduating HHS senior who is a daughter or granddaughter of a veteran is eligible. The scholarship selection will be made at the May meeting. Last year's scholarship recipient was Holly Andrews.

The district convention delegates will be Trowbridge, Hanna, Mildred LaFever and Lou Ann LaFever. Alternates are Mary Williamson, Artie Frost, Irene Berger and Margie Daniels. Hanna will present the flag program at the Friona convention April 4.

Several announcements were made. Argen Draper was recognized as the 1991 Extension Homemakers Club Woman of the Year at the Annual Appreciation Luncheon sponsored by The Hereford Brand. Cynthia Shattles, daughter of Troyce and Grant Hanna and a member of the auxiliary, was recently recognized as Woman of the Year in Gilmer.

The Deaf Smith County Museum is celebrating its 25th anniversary today, Sunday, at a special open house from 1:30-4 p.m. with the public invited to attend.

Deaf Smith County Library will host an open house March 16.

Deaf Smith General Hospital will bring the Women's Issue Forum programs to the community. Everyone is encouraged to attend the four meetings.

March 15 marks the 73rd birthday of the American Legion organization.

Irene Berger, Mary Williamson and Lou Ann LaFever were hostesses to 13 members and one guest.

The next auxiliary meeting is planned at 7:30 p.m. April 7.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago my 23-month-old son, Brian, died suddenly. An infection had caused a brain hemorrhage and within two hours he was gone.

There are so many feelings a parent experiences that there is no way to sort them all out, but anger at God because he took something that was so precious to you, is definitely part of it.

A close friend from Florida sent me this poem and it really helped me cope with the anger. Will you please print it for all your readers who have ever lost a child? It may help them, too.--Still Hurting in Kentucky

DEAR KENTUCKY: I printed this poem several years ago and am pleased to share it with my readers once again. It was written by Edgar A. Guest and is truly one of the most comforting bits of philosophy that I've ever seen. Thank you for asking.

For All Parents
I'll lend you for a little time, a child of mine, He said.
For you to love while he lives, and mourn when he is dead.

It may be six or seven years, or twenty-two or three.
But will you, till I call him back, take care of him for me?

He'll bring his charms to gladden you, and shall his stay be brief,
You'll have his lovely memories as solace for your grief.

I cannot promise he will stay, since all from earth return,
But there are lessons taught down there I want this child to learn.

I've looked the wide world over in my search for teachers true
And from the throngs that crowd life's lanes, I have selected you.

Now will you give him all your love, nor think the labor vain,
Nor hate me when I come to call, to take him back again?

I fancied that I heard them say, Dear Lord, Thy will be done.
For all the joy Thy child shall bring, the risk of grief we'll run.

We'll shelter him with tenderness, we'll love him while we may:
And for the happiness we've known,

will ever grateful stay.
But shall the angels call for him much sooner than we planned,
We'll brave the bitter grief that comes, and try to understand.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The U.S. Postal Service doesn't agree with you, but that's OK, I'm on your side.

The public has been instructed to abbreviate the names of the states, but you tell your readers to write the states out, which makes a lot more sense, given the lousy penmanship and spelling that is loose in the land.

Incidentally, I work in a post office and have had more experience with the public than the goof who made the latest suggestion.

Please don't print my name or city. I need my job.--With You All The Way

DEAR SUPPORTER: Thanks for the cheerful earful. When suggestions don't make sense, even though they come from on high, my advice is to ignore 'em.

Rating prime-time cartoons: parental discretion advised

Cute drawings paired with racy dialogue

By Suzanne Gill

Cartoons are for kids, right? Colorful drawings, fantasy heroes, bad puns — these have been the stuff of children's entertainment ever since the Flintstones settled in Bedrock. Indeed, The Flintstones was the last animated series to air in prime time until the advent of The Simpsons in 1989.

The Simpsons, a creation of comic-strip artist Matt Groening, was brash, though it aired early in the evening during the traditional "family hour," and it drew huge audiences for ratings cellar-dweller Fox. Some parents disapproved of The Simpsons; others found it so real it was funny.

