U.S. planes strike Libyan targets

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today declared the U.S. military strike against Libyan terrorist targets a success that "struck a blow against terrorism and sent a message" to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

F-111, and its crew of two, remained unaccounted-for and is the subject of a naval and air search.

White House gave the president "an 80 percent approval rating."

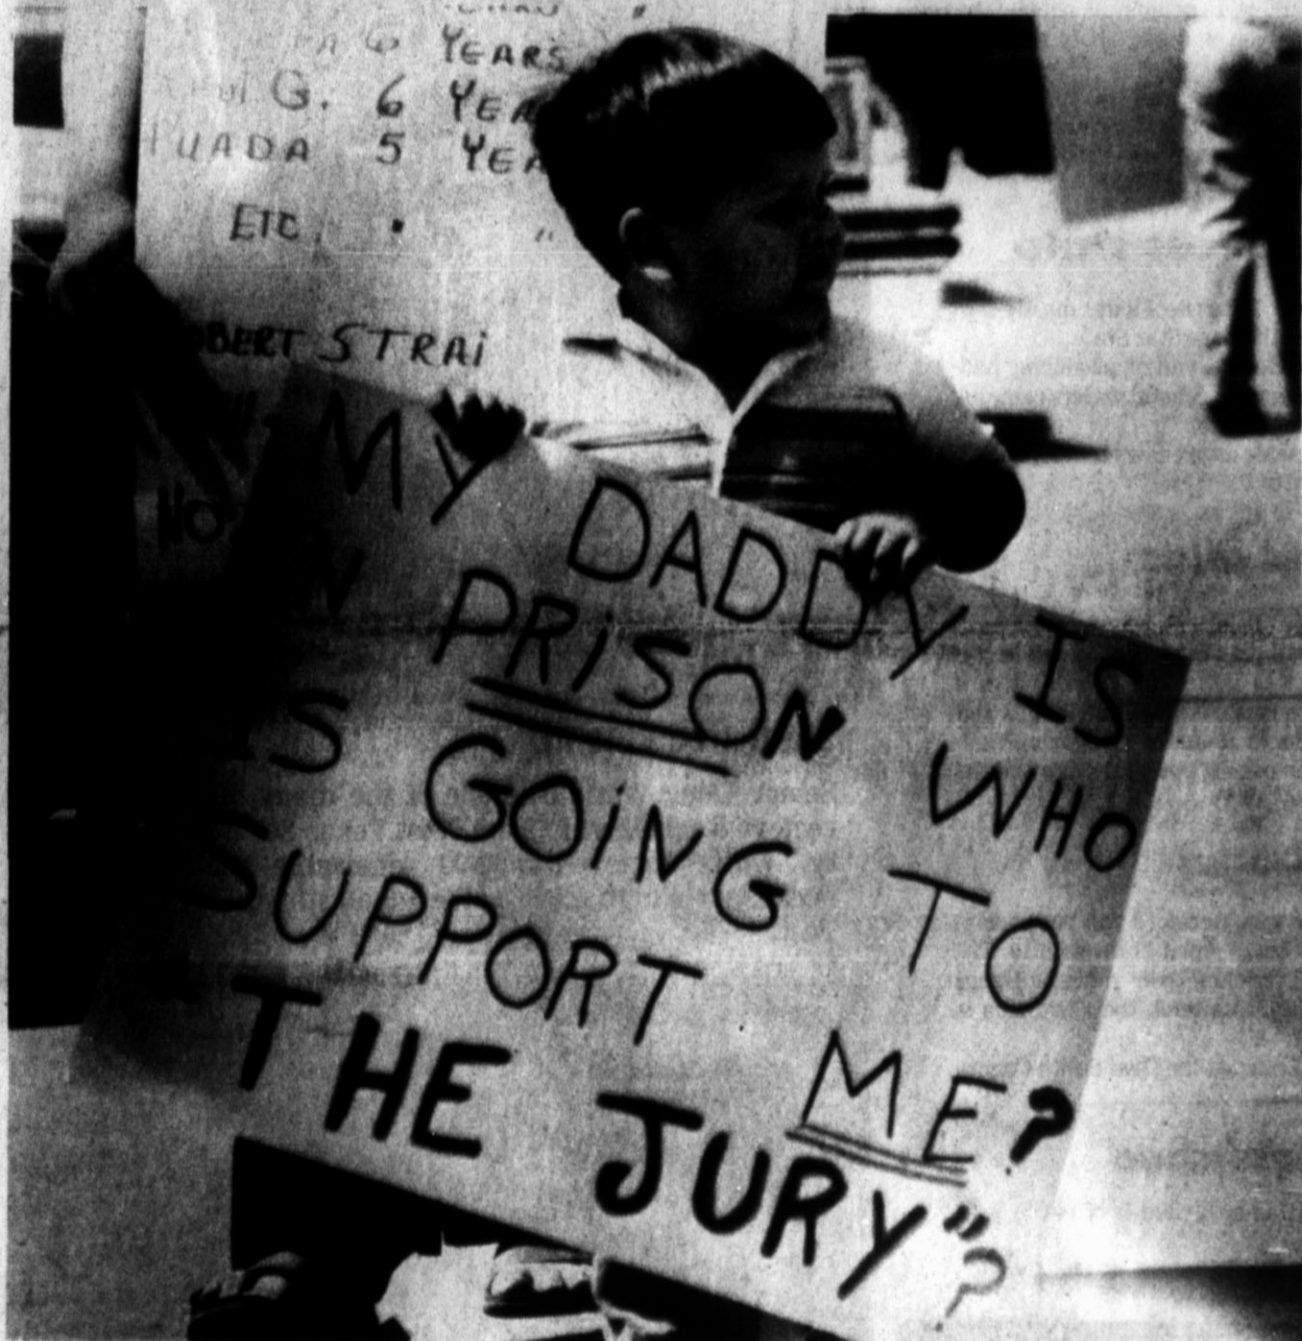

for me to discuss the tactical operations of the United States government in this mission...we have done that (sent a message), now we will wait and see (what Khadafy's reaction is)," he said.

"when they (military advisers) came forward and said, 'Is Monday night all right?' The president said, 'Fine.'" fighter planes joined 15 A-6 and A-7 U.S. Navy attack jets based on carriers in the Mediterranean and thundered over Libya at 2 a.m. (7 p.m. EST Monday), the Reagan administration said.

Mrs. Mendoza said that Sanchez used the people of this community by spending the money supplied to him by the county for personal use. "I feel the taxpayers should know what this man did with their money. He spent $17,000 on beer and dances. ## Gililand makes debut

Amy Gililand will be making her debut on stage tonight performing in the comedy play "Harvey" at Country Squire Dinner Theater in Amarillo.

She will be playing Mrs. Chumley, Dr. Chumley's wife. She noted that the first performance of this play was given on Nov. 1, 1944 on Broadway in New York City, N.Y.

The play was made into the 1950 film classic starring Jimmy Stewart. Gililand said they have updated the costumes to the early 1950's and said the cast is really going to be good.

"I'm very excited and scared to death," laughed Gililand. "I've wanted to do this for the past 25 years and it's great to be working with professionals."

Gililand said it was somewhat different acting for her. She said the other actors work 10-12 hours a day just rehearsing. "Most of them have been on tour, but they're really helpful with me," she added.

Soviets critical of U.S. attacks

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet commentator today termed the U.S. air strikes on Libya "naked aggression" intended to intimidate the North African country.

