HOUSTON (AP) - Residents indicated that time constraints whose homes were flooded by torrential rains spawned by Hurricane Chantal began drying out their wet belongings as the storm today moved further into Texas, losing strength. Chantal roared ashore early Tuesday morning at High Island, bringing with it driving rains and winds up to 80 mph. It lost strength within a few hours and was downgraded to a tropical storm, but it continued to be a heavy rainmaker for much of the upper Texas coast throughout the day. On Tuesday night, the storm was further downgraded to a tropical depression as it continued to move northwest into Texas. Its winds had decreased to about 30 mph.

By early today, the storm's remnants were located between College Station and Waco, triggering rains and some tornadoes. No damage was immediately reported in central Texas from the storm.

Forecasters said the Dallas-Fort Worth area may get as much as five inches of rain in gusty thunderstorms today.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, August 2, the 214th day of 1989. There are 151 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on August 2, 1939, Albert Einstein signed a letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt urging the U.S. to begin an atomic weapons research program.

On this date:

In 1776, members of the Continental Congress began to attach their signatures to the Declaration of Independence.

In 1876, frontiersman "Wild Bill" Hickok was shot from behind and killed while playing poker at a saloon in Deadwood, S.D. The man who shot Hickok, Jack McCall, was later hanged. In 1921, opera singer Enrico Caruso died in Naples, Italy.

In 1921, a jury in Chicago acquitted several former members of the Chicago White Sox baseball team and two others of conspiring to defraud the public in the notorious "Black Sox" scandal.

In 1923, the 29th President of the United States, Warren G. Harding, died in San Francisco.

In 1927, President Coolidge issued a statement to reporters: "I do not choose to run for President in 1928.'

In 1934, German President Paul von Hindenburg died, paving the way for Adolf Hitler's complete takeover. In 1943, Navy Lieutenant John F. Kennedy became a war hero by rescuing members of his crew after their P-T boat was sheared in two by a Japanese destroyer. In 1945, leaders of the United States, Soviet Union and Britain concluded the Allied conference at Potsdam.

In 1983, the U.S. House of Representatives voted to designate the third Monday in January a federal holiday in honor of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Junior. In 1985, 137 people were killed when a Delta Air Lines jumbo jet crashed as it attempted to land at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. In 1986, Roy M. Cohn, the controversial New York City trial attorney, died at Bethesda Naval Hospital of cardiac arrest and complications from the AIDS-related HTLV-III virus. Ten years ago: New York Yankees catcher Thurman Munson was killed when his private jet crashed as he was practicing takeoffs and landings at Akron-Canton Regional Airport in Ohio. Five years ago: The U.S. swimming team won three more gold medals at the Los Angeles Olympics through the efforts of Mary T. Meagher, George DiCarlo and the men's 400-meter medley relay team. One year ago: Despite previous threats of a veto, President Reagan said he would reluctantly allow a plant-closing notification bill to become law, accusing Democrats of what he called "political shenanigans."

Today's Birthdays: Actress Myrna Loy is 84. Actor Gary Merrill is 75. Actress Beatrice Straight is 71. Former Senator Paul Laxaft is 67. Actor Carroll O'Connor is 65. Actor Peter O'Toole is 57. Actress Joanna Cassidy is 45.

Thought for Today: "I made one great mistake in my life - when I signed the letter to President Roosevelt recommending that atom bombs be made ... but there was some justification - the danger that the Germans would make them." - Albert Einstein (1879-1955).

Golden years dimmed by beatings

Alice didn't dare wait for the

She ran down six flights of stairs, her 69 years weighing heavy - less for the age and a bad hip, more for her 52year-old son who was waving a knife and threatening to kill her. Out on the street Alice headed for a neighbor's phone to tell the police her son had turned abusive again.

'You work and support a child all your life," she said from New York City, where she lives. "Then they act like they hate you.'

Alice (not her real name) isn't alone. As many as 2 million elderly people may be abused, researchers say, often by children, grandchildren, even great-grandchildren - the very people they depend on for care in their old age.

"This happens with these blood relatives - sons, daughters, nieces, nephews," said Dorothy Brodie, a 75year-old retired social worker who works with the Bronx Elder Abuse Support Project.

'They'll do things like keep telling the victim 'You're stupid. You're senile. You have Alzheimer's disease.' They'll do things like maybe even taking their dentures away from them so they're forced to eat soft food; or take eyeglasses away so they can't even read a newspaper."

One in 25 older adults is abused, according to an estimate in a 1985 report to Congress, "Elder Abuse: A National Disgrace." The abuse takes all forms: psychological torment, neglect and theft. But often, it is physical.

In New York City, an 18-year-old man punched and kicked his 87-yearold great-grandmother, explaining later to authorities: "She bugs me because she asks me to fix her something to

A 54-year-old salesman on New York's Long Island was charged last year with brutalizing his elderly parents for three years, demanding they turn over their life savings. When police arrived, neighbors asked, "Did he kill them?"

phenomenon," said Elizabeth Holtzman, District Attorney of the New York borough of Brooklyn, where elder abuse has risen 400 percent since 1986 to 370 cases last year. She attributes the increase to abusers' use of crack cocaine.

Last year, 140,000 cases of elder abuse were reported nationwide, an increase of 10 percent from 1987, said Toshio Tatara, director of the National Aging Resource Center on Elder Abuse in Washington, D.C. "People still find it incredible that we abuse our elders. They said the same thing about children 20 years ago. And we're doing it like a national pastime."