Bigger networks raced to the drawing board to dream up their own animated fare for prime time. Steven Bochco, Steven Spielberg and others expressed interest in developing animated series for television. Recent weeks have brought the debuts of two such series, ABC's Capitol Critters and CBS' Fish Police. Both shows are from Hanna-Barbera, birthplace of The Flintstones, and both air in the family hour.

Bochco, whose Saturday-night series Capitol Critters puts mice and other small creatures in the White House, is quick to give The Simpsons credit for opening the door for his show. But his producer-in-charge, Nat Mauldin, is equally anxious to distinguish Critters from Simpsons, saying his show is a true cartoon while The Simpsons is an animated comedy that might just as well have been produced as a live-action show. Yet neither Bochco nor Mauldin is a cartoonist. (Mauldin, the son of Pulitzer Prize-winning political cartoonist Bill Mauldin and a protege of Looney Tunes' Chuck Jones, insists he is unable to draw.)

Critters' central character is Max, a squeaky-clean teenage country mouse (voiced by Neil Patrick Harris) who moves in with his cousin Berkeley, a hippie holdover living in the basement of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. Other regular characters include Muggle (Bobcat Goldthwait), a former lab rat; and Moze (Dorian Harewood), the series' only minority character. That Moze should be a jive-talking, pump-sneaker-wearing roach is an appalling stereotype. Equally shocking is the guest appearance in an early episode of a pair of blatantly effeminate pigeons. Muggle, meanwhile, is portrayed as a comic character who is funny because he has blown his mind on drugs. Of the many substances tested on him, Muggle says, the iced-tea mix was worse than the LSD. In a time when LSD is making a comeback in high schools, the message this line sends is unconscionable.

Inappropriate dialogue is a problem, too, in Fish Police, colorful Friday-night fare featuring the voices of John Ritter, Buddy Hackett, JoBeth Williams and Edward Asner. It's packed with underwater puns, some of them pretty good. There's Fort Lox and Sand Quentin, the magazine Buoy's Life, Sharkster the lawyer, and voluptuous Angel, torch singer and "fin fatale."

But what's a child to make of interchanges like "Somebody's trying to stick it to Angel." "So what's new?" or a dozen other slang references to sexual activity that wouldn't be acceptable in a live-action family comedy? Why not just admit that this isn't children's fare and put it on at a later hour?

Perhaps we'd be better off asking when adults will grow up enough to quit entertaining themselves and start thinking about the kids. © TV Listing Inc.

CBS packs bright colors, famous voices and racy dialogue into Fish Police, an animated series airing on Fridays. Fish City denizens include Inspector Gil (top center, voiced by John Ritter) and, from left, Mussie Marina, Pearl (Gil's girl), taxi driver Crab, femme fatale Angel and the villainous Calamari. VH-1 rocks in Austin, Texas

Nelson, Henley muse on Texas roots

By Steven Alan McGaw

Rock 'n' roll is hard to define. Writers, educators, fans and even some performers continually wrestle with the question (Is it rebellion? Anger? Over-active hormones?), satisfied that breaking the music down to strictly musical elements (chord progression, rhythm) is not only impossibly narrow but misses the point as well. So which is the answer?

The truth is, all of them. Rock 'n' roll is as complex and varied as the people who make it and those who listen. Its diversity also comes from a sense of place, the indelible stamp of where the music or its maker comes from. The New York sounds of Dion or Lou Reed, for instance, cannot be confused with the sun-soaked California tunes of the Beach Boys.

Now, cable's VH-1 examines the importance of place in popular music-making in Rock 'n' Roll Cities, a new series premiering Sunday, March 8. The debut episode focuses on Austin, Texas, a boisterous college town that has long been the seat of music-making in the Lone Star State. As host Tim Sommer observes, "the music scene in Austin is diverse, cheap and plentiful."

Lone Star celebrities crowd the program, from country outlaw Willie Nelson, who recalls the rise of "progressive country" in the '70s, to singer/activist Don Henley. The former Eagle mused, "I've lived in Los Angeles for 21 years and I still feel like a Texan."