Vladimir Goncharov, a political analyst for the official news agency Tass, said "neoliberalism, the American administration's officially professed doctrine, has started speaking in its true tongue — the tongue of bombs, flames and death."

He characterized the attack as "the very same tongue that Washington used when dealing with Vietnam as it scorched its people and land with napalm, the very same tongue that it is using with free Nicaragua while sending hired killers ... against its people, the tongue of aggression by means of which it made short shrift of Grenada."

Goncharov said the aim of the "naked aggression ... is to try to intimidate the Libyan people and also to show the other nations that the present American administration will not stop short of using military force to fulfill its hegemonic political plans."

Cool, dry air settles across state

A high-pressure system building over Texas kept skies mostly fair today while cool, dry air settled across the Lone Star State.

A cold front stalled in the lower Rio Grande valley, producing patchy light rain. Much of deep South Texas and coastal waters remained under a blanket of low clouds before sunrise.

Winds were light and variable statewide as predawn temperatures fell into the 40s over the northern third of the state.

Pauda name used as alias

In last Thursday's edition of The Brand, it was inadvertently reported that Gregario Pauda Jr. had pleaded guilty to delivery of marijuana under four ounces, and was sentenced to five years in prison. The district attorney's office reported the individual's real name is suspected to be Alberto Flores Roquillo. Gregario Pauda said that he had lost his identification almost two years ago and had no idea Roquillo was using his name.

PROTEST

and had received a large settlement.

Mr. and Mrs. Juajuine Castillo, who also participated in Monday's protest, said that their son was arrested, and they have no idea why. The Castillos said that law enforcement officials came into their house while they were asleep and took their son away. The Castillos said the officers held a shotgun on them while they took their son. "They were talking in English, and since we only speak Spanish, we have no idea why he was arrested," Mr. Castillo said.

Saul later said that each of the arrested were arraigned by a bi-lingual judge, and all family members had a chance to have everything explained to them.