Tatara believes just one in 14 cases is likely to be reported.

The victim usually is 75 or older, a woman and generally dependent, the abuser a son or daughter, the congressional report found.

The abusers many times have their

"This is a terrifying social own problems: drug and alcohol abuse, unemployment, money, mental illness. Violence may be repayment for abuse a son or daughter received. A cramped house may spark it; middle-aged children free at last of their own children may resent the intrusion of a frail parent. In some cases, it's the stress of caring for an elderly parent.

> "The idea that people for some reason or another do not want to put their loved ones in a nursing home or feel they have to be responsible for total care is fairly common in these cases," said Rosalie Wolf, associate director of the University Center on Aging afthe University of Massachusetts Medical Center.

Part of the solution is getting seniors to take responsibility for stopping and even preventing abuse, said Lee Pearson, assistant manager of criminal justice services for the American Association of Retired

The elderly should keep regular appointments and stay in touch with old friends, especially if they move in with a relative, Pearson said. They should have someone stop by once a week to make sure all is well.

Forty-two states and the District of Columbia have statutes requiring reporting of elder abuse, but those involved with the cases say the nation has a long way to go toward recognizing the problem.

The states spend an average $22 per abused child, but just $2.90 for each abused older person, Congress found. Its report recommended emergency shelters, tax credits for families caring for older adults, amendments to Medicare and Medicaid eliminating limitations on benefits and services to elderly people cared for by family members at home, and mandatory reporting of abuse.

Babbling Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

Those squeals you're hearing in the background are the last remaining liberal forces in America.

These are the folks that not only can't get a man elected president, but can't even get close to getting one elected when they get one chosen as the party nominee,

This isn't a slam at the Democrat party, although the Democrats have chosen to throw liberal after liberal after liberal at the nation's voters. Just as there are conservative Democrats, there are liberal Republicans. One would suppose the number of conservative Democrats far exceeds the number of liberal Republicans, but there are a few liberal Republicans around.

While watching one of those week-in-review shows on the television over the weekend, I saw this guy rant and holler about how the liberals were no longer represented on the U.S. Supreme Court.

All I can say is, it's about time.

The high court was dominated for what seemed like eons by liberals. Many of them were appointed by Franklin Roosevelt. For many years, there were seven persons you could easily classify as liberal out of the nine on

Some of the decisions they made were for the good of the country, from Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, through other reams of civil rights rulings, and more.

Then there were travesties, like Roc v. Wade and many of the original Affirmative Action rulings. On many of those rulings, common sense seemed to be absent. In recent months, many of the Affirmative Action rulings have been changed to bring them more in line with the mainstream, and with

The court has also said it's going to back up and take a look at Roe v. Wade. If nothing else, a state now has the right to decide how it's going to spend its money. If a state does not want its money spent on funding abortions, then so be it.

The recent ruling on the flag crossed the ideological boundaries of liberal and conservative, but it should be refreshing to see a more conservative bent on the Supreme Court over the next few years.

In case you missed it, President Bush has come up with a new congressional pay-raise plan.

I think this is a plan with which we can live. While the plan would increase pay, it would cut down on the amount of honoraria the Congressmen can receive from speaking engagements and other public appearances.

One of the best parts of the plan is the cutback in franking privileges. Franking privileges can be easily translated: free mail.

You, as John Q. Public, probably don't see many of these letters, mailed "free," cross your desk. We see many.

We don't mind the mail we get from our representative, Larry Combest, or our senators, Phil Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen. Some of the information received in these mailings ends up in news stories. Others keep us informed of the decisions facing our congressmen. A few, but not many, are best described as self-serving, but you have to toot your own horn every now

What I resent is all of this "free" mail from other members of Congress. It's bad enough when it's from representatives from elsewhere in Texas, but I resent getting "free" mail from congressmen from other states.

This "free" mail is just as free as those "free" lunches, someone has to pay for it: in this case, it's paid for every time you buy a stamp or otherwise use the U.S. Postal Service.

Franking privileges have been blown beyond a reasonable limit. It appears that there is no end to the abuse, so it's time to put a curb on them.

Communists claim victory in Polish Prime Minster vote prime minister in a victory for the long-ruling Communist Party, whose power has been eroding.

On Tuesday, the body had postponed a vote on giving the premiership to Kiszczak, the Communist nominee, and some deputies said the communist-allied Peasant Party was seeking a government dominated by Solidarity.

Leaders of the free trade union movement opposed Kiszczak's candidacy.

Before Kiszczak was elected, the Communists lost a key parliament vote for the first time in postwar Poland as Solidarity pushed through a resolution to investigate the outgoing government for economic misconduct.

The free trade union movement believes the outgoing government of Mieczyslaw Rakowski - now Communist Party chief - should be held accountable for the unraveling of the economy during its mine months.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR READERS

The new school year will be beginning soon and our young children will be returning to their various schools. It is very important that children who ride the school bus be instructed on safety rules for waiting. boarding, riding and departing a school bus. Here are some tips from the Ryder Student Transportation Services that your child should know before the first day of school. When followed: this safety information will help prevent needless accidents involving children and school buses.