The show also features tunes and talk from Michelle Shocked, the Texas Tornados and ZZ Top. Waylon Jennings remembers Buddy Holly and several artists speak softly and warmly of the late Stevie Ray Vaughan.

Borlenghi fills shoes nicely on 'AMC'

By Candace Havens
 Sexy, brooding, serious and quiet is how you might describe Matt Borlenghi, who portrays Brian Bodine on the popular daytime series All My Children. In many ways Borlenghi is much like the character he plays. He admits he doesn't have an easy time conversing with people. "I just can't walk up to someone and say, 'Hi, I'm Matt, blah, blah, blah,'" says Borlenghi. But when it comes to acting, he has no problem talking about his craft and the recognition that goes along with it. From the early age of 7, Borlenghi knew he wanted to be an actor, but he also didn't want to make an idiot of himself. So he took acting classes until he felt he was ready. "I was apprehensive about taking the role of Brian, because I knew I was replacing somebody who just didn't work out for the role," says Borlenghi. "I understand that the guy was real nice and sweet, but he didn't cut the role. I figured a lot of people probably liked him and wouldn't appreciate me coming in to take his place. I never expected the kind of response I've been getting. "The No. 1 question fans ask besides 'Do you have a girlfriend?' and 'How old are you?' is what is it that I wear around my neck," says Borlenghi. "I guess it looks like it could be a lot of things, but it is actually a Chapstick. I am addicted to the stuff." While he appreciates all the attention he gets from fans, he wants people to know that to him it is all just a job. "It has always been my dream to act, but in order to keep my head straight I have to stay aware of the fact that I'm just an actor and nobody special. All of this could be gone tomorrow." The person in his life who helps Borlenghi keep his feet on the ground is his girlfriend, Shelle, whom he met while living in Beverly Hills. Although he has trouble trusting people, he knows Shelle is the real thing, because she knew him before he hit the big time. In fact, right before he joined AMC, she asked him to move in with her. So when he moved to the East Coast she asked her to come with him. They have been together ever since.

Haley reflects on 'Roots,' leaves 'Queen' unfinished

Less than a month before his untimely death due to a heart attack, 70-year-old author Alex Haley recalled the beginnings of his novel Roots. "I was 6 years old and my grandfather had just died, and my grandmother — my mother's mother — was ridden with grief. And she had invited her sisters to come and spend the next summer with her. "And the sisters came. Each evening after supper, they would go out on the front porch and rock. "And they would talk. They talked about their family history. They were just full of love, night after night after night. They couldn't get enough of recalling their father, Tom Murray, their mother, Arina, their grandfather, Chicken George, and so on. And his mother, Miss Kizzy, and her father, the African, in Spotsylvania County, Va. "I heard these stories so much they just simply became a part of my memory bank. I grew on up with that in my head. And I don't think I thought (again) about the stories told on the front porch for nearly 40 years. "Then in the '60s, there was so much talk about Africa and black people and such as that, somehow my mind went back to the first time I'd ever heard about Africa. It was that African, who was in the family. That was what started me going."

At the time of his death on Feb. 10 of this year, Haley had just concluded an agreement with CBS to write another miniseries, Queen, which was to have been based on the life of his father's mother, who was the fair-skinned daughter of a slave and her master. Haley was philosophical about his acclaim. "There's a saying that people who make culture generally don't realize they are doing it. They're just doing what they do. If I could plead anything, that would pretty much be it. I was doing what I do, and what I love to try and do." Save a fistfull of dollars when you use Brand Classified Ads, Call 364-2030.