"I think the whole thing is nonsense. They are picking out a few cases and trying to use them to their advantage," Saul said. "They are not telling you about the Anglo insurance salesman who was recently sentenced to 18 years for theft."

"My philosophy is if you can't do the time, don't do the crime," Saul added. "I wish they would channel their energy into something constructive. Instead of blaming the judicial system, they should use their energy to try to stop the drug problems."

Hispanic labor organizer Jesus Moya said the protest is an effort to get equal application from the judicial system. "I think there is a conspiracy in this town to deprive the Mexican-Americans of their rights," said Moya. "We will be demanding a federal investigation of this judicial system."

"Why don't they try to provide a healthy environment and give these people jobs," Moya said.

County accepts roof bid

The Deaf Smith County Commission accepted a bid of $18,200 from Lydick Roofing of Amarillo to re-roof the county courthouse. The Lydick bid was the lowest of the three bids presented to the commissioners Monday morning during their regular meeting.

The commissioners also elected to advertise for bids again on the renovation of the fourth floor of the courthouse. Bids were opened in March for the renovation, but the commissioners felt the bids were too high. The commissioners asked for the specifications be scaled down some to lower the cost of the project.

Commissioners also granted permission to David Castillo, jail administrator, to use $6,500 out of his budget to buy new equipment for the jail's kitchen.

In other business the commission: -Appointed Billy Hodges to serve a two-year term on the Llano Estacado Water Board.

-Elected to advertise for bids for public officials and county employee liability insurance.

-Voted to pay extra Extension service help on a contract basis.

-Granted permission to Gilbert Yosten to cross a county road with a waterline.

-Appointed Katherine Hammock as an alternate election judge in Voting Precinct 8.

-The commission also accepted a recommendation from Sue Farris of the State Extension Service to hire Beverly Harter as the county Extension home economics agent.

Pieces found

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A huge piece of Challenger wreckage with a 2-foot-square hole burned through its steel casing is the most important piece of debris recovered because it may show why a joint failed and caused the shuttle explosion.

The two-ton section contains the portion of the joint that ruptured and spewed flame 15 seconds before the Jan. 28 tragedy that killed seven astronauts.

Sodium more than salt

Although sodium is vital to good health and nutrition, most people consume more of it than they need. And the Texas Medical Association says restricting your intake of this mineral element often requires more than just cutting back on table salt.

Salt, the common name for sodium chloride, is the largest single contributor of sodium to the human diet but only one of many sources of sodium in food. The list also includes baking soda (sodium bicarbonate), baking powder (sodium pyrophosphate), monosodium glutamate, and sodium saccharin.

Sodium is so prevalent that most people get more than enough from the food and water they consume—without adding salt. Sodium is in most processed foods and is present in water, either because it occurs naturally or is added by the use of softeners in some community water systems.

The people most concerned are those on sodium-restricted diets for treatment of various heart, liver, and kidney ailments, or for hypertension (high blood pressure). More than 19 million adults in the United States have hypertension and over 18 million are borderline hypertensive.

Physicians often recommend that their patients with hypertension and those with a family history of the disorder restrict their sodium intake. Healthy people who are not thought to be at particular risk of developing hypertension can undoubtedly handle moderate amounts of dietary sodium without harm.

Amounts up to about 4,800 milligrams of sodium a day may be considered moderate, although the body's actual need for sodium is usually much less. The Food Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences has established 1,100 to 3,300 milligrams of sodium a day as a "safe and adequate" range of intake.

Learning about the sodium content of foods is much easier now than in years past. Many packaged foods now have the amount of sodium in milligrams per serving, printed on the label.

Many people have found that it is surprisingly easy to reduce the amount of sodium in their diets, simply by always tasting their food before adding salt and remembering that one teaspoon of salt contains 2,324 milligrams of sodium.

DR. GOTT High-tech tests aid diagnoses

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is the difference in the type and quality of information that a doctor can get from a CT scan, a myelogram and magnetic resonance imaging? Are these any difference in safety or possible side effects? My mother is facing a spinal operation and we are wondering which is the most appropriate diagnostic tool.

DEAR READER — Your question is complicated; I will attempt to answer it simply, at the risk of being less technical than the response deserves.

Computed tomography (CT or CAT scan) is a technique by which radiologists coordinate a series of X-ray images into a single picture or group of pictures. An X-ray beam is aimed at a portion of the body and the images are fed into a computer. The machine arranges the images into identifiable patterns of lightness and darkness. The CT scan is wonderful addition to an expanding array of diagnostic tests. It is quite safe, but does require a hefty amount of radiation exposure. Using CT scanners, doctors can see remarkable details inside the most inaccessible parts of the body.