1. Plan to be at the bus stop several minutes before the bus is scheduled to arrive. Wait in a safe place, clear of traffic and away from where the bus

2. Remain at least 10 feet (five giant steps) from the bus until it has come to a complete stop, then board single file without running or pushing. When leaving the bus, walk 10 feet from the bus and remain there until it has left the bus stop

3. Never chase a bus after it has pulled away. If your child finds he has left a lunch box, sweater or book on the bus after he has gotten off. instruct the child not to run back to Ann, you have tremendous get it. The most common serious school bus have occurred when a child was trying to run back to the bus to retrieve a forgotten object.

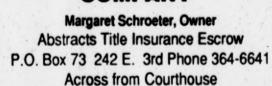

4. When it is necessary to cross the street upon boarding or leaving the bus, walk at least five giant steps from the bus to the shoulder of the road and remain there until given a signal by the bus driver that it is safe to cross the street.

When entering the bus, go directly to an available seat or one that has been assigned to you. Remainseated and facing forward at all times while the bus is moving.

7. Do not extend your hands. elbows or head through the windows or throw or pass objects to someone outside

Teach your children these important tips to ensure their safety when riding the school bus. Parents who have children who will be riding the school bus for the first time can take their child on a few practice runs to their bus stop before the first day of school. Help your children to follow the proper safety procedures so that they may repeat these steps every remaining school day comfortably and safely. - Heloise

Brown, 10-6, trails Kansas City's Tom Gordon, 11-4, by one win for most victories by a rookie this year after beating the Detroit Tigers 4-3 Tuesday night.

Few people, including Brown, thought he would be among the top young pitchers in baseball in 1989. At one point, he endured a 14-game losing streak over two seasons with four minor league teams.

"I think I learned a lot during that time," said Brown, who has defeated Detroit twice this year. "You're either going to live or die. when he got in that I was very Henneman.

Harold Baines, acquired by the Rangers in a weekend trade with Chicago, hit a two-run, two-out homer in the ninth while Brown and Jeff Russell, who earned his 22nd save, held the Tigers to five hits.

Brown, only half in jest, said the quality of his life improved greatly when Baines joined the team last Saturday. Baines is 5-for-12 since the trade, including Tuesday night's home run.

"I don't think anybody expected anything other than that, a player of his talent," Brown said. "I told him

The Rangers now are 6-0 against the Tigers, the first time they've won more than five games in a season against Detroit since 1980.

McReynolds' slugging and Fernandez's four-hitter took the pressure of breaking a long losing streak off of Viola, acquired from Minnesota by the Mets just before midnight Monday.

McReynolds declined to talk to the media about supplanting Mike Phillips as the last Met to hit a homer, single, double and triple in a nine-inning game.

Fernandez was excited about his first shutout since July 3, 1988 and the fact that he succeeded without his usual strikeouts. He walked two and struck out only one.

vegetable production and went for the gold--the window was summer consumer markets and the gold came straight from panhandle potato fields.

Though no banners are flying to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Barrett potato production in Texas, the family vegetable operations in Hereford, Muleshoe and Seminole are marking a banner year in quantity, quality and price.

"This is going to be a real good year for the High Plains potato industry," said Frank Barrett of Hereford, who very big splash in the total picture of potato production in the United States, some of the finest potatoes in the of the U.S. crop.

Fifty years ago the Barrett family for 50 years and most of the people found an open window in Texas (consumers) still have never heard of Texas potatoes...we have to break into new markets all of the time.'

Though the 1989 summer crop is in the form of big, tasty Russets now fetching around $15 per hundredweight, Barrett cautioned against newcomers seeking a fastbuck crop--"You need to stay light on your feet in this business because it's going to change. For instance, if the Norgold Russet variety hadn't come along, I don't know whether we'd still be in the business."

The Norgold Russets are rounder than most baking potatoes with medium-dark skin of a golden hue. has potato acreage scattered across a The skin is also much thinner than 150-mile stretch of West Texas farm those produced in Idaho, making the country. Barrett pointed out that potato Barrett was speaking of the big research is an ongoing program in his Norgold Russet varieties produced family vegetable production, with a small portion of their acreage given to and Eastern New Mexico. "The crop Red Russets and a special variety for is real good and the price is much chipping. The chippers are marketed better than average...this is going to be to Frito-Lay for chip specialties while one of the good years," he added, the big end of their summer crop is while summarizing the summer potato distributed nationwide to the freshcrop from his Hereford processing vegetable markets. 'We've been producing potatoes here potatoes took the country by storm about 10 years ago when restaurants started ladling on everything from big chunks of fresh butter to beef stew and tuna salad. Potato restaurant franchises sprung up across the country to form another marketing outlet for the potato

From around 12,000 acres of potatoes on the High Plains of Texas and New Mexico, producers are expected market about 3 million hundredweight for a grand total of about $45 million in 1989. This year's going price of $15-$16 per hundredweight is more than double the average price of $5-$6 per hundredweight received by the High Plains potato farmers in 1988.

Wesley "Wes" Fisher of Hereford, who is a partner with Barrett in the Barrett-Fisher Company at Hereford, said this year's potato crop will funnel at least $45 million into the High Plains economy. "One of the main things about vegetables or any type of crop production is that this is new money coming from a new crop each year...not only money being recycled," said Fisher, who is now serving his seventh year as mayor of Hereford. "Practically all of our High Plains potato production is marketed from the Atlantic seaboard."