'Calliope' gives kids' minifilms rightful due

By Chris Carpenter Having set up shop in the emerging marketplace of children's television back in 1978, Calliope has provided an outlet for intrepid animators and short-film creators to showcase their wares ever since. Every Sunday morning on the USA Network, children can spend an hour with these intriguing, often award-winning short films hand-picked for freshness by the show's producers. Eugene Francis, a Calliope writer and co-creator, stitches the clips together with pleasantly thin threads of commentary from his animated character, Gene, with help from Liza, the Movie Hound. A grade-schooler's Siskel & Ebert, Gene and Liza are far less abrasive than their live-action counterparts and let the films do their own talking. When the films do speak, it is often in foreign tongues; many of the pieces come from artists around the world. Often the clips pose ethical dilemmas, which not only help teach young viewers a life lesson, but also widen their attention spans as they wait for the moral to surface. Calliope also holds weekly letter-writing contests and airs photos of the show's faithful as a bonus, but equally fortunate are the craftsmen who've gained this venue for their children's films, works often long on vision and short on recognition. © TV Listing Inc.

AN INTERESTING VIDEO WEEK

Oscar Nominees on Cassette

Of fourteen movies named in six major Oscar categories (picture, director, actor, actress, supporting actor and actress), only three are on tape:

THELMA AND LOUISE: is currently Number One on most best-renter lists. Two more of the fourteen, THE SILENCE OF THE LAMBS and CITY SLICKERS, have also been best-renters for months. (All previously previewed and recommended by this column.)
On March 4, four more of the fourteen film will be available for video rentals, BARTON FINCH, BOYZ N THE HOOD, THE FISHER KING, and RAMBLING ROSE.

The release dates for the films that opened during the holidays and later will be spaced through the summer and fall. Actual dates for the most part are unannounced and are as carefully plotted with an eye to the competition as are theater release dates.

First out, on May 28, FOR THE BOYS. In June, CAPE FEAR, and FRIED GREEN TOMATOES. This summer, PRINCE OF TIDES and BUGSY (this release could be delayed by an extended run in theaters). In November, BEAUTY AND THE BEAST. Inquiries about the video release for J.F.K. received a "no comment" reply from a Warner spokesman.

NEW VIDEO RELEASE

FREDDY'S DEAD: THE FINAL NIGHTMARE: (1991) Starring Robert Englund. The sixth, and supposedly final chapter of the Nightmare on Elm Street series, finds the talon-fingered Freddy Krueger (Robert Englund) with such a depleted pool of teenagers to victimize in Springwood, U.S.A., that he has to zero in on a home for wayward children. There he encounters his own long-lost offspring, who proves his father's undoing. Until then though, all join Freddy in fantasyland sooner or later, with results that can be ghoulishly ingenious. Rated R for extreme violence. This is the sort of video that is a hoot to watch at home (but, not for the little ones.)

Two and A Half Boxes

Mickey and Michael on reader's mind

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I was wondering if you could give me some information about Mickey Rooney and Michael Keaton. —Jamie Wolf, Detroit Lakes, Minn.

A: Rooney was born Joe Yule Jr. on Sept. 23, 1920, in Brooklyn, N.Y. In 1921, he appeared as Baby New Year on the stage where his parents were appearing. At 6, he was already a veteran, having appeared as Mickey McGuire in several short comic films. He then went on to star in Boys Town, Babes in Arms, Captains Courageous and appeared in his first Andy Hardy film in 1937. He received special Oscars in both 1938 and 1983. Rooney has had eight wives, beginning with Ava Gardner in 1942. In the late '60s, Rooney joined the Church of Religious Science, which he claimed changed his life. The actor's biography, The Beginning and the Middle, was published in 1985. He currently appears in The Adventures of the Black Stallion on The Family Channel.

Michael Keaton was born Michael Douglas on Sept. 9, 1951, in Pittsburgh. He is the youngest of seven children. After attending a couple years of college, he got a job at a Pittsburgh PBS affiliate as part of the technical crew. Three years later, he moved to Los Angeles and landed a small part on the series Maude. Norman Lear was impressed by the actor and gave him a recurring role on the show. It was his film debut in Night Shift that started his climb to stardom. Keaton's upcoming movie, the sequel to Batman, will be released June 19.

Q: I am writing to find out if you have any information you could give me on Keann Reeves. I recently saw his movie Point Break and I have come to be a big admirer of his. I thought he looked really cute in Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure. I want to find out as much as I can about this handsome "dude." —Stacey George, Benton, Ark.