On the other hand, a myelogram is a test by which specialists examine the spinal cord and surrounding structures. In much the same way that a spinal tap is performed to remove fluid for analysis, the doctor introduces a hollow needle into the fluid-containing space that surrounds the spinal cord. An oily liquid, called dye or contrast medium, is injected into the space, then conventional X-ray pictures are obtained. The dye outlines non-bony tissues, such as discs, and the doctor can determine whether these structures may be pressing on nerves. The myelogram enables the neurosurgeon to pinpoint the source of a back problem before an operation. After the X-rays are taken, the dye is removed. Some people experience headaches after the procedure, and a few patients may have leg pain and weakness if the dye irritates the lower spinal nerves.

Magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) is the newest means of examining the body's interior. When placed in a strong magnetic field and bombarded with high-frequency radio waves, the hydrogen atoms in the body resonate (vibrate up) in ordered sequences. When the external forces are stopped, the hydrogen atoms resume their random patterns; but, in the process, they give off energy. This energy can be measured and (in the same way CT X-rays are computed) fed into a computer, which then spits out pictures. Tissues that are dense and contain more hydrogen appear darker than less-dense, hydrogen-poor structures. Hence, an X-ray-like picture can be obtained without the hazards and risks of radiation. MRI gives astounding resolution of detail, and it will certainly become one of medicine's most valuable future tools. At present, the machines are extremely expensive and are not generally available. However, the method appears to be safe and may someday virtually supplant X-ray examinations.

Today, the skillful diagnostician must pick and choose his or her methods carefully. CT scans, myelography and MRI are all useful in specific ways, for specific problems.

If your mother needs back surgery, the neurosurgeon may well choose a more traditional test, the myelogram, rather than fancier forms of analysis, because the doctor may be looking for a particular bit of information that is not available from CTs or MRIs. Ask him or her which test would be appropriate in your mother's case.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Does high blood pressure or a blood clot cause a stroke? What is arterial plaque?

DEAR READER — "Stroke" is an all-inclusive term that means loss of certain brain functions. It can result from bleeding into the brain (an arterial blowout in hypertensive patients) or from a blood clot that becomes wedged in a brain artery. I have found the blood-clot type to be more common. These clots tend to form on the insides of arteries that have rough, fatty, plaque-hardened deposits. Often, pieces of clot break off and are carried in the bloodstream until they find their way into a smaller artery, where they become stuck, causing occlusion and loss of circulation. Any artery can be affected. When the event occurs in the brain, it is called a stroke.

Arterial plaque is part of the aging process that we recognize as hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis). It is accentuated and accelerated by high blood cholesterol.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, UNDERSTANDING CHOLESTEROL. Other readers interested in receiving a copy should send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I was recently diagnosed (without tests) as having esophagitis. I am taking Zantac and Carafate, and Halcion at night. I'm also on a bland diet and eat little meals more often. What else can I do?

DEAR READER — Find out the cause. The discomfort of esophagitis (inflammation of the swallowing tube) can mimic a variety of conditions, including ulcer, heart disease, tumors and hiatal hernia. In my opinion, you need (at least) an upper-gastrointestinal series — a set of X-rays of the upper tract — and (possibly) endoscopy, a procedure during which a specialist examines your esophagus and stomach with a fiberoptic tube.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I often suck ice cubes when I am hungry between meals and find it relieves my hunger. Is there any harm in this practice?

DEAR READER — As far as I know, sucking ice cubes is not a dangerous habit. However, vigorous ice chewing can crack the enamel on teeth and produce dental problems.

Draper gives program on sesquicentennial

Argen Draper presented a program entitled "Celebrate Texas Sesquicentennial" when members of Wyche Extension Homemakers Club met recently in her home. Carol Odom served as co-hostess.

Draper began by quoting William B. Travis. She also said, "Texas is the only state that can be divided into not more than four states." A test was given to members about "Our Texas Heritage" and a list of the books that pertain to the state was read.

The business meeting was conducted by President Audrey Rusher. Draper gave the opening exercise "Cop nabs four-year-old."

Hazel Brooks was recognized as a visitor and roll call was answered by the 13 members present with "never again will I..."

Esther Thuet gave the council report of the last meeting. Members of the club who attended the recent Area I T.E.H.A. district meeting in Amarillo were Odom as a delegate, and Virgie Duncan, Louise Packard, Audrey Rusher and Clara Trowbridge.

A birthday cake honoring Mrs. Duncan was made by Odom as part of the refreshments served to those present. They included Louise Axe, Novella Hewitt, Ethel Logan, Pet

Ott, Lorena Ward and Wyneman Wheeler.

The next meeting was planned April 17 in the home of Pet Ott with Esther Thuet as hostess.

Haney inducted recently

Kathleen Haney (Mrs. Danny Haney) of Hereford, was inducted into the Texas Zeta Chapter of Alpha Chi national honor society at West Texas State University in special ceremonies April 6. Membership is one of the highest academic honors a WTSU student can achieve.