Barrett noted that though new markets are continuously developed for Texas potatoes, big-city consumers High Plains vegetables once they get a taste of these Texas super spuds. We ship potatoes to about every major city east of Denver," said Barrett, in showing the national demand for the tasty crop. "We also ship a quite a bit to Canada. As a matter of fact, we shipped out a load to Maine today."

From the Texas turnrows to the production and processing...and a ton start again until we get a fully of salesmanship at the marketing levels mechanized harvesting system." Efficient handling is another key point in this business of perishable products. Hereford potatoes dug on Thursday could be a featured item on Boston vegetable counters Monday morning ...pampered all the way under the finest refrigeration equipment in the world.

With the $15-hundredweight average, the current market is putting about $2,500 per acre back in the fields where growing costs may run between $800 and $900 per acre. "You sure don't want to get in this business if you have second thoughts about the risk involved," said Barrett, while exhibiting a positive grin. "You'd better have a lot of equityin fact, you'd better have all the equity for this thing (market) can change and it can change in a hurry. We had a good year in 1984. Then we had several bad ones in a row, but we need those lows. and highs to keep the supply and demand balanced out right."

The veteran potato grower hauled from fields more than 60 miles emphasized that potatoes are grown and marketed on supply and demand, with no government subsidies whatsoever. Thus, the "low" years, which frequently follow the "high" years, weed out many speculators and get-rich-quick producers.

'Wes (Fisher) handles most of the marketing end of the business here at Barrett-Fisher and I try to stay out in the production end of the business," said Barrett. "I have never liked office work very much but I really like to grow potatoes...I enjoy the field work." And he's a man of his word. He rarely can be found behind a desk. But head off southward toward Muleshoe or Seminole and you'll find him pretty close to the planters in March and April and not far from the harvesters from June to August.

Barrett-Fisher Company has about 550 acres of potato production with an average crop grossing out around 140,000 hundredweight. The three potato production companies of which Barrett is associated--Barrett-Fisher Company of Hereford, Barrett Produce Co. of Muleshoe and Seminole Produce Co.,--produce about 600,000 hundredweight. a season. Harvest generally begins around June 20 and runs through Aug. 20. Barrett's total acreage accounts for about 18 percent of the High Plains Rocky Mountain chain eastward to the potato production. In addition to the High Plains there are some smaller acreages of potatoes around Pearsall and in the Rio Grande Valley.

Barrett-Fisher markets its produce from Boston to Houston have under the Tex-Star label, with other repeatedly voiced a preference for the marketing labels being Blue Chip and Spring Lake. Fisher, who is the head honcho of the Hereford packing shed, has a capable side-kick of Jim Donihoo who has been on the marketing end of Barrett-Fisher produce for the past 10 years. The Barrett-Fisher processing shed employees around 60 people during the summer runs with additional crews in the fields. All of their harvesting is totally mechanized, a far-cry from the Manhattan skylines, the name of the days of field-sacked spuds. > Barrett has a brother, Dick, who has an interest in the Hereford plant and is now retired in Hereford. Another brother, Stan, operates the Muleshoe processing unit and a third brother, Fred, operated the Seminole company until his untimely death in a traffic mishap in Idaho in 1986. A nephew of Barrett, Rusty Barrett, now runs the Seminole operation which includes 780 acres of potatoes, including about 100 acres of chippers. The Muleshoe operation has around 900 acres of spuds grown from the fresh-vegetable markets.

Fisher pointed out that they once produced potatoes in the immediate Hereford area but found through research that they could produce better potatoes more efficiently in sandyloam soils under overhead pivot sprinklers. Much of their locallyprocessed spuds are produced and "I like to grow Barretts planted their first hill of spuds potatoes." here 50 years ago...meaning that midsummer is the one time of the year that no new potato production goes to market in the U.S.

"The whole world goes to potatoes the last week of August," said Barrett, in the book in the immediate Hereford who noted that potatoes are grown in about every state of the nation and in about every country of the world. When Dad first came down here in 1939, that open-window in marketing was one of the first things that got his attention. The other things were the rich soils and the abundance of water."

California and Arizona potato production is faded out in early July due to natural hot climatic conditions and the inter-mountain states, Midwest and the New England area is still at least two months away from harvest. This leaves an "open window" in marketing for the High Plains growers. "There's been several attempts at encroachment on this little window but it's still here," said Barrett. "We grow a high-quality product for a particular time-slot...not for quantity over a long period of time. We could get higher production if we'd change varieties and go for a longer marketing time. But we'd rather go for higher quality marketed in a smaller time period."

Barrett noted that through extensive research, in both company-owned plots and through Texas universities, peracre potato production has tripled during the past 50 years. But his biggest move was changing from row-irrigation to overhead sprinklers systems on sandy-loams.

In order to hit a June time-slot in marketing, planters must be in the fields by the first week of March, a time which is still highly vulnerable to frost and freeze on the High Plains. "This is a risk you got to take if you're going for the open window," said Barrett, who seems to thrive on the big

Fisher added that in addition to the race with frosts each spring, they thought 480 acres of growing potatoes were lost to hail in 1981--"We just let them hang in there and they finally wiggled through.. three weeks late but we finally got some potatoes--that was the year I got my Pacemaker." Barrett and Fisher are both

In addition to the potato business, Barrett pointed out that there has Barrett and his son, Bruce, have a

The Barretts also grow some additional vegetable crops, such as green beans and peanuts at Seminole. In earlier years of the 1950s and 1960s, the Barretts produced about every vegetable

Though the Barretts could be regarded as pioneers in national marketing of High Plains potatoes, spuds have been one of the staple vegetable crops of Deaf Smith County since the day D.L. McDonald brought in the 10-incher 3 miles south of Hereford back around 1910. But through the first quarter century the Hereford vegetable industry had its ups and downs. In the 1920s the Hereford Potato Growers Association was formed and built its headquarters and an underground storage unit on South Main at point between the current Pro Golf Shop and the Hereford Grain Corporation elevators. But the organization lacked an adequate marketing system. And then came the Great Depression and the tough times of the Dust Bowl.