A: Reeves is a very private person. All I have for you is an address. Write him c/o of PMK, 955 South Carrillo Drive, Suite 200, Los Angeles, Calif., 90048.

Mickey Rooney

Q: I would like to know if Melanie Griffith is Andy Griffith's daughter. —Irene Winn, Manteca, Calif.

A: They are not related. Melanie is the daughter of Tippi Hedren, an actress famous for her performance in Hitchcock's The Birds and Marnie.

Q: I would like an address for Johnny Depp so I can write him and tell him I loved Edward Scissorhands. I would also like information on Arnold Schwarzenegger. —Becky Mooneyham, McMinnville, Tenn.

A: Write Depp care of ICM, 8899 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90048. Schwarzenegger was born in Austria on July 30, 1947. He began bodybuilding at 15 and went on to win the Mr. Universe competition in 1969. In 1976, he appeared in Stay Hungry and then Pumping Iron in 1977. Action films like Predator made him a superstar. Schwarzenegger is married to Maria Shriver, and they have two daughters.

A great team: you and your chamber working together

Our Chamber of Commerce functions through working committees which are the backbone of the organization. Money, planning, inspiration and guidance are useless unless the members work vigorously on the committee of their choice.

Careful study is made of the community needs and an action blueprint, the program of work, is designed. The goal of the program is always to create more dollars for more people and to improve the economic welfare of all.

Every member has a voice in determining the policies and projects and every member is needed to work on an active committee to get the job done.

Our Chamber of Commerce is a service institution and an action organization. It provides a medium through which people can take effective action for the progress of the community.

It helps to create job opportunities through stimulation of industrial and commercial growth, for established and new firms.

It seeks the improvement of community facilities...streets, highways, parks, schools, and marketing facilities.

It brings conventions, sales meetings, and other gatherings to our cities, thus bringing more money into the area.

It works toward developing the agriculture and agricultural industry of the area.

WHAT IT DOES...

FOR THE RETAILER ...

-Works for industrial and business development which brings with it new residents with new money to spend in the stores.

-Maintains a continuous program for inviting conventions and meetings. National surveys reveal that 20 percent of the convention dollar is spent in retail stores.

-Cooperates with retail organizations and associations on retail promotions.

FOR THE MANUFACTURER AND WHOLESALER...

-Works for the best shipping services at the lowest possible cost.

-Compiles various statistical information on trade territory population, purchasing power and market strength.

FOR THE SERVICE ESTABLISHMENT...

-Works for an ever increasing population, assuring additional customers and income.

-Works toward the increasing development of highways, recreational areas, new industries and the expansion of existing industries, all of which increases demand for the service organization.

FOR THE FARMER, RANCHER..

-Encourages and promotes sound agricultural programs and practices with major attention to soil conservation and livestock programs.

-Frequently coordinates planning of agricultural agencies and sponsors joint efforts in the improvement of techniques for more income from farm and ranch.

FOR THE HOME AND PROPERTY OWNER...

-Conducts an intensive beautification program with cleanliness, street lighting and other projects aimed at making this a better place in which to live.

-Cooperates with church, cultural and entertainment groups to provide a more interesting and meaningful life for residents and visitors.

FOR THE CONSTRUCTION, REAL ESTATE, INSURANCE, AND INVESTMENT FIRM...

-Provides an ever expanding market for construction, real estate and insurance dealers through its program of attracting new industry, new residents, promoting business and working for new highways and streets.

-Encourages expansion programs and modernization for established firms.

ONE LAST REASON YOU SHOULD JOIN..

-The goal of our Chamber of Commerce is to promote the commercial, industrial, civic, cultural and general interest of our cities and region. To accomplish this, action committees explore every avenue and possibility. These committees usually include those working in the areas of industrial development, agriculture, aviation, athletics, conventions, memberships, citizenship, traffic and transportation, area development publicity, highways, urban development, civic affairs, retail promotion, and water resources.

-Every individual, firm and profession derives direct benefits in a growing, stable economy. Such an economy is the result of our Chamber's efforts.