Accent on Health

If you think that immunizations against "childhood" diseases and other illnesses are strictly for kids, you are dangerously wrong, and may be risking serious illness, even death.

Immunizations and periodic "booster shots" are for everyone. They protect not only against common childhood illnesses, but also for some potentially deadly diseases and infections which often strike adults more severely than they do kids.

The Texas Department of Health has warned that adults should be as careful in keeping their own immunizations current as they are with their children's.

Thomas Betz, M.D., Chief, Bureau of Communicable Diseases, said, "Today's vaccines are responsible for tremendous success in controlling diseases which, only a few decades ago, took thousands of lives yearly in the United States. Diphtheria, for example, as recently as 40 years ago, infected more than 1,500 Texans in 1946 killing 104 victims. Now, through tetanus-diphtheria inoculations started in childhood and boosters administered every 10 years, both tetanus and diphtheria can be avoided. Only unvaccinated persons are likely to suffer either of these potentially fatal diseases."

Diphtheria usually spreads when unimmunized persons breathe droplets exhaled by an infected person who coughs, sneezes, or even laughs. The illness causes inflammation of the nose, throat, and windpipe, and one in 10 victims dies as a gray coating in the throat covers the windpipe or toxins produced by the infecting agents damage the heart muscle.

Tetanus (lockjaw) occurs when tetanus bacteria from the soil or other source enter a break in the skin. Cuts, burns, punctures, even tiny scratches can become infected with tetanus. The infection leads to progressively severe muscle spasms and in 50 percent of the cases, death.

"Because influenza (flu) is almost a yearly occurrence in any office or family, its seriousness is sometimes overlooked," Bob Crider, director of TDH's Immunization Division said. Airborne strains of the flu virus change frequently, sometimes causing only mild symptoms, but complications may incapacitate or kill the victims. Each major change in the virus calls for re-immunization of the persons most at risk of severe illness. Persons 65 and older, and persons with chronic respiratory, heart, or immune system illnesses are urged to renew their flu vaccinations annually.

"Some persons fail to get their flu shots for fear of side effects," Dr. Betz said, "and some have heard untrue stories of persons contracting the flu from the vaccine. Certainly there are a small number of people who should avoid or delay flu shots—those with severe allergic reactions to eggs, those with certain paralytic disorders, and persons ill with fever at the time of their appointments," he said.

Dr. Betz added that these few people should seek their doctors' advice, but that most people should have no fear of illness from the vaccination. "They should feel relieved of a potentially serious danger. They should bear in mind that global influenza epidemics before we had vaccines were catastrophic. In the 1918 outbreak, more than 21 million people died," he said.

Rubella (German measles) is usually mild in adults, but can be particularly harmful to unborn children. The child of a woman who contracts rubella in the first three months of pregnancy can have serious birth defects. Women of childbearing age who are vaccinated against rubella should not become pregnant until three months after receiving the vaccine.

Dr. Betz advised anyone who has not been vaccinated with measles and mumps live virus vaccine, or who has not been diagnosed by a physician as having had the diseases, to be immunized against these dangerous diseases.

"Cases either of measles or mumps can be extremely harmful to persons after childhood. Either can be deadly, or disabling to adults," Dr. Betz said. Mumps is particularly dangerous to adolescent and adult males, since it may cause sterility.

LATER MARRIAGES WASHINGTON (AP) — More people are marrying later in life, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

It says the median age of first marriages for women rose to 23 during 1985, the highest ever recorded, and 25.5 for men, the highest since 1960. Nearly 2 million couples live together but are not married, almost four times the number in 1970.

Doctors organize cancer conference

HOUSTON—A group of young doctors training at The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute are doing their part to increase cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

On their own initiative, the doctors have organized a major forum for leading cancer experts from the two countries, which will be held in Houston April 26.

"We hope this conference will lay the groundwork for further collaboration toward finding cures for cancer," said Dr. Alan Kramer, who is organizing the conference.

Dr. Kramer is program chairman for the Committee of Medical Oncology Fellows at M.D. Anderson, a group of about 30 doctors training in age from 29 to 34 who are training to become cancer specialists. The group was organized last year, and among its purposes is to hold one educational conference a year.

When it came time to plan this year's conference, Dr. Kramer said the original idea was to put on a program focusing on the progress being made in the battle against cancer. But just then, President Reagan and Soviet President Gorbachev were holding their summit meeting in Geneva.

"We decided to combine the idea of recent progress against cancer with the idea of getting representatives from the U.S. and U.S.S.R. together," said Dr. Jay Schachner, another fellow at M.D. Anderson.