Much of the vegetable and potato production had been abandoned or shifted to grains when Fred S. Barrett from the Snake River Valley of Idaho first set foot on Texas soil in 1939. He was sort of enticed to the Lone Star State by two emissaries from Hereford, Joe G. Evans and Jack Rose, who had made a trip up to Idaho to see the various methods

Fred Barrett was no stranger to irrigated vegetable farming back in 1939 when the Texans made their first trek to the High Country--he had already grown irrigated potatoes for 30 years. Born in Warnego, Kansas, in 1884 Fred Barrett had earned a degree in engineering from the University of Kansas and later was sent to Alaska to handle surveying work for the railroads. After returning to the states from Alaska, he went to Idaho in 1907 to survey an irrigation canal system for the state which was just beginning to develop its vast irrigation system in the Snake River region.

While mapping out the irrigation canals, he became interested in the farming aspect of the project and switched from the engineering profession to farming in the Snake River Valley of southern Idaho. He grew his first crop

AUSTIN - The first called special session of the 71st Legislature has now ended. Once again it is time for reflection. The Governor called the legislature back into special session for one purpose - to enact meaningful reform of the Texas Worker's Compensation Insurance system. We failed. >

Early in the special session, I was hopeful that reform was on the horizon. While I voted against the bill. because I felt we could do better. Senate Bill I was a major improvement over the Worker's Comp bill voted out by the Senate in the regular session

In an interesting parliamentary maneuver Speaker Lewis and Lt. Governor Hobby decided that it would be the Senate Bill that would move through the legislative process. Having the Senate Bill pass the Senate, go to the House, and then return to the Senate for approval of any House amendments, was a strategic move designed to take advantage of the Senate rules and ultimately make passage of a reform measure easier.

Then an incident occurred that could not have been more poorly timed. Bo Pilgrim, the chicken producer from East Texas, came to the Senate the day before a scheduled vote on the House amendments to Senate Bill 1. Mr. Pilgrim, in what can be most charitably described as a misguided lobbying effort, handed out 7 or 8 $10,000 checks to various Senate members remarking that business could sure use some help in worker's comp. To make matters worse, the payee line on the checks were blank.

We knew that the vote to concur on the House amendments to Senate Bill 1 was going to be close at best, but after the Pilgrim episode, there was no chance. The next day. when the bill came back to the Senate, the proponents of the Senate version easily prevailed on a motion not to concur, but rather to appoint a conference committee to work out the differences between the Senate version and the House version

The appointees to the House and Senate conference committee were virtually the same as those during the regular session, when negotiations failed.

This time around, the conferees worked extremely hard and put in very long hours. But, once again they were unable to resolve their differences. Both sides believe strongly that their approach to worker's compensation reform is the right approach. I happen to believe that the House approach, which attempts to lessen lawyers involvement in what is supposed to be a no-fault system and create a more objective method of determining compensation, is the better-began it's work in early July, there were literally thousands of differences between the two bills. Retween that time and the end of the special session, major progress was made. When time ran out, there remained only a few differences. However, those differences have been pervasive throughout the long worker's comp debate. The principal sticking points have been the method by which disputes between injured workers and insurance companies are resolved and the system to be used in determining how to compensate an injured worker. Although conferees hotly debated the issue of safety. I believe their differences could have been resolved if the principal dispute could have been resolved.

When the conference committee

While we failed in our principal task during the first called special session, there were a few positive developments. During the waning hours of the last night of the session. I took part in negotiations that resulted in passage of a new expanded asset forfeiture law. I had 'said all through the campaign that I believe Texas should expand the asset forfeiture provisions that we currently have under the Controlled Substances Act to other felonies. Getting to drug dealers in their pocketbooks has proven to be a powerful took to fight those who would sell illegal drugs in our communities. My belief has always been that we could use this tool to fight crime in other areas. House Bill 65 will allow our law enforcement officers to confiscate any real or personal property used in the commission of any first or second degree felony. This is a major expansion of current law and very good news for law enforcement. I am also pleased with the outcome of two legislative efforts that are closer to home. The first with regard to the Canadian River. We did not pass a bill because the Governor felt that it would be preferable for Parks and Wildlife to acquire property in the Panhandle before passing a bill that would dedicate funds from a settlement of the Canadian River land dispute to-Parks and Wildlife. Parks and Wildlife is currently negotiating to acquire property.

Finally, I am very pleased that the Panhandle delegation was successful in its effort to pass legislation allowing the merger of West Texas State University with Texas A&M University. Because of our desire to allow the WT study of the merger issue to be completed, we drafted the legislation in a way that would allow for the merger, pending completion of the study. approval of both boards and approval of the Coordinating Board. Should this merger come to pass. I believe it will be the most significant positive advance for higher education in our area in over of potatoes in 1909.