The fellows initially received names of two possible Soviet participants for the conference from Dr. Emil J. Freireich, director of the Adult Leukemia Program at M.D. Anderson, who went to the Soviet Union himself in 1979 to receive an award for his work with leukemia.

Arrangements for these and other Soviet participants for the conference were made through the National Cancer Institute, which also agreed to help pay their travel expenses. Another fellow, Dr. Amar Sarwal, then secured additional financial support for the conference from 30 pharmaceutical companies.

For the conference, the fellows decided to focus on four topics of particular interest to them: chemotherapy, immunotherapy, virology and epidemiology. They have arranged for a specialist in each of these areas from both countries.

U.S. experts participating in the conference are Dr. Freireich and Dr. Jordan Gutterman, professor of medicine and renowned immunologist from M.D. Anderson Hospital; Dr. Emil Frei, a chemotherapy specialist from the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston; and Dr. Baruch S. Blumberg, a virologist from the Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia.

Soviet experts participating in the conference are Dr. August M. Garin, Dr. V. Shmulevich and Dr. Zaira G. Kadagidze of the prestigious All-Union Oncologic Research Center in Moscow and Dr. Boris Lapin, an internationally recognized virologist from the Soviet Republic of Georgia.

The day-long conference will feature individual presentations from each of the experts and also panel discussions. It will conclude with a reception for all the participants.

Dr. Kramer said he hopes the conference will provide both the participants and fellows with information that will benefit cancer patients in their countries.

"Cancer has no geographic boundaries," he said. "Families go through the same grief whether it is in the United States or the Soviet Union."

Dr. Kramer said another long-range goal of the conference is to pave the way for an exchange program for medical students and physicians from the two countries.

"I would love to be able to spend some time working in the Soviet hospital system," he said.

The White House has been informed about the conference, and the fellows have received word that the President is "very excited" about it.

Ann Landers

Problem pinpointed

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I must respond to "Let Down in Denver," who complained because she had given her phone number to several guys and not one called her. She asked, "Why do they ask if they aren't interested?"

Well, Ann, you've heard only one side of the story. I'm a 21-year-old male who has had some pretty rough treatment from at least a dozen chicks. Let me describe my experiences. When girls have given me their phone numbers I discovered (1) They are never at home when I call. (2) They are too busy to talk. (3) They have given me a wrong number.

I'd prefer that a woman be honest and say, "I'd rather you wouldn't call me because I'm not interested in seeing you again." It would be a lot easier to take than a runaround or a number that doesn't work. Sign me — NICE GUYS FINISH LAST (MARIETTA, GA.)

DEAR NICE GUY: Where do you find these gems? My mail tells me there is an awesome number of decent young women out there who are longing to meet a nice guy. Are you making the mistake of going after the much-pursued, ever-popular beauty queen instead of a less glamorous type who is decent, kind, intelligent and interesting? From the treatment you are getting, I'll bet I've pinpointed your problem.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That letter from the young woman who wanted to "help" her sexually inexperienced platonic male friend become more wordy and build his self-esteem brought back memories. Bad ones.

Several years after "Lew" and I married, things became a bit dull in the bedroom. We had a single friend who was painfully shy. When he told me how inadequate he felt because he was a virgin and every other fellow he knew had scored, I decided to do him a "favor."

My "generosity" backfired. I became emotionally involved with the guy. To make matters worse, I wasn't terribly discreet. We appeared together in public a few times and tongues began to wag. When the young man heard that there was a lot of gossip about us, he said he couldn't see me anymore.

We decided on one farewell fling and that is when Lew caught us at home in our bedroom. I begged for another chance, and thank the Lord he agreed to give it to me. The one good thing that came out of the whole stinkin' mess was that I now see my husband in a new light. Things aren't dull anymore. I try a lot harder to be a good wife, and it has paid off. My advice to any married woman who thinks she ought to teach a young male friend what life is all about it: FORGET IT. I wish I had.—LADY BOUNTIFUL IN WISCONSIN

DEAR LADY: Thanks for the crash course. The lessons hardest learned are usually never forgotten. I hope it is so, in your case.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are taking our first trip to France and would like to know what to expect.—THE R'S IN MAINE

DEAR R'S: You are in for a real treat, but Billy Wilder said it best: "France is where the money falls apart in your hands and you can't tear the toilet paper."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll be brief. I know you are busy. I have this terrific burning desire to let myself go. What do you think?—SHAMOKIN, PA.

DEAR SHAM: It's OK to let yourself go so long as you can get yourself back.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. ## POLLY'S POINTERS

Why force child to eat too much?

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Our son is 18 months old and would rather play than eat. The doctor tells me he is small for his age and wants me to encourage him to eat more.