Fred Barrett's wife, May Roberts Barrett, was also educated in Kansas and taught at various Kansas schools before her family moved to Wendell, Ida., where the two were married in 1912. Thus, the Barretts were counted among the more prominent farmers of the Snake River Valley when Rose and Evans arrived in 1939.

After hearing the Texas tales of a vast country of fertile soils and good water, Fred Barrett returned to Hereford with the two and liked everything he saw. He referred to the Hereford area at that time as "A Bonanza.'

We had become sort of hemmed in at that time in Idaho and really didn't have any room for expansion," recalled Frank Barrett, who was 17 at that time. "I really believe that Dad was looking for a place big enough to put all of his five sons to work, so he pulled stakes and moved to Texas."

Fred Barrett brought along his two older sons, Bob and Dick, to plant that first crop of potatoes in the summer of 1940. In 1941, they were joined by Mrs. Barrett and their other children, Fred Barrett Jr., Bea, Marian, Stan, Frank and Margaret. Frank recalled that the 1941 potato crop was a total loss due to an unusual wet season of 37 inches of rain.

All of the potatoes rotted in the fields so Dad had to go back to Idaho and sell off most everything so we could have enough money to put in another crop," said Frank Barrett, as he recalled those early years of potato production in Deaf Smith County. "From that point on there was no turning back...it was Texas all the way.

The Barretts grew their first potatoes on the old Joe Evans farms about 6 miles west of Hereford where in 1942 they also built their first potato shed. A year later, the Barretts built on New York Avenue.

Barrett recalled that the family stayed in the old Nickerson Hotel located across the street from the Santa Fe Depot. A livestock auction barn are Bruce, Nancy and Steven. Barrett was on the other side. Later that fall pointed out that though the Barrett in 1941, the family moved to a farm brothers set up individual entities located across the roadway from the during the 1950s they were still interpresent-day John Deere dealership on related in a number of ways. U.S. 385.

"The only potato shed here at that time was the association's old potato cellar down on South Main," said Barrett. "You know, it was one of those dug back in an embankment with straw, dirt and poles on top."

He pointed out that one of the first moves by his father was to take advantage of the open window market by shipping Texas potatoes to their old customers in Kansas city, Chicago and other points east that had been established from their Idaho opera-

"When we first came to Hereford, most of the potatoes grown here were marketed more or less on a local basis or sold to truckers and buyers who came along," said Barrett. "There were really no organized national marketing system."

Just as Hereford grew, so did the Barretts. Eventually, each of the Barrett sons had their own potato and vegetable production. Barrett noted that the various Barrett farming operations moved in individual directions for a numbers of years in the 1950s and then "sort of pulled back together again." Fred Barrett Sr., died in 1964 and his wife passed away in 1974, and Fred Jr. and Margaret died in a traffic mishap in Idaho. Bob and Marian are both deceased.

A graduate of West Texas State University, Frank Barrett and Betty Jane Caldwell of Claude were married in 1952. She earned degrees from Texas Tech at Lubbock and West Texas State, and through the years, the Barretts have been active supporters of WTSU. Barrett served on the WTSU board of regents from 1979 to 1985 and was inducted into the Hall of Honor at WTSU. He has also served on the Hereford City Commission and recently was named as one of the Top 100 vegetable producers of the United States by the Vegetable Grower Magazine. He has also served as president of the Texas Farm Bureau Federation. The Barretts three children

A native of California, Fisher was with Holly Sugar Corporation in the San Jose District for 10 years before being transferred in 1963 to the new Hereford sugar processing plant that was still on the drawing board the year Fisher arrived to take over Holly's farm manager post. The eldest child of Elliott and Margaret Fisher, he attended the University of California at Davis and was married to Patricia Wilson in 1949. She attended the College of the Pacific at Stockton.

When the Holly plant was launched here in 1964, Fisher's main job was to sell the sugar beet story to the Panhandle. He had a background of West Coast farming and had also worked with the Campbell Soup Co. for a time prior to joining the Holly corporation. When Holly proposed that Fisher move to in Montana, he turned down the offer and went to work for the old Jorde Potato Co. He later joined the Howard Gault Co. where he served for nine years before joining Barrett in 1975. In 1978, the two formed a partnership operation and changed the name to Barrett-Fisher Company.

The Fishers have two daughters, Patricia Lynne and Nancy, with he and his wife taking active roles in numerous community and church projects. And as mayor of this city of 20,000, Fisher spends much of his spare time--and a lot of company time--promoting the fine points of Hereford. With one breath, he speaks of Hereford's Golden Triangle as being the Salad Bowl of the Panhandle, the Sugar Bowl of Texas and the Cattle Feeding Capital of the world. He would be correct on all points.

Barrett speaks frequently on his son, Bruce, who turned 35 last week and is now assuming much responsibility in the family farming operations. A graduate of West Texas State University and Texas A&M University, he moved. to Muleshoe four years ago to manage the Muleshoe packing shed and assist with the farming operations on the South Plains. "Without help like Bruce and my nephew, Rusty, at Seminole (Fred's son) I probably wouldn't be handling all of this potato and ranching operations." His other son, Steve, is in was school and Nancy is in Dallas. Barrett and Fisher each has served as president of the Highs Vegetable Growers Council and Fisher is now serving his second term on the board of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Growers Association headquartered at Harlingen. Bruce Barrett is currently serving as the Texas representative to the National Potato Board and Fisher was the third Texan to serve on the National Potato Board for three years.