It's very frustrating to get him to eat. He only has seven teeth so I'm limited as to what he can eat. He insists on feeding himself. I give him nutritious foods, but some days when he eats very little, I'll give him sweets just so he'll eat something. He is very active and seems to be a normal, healthy boy. My husband and I were both very small as children. Do you have any suggestions? — MRS. B.H.

DEAR MRS. B.H. — I've condensed your letter somewhat in the interests of saving space, but your concerns can be very worrying to parents. Take heart: most toddlers would rather play than eat!

First of all, if the boy is healthy and growing, he is probably getting enough to eat, so long as all he eats is nutritious. Don't feed him sweets just to get him to eat "something." Sweets will decrease whatever appetite he does have.

The appetites of babies in their second year will usually decrease, since their slower growth rates demand fewer calories. Dr. T. Berry Brazelton, Harvard Medical School and a well-known pediatric expert, estimates that a one-year-old child needs only a pint of milk or its equivalent in dairy products such as cheese or yogurt, one ounce of fresh fruit juice or one piece of fresh fruit, two ounces of an iron-containing protein source, such as one egg or two ounces of lean meat, and probably a multivitamin preparation to be adequately nourished.

Your 18-month-old should not need much more than this. Of course, most children will, and should, eat more than this to fulfill their caloric and nutritional needs, but it does indicate that a child eating a spare diet will not necessarily be malnourished.

The most important thing is not to make eating or lack of eating an issue with your toddler. He should be provided with a variety of nutritious foods that he likes and allowed to eat what he wants from that variety. Let him feed himself and don't make a big deal out of food spilled on the floor or ignored. Offering small amounts at a time is helpful since large portions often discourage young eaters.

As Dr. Daniel B. Kessler, assistant professor of pediatrics at New York Hospital writes in "Baby Talk" magazine, "When provided with appropriate foods and given free choice, children at one year of age will eat what they require and round out their diets over a one month's time period without undue pressure or interference from their parents."

One other thought: Does your doctor know both you and your husband were small as children? He may not realize that your toddler's size may be due to heredity rather than poor nutrition.

Alabama sweep side tracked by smooth singing Strait

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Singer George Strait's two awards prevented another sweep by Alabama at the Academy of Country Music Awards, but the quartet won entertainer of the year and top vocal group for the fifth straight year.

Strait won the album of the year award Monday night and was named top male vocalist, an award he also won last year.

Alabama's two awards gave the group a record 14 "Hat" trophies.

"It's probably more important than the first one, because we've outdone ourselves," Alabama member Jeff Cook said backstage at the end of the nationally televised show from Knott's Berry Farm.

Strait said he was stunned to win the top male vocalist again.

"I never expected this two years in a row," Strait said after "Does Ft. Worth Ever Cross Your Mind?" was named best album. "I really didn't think I was going to win, but I'll take it."

Ronnie Milsap's "Lost in the Fifties," a nostalgic mix of country and doo-wop, won song of the year. Earlier this year, Milsap won a best country male vocal Grammy for the same tune. Milsap, who is blind, read Heba McEntire's name in Braille after opening the envelope for top female vocalist award.

"Highwayman," performed by a country supergroup of Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Waylon Jennings and Kris Kristofferson, took single of the year honors.

TV debut

Scheduled TV programming in the United States started April 30, 1939, with a broadcast of President Franklin D. Roosevelt opening the 1939 World's Fair. Within three months, 10 hours of television fare a day were being beamed from the tower at New York's Radio City Music Hall to sets as far as 150 miles away.

In 1962, the U.S. government accused the Soviet Union of killing at least 3,000 persons in Afghanistan with poison gas and other chemical weapons.

Relatives express support for retaliation

By POLLY ANDERSON Associated Press Writer

Relatives of the GI killed in a terrorist bombing at a West Berlin discotheque say the U.S. retaliatory attack on Libya was overdue, while a man who lost three members of his family in the recent TWA jet bombing says those who sponsor terrorism "have to expect to get burned."

"I think we did the right thing. The president did what he had to do," said Robin Beecham of Detroit. "I think it's long overdue. I don't think they bombed just because of my brother."

Beecham's brother, Army Sgt. Kenneth Ford, 21, died in the April 5 explosion at the La Belle disco a week before he was scheduled to return to Detroit for the first time in 2½ years. The bomb also killed a Turkish woman and injured more than 200 people, including about 60 Americans.

"We're trying to take our mind off it," Beecham said. "Right now we're not paying much attention to (the military action). I'm just trying to read the Bible and figure out what's what."

"We're a little relieved, yet we're still sorry because more people will die," said Alice Beecham, Ford's mother.

In his statement Monday night on the retaliation, President Reagan called the disco bombing an act of "monstrous brutality" and said "our evidence is direct, it is precise, it is irrefutable" that Libya was behind it.