In addition to experimental plots under supervision by Texas A&M, the Barretts have some closely-guarded potato test plots which is seldom discussed in public. However, Barrett grinned a bit when casually mentioned that an ideal new variety would be one that produced big-round, bright-red potatoes that would be ready for harvest about the middle of June. "We've already got the color but they don't have all of the other qualities that we want." Not many years ago, the Barretts had an average summer yield of 150-180 sacks per acre-today, much of their production is passing the 350-sack mark

The potato production team of Barrett and Fisher pulls no punches when they talk of Texas spuds and the people who grow them--positive verbal punches for anyone who will stop and listen.

And there's no room for doubt when Barrett speaks of Hereford, the potato hub of Texas:

"I think we can grow potatoes better than most people. I think we can grow a better potato than most people. I think we can pack potatoes better than most people. And I think we can sell potatoes better than most people."

I FORGOT TO KISS YOU

YOU'VE MADE

is another story of mystery you will find intriguing. The Polar Star is virtually a Soviet village in American waters. This Soviet factory ship makes its way through the fog of the Bering Sea off the coast of Alaska. Its satellites are American trawlers that catch fish; the Soviets clean, freeze and carry the harvest home. In the catch of last night is the usual cod. crabs, and then the body of a woman missing from the Polar Star is discovered. Arkady Renko, a once senior investigator for homicide, is on board, but in hiding from the KGB working at the lowest job, the "slime line." On orders from his captain, Arkady unwillingly comes back to life as a detective. Arkady also gains attention of an ominous figure from his Moscow past. Karp Korobelz, the ships model worker and a brutal criminal, looks upon Arkady with murderous intent for sending him to Siberia years before. As Arkady probes through layers of intrigue, at sea and into the isolated ports of Dulah Harbor, Alaska and the Artic ice, the true mission of the Polar Star and the American escort fleet is discovered. If you liked Gorky Park you will find this book even more enjoyable.

In the nonfiction corner this week we have:

The 8-Week Cholesterol Cure Cookbook by Robert E. Kowalski has helped millions to lower the cholesterol levels significantly without foregoing the foods we love. The idea of the program is the use of specific foods that actively lower cholesterol levels in conjunction with moderately low-fat, low-cholesterol, healthful diet.

> The Steven McDonald Story by Steven and Patty Ann McDonald. "On the afternoon of July 12, 1986, New York City Police Officer Steven McDonald, on routine plainsclothes patrol in Central Park, spotted three teenagers acting suspiciously. When the officer approached one, the youth responded by pulling a .22 snubnosed pistol and firing three shots into the officer, rendering McDonald a quadriplegic with no sensation below the neck. He remains today the most severly wounded police officer to survive such an attack. After nine months in Manhattan's Bellevue Hospital, Steven was transferred to Denver's Craig Hospital where he learned to speak again and operate a wheelchair with his mouth. This is the story of a young couple's struggle to come to terms with a severe handicap, of losing everything and finding a profound reason to continue." This moving story will leave no reader untouched.

> LOS ANGELES (AP) - Milan Williams, a founding member of the Commodores, said he has been fired from the rhythm and blues band for refusing to perform with the group in South Africa.

Williams said at a news conference Wednesday that he was dismissed after 20 years with the Commodores following a vote by the other band members earlier this month.

Williams refused to accompany the band to South Africa and made his decision public.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q. Does picked asparagus need to be canned differently from regular canned asparagus? E.C., Keun, WA

A. Yes, any pickled food ocan be canned with the water bath method. The acidity of high-acid foods such as tomatoes and those pickled with vinegar won't allow botulism spores to grow. Botulism is one of the most deadly food poisoning bacteria. However, all non-pickled, low-acid foods including asparagus, green beans, corn, mushrooms, fish, meats and poultry must be processed at high heat under pressure to kill botulism spores.

Q. Why is it when I bake an apple or blueberry pie the bottom crust never cooks? Mrs. P.B., Lee

A. You may be using the wrong kind of pie pan. Choose heat-resistant glass or darkened metal for a well-baked, browned undercrust. Also, a moderately hot oven (400 to 425 degrees) is needed to set filling and brown crust.

Q. It seems that no matter how high I pile apple slices for an apple pie, I have a two-inch space between the filling and the crust. Any hints? C.B., Adams, MA

A. Use tart, firm, juicy pie applies that hold their shape better such as Corland, Rhode Island Greening, McIntosh and Yellow Transparent.

"We Reach Thousands Every Day!"

364-2030

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well -- white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewifes, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often volument audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!

Vegetarian meals nutritious, tasty as dogmatic people whom you wouldn't want to invite to a dinner party, for fear of serving something that would offend them.

Recently, however, the benefits of following a vegetarian diet have become apparent. But, people who are contemplating becoming vegetarians often don't know how to begin. They are used to thinking of a meal as a main course of meat with vegetables or grains on the side. They fear that giving up meat means that they will "rabbit food" or bland, boring dishes, with little variety.

Prospective vegetarians also worry about getting enough protein on a vegetarian diet. Actually, most Americans consume more protein than they need. (Pregnant and nursing women, children and adolescents, however, have higher protein requirements.)

Only strict vegetarians, who cat no animal products at all, need to make sure that they are getting enough protein. The majority of people who call themselves végetarians eat dairy products and eggs, and some also eat seafood.

Though many people think that adopting a vegetarian diet means practicing restriction and denial, this is far from the truth. In fact, vegetarianism means expanding one's food horizons, to encompass new cultures and cuisines, new flavors and, indeed, new ways of thinking about food.

The proof of this can be found in two recent cookbooks, Still Life with Menu (Ten SpeedPress), by Mollie Katzen, and Asian Vegetarian Feast (William Morrow and Company), by Ken Hom, both of which are sure to be welcomed by new vegetarians as Small touches of cumin, basil, and/or well as by those who have been vegetarians for years.

Still Life With Menu features 50 meatless menus developed by Katzen, who is the author of two other popular vegetarian cookbooks. In her preface, Katzen says that the book was written Until a few years ago, most for the many people who "would 1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Butter Americans thought of vegetarians as simply like to have the option of eating unusual or eccentric. They were seen less meat (without having to declare a whole new identity!).

This cookbook is for busy people who want to eat light, nutritious meals, but think they don't have time to cook this kind of food. Katzen states that part of the book's purpose is to "make interesting, genuine, and inexpensive food as accessible and convenient as possible." The recipes are inspired by ethnic cuisines from many parts of the world. Most of them, as the book's title indicates, are grouped into menus, so have to resign themselves to eating that the recipes complement each other, while ensuring that each meal will contain ample protein.

Katzen prefaces each menu with a list of steps which can be done up to three days in advance, so that the recipes complement each other, while ensuring that each meal will contain ample protein.

Katzen prefaces each menu with a list of steps which can be done up to three days in advance, so that. preparation time is minimal on the day on which the meal is to be served. With a little practice, the cook can learn to organize his or her shopping trips and time in the kitchen.

Here, from Still Life With Menu, is a recipe for Chilaquile Casserole. This main dish is easy to make and very tasty. CHILAQUILE CASSEROLE 12 uncooked corn tortillas (if using frozen, be sure they are defrosted) 2 4-oz. cans diced green chilies 2 to 3 cups grated jack cheese

A few dashes each salt and pepper 4 large eggs 2 cups buttermilk Optional Additions

1 to 2 cups cooked pinto beans 1/2 lb. firm tofu, cut in thin slices oregano 1 cup chopped onion, sauteed until soft in 1 tablespoon butter or olive oil 1 to 2 cloves garlic, minced and lightly sauteed in butter or olive oil 1 small zucchini, sliced or cubed, and lightly sauteed in butter or olive oil or oil a 2-quart casserole or a 9x 13inch pan.

2. Tear 6 tortillas into bite-sized pieces and spread them evenly in the greased casserole.

3. Distribute half the chilies and half the cheese over the layer of tortillas. (At this point, spread, sprinkle, or place any optional additions on top of the cheese.)

4. Tear the remaining tortillas and spread them on top. Follow with the remaining chilies and cheese.

5. Beat the eggs and buttermilk together with salt and pepper. Slowly pour this custard over the casserole. 6. Bake uncovered for 35 minutes at 375 degrees. Serve hot, warm, or at room temperature.

Preparation time: 20 minutes to prepare, 35 minutes to bake.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

In the introduction to Asian Vegetarian Feast, Ken Hom says that he is not a vegetarian; however, his diet "does consist primarily of vegetables, pasta, and seafood, with poultry and meat quite secondary and always in small portions." In fact, this type of diet is found in almost all traditional cultures; it is only Western cultures that emphasize a meat-centered diet.

Asian food, once considered exotic, has moved into the mainstream of American cooking. Hom demystifies this cuisine, with detailed descriptions of ingredients, equipment and cooking techniques.

When a traditional Asian recipe would call for meat, hom substitutes other ingredients to create a dish which is authentically Asian yet completely vegetarian.

In the back of the book, Hom groups his recipes into several categories, including "Do-Ahead Recipes," "Comforting Foods for Cold Nights," "Frugal Vegetarian Recipes" and "Recipes for Large Crowds."

Asian Vegetarian Feast, with its clear descriptions and instructions, is perfect for someone who has little experience with Asian or vegetarian cooking.

The book also would be a good choice for someone who is trying to cut down on meat or give it up completely, since the recipes produce dishes so tasty that you probably won't even notice that the meat is missing.

The recipe reproduced here, for hot and Sour Noodles, is described by Horn as "a quick fast-food meal that is full of flavor and easily made." If you have leftovers, you'll probably find that they're almost as good cold as they were

HOT AND SOUR NOODLES

Serves 2 to 4 pound fresh or dried egg noodles 1 tablespoon sesame oil

Sauce

2 tablespoons dark soy sauce 1 tablespoon chili oil

1 tablespoon Chinese black rice vinegar or cider vinegar

3 tablespoons finely chopped scallions 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper teaspoon sugar

If you are using fresh noodles, cook first by boiling them for 3 to 5 minutes in a large pot of boiling water. If you are using dried noodles, cook in boiling water for 4 to 5 minutes. Drain the noodles, toss them in the sesame oil, and then put aside until required.

Heat all the sauce ingredients in a small saucepan. Turn the heat down to low and simmer for 5 minutes.

Plunge the noodles into boiling water for 20 seconds, then drain them well in a colander or sieve. Quickly tip the noodles into a large bowl and pour the hot sauce over the top. Mix everything together well and serve at