He did not cite the other recent terrorist incident involving Americans — the bombing of the Trans World Airline jetliner over Greece on April 2 that resulted in the death of four passengers. But relatives of those victims also expressed support for the retaliation, although some said they feared innocent people could be harmed.

Warren Klug Jr., whose wife, daughter and mother-in-law were killed in the bombing, said he had mixed feelings about the U.S. attack.

"It's about time America got together as a nation," said Klug, of Annapolis, Md. "Once these people realize that we are together as a nation, maybe they'll stop messing with us."

"They burn other people, they have to expect to get burned themselves," he said.

Klug's wife, Maria; her mother,

Demetra Toula Stylian; and the Klugs' 8-month-old baby, also named Demetra, died in the TWA bombing along with a Colombian-born American, Alberto Ospina of Stratford, Conn.

Ospina's widow, Margoth, said Monday evening that she believes Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy was responsible for her husband's death, but expressed reservations about the retaliation.

"It would be OK if he goes straight to Khadafy," she said. "It's hard to say ... go ahead and do it. ... A lot of innocent people are going to be hurt."

A sister of an American who was abducted more than a year ago in Beirut, meanwhile, said she is worried about the consequences of the U.S. action.

Peggy Say, the sister of hostage Terry Anderson, said she is worried the U.S. attack might mean that Arab nations, including Lebanon, could band together against the United States.

"That would be very bad news for us," she said. "But we're hoping that won't happen."

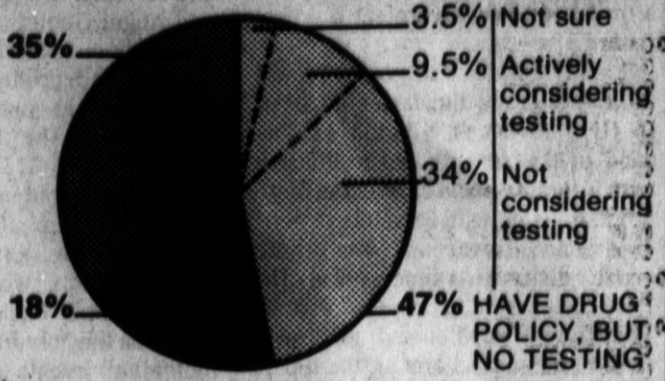

Anderson, The Associated Press' chief Middle East correspondent, was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Tax Tips

Sixteenth in a series of "tax tip" articles provided by the Panhandle Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.
Q. Is the Windfall Profit Tax that is withheld from my monthly oil run check tax deductible?

A. For Federal income tax purposes the Windfall Profit Tax from gross oil runs is a deductible expense just like production or severance taxes.

If you are a royalty holder and are eligible to claim the two-barrel-per-day exemption and you did not file an exemption certificate for 1985, then you may qualify for a refundable credit up to the amount of Windfall Profit Tax on two barrels per day. If you did file an exemption certificate, the first purchaser did not withhold the Windfall Profit Tax. You must pay the Windfall Profit Tax on any production in excess of two barrels per day.

Oil industry workers retrain

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Alton Rae said he grew up in Odessa thinking he would spend his life working in the oil fields.

That's before he was laid off from his welding job. Now, he's in his second year of training at Odessa College for a new career as a medical technician.

A college administrator said he expects many people who lose jobs in the current economic downturn to train in new fields.

"People try to go back to school to get their job skills up," said Roger Coomer, Odessa College vice president for finance. "We're hoping for that, as long as people don't leave the area."

When the economy soured in 1983, "that following semester (Fall 1984) we had our biggest enrollment ever," Coomer said.

Rae, 30, said he was laid off in 1983. "Back in '83 when the bust hit, the welding shops closed down," he recalled. Rae said his wife encouraged him to train for another type of work.

"I didn't want to follow work around. I'd rather have a steady job," he said. "People are going to have to retrain or follow the work around."

He decided to study to become a medical technician, work that he thought he would enjoy and that would give him the stability he sought.

"I've had a lot of people asking me about ... what it was like to have to retrain," Rae said.

He said he expects others in oil-related professions will follow his example. But Rae said when he started working, he thought the rest of his life would revolve around the petroleum industry.

"I had all intentions of staying into it, until it fell apart," Rae recalled. "I was making good money and moving up."

rewarding," he said while sitting in a medical technology lab at Odessa College.

Coomer said few people nowadays can select a field and stay in it for the rest of their lives.

"People need more than one career," he said. Most people will retrain four to six times during their working lives, Coomer said.

And in a rapidly changing economy, having more than one skill proves useful, he said.

"You never know what's going to be hot and what's going to be out for a while," he said.

The height of a dam is the difference between the lowest point in the foundation and the top of the dam, exclusive of parapets.

Except during the French Revolution, the independent principality of Monaco has belonged to the House of Grimaldi since 1297.
